Judge denies appeal to halt required proof of residency

By STEVE ALLEN RICK WILBINS

Circuit Court Judge Ray C. Hotchkiss denied a request by four East Lansing residents for an injunction to stop the City of East Lansing from requiring proof of plaintiffs, called the ruling "unconstitutional, neglecting due process and equal protection under law." Ferency argued that the office of city clerk had no right under the law to require identification. He said election officials of East Lansing have assumed authority which exists neither under the Constitution or state statutes.

Ferency contended that swearing under an oath to the truth of an affidavit a registrant fills out should be sufficient.

Daniel Learned, East Lansing city attorney, argued that the issue was whether city clerks are entitled to ask for documentary evidence of identification and residency so that only qualified voters will be registered.

He said the city felt the evidence requirement was reasonable so that votes of unqualified people would not dilute the votes of qualified people.

Judge Hotchkiss, in denying the injunction request, said the issue was how many times different individuals are registered to vote in how many different students not only voted in their home towns, but also Holt and East Lansing.

When contacted Sunday, neither Beverly Colizzi, East Lansing city clerk, norBernard Appol, state elections director, said they knew of any instances of such duplicate registration.

"I cannot think of one offhand," Mrs. Colizzi said, while Appol stated, "I don't know of any.'

Clarifying his criticism of Hotchkiss' ruling being a denial of due process and equal protection under law, Ferency pointed out that the present situation gives city clerks a free hand in establishing registration requirements, with the stringency of those requirements varying from city to city.

"With all due respect to Judge Hotchkiss, I think he either misunderstood the case we presented him or was sidetracked by other cases that were inapplicable to our case," Ferency added.

Ferency said that while Hotchkiss was concerned about duplication of voter registration, every registration official finds out where the registrant last registered and notifies that city clerk.

Ferency said Hotchkiss used as a precedent a case where an individual was registered in one city while living in another. In that case the ruling stated that mere intention to live in a city is not enough legal reason to register there.

However, Ferency pointed out that in this case the four plantiffs, Audrey Jean Gunn, Kathleen Walk, Calvin Jensen and Scott Hanson, were physically residing in

Office of Black Affairs (OBA) spokesman Forest McCants Thursday explained the reasons for the OBA's recent purchase of $612.30 worth of stereo

McCants said the equipment would allow the OBA to develop more contact with the University, particularly blacks on

The overall purpose behind the stereo equipment acquisition, McCants said, was to "work with problems facing the black people on this campus." "With this equipment we will be able to make audio tapes of poetry and music. We plan to combine these tapes with slide presentations and sometimes pantomime to get across our messages," he said.

McCants said OBA plans to present slide audio productions starting in fall at convocations in campus auditoriums open to all students.

According to McCants, the Instructional Media Center and the Center for Urban Affairs are working with OBA members.

training them in communicative techniques. The OBA will train its own people in the future for its communication programs, McCants said.

McCants explained that OBA purchased the stereo equipment, two tape recorders, one amp, one preamp and one record changer because, in the long run, purchasing the equipment would give the OBA more flexibility in its programming.

"If we rented the Instructional Media Center's equipment," McCants said, "we would have to use it on their time instead of our own. We would have to reserve times when we could use the equipment. Since we purchased the equipment, we can use it any time we want to. If we want to make tapes at midnight, we can do it."

Renting the equipment probably would not have been a viable alternative for the OBA, according to Dave Lockwood, coordinator of distribution services for the Instructional Media Center.

"It would cost them $110 a month to rent that equipment from us," Lockwood

Homosexuals describe gay life as normal

By JIM SHELDON State News Staff Writer

homosexuals, all MSU students, ed last week that "outside of going to with guys," gay people get up in the ming, go to work, come home and eat er and generally lead lives similar to persons in the East Lansing

nly persons unsure about their own in society are "uptight" about the ect, they said, and homosexuality for is simply the natural way to be. teve, Tim and Mike, along with current wests Bill and Guy, live together in a house close to campus. Along with admitted heterosexuals also staying in house, the group spoke freely and laced their uninhibited discussion with insights into the gay world.

