Contracts signed Wednesday were with 26 growers in the Delano area, where the harvest is about to begin. The holdouts are farther north in the Fresno and Lodi areas.

Contracts were signed earlier this year with smaller growers in the Coachella Valley and other southern sections.

California produces more than 90 per cent of the nation's table grapes. Most of the major wineries - who do not use table grapes - in the Delano area have been signed up with Chavez since 1965. The new table grape contracts call for $1.80 an hour minimum wages plus 20 cents a box incentive pay and some fringe

The controversy arose when it became known early this year that the Army had stored in a Ft. Holabird, Md., computer bank information on civilians involved in civil disturbances.

The Army announced in March that the information would be destroyed and the computer unplugged, but there have been reports that instead of being destroyed the data was transferred elsewhere.

Ervin said Wednesday he has been informed that a similar data bank exists at Ft. Hood, Tex., although it too has reportedly been ordered destroyed.

"However," Ervin went on, "I confess that the exceptions and lack of criteria in your policy letter could lead the average citizen - which I consider myself - to wonder just how much of a change it represents in government policy."

A Justice Department spokesman said "we have no information" on any transfer of information or operations from the Army to Justice.

In last month's Army directive, Col. Robert E. "Nothing that has occurred in the last two years has caused me to change that judgment," Kelley said. "I feel that the public interest is best served by a coordinated single response by the governor who has all the facts and all the resources at his disposal.'

The measure, which won legislative approval after several compromises earlier this year, would require cities and townships to adopt a proposed model uniform civil emergency ordinance before they could assume martial powers.

Under the plan, once a city adopted the model ordinance, it could then declare a state of emergency, set curfews and restrict the sale of weapons, explosives, gasoline and liquor.

The occupancy drop has caused a sharp increase in residence hall charges to students, curtailment of maintenance and repair operations and cuts in the number of student employes in residence halls.

It has also created more space within the residence halls for apartments and increased the availability of single rooms for students desiring them and willing to pay extra for them.

But what has caused the occupancy drop? What are its immediate effects? And what is being done to offset the drop? Both Thorburn and Wilkinson rate the primary cause of the occupancy drop. Lower classmen constitute the bulk of residence hall occupants, as most of them are required to live in the halls.

The housing bill permits the Michigan Housing Development Authority to enlist limited dividend sponsors in housing programs in addition to the nonprofit groups which now are involved in the projects.

Other bills signed by Milliken:

• Exempt Michigan Indians from state fishing and hunting regulations on reservations when those state laws conflict with federal treaty rights.

• Remove the present 2½ mill limitation on amounts which townships may appropriate for maintenance and operation of fire departments.

• Raise the salary of the director of the Michigan Employment Security Commission from the current $24,000 to $30,000.

"We must put Booker T. in a larger historical perspective,' Hill told the students. "He addressed himself to the question of underdevelopedness that all colonial people suffer."

Hill theorized that, in colonial situations, the peasants always undergo a period of improving their skills and education before engaging the mother country

"Because Garvey came from the colonial world, and was bon a peasant, he could identify with what Booker T. was trying to tackle," Hill said. "After the debate between DuBois and found himself having to oppose Garvey on the same grounds, but in a different way.'

Reaction to violence based on false premise

In 1968, when there was violence in the streets of Chicago, the cops and the administration were the "pigs."

In 1970, there was again violence in the streets of Chicago, but now the people are the "pigs.

No one knows exactly what caused a summer rock concert at Grant Park to erupt into a pitched battle between cops and youths. One thing is clear: it was not the police or Mayor Daley. In fact, the concert series was being backed by Daley in an effort to keep things cool. There were only 10 police in attendance and they kept a respectful distance from the sometimes illicit carryings on of the crowd.

All that is known for sure is that something went wrong with the public address system and then the crowd surged toward the bandshell. Despite pleas to "cool it" by members of the crowd, rocks began flying and, suddenly, there was no

Daley has implied the incident was somehow premeditated. His analysis is unrealistic and simplistic, but we do not fault him for his viewpoint.

Daley, after all, was burned by the Weathermen's "Days of Rage". Additionally he has just seen his well - intended concert scheme literally go up in smoke.

paranoid reactions of many other "solid citizens." Seizing upon the singular occurrence at Grant Park.

Sen. Ralph Smith, R-Ill., has gone on to categorically condemn all rock festivals. In fact, he states that concerts have "consistently shown that they spawn illegal and immoral actions with a high potential for violence."

