Leaders to pay tribute to DeGaulle

Nixon plans to attend rites for De Gaulle

KEY BISCAZYNE, Fla. (AP) — President Nixon made arrangements Tuesday to fly to Paris for memorial services for Charles de Gaulle in the cathedral of Notre Dame on Thursday.

Nixon decided to cut short his Florida vacation and return to Washington on Tuesday night. Arrangements were made to postpone from Thursday to Friday a meeting with President-elect Luis Echeverria of Mexico. The meeting will be at the Washington White House instead of Key Biscayne.

Nixon said the death of De Gaulle was a loss to all mankind.

In a statement and in a letter cabled to President Georges Pompidou of France, Nixon expressed America's sympathy to the people of France for a man the President said was an ally and a friend.

"This country knew Gen. De Gaulle as a steadfast ally in war and a true friend in peace. Greatness knows no national bounds and therefore France's loss is the loss of mankind," Nixon said.

"The President," press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler told reporters, "is going to Paris for the memorial services for Gen. De Gaulle to pay his personal respects to a great leader who was both a personal friend of the President and a man of great stature. The President will conduct no official business on the trip."

This would rule out any sub-tantive meeting, apparently, with Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, who also will attend the memorial services but there could be a casual contact, perhaps, in the event the French government arranges some sort of reception for chiefs of state and other distinguished persons gathered for the De Gaulle services.

The President will be accompanied by Secretary of State William P. Rogers; Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, his chief adviser on national security matters, and by the grandson of the late president, whose name also is Charles de Gaulle and who is a student in New York.

He is coming to Washington to join the presidential party when it takes off from Andrews Air Force Base at 11:15 a.m. Wednesday.

Quiet funeral, burial planned

PARIS (AP) — Leaders from East and West moved Tuesday to pay their final tribute to Charles de Gaulle as the symbol of France - its past grandeur, its genius, its eternal contradictions.

The nation's strong guide in war and peace, just 13 days short of his 80th birthday, died Monday night of a circulatory disorder. He had walked with the mighty, but his final companions were his wife, a physician and a Roman Catholic priest.

Nearby were a television set tuned to the world news, and a deck of cards used for solitaire.

Turning aside the tradition of Napoleon and 1,000 years of French kings, De Gaulle will be buried Thursday in the cramped churchyard in Colombey-les-deux-Eglises, the village where he died. That is in accordance with his handwritten order that the ceremony take place "without the slightest public ceremony... without bands, fanfare or bugles."

But about 80 world leaders, including President Nixon and Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, will attend a memorial service in Paris' Notre Dame Cathedral in the same day.

The nation, which had rebuffed him in a constitutional referendum that led to his resignation as president 18 months ago, learned of De Gaulle's death about 12 hours after it occurred. The delay was at the request of his family.

Frenchmen in large part remember De Gaulle as the guardian of their honor through the ignominy of Nazi defeat, and later in 10 years as president as the restorer of national prestige. They took the news without mass scenes of grief.

"I'm not crying - I can't - but I'll tell you he took our last bit of greatness with him" a Paris cab driver said. "The great ones, De Gaulle, Churchill, Roosevelt, even Stalin, that's all gone."

President Georges Pompidou, his successor, observed: "France is widowed."

"France today lost part of its soul," a Gaullist party deputy exclaimed, and another told the National Assembly: "Messieurs, father is dead."

Flags in Paris, deep in its November grayness, came to half-staff. The national radio and television played dirges and newspapers announced the death in three-inch banners. Shops, theaters, movie houses, schools and all government offices will be closed Thursday, the first day of an official 30-day mourning period.

Colombey, population 359, is a village 160 miles southeast of Paris. Death came to the general there in the house he bought when he was an army colonel and then enlarged as his duties and

GM-UAW NEGOTIATE

Strike talks continue

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors and the United Auto Workers struggled Tuesday night for the third straight day Tuesday toward a national agreement to end a 57-day-old strike that has shut down auto production by the world's biggest manufacturing firm.

Earl Bramblett, chief GM negotiator, and Leonard Woodcock, UAW President and their aides, tired from a 17-hour session Monday, met long hours again Tuesday in a fifth floor room of the GM headquarters building.

There were indications the company and the nation's second largest union were nearing agreement on a new three-year contract.

The UAW international executive board was on hand in Detroit and the 350 members of the union's General Motors Council were told to meet here Wednesday, presumably to review any tentative agreement reached.

After a national settlement is reached, subject to ratification by the 385,000 UAW members at GM, workers at more than half of the firm's plants which have agreed to remove the "cap" on cost-of-living increases pegged to the government cost-of-living index.

It was expected the two sides would compromise on the "30 and out" pension demand. The UAW demanded $500 a month retirement pensions after 30 years service at any age. GM already had agreed to retirement at $500 a month after 30 years at age 58 or earlier retirement at sharply reduced pensions.

reached local agreements would be expected to resume work.

Bramblett had said that unless an agreement was reached this week it would be impossible for GM to resume auto production by Dec. 1.

ASMSU bid expected on student tax increase

By JOHN JUEL
State News Staff Writer

A proposal to increase the ASMSU student tax from 50 cents to as high as $1.25 per student winter term was expected to be presented at Tuesday night's ASMSU meeting.

The proposed amendment to the ASMSU constitution would authorize the student board to levy a tax of up to $1 per student per term and a special tax of up to 25 cents winter term only.

The reason for the proposed tax hike is to meet increasing costs and to expand services, ASMSU Chairman Hal Buckner said.

The additional tax of up to 25 cents would be levied winter term, with the revenue going to the major governing groups of MSU — Men's Halls Association, Intra-fraternity Council, Men's Intercoperative Council, Off-Campus Council, Panhellenic Council and Women's Inter-Residence Council — on a per capita basis.

Buckner said the purpose of the special tax winter term was to provide a more efficient way for the major governing groups to collect a tax to cover expenses. It would eliminate the need for some of the governing groups to request money from the student board, he added, ending the charge that the board was spending the money of on-campus students on off-campus organizations.

Buckner stressed that the revenue added by the new tax was aimed at specific service projects, particularly full-time legal aid and the establishment of a student co-op, rather than at merely supplying the board with more money to use as it saw fit.

"The tax would not necessarily be raised to $1 — the proposal would just give the board that option," Buckner said. "The student tax would probably not change until priorities were set for the definite service projects in mind."

Since the proposal would amend the existing ASMSU constitution, it must first be approved by a majority vote of the student board and would then be placed on a University-wide referendum within ten class days. A simple majority of the votes cast in the referendum would decide whether the proposal would go into effect.

Council act limits jurisdiction

By STEVE WATERBURY and DAVE PERSON
State News Staff Writers

The Academic Council acted Tuesday to limit the jurisdiction of the proposed Faculty-Student Affairs Committee to student matters during consideration of the report of the Special Panel Concerning Student Participation in Academic Government.

The fourth November session of the council will be convened at 3:15 p.m. Tuesday in the Con Con Room of the International Center in another attempt to complete the council agenda.

The council amended section 5.4.08.3 (concerning the composition of the proposed committee) by adding to the report that the committee does not have the power to initiate amendments to sections 2.2 and 2.1.4.9 of the Academic Freedom Report. These sections are concerned with the professional rights and responsibilities of the faculty.

Reflecting the exclusion of faculty matters from the committee, the council renamed it the Student Affairs Committee.

The proposed Student Affairs Committee, composed of six faculty members and 11 students, is the only committee proposed in the Special Panel's report in which students have a majority.

Other action taken by the council included passage of a motion by C. C. Killingsworth to rescind action taken by the council in May which granted the Student Affairs Committee veto power over all proposed amendments to the Academic Freedom Report.

The council also passed a proposal to remove from the present amendments to

Driver forms reported missing from 'U' files

Approximately 50 applications for student on-campus driving were reported missing from MSU files, informed sources said Tuesday.

The report followed announcement by campus police Monday that they are investigating charges that student parking permits are being sold illegally on campus.

Applications and a duplicate permit are kept on file for each student driving permit issued. An investigation turned up approximately 50 more duplicate permits than applications.

In a meeting Tuesday, the All-University Traffic Committee (AUTC) accepted the resignation of Joe Pendergrass.

remain anonymous, said that the committee may press the issue through MSU judiciaries after the prosecutor decides on the case.

Currently, some judiciary members and administrators are privately considering whether campus judiciaries can launch investigative teams or grant immunity to alleged offenders.

Decision due on off-campus housing rule

An AUTC member said the committee would take no official action on the allegations until all information is turned over to the Ingham County prosecutor.

Police said Monday they are seeking criminal warrants from the prosecutor for those involved. Action by the prosecutor is not expected until Friday.

The police investigation involves persons who are allegedly selling permits through intermediaries for $55 each. Permits are granted free to students who apply to and are approved by AUTC.

Board OKs rate drop for federal banks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board Tuesday lowered the discount rate, the price member banks pay for borrowing money, from 6 per cent to 5 1/4 per cent.