Homosexuals may travel in certain circles, but no two gay persons are alike and cannot be stereotyped, the group agreed. As with heterosexuals, homosexuals each have their own

In a way, Steve maintained, a natural empathy exists among homosexuals who identify themselves as part of the gay community. Steve said he could go almost anyplace, find a group of homosexuals and characteristics and viewpoints, they added.

have a place to stay at night. He said the MSU Gay Liberation Movement attempts to show outsiders that homosexuals are real people, not figments of the imagination, who deserve the same consideration and job opportunities as "straights." Gay Lib helps to erase "rotten-sinner" guilt feelings by establishing identity and pride among homosexuals, Steve continued. It is for many a way to make contacts from the outside through an organization which is "politically stodgy" and publishes no literature - at least not

Bill said the movement can be a "big mind-easer" since many persons find out from contacts in Gay Lib that they are not homosexuals as they originally believed.

Only Bill and Guy have yet to tell their families they are gay. The others said their families knew; their mothers, who suspected it all along, were the first to find out. Their families are learning to accept the fact, although Steve said his father is still hoping for a cure.

Mike said his mother originally cried, took him to a psychiatrist and told him to find his own schooling funds. Steve said his mother knew, when he almost flunked out once, that he had a problem with either "girls, drugs or queers." Tim's mother said, "What else is new?" when he broke the news, he said.

All five asserted that their backgrounds had nothing to do with their homosexuality, and they all considered their attraction to men, which surfaced throughout their lives, to be perfectly natural for them. They never believed they had a problem, so they never thirsted for the heterosexual life.

Bill, who dislikes the label "homosexual," said he is first a human being and is only gay in bed or on a date. Steve and others agreed that the homosexual man, as a person, identifies with other men.

"Straights" are never called on to hold panel discussions on heterosexuality in dormitories or to be interviewed by

"When were you asked when you realized you were a heterosexual?" someone queried.

Steve guessed there might be 4,000 homosexuals on campus and said some persons are never really sure of themselves. A homosexual is anyone who says he is, he added; and Mike replied, "It's like being Jewish." Police patrol the Union grill, the group said, to survey couples and then go to the "john" and seduce persons. Only those "not refined in techniques" do things like this, a voice chuckled. The second floor Library restroom and the Men's Intramural Building steam room are other popular homosexual hang-outs, they said.

Several persons are arrested each month, usually after a policeman contacts them in a restroom, the group said. Police are worried that MSU homosexuals might have a corrupting influence on East Lansing teen-agers who occasionally drift over to

Second general accused

Rep. Robert H. Steele, R-Conn., who last week accused a South Vietnamese major general of being a narcotics trafficker, said Sunday that Gen. Ouane Rathikoune of the Royal Laotian army was another major drug trafficker in Southeast Asia.

Ouane was chief of staff of the Royal Laotian army until last Thursday, when he retired after 30 years of military service.

Steele made the accusation in a broadcast interview in New York.

Irish unity asked

Prime Minister Jack Lynch, speaking in Dublin on the 50th anniversary of the end of fighting with Britain, appealed to the British government Sunday to stop backing Belfast and work for the unity of the Emerald Isle.

He spoke against a background of violence on both sides of the border dividing the island. In Dublin heavy police forces patrolled the city to prevent counterdemonstrations on the anniversary by the illegal Irish Republican Army.

President Eamon de Valera, Irish freedom fighter once condemned to death by the British but now, at 88, frail and almost blind, attended Sunday's commemoration in the Garden of Remembrance in the heart of the city.

No word on arms

Nationalist China has received no information about a reported U.S. Defense Dept. proposal to President Nixon that American nuclear weapons stored in Okinawa be moved to Formosa, the foreign ministry in Taipei said Sunday.

