PARIS (AP) - Children sated with silly dollies who only wet their pants or croak "mama" got a very grownup new toy Monday: a pregnant doll that turns anybody's 8 - year - old into an obstetrician.

The child just pulls down on a zipper running along the blue and white trousers of the "future mama doll," and out pops a baby. It is painless childbirth. The doll, described by its manufacturers as the first of its kind in the world, was unveilved at the Paris Toy Show. "It's an educational toy, desinged to demystify childbirth," said Andree

Gesset, a spokesman for Pintel, the manufacturer. "W've found that about nine out of 10 people who've seen it think it's in good taste. "The rest complain that it's not necessary for kids to know where they come from, but our attitude is that with men on the moon, you can't keep saying that Jacques' baby brother was left in the cabbage patch by a stork," he added. The baby, whose father is not named in the sales brochure, is a unisex child which looks reassuringly like the smiling, blonde mother. She wears a bright pink doll's maternity dress over her trousers. Once into the cruel world, the little baby doll cries if you squeeze it. Mrs. Gesset said that most children who played with the dolls "considered the whole arrangement with such naturalness that it shames any adult who is troubled by the notion."

The doll, which probably will be ported, sells for $9.

Wharton noted that the President's Commission on Admissions and Student Body Composition is currently studying many of the issues relating to the future academic directions of the University.

Recent budget cuts and insufficient appropriations increases are only "symptoms of a more serious long - term illness," Wharton said.

"We have already lost our financial flexibility and only major long - run adjustments in our financing and in our commitments will suffice," he said. "We must proceed immediately to prepare for a future where priorities must be carefully developed and at times reordered."

The president criticized current "ad hoc planning" resulting from demands from special interest groups for a new college or program and from pressures to imitate successful programs at other universities, particularly the University of Michigan.

The University simply no longer has the new resources to add programs without limit, he said.

"Future developments in many instances will have to come through substitution of new programs for old programs rather than sheer addition," he said. "In other instances, new additions will have to be limited to those areas where there are high degrees of complementarity with already

By RANDY GARTON State News Staff Writer

The growing social acceptability of marijuana smoking toughout American society is making it difficult for University licials to enforce the state marijuana statutes in MSU residence

"It's a frustrating dilemma," Gary North, coordinator of dence halls, concedes. "It's not legal but it's accepted — if one esn't practice it, he tolerates it." Toleration among students in residence halls seems to be the

"There is a very careless attitude about it."

University officials find themselves in a difficult position when it comes to the marijuana issue.

"We have attempted to make our staff aware of the type of substances on campuses," North said. "We want them to be aware of the problem and try to educate students to the legal implications and the possible dangers.' The University's task is made more difficult each day with the apparent trend toward the easing of penalties for possession of "grass" and the rising sentiment for legalization in the press and

Capt. Adam J. Zutaut, MSU Dept. of Public Safety police commander expressed similar views.

We are primarily interested in pushers, not users," Zutaut said. "We're not really down on the kid who might experiment with marijuana one or twice."

This does not mean, he emphasized, that MSU police won't arrest students for possession of marijuana.

Zutaut said, however, that "if the average user in the dorm stays in his room and doesn't bother anyone, he won't get North shares Nonnamaker's view that absolute enforcement of marijuana ordinances is impossible. "We don't see ourselves as an enforcing agent. We see ourselves as responsible to the laws of society, but as far as putting on an enforcing campaign, no," he said.

North said that University had attempted to inform students about drugs through a variety of channels.

"We have tried information brochures, print - outs - a were the talks given by members of the Drug Education Project, a University - funded program and former drug users. According to a Drug Education Project spokesman, the program is primarily aimed at the user of hallucinogenic and other "hard" drugs.

North conceded that education about marijuana might tell to

Kennedy to push health plan

KENNEDY

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass, says he plans to use his new post as chairman of the Senate health subcommittee to press the case for a national health - insurance system.

The subcommittee does not have legislative jurisdiction over the bill to create such a system already introduced by Kennedy.

But Kennedy says he feels he can advance its prospects strongly by conducting hearings in Washington and at various points over the nation.

The senator said in an interview in Washington he believes prospects are reasonably good for passage of his bill in this Congress, but probably not until 1972.

Police theorized the man had been walking along a seven -foot - high wall which enclosed the air conditioning unit and fell from the wall. The body was found by a student on his way to classes Monday morning.