The board said it had approved the rate change on the recommendations of Federal Reserve banks at Boston, Richmond, Atlanta, St. Louis, Minneapolis and San Francisco. Other Federal Reserve banks are expected to lower the rate shortly.

The board said its decision "was in recognition of reductions that have taken place recently in other short term interest rates..."

It said its action is designed to bring the discount rate "into better alignment with short-term rates generally."

The lowering of the discount rate was the first since August 1968, when it was brought down from 5 1/2 per cent to 5 1/4 per cent. The rate was increased on two separate occasions after that and moved up to 6 per cent on April 4, 1969.

Most other interest rates are scaled to changes in the discount rate.

The board approved Tuesday's discount rate change unanimously.

Government reinforcements trying to reach Cambodia's embattled northern front were cut off Tuesday as renewed North Vietnamese and Viet Cong attacks destroyed much of the security belt north of Phnom Penh.

A second consecutive night of powerful assaults against three towns and an airport left the area in confusion. Two highway bridges, one of them a vital link between the capital and Kompong Cham, the country's third largest city, were blown up.

A lone gunman Tuesday hijacked a Saudi Arabian airliner carrying 10 passengers and four crew members to Damascus while on a flight from Amman, Jordan, to Saudi Arabia, Radio Damascus reported.

The hijacker, who was not identified, was detained in Damascus for questioning while the plane and the passengers were allowed to continue to Saudi Arabia two hours and 15 minutes later the radio said.

Two Soviet ships have returned to the Cuban port where the United States recently charged the Russians were building a submarine base, but government officials played down their importance today.

A defense Department spokesman, Jerry W. Friedheim, reported that a submarine tender and a salvage tug reentered the harbor at Cienfuegos late Monday, but said the Pentagon "attaches no significance to the movement."

"We are continuing to watch the situation closely," he said.

State Department officials said today that South Vietnam's Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky will visit the United States unofficially next week. For security reasons, they left undisclosed the place and date of his arrival.

It was learned from informed sources that Ky, after inspecting Vietnamese officers and airmen being trained in this country, will meet President Nixon at the White House on Nov. 23 or Nov. 24.

National News

A union leader said Tuesday he will call a nationwide railroad strike Dec. 11 unless the industry boosts a White House board's proposed biggest wage increase in rail history.

"This is not enough," President C. L. Dennis of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks said of the board's recommendation for wage hikes of 36 per cent over three years for 500,000 workers now averaging $3.68 per hour.

Dennis's strike date is one day after delaying provisions of the Railway Labor Act expire.

He said once on strike, rail workers probably would defy federal courts and Congress if necessary and remain off the job until they won their demands for some 45 per cent in wage hikes plus other benefits.

"We have complied with all existing laws - and if we go out on Dec. 11, we stay out. It's as simple as that," he said at a news conference.

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird Tuesday ordered additional riot control training for National Guardsmen and reservists, and the insurance of protective face masks and riot batons for riot assignments.

Pentagon officials said Laird will ask Congress for an additional $20 million to pay for the new equipment and extra training.

Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim was asked whether this action was taken as a result of a Guard-student confrontation last May at Kent State University.

The May incident "obviously heightened the concern for the protection of the guardsmen," he replied.

The Traverse City School Board plans to file suit to test Att. Gen. Frank Kelley's interpretation of the new passed constitutional amendment outlawing state aid to nonpublic schools.

Harry T. Running, an attorney and school board member, said he would file the suit immediately in either Federal District Court or Grand Traverse Circuit Court.

Running recommended the test at Monday's board meeting "to maintain the good relations between public and parochial schools" in Traverse City.

Parents linked in drug abuse

By JEFF HUNT

Heavy users of marijuana today may have been the alcoholics of the past, Dr. Richard Bates, MSU asst. clinical professor of medicine, said Monday.

Marijuana has replaced alcohol for many young people. Children growing up in broken homes with either parent missing or absent are more likely to become alcoholics, drug abusers and juvenile delinquents, said Bates at a public lecture sponsored by the Spartan Wives at People's Church.

Bates said that children in mother-dominated homes want "a belly full of warm food, instant gratification of their desires and the soft glow from alcohol or drugs in their heads."

"If there is no father in the home or if he does not do the right job in raising his son, then the boy goes to college as an infant," he said.

Bates, who is the medical director of the alcoholism and drug addiction therapy unit at Sparrow Hospital, said such home conditions produce the proper mental state for drug addiction. "It's not the drug that makes an addict, it is people," he said.

He differentiated between

drug use, experimentation and abuse.

Drug use, Bates explained, is the application of drugs to ease pain or discomfort. He cited the example of Demeral, a drug similar to heroin that is often administered during childbirth.

Drug experimentation is the taking of drugs, especially by youth, because of curiosity or peer group pressure.

But a person who willfully trains himself to take drugs in order to enjoy them is practicing drug abuse, he continued. When a person becomes dependent on these drugs, then he's addicted.

Only five to seven per cent of the population have the potential for drug addiction, Bates said.

"You have to enjoy being out of your mind," he said. "Not many people like this."

Most people can take drugs, alcohol included, and not become addicted, he said, giving an example of a college professor who spent all summer in a northern Michigan cottage with several cases of scotch to see if he could become an alcoholic. "He failed," Bates said, not having the proper mental conditions for addiction. "The only thing that happened was that he couldn't stand the taste of scotch any more."

"The fact that there are more activists, hippies and Jerry Rubins today means that we made mistakes in child rearing 20 years ago," he said. "Children need fathers, too."

Vietnam veterans different from WW II counterparts

By DIANE PETRYK
State News Staff Writer

Today's veteran is not the respected and looked-up-to person that his World War II counterpart was, James F. Morse, director of the MSU Veteran's Administration (VA), said in a recent interview.

"Most of the veterans I see today feel they had a job to do, a job their country asked them to do, so they went ahead and did it," Morse said.

"But the World War II veteran saw a higher purpose in his service. It was not just a job because at that stage they could feel America was being threatened. Pearl Harbor was bombed and goods were being rationed," he explained.

Morse has been director of the MSU-VA office since 1951. His major job is vocational counseling of disabled veterans, dependents of veterans and other veterans who request help. He also supervises the training of 130 disabled veterans on various campuses in the state.

The VA office itself has been open continuously since 1945, but was almost closed in 1953 and again in 1959 because not enough veterans were going to school to justify keeping the office open.

Morse currently sees from 55 to 60 veterans a month, of which, he said, not more than 15 to 20 per cent end up as students.

"The World War II veteran was usually older than the present day veteran," Morse said, "and there was more support for them than there is now. In 1951 there was no antiwar or anti-Defense Department feeling."

According to MSU historian

Madison Kuhn's book, "Michigan State: The First Hundred Years," the flood of veterans entering MSU began after the war ended in August, 1945.

Seven hundred veterans were back in time for fall term registration and new ones appeared at the rate of 50 a day during the term, according to Kuhn.

Veterans who lacked high school credits enrolled in Servicemen's Institute refresher courses in English, mathematics, history and science. By winter, 1946 MSU enrolled over two thousand veterans and in the spring nearly four thousand men and women who had served in the armed forces.

At that point total enrollment was well above anything MSU had seen in the past, with predictions cast that enrollment would double in the fall.

Michigan students and former students regardless of state of residence were given priority. Women who graduated from Michigan high schools in June were asked to wait until new dormitories would be completed in early 1947.

In the fall of 1946 8,000 veterans enrolled at MSU. A year later almost 9,000 were on campus. One hundred sixty-eight of these students were women.

MSU was forced to develop emergency, temporary and permanent housing simultaneously. It rented a trailer camp and moved beds into Jenison gymnasium, where over 500 men lived until a better place could be found.

As of Nov. 1, Morse said 2,304 veterans are presently attending MSU. There are also eight widows and 138 children of veterans and 56 disabled veterans on campus.

Nationally, according to the Veterans Administration Regional Office in Detroit, school enrollments among Vietnam veterans increased during fiscal year 1970 by an unprecedented 31 per cent over the previous year, bringing the total number of enrollees in Veterans Administration training programs to more than 1.2 million.

"If the trend continues," Donald E. Johnson, administrator of Veterans affairs, predicted, "more veterans will have trained during the first five years of the current GI Bill than during the 13-year span of the Korean conflict GI Bill."

Included in this year's enrollment are 87,100 servicemen on active duty attending schools below college level - all under the GI Bill.

Defense wins right to use of orders in My Lai trial

FT. BENNING, Ga. (AP) — First Lt. William L. Calley Jr. won the right at a preliminary court-martial hearing Tuesday to argue that any massacre at My Lai was the result of orders from superior officers. It is expected to be a key issue in his defense.

The hearing then was recessed until Thursday, when selection of the jury is expected to begin. The prosecution asked that the defense be barred from citing any orders Calley might have received in advance from his company commander, Capt. Ernest L. Medina. Calley faces trial on charges of premeditated murder of 102 unarmed Vietnamese civilians at My Lai March 16, 1968.

