JUNE CONSIDERATION

Tuition hike proposed, trustee reaction mixed

By JOHN BORGER
State News Staff Writer

Tuition increases of $1 per credit hour for in-state students and $2 for out-of-state students will be submitted for approval to the board of trustees, high University sources said Thursday.

Trustee reaction to the proposal ranges from rejection of any tuition increase to a willingness to approve almost any administration recommendation.

"We've gone too far in student taxation," Warren Huff, D-Plymouth, said. "The legislature didn't give us enough money, but we ought to do our best with that without saddling students with more taxes."

Huff proposed cutting back on University programs if necessary, instead of increasing tuition.

Vice Chairman Frank Merriman, R-DeKerville, and Stephen Nisbet, R-Fremont, showed general support for the administration-proposed tuition hike.

Merriman said he would look to the administration for recommendations on the amount.

"I would hate to think by renegeing on recommending a tuition increase that we would impair the educational offering of MSU," Merriman said.

"If the administration recommends (a tuition increase), I'll probably vote to approve it," Nisbet said. "I'd like to see the figures first, but I'm not against a tuition increase if it's absolutely necessary."

Both said the scarcity of scholarships and financial aids next year would not affect their decision.

"Tuition increases must be based on available funds and figures," Nisbet said. "The scholarship situation wouldn't change that at all, just make it tougher for students."

"As far as I'm concerned, the scholarship situation is extremely unfortunate," Merriman said. "But I question if this will play a major role (in considering tuition). We have to provide the best program we possibly can."

"Every time you raise tuition, you're pricing someone out of the market," he said, adding that not raising tuition "could impair the educational opportunities of those who can come here."

The trustees said students should be notified of any tuition increase as soon as possible, but said the legislature does not inform the trustees of final appropriations "until the last minute."

"We would have liked to have let students know two months ago, but we didn't know (what the situation would be)," Merriman said. "The administration is not trying to hide anything from students."

Roger Wilkinson, vice president for business and finance, Provost John Ballard, and Presidential Assistant Elliott Cantlon, and Presidential Assistant Elliott Ballard have been preparing the tuition rate recommendation to be presented to the trustees at the June meeting.

"According to my assessment, it would be very difficult for the University to meet its commitments without raising tuition," Wilkinson has said previously.

$60,000 given to MSU for fellows

By DIANE PETRYK
State News Staff Writer

A $60,000 grant from the Rockefeller Foundation has been awarded MSU to establish a two-year presidential fellows program, the administration announced Thursday.

The program, first of its kind in a university, is intended to provide an opportunity for exposure and participation in the University administrative process. Over the next two years, 12 six-month fellowships will be awarded to four undergraduates, four graduates and four junior faculty members.

The fellows will be assigned certain administrative responsibilities by the president's office or another administrative office depending on their interests and abilities.

The ideas for the program and the application were developed by President Wharton earlier this year. He has patterned the program after the White House fellows program.

"The Rockefeller Foundation found it to be an innovative and creative idea," Jim Spaniolo, assistant to the president, said.

McKee: Power loss feared

By DELORES MAJOR
State News Staff Writer

James B. McKee, chairman of the committee that suggested a greater participation for students in academic governance, said Thursday that the Academic Senate rejected the proposals because it feared that the students would hold greater powers than the faculty.

"The granting of power to students was an issue of optimum importance," he said. "The argument that the faculty would be a majority in the Academic Council was also a compelling argument."

However, the most important argument was "the fear that the Student Affairs committee would be in a position to initiate changes in faculty rights," he said.

McKee charged that opponents to his committee's report have conducted a "fear campaign," among the faculty, hinting that to give students more power, faculty would have to relinquish most of their power.

The McKee Report and the revisions in the faculty bylaws that sprang from the report, will be returned to the Academic Council, who will revise them according to the instructions of the Academic Senate.

The three alternatives open to the council are to:

-return the report to the original committee for further revisions, in light of the Senate's objections.

-appoint a new committee to revise the report.

-revise the report from the floor of the council.

McKee said that if the Academic Council votes for the first alternative, he would serve again on the committee.

"I'd like to see it returned to our committee; I think we could respond to make the necessary changes," he said.

C. C. Killingsworth, professor of labor and industrial relations and leading opponent to the McKee Report's recommendations on the floor of the Academic Council, said he would like to see the council as a whole revise the document.

He said that although he didn't object to student members of the Academic Council having a vote, there are some differences of opinion on the exact number of student representatives needed in the governing body.

"But I would hesitate to take a firm position on the exact number," he said.

Nixon sends message supporting Byrd clause

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon Thursday showed an all-out administration effort to loosen proposed curbs on U.S. operations in Cambodia by throwing his support to a key Senate amendment.

It was learned that Nixon, who has indicated all along he is opposed to any congressional action to restrict his options in Southeast Asia, has written a letter of support for the amendment by Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va.

The Byrd amendment, which would be added to the proposed curb sponsored by Sen. John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., and Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, would authorize the president to take "such action as may be necessary to protect the lives of U.S. troops in South Vietnam or to facilitate the withdrawal of U.S. forces from South Vietnam."

Since the current U.S. operation in Cambodia was based on the need to protect troops in Vietnam, inclusion of Byrd's language would have the effect of authorizing further such assaults after U.S. troops are withdrawn later this month.

It is what Church and Cooper are trying to prevent.

While Cooper, Church and their strongest supporters reject such language, administration officials hope it will win over enough swing votes to carry the Byrd amendment.

The vote, expected to be close, may come next week.

Earlier Democrats threatened to let the amendment go broke if administration officials continue to block a vote on the Cooper-Church proposal.

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana told newsmen he has no objection of allowing an administration request for an increase in the debt ceiling to reach the floor until there is a vote on the Cooper-Church amendment.

successful, half the 31,000 American troops involved have been withdrawn from Cambodia and the rest will be out by June 30.

Mansfield said the speech was a good one indicating a degree of military success.

"We have to anticipate that there will be further developments," Mansfield said, referring to questions about the future role of South Vietnamese forces in Cambodia and reports that Thailand is sending troops there.

TRADITION ENFORCED

Caps, gowns a 'must' at 'U' commencement

By MARILYN PATTERSON
State News Staff Writer

Graduating students will not be allowed to participate in the commencement ceremony unless they wear caps and gowns, Herman L. King, asst. provost and chairman of the commencement committee, said Thursday.

Several students have inquired at King's office and at the cap and gown office about the possibility of attending commencement in street clothes and donating the gown rental fee to peace organizations. Students have done so at several universities in the East.

At a meeting Wednesday between President Wharton and Executive Vice President Jack Breslin, it was decided that the Commencement Committee "doesn't have any authorization for anybody to change (the traditional commencement garb)," King said.

"Since the commencement is optional, students will be expected to wear caps and gowns," he said.

King said that if the majority of graduating seniors felt caps and gowns should not be worn and if that feeling had been expressed earlier in the term, arrangements could have been made.

But to have some of the seniors in caps and gowns and others in street clothes would "look sloppy," he said.

"If we did that, we would be letting down the great bulk of the seniors and their parents who came to see a beautiful ceremony," King said. "As far as we can see, the great bulk of the students who have gone here for four years and their parents want caps and gowns to be worn. We have an obligation to these seniors."

King said that no senior class or Senior Council officers had inquired about allowing some graduates not to wear caps and gowns.

"No one who has a right to represent the senior class has said anything," he said, adding that the University could not change policy "on the basis of a dozen people who want to dissent."

One of the students who inquired about not wearing a cap and gown was Richard

President Wharton said he was surprised that students had not more actively promoted the McKee Report.

He said that if he were a student today, the promotion of the McKee report and its successful adoption would have been a "first order priority."

"From the time the report passed the Academic Council on its way to the Senate, in the old days when I was a student activist, we would have been lobbying among faculty to get it passed."

"In this day and age, when the University is going through extremely difficult times and very significant changes, it is vitally important for all available talent to participate and make their contributions in improving the governance of the University," Wharton said.

Jetliner hijacked

This map locates the route of a TWA jetliner with 51 passengers aboard that was hijacked over Arizona Thursday. The hijacker demanded $100 million in small bills when he landed in Washington. Ransom lures hijacker; 6-hour sky drama ends

WASHINGTON (AP) — A hijacker demanding $100 million cash from the U.S. Treasury held 51 airline passengers hostage Thursday in a six-hour sky-high drama that ended when he was lured back to the ground and seized in a scuffle that left the pilot and hijacker wounded.

The passengers scrambled to safety after the plane landed for a second time at Dulles International Airport, where earlier the gun-wielding man had collected $100,750 from the airline — the first ransom ever paid a hijacker.

The plane's pilot, Capt. Dale C. Hupe, was shot in the abdomen by a small caliber weapon. The hijacker, who identified himself as Arthur G. Barkley of Phoenix, Ariz., was wounded in the thumb when he was overpowered.

The hijacker had forced the TWA jetliner to make a second landing at Dulles after officials told him 100 sacks of $100 bills were waiting on the runway. Actually, airline officials said, the money bags were stuffed with paper.

More than three hours earlier, the hijacker had forced the Phoenix-to-Washington TWA jet to make its initial landing at Dulles. There he received the $100,750 carried onto the plane in a brown canvas bag by another pilot.

But, claiming he was short-changed, the hijacker refused to release the passengers and crew. Instead, he forced the plane to take off on a circuitous route south, then north over New York state, then south back to the Washington area.

As the red- and white jet circled in the evening skies above the capital, government officials radioed the demanded money was waiting for him on the Dulles runway.

The plane landed again shortly after 7 p.m. As it rolled to a stop on the runway, FBI agents shot out its tires and blocked its path with a large fire truck.

Then ensued a half-hour of cryptic radio exchanges climaxed with the co-pilot saying "The captain has been shot — get an ambulance."

The pilot, a veteran of 23 years flying, was taken by ambulance to a hospital. A TWA official said his wound was not serious.

The plane was heading from Phoenix to Washington's National Airport when it was hijacked over Las Vegas, N.M. Passenger, Richard Hill of Zanesville, Ohio, said passengers were calm during the hijacking.

As the jet had flown toward Washington, the hijacker repeatedly broadcast rambling messages over its radio.

Politics gains on campus

By KATHY MORAN
State News Staff Writer

Although some consider the strike a failure, few will doubt that it generated a momentum that was transformed into positive political action.

On one side, some students claimed that all it proved was that the strikers could not close the University down. But on the other hand, it created a sense of unity and purpose.

A member of the former strike steering committee said one of the most significant results was the formation of an organizational structure that will be intact this summer and the following year.

Now called Students For Political Action, the group is acting in a coordinating capacity to prevent conflicts between various groups. They are looking for a house to set up an Off-Campus Political Change Center within the community. Students will live upstairs in the house and the main floor will be used for their activities.

Students in Justin Morrill College have been sponsoring teach-outs in Lansing and East Lansing since the onset of the strike. They have talked with community residents about Cambodian intervention and have received a generally favorable response from the residents.

The Movement for a New Congress is soliciting student volunteers to campaign for peace candidates throughout Michigan. They will interview candidates and campaign in districts where they feel student volunteers can change voting trends.

Critical University was formed to "explore new ways to communicate with students and new ways to learn," Wally Shanbrom, Oak Park graduate student, said.

He said they will be making established courses more relevant to contemporary issues. Professors and instructors are volunteering to work within their classes. Presently they are working on a catalogue for Critical University classes.

The ATL Teach-in Center, housed in an instructor's office, presented a series of programs on Indochina and racism and kept the office open for students interested in discussing the issues.

Telegram and post card booths are set up outside of the Paramount News Center, Cunningham Drug Store, Meridian Mall and in Frandor. People are being urged to mail their protests to their representatives.

An indication of the extent of their work, and similar work throughout the country, is that the congressional mail room was five days behind at one time. The Dept. of Anthropology has been holding seminars Monday through Thursday on Indochina, minority groups, local politics and education and culture. Besides delving into the problems, the seminars have taken action such as writing chemical companies and investigating the relationship of the University to the media and admission policies.