Obviously, the good senator does not know of the peaceful togetherness that was Woodstock. There was no violence at this festival - though there were difficulties with technical crimes such as marijuana possession. He also ignores illegal use of alcohol at college football games. Nor does he appear cognizant that there have been more than a few fistfights and minor riots at baseball and football games.

Cities around the nation have begun frantically calling off summer rock concerts. The naivete of these actions equals Sen. Smith's lack of

City fathers have apparently bought the faulty premise that it is alternative but to call in police trock concerts that are inherently evil. It would seem more logical to conclude that it was the particular situation at Chicago rather than the nature of concerts that was the cause of the violence.

Had violence broken out at a Bach festival, cities would not have canceled plans for further orchestra concerts. Summary cancellation of concerts because of the happenings in Chicago unjustly punishes people What does disturb us is the totally innocent of any evil. Such actions are also the sort of thing of which self - fulfilling prophecies are

Among the students for Huber

When I write a column I generally just think up a pack of lies, scribble them down and give them to my editor, but this is a straight column. For real. Everything in here is true.

There is actually an organization, recognized by the University as a registered student organization, called MSU Students for Huber. I actually interviewed its head man, who likes to refer to himself as "Mr. Interlocutor." At his request I will not reveal his real name here, but anybody who wants to verify that such an organization and such a person exist can check in 101 Student Services as easily as I did.

I called the number given on the organization registration form and set up an appointment to meet Mr. Interlocutor. When he said the Alumni Chapel at dawn I knew I'd bitten off a barnburner, but it wasn't until I arrived to keep the appointment that I fully grasped how bad it was going to be.

"Uh, good morning. You're Mr. Interlocutor?'

"That's right, fella. What's your story? You look like you got beat up on the way "Well, it's a little early for me. I guess.

To the Editor:

I receive the State News every day and read it faithfully. It is a publication that, for a university paper, shows unusual maturity most of the time. You blew it, however, on the "Goodbye Columbus" editorial in the July 14 issue.

You have failed to acknowledge the arguments between the Romans and the Vikings and the dangerous, divisive, racist tactics they are. Obviously, no one in his right mind ever believed that Columbus "discovered" America. How could he have done so when there was a whole continent of people to greet him when he arrived?

The issue that makes such rhetoric racist in nature is that those who engage in the arguments do not bother to mention that Chris or Lief or whoever, may have been the first Western European to visit the continent (whatever that portends). They, like your editorial, assume, as Western Caucasians have since Christ's death, that development of the world are the dates that pertain to their participation in

For example, all American history students are force fed 1620 as the year of the landing of the Pilgrims, but few are even aware that a Dutch sea captain named Jope brought slaves to America in 1619. It was the beginning of the worst form of human bondage ever conceived in the history of mankind. That act had, and is having, a much greater impact on the history of this country, but the Western Caucasian does not consider that date significant to his purposes. The journey of Ra II was most significant. It proved that there could have been daring men of color risking their lives on the high seas while Western Europe was groveling in the Dark Ages (and even before). The importance of Heyerdahl's trip is not that Columbus myth may be overturned. It is, rather, that people everywhere, at all levels, should start telling the truth, teaching the truth and publishing the truth.

Ronald B. Lee U.S. Asst. Postmaster General July 21, 1970

Smith's viewpoint simplistic

To the Editor:

Re: Terry Smith's column of July 27, 1970 You are resurrecting the hoary myths of the Cold War. Your reasoning is anachronistic and surely out of place in the 1970s, unless, of course, you truly long for the good ole days of the Good Guys (the U.S. and the "free world") versus the Bad Guys (Russia and her monolithic, slave world empire). Things just aren't that simple anymore, if they ever were. Your crucial stressing of the importance of retaining our "credibility as a guardian of the free world" admirably belies, I believe, the irretrievable mentality of a dogmatic cold warrior. I'll bypass the obvious issue of your "divine" assumption of our right to be "guardian" of the world in order to question your definition of "free world." Who is included in your definition of "free world?" Is it a definition of "freedom" or is it a definition of "anti communism?" If it is a definition of freedom, why does it include the Vietnam of Thieu and Ky, the China of Chiang Kai Chek, the Spain of Franco and the Portugal of Salazar, to mention just a few of the "free world" dictators.

I think it obvious that "free world" is merely a definition of "anticommunism," and that the use of this phrase is a clue to the essence of the argument, which is one of anticommunism. This holy crusade of yours likewise defines "duty" for this country, which is the obligation to enter any and all disputes throughout the world, from Southeast Asia to the Mideast, in the name of "anticommunism.