"Our evidence," said Capt. Aubrey Daniel, the prosecutor, "will show that the defendant rounded up unarmed, unresisting old men, women and children and by his own acts and the acts of his subordinates summarily executed them... whatever orders there were, they were irrelevant."

"We might just as well go home, if the court grants this motion," replied George L. Latimer, civilian defense attorney. "Why can't we go into the facts and circumstances under which this man was operating?"

"Somewhere along the line, somebody's got to realize these men were given orders to search and destroy... It means to destroy everything there. If these boys were given orders to kill everything, including women and children, I think that's relevant."

In ruling with the defense, the trial judge, Col. Reid Kennedy, told Latimer: "Judging by what you've said, I'd be cutting to the heart of your defense and that I don't propose to do."

Calley, 27, of Miami, Fla., led Charley Company's 1st Platoon through the hamlet of My Lai on a sweep that the government says developed into a blood bath involving unarmed Vietnamese civilians. His court-martial follows that of one of his squad leaders, Staff Sgt. David Mitchell, which currently is in recess at Ft. Hood, Tex.

Medina, commander of Company C, has been charged in the case but as yet no court-martial has been scheduled for him.

At Ft. Hood, the court-martial judge ruled the prosecution could not call four of its intended witnesses because their testimony before a House subcommittee in Washington had not been made available to Mitchell's defense attorney.

Kennedy ruled exactly the opposite. He held that the Calley prosecution could call whom it wished from among those who testified before the subcommittee headed by Rep. Edward Hebert, D-Ia.

Students hold referendum on language need

A referendum is being held today by the Student Advisory Committee of the College of Arts and Letters to determine student opinion regarding the college's language requirement.

The College of Arts and Letters presently requires all of its students to attain 2-year competency in a foreign language. The only exceptions are for students majoring in art practice and candidates for bachelor's degree in music.

Doug Callahan, chairman of the advisory committee, said the purpose of the referendum is to determine the opinions of undergraduates on the language requirement.

"If student opinion appears to be against the language requirement," Callahan said, "the Student Advisory Committee will begin working with the faculty and the dean to change the requirement."

All undergraduates in the College of Arts and Letters are eligible to vote in the referendum. Booths have been set up in Bessey, Berkey and Wells Halls, the Music Bldg. and Kresge Art Center. They will be open from 9 a.m. - 4 p.m.

Lawyer says jury never saw Kent report

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — The Akron Beacon Journal reported Tuesday that special Prosecutor Robert L. Balyeat says the grand jury investigating Kent State University disorders never saw a Justice Department report that National Guardsmen fabricated their version of the incident.

Balyeat said he told the Beacon Journal it was "not normally the practice to present to a grand jury conclusions of other persons." He declined to say what evidence was presented to the jury which indicted 25 persons Oct. 16.

Balyeat was contacted at his Lima, Ohio, law office. The Justice Department memorandum said there was reason to believe that Ohio National Guardsmen fabricated their story of self-defense after four students were fatally shot and nine wounded in a May 4 campus confrontation between Guardsmen and antiwar demonstrators.

The grand jury indicted no Guardsmen. The Beacon Journal said it had asked Balyeat whether the grand jury saw the report and that Balyeat replied, "no."

The newspaper quoted Srp as saying, "I didn't feel threatened and I was in the center of it." According to the Justice Department memorandum, Srp and several Guardsmen told the FBI "the lives of the members of the Guard were not endangered and that it was not a shooting situation."

Young repeated his earlier statements that a special federal grand jury would be called to investigate the Kent State incidents. He said this jury would be convened after Jan. 1.

Generals silent on flight incident

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Two American generals whose small plane landed in the Soviet Union Oct. 21 returned to Ankara Tuesday but maintained silence on the details of their three week detention.

The incident threw a chill into Soviet-U.S. relations. An informed source said the freed officers — Maj. Gen. Edward C. Scherrer, chief of the American military aid mission to Turkey, and his assistant, Brig. Gen. Claude M. McQuarrie Jr. — were under orders not to talk after they flew to Ankara.

Scherrer said that what he missed most while in the Soviet Union was freedom. McQuarrie said he was sorry to have missed the Ankara Golf Club championship. The generals said they were well treated but that the experience was "not pleasant."

The generals and Turkish Col. Cevat Denli, also aboard the U.S. Army U8, were released at a small border post early Tuesday after an unexplained, all-night negotiating session between Turkish and Russian officers. They were then flown to Ankara.

A three-man Turkish crew Tuesday flew the plane and its pilot, U.S. Army Maj. James P. Russell, from Leninakan, where it landed by error, back across the border to Kars, its destination Oct. 21. The generals, who were unshaven and tired-looking, were to start extensive debriefing by Pentagon officials Wednesday, American sources said. Tuesday night was set aside for rest and reunion with their families.

It was not known how and why their twin-engine Beechcraft drifted across the border while the officers were on a tour of military installations in east Turkey. The pilot reportedly told consular officials in the Soviet Union that while the plane approached Kars a severe updraft swept it across the border and he landed by mistake at Leninakan.

Officials have refused, however, to confirm or deny a number of conflicting reports. Some Turkish sources had reported, for instance, that the plane was lured to the Soviet Union by a false radio beacon. One top American official said he believed the matter would now be kept under wraps to avoid possible aggravation of Turkish-Russian and American-Russian relations.

"The questions may never be answered publicly," he said. In Washington, a State Department spokesman said the United States told the Soviet Union there is a desire to avoid similar incidents in the future. But State Department press officer Robert J. McCloskey said no written notes were given to the Soviet Union in exchange for the officers' release.

Blount attempts to assure Yule deliveries to POWs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postmaster General Winton M. Blount is in Paris on the first leg of a journey that might take him to Hanoi to assure that Christmas mail gets to American prisoners of war, government sources reported Tuesday.

Blount left the United States without fanfare Sunday and reportedly met Tuesday with the American ambassador to the Paris peace talks, David K. E. Bruce, the sources said. Blount was instructed by President Nixon two weeks ago to make every effort — perhaps, even going to the North Vietnamese capital if that is possible — to see that U.S. servicemen held captive by the North Vietnamese receive letters and packages from home.

other sources said the postmaster general has begun "to carry out the President's mandate." The original announcement that Blount would attempt to visit Hanoi, if necessary and if possible, to assure delivery of mail to POWs was greeted with skepticism. No official of the U.S. government has been allowed, or has even attempted to visit the North Vietnamese capital in years.

North Vietnam, meanwhile, announced easing of restrictions on the size of Christmas packages that would be accepted for delivery to POWs. As heard via radio in Tokyo, the announcement said parcels up to 11 pounds each would be accepted rather than the 6.6-pound limit that has prevailed in the past.

This year, however, the packages must be routed through Moscow or they will not be delivered, the North Vietnamese News Agency said.

The death of DeGaulle:
charisma lost to history

Charles de Gaulle, one of the last of the great leaders to emerge from World War II, has died two weeks before his 80th birthday.

As the statesmen and chief executives of all countries announce grief and praise "Le General," we are once again reminded of Charles de Gaulle as a figure larger than life.

De Gaulle was always a controversial personage. He worked tirelessly as leader of the French resistance in England during the occupation of France by the Nazis. French Premier at the close of WW II, he left politics until called back by the French people in 1958. For over a decade De Gaulle sought to revive the greatness of France and dreamed of creating a European consolidation under French tutelage.

In the 1960s he caused considerable anxiety for the leaders in Washington and London. He opposed American foreign policy in Southeast Asia and often called the United States the chief belligerent there.

De Gaulle was the nemesis of the British who desired Britain's entry to the Common Market, while his most significant independent move was the economic withdrawal of France from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

The final defeat for De Gaulle occurred while he was president in 1968-69. In the aftermath of the French student revolt of 1968, he declared that if his proposal for governmental centralization were defeated, he would resign the presidency. Though the defeat was considered unlikely, the pollsters were proved incorrect and the general retired to Colombey.

Regardless of one's political affiliations, there is little doubt that with the death of Charles De Gaulle a truly charismatic leader has faded from the world scene - a bit of history has died.

System of laws injured
Supreme Court ruling

Last Monday the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear Massachusetts' legal challenge to the Vietnam war. In so doing they demonstrated once again that too often politics reigns paramount over justice in this nation.

The Massachusetts' challenge certainly seemed sound and straightforward enough. That state's legislature had passed a law exempting its citizens from serving in wars not declared by Congress. They then sought to go directly to the high court by utilizing the constitutional provision that state-federal disagreements merit Supreme Court mediation.

The federal government's case was more tenuous. The Justice Department held that a state could not intervene on behalf of its individual citizens, and it would be very difficult to enforce ruling against the war anyway. In other words: support the President, right or wrong - and rule on the basis of expediency, not justice.

The essential point remains unresolved. For want of a high court ruling the Massachusetts law remains legal - and is still in direct opposition to federal statutes.