A ministry spokesman, Wei Yu-Sun, also declined comment on the Nationalist government's probable reaction to such a proposal.

Western leaders skeptical

Some governors in the West are openly skeptical about how their thinly populated states would fare under President Nixon's federal revenue sharing program.

Democrat Mike O'Callaghan' of Nevada said he would want a "hold safe" clause that would protect states from losing funds they now get.

More of the skepticism came from Democrats gathering over the weekend in Moran, Wyo., for the four-day-long, 13-state Western Governors Conference that ends Thursday.

Lockheed loan questioned

Rep. William S. Moorhead, D-Pa., questioned Sunday whether the Nixon administration is dealing in good faith with Congress in its drive for a $250 million loan guarantee for the Lockheed Aircraft Corp.

In a speech prepared for the House, Moorhead accused the Defense Dept. of holding back information on how many big Lockheed L1011 airbuses would have to be sold for the program to be profitable.

"If the break-even point has crept up to well over 400 planes, as I suspect it has, then we in Congress ought to avoid backing this loan to Lockheed because the corporation does not stand a snowball's chance in hell of selling 400 to 500 L1011's," Moorhead said.

Nixon reaches new low

Public confidence in President Nixon has reached a new low, according to the two most recent Gallup polls. They indicate that 48 per cent of Americans approve his performance in office.

The polls show Nixon's current rating to be below that recorded for his four predecessors at a comparable point in time during their administrations.

After 29 months in office, Lyndon B. Johnson's approval rating was 57 per cent; John F. Kennedy's was 61 per cent; Dwight D. Eisenhower's was 69 per cent, and Harry S. Truman's was 55 per cent, Gallup said.

Hart applauds 18-year-old vote

By STEVE ALLEN State News Staff Writer

Sen. Philip A. Hart, D - Mich., said he had "mixed feelings" about students registering to vote in their college town in an interview following his talk at a Democratic party voter registration workshop held Saturday in the Union.

Secretary of State Richard H. Austin, following Hart to the speaker's platform, explained the responsibilities of his office in voter registration and repeated his call for four - year voter registration rolls.

Hart said there are good arguments for and against allowing students to vote in college towns.

"I think you have to resolve your doubts this way: if the fullest participation possible is a healthy end, then the greatest ease should be the goal," he said.

"If the student lives nine months in city A and three months in city B, then you can make a good argument that he should vote where he lives nine months a year.

"There is the immediate counterargument that students have no obligation to local government.

"Of course, these people are also affected by city government. I think you'd have to wind up saying both sides make sense. How you resolve it, the hell if I know," he said.

Hart added that, for statewide and national elections, allowing students to vote in college towns makes sense.

In his address to the voter registration workshop, Hart said that "the party and the country will be better, I have no doubt" because of the 18 - year - old vote. Hart complimented the young people for asking the hard questions about the quality of American life. "Many of you are moving in the right direction," Hart said to the young people. "You've identified the question, now where is the will to get the money to do it?" Resplendent in his six - month growth of beard, Hart added, "If anybody here is convinced the young vote is Democratic or antiadministration, I suspect they may be correct."

Hart encouraged the young people to participate actively in politics but to "do it in a tone that will not outrage all us old

In a question and answer session after his address, Chuck Will, candidate for East Lansing City Council, asked Hart about his refusal to hold hearings on the Justice Dept.'s failure to file antitrust charges against General Motors.

Hart said, "(Ralph) Nader asked me to hold a hearing on why the Dept. of Justice had not filed antitrust charges against GM. We have never undertaken Senate hearings on whether the Justice Dept. should take action. I wish I knew what to do about this; I'm not really sure. Hearings may make more trouble than there

"I like to think I'm not backing off because of GM's political economic power." Hart added.

Will also questioned Hart about the consolidation of energy sources and American involvement in Pakistan.

Hart said that his antitrust committee held the first hearings on the common ownership of energy sources. He added that he was "a signatory of the letter circulating in protest" of our policy in Pakistan.