Whether you believe it or not, Mr. Smith, the U.S. is not omnipotent, and is not the source of all Good in the world, and concomitantly, is not at fault through inaction for the existence of all Evil in the

In short, beware, Mr. Smith, of accusing others of dispensing "moralistic trash," as you yourself are certainly guilty of this in dispersing great quantities of "early Cold War" moralistic trash.

Stop shop

The lack of food stores in East Lansing makes it possible for one store to charge outrageous prices. Simply because it is open seven days a week from 7 to 11 and has the only food store accessible to many students it feels it may arbitrarily markup prices knowing that students will be forced to pay such prices.

We feel that all students who feel that they are being taken advantage of should, if possible, shop elsewhere.

Summer fun

Food poison threat diminishing problem

"Food poisoning is no longer seasonal," Richard V. Lechowich, an MSU food science expert said recently. The usual summer rash of picnic poisonings has diminished to rates comparable to the rest of the year.

"Not only has the housewife educated herself with newspaper and magazine articles on better food handling, but meal preparation and eating habits have changed. This is the day of the big freezer and instant meals."

Bacteria may yet have the last word, though, the scientist said. The latest escalation is a bacteria which lurks in soil, water, foods and in the intestines of many people. The human carriers seem immune to the bacteria's poisons, but other people are not.

"The bacteria, 'Clostridium perfringens,' is going to become better known," Lechowich warned.

"However, this bacteria will make little headway against alert housewives, who can get the upper hand when good food handling procedures are used."

Food service establishments are also vulnerable, Lechowich said. Last year in one school alone there were 1,800 confirmed cases of poisoning from "Clostridium perfringens." "Beef, fowl and pork, in that order, are among the most vulnerable of foods to the 'Clostridium,' " he said. "These are also favorite foods of salmonella and staphlococcus."

Prevention of food poisoning is the same with just about any bacteria, and extra precautions must be taken with popular kitchen tools such as the cutting board or mixing bowl.

"For example, a cook should never place boiled chicken giblets on an unwashed cutting board previously used to cut up uncooked chicken," Lechowich said.

"When someone puts cooked food on the contaminated cutting board the cooked food can easily become contaminated. If it is eaten right away, it probably would do no harm, but when it is slowly or insufficiently heated or sits around several hours or so, those bacteria grow and

To avoid food poisoning the food handlers should:

◆ Keep everything clean.

· Keep the temperature of vulnerable foods out of the temperature ranges bacteria thrive at. The foods should be kept below 45 degrees F. or above 145 degrees F. Leftovers should be refrigerated promptly and reheated thoroughly.

A good practical rule to follow when you are uncertain about a food remains, "When in doubt, throw it out!"

FABRY'S DISEASE

Team studies kidney ill

MSU biochemists have discovered a new method of detecting and treating Fabry's disease, a rare disease which is a cause of kidney failure. The disease is often fatal.

Under the method, normal blood plasma is infused into Fabry patients. Normal plasma contains an enzyme not present in Fabry

The medical team, led by Charles Sweeley, is currently seeking to isolate the pure enzyme from normal blood.

"There is always the worry that something might be in the donor's plasma that might trigger an allergic reaction," Sweeley explained.

The team is working with the departments of Medicine and Human Development on biochemical analyses of suspected Fabry patients in the Michigan area.

Sweeley said he expects pilot studies on enzyme replacement for patients to be accomplished in about a year.

For those present at the first performance of "The Millionairess," the new attraction at the Ledges Playhouse, a review seems superfluous.

'MILLIONAIRESS'

It was all too obvious from the restlessness of the audience, the seats unreturned to by the third act, the jokes that went flat, the onstage sparkle that was missing and the unenthusiastic applause received that the play misfired. George Bernard Shaw's deft comedy about a strong - willed millionairess never comes to life in the Ledges production and the players themselves, with two dependable exceptions, seemed to sense this in midplay and surrender to the challenge thereafter.

For the first time this season one could note a certain weariness and dreariness in the mechanically in a garbled, hurried fashion indicative of vehicle and rather unconcerned of it.

PANORAMA: By ROBERT KIPPER State News Reviewer

Ledges play disappointing

about its successful delivery.

Perhaps the best measure of the play's difficulties is the moderate applause Claudia Wilkins received in the title role when her stage - filling, bravura performance deserved house ringing enthusiasm.