Religious belong to growing 'conspiracy'

By RANDALL RICHARD Copyright The Providence Journal

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) - The Rev. David Francis is a tall, lean, balding Roman Catholic priest who prays that before his mission is done he will have contributed to the overthrow of the government of the United States. 'Conspiracy' member

The ascetic - looking Jesuit admits to being an agent and part of a conspiracy — an agent of Christ and a member of the rapidly growing "conspiracy of conscience."

Frather Francis - that's not his real name - already has converted his conscience to action. Sources say he, three other Catholic priests, two nuns and five young men and women make up the original East Coast Conspiracy to Save

According to one source, the same group followed another "moral imperative" of Christianity when they raided Selective Service offices in Philadelphia and headquarters of the General Electric Co. in Washington.

They have not been charged in connection with those acts. They were careful, it was said, not to leave clues.

Live gospel After a dozen or so years as a Jesuit scholar and teacher, Father Francis said in an interview, he came to the realization that it is as important to live the gospel as it is to

"Any system that preaches and crusades against the poor and punctuates it with napalm doesn't deserve allegiance. It must be overthrown," he said.

A good start in overthrowing the government, he declared, is to reinstate the Constitution as the supreme civil law of the land.

Making the U.S. truly democratic, he said, is the second "The way I see the overthrow as being accomplished is through the building up of a mass movement of people who take control of their own lives and own communities and through that process take control of their own government. "Draft board actions are an attempt to communicate urgency . . . a crude attempt and very experimental, but it has the advantage of being more than gestures, the advantage of really interfering with the Selective Service System in a limited way," he said.

The 31 - year - old nun did not accompany her co-conspirators when they raided the Selective Service offices in an East Coast city. But, she said, she realized she is likely to spend as much time in prison as the others, if charged, tried and convicted of an offense.

"Yes, it is a felony," she said. "Yes, it is a crime according to the law of our land. But it really isn't a crime. It's an act of conscience. It's a good thing in my head."

Another nun was asked to tell of the emotional impact of the first criminal act of her life. "Wow! Even as I say it I feel inside what I felt then. There was this tremendous feeling in tearing up those draft files."

She said the two groups that participated in the raids have not yet "surfaced," that is, claimed responsibility for

The people involved "know exactly what they have to do and what they have to get - it's the 1-A files that are most important. People work quickly," she said.

She said this group had "agreed that if the police came in we would not run because there would be shooting. The plan was just to keep working and get as much done as possible."

She said the raids may be "a small thing against the death machinery but it's worth it, no matter what happens."

ASMSU cannot ignore ruling on Proposal 4

The All - University Student Judiciary ruling last week invalidating results of the referendum giving major governing groups a vote on the student board has, quite understandably provoked the ire of two groups who had a stake in that election - the Interfraternity Council (IFC) and the chairman of ASMSU.

IFC President Joseph A. Ditzhazy claims the judiciary's decision was an attempt to "legislate morality which the Supreme Court of the United States found in the 1800s to be an impossibility."

Harold Buckner, ASMSU chairman, termed the action "a stupid decision." Buckner said he Student - Faculty Judiciary.

Ditzhazy, in a recent statement, cites a number of "facts" to show why "the ruling is a blow at the honest attempt of some individuals to provide polling places for off campus students." Cited by Ditzhazy is the "fact" that there were no volunteers to man off - campus polling places except fraternity and sorority members, and besides, fraternity and sorority polling places were in the best places to accomodate off - campus students.

Apparently, Mr. Ditzhazy does not think it significant that the voting places were even more convenient for fraternity members, who had a great stake in the outcome of this referendum.

More importantly, however, Ditzhazy's comprehension of the judiciary's decision is nearly as faulty as his comprehension of U.S. legal history. We do not understand how the judiciary's attempt to clarify a situation that clearly was a conflict of interest represented a legislation of morality.

The Supreme Court has eliminated factors that prejudice elections in the past, and we have no doubt they would frown upon an election with polling places in the residences of those who can gain from the outcome. Rightly or wrongly, students are reluctant to enter fraternity houses, and the low voter turnout may be related to the mal distribution of convenient polling

Furthermore, members of major governing groups seem to misunderstand the judiciary's decision. AUSJ did not give ASMSU the option of removing the new voting members. The AUSJ decision removed the added votes, subject, of course, to appeal to the Student -Faculty Judiciary.