Racism workshops have been held for the last two weeks featuring films, tapes and speakers on topics such as: Black America as a colony, Malcolm X and capitalism as it affects the black community. Arising in support of the Black Panthers, the Revolutionary Council to Combat Racism is demanding community control of police and freedom for the black man. They are attempting to educate the community and student body about the Panthers and the implications of the Bobby Seale's case.

4 Dems in governor race, Levin, Ferency dominate

By JEFF SHELTER
State News Staff Writer

Although four Democrats have officially announced their candidacy for their party's gubernatorial nomination, indications are the Aug. 4 primary will be a two-way contest between state Sen. Sander Levin, D - Berkley, and former state party chairman Zoltan Ferency.

Besides Levin and Ferency, State Rep. George F. Montgomery, D - Detroit, and Macomb County Prosecutor George N. Parris are circulating petitions to have their names placed on the primary ballot.

Even if all four candidates can garner the minimum 10,300 signatures by the June 16 deadline - which some Democratic leaders doubt will happen - the real contest remains between the two apparent front runners, Levin and Ferency.

A spokesman at the Democratic State Central Committee said Thursday that Levin and Ferency already have enough signatures to fill the requirement.

Levin has been most often mentioned as "the party favorite," but party leaders are remaining quiet until the primary.

Those who say Levin will be a shoe-in say his strength among labor is his trump card. But since Ferency is certainly no stranger to labor leaders, this always-significant factor offers no clues at present.

Ferency currently holds the lead in promoting issues, antiwar position, constant forefront of his campaign, been a major drawing card.

Ferency's success or failure the primary may well hinge how strong the anti-sentiment is among state Democrats.

Few issues have been mentioned by the candidates date, with most of the action coming from Montgomery who has several charges against the other candidates and the pre-

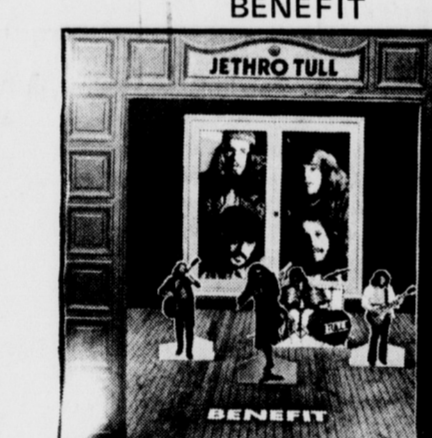

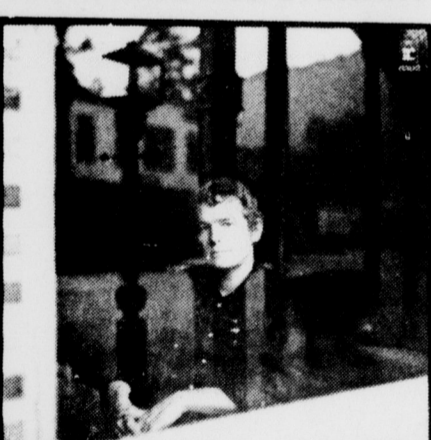

Montgomery first charged state party for "playing favorites" by placing limitations on funds spent during the primary campaign. He contended Levin was out-spending other candidates and that party should remove the "unfair advantage."

This week he charged Levin supporters and the party were "conducting a whisper campaign" to cast doubt on seriousness of his candidacy.

If any consensus can be reached among party leaders that Parris won't make it, anticipate a tough campaign against a fairly popular Republican incumbent, and Democrats would dare sending a relatively unknown candidate to battle.

Collins' lawyers indicate possibility of key witness

ANN ARBOR (UPI) -- The defense indicated Thursday it may produce an expert witness in an attempt to refute key prosecution evidence in the trial of John Norman Collins, who is charged with the last of seven coed murders.

Twelve persons -- eight women and four men -- had tentatively been seated as jurors by the end of the morning session Thursday, the third day of jury selection.

A major part of Washtenaw county prosecutor William Delhey's case rests on hair found on parts of the girl's body. The prosecution contends the hair came from the home of Collins' uncle, State Police Cpl. David Leik. Leik's wife used to cut their children's hair in the basement, and the prosecution contends Miss Beineman was slain there.

Jury selection moved quickly

Thursday, and indications are growing that the trial will be held there, although the defense appealed four times to shift it to another location.

Twelve jurors and two alternates must be chosen. So far, 25 have been dismissed, although the defense and prosecution between them can dismiss 35 without having to explain why. Jury selection may be completed by the middle of next week.

Once the jury is picked, Washtenaw County Circuit Judge John Conlin said he probably would lock up the jurors throughout the trial, which is expected to last up to six weeks.

ACCUSED OF IDLENESS West urged to take stand

TEL AVIV (AP) -- Prime Minister Golda Meir called upon the Western world Thursday to warn the Soviet Union to keep out of the Middle East conflict. She said President Gamal Abdel Nasser has "practically sold out" Egypt's sovereignty to the Russians and given them an open door for further penetration into the Middle East.

In an interview with The Associated Press, the Israeli prime minister accused the West of idleness and excuse-making in the face of increased Soviet involvement in Egypt's conflict with Israel.

"I think the free world should in very serious terms say to the Soviet Union, you cannot participate in this war between the Arab countries and Israel," she declared. "What you are doing now, you've become an active participant. We have something to say about it. It is not only a question of Israel. We see the dangers to ourselves. It is the writing on the wall, and we refuse to accept it."

The problem of Russian involvement in Egypt, she said, faces the entire non-Communist world and not of America.

Mrs. Meir saw Israel facing immediate danger not from Egypt alone or all the Arab states but also from the "second world power coming into the area where it has no business being."

She called it essential for Israel to receive the 125 war planes has requested from the United States.

"Perhaps the most important condition to make possible here is a strong Israel," she said. "Only with an Israel that cannot be shoved into the sea is it worthwhile to make peace."

A health menace from decomposing bodies prompted army engineers in Peru Thursday to consider burning the ruins of at least one of the nation's earthquake-devastated cities.

An American missionary, reporting to Lima by short-wave radio, said the engineers decided that dynamiting and burning were the only recourse to avoid a tremendous health hazard in Huaraz, a city formerly containing 32,000 persons of which an unknown number survived.

In the closest major battle to the Cambodian capital so far, enemy troops overran Set Bo and lost it to a Cambodian counterattack Thursday in fighting 10 miles southeast of Phnom Penh, field officers reported.

The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong captured the government military post before dawn and seized all arms, ammunition and food in an apparent search for fresh supplies.

A 13-man fact finding party of U.S. congressmen and officials arrived in Saigon Thursday night to "look at the bunkers" uncovered by allied forces inside Cambodia, one of them said.

Rep. Melvin Price, D-Ill., said he was speaking for four House members in the party and told reporters:

"We want to observe operations in the Cambodian area. We would like to see what the bunkers look like." Several other members of the party said they also wished to visit the Cambodian operational area, but they were unsure of when they would do so.

Friends of kidnapped former Argentine President Pedro Eugenio Aramburu hinted at government involvement and blamed "right-wing fascists" Thursday for the kidnapping and accused the government of dragging its feet in the investigation.

In addition, the Argentine navy and the federal police squabbled over methods being employed to find Aramburu, kidnapped from his home six days ago.

National tension from the kidnapping was increased when about 8,000 workers in Cordoba, Argentina, occupied eight auto factories.

National News

Three senators said after an hour-long meeting with Secretary of State William P. Rogers Thursday they are encouraged about the prospect of early action on selling U.S. jets to Israel.

The senators, Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., Hugh Scott, R-Pa., and Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., said, however, they received no assurance to their appeal for action, delivered on the behalf of 76 of the 100 senators.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., said Thursday George C. Wallace's victory in the Alabama governorship primary is a reminder of "the terrible dangers of our obsolete Electoral College system" of electing the president.

"We must move to replace the Electoral College with direct election of the President by the people, and we must move now," Bayh told a news conference at which he foresaw another third-party presidential bid by Wallace in 1972.

Michigan News

Michigan successfully suppressed an anticipated rubella German measles epidemic last winter and spring through the massive vaccine campaign among elementary students, the State Dept. of Health reported Thursday.

An estimated 600,000 kindergarten through third grade school children, key spreaders of the disease, were immunized during the campaign.

The department said the success of the immunization program has saved many Michigan babies from severe crippling which can occur when rubella hits a mother in the early months of pregnancy.

Bennie D. Graves, a sociology professor at Central Michigan University, officially announced his candidacy Wednesday for the Democratic nomination for Congress from the 10th District.

The district, which encompasses 19 East Michigan counties, is currently represented by Elford A. Federber, a Republican first elected to Congress in 1952.

One other Democrat, Bay City insurance man Gerald A. Parent, 37, also has announced his candidacy for the nomination in the August primary. Graves, 42, said he was entering the race as a peace candidate.

Michigan summer job mart tight

By STEVE WATERBURY
State News Staff Writer

A large number of students will not find summer jobs, William MacLeod, asst. director of the Placement Bureau, said Thursday.

A general economic slowdown has resulted in an unemployment rate of 6.2 per cent for Michigan—1.4 per cent above the national average, MacLeod stated. In the Upper Peninsula one out of eight persons are presently unemployed.

Besides a decrease in the number of available industry jobs, there has also been a drastic cutback in city, state and federal government programs, MacLeod said.

"Many of the state and federal examinations for summer employment have simply been canceled, because there are no longer jobs available."

Job opportunities have also dwindled on campus, MacLeod reported that one University department contacted two weeks ago has already received 140 applications for 40 full-time summer jobs, and applications are still being submitted.

One result of the tight economic situation has been an increase in the number of companies taking advantage of student employes, MacLeod said.

"Some of the companies that hire students to sell door to door make exorbitant claims and exaggerated salary quotes to students. Most of these organizations pay on a commission basis and quote very high average wages which some students may receive, but most do not."

MacLeod recommends that students investigate thoroughly before accepting employment of this nature.

There has also been an increase in the number of companies which require a contractual agreement for financial investments, MacLeod said. These companies require sales personnel to purchase merchandise that they will supposedly sell. When the student employed in sales discovers he is unable to sell the merchandise, he also discovers he is unable to get his money back.

"I would advise students to be cautious of any organization which avoids or refuses to answer questions on job description, employment location and the minimum amount they can be guaranteed to earn per week or per hour," MacLeod said.

Another result of the poor employment picture is that students cannot be as selective about the type of job they obtain for summer.

"Students who are seniors in engineering and who could normally receive a trainee position will have to consider taking odd jobs," MacLeod remarked.

Despite a generally "dismal" job market, there are still a number of summer jobs available, MacLeod said. He recommends that students who are still without summer employment stop by the student employment office in the Placement Bureau "on a frequent basis."

Students returning to a home town in Michigan are advised to contact the local branch of the Michigan Employment Security Commission, a nonprofit state-run agency, for job information.

ASMSU restructuring bid includes 3 cabinet additions

By JACQUI MILLER
State News Staff Writer

Bob Grossfeld, ASMSU cabinet president, held a meeting Thursday for all persons interested in helping restructure the cabinet.

Besides streamlining some of the old departments of the cabinet, Grossfeld's restructuring calls for the addition of some new departments.

Hubbard Information Center (HIC) is now working on an autonomous basis under the cabinet. Since the culmination of the strike on campus, HIC has been offering information and referral services as well as rumor control services should the occasion arise for them.

HIC is a registered, independent and nonprofit organization run by student volunteers. It is open 24 hours a day at G-26 Hubbard and answers questions, confirms rumors about MSU events, student activities and events which directly concern students.

The group will receive financial aid and possibly an office from ASMSU but will not be affected by the student board's policy decisions or operational controls.

Elliott Ballard, assistant to the president, and Robert Perrin, vice president for University relations, have officially endorsed HIC. In a joint letter, they said they would help "develop the open channels of communication which will assist you (HIC) in doing your new, expanded job more effectively this fall."