The audience seemed either Ledges Players. The lines near too indifferent to the lackluster the end are delivered production to notice her superb portrayal or too relieved by the play's conclusion to linger and performers uninspired by their express sufficient appreciation briefly this season as a school marm in "Jimmy Shine" and a husky opera star in "Little Mary Sunshine" (both acting gems), at last gets a full - bodied role her talent deserves. She approaches it intrepidly, utilizing her angular appearance and haughty voice to make the woman as always commanding figure with charming individuality to offset her unappealing sense of self importance.

As the richest woman in England, Miss Wilkins strides the stage in indomitable fashion, slashing away at others and building up herself. Playing a woman motivated by the pursuit and maintenance of a fortune, heady because of the power and independence it gives her and sad because of the unfemininity it imposes, Miss Wilkins dominates a production incapable of showcasing her with the spirit she deserves.

In a much smaller role, Kristie

Schneider also shines as a simple Miss Wilkins, seen all too woman frightened in submission by her simplicity.

The rest of the cast ranges from adequate (Jonathan Adair as a solicitor, William Hurt, a Alastair, the millionaires husband and John Peakes, as he lover) to unforgivable (Ernes Wiggins, as an Egyptian doctor and Elaine Sherman, as Alastair mousey lover).

Wiggins displays all the interest and imagination of a unprepared stagehand who is merely helping out in the absence of the regular actor and his stand-in. Miss Sherman overdoes the dull, homey, sweet aspects of her character when much less of it is required for "The Millionairess" is, by far, the most disappointing production by the Ledge Players this summer. With "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead" slated as their next production, they have nowhere to go but up.

Jesse Williams is my type of guy.

Williams was a highly touted freshman halfback coming into pring practice last April. He had played two great games the year efore against Notre Dame and Michigan, picking up 280 yards in 3 carries.

With two - year starting halfback Don Highsmith lost via the raduation route, there was a nice vacant spot in the starting ackfield. Williams looked like a sure bet to fill it.

Head Coach Duffy Daugherty apparently thought so as he had villiams running with the number one squad the first day of ractice. But April 22 proved to be an unlucky day for Williams and for the entire 1970 Spartan squad. On an end around power lay, a play the coaches thought would be a strong point in the s' attack the coming year, Williams was tackled by several layers and in the process suffered torn ligaments in his right Surgery was held the next day and for the rest of the spring rills. Williams hobbled around with a full length walking cast on is right leg. During those trying weeks of watching his sammates knock heads during the week and then stage game . ype scrimmages on Saturdays, Williams had to control the rustration and anxiety that was building up inside of him.

"I was real upset at first and felt pretty bitter about the whole hing," Williams told me last week while finishing up his job of ainting the stadium locker rooms. "But I slowly accepted the act that I just wasn't going to get to play next year. The doctors ever let me build up any hope that I might, that's for sure. "In fact, that day they operated on me they told me, 'Don't ount on playing next fall, you'll never be ready.' It's not easy to e mad when you know for sure you can't do something." Knowing that he won't be wearing a Spartan uniform next eason hasn't kept the Bellefontaine, Ohio native sitting around owever. During his lunch hour and after work you'll either find im at the weightlifting room or in the outdoor pool in attempt strengthen his knees. "The doctors said I'm progressing along real well," Williams said ith a big grin. "They say that come next spring practice I can earry the mail' all I want - and that's what I want!

On the weekends Williams curtails his activities somewhat in order to help a friend attempt to regain his strength. Ten - year - ld Jimmy Kinchen who use to live on the same block as Williams Bellefontaine, lies paralyzed in a Columbus, Ohio hospital. octors aren't sure just what's wrong with Jimmy, who's been here since he was strickened with a virus last Christmas.

About a month ago young Jimmy's heart stopped beating. He vas revived, but now he can't move any part of his body with the xception of his face - he smiles. Williams has been making reekly visits to Columbus, a 500 mile round trip in attempt to ive Jimmy a moral boost.

"I take him some of our souvenirs or autographed pictures of he players and coaches," Williams said. Then we just sit around nd talk. He's a real loyal MSU rooter."

A 500 mile trip in hot weather when you could be sitting round an air - conditioned apartment watching TV is really omething. But then so is Jesse Williams. He's my type of guy.

NFL owners open training camps

CHICAGO (UPI) - The National Football League owners, in a move to salvage "the entire 1970 season," reversed themselves Wednesday and announced they would open their training campus to veteran players.