Ditzhazy reflects this misunderstanding when he suggests that ASMSU disregard the AUSJ decision and align itself with a minority opinion upholding results of Proposal 4. ASMSU cannot disregard the AUSJ decision; it is will appeal the decision to the fact. Proposal 4 is invalid, pending

If ASMSU pretends to "ignore" the judiciary's decision or attempts to "invalidate" it, the student board would be in contempt of the University judiciary system. Further, ignoring the judiciary's decision would obviously invalidate decisions made by an illegally enlarged ASMSU board.

If ASMSU "ignores" the judiciary decision – after and if it is upheld by the Student - Faculty Judiciary - it seems that the judiciary would be acting fairly if it enjoined the administration from collecting ASMSU taxes until the board reflected a legal status.

If either or both of the judiciary rulings hold - we think they should - perhaps the proposal could be re-submitted to the student body in the spring elections.

We hope ASMSU succeeds in writing a realistic, legal set of election procedures and makes plans to implement them sufficiently in advance to eliminate the last minute foul - ups that occurred in the last referendum.

Perhaps the commission will even write a uniform set of procedures that can be used for all future elections and referendums. In the past five elections, five different sets of procedures have been followed. Standard procedures would do much to eliminate judicial challenges to future election results.

CIA 'troops' in Laos, but no violation of law

The lead to the Associated Press story read: "American warplanes mistakenly bombed a U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) base in Laos . . . " Typical Indochina war copy, yet behind this succinct statement lies the coup de grace for Nixonian credibility.

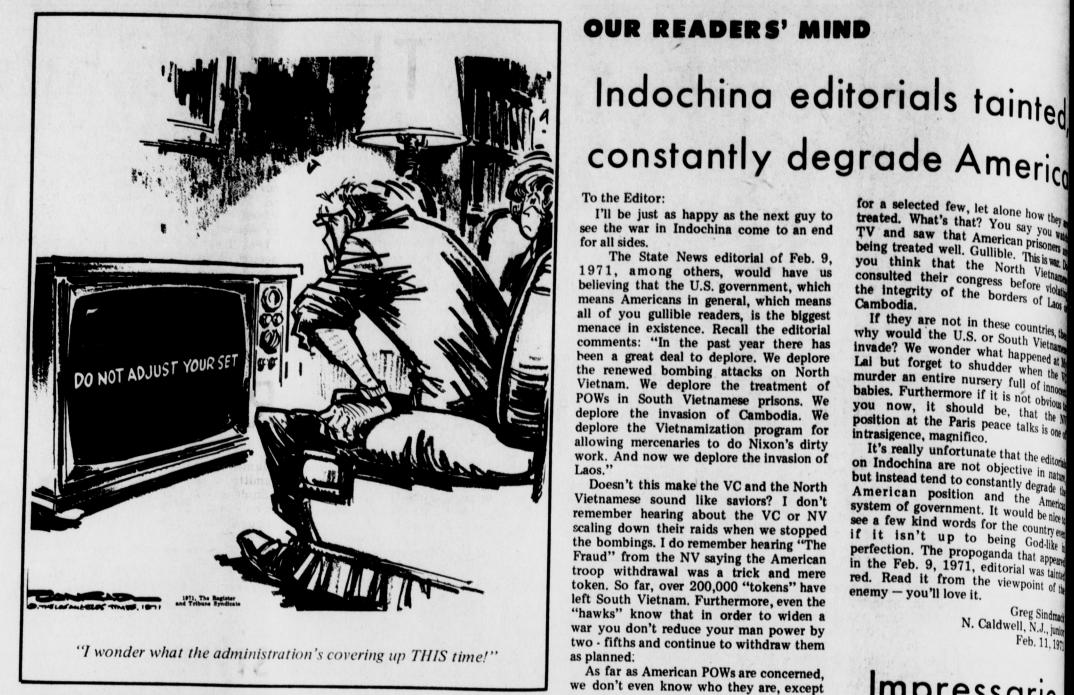

In a way, it came as no surprise. We have known all along that the CIA was cloak - and - daggering its way across Indochina without regard to race, creed, color, etc. But few people realized or at least comprehended, the extent of its influence.