Critical University is also a new member of the cabinet. Begun after the strike, this group's members are working to find alternatives to the lecture-assignment-multiple choice test format of University courses.

"We are looking for people who are committed to the idea that we don't want to shut the University down but to transform it," Terrance Allen, professor of psychology and a director of the group, said.

By breaking the barriers between students and professors, the University and the community and disciplines within the University, Critical University hopes to make the academic life of the University more relevant.

"Our goals will be accomplished," Wally Shanbrom, graduate student from Oak Park and co-worker with Allen, said, "by opening up the human resources around us rather than restricting them."

A third addition to the cabinet will obtain copies of legislative calendars from the Capitol and maintain contact with committees investigating bills which concern the students. Members of this department will inform the legislators of student sentiments towards different legislation in hopes that these will be considered at voting time.

Ten alumnae to get honors at graduation

For the first time in its 115-year history, MSU will present all of its distinguished alumni awards to women graduates.

Ten alumnae, all of whom graduated since 1955, have been selected for this special honor to commemorate the centennial year of the admittance of women to MSU.

The young women represent their counterparts of a century ago, when the first 10 coeds enrolled at Michigan Agricultural College in 1870.

The awards will be presented during spring commencement exercises at 4 p.m. June 14 in the Stadium.

The 10 alumnae are Sara-Jo Bolte, Arcola E. Clark, Ann Cooper, Dorothy A. Frayer, Louise Renne, Linda Rockey, Cynthia A. Scheer, Nelda Stuck, Ann Tukey and Elizabeth Unger.

College students lead protest for social change in America

By DAVE SHORT
State News Staff Writer

College students have, for a long time, played a leading role in the push for social protest and for social change in America. They were at the forefront in the civil rights drives in the South during the mid-1950s and early 1960s with the lunch counter sit-ins, the bus boycotts, and the desegregation marches.

And college students have supplied most of the persistent and vociferous opposition to U.S. military involvement in Southeast Asia over the past nine years.

Yet student involvement has been more of an individual rather than a university wide effort in the past.

Except for a handful of so-called "radical-oriented" universities, most American colleges have not contributed a large student force to the social movements within the country in previous years. MSU was no different than the norm.

This University has always taken a back seat behind the University of Michigan in the public's concept of the most radical-minded university in the state. MSU has long been tabbed as a conservative land-grant college; indeed, Playboy magazine called it "Moo U" two years ago.

Protest demonstrations here in the past seldom ever involved over 100 students or lasted more than a few hours. And, in most instances, demonstrators were usually the same people from one protest to another.

Radical elements within the University were looked upon with disdain and with humor by both the majority of the people in the campus community and by the radical groups at other major universities.

But the 1969-70 academic year brought a new look within the University.

The pattern of national events and the progression of changes in student moods during the past year marked the appearance of a noticeable radicalization here.

Significantly, the shift to more radicalized thought here came through the recognition that conditions are general in this society and the University structure rather than because of any carbon "me-tooism" feelings.

Student dissent today revolves primarily around the Vietnam war.

The war stands as the most controversial, most polarizing, and most important issue in American society. As the war in Southeast Asia has widened, student concern and active protest have heightened within the University.

More than 8,000 students marched on the state Capitol in Lansing last Oct. 15 in mass protest of the Vietnam War during the local moratorium. Approximately 700 University students traveled to Washington, D.C., on Nov. 15 for the national moratorium against the war.

Between 4,000 to 6,000 demonstrators unified to strike the University on May 5 and the days immediately following. Approximately 8,000 students marched on the Capitol in support of Rep. Jackie Vaughn's anti-Vietnam bill on May 14.

To predict such numbers in participation within the University would not have seemed feasible one year ago.

The radicalization that has occurred within this University wasn't an overnight happening, however. The seeds for radicalization were planted long ago; but, only now is the harvest beginning to be reaped.

College students here, as everywhere, are involved in a crisis of beliefs. They are questioning the common wisdom and are thinking for themselves. What the government, the University administration, and the faculty are saying is no longer necessarily correct.

Throughout the year, there has been an increased surfacing of student discontent. Both the level of student consciousness and the seriousness of purpose have heightened. Students have come to see a relationship between the Chicago Seven conspiracy trial and the Kent State University killings and their lives here.

The need for change within this country has always been a paramount demand by college students. Yet, the change has not come; or at least, has not come fast enough. And, as a result, the students have turned to the University for help in social change even more than before.

In desperation and frustration, the students have attempted to force the University to take a stand on America today. During the entire student strike here, the strikers consistently demanded that the University take a stand and use its influence to bring about change; but, the University administration refused.

The concept of the University came more into controversy as the year progressed. Increasingly more students, although still in the minority, have come to question the relationship between their University education and the pressing questions of society.

The draft and the public belief that college education should be obtained in four years have caused added pressure and frustration for the University student of today. As a result, the need for a college curriculum which relates to the individual and the outside world has come to the front.

College students now want a university which is relevant to them and to the problems that they see — poverty, war, repression, human degradation, and racism. And they want a voice in determining the University's curriculum and campus affairs.

Although the radicalization has grown steadily here, it often remained unseen during the year. The goals, programs and the methods of the student movement traditionally have been very flexible. But, the fluidity of the student movement momentarily jelled from time to time within the University this year.

Ever present discontent, the presence of a small group of hard-core radicals, and a lack of adequate communication and information channels create a constant climate for trouble within every university. These factors coupled with a mistake by established authorities are the basis for a major student demonstration — as both moratoriums, the window-smashing on Grand River Avenue following the Chicago

Students have unity-- now we should use it

The school year 1969-70 has been one of the most turbulent and metamorphic in recent times. The events have been myriad, but one theme emerges as paramount through them all: few believed they could happen. As a result, things will never be the same again.

In the beginning there was the almost phenomenal resurrection of the student esprit de corps that was pronounced dead after the defeat of Eugene McCarthy at the polls. With this came the equally phenomenal degree of national unity that has pervaded the new student movement.

In the fall there were the Vietnam protests culminating with the October moratorium. Never before had so many people so young assembled with a single purpose in mind. It staggered the nation and the world and gave the students of the United States the idea that maybe — just maybe — they could be an effective force after all.

Even heretofore sedate MSU caught fire from the heat of the times. There was an awakening of social responsibility and purpose and of brotherhood that had been virtually unknown before.

When the up-tight powers that be pronounced the predicted sentence upon the Chicago Seven the campus, or at least part of it, dissented. There was blood in Grand River Avenue and the legislature mumbled about repression — but it was too late to stem the tide of change.

Spring arrived, the national stand off continued and the question was continually asked: who would blow their cool first. Suddenly, in Kent, Ohio, the establishment showed the entire world that it would flinch first — it was the establishment that ran out of rhetoric and drew the first sword.

Unbelievably, the nation shook with the recoil as hundreds of university communities demanded with a single voice that war end. Unbelievably, at MSU a student strike supported largely by faculty shut the place down for a week of dialogue and soul searching.

And it is at this point in time that we now stand. It is agreed that something must be done to change the old order before it stirs more discord.

In the fall we will have our chance. Two years ago with a fraction of the unity that we now have, students helped force LBJ out of office and almost got our own man in. There is no reason to believe that we cannot help elect a peace Congress in November. Work at it this summer.

Strike dominates memory of Wharton's first 5 months

By BARBARA PARNES
Campus Editor

President Wharton denied Thursday that in his five months as MSU's president he has ever felt himself "up against the wall."

However, he admitted, "there have been difficult and trying days."

During these first months, Wharton has had to cope with almost every form of student and faculty confrontation a university president must eventually face. But the strike and related events this spring dominate memories of these months.

Wharton said that even if he were not a university president he would question the effectiveness of striking as a tactic.

"I don't think a strike accomplishes its objectives and even when non violent, in this day and age, it's very likely to lead to counter-productive developments," he said.

Wharton said he is fearful about harmful effects the MSU strike could have on the question of University autonomy.

"I think the greatest danger with recent developments is that the University administration and much of the faculty has been put, by the action of students, into an adversary relationship with students," he observed.

"Universities today more than any other time in human history face a very sizable danger of severe external and punitive measures, most of which are due to the excesses of student activism and the violence attached with student activism.

"While it is a small minority of students, it significantly dominates the image of student activism. These repressive and punitive measures will be imposed from the outside, unless the University satisfactorily develops internal measures for grievance procedures, for dissent and for effective change," he said.

Wharton said that in his associations with students at MSU he has found them to be a "paradoxical" group.

"I have found the student body to be both more homogeneous and more heterogeneous than I expected," he said. "The majority of students are more homogeneous, but the remainder are much more heterogeneous than I expected."

He said the "heterogeneous minority" is varied in their attitudes, concerns, outlook and orientation.

Through visits in 14 residence halls and with other student groups since January, Wharton said he has become acquainted with MSU students.

"The process of going around and visiting has given me an initial feel of what the student body is like. I've not been limited to the regular channels," he said.

Wharton said he would not reverse or alter any of his decisions of the past five months if he had the chance.

"I very rarely look backward. There are certain things that I am sorry did not happen though," he said.

One particular regret, Wharton said, is that ASMSU did not adopt his suggestion for pre-registration to be used for ASMSU elections and referendums.

Wharton said that if ASMSU had taken up this proposal, more students would have participated in the elections. In addition, he said students could have been polled at the time on issues including ROTC, building priorities and the proposed All-Events Bldg.

"Maybe if we had had the referendum the, some of the apprehension and concerns of this term would have been dealt with at that time," he said.

Wharton said that the future direction of MSU is still being defined.

"I have been trying to outline some of my broad views on this in my speeches on the pluralistic university, which I hope will be considered seriously by students and faculty in the University community," he said.

School Year 1969-70 was one of metamorphosis. It was symbolically sandwiched between the last Spring Carnival and the first student strike.

Between the two events were an employe strike, a separate bus drivers' strike, a new president, several demonstrations and two massive parades to the Capitol.

People's park liberation

People's park began after a celebration in the South Complex which moved to the area between Wells and Erickson halls. Then it grew. Tents sprouted and neither rain nor tornadoes could move its residents. Pressure to get rid of it also grew. Eventually it moved to the field across from the Vet Clinic. The park is in its last days as its residents have been given until the end of finals week to remove all remnants of the park.

69-'70 marked by change in personnel, policy

By MARILYN PATTERSON
State News Staff Writer

Academic year, 1969-70. Today it draws to a close. A glance at the past year shows it to be one of great change. In personnel and policy, for the University administration. As fall term began, the University was in a furious search for a president. In the wake of President John Hannah's April, 1969, resignation, an All-University Search and Selection Committee (AUSSC) of students, faculty, administrators and alumni was established to evaluate nominees and decide on the four most promising candidates for the position. Probably the most sought - after "non-candidate" for the position was Acting President Walter Adams. Despite Adams' repeated statements that he would not accept the presidency under any circumstances, a groundswell of public sentiment for his selection arose during the first weeks of fall term. More than 17,000 students and 1,000 faculty signed petitions requesting that his name be added to the AUSSC list. ASMSU, the student body, and the State News all supported Adams. The AUSSC did not add Adams' name to its list. The final decision on the presidency rested not with the AUSSC, the faculty, the students, ASMSU or the State News. It was the responsibility of the board of trustees. When the AUSSC's first list of four candidates was presented in August, the trustees asked for more names. However, on Oct. 17, before the committee had come up with additional names, the trustees appointed Clifton R. Wharton president. Wharton was the vice president of the Agricultural Development Council, a Rockefeller Foundation affiliate, and one of the original four candidates.

Wharton was appointed by a rather bizarre split within the eight-man board of trustees.

Two Democrats and three Republicans teamed up to provide the five-man majority needed to elect a president. Meanwhile, three more Democrats held out for their favorite candidate - presumably former Gov. G. Mennen Williams who was not on the committee's list of candidates.

Although the Democrats had the votes to bring in any man they wanted, had they voted together, they did not use the opportunity.