Thus, even after putting the question of the constitutionality of the Vietnam war aside there remains a manifest state - federal legal paradox. Certainly, this should have qualified for Supreme Court consideration.

In dodging the legal and moral questions raised by the Massachusetts case, the high court has done a disservice to the people and the system of checks and balances that govern this nation.

Germ warfare returns:
credibility gap widens

Remember? About a year ago Nixon said the United States was renouncing biological warfare, and ordering the destruction of all existing American germ weaponry.

There are still extensive stocks of biological weapons at the Army's Pine Bluff Arsenal. Congress has appropriated $21.1 million for germ warfare this fiscal year as opposed to $21.9 million the year before. Last year "biological research" received $7.6 million of these funds for offensive and defensive weapons; now they get the same amount for "defensive purposes only."

Still tucked away at Pine Bluff are such modern technological horrors as poison bullets and agents capable of inducing large-scale crop failures.

Remember? The secret plan to get us out of the Vietnam war.

Remember? Cambodia. Remember? "Bring us together." Remember? "Bums."

Come Election Day, 1972, we hope America will remember.

The doctor's bag

By ARNOLD WERNER, M.D.

Letters may be addressed to Dr. Werner at Olin Health Center. Names need not be included unless a personal reply is requested.

My problem is that I can't seem to get out of bed in the morning. When my alarm goes off, I seem to automatically turn it off, put my head under the covers and go back to sleep.

I'm late for classes, appointments... everything! Somewhere I read that people who hate to get out of bed in the morning are actually hiding something and don't want to face "reality." Is there any truth in this?

I have destroyed three alarm clocks in the last three years; I am a senior.

Oversleeping can be caused by a number of things. Your letter is sketchy on detail and you do not mention what time you go to bed, how well you sleep or whether the condition varies in severity from time to time.

Some people do sleep late as a means of avoiding responsibilities, but in my experience, they usually avoid responsibilities in other ways too.

People may have difficulty getting up in the morning because they sleep poorly or have gone to sleep too late. Paradoxically it would seem, if one sleeps too many hours, it can be very difficult to get up. There are different depths of sleep and rising from a very deep slumber can result in confusion and persistent lethargy. Most people have experienced this when they have been awakened suddenly soon after falling asleep. Deep stages of sleep occur rhythmically throughout the night and if your normal waking time tends to fall in the middle of one of these deep sleep periods it may be hard to get out of bed. As a beginning, I suggest setting your alarm for a half an hour earlier than you usually do. If you still have difficulty I'd try an hour earlier. If this fails you can try other techniques such as leaving the shades up so that the morning light will tend to gradually awaken you. You could also try an alarm clock device which turns on an electric appliance and hook it up to a bright lamp placed across the room.

Since this has been going on for three years and you are now a senior, I wonder if an alarm clock that would turn on a tape recording of your mother yelling at you might not solve the problem!

What are the effects on the body after a prolonged period of improper diet (two to three years). Due mostly to lack of funds, over the years I have fallen into the habit of skipping meals. I rarely eat a full meal. Mostly I just "pick" all day at anything that happens to be available. I consume an over-abundance of sweets even though I don't particularly care for them. I'm a 21 year old woman, 5 ft. 6 in., 120 lbs., in generally good health.

For the person in good health (without such illnesses as diabetes or ulcers) the frequency of meals is quite unimportant and can be suited to individual desires. Social convention being what it is, we all tend to go along with three meals a day although many people do just as well with one or two and other people prefer four or five. So, the possible damage you speak of boils down to what you have been eating more than when you have been eating. In any case the odds of doing significant damage over a period of a couple of years is very small.

Limited funds make eating a balanced diet rather difficult. Most inexpensive foods are very high in carbohydrate and cheap meats are loaded with fat. Among

Paranoia invades
middle America

WASHINGTON - I am happy to report that the people of the United States are no longer in a mental depression. They are now paranoid.

The day after the election, I ran into Roundtable, who was shaking visibly.

"What's the trouble, Roundtable?" I asked.

"I don't know what's going to happen. President Nixon and Agnew said if they didn't get a majority in the Senate and the House, there would be crime in the streets, violence on the campuses and pornography in every home."

"That was just political rhetoric, Roundtable," I said. "They didn't mean it."

"And the Democrats said if President Nixon remains in the White House, there will be a depression and all Americans will lose their jobs, their homes and their Social Security."

"You shouldn't believe everything you hear during a campaign, Roundtable. The party out of power always says the same thing."

"I don't want to die," cried Roundtable. "You're not going to die."

"The Republicans said if they didn't win the election, President Nixon wouldn't be able to end the war in Vietnam or stand up to the Russians in the Middle East or the Cubans in the Caribbean."

"They were just trying to scare you into voting for them, Roundtable. It's part of the game plan."

"The Democrats said if they didn't win, we would all die of pollution or go bankrupt bailing out the Penn Central Railroad."

"They were scrounging for issues, Roundtable. They didn't expect you to believe them."

"Why did the President stand up in his car in San Jose?" Roundtable said.

"I don't know why he stood up."

"He stood up because he was hoping they'd stoned his car."

"I don't believe it."

"Well, the chief of the San Jose police said his car wasn't stoned."

"If he said that, then there's nothing to worry about, is there?"

"No, except that the Secret Service said his car was stoned, and the President went on television and told everyone he was stoned, and he said if we didn't elect the candidates he supported, we could expect more of the same from the anarchists in the country."

"The President was just trying to dramatize the point that there has been a breakdown of law and order in the country and the Democrats were responsible. That's fair comment during an election year."

"The Democrats said the Republicans purposely played a bad tape of the President's speech so the people would accuse the TV media of sabotaging the Nixon Administration."

"We don't know that for a fact, though, do we, Roundtable?"

"No," he sobbed, "that's the trouble. We don't know anything for a fact. I'm scared."

"Look, friend, everyone gets frightened during an election year, but in a few weeks it will all be forgotten. We'll still have violence in the streets, student unrest, unemployment, pollution and trouble with the Russians, and it won't come up again until the presidential elections."

"That's why I'm scared," said Roundtable, shaking.

"How's that?"

"If this is the kind of stuff they're going to throw at us in an off-year election, what the hell are they going to do to us in 1972?"

OUR READERS' MIND

Is blood to soldiers immoral?

To The Editor:

Regarding the forthcoming blood drive, I quote from Monday's "things - that could - easily - have - gone - unsaid" Department: "All blood collected will be used domestically. Many students have expressed the fear that their blood might be sent to Vietnam, but absolutely no blood will be sent overseas." Rollin Smith, the owner of the quote, might just as easily have said that all blood collected will be used in Ingham County which is not only true but is a sufficient reply to anyone wondering how the blood would be distributed. But Smith needs the blood, so I suppose he is justified in saying whatever he thinks will maximize a turnout of donors.

What is utterly unjustifiable is that any prospective donor would "fear" that his blood might be used "improperly." This is one of the most immoral "fears" possible, and further emphasizes the gross duplicity which characterizes those who attack the Vietnam war on moral grounds. It's not enough to call the Thieu government fascist while ignoring the fact that Ho Chi Minh killed 250,000 North Vietnamese while strengthening his regime. It's not enough to attack the ARVN methods of imprisonment of a few Communist POW's while avoiding the wretched conditions of thousands of American prisoners in the north. It's not enough to weep over the alleged killing of My Lai civilians while forgetting the thousands massacred in Hue during 1968 Tet by the Viet Cong. Now the moralists tell us they can't give blood if it's to be used for saving an American soldier's life in Vietnam, because our soldier is fighting an immoral war. It makes me want to throw up.

What if lots of people specified that their blood couldn't be used by a criminal shot during the commission of a crime? Or by anyone who injured himself while under the influence of drugs? Or by "niggers"? Or by "spics"? Or by "honkies"? Or by "capitalists"? If wounded servicemen can be discriminated against, why not anybody else? Obviously, anybody can be.

It's time that the great humanitarian and moralistic preachings of the antiwar mob be exposed for what it really is: unadulterated, unfettered, unreconstructed hypocrisy.

Who'd fill power vacuum?

To The Editor:

I find your November 5 editorial on student government reform very interesting. It addresses itself to the problems that have thus far been ignored by the abolish - ASMSU movement. Its goal of diluting the power of any one individual is noteworthy.

However, there are times when the University needs one or a few individuals who can speak "for" the student body. The students themselves look to such a person in a time of confusion or crisis; and the outside press seeks him out as a quick guide to student opinion.

Presently this role is filled by the chairman of ASMSU or some members of the board. Under your proposed scheme there would be no one from student government who could fill this role - in effect there would be a power vacuum here. Who is to speak for and mould student opinion, then?

Why, how very convenient - I have no

MSU senior wins House seat

By SUE SCOTT

An MSU senior became the youngest member ever elected to the Michigan House of Representatives last week. In a decisive victory, John M. Engler, Beal City Republican, defeated his Democratic opponent, Joseph W. DeBolt, an asst. professor of sociology at Central Michigan University, in the 100th District.