The Cooper - Church amendment has gone the way of the Maginot line: a nice idea, but not workable and all too easily outmaneuvered. What is the difference between "ground troops" and CIA gun toting "civilians." What is the significance of Laotian neturality when the United States through the CIA is maintaining a Royalist army - and bombing not only the Ho Chi Minh trail but also the central interior of Laos itself?

There is fear now among the people of the United States. Previously, the Indochina war was a comparatively small Korea - type skirmish posing no threat to the Americas and easily ignored. But it keeps expanding - has expanded into China's own backyard with no sign of cessation in sight.

Query? What would be the Washington's reaction were Peking to undertake massive saturation bombing of Ontario? Laos bears the same relationship to China.

ANTI-WAR RALLY

Protest groups organize efforts

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following statement was released by the Coordinating Committee to End U.S. Involvement in Indochina.

A great deal of cynicism and frustration has evolved out of the antiwar movement because of incomplete planning, lack of organization and disunity. The following is the first step to ending those problems that have plagued previous efforts. For those people who say, "The antiwar effort is dead and that only general apathy prevails;" - a realization must be made that the only people who are apathetic are themselves.
On Feb. 8, 1971, "The Emerge

Planning Committee to Protest the Invasion of Laos" was formed. Its function was to publicize and make available a public facility at which action plans to bring about the end of American aggression in Southeast Asia could be presented by various activist groups in opposition to the war effort.

A rally was held Thursday, Feb. 11, 1971. From this rally evolved the "Coordinating Committee to End U.S. Involvement in Indochina." The committee's purpose is to register and make readily available information of groups, action plans and/or individuals against armed aggression in Southeast Asia. Also, to lend support, action and technical aid to this end.

Re: Steve Elliston's review of Es Ludewig's recital: Mr. Elliston has a basic misconceptiond the reviewer's art. It would be assumed that the audience present at such a recital has some knowledge of or interest in the program; this leaves the reviewer free to comment on the performance itself, & Elliston's comments reveal only his music opinions, and give us no notion of Mis Ludewig's talents as a musician. We would prefer to retain our own opinions of the music itself; thus the view is of no value whatsoever.

Miss Ludewig should be congratulated for her generosity to the University community in presenting music which is rarely heard live or in records performance. Is it the reviewer's place to ascertain the fitness of music for performance? Must an intelligent audience (especially one which refrains from applauding after every movement, and allows the musician some expression of musical continuity) be condemned to her only such music as Mr. Elliston deems fr for our ears?

d Hosp

Some contemporaries of Beethove found his music quite unberable, but time and repeated performance have argued against that opinion. It seems rather late for Mr. Elliston to criticize "classical" music. E.T.A. Hoffman once stated that music is romantic and that music which called classical is only that more distant from the listener's experience. Robert Ehrlich

TRB FROM WASHINGTON

Hanoi not just innocent bystander

WASHINGTON, D.C. - The New American Revolution (whose 4th of July is Jan. 22) was in its third week, and we were listening to a group of big city mayors telling Congress how broke they were. It was a busy week. Washington editors of Time and Newsweek were practically standing on their heads trying to decide whether to build cover stories on the moon landing, or on the Laos takeoff (both magazines chose Laos), and here were these mayors shaking their tin cups and uttering pathetic cries of poverty. Nobody paid

We always thought big city mayors were a kind of Last Hurrah type, but they're not; they are as respectable as Rotarians. There were tall and short mayors, fat and lean mayors . . . Chicago's Daley, powerful and ponderous; New York's Lindsay, lithe and spirited. And they said, for God's sake, get us some money. Money?, answered the senators, what money?

You see, when America set out to rescue Vietnam, attention shifted to the world view, and domestic matters were neglected. Mayors were just stepchildren.

The mayors said their cities are broke; they are laying off hospital orderlies, probation officers, watchmen and garbage collectors. San Francisco's Alioto said that when he advertised for 32 street - sweepers, 8,000 applicants showed up and some stayed all night. Now the due bills for America's accumulated domestic neglect are coming in all over the country, all at once. Critics of the war warned that this might happen; that it might bring a backlash of isolationism. But nobody listened to the nattering nabobs of negativism.