At the Oct. 17 meeting, that same 5-3 split appointed Jack Breslin as executive vice president of the University. Breslin had previously been secretary of the University and had the support of four trustees for the presidency. His was not one of the four names on the committee's list of candidates.

In other personnel changes throughout the year, John E. Cantlon was named provost, Roger Wilkinson was named vice president for business and finance and Robert Perrin was appointed vice president for University relations.

Cantlon, who was formerly a professor of entomology and plant pathology, took office July 1 after Howard Neville resigned the post to become president of Claremont (Calif.) Men's College. Wilkinson was appointed vice president for business and finance at the April trustees meeting.

He had served as the acting vice president since Philip May left the office under pressure from several trustees in November, 1969.

Perrin took office in the newly created position of vice president for University relations March 1. He serves as advisor to the president on internal and external communication and is responsible for liaison with the federal government.

Perrin was previously national deputy director of the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Vice President for Special Projects Gordon Sabine announced on April 6 that he has received a one-year fellowship from the American College Testing Program (ACT).

The fellowship, though vaguely defined by both Sabine and ACT, is the first of its kind. Sabine will conduct a study on the ecology of the modern college student.

Next year he will spend only half of his time on campus. The rest will be spent traveling and at Iowa City, the ACT headquarters.

With the new administrative hierarchy have also come several policy changes.

Social regulations were liberalized in three areas: liquor on campus and in University supervised housing, women's hours and open houses.

After the voters of East Lansing approved a change in the city ordinances to allow the sale of liquor, students went to work to change University regulations to allow students to benefit from the new "wet" laws.

On Feb. 25, Milton B. Dickerson, vice president for student affairs, approved a resolution allowing liquor to be served in off-campus supervised housing (fraternities, sororities and co-ops). A proposal to allow liquor in on-campus residence halls won the trustees' approval in April.

The last of the women's hours restrictions were struck down in February.

Now, fall term, first-term freshmen women have the same self-determined hours that all other women students have had since last spring.

Following in April was Dickerson's approval of a 24-hour open house policy for women's residence halls.

The new policy requires the governing council of each women's hall to establish a guest policy between closing hours in the evening and opening hours in the morning.

Perhaps the most dramatic move Wharton has made since he took office as president Jan. 2 has been the establishment of a Commission on Admissions.

The commission, which is composed of faculty, students, alumni and the public, will study the full range of the admissions picture at MSU. It will report to the president next winter.

Among the issues the commission will consider are the level of enrollment, scholarships, the proportion of graduate to undergraduate students, the proportion of resident to non-resident students, the ratio of men to women and full-time to part-time students.

The 25-man commission will have a staff of nine researchers headed by Ira Polley, former state superintendent of public instruction.

Crusade seeks spiritual change

By DONNA CUMMINGS

... phrase "spiritual" rarely produces a wave of excitement on college campuses... on morality, government and administrative... have captured the public's eye and the... local minister... be honored... Olivet rites students' right or option to protest at will. Despite this fact, 12 optimistic young people are planning to stage a campus wide spiritual revolution at MSU. These 12 are staff members of Campus Crusade for Christ, an international, interdenominational Christian movement. Tom Lumsden, group co-ordinator of Campus Crusade at MSU, said the organization teaches a self-help method of learning about Christ and His personal relationship with individuals.

Campus Crusade emphasizes four spiritual laws or principles: God loves man, man is separated from God by his own self-will, Jesus Christ has bridged the chasm separating man from God, and through faith man can receive Christ and be reconciled to God. The Campus Crusade staff has tripled in size since it was organized at MSU in 1962. The number of students involved in Campus Crusade fluctuates, Lumsden said. There are no membership lists or fees paid by participants in the organization. Meetings and discussions are open. "We're not interested in a club here at State," Lumsden said, "but in a movement." Meetings are organized with both the Christian and non-Christian student in mind. Leadership training classes meet once a week throughout the term and are workshops for teaching Christians how to better understand and share the Person and teachings of Christ with others. College Life meetings are held every two weeks and are geared toward "people turned off to religion," Lumsden said. This program consists of speakers and topics of particular interest to students. Action groups within the complexes and quarterly retreats also provide opportunities for discussion. The ministries of Campus Crusade canvass all ages and occupations. Lay, high school, military and athletic ministries are devoted to the same message of personal relationship with Christ is the campus ministry. Just as the mass media operate to spread news information, Campus Crusade has devised its own system of communications through song. The New Folk and Armageddon are musical performing groups affiliated with Campus Crusade. Concerts are a combination of folk and current rock music with a Christian message added. Campus Crusade for Christ publishes several magazines and a student Action newspaper from the headquarters in San Bernardino, Calif. Two of the magazines, "Collegiate Challenge" and "Athletes in Action," are distributed on campuses to students who are interested in the message of Jesus Christ. The publications relate the life and teachings of Christ to current issues and to people and events in the news. Term breaks provide a different sort of vacation for Campus Crusaders. This year, 220 staff members were active on the beach at Daytona, Fla., during spring break. The project, "Operation Sunshine," in its sixth year, was designed to introduce vacationing students to the claims of Jesus Christ. Campus Crusade is located in almost all the large universities in the United States, Lumsden said. He said a staff of 1,800 has spread Campus Crusade to a total of 43 countries since its birth at UCLA in 1951. Staff members have a two-year minimum commitment to Campus Crusade, Lumsden said. The first year is primarily a training period. The second year is an on-the-job assignment. The staff, in addition to the small salary they receive, are responsible for their own support, Lumsden said.

Spreading the word

A campus crusader shares the "Four Spiritual Laws" with another woman. The crusade stresses four biblical principles, including God loves man, man is separated from God and Jesus Christ alone can heal the separation.

Church crusade

Students who spent spring break in Daytona, Fla., with the Campus Crusade for Christ crowd into neighboring churches to hear special speakers throughout the morning.

Rev. Wallace Robertson, pastor of People's Church, 200 W. Grand River Ave., will receive an honorary doctor of divinity degree from Olivet College, Olivet, in commencement ceremonies at 8 p.m. Sunday. He will deliver a baccalaureate address, "For What Cause?" at 10 a.m. that day in Olivet Congregational Church. Rev. Mr. Robertson received a bachelor of divinity degree in 1938 from McCormick Theological Seminary in Chicago. Rev. Walter R. Wietzke, pastor of University Lutheran Church, was similarly honored last week when he received an honorary doctor of divinity degree from Capital University, Columbus, Ohio. Rev. Mr. Wietzke received a bachelor of divinity degree in 1954 from the Lutheran School of Theology in Chicago.

REV. ALBERT CLEAGE

'Fighting' pastor depicted

By JEFF HUNT
State News Staff Writer

Mrs. Pearl Reed Cleage raised her son to be a fighter. She succeeded admirably according to the book "Prophet of the Black Nation," by Hiley Henry Ward (Pilgrim Press, 1969, $5.95, hardbound).

In this piece of in-depth journalism, Ward writes about the childhood, education and work of the remarkable Rev. Albert C. Cleage Jr., pastor of the Shrine of the Black Madonna in Detroit. What Cleage has done is to "de-honkify" Christ, Julian Bond, black state representative in Georgia, said in the introduction of the book. This statement sums up Cleage's religious work.

The black minister of the United Church of Christ believes that Christ was a black man fighting for the liberation of the black nation of Israel from the white nation of Rome, Ward writes. To help the pastor clearly present his beliefs to the public, he cites Cleage's biblical, historical and anthropological studies. Ward lets Cleage come through convincingly.

Cleage's definition of a black, Ward writes, is a person with any Negro blood in him. The Jews were a black race because in their captivity they had mingled with Egyptians, who had much black Ethiopian and Negro blood in them. But Ward also mentions some of Cleage's observations on the peoples of the Middle East today: "Nasser is mixed with Negroid, and he is more black than Adam Clayton Powell. The Semitic mixed with Negroid, I'd call black. Most Arabs are mixed and have black features, hair - the whole thing. If there are any Negroid characteristics, one is therefore black."

The black pastor does not feel that the preaching of individual salvation and resurrection is of any importance, Ward says. Ward quoted Cleage's 1968 Christmas sermon when he wrote: "What good will your waltzing around and flying around in heaven do, when all your friends are still in hell down here?"

The author permits the reader to decide whether Cleage is first a Christian or a black nationalist. The delicate task of defining Cleage's Christianity and his belief in the racial segregation of black nationalism is performed with liberal doses of quotes and clear paraphrasing with few "window dressing" descriptions. Ward lets Cleage and his opponents speak through "Prophet of the Black Nation" without coloring their statements with the author's own opinions.

Ward's book fulfills a definite social need. When "The Autobiography of Malcolm X" and other books about black radicals were published, the public received the impression that black nationalists were either Muslims or "atheists" like the Black Panthers. "Prophet" attacks this notion and demonstrates that many black Christian nationalists also exist.

"Prophet" is a massive "news story" which required social research and interviewing never before attempted on the subject of Christian black nationalism. But Ward, religious editor of the Detroit Free Press and president of the Religious Writers Association, was definitely suited to the task of writing the documentary.

He received his M.S. degree from Berkeley Baptist Divinity School in Berkeley, Calif., and his B.D. (Bachelors in Divinity) from McCormick Theological School in Chicago. He studied journalism at Northwestern University.

Besides covering most of the major religious conventions in the United States and Canada, Ward has written more than 250 articles and stories in 60 publications. He is also the author of such titles as "Space Age Sunday," "God and Marx Today," and "Ecumania." These books, as well as "Prophet," show Ward's high degree of socio-political consciousness, combined with his religious outlook on life.

As any documentary, "Prophet" is not meant for casual reading. The style is written in, with its many long attributions of statements and quotes, the mind spinning lists of organizations and people working for or against Cleage, and the numerical breakdowns of various topics, gives the book a textbookish flavor in spots. But in any serious study this is inevitable.

But Ward compensates the reader with some colorful quotes of Cleage's which help to demonstrate the minister's character:

"The Jews stole and looted in Egypt before they left; but they were afraid and so they were taken out in the wilderness... You don't learn how to fight, unless you fight. You can't even argue unless you learn by doing. They (the Jews lead by Moses) were in the wilderness, not because they were chicken but because they were out to learn - to learn discipline."

"Prophet" has a sociological significance which makes up for its faults. Any student who claims to have political or social consciousness (religious not excluded) should add Ward's book to his "revolutionary" library. Despite its high price (there is no paperback edition) and its relative unavailability (bookstores have a propensity to hide it on their back shelves), "Prophet" is worth the money and trouble to get it. It's the best work on Christian black nationalism in existence.

African Center reports restructuring

By JEANNE SADDLER
State News Associate Editor

The African Studies Center, a component of the University that found itself a prime target of black student protest during the past year, revealed the end results of its reorientation in an annual report last month.

The report says the Center has undergone a "transformation, both in structure and breadth of concern. While it remains Africa-centered and departmentally oriented, its mode of operation as well as its interests have broadened out to include far more engagement of the faculty and student — in particular black student — community at MSU."

The changes began Oct. 16 when the Black Liberation Front International (BLFI) and the Pan-African Students Organization in the Americas (PASOA) staged a demonstration at the center's offices in the International Center. At the time, most of the center's staff and director were at an Africanist conference in Montreal, Canada.

The students' protest centered around the predominantly white orientation of the center, which did not include black undergraduate participation. The students pointed out their dissatisfaction with the fact that an almost all-white delegation had attended the conference in Montreal concerning their motherland.

Late in fall quarter, the center established student participation within the plenary group, the governing body of the center, a steering committee, and eight ad-hoc committees. The committees were concerned with the formulation of an undergraduate program in African Studies, curriculum at all levels, funding and student support, international programs, local programs, publications, recruitment and African language teaching.

The major achievement of the committee thus far was the announcement of plans to grant an undergraduate Certificate in African Studies that was approved by the plenary group a week ago. Victor Low, acting ASC director, said he felt the center has moved in a very positive direction.

"We are now in the process of adopting by-laws to institutionalize the changes we have made," he said.