Engler's campaign was not an easy one, though. His toughest job was to beat the 14 year Republican incumbent, Russell Strange, in the August primary. In the 1968 primary, Engler's father had unsuccessfully attempted to win the nomination. But Engler said he thought Strange could be "out-organized." Engler claims a long standing interest in politics and discussed with friends the possibility of his candidacy since the 1968 election. For a political science course here spring term, he made a study of the 100th District and suggested exactly how Strange could be beaten. In past primaries, Strange was usually opposed by two or more candidates and he never received a majority of the votes. Engler waited to make sure he would be the only opponent, and at the last minute he filed for candidacy. "A point in our favor is that we were not taken seriously at first," Engler said. "We went out and worked hard and people didn't realize our effectiveness until the last few weeks. The element of surprise helped." Engler said the main issue of the campaign for the primary was one of availability. Engler believed he could work closer than Strange with the local government and people. On major issues, there was little disagreement between the two candidates, he said.

He said he believed that DeBolt spent that much on the general campaign alone. "Just talking with the voters is the major thing," he said. "We have the power to change things, but we just can't do it in two weeks before exams."

Engler said he would like to be able to work with younger people and keep them interested in the political system. He said he realizes he must first become acquainted with the legislature but after that his accomplishments will be the most his ability will allow. This term Engler has been commuting to classes from his campaign headquarters in Mt. Pleasant.

Green, who is also a professor of educational psychology, taught here before devoting full time to the Center for Urban Affairs.

"A major aspect of my responsibility will be to work closely with Dr. Julius Scott, (executive director of the center), Mrs. King and other board members to define the programmatic thrust of the memorial center, and to reflect King's work during his lifetime," Green said.

Green will also assist the center in their fundraising programs.

"Our goal is to raise $20-25 million dollars over the next several years for a memorial to King and for developing a complete program related to his work," Green said.

In a letter notifying Green of his appointment, Julius Scott said the memorial center was looking forward to "gaining much" from Green's insight and expertise.

As the former education director of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, Green structured educational programs for southern and rural blacks. He has also worked as a psychologist for the Lansing Child Guidance Clinic, as a

FOR STATE JUDGES

Prof urges raise in pay

Michigan judges are underpaid and their salaries should be raised, an MSU economist told the State Bar of Michigan today. In a study presented to the Michigan Bar Association, John P. Henderson, professor of economics, recommended salary increases ranging from 34 per cent to as much as 63 per cent for justices of the supreme court and the 400 other judges.

Hart, court administrator of the Supreme Court of Michigan, said, "Persons whose compensation is static suffer irreparably," Henderson said. "They must compete for goods and services at today's rising prices with yesterday's income levels."

Henderson said the cost of living has increased 17.4 per cent in the past four years, that average compensation per man hour in the private nonfarm sector rose 27 per cent, and that salaries of the federal judiciary increased from 33 to 52 per cent in 1969.

Mime Troupe offers social commentary

By DAVID BASSETT
State News Staff Writer

American's premier radical theater group, the San Francisco Mime Troupe, will present its newest creation, "The Independent Female, or a Man has his Pride," Sunday in the Union.

The production, sponsored by Women's Liberation, opened at the Ash Grove Theater in Los Angeles to rave reviews and has been acclaimed by critics and standing-room-only audiences across the country.

The mime troupe was first formed as an answer to what many considered boring theater and to the presumption that the U.S. theater could no longer hold any interest for its rapidly diminishing audience. It came gradually to relate this condition to the concept that American society no longer holds any promise for its increasingly alienated members.

In 1962, after experimenting with various indoor dramatic forms, the troupe moved into the parks of San Francisco for two performances of one of its plays which attempted to bring the theater to the people.

This method continually expanded to include over 150 performances each summer, always operating under the theory of "see the show and pay afterwards."

Written, directed and designed by women, the show (described by the troupe as a melodrama) deals with women's "place," what it is and what it should be. The plot centers around Gloria, described by the troupe and numerous reviewers as an "innocent," John, her junior executive-type fiance and Sarah Bullit, Gloria's "deviant and determined feminist sister."

Set in the 1860s, the play scoffs at those who poke fun at the struggle for women's equality by admitting that the struggle can often indeed be funny.

Like all of its productions, "The Independent Female" is a biting, half funny, half serious statement of social consciousness. The troupe's motto is "Teach, direct toward change, be an example of change," and its selfless eight-year record of remaining independent with a bare minimum of money is perhaps the best indication of the play's worth.

In eight years, the troupe has established itself as a theater group which places service and artistic freedom above monetary reward, a record which alone makes "The Independent Female" worth seeing.

The play will start at 7:30 p.m. Sunday in the Union Ballroom. Admission is $2.

'Rap' group aims at communication

By BARBARA FARY
State News Staff Writer

Talking is an all-important activity to Doug Solomon, Belinda Novik and a group of volunteer "rappers," aiming to improve communication with Lansing area residents.

Solomon and Miss Novik are spokesmen for a "campus-community" group of MSU students who go into the Lansing area and "communicate" with residents.

The two Justin Morrill College juniors said they began the group because "the only way to get people together on causes and ideas is to get them talking to each other."

The idea came from "Dialog '69," a University-sponsored group which toured the country two summers ago.

"We thought it was successful so we should bring it home with us," Miss Novik said.

The "SUNDAY" outdoor program held last spring during the student strike was their first effort at getting the college student's message across to the community.

"Dialog is a necessary students and people are going to understand what's going on in this nation and do something together. It's vital to break down the stereotypes," Solomon said.

The volunteers usually go out in teams of three or four and speak before church groups or service clubs. They frequently answer questions about "radical" student violence and draft resistance.

"Sometimes the atmosphere is hostile for the first half of the program," Miss Novik said, "but by the end people are understanding each other."

Miss Novik said she believes much of the communication breakdown between adults and young people is a result of students not being able to talk with their parents.

"There are also a lot of kids on this campus who can't talk to each other," she said. "We'd like to get some of the factions back communicating."

Response to the group has been good, Solomon and Miss Novik said, and several times volunteers have been asked to come back.

Informally organized, the dialog group is open to invitations from local organizations and to participation by interested students.

The group can be contacted 355-9474 or 355-4786.

Yippie TV fracas forces probe

LONDON (AP) — Television chiefs began a probe Monday into the Yippie fracas on the weekend David Frost show that could have far-reaching effects on live telecasting in Britain.

Tough security guards at television studio doors were seen as one possible outcome. Another could be a decision to record for prebroadcast editing the few live interview shows remaining on British television. Another issue is whether to give exposure to anarchists.

Harold Soref, Conservative member of Parliament, blamed the fracas, seen by an estimated 17 million viewers, on revolutionaries based in Algeria. He asked for an investigation by the Home Office, in charge of immigration, and said it was monstrous that "television should be allowed to display exhibitions of public depravity."

Mary Whitehouse, the grandmother who leads a nationwide cleanup television group, said the incident had been planned and that "American revolutionaries have declared that TV is their platform."

Frost, a top British television personality whose engaging style has won him wide following in the United States, was interviewing Jerry Rubin, a defendant at the Chicago conspiracy trial that resulted from riots during the 1968 Democratic Convention. Rubin said money should be abolished. In that case, Frost asked, why did Rubin try to obtain double the $240 fee usually paid to guests on the program? "To buy bombs to blow you up," Rubin replied.

Then about 20 of Rubin's long-haired followers entered. The Yippies knocked over television cameras, sang, shouted four-letter words, smoked what they said was marijuana, dribbled flower petals over Frost and drenched him with a water pistol. After 10 minutes, Frost moved to another studio during a commercial break and order was restored.

British viewers had never seen anything like it, even during a live talk show several years ago when Kenneth Tynan, producer of the nude "Oh Calcutta!" revue, used for the first time on British television the four-letter word for sexual intercourse.

"I believe in live television, the unexpected is always liable to happen," Frost said later.

"But I suspect this has turned out as the most powerful commercial ever for law and order."

The Frost show appears live Saturday night on London Regional Television, one of five regional networks under the

WJR radio airs 'U' documentary

WJR radio 760 will present a special documentary dealing with life at MSU at 7:30 p.m. today.

The program, entitled "The Heart of the Matter," is a reflection on both society and the University as seen by one MSU student David Manschot, Bloomfield Hills junior.

WJR News and director Oscar Frenette said Manschot represents the individual student, who Frenette feels needs recognition "in the face of so much campus unrest and in the light of so many campus headlines."

In the half-hour broadcast, Manschot will speak about University and residence hall regulations and the educational experience at MSU.

Manschot said he speaks only for himself and was chosen for no other reason than he "happened to be standing in the right place at the right time."

In addition to tonight's broadcast, "The Heart of the Matter" can be heard at 2:30 p.m. Sunday.

Group publishes job listing

By DAVID BASSETT
State News Staff Writer

Second in a series

Since the inception of Vocations for Social Change (VSC), the function which has helped the Placement Bureau program reach a maximum number of people has been its publishing of job listings of social change organizations on local, state and national levels.