Complicated

The problem is complicated by the disparity of income in America. Herman P. Miller, an authority on the subject in the U.S. Census Bureau, spells it out in "Rich Man, Poor Man" ($8.95, Crowell). Between 1965 and 1968 the real weekly wages of a worker with three dependents, after Social Security and income taxes, he says, went up by exactly 8 cents. Inflation took the rest. In other words, three years went by without a raise in takehome pay - and that during a period of peak employment. No wonder they vote against more taxes.

Nearly everyone professes a desire to clean up the environment, reduce crime, diminish racial tensions and correct other domestic problems, Miller notes drily, but few seem willing to pay the price.

The gap between rich and poor in America hasn't changed much, Miller says. Yes, we are all getting more money, but the disparity remains. Back in 1941 the lowest fifth of the population was getting only four per cent of the income and it's getting four per cent now. Miller is pretty bland about it, but he implies that America never would have discovered poverty if it hadn't been for increased black militancy. "It followed a prolonged period of marches, sit-ins and other forms of protest by the Negro community," he says.

What surprises us is that with five or six million unemployed, the country continues to receive 400,000 immigrants annually, plus a lot who slip over the borders, and there is almost no discussion about it. One estimate is that a million Mexicans are in the country illegally. Many immigrants compete for low - paid jobs. In Newark, unemployment reaches 30 per cent for black youths at the present time (the mayors told Congress last week) yet nobody suggests that immigration should be reduced. Mill owners will probably get Congress to put higher quotas on shoe and textile imports before long but there is no lobby for the poor in the city trying to tighten up quotas on imports of competitive labor.

Activist phase Meanwhile, Washington is watching the developing political situation. Mr. Nixon has entered an aggressively activist phase which is likely to last right up to the election. Before long we shall get his State of the World speech which presumably will explain what a good idea it was to go into Laos. The New American Revolution has been launched in a storm of hyperbole and Mr. Nixon wihtout apparent difficulty has switched from attacking deficit financing to extolling it as a Keynesian.

It has caused some eye - rubbing. "What we have trouble grasping, though," remarked the Wall Street Journal acerbly, "is the President's decision to wrap all of this in messianic rhetoric that stirs discordant memories . . . It all seems to us close to a repudiation of what the first two Nixon years were all about." But the midterm election and the polls showed that the Administration wasn't doing very well and needed a change of style. We think Mr. Nixon has another revelation that he will save till next year. The great problem today is, where's the money coming from? States, cities, counties are all up to their necks in IOUs. There are authoritative hints that Mr. Nixon has in his hat a real nifty, a European fiscal device, the painless "value added" national sales tax.

The great beauty about this is that you can't see it, that it raises piles of money, and that it falls upon the many rather than the few so that rich people are not likely to get worked up about it. There is a myth in America anyway, as Herman Miller points out, that our taxes are progressive (i.e., are graduated to fall most heavily on the rich). The fact is, he explains, "that our tax structure is not very progressive." Yes, there is "some" progressivity in federal income taxes, he says (though they are full of loopholes). But "state and local taxes are regressive from beginning to end."

The value added tax will fit charming into this system. It was invented in Europe by countries which couldn't get citizens to pay income taxes. At each stage of production a tax is placed on the value that has been added at that stage to the article, all the way from ore to auto. Each company in the ladder has a venomou determination to get the one below it to pay its full tax. When the article if completed the full pyramided tax falls of the purchaser, and he can't pick out any special person to blame. It's as dreamy the oil depletion allowance and the bonus to corporate farmers not to raise crops The understanding is here that our new treasury secretary, John Connally, is to sel the great reform.

Stumbling cagers look for win at Indiana

By JOHN VIGES State News Sports Writer

Halfway through the conference race MSU Basketball Coach Gus Ganakas finds himself with a team that plays halfway good games. And, a halfway good game will not earn the Spartans a revenge victory when they travel to Indiana to face the Hoosiers

The game will be broadcast over radio stations WKAR-FM and WILS beginning at 7:30 p.m.

MSU has played some very good basketball throughout the year, but they have had trouble playing it consistently. Against Minnesota the Spartans had a fine second half but it was chained to a miserable first half. The Spartans scored four more baskets than the Gophers but lost 19 points to Minnesota in foul shooting.