Although the permanent bylaws or constitution has not yet been adopted, the annual report list a Statement of General Guiding Principles of the ASC. It reads:

"The plenary body of the African Studies Center reaffirms its commitment that African studies must be made more relevant to the needs and aspirations of persons of African descent wherever they may reside. This relevance includes increased participation by persons of African descent in decision-making processes of the center, increased involvement in the teaching and study of Africa and the encouragement of their appreciation of their African heritage."

In their report, ASC also noted a 44 per cent increase in enrollment in African studies courses in 1969-70.

"Part of this upswing in enrollment," the report said, "can be viewed as a favorable student response to the innovative features of the undergraduate interdisciplinary courses in winter and spring quarters, 1970."

The courses offered were "Pan-African Thought in a Revolutionary Perspective" winter term, and "Southern Africa" spring term.

The center has also appointed a Search and Selection Committee to find a permanent director for ASC.

Junior opens House bid

Alvin L. Dasen, Legislative Fiscal Agency specialist announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination to the Michigan Senate Wednesday.

Dasen, 40, helped develop Michigan's medicare and medicaid programs and directed the management systems and computer operations of the Dept. of Social Services from 1959 to 1965.

Dasen said his work in the Legislative Fiscal Agency, the technical arm of the Senate and House appropriations committees, gives him knowledge of the "routine" that none of his opponents possess. Dasen said he is opposed to the abortion reform bill in its present form but that there is "undoubtedly need for some reform."

An East Lansing resident, Dasen said he does not support moves in the legislature to remove the autonomy of the University. Most administrators are responsible in attempts to solve the problems of higher education, he added.

Opposing Dasen in the 24th District (Lansing) race for the nomination are Republicans Knight McKesson, Mrs. Pully Gibson, Paul Younger and Rep. Philip O. Pittenger, R - Lansing. Democratic candidates for the same seat include John Cataldo, Lynn Johndal and Len Stuttman.

Films, art divert exam anxiety

Her song

Joan Baez sings a song about "Joe" and how he went on to organize in the movie "Woodstock." Miss Baez joins other performers and friends in the movie now playing at the Spartan Twin West.

Movies and a graduate student art show are offered this weekend to supplement last minute cramming and divert end-of-the-term anxiety.

Art show
KRESGE ART CENTER is housing an art show featuring the work of seven MSU graduate students (all of whom are graduating this term and all are candidates for a Master of Fine Arts degree). The show contains a variety of art ranging from paintings to ceramics. The opening tonight is from 8 to 10. The show will continue through next week during regular center hours.

On-campus films
THE GRADUATE — Mike Nichols' masterpiece about befuddled Benjamin, wise Mrs. Robinson and confused Elaine returns to campus this weekend. A film to see again and again (I have seen it five times) to savor the biting satire, flawless performances (Anne Bancroft's Mrs. Robinson is a classic portrayal) and lyrical music.

By ROBERT KIPPER
State News Reviewer

"The Graduate" shows at 7:15 and 9:15 Friday night in Wilson and at 6:30, 8:30 and 10:30 Saturday night in Conrad.

BECKET — The splendid film version of the Jean Anouilh play about a tormented king and his conscientious and searching friend. "Becket" is distinguished by magnificent acting by Peter O'Toole and Richard Burton, rickety adorned sets and a complex of history. Those who thought "Anne of the Thousand Days" was exciting (myself not included) should see "Becket" for its demonstration of what can be done when intelligence and style are applied to historical presentations and its fascinating protagonists. Check ads for showtimes.

TAOS 1970 — 108B Wells is hosting a special film and discussion program at 7 and 9:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

On screen, "Taos 1970," a film about communal living in New Mexico, will be shown. On stage, some people from Taos will discuss the settlement and their life there.

GOODBYE, COLUMBUS — A film that shouldn't be shown at the same time as "The Graduate," "Columbus" is a disappointing but mildly amusing imitation. Although it tries, "Columbus" can't rival "The Graduate" in wit, originality, insight, style or acting. Still, it has its moments. (The scene in which Ali McGraw takes Richard Benjamin home for dinner and then distracts him under the table as he tries to answer her parents' question is hilarious.) "Columbus" shows at 7 and 9:15 p.m. in Conrad (Friday) and Wilson (Saturday).

Lansing area films
NEW ARRIVALS: "The Sicilian Clan," an intriguing film about a high class jewelry heist, is new at the Lansing Mall (recommended); "Bloody Mama," starring a cigar chomping machine gun toting Shelly Winters, opens at the Gladmer and "The Minx," an X-rated treat, opens at the State.

HOLD-OVERS: "Woodstock," a pulsating and highly original documentary, continues at the Spartan West (highly recommended); "M*A*S*H," a hilarious black comedy about an army hospital near the Korean front lines, continues at the Campus (highly recommended); "Airport," a half-exciting and half-involving adventure about an eventful, bomb-ridden jet flight, is playing at the Michigan and "What Do You Say to a Naked Lady?" Allen Funt's occasionally amusing sex film, shows at the Spartan East.

SOCIOLOGIST'S TRIP

Hippies life viewed

Hippie life is a direct reaction of youth to America's hypocritical materialistic and "emotionally barren" society, writes Lewis Yablonsky in his book, The Hippie Trip (Western Publishing Co., 1968, $6.95 hardbound).

This documentary gives a lively account of a "straight" sociologist who embarks on an odyssey into the hippie life experience.

"Trip" gives the reader a coast-to-coast panorama of hippie life. With his tape recorder, Yablonsky interviews individuals and groups of hippies, sympathetic social critics and hippie antagonists in rural communes, urban "tribes" and crash pads (hippie flophouses). He permits his interviewees to communicate with the reader clearly with little censoring of the tape.

Hippies chose the relative

By JEFF HUNT
State News Staff Writer

poverty of their life style, he writes, because they reject the materialistic goals of American society and its means and values for attaining them. Middle class live, with its job competition, seems lonely to them. Hippies also despise politics, orthodox religion and social etiquette, all of which they term game playing, Yablonsky says.

Yablonsky, professor of sociology at San Fernando Valley State College in California, was aided by hippie "guides", who showed him where to find sources for interviews.

The author chose this method, instead of relying solely on written research, to become involved personally with people in the movement. Without this step, Yablonsky wrote, his book would have been sterile.

But Yablonsky's "straight" life, with all of its middle class values, comes into conflict with the new ideas he encounters in his wanderings with hippies. When a hippie girl crawls into the sack next to him, his sense of values makes him get up and leave. In short, Yablonsky is not ready for free love or other mores of the movement.

As it is, "Trip" is colorful and authentic enough to give the reader a glimpse into hippiedom.

Albums offer greatest hits of PP&M, Sergio Mendez

By RAY WALSH
State News Reviewer

Two albums to be released next week will offer a combined total of 15 years of some of the best selections of easy listening and folk music ever to be written and recorded.

"Greatest Hits," the best of Sergio Mendez and Brazil '66, offers a dozen different songs performed in their infectious and bouncy style that has gained many followers since the group began (originally as Brazil '65'). The top songs on the album are the Academy Award-winning song "Look of Love," Lennon and Garfunkel's "Scarborough Fair" and their rendition of Lennon and McCartney's "Fool on the Hill." "Day-Tripper" and "With a Little Help From My Friends" are "Going Out of My Head" as easily recognizable tunes that provide sparkling entertainment.

One of the group's earliest hits, "Mais Que Nada," is also included on the album, as well as Cole Porter's "Night and Day" and "Like a Lover."

The liner notes say that Mendez spends a great deal of time searching for the song that he feels will be "just right" for the group, and the success of his recordings indicate that he has made some good decisions in the past five years.

"Ten Years Together," the best of Peter, Paul and Mary, is a baker's dozen of smooth and well-harmonized ballads that have made the trio world-renowned as leaders in popular folk music.

It's a shame that the album wasn't made into a two-record set, as there are many songs left out that deserve to be included. Among the songs that should have been considered are "If I Had My Way," "Rolling Home," "House Song" and "The Great Mandella" (The Wheel of Life). The new album features a 12-page black and white booklet that traces PP & M from their early club acts, to contract singing and success in the folk and protest song field.

Three songs by Bob Dylan appear on "Ten Years Together," including "Blowing In the Wind" and "Don't Think Twice, It's All Right."

"Puff, the Magic Dragon," probably the group's most famous song, joins "Day Is Done" as songs that easily relate to children, although the former has also been considered to be a symbolic song about marijuana.

"Leavin' on a Jet Plane," written by John Denver, was pulled from Album 1700, last year and made into a million-selling record with immense popularity.

The lyrical abilities of Gordon Lightfoot are well displayed in two of his songs that are smoothly rendered, "Early Mornin' Rain" and "For Lovin' Me."

Some of the other folk songs on the album are "500 Miles," "Lemon Tree" and the ever-popular freedom song, "If I Had a Hammer."

It's been a decade since Peter Yarrow, Paul Stookey, and Mary Travers combined to form Peter, Paul and Mary, and their impact on the folk music scene is one that will doubtless continue to receive well-deserved recognition for many years.

CANCER RESEARCHER ADVISES

'Kick the habit'—kill the cause

By SYLVIA SMITH
State News Staff Writer

Some forms of cancer can be prevented by removing the causal agent from the environment, an expert in the field of cancer research said Wednesday.

Sir Alexander Haddow told a group of about 90 people in Wells Hall that the individual can sometimes remove the agent himself.

Haddow is director of the Chester Beatty Research Institute of Cancer Research in London. He is completing a tour of the United States after attending the 10th International Cancer Research Congress in Houston.

"Abolition and limitation of the cigarette habit is necessary," Haddow said.

He said smokers living in heavily air polluted environments are more susceptible to lung cancer than non-smokers in an identical environment.

Haddow cited several reasons for having an optimistic viewpoint toward cancer research.

The phenomena of spontaneous regression of some tumors is one of them, and although this is admittedly rare, Haddow said, it does occur. Their existence is significant and not to be overlooked.

Another optimistic discovery is that cancer cells contain a protein substance not found in normal cells, he said.

An "inspiring" interplay among nations in the field of cancer research has also occurred, he said.

Haddow was one of the first scientists to investigate such agents as mustard gas for their application to medicine. These agents are now being used successfully in cancer treatment.

Haddow stressed that no immunizing vaccine is available at the present time.

Cancer critic

Sir Alexander Haddow recently discussed cancer and how the disease can be prevented if the causal agent is eliminated. The talk in Wells Hall was sponsored by the colleges of Natural Science and Human Medicine.

Program to aid in crime control

By SHARON TEMPLETON
State News Staff Writer

Gov. Milliken signed an executive order Thursday creating an integrated Office of Criminal Justice Programs in Michigan.

The new office, under the direction of Bernard G. Winckowski, former director of the Michigan Law Enforcement Commission, will be responsible for the administration of more than $7 million in crime control funds to be awarded to Michigan in fiscal 1970-71.

The office will also administer funds for the control of juvenile delinquency in Michigan.

"There is no question that this office will represent the most effective crime prevention program this state has ever seen," the governor said.

"I regard creation of the Office of Criminal Justice Program one of the most important steps we can take to strengthen Michigan's fight against crime and to build a model criminal justice system," Milliken added.

The office represents a combined effort of all law enforcement agencies in Michigan—local, county and state; police, prosecutors, courts and corrective institutions.

The new office will be divided into four units: Commission of Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice; Juvenile Delinquency Advisory Council; Organized Crime Prevention Council; and Administrative.

State Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley, also a member of the new commission, said he is "pledged to using the funds for an overall comprehensive program against crime."

He emphasized the role the commission will play in controlling organized crime in Michigan which has grown ten-fold in recent years.

"It is the function of the state to hold organized crime to a minimum," Kelley said. "I think we've made substantial progress so far."

Juveniles, thefts pose problems in park

A number of juveniles were picked up for curfew violations in people's park area Tuesday and Wednesday. Several thefts were also reported from cars parked in Lot "O" during the same period, MSU police records indicate.