Most of the information contained in these bulletins and pamphlets comes from various social change groups throughout the country. The largest contributing group is the National Vocations for Social Change office in Canyon, Calif. The national VSC office itself publishes a 60-80 page pamphlet bi-monthly. This pamphlet contains social change groups on a national level, as well as general orientation material.

The job guide of the MSU Vocations for Social Change group also includes data supplied by the I-W Job Finder and the Guide to Alternate Service (organizations serving conscientious objectors), the United Church Board for Homeland Ministries in Philadelphia, the National Federation of Settlements and Community Centers in New York City and the Teacher Dropout Center in Amherst, Mass.

Lenny Brenner, VSC student coordinator, said the purpose of the job bulletin is to provide people with concrete examples of social change organizations. "The bulletin, which comes out each month, is educational to people who have some idea of what VSC is all about, but who don't know anything specific," Brenner said.

For example, the October issue of the bulletin lists vocational opportunities in five areas: education, organizing, alternative institutions and peace.

Educational vocations deal primarily with free schools and other non-traditional programs. These include positions in radical and experimental schools, as well as state-supported public schools that are attempting to implement new approaches to education.

Vocations in organizing include activities like working with sugar cane laborers in Louisiana, forming groups to respond to the needs of youth and minority groups in Haigley-Ashbury and working in crisis intervention centers similar to East Lansing's Listening Ear.

Work with alternative institutions includes counseling in centers for runaway teenagers and people with drug problems, staffing free health clinics, and professional and research work.

Peace work deals with such groups as the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom in Philadelphia, the Rural Housing Alliance in Washington, D.C., and the New England Committee for Non-Violent Action in Volontown, Conn.

As well as providing lists of radical and/or innovative groups, VSC also publishes lists of "straight" organizations that are willing to help with social change.

These include newspapers that are willing to give underground newspaper staffers experience in the technical side of journalism, church groups that operate youth centers and large corporations that are concerned with environmental pollution, race relations and urban problems.

John Shingleton, Placement Bureau director, said the response to the VSC publications has been "overwhelming."

"For the first few months," Shingleton said, "we put out 1,500 job bulletins for VSC. All of these were immediately taken. Because of economic limitations, we have been forced to cut back this number to 1,000, and they go almost as soon as we release them."

Brenner said he is more than pleased with the reception of the bulletins.

"Although we are now publishing only 1,000 bulletins, people save them and circulate them among friends and acquaintances, making them available to a tremendous number of people."

1910 MEXICAN REVOLT

WMSB to focus on revolution

By ROSA MORALES
State News Staff Writer

"La Revista," a half-hour, Spanish language program produced by WMSB-TV, Channel 10, will present a special program on the 1910 Mexican Revolution featuring people who actually participated in it, at 7 p.m., Nov. 19 and 12:30 p.m. Nov. 21.

"Half of the show will be narrative with pictures on the revolution, and during the other half we will be talking with people who were involved in the revolution," Stu Pollock, program director, said.

The show, taped entirely in Spanish, was initiated in 1967 under a federal grant to provide programs for Spanish-speaking people. This year the program is operating under station funding, Pollock said.

"The program has a magazine-type format in which the contexts of the show are presented like turning a magazine page to each feature, only in Spanish," Pollock explained.

"La Revista," besides promoting community events, also includes folk-type music and interviews with local individuals on items of importance like the Model Cities program or bilingual education program in Lansing, he said.

Jessie Sagon is the associate to the producer and host on the show and Cecilia Mares, of Grand Ledge, is a cohost.

Both Pollock and Sagon are trying to utilize more people from the Lansing and East Lansing Mexican-American communities. This involvement will make the program more immediately digestible and relevant to the community, Pollock said.

"We can't pay people to appear on TV, though; their appearance is voluntary," Pollock said.

The program is aimed directly at between 50,000 and 80,000 Spanish-speaking Michigan residents in and around Lansing, Pollock said.

The primary coverage area of WMSB-TV is between 60 and 80 miles around East Lansing. The station covers a circle roughly 140 miles in diameter, he said.

The program will be in operation in accordance with the television year which began Oct. 1 and will continue until June 30, 1971, Pollock said.

Although all the channel 10 programs are produced and operated by television professionals, Pollock mentioned that in the past many people have gotten the false impression that because WMSB-TV is an MSU-operated station it is entirely run by students.

He pointed out that communication students are hired to work part-time at the station in various technical jobs on all the programs as part of their major.

Engineering sets open house tour

The College of Engineering will hold a tour of their facilities to potential engineers at an open house from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursday.

All departments in the college will be represented, with special movies, lab experiments and demonstrations offered.

Among the 41 events taking place simultaneously during the open house, will be a description of MSU's unique TRIGA nuclear reactor, a demonstration of laser equipment, and computers programmed to play games in competition with students at the open house.

"We hope to help each student identify with the various engineering fields available to him here and to zero in on the area that interests him most," Dale Lefever, asst. to the dean, said.

Engineering freshmen, no preference students enrolled in a science or mathematics course, area high school students and community college students planning to attend MSU will be able to meet with College of Engineering faculty and gather information about the college, Lefever said.

Pressure, birth rate linked

By the year 2000, over 7 1/2 billion people may swarm the face of the earth as a result of sociological pressures in the world today.

"It's not going to be easy to tell someone who is depending on their children for an income not to have more than two children," he said.

"People have told me," he said, "not to talk to them about limiting their number of children, but to go to India or China and talk to the people who are having 10 kids per family."

"Questionnaires have shown," Wilson said, "that there are some women in this country with four or five children who don't know where babies come from."

"But the United States, with six per cent of the world's population, consumes 40 to 60 per cent of the world's resources," he said.

"Has genuine love been the motivation behind having these children?" Wilson asked. "Are all of these children really wanted, or are they born to fulfill some of these factors I have just enumerated?"

Physiologist cites problems in world food, space battle

Less food per person exists in many areas of the world than did in the early 1950s said W. Richard Dukelow, MSU physiologist to the First National Biological Congress meeting at Cobo Hall in Detroit Tuesday.

"We are already losing the food and space battle," Dukelow said. "The question now seems to be in what year the catastrophe will occur."

In the United States, emphasis has shifted from the IUD to the pill in recent years," he said. "However, on a worldwide basis," Dukelow said, "we find that the IUD is a dominant and impressive factor in family planning and contraceptive programs."

Understanding the chemistry of new compounds and how to make them at low cost is not easy, he said. He said there are the problems of dosage, side effects and the education on the use of new compounds.

Migrants work long, hard days for low pay

By ROSA MORALES
State News Staff Writer

Second in a series

MSU freshman coed who worked in the fields picking since she was 11 years old no qualms about being migrant.

The Medinas received a weekly wage of $20 plus all their groceries.

Miss Medina recalls that every Christmas the only presents they got were from the elderly couple.

When the owner died Medina was told that he had willed half an acre of his land to the Medinas. The family now lives on the property located in the Rio Grande Valley.

Unemployed

Miss Medina said that after the owner died her father was unemployed for a while until he got a job irrigating land. But he lost that job when he and his family came north to work in the fields, Miss Medina said.

"The first year we worked in the fields we lived in a barn in Alabama," the 19-year-old coed said.

The owners took the cattle out of the barn and moved seven families in, she said.

"We put up the sides of the truck for divisions and privacy in the barn," she said. "But I could stand on a box, look over the divisions and see all the ladies cooking in their own respective sections."

In Decatur, Mich. in 1967 families had to live in small, one-room "houses" without inside toilets or running water, Miss Medina said.

"The 30 houses were all set back from the road behind a swamp full of mosquitoes so that passers-by would not see them," she said.

The only water available was provided by seven faucets located among the houses, she continued. The toilets were located in the center of the 30 houses and there were no bathing facilities.

"Whenever we took a bath we would heat water from the faucets, put up four sticks in the ground outside, hang up some sheets and bathe inside the makeshift enclosure with water from a bucket," Miss Medina said.

week or per month because it depends on the weather.

"Sometimes the field workers don't work for weeks because it rains or there is not enough work for everybody," she said.

All types of crop picking is hard work, she said. Describing how she picked potatoes, Miss Medina said she wore a belt made of sack cloth with loops on each side and in front.

Through these loops were fastened between eight and 10 sacks on each side of her body which she would fill with potatoes as she stooped along the rows in the field.

All day long she would stoop among the plants, picking the potatoes and putting them in the sacks. As the 65 to 85-pound sacks filled up she would leave them on the ground for a truck to pick them up.

Miss Medina said that she earned nine cents per sack. For each 100 sacks she filled she was paid $9.

"One hundred sacks are a lot of 80-pound sacks to fill with potatoes," Miss Medina noted.

When she picked cotton Miss Medina earned two cents per pound stuffing 50-pound sacks of cotton and dragging the sack in 100 degree heat in Alabama to make $1, the coed said.