Against Indiana last week, the Spartans came up with a good shooting night but the Spartans, usually tough on the boards, were annihilated by the Hoosiers in the rebounding. MSU played well most of the game but a letdown at the end of the first half gave Indiana four points, three more than the margin of victory. If MSU is going to make up for its 71-70 loss to Indiana on the Hoosiers' home court, it will have to bring together all the good points of its game and leave the others behind in East Lansing. A distinct improvement will be necessary in the rebounding department. The Spartans were outrebounded, 39-19, in the first meeting of the two teams and Ganakas may make some lineup changes to get the needed heighth and strength into the game.

"We haven't gotten any support for Bill Kilgore on the boards," Ganakas said. "Bill has done a great job but he can't be expected to do it all."

Ganakas indicated that sophomore Jeff VanderLende would see a good deal of action and might start the game. The 6-7 center has been a spot player throughout the season, one who has been just a step away from the starting lineup according to Ganakas.

VanderLende will add some much needed height to the Spartan five and he is able to play forward as well as center. Against the powerful Hoosiers, Ganakas wants all the height possible to hold off the rebounding combination of George McGinnis, Steve Downing and Joby Wright.

VanderLende should add some height and the muscle will come from another sophomore, Brad Van Pelt. The 220-pound forward came into the game against Indiana and did a credible job of defending against McGinnis.

Although Van Pelt only managed to secure one rebound himself, he kept McGinnis off the boards better than anyone he all year. The Indiana super - soph managed to get only the rebounds, 12 less than his season average and he scored only a

The Spartans will have to prevent a repeat of their performance. against Minnesota where they fell behind early and could no slow the game down.

"Indiana impressed me with their road wins against us an Iowa," Ganakas said. "When we go down there we hope we ca stay close and pull it out at the end of the game."

DENVER SPLIT THIS TIME

Icers can't buy a sweep

By RICK GOSSELIN State News Sports Writer

It's hard to accept a loss when you win on the road on the first night and come back the next night and lose in overtime.

It's even harder to accept it when you are ahead by two goals with seven minutes left in at bay until Gagnon, Thompson on to the lead. And it's hardest to accept when you're playing against Denver: a school that nation.

Pioneers over last weekend.

An excellent defensive game gave the Spartans the first game. and kept MSU within range of capturing the second encounter. Led by goaltender Jim Watt and defenseman Dan Finegan, the out of reach.

Watt was nothing short of in November. prides itself on hockey and is fantastic on both nights, making ranked number three in the upwards of fifteen genuinely superb saves. Many a time could But the MSU hockey team a Denver player be found with can only look back to a dream his stick hoisted triumphantly in of what it could have, and the air, only to see Watt slowly

"Still the best" was Spartans after seeing all of the WCHA's remaining in the first period of goaltenders at one time or another in action this season.

Keeping Watt company and making life miserable for the Pioneers in the Spartan zone was defenseman Dan Finegan, who Spartans kept the Denver skaters excelled in clearing the puck away from on rushing forwards. the game and you just can't hold and Co. could put the first game Finegan has shown steady development as a defenseman since winning a starting job early

"Danny is by far the most improved player we've got," Bessone said. "He's not a flashy type, just a steady player. He really works hard, and all that he should have, done to the rise from atop of the puck in the has done this season he has done on personal desire and drive."

> The Spartans forwards did Coach Amo Bessone's comment their part in probing for Denver on Watt after the series, and weaknesses. With six minutes the first game, Gilles Gagnon cut loose with the blistering slap shot from the blue line that beat Pioneer netminder John McWilliams cleanly. McWilliams never even made a move at the shot. From that point on, the Spartans rained long slap shots on the Denver goalie, hoping to take advantage of the obvious McWilliams weakness revealed.

On the second night, Frank DeMarco burned McWilliams on a slap shot from the blue line, but that was the lone long range shot to do so. The Spartans were continually frustrated in having their shots fly over top of the net, managing only 18 shots on the Pioneer net during the second night of action.

The split left the Spartans alone in third place, behind Michigan Tech and the two teams tied for second rung, Denver and Wisconsin.

Where'd it go?

Fencers split 2 meets

By CRAIG REMSBURG State News Sports Writer

The MSU fencing team might have won the battle over the weekend, but there is no doubt that they lost the war.

The Spartans defeated a good Wisconsin Parkside team, 14-13, but were blasted by the University of Wisconsin, 20-7 in a dual meet at Kenosha, Wis., poor 2-16 in their bouts. making their record 6-3 for the