The curfew violators include three 16-year-olds, two 15-year-olds and one 14-year-old.

An escapee from a girl's juvenile home in Grand Rapids also was apprehended on a curfew violation Tuesday and was returned to the home early Wednesday morning.

Other violations in people's park involved a 19-year-old Vermontville youth, charged with aiding and abetting, violation of curfew by a minor and a person caught throwing hatchet at trees, who was charged with destruction of University property.

A stereo tape deck and its cartridge, valued at $202, was stolen from the car of Janis Darling, 208 West Owen Hall. Miss Darling's car was parked in Lot "O" at the time of the late Tuesday night.

Two other thefts were reported from Lot "O", a battery and antenna were stolen from a car owned by Richard Butler, 422 East Owen Hall, and a battery was taken from the car of Lisa L. Trucks, 6 West Owen Hall.

"I'm not saying people from people's park were involved in the thefts, but since the park was moved near Owen, thefts in Lot "O" have gone down drastically," Capt. Adam Zutauf of the MSU police said.

Zutauf said that police checks of the park area for curfew violations have revealed that most of the park's residents are non-students and juveniles.

Fire damage 4 apartments

A fire in an outside wall of Cherry Lane apartment building caused an estimated $80,000 damage Wednesday afternoon, according to John Roelms, manager of married housing. Injuries were reported.

The fire broke out at 4 p.m. between the walls of 9 apartment building at 9 Cherry Lane. Four apartment units were affected, but damage was reported residents' property in any of units.

Students cite favoritism in poll

By DAVID BASSETT

Results of a study on racial attitudes held by white business and education majors at MSU reveal that students in these curricula tend to view society as being somewhat more preferential toward blacks.

The study, administered and financed by the Center for Urban Affairs and the College of Education, also revealed that students on this campus tend to be more positive in their feelings toward blacks than in their attitudes.

Differing from other studies, the survey measured attitudes on six different levels: stereotypical, normative, moral, hypothetical action, actual feeling and "actual" action. Other surveys have usually measured attitudes on only one or two of these levels.

The survey was mailed spring term to 250 education majors and 200 business majors. They were randomly selected by computer. Seventy-five (33.3 per cent) education majors and 66 (33.3 per cent) business majors returned completed answer sheets.

Education and business majors were chosen because members of these groups will probably someday compose the "leadership cadre" of society, a spokesman for survey administrators said.

Questions in Level I asked students to give their views of how they think society as a whole regards blacks. Example: "Blacks can be trusted with money — more than whites — about the same as whites — less than whites."

Responses to the 14 questions in this level indicate that the students feel that most other whites think most blacks want or possess many or more of the same things whites do. Education majors tended to be slightly, but not significantly, more positive than business majors, while females were slightly, but not significantly, more positive than males.

The 14 questions in Level II, "Normative Attitudes" were worded similar to "Whites believe Negroes can be trusted with money — disagree, — uncertain, — agree." These questions differed from those in Level I by asking what the student thinks whites "do" believe about blacks, not what the student "thinks" whites believe about blacks.

Responses to these questions indicate that students are a bit more positive in their normative attitudes than in their stereotypical attitudes. Again, education majors and females were somewhat more positive than business majors and males. Level III of the survey dealt with moral attitudes. Responses to these questions indicated that the students felt it was "usually right" to treat blacks as good as or better than whites. Education majors and females again scored more positively.

Level IV, however, showed a somewhat different pattern. Whereas the first three groups dealt exclusively with what might be termed "cognitive" attitudes, those in Levels IV, V and VI related to "action" or "affective" attitudes.

What this means is that the responses received tended to signify that a definite disparity exists between what white students think of their black counterparts and what they actually do in various situations.

For example, Level IV contained such questions as "I would trust blacks with money" or "I would want blacks to be given the same draft deferments that whites get." While still in the hypothetical stage, these questions deal specifically with action, not merely thought.

Responses to these questions revealed that the students surveyed thought that their possible actions were somewhat less positive than their society's normative attitudes.

Level V responses (indicating actual feelings) followed much the same pattern as those in Level IV; education majors were somewhat more positive than business majors, and females were somewhat more positive than males.

Level VI, however, completely broke the established pattern. This section, dealing exclusively with concrete actions related to blacks, showed that when the white students surveyed actually came in contact with blacks, their resulting actions or reactions were generally as positive as their theoretical attitudes in some areas, but much different in others.

A substantial number of respondents (approximately 50 per cent) indicated that they had no experience with blacks.

The second major portion of the survey consisted of 36 questions designed to aid the surveyors both in forming conclusions in relation to how representative this survey is of the general MSU population, and how white students of a similar background and social outlook feel about blacks.

Questions in this second section were concerned with data in such areas as efficacy content and intensity, age, size of hometown and its geographical location, attitudes in regards to child rearing and birth control, and the kind, amount, alternatives, pleasure and ease of avoiding contact with blacks.

Scores on the efficacy content and intensity sections indicate that the students surveyed tended to be optimistic and feel "in control" of their environment.

For example, most responses to questions such as "Success depends to a large part on luck and fate" were of a negative nature, while responses to questions such as "Almost every present human problem will be solved in the future" were positive.

While education and business majors and females and males varied, the deviations from the average were not statistically significant, but they were consistent in the same direction.

Differences in the age factors between the four categories were slight, with education majors being slightly older than business majors and males being older than females. All groups generally ranged between juniors and seniors and first year graduate students, as well as being primarily small town - suburban western - midwestern.

After this survey was completed and analyzed, it was compared with the results of a survey using the same questionnaire given to rehabilitation counselor trainees in 1969. This latter survey was administered at 59 colleges throughout the nation (including MSU), and is part of a larger program being supervised in seven countries by John Jordan of the College of Education.

MICHIGAN SENATE

Fiscal aide seeks seat

Richard T. O'Neill, Lansing fiscal aide, announced his candidacy Tuesday to vie for a seat in the Michigan House of Representatives in the August Democratic primary.

O'Neill, a 28-year-old pre-law student and Air Force sergeant, will vie for the position vacated by Rep. Philip O. Stenger, R - Lansing, for the 18th District. The student who labels himself a "peace candidate" said he has never before actively participated in politics.

Although O'Neill has no campaign funds, he stated that he would not accept contributions of more than $20. "Enormous amounts spent on campaigning defeat the purpose of a democracy," O'Neill said. "An elected official should not be determined by money." O'Neill, however, is asking for people to canvass for him to get his name and his stand known by the public.

O'Neill said he knows of no other student who has attempted running for the Michigan House of Representatives — or any student who won the nomination.

Thomas Walsh, a lawyer and Lansing School Board treasurer, has also announced candidacy for the Democratic nomination.

Film distorts sensitivity groups

By SHIRLEY JOHNSON
State News Staff Writer

The recent film, "Bob & Carol, Ted & Alice," is not an accurate example of many marathon sensitivity training sessions, Gary Frost, asst. dean of James Madison College, said.

Due to many distortions within the film, people who have not been involved in sensitivity training may get the wrong impressions of a training group, Frost said.

As the popularity of sensitivity training grew, a Berkeley psychologist said he found many students joined encounter groups to participate, rather than to learn from them. "These participants are people who epitomize the trouble with society. They come for an emotional jolt, for the week's pill," he said.

Another psychologist, Dr. Clifford J. Sager, president of the 2,000-member American Group Psychotherapy Assn. (AGPA), has expressed concern about the growing number of sensitivity groups on and off campuses.

Sager said many group leaders are untrained and are unable to realize danger signs among the participants in a group session.

He cited the example of a girl who recently completed a course in sensitivity training at a New

Last in a series

York growth center. She is now planning to lead her own groups. "She is very sick. This is murder. It's like stopping somebody on the street who has always wanted to be a doctor and giving him a prescription pad with his own name on it," Sager said.

Unfortunately, he added, some of the newer techniques have been picked up indiscriminately by group leaders. The AGPA can do little about the situation, because no laws exist to regulate the use of therapeutic techniques, he said.

States have been unable to define psychotherapy satisfactorily in legal terms, so the most the AGPA can do is educate the public and unvestigate members for unethical practices.

Some group leaders feel there is little danger in sensitivity training. A California psychologist who pioneered in the development of marathon sessions said that everyone has the strength to deal with encounter group experiences.

Not all of the trainers feel this way, however. Frost said the role played by a qualified trainer is the most important factor within a sensitivity group.

Richard Mann, professor at the University of Michigan, said one main fault with an inexperienced trainer is that he produces a boring group.

Unfortunately, little research has been done with sensitivity groups. The studies which have been conducted so far have concluded that people are more likely to improve managerial skills after participation in an encounter group than those who failed to participate.

Everyone does not benefit equally. Approximately two-thirds of the participants have noted an increase in communication skills.

In almost all cases where a participant has broken down during a group session, the person had a history of prior disturbances. Participants who broke down were estimated to be less than one per cent of all members.

One of the critics of sensitivity training, Gary Allen, author of "Hate Therapy," compared the movement to the brainwashing prisoners in Korea during the war.

The authorities generally agree that group participation should be voluntary.

Carl Rogers, psychologist, said that one of the dangers was that an individual may become deeply involved in revealing himself but then be left with problems that are not resolved.

Rogers said if preventive steps are taken, such as an immediate follow-up of any encounter group experiences, people work through any unresolved conflicts.

LOWER ALCOHOL LEVEL

Tougher law awaits OK

By TOM BOWERS

Drinking drivers of Michigan, beware!

The Michigan Senate last week unanimously approved and sent to the House of Representatives a bill which would reduce by one third the level of blood alcohol necessary to legally presume a motorist to be driving under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

Secretary of State James M. Hare, who has pushed for the legislation for nearly four years, said the new standards will allow an average-sized man to consume only three ounces of alcohol in the span of about one hour, or five ounces in two hours.

Under current law, a level of .15 per cent alcohol in the blood is required to presume that a person is under the influence of liquor. The new law, if passed by the House and signed by the governor, will lower that level to .10 per cent.

The .10 per cent level is in line with guidelines suggested to the states by the National Highway Safety Commission in 1967. Hare, who will retire from his position as secretary of state at the end of this year, served on the commission for three years.

"Only nine other states have lowered their legal standard for presuming a motorist to be under the influence of alcohol," Hare said. "Eight of those took action during Michigan's current legislative session. Our law will be one of the strongest in the nation in that Michigan will be one of the first 10 states to pass a tough bill."

Hare indicated, however, that he does not expect the Michigan House of Representatives to take action on the bill until next year.

"I am sure the bill will be taken up by the House next year. But so far this year I haven't even been able to get it out of committee."

"One of the problems is that legislators are afraid they themselves might get caught under the new law. Some say they find it necessary in their position to attend many social functions at which alcoholic beverages are served. This is only a temporary difficulty, though. The bill will be passed by the House, as it was by the Senate," Hare said.

Under another provision of the bill, a blood alcohol level of .07 to .10 per cent would be sufficient to presume a motorist to be driving while impaired.

Michigan law provides that a person convicted of driving while under the influence of liquor will have his driver's license suspended for no more than 90 days and six points added to his driving record, if a fine or jail sentence is not required.

Repeated convictions driving while impaired can bring a driver's license suspension.

Hare said the major effect of the stricter standards will be psychological. A person who thinks twice about driving after several drinks when he knows he may be picked up for driving

"I expect the death rate on Michigan highways to drop significantly within the first year after the new standards become law. After Ireland adopted similar standards, the death rate dropped 20 per cent

Allen Funt's "What Do You Say to a Naked Lady?"

"Funt carries the investigation into many highways and byways of sex. Women are faced with a nude, nonchalant man. A classroom of young men and women at what is obviously a liberal school or college is faced with a lecturer on sex. What's remarkable is the fact that the female lecturer is totally nude. What's even more remarkable is the lack of shock on the part of the students. Four middle-aged, conventional women, faced with the same lecturer, almost giggle their heads off with embarrassment. Whether you take it as simply sex stimulant or insight as to degrees of sexual freedom, generation gap, self-control, sex drive, it is unique and fascinating."