"Those who work the land like us never get anything or anywhere," Miss Medina said.

Besides lack of employment Miss Medina also cited the inadequacies of the housing and welfare system in Texas as prime sources of discontent among the Mexican-American community. These factors force thousands to become migrant field workers, she said.

One out of every eight persons in Texas is a Mexican-American, according to figures from the Civil Rights Commission.

Each summer Michigan alone has approximately 50,000 migrant field workers from many southern states, according to United Migrants for Opportunity, Inc. (UMO), a social service agency in Michigan.

The U.S. Dept. of Labor stated that last summer there were 8,500 more workers than jobs in Michigan and that some crops — cherries and strawberries — were very poor because of bad weather.

This summer Miss Medina plans to continue working as a teacher's aide in Berrien Springs. She may return to Texas to visit her family at Christmas and perhaps at spring break if she has enough money to pay for her traveling expenses.

Her family will continue to travel the migrant route looking for work, picking sugar beets, pickles and tomatoes in Michigan this summer, she added.

As a student Miss Medina likes MSU and the people she meets. She feels that the University has the facilities and the skills to provide more comprehensive courses on required subjects to help all other freshmen, not specifically Mexican-Americans, she said.

DIRECTOR CITES NEEDS

Campus security reviewed

By JOHN JUEL
State News Staff Writer

One of the most pressing problems of law enforcement is to improve the recruiting standards and training of police officers, said O. Bernitt, MSU director of public safety, said Tuesday at a Faculty Club luncheon.

Bernitt also pointed toward the increased mechanization of law enforcement techniques in the future.

Speaking on "Campus Security: Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow," Bernitt discussed each time period in relation to the actions of law enforcement, personal safety and property protection.

From 1945 to 1960, law enforcement on campus was generally outside agencies, he said.

The campus security personnel of this period were essentially trained and unfit to do the job for which they were employed," Bernitt said. "Campus security was under the control of the physical plant or grounds department, and its personnel had little or no experience in law enforcement."

As rapid growth and increasing complexity of MSU from 1960 to the present brought about a "significant change," Bernitt said. Large campuses became comparable to cities and the problems multiplied, he said, and the need arose for improved law enforcement to combat these problems.

By 1960, the concept of a public safety department was created, placing all compatible security and safety services under one jurisdiction. Employees assumed a full police role, with campus officers being given peace officer status, deputized by the local county sheriff.

Personnel selection and training remains one of the most pressing issues in law enforcement, Bernitt said.

Recruitment standards across the country need considerable upgrading," Bernitt said. "It is incredible how many towns can take people from the bottom of the job market and give them the responsibility of taking a man's life."

The MSU Dept. of Public Safety currently requires a minimum two years of college-level work before they will consider an applicant for employment. A bachelor's degree is necessary for promotion beyond sergeant, and salary bonuses are offered to those with three years of college-level work or a degree.

Bernitt also said psychological testing should become as widely employed as a means of checking an applicant's capability as the obvious physical requirements.

Future predictions on trends in law enforcement, Bernitt said, there would be less emphasis on increasing the power of a police unit, and more emphasis on mechanical equipment.

Bernitt cited the use of a system of electric locks in a pilot program at Wayne State University for increasing building security. Central monitoring stations will one day be used to supervise entry to buildings, fire prevention equipment and maintaining temperatures in research facilities, he added.

HARTMAN, STARKEY

'S' harrier captains run to win in Big 10

By DON KOPRIVA
State News Sports Writer

MSU cross country captains Chuck Starkey and Kim Hartman are going to try a reverse of the old "captain going down with his ship" saying this Saturday.

The event will be the Big Ten cross country championship and both Hartman and Starkey are vital to the Spartans' title hopes as they run in their last home meet.

Both seniors have performed somewhat below par this year but MSU Coach Jim Gibbard expects good things from them Saturday.

"They're the key men on the squad," Gibbard said. "I think the fifth men on each team will decide who's going to win the meet."

"If they can both stay up in the race and place in the top 15, our chances at the title would be good."

The fifth and sixth positions on the Spartan squad are unusual ones for Hartman and Starkey. Hartman, one of the Big Ten's top sophomores in 1968, started out well last fall but was hit by a car and suffered torn knee ligaments.

He missed the rest of the cross country season and all of track

Chuck Starkey

Kim Hartman

but has come back this fall to run again.

It's quite a different situation for the Southfield senior, who also has a third and fourth in Big Ten mile races to his credit to go along with his fourth in cross country two years ago, but he's going to try to make the most of it.

"I've got to pick out someone, one of our guys or someone else and just try to stick with him," Hartman said.

"We all know what we have to do now to win it," he added. "Words are no good, we've got to do it."

For Starkey, the success has never come that easy. The Columbus, Ohio, product was hurt sophomore year and missed most of cross country, but came back in outdoor track to take fourth in the Big Ten three mile. He placed 18th in the league championships in cross country last fall and is hoping for better than that this year.

"I don't think I've run that well so far," Starkey said. "I just hope I can make the top 15 and run a good race."

Both Hartman and Starkey were optimistic about MSU's chances for success on the Forest Akers course.

"You feel lost on another course," Starkey pointed out. "Here we can better judge how we're doing and it's just more comfortable."

"I think we've got a better team mentally and physically than we had last year," he said. "If everyone does the job we can win."

And winning, as Hartman pointed out, is often no tougher than knowing what has to be done and then doing it. If Starkey and Hartman can do it Saturday, there's one team that won't be sinking out of sight in the Big Ten.

JEFF ELLIOTT
Mr. Skiing turns em on at MSU, too

Horse racing has Willie Shoemaker. Golf has Arnold Palmer. Swimming has Mark Spitz and skiing has Jean Claude Killy. They are the men who dominate their sport and are considered the best in their profession.

MSU was fortunate to have one of these sports "bests" on campus Monday night in Killy. For those of you who missed it, it is indeed your loss. The show, entitled, "Come Ski With Me," was sponsored by MOOSUSKI, the ski club at MSU.

MOOSUSKI should certainly be commended for a fine program. The show opened with the film of Killy's last "challenge" match against Pepi Steigler at Sun Valley a year ago. The photography and color were great and put the audience in a skiing mood right then.

The club also had a fashion show with members of the ski club modeling clothes from the Weathervane, a ski shop in Okemos. There was a question and answer session with Killy, with members of the audience participating along with a selected panel. And to top off the show and make sure everyone stayed to the end, the club and Weathervane gave away over $2,000 in prizes, including two expense paid trips for a week of skiing in Aspen, Colo., over Christmas break.

But the main attraction of the night was Killy himself. Dressed rather conservatively in slightly flared gray pants and a black shirt, the 27-year-old professional captured the audience's attention with his deep French accent and continental charm.

In a recent Newsweek magazine, Killy was listed as one of the 100 men who most "turn on" women. And there appeared to be several women in the audience who would have verified that.

One young lady really put Killy on the spot during the question session when she said, "Mr. Killy, you're always saying 'Come Ski With Me' - when can we leave?"

It brought a laugh from the audience and Killy himself. He wiggled out of the direct confrontation by replying, "United has some great ski tours leaving pretty soon." United Airlines is sponsoring Killy's appearances and produced his latest film, "Come Ski With Me."

Before going out and meeting the audience, Killy held a brief press conference backstage. As usual, there were men from a couple local radio stations stuffing microphones in his mouth and barely letting others hear the soft-spoken Frenchman.

"It's true that I don't look pretty coming down a hill," Killy started out, "but you don't win races if you look pretty. You've got to have a reckless abandon in your style and be willing to take chances. The right mental attitude here is very important. Actually, if you're ready physically, you'll be ready mentally."

"I had to practice 11 months a year, five or six hours a day, when training for the '68 Olympics. You've got to practice constantly if you want to be the best. I'm not training as hard as I used to, but then I'm not competing as often either."

If Killy ever decided he was through with skiing, he might go into car racing, another exciting sport he has taken an interest in. In 1967 he teamed with his friend Bernard Cahier to drive a Porsche in the Targa Florio race in Sicily and finished first in the Gran Turismo category and seventh overall.

"Car racing is a fantastic sport," he said. "I mostly just wanted to find out what it was like to drive fast. I found out and think that professional driving should be left to professional drivers."

The ruggedly handsome bachelor flashed a broad grin when asked about the social life of Jean-Claude Killy.

"When I have a day off I like to go off in the hills and ski," he said. "Actually my work is also my pleasure. Women are certainly nice and I enjoy them. Yes, someday there will be a Mrs. Killy - I like children."

Statements like that may soon increase the Killy fan mail. His warmth and charm is admired by all women. His skiing is admired by all. Jean-Claude Killy is truly "Mr. Skiing."

Icer forwards dangerous

State News Sports Writer

win hockey games, a team score goals... and lots of... Following this... mental guideline, there... be a lot of wins flowing... the MSU chapter of the... this winter.

have two possible super lines: combining speed, size, and scoring instinct. Back that with two more lines that are, according to Asst. Coach Alex Terpay, "just about equal," and MSU has a solid groundwork for a championship team.