The decision to invite the vets to return at 6 p.m. local time today laid it on the line for the leaders of the National Football League Players Association (NFLPA), scheduled to meet in Chicago Wednesday night to plan their next move in their deadlocked talks with the owners.

The owners themselves will be in Chicago today, where a meeting is scheduled on the eve of the all star football game. The decision was a turnabout from an earlier decision by the owners to open their camps to rookies only. The reasoning behind that move was that team dissension could result if owners sought to split veteran pros, holding out for the association for higher pension players, and teammates who wished to go into

Wednesday's decision presented the players with precisely such a choice. It had been expected as a means by the owners to test just how solid a line the pro players were holding in backing up their demands.

Little reaction from NFLPA

There was little immediate reaction from leaders of the NFLPA, most of whom were en route to Chicago when the joint announcement of the owners came from George S. Halas, owner of the Chicago Bears and president of the National Football Conference, and Lamar Hunt, owner of the world champion Kansas City Chiefs and president of the American Football Conference.

Bennie McRae, the Chicago Bears' player representative, said only, "We're having a meeting of all the representatives later in the day. I'll be in a better position to talk then." Earlier, McRae had said of the possibility of the training camps

In New Orleans however veteran Errol Linden said that of 17 New Orleans Saints who met Wednesday afternoon, "100 per cent" were against reporting to training camp today.

Linden, who is the National Football League Players Association representative for the Saints, said, "There may be a few who will report, but basically we feel we have a strong issue and I am hoping that no New Orleans Saints report."

Asked specifically if the veterans discussed the owners' opening of camp to them, Linden replied, "You might say the veterans are 100 per cent against reporting.'

Linden said he was going to Chicago Wednesday night "so we can hash over a few things as far as player representatives are

Make It Dirty (MID) had trailed throughout the entire game and was forced to play catchup ball all the way until the ninth inning. In the bottom of the ninth a clutch single by Richard Bush scored a teammate from second base to give MID the game and league title.

The Army had taken an early lead by scoring four times in the first inning and adding another tally in the second. But the the lead, scoring once in the first, twice in the fourth and coming up with two runs in the bottom of what is usually the last inning, the fifth, to send the game into extra innings.

Both teams scored twice in the time.

Bob Demmink paced the MID attack, collecting three hits in four times at bat. Bob Miltenberger went the distance for the winners who finished with 16 hits.

Tom Sterling led Egyptian Army at the plate with three for four also. The Army ended with 11 hits.

A total of 64 teams and nearly 1600 participants took part in slow pitch competition the first five weeks, while eight teams and 80 players competed in the MIDdies kept pecking away at fast pitch division won by Syndicate.

The community groups also asked for an empty building near the hospital, but a hospital spokesman said the structure was scheduled for renovation.

The occupiers also have asked Mayor John V. Lindsay to enter the dispute "personally."

Calvin Brooks, 19, was a spokesman for the youths on the eighth floor. He joined the program Sunday night. He took his last fix on Saturday, he said.

Asst. prot gets award for paper

Leroy K. Pickett, asst. professor of agricultural engineering, was announced as research paper award winner by the American Society of Agricultural Engineers.

The paper, "Rheological Properties of Cornstalks Subjected to Transverse Loading," with authorship by Pickett, J.B. Liljedahl, C.G. Haugh and A.J. Ullstrup, was published in Transactions of the ASAE during 1969. The award was announced during the annual banquet of the society, held as part of the 63rd annual ASAE meeting in Minneapolis, Minn:, in July.

A total of 316 papers were evaluated by the selection committee and only eight were selected for awards. Winners of ASAE Paper Awards are chosen from papers of engineering merit published in any of the 12 issues of the society's publication Agricultural Engineering or in any issue of Transactions of the ASAE during the calendar year.

Dickens collection on display

A collection of first and important editions of the works of Charles Dickens is currently on display on the first floor of the Library.

The exhibit, marking the centennial of Dickens' death, traces the career of the Victorian novelist chronologically, from his early palys and "Sketches by Boz", to the novel left unfinished at his death, "Edwin

Some of the books on display include an 1836 edition of "Sketches by Boz," and first bound editions of "The Posthumous Papers of the Pickwick Club" (1837) and "Oliver Twist" (1838)

Exhibited is one of the rare editions of Dickens' works, "The Lamplighter," a play written in 1838 and printed in 1879. The original monthly serials of "David Copperfield" (1849-50), two autographed letters from Dickens, and his weekly magazine "All the Year Round" (1859) are also on display.