"A film satirizing generation gap attitudes toward nudity and sex. I found the audience reacting with delight and outright belly laughs!"
—David Goldman, WCB5 Radio

"Allen Funt is concerned with human reactions to nudity. We're all voyeurs and it is amusing to see the reactions of men confronted by a naked lady; how ladies behave when a nude male artist's model comes to life; how students and then their parents take it when a naked woman appears as the straight-on guest lecturer in a sex-education course; or how three middle-aged women discuss a "dirty" movie they've seen!"

'S' golfers prepare for NCAA

By OLG OLSON
State News Sports Writer

The number 13 is often associated with bad luck, but for five MSU golfers that superstitious symbol, after June 22, will mark the appearances Spartan link units have made in the NCAA golf tournament.

Ohio State University's championship Scarlet Course will be the site of the 72-hole tourney to determine the best college golf team in the nation. Teams will warm-up with practice rounds on June 22 and June 23, with play starting June 24 and running through June 27.

Coach Bruce Fossum's Spartans have been busy since the Big Ten meet two weeks ago preparing for the NCAA. MSU finished 13th last year and is looking for improvement in final placement this year to dispell a disappointing third-place finish in the 1970 Big Ten championship.

An intersquad playoff, completed Thursday, has determined the five Spartan golfers who will be representing MSU in the national tourney.

Seniors Lynn Janson and Lee Edmundson, who have paced the linksters all season, automatically won berths on the MSU unit. Both will be competing in their third NCAA meet.

A year ago Janson finished third with a 298, in the nationals, 10 over par. The East Lansing product and captain of the Spartans recently competed in the Michigan Medal Championship, finishing fifth. Edmundson fired a 301 72-hole total in 1969 to finish sixth in the NCAA.

Involved in the 72-hole intersquad playoff this week were Ron English, Rick Woulfe, John VanderMeiden, John Peterson and Denny Vass. English, Woulfe and VanderMeiden notched the respective third, fourth and fifth-man spots for the Spartans.

Woulfe and English are juniors, while VanderMeiden is a sophomore. Woulfe captured medalist honors in the Illinois Invitational during the season and tied for seventh in the 1969 NCAA. English has the Spartan Invitational title to his credit and VanderMeiden played steady golf for the Spartans all season and is expected to contribute to the unit in NCAA play.

Coach Fossum indicated Thursday that MSU and other Northern colleges "have some advantage because of the site and that most of us (the Northern colleges) have competed at OSU."

"There is a slight advantage for the Northern schools in playing the tournament over a northern golf course," Fossum said, adding that "the physical make-up of a Northern course is different than down south."

COMPETE FOR TIMES

Spartans in Indiana meet

By DON KOPRIVA
State News Staff Writer

MSU won't be gunning for any team title today and Saturday in the Central Collegiate Conference Meet at Bloomington, Ind., but a number of Spartans will be shooting for times that can make the trip to Des Moines in less than two weeks.

Only three individuals and one relay team have qualified so far for the 49th NCAA meet at Drake University June 18-20, but Spartan Coach Fran Dittich hopes a few more individuals can improve their mark to what the NCAA says is necessary for qualification.

John Mock needs a 1:50.0 or better in the 880-yard run, and with a host of others in the meet who also need to hit the same standard, the pace should be fire and a number of runners should go under. Mock ran 1:50.6 indoors to tie MSU's varsity indoor mark but his best outside is only 1:51.1.

Freshman hurdler John Morrison broke out of his 14.2 jinx last Saturday and dropped to 14.1 but that's still one-tenth of a second shy of the NCAA standard. With preliminaries and semis set for the CCC meet, the Big Ten third placer should have a number of chances to make it.

Al Henderson, runner-up, in the Big Ten 440, ran 47.3 in practice two weeks back but couldn't get untracked last Saturday and found himself over 48 seconds. He ran well on the Indiana track in the Big Ten with 47.5 so if he can knock off three-tenths, he'll make the trip to the NCAA.

Pole vaulter Bob Karr should have good luck at Bloomington, too. He soared a surprising 15 feet into the Hoosier sky at the Big Ten to take third. He needs a foot more than that to qualify.

Already qualified for MSU are Herb Washington, (9.4) and LaRue Butcher (9.5) in the 100-yard dash, Ken Popejoy (4:07.0) in the mile, and Wayne Hartwick (51.1) in the intermediate hurdles. The 440 yard relay has also made it, with Mike Holt as the fourth man there along with Washington, Butcher and Henderson. All will be shooting for better marks here Saturday against some top-notch Midwestern competition.

Flood worth $100,000, Royal's owner testifies

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ewing W. Kauffman, owner of the Kansas City Royals, testified Thursday that Curt Flood would be worth more than $100,000 to the Royals although the outfielder was being paid only $90,000 by the St. Louis Cardinals.

The testimony came as Flood's antitrust suit against baseball and its reserve clause continued here in federal court. Flood brought his suit to the courts when he was traded by the Cardinals to the Philadelphia Phillies at the end of last season. He was making $90,000 at the time.

Kauffman said that ball players have great bargaining power in negotiating contracts, but he admitted a ball player must sign with the club that owns his contract or leave baseball. "If you could get him what would you pay for Flood at an annual salary?" Flood's attorney, Jay Topkis, asked.

Kauffman looked over to where Flood usually sits when he attends and said, "If I could get him under contract to stay with us for awhile, 'I'd say $100,000 to $125,000. And if he agreed to stay with us a little longer I might give him a little more."

"Now we're talking about Curt Flood, my client. How high would you go for a five-year contract?" Topkis asked.

After thinking a moment, Kauffman said he would have to know more about Flood's personality and ability to get along with his teammates. Topkis pointed out that Flood was the co-captain of the St. Louis Cardinals.

When Judge Irving Ben Cooper sought to intervene, Topkis explained he was trying to prove damages. "What is a better way to find out his worth as a player to another team?" Topkis asked.

"Boy we really got stuck!"

SN names Simpson top 'S' athlete for '69-'70

By RICK GOSSELIN
State News Sports Writer

In a poll of State News sports writers, basketball All-American Ralph Simpson was chosen athlete of the year at MSU. In the events category, the Spartans' upset victory over the Rose Bowl-bound Michigan Wolverines was rated as the top single performance.

Simpson, succeeding last year's winner, Toby Towson, won handsily in the balloting. The sophomore from Detroit Pershing received 17 out of a possible 18 points, gaining a first-place vote on all ballots but one. Track ace Herb Washington earned runner-up honors, receiving nine points and the only other first-place vote. Wrestler Keith Lowrance, a three-year regular on Grady Peninger's mat team, captured third place with five points. Phil Fulton, ace hurler of the MSU baseball team, and Ron Saul, All-American guard on the football team, tied for fourth place. Freshman Tom Milkovich, the Big Ten's top wrestler in the 134-pound division, finished fifth.

The wrestling team gained the No. 2 event spot behind the upset over Michigan in football, as it clinched its fifth consecutive mat title in the Big Ten. The stunning, double, late inning victory over the Ohio State Buckeyes in baseball was named as the No. 3 event. Also mentioned in the balloting was the basketball team's upset victory over nationally ranked Notre Dame, center Don Thompson's five goal outburst against Michigan in hockey and Washington's triumph over John Carlos in the 60-yard dash at the Spartan Relays.

Simpson seemed the most logical choice for MSU athlete of the year, considering that he has taken almost every other honor open to him in his first season of varsity eligibility. His plaudits came flooding in nationwide, gaining academic All-American acclaim as well as an all-district spot on the Look all-star team. The honorable mention positions accorded Simpson in his quest for basketball superiority are too numerous to be counted.

Simpson set a new school scoring record with his total of 667 points, surpassing the former record of 600 points set by Julius McCoy in 1956. The sophomore sensation was held under 20 points only three times all season, more often than not having games with a point total in the high 30s. Against Western Michigan, Ralph gave the Bronco fans a night to remember in blistering the Kalamazoo hoops for his season high of 42 points. His 40 points against Oregon in the Far West Classic and his 37 marks against Minnesota during the regular season rank second and third on his list.

Washington, the Flint speedster, set MSU and Big Ten records at the winter conference meet held at Jenison Fieldhouse. With a time of 6.0, Washington broke Jesse Owen's league mark of 6.1. Washington did not limit his success to the Big Ten meet, however, as he tied the world record in the NCAA meet at Cobo Hall in Detroit on March 13. His 5.9 gave him all of the honors in the star studded field.

One of the many highlights of Washington's track season was his triumph over world champion John Carlos in the 60-yard dash event of the Spartan Relays.

HERB WASHINGTON

Keith Lowrance would have been the country's premier grappler in the 142-pound class had it not been for Iowa State's Dan Gable. Boasting an overall record of 27-2, Lowrance took first place in the Big Ten tournament, and claimed a third in the NCAA meet. Losses only to Gable in the Midlands, giving Lowrance a second place medal, and Washington's Larry Owings in the national tournament delegating him to a third-place finale, blemished an otherwise perfect record.

A dedicated performer, Lowrance teamed with Tom Milkovich and Greg Johnson to give MSU a building block for victory in the lower weight classes.

The Spartan victory over Michigan at Spartan Stadium last fall would have to go down in MSU records as one of the most "satisfying" conquests in history. The Wolverines went into the Spartan spectacle with an undefeated record in Big Ten competition and only a loss to powerful Missouri in pre-conference play. The 23-12 defeat loomed bigger and bigger on Michigan's record as the season progressed. Even after the Wolverines dropped the nation's No. 1 team, Ohio State, on the last day of the season, they still had to settle for a first-place tie

Ex-Indiana coaching great Branch McCracken, dies

INDIANAPOLIS, IND. (UPI) — Branch McCracken, who built Indiana University basketball into a nationally famous institution during a 24-year coaching span, died Thursday at an Indianapolis hospital.

McCracken died at the Indiana University Medical Center just five days short of his 62nd birthday, June 9. He was hospitalized May 21 for treatment of a heart ailment.

McCracken coached Indiana's Hoosiers from 1938, when he succeeded Everett Dean, to 1965 when he retired and turned the coaching reins over to his assistant, Lou Watson. Dean had resigned to coach at Stanford.

Dean coached McCracken, a native of Monrovia, Indiana, to All-America status during his undergraduate years from 1926 to 1930. After graduation, he played professional ball briefly and went to Ball State University at Muncie, where he coached for eight years, compiling a 93-41 record.

In his career at IU, McCracken was national "Coach Of The Year" twice, in 1940 and 1953. He was named to National Basketball Hall's of Fame as both a player and coach and was in the second five-member group to be admitted to the Indiana Hall of Fame in 1963.

His IU teams failed only four times in 24 seasons to finish in the first division of Big Ten competition, and in 12 of those 24 years they either won the championship or finished second.

In one six-year span from 1953 to 1958, Indiana finished on top four times, winning the Big Ten titles in 1953, 1954 and 1958 and being co-champions in 1957. His teams won national collegiate crowns in 1940 and 1953.

IU teams under McCracken won two national championships in four tries and in NCAA tournament play lost only twice in 10 games.

McCracken coached teams at IU racked up an overall record of 364-174.

'S' sports year: individuals star, teams fail

By GARY WALKOWICZ
State News Sports Editor

All 15 sports were equally popular and prestigious, 1969-70 would have been a very successful year for sports at MSU. While Spartan teams managed only one title in Big Ten competition, they contended in many others with seven third-place finishes and three fourth-place finishes. Only two teams finished below fourth place, but they were in the two "major" sports, basketball and football. So, despite MSU's second-place finish in the league's All-Sports race, 1969-70 will go into the record books as the year of the fumbled football and missed jump shot.

The winners

The most successful sports entry on the MSU campus this year was the wrestling team, which won the Big Ten title for the fifth straight year and finished second in the NCAA meet. Here Pat Karslake has little trouble subduing an opponent.