Thompson, a junior from Toronto, is best noted for his five-goal outburst in one game against Michigan last winter. Though only 5-5 and 155 pounds, Thompson has a nose for the puck and is not apprehensive while stickhandling.

"Thompson is the cleverest guy we've got with the puck," Coach Amo Bessone said. "He makes good passes and knows what to do when he's around the net."

Gagnon is of almost equal dimensions as Thompson, but is not quite as heavy. Gagnon goes as a "light" 145-pounder. Regardless, some of hockey's greatest centers have been players of relatively small frames. Henri Richard and Stan Mikita serve as examples. Gagnon only played in 18 games last year, but still managed to tie Thompson for the goal scoring lead with 14.

"Gilles is the best 'garbage man' we've got," Terpay said. "He finishes off his plays around the net. A lot of his goals come on rebounds and tip-ins. Nice scoring plays come once in a while, but it's the garbage goals that win games for you." Al Laking, regarded as the team's best forechecker, and Bill Sipola round out the team's center corps.

On the right side, the Spartans are best described in three words: strong but silent.

The team's top positional player can be found on Gagnon's line, Michel Chaurest. Though he sometimes has a tendency to wander, he always seems to get back to cover his check.

"Michel is our strongest player physically," Terpay said. "He's the hardest to knock down off of his feet. He's got a good shot and is a steady performer."

Gerry DeMarco lines up to the right of Thompson, which puts him in fast company. DeMarco isn't the type that lays back, though. He is one of the team's fastest skaters, a consistent hustler. Last year, his hustle resulted in 8 goals.

Another of the squad's best positional players is Bob Michelutti, a 5-11, 185-pounder from Sudbury, Ont. Larry Jakinovich and Bob Campbell also patrol the right side for the Spartans.

The left flank provides the Spartans with an able group of skaters.

Mark Calder, a freshman from Rexdale, Ont., adds another dimension to the Thompson line.

"Calder is a little slower than his line mates, but he's dangerous around the net. He compliments his line mates nicely," Bessone said.

Another of the DeMarco's, Frank, is bidding for a secure position on the left side. Denny Hogan is contesting DeMarco for the post. Larry Curran is listed as the fourth line right wingman. Curran scored the initial goal against the alumni last Saturday and has looked impressive in practice.

The final left winger, Randy Sokoll, is probably counted on more by his coaches than any other player. Being a senior, Sokoll carries much of the burden as a leader as well as the role of a scorer.

"Randy is our most accurate shooter," Bessone said. "He is always on goal with his shot. If he isn't scoring, there's always a chance for a rebound."

"Physically, he's got everything going for him," Terpay added. "He does a good job finishing up on his plays. If he starts off good, he'll be O.K."

Rick Houtteman also fits in the picture as one of the forwards.

"Hoot is a good skater," Bessone said. "He can take a turn at defense now and then. We'll also work him more at killing penalties."

Goal scoring power

Housing rule

Delores Bender, director of off campus housing, said Tuesday she had followed guidelines set up in the Academic Freedom Report to verify any violations of some 583 students allegedly living off campus against University regulations.

Mrs. Bender made the first contact with these students by letter, and if she thought they were in violation referred them to an administrative officer.

Of the approximately 583 students contacted, Mrs. Bender said 130 were not in violation. Another 150 were referred to an officer, and of this 150, 80 have actually talked with an officer as of Tuesday. The remainder have not responded to the letter citing the possible violation.

IN LOCAL DRIVE

Adams contributes blood

Walter Adams, former MSU president and professor of economics, will donate the first pint of blood to the Lansing Area Red Cross blood drive today at the Red Cross Center in Lansing.

Dr. Arnold Werner, asst. professor of psychiatry and author of "The Doctor's Bag," will take the pint from Adams.

The blood drive, scheduled to begin Monday and run through Nov. 20, will be held in the Shaw Hall lower lounge. Hours of the drive will be from 2-8 p.m. Monday through Nov. 19 and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Nov. 20.

Anyone in good health between the ages of 18 and 66 is eligible to give blood.

CONSENT AND RELEASE FOR PERSONS UNDER TWENTY-ONE YEARS OF AGE (This form is required for each blood donation by a person 18 years of age or over who has not yet reached the age of legal majority as defined by the laws of the state in which he makes the blood donation, EXCEPT when such a person is a member of the Armed Forces of the United States.)

WHAT IS "SALVATION?"

"Salvation" was first presented in New York City and played there for two years off Broadway. It was followed by a successful run in Los Angeles where it played for over six months. MSU is the first school in the nation to present the rock musical... The eighteen musical numbers in the show include the hit recording of Ronnie Dyson's "If You Let Me Make Love to You Then Why Can't I Touch You?" (the original recording is on the Capitol Label). The MSU cast has already been described as being "sincere and honest". "The people are not just acting a role but they are who they portray." "Sincerity is its strongest attribute." "Something like "Salvation" has long been lacking on the MSU campus. "Salvation" is simply eight witty people suffering from common hang-ups (sexual) joining together to participate in an unreal experience of sight and sound. "Salvation" needs you to make it happen! Come together at the Erickson Kiva on November 13, 14, 15, 20, 21 and 22 and experience what everyone will soon be into. Ten big performances in six big nights. The Sunday performances will be staged for the benefit of the Listening Ear and the Drug Education Center. Tickets are $2 and will be sold all this week and next at the Union, Lums, Marshall Music, Chess King, Alberts, Grinnells, and State Discount.

THE GERMAN CLUB

The German Club will meet tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the first floor lounge of the Student Services Building. The junior year abroad program in Freiburg and the summer program in Vienna will be discussed and color slides will be shown. All interested persons are invited to attend.

MSU VOLUNTEER FEEDBACK

MSU Volunteer Feedback Session. Volunteers voice your opinion. Gripe or praise, tonight at 7 p.m., Room 26, Student Services Building.

ARE YOU READY FOR "SALVATION?"

"Salvation" This Friday, November 13 marks the opening of an entirely new concept in entertainment. The new players, a totally student production company, will present the new rock musical "Salvation" and writer Link includes the hit song "If You Let Me Make Love to You Then Why Can't I Touch You?" (as recorded this summer by Ronnie Dyson). The one and one-half hour production has been described by Clive Barnes of the New York Times as "non-stop bounce!" The show incorporates two casts of eight coming together to experience the excitement of sight and sound! The show is a multi-media presentation and includes the "Braitree" light show, an eight piece rock group, and eight singer-actor-movers. "Salvation" needs you to make it happen. Come together in Erickson Kiva November 13, 14, 15, 20, 21, or 22 and experience what everyone will soon be into. Don't miss Salvation. Nothing but HAIR could ever measure up to the show either in sound or in togetherness. The audience is asked to become part of the show and is urged to be in the happenings. Tickets at the Union, Marshall Music, State Discount, Alberts, Grinnells, and Chess King for $2. Don't let the moment slip by. "Salvation" will create a tremendous impact on the conservative MSU campus. Make sure you take an active part.

FREE U

Free U is having a Phone Poll all day today. While women are coming to see the inferior status given to them in this society little has been said about men. Men are in the position of having to be superior - to struggle to be successful, to gain status, to perform. The Competitive Male Ego has been driven into our heads and bodies and mirrors the impersonal race we were trained for. We need to not just learn to accept failure but to free ourselves of thinking in terms of that success/failure duality. I am who I am. We are so intent on trying to become a man that WE HAVE CEASED TO BE REAL PERSONS. The revolution is both inside and outside. It's so easy to talk about them changing, and power to us - the people. To change a system that's based on competition and aggression against others, we really need to confront these things in ourselves. It isn't just the cop on the beat or the demonstration but also the cop inside our own heads - who serve and protect. We are interested in about this and to try to liberate ourselves from the roles society imposes on us. If you are interested, call 351-9601 and leave your name and number.

UNION FOR RADICAL POLITICAL

THE MSU BAHAI CLUB

The MSU Bahai Club and the East Lansing Bahai Community will join millions around the world on Thursday, November 12 in commemorating the 153rd anniversary of the Birth of the Prophet Founder of the Bahai Faith, Baha'ullah. There will be a dinner party held in the "Hunt Room" at the Capital Park Quality Motel 500 S. Capitol in Lansing beginning at 8pm that is open to the public. Dr. Keyvan Nazarian will speak on "The Life of Baha'ullah" and the Bahai film "A New Wind", a documentary on the Bahai Faith by award winning director George C. Stoney, will be shown. Baha'is regard Baha'ullah as the latest, although not the last of God's Messengers who come as divine educators of mankind. Baha'ullah over 100 years ago called for universal education and stressed that the thing of paramount importance in education is character training. Baha'ullah established definite principle to guide the educators of the future. He taught that God is one, all religions are in reality one, and that mankind is one. There is no charge for the dinner but those who plan to attend are requested to call 355-5803 or 351-4034 for reservations and ride information.