MSU's wrestling team again dominated the Big Ten, winning its 15th straight conference title, but most of the past year's top performances came from exciting underclassmen. Sophomore Ralph Simpson broke onto the national scene in the 134-pounder division, finishing 10th in the nation in the Big Ten and rebounding, in spite of being only 6 foot 2 inches tall, to finish second in the All-American. Simpson earned All-American mention for the way he excited Spartan fans with his skills.

Senior Herb Washington brought national attention to the MSU track team. Also a sophomore, Washington had his finest moments when he beat world ace John Carlos in the 60-yd. dash at the MSU Relays and won the same event in a world-record time of 5.9 in the NCAA Indoor championships, tying the world record of 5.9 seconds.

Big Ten title... again. It was the fifth straight time Grady Peninger's squad proved its superiority in the Big Ten. The Spartans broke their own record for most points in rolling up an astounding team score of 96, 31 points ahead of the nearest rival. Johnson, Milkovich, Lowrance, Jack Zindel and Vic Mittelberg took the entire script in their respective weight classes; Gerald Malacek brought home a second-place finish; and Pat Karslake and Gary Bissell won consolation finals in grabbing the number three spot.

of height and experience. They put things together near the end of the season to finish a surprising and acceptable sixth. The football season had few points worth remembering. MSU started with two wins, but they were of the non-convincing type and over Washington and Southern Methodist, two push-over teams. National powers Notre Dame and Ohio State were next and they exposed the Spartans as false pretenders for a Rose Bowl berth. MSU scored a healthy 28 points against the Irish, but the darts of Joe Theismann completely overwhelmed a weak Spartan pass defense and Notre Dame scored 42. It wasn't even that close the following week as Ohio State humbled MSU, 54-21. MSU gained a measure of respect for the year by knocking off Rose Bowl bound Michigan with an excellent 23-12 effort. Daugherty abandoned the triple option offense in this one and ground out a win with power football.

Injuries crippled the team throughout the year, but MSU was clearly either too over-rated or too under-coached to warrant the pre-season raves it received. Rising above the miserable showing was the twin brother team of Rich and Ron Saul as they closed out their excellent Spartan careers. Rich, still hobbled by a 1968 knee injury, nonetheless did a standout job on the defensive line, while Ron became a solid All-American at offensive guard.

Basketball season brought, if not more success, certainly more thrills than the grid campaign provided. The Spartans had to scramble and hustle to make up for their lack of height. This, plus the unpolished brilliance of Simpson and the erratic, yet exciting, play of Rudy Benjamin, kept Jenison Fieldhouse more packed than it had been in several years.

A narrow victory over nationally ranked Notre Dame and a narrow loss to Rick Mount and Purdue were games that kept Jenison rooters in a constant state of frenzy. Upset road wins over Ohio State and Illinois near the end of the season were the big factors in gaining the tie for sixth place.

Simpson, who broke the Spartan's single season scoring mark in his first try, saved his best shooting effort for a road game at Western Michigan where he hit 19 of 25 floor shots and totaled 42 points.

First-year Coach Gus Ganakas can look forward to a little more height from freshman team, with an 11-2 record and a lot more experience with only one 1970 starter graduating.

Wrestling titles have been all but conceded to MSU the past few years, and Grady Peninger's 1970 crew did nothing to discourage that feeling. Paced by conference champions in five of the 10 events, the grapplers scored a league record -- 96 points -- and finished 31 points ahead of runner-up Iowa.

Only once did the Spartans fall in dual meet competition, and that was a one-point loss to powerful Oklahoma State. In the NCAA Tourney, MSU entered as a championship contender and finished second to Iowa State.

Seniors Jack Zindel, Keith Lowrance, Greg Johnson and freshman Milkovich were the biggest winners throughout the season. Johnson, who broke into the lineup in mid-season after recovering from an injury, won a national crown to go with his Big Ten title, and the other three were NCAA placers and league champs.

MSU's other fall entries seemed to be affected by misfortunes of the football team. The cross-country unit, with a freshmen-dominated team, fell from first in 1968 to fourth. Gene Kenney's usually unbeatable soccer team was beset by a crushing load of injuries, which sidelined All-Americans Trevor Harris and Ernie Tuchscherer along with several other regulars. After reaching the NCAA semi-finals for finals in each of the past five years, the Spartans, using a quitted lineup because of the injury problem, were knocked off by Cleveland State in a first-round game.

Kenney ended a great coaching career this spring when he stepped down from the head job, which is expected to be handed to Kenney's assistant last year, Payton Fuller. Kenney's resignation came at the same time the Athletic Dept. decided to cut off funds for future soccer scholarships. This almost assuredly will hinder Fuller's efforts in maintaining a top-notch team, since most of the Spartan soccer stars in the past few years have come from Jamaica or the St. Louis, Mo., area.

Winter term sports wallowed in a pool of mediocrity that was broken only by the success of the wrestlers.

The swimmers under rookie Coach Dick Fetters, made the best showing as they perpetuated their third place Big Ten tradition by finishing right behind Indiana and Michigan for the sixth straight year. Sprinters Mike Kalmbach and Dick Crittenden, diver Jim Henderson and the versatile Bruce Richards led MSU's efforts.

Amo Bessone's hockey entry was a .500 team all year long and finished 13-15 overall and 5-7 in the Big Ten, giving the Spartans a tie for third among the four conference schools. The play of sophomore centers Gilles Gagnon and Thompson were two who drew fans into MSU's antiquated ice arena.

... the losers

Local track fanatics saw enough top talent this winter to satisfy their spectator desires for awhile. The MSU Relays saw top national runners compete, while the Big Ten championships featured the best trackmen in the Midwest. Washington's speedy bursts were the highlight of both meets with a 60-yard win over John Carlos in the Relays and a conference record-setting win in the Big Ten 60.

A pleasant spring showing saw Spartan teams bring home four third place finishes. Coach Danny Litwhiler's baseball team entered the season with an extremely young team, yet managed a fine 28-15 record overall and a 9-7 mark in the Big Ten.

Party to honor Hank Bullough

Friends of former MSU football Defensive Line Coach Hank Bullough are preparing a party in his honor to be held June 11.

The party will be in recognition of the excellent job Bullough has done with Spartan teams in past years. The defensive mentor recently resigned his position at MSU to take a spot on the staff of the Baltimore Colts of the National Football League.

The party will be held at the University Inn beginning at 8 p.m. Tickets are being sold at the ticket office in Jenison Fieldhouse for $10 each with the price to include refreshments for the party and the cost of a gift for Bullough.

Students protest for change

Seven conspiracy trial convictions, and the strike here all offer prime examples. The extent of radicalization that has occurred here is best exemplified by contrasting the Oct. 15 moratorium march and the May strike within the University. The student mood has changed significantly since last fall. Last Oct. 15, students were singing and giving peace signs on their way to the state Capitol. In May, they were shouting "right on" and giving the clenched fist sign throughout the strike. Both moratoriums were symbolic acts, meant to give a show of feeling. But the student strike was action-oriented and geared to be a show of force. The demonstrators in the moratoriums were laughing and joking and less committed; it was a day long affair, only, to many. With the Kent State killings and the U.S. move into Cambodia, however, the strikers were extremely serious and were more thoroughly committed to the cause. Whereas the moratoriums involved short range goals and a single demand to end the war, the strike here featured eight national and local demands and more long range goals ("shut down" the University). The amount of alienation and frustration among the college students heightened during the time between the moratoriums and the strike. The University students wanted to express their ideas and to communicate with the nonuniversity elements within the country. But, they encountered repression and increased hardships in communicating; and fell victims to the stereotyping of students by both America's leaders and its followers. Many students involved in the strike had witnessed an increased alienation and unfulfillment when the peaceful change methods of the moratoriums failed to bring about change. A new look in college demonstrators came about from the beginning of the moratoriums and to the time of the strike within the University. The traditional image of a college demonstrator — "seaweed" hair and "hippie" clothes — vanished as the year progressed. The clean-shaven, short-haired "boy next door" became actively involved in the protest movement, too. A noticeable degree of radicalization inflicted the University during the academic year. And the radicalization process shows no signs of being abated. Social conditions within the country and the University have not changed significantly enough to ease the radicalization. Indeed, most of the student attempts to change the system have not been honored. In addition, the incoming college freshman, through his high school experience, is more open-minded, educated and radical than his predecessors.

Caps and gowns

Kruch, West Branch senior and liaison officer for the Committee for a New Congress. Kruch said many students who are interested in donating their cap and gown fees to a peace organization "are not that financially independent and want to give their money to something they believe in." King said he doesn't think the students "are really that hard up." "If they really want to donate something to a peace organization they could," he said. Kruch asked Breslin Wednesday if there is any regulation that students must wear caps and gowns in the ceremony. He said Breslin was "surprised" that students thought they could not go through commencement without a cap and gown. He said Breslin assured him that he could go through the ceremony in street clothes. Breslin said Thursday that he had told Kruch he would check with King about the specific regulation, but he did not say that students need not wear caps and gowns. Of the $5 students pay to rent caps and gowns, $4 goes for the rental. When they return their garments, students have the option to donate the extra $1 to the Alumni Development Fund for a senior class gift (which this year will go toward cleaning the Red Cedar) or getting a $1 refund. Kruch said the Committee for a New Congress will set up a table at the cap and gown return center for students to donate their returned dollars to the New Congress or for advertising support of the Cooper Church Amendment to end the war.

MSU given grant funds

"The program will give an opportunity for experience and insight into the executive branch of the University." Although the details of the program have not yet been finalized, the first group of three fellows are scheduled to begin July 1. These fellows will be selected by the President, due to lack of time, but future fellows will be chosen through a more elaborate selection process, according to Spaniol.

Elliott G. Ballard, assistant to the president, said the idea for the program came about as Wharton went through the process of learning his job. "No where is there any very effective way for an individual to get a taste or background for University administration," Ballard said. "It's difficult for anyone to look at the problems you have from this perspective." Ballard added that the program would also be useful to the administration in getting individuals to appreciate their point of view.

Because it is experimental in nature, the program will be open to change as it goes along, Ballard said. "And like any experiment, it may fail or succeed," he said. According to a statement made by Wharton, the fellowships will be for six months. A shorter period would not permit meaningful participation in the administrative process and a longer period would entail too great a delay in the individual's course work or teaching development. Wharton pointed out that a major goal of the program will be to apply the talents and insights of students and faculty to problems of an administrative nature. "We are obviously delighted to receive a grant for this innovative and worthwhile program," Wharton said. "We think it will be significant to the individuals involved as well as to the University. It will also help to build a nucleus of persons who have practical experience with the executive side of the University." Those appointed as fellows will receive a stipend from the program.

THE GUESS WHO will appear in the Meadow Brook Music Festival at the Baldwin Pavilion, Oakland University, Rochester, Mich. on Friday, August 7. Tickets — $5.00, $4.00 and $2.50. For further information call 377-2000, Ext. 2305 or from Detroit 962-0353.

Don't wait until fall.

It's been a long year, right? And you'd like to cool it for awhile. Okay, but before you do we'd like to ask you a favor. We'd like you to help elect Governor Milliken this fall.

Of course, you're asking yourself, "Why should I help Governor Milliken?" It's a good question and we'll answer it in several ways.

For one thing, Governor Milliken is one member of the Establishment who listens to students, whether they're protesting in a Moratorium Day rally, or marching on the state capital. More tangibly, the Governor has demonstrated his faith in young people by appointing one of the youngest staffs of any governor's office in the country, and by fighting continuously for the 18-year-old vote. And on the philosophical side, too, Governor Milliken is more than in tune with the times. In a recent speech at the Conference of Student Leadership, he had this to say: "I believe that we must begin now to live not for things alone, but for each other. We must produce less and enjoy more. We must abandon quantity in favor of quality. We must live for values that exist outside the realm of material things."

This is the kind of man who should be governor of our state. A free thinker. A progressive thinker. A man who can let the sunshine in. We need him. And we need your help to elect him. Don't wait until fall to get involved. Send in this coupon and dedicate this summer to your future.

Yes, I would like to work for Governor Milliken this summer.