Will was then prevented from asking further questions unrelated to the question of voter registration.

"Actually my questions were very closely related to voter registration," Will said. "I feel there is no difference between the two major political parties. If people also feel there is no difference, they will neither vote or register."

Austin said he favors leaving voters' names on registration rolls for four years before removing them if they have not voted in that time. The present policy leaves voters' names on the rolls for only two years if they do not vote. Austin also said he encourages further use of a plan being used in Detroit which allows voters to register at the secretary of state's local offices.

The Michigan Senate approved a House - passed "no-fault" vorce bill Friday permitting persons to file for divorce in ichigan on the sole grounds that the marriage has irreparably

Passed by a 22 - 12 vote, the bill will now be returned to the ouse for approval of several minor amendments.

The bill, introduced March 24, is designed to replace the ment divorce law that requires that one party must prove the ther at fault for the marriage's failure.

Current law provides for divorce on the grounds of extreme cruelty, adultery, desertion, drunkenness, physical incompetence at the time of marriage or imprisonment of one party for more

The bill approved by the Senate Friday will allow circuit courts to terminate marriages when "there has been a breakdown of the marriage relationship to the extent that the objects of matrimony have been destroyed and there remains no reasonable likelihood that the marriage can be preserved."

"Our current divorce laws provide a framework for blackmail and extortion," Sen. Daniel Cooper, D - Oak Park, said. "The skill of an attorney in divorce proceedings today is judged on his ability to extract for his client the most amount of money out of the person who wants the divorce."

Under the no - fault bill, alimony, child support and division of property would be considered separately from the divorce action

Cooper said the bill will help remove "sham and fraud" from divorce along with outright perjury and private detectives' antics in seeking evidence for divorce action.

Sen. Basil Brown, D - Highland Park, supported Cooper's argument that the bill will reduce perjury in divorce proceedings. "If one partner says, 'It's all over,' it's over. Why not let them go their separate ways?" Brown said.

The bill's 12 opponents argued that a no - fault clause would contribute to the state's rising divorce rate.

"This is just one more example of what we're doing to create a study conducted by the Office 57.8 hours for assistant licentious, libertarian society," Sen. Gary Byker, R - Hudsonville,

"The new statute would not increase the number of family breakdowns but would merely provide for a more just and less traumatic process for legally terminating marriages which in fact are already dead," the commission said.

Minutes after Senate approval, Gov. Milliken enthusiastically endorsed the measure.

"I am very much in favor of moving in that direction," he said. "I haven't seen all the details yet, but I expect to be able to

EDITORIALS Abortion reform battle: remember your allies

Just a couple weeks ago it appeared that abortion reform had been condemned to an inglorious death in the House Social Services Committee. Now, however, by act of conscience or fear of ballot box - 18 year - olds now vote and are, seemingly, overwhelmingly pro abortion - Senate Bill No. 3 may yet be decided by the representatives of the citizens of Michigan.

Yet, even if the legislature refuses to honor the will of the people, abortion reform will not be utterly lost. The Michigan Coordinating Committee for Abortion Law Reform is already laying groundwork for an initiative petition drive to compel the bill's consideration. If the elected representatives still refuse passage, the item will be placed on a ballot for state referendum at the next general election. In such a grassroots campaign the power of the 18 - year - old vote would be Still, we agree with House abortion reform floor leader Richard J. Allen, R-Ithaca, in hoping that an initiative petition will not be necessary - not only because of the potential divisiveness of the issue, but also because of the legislative abdication that it will represent.

Clearly, the jockeying for position on the House abortion showdown is in full swing. Now is the time when legislators must be seriously rethinking their former stands. Therefore it is essential that early abortion reform supporters be urged to remain resolute in their stance and, thereafter, that they encourage others to join their camp.

The following members of the Michigan House of Representatives recently voted, albeit unsuccessfully, to discharge Senate Bill No. 3 from the thralldom of committee. They are, thus, clearly allies in the abortion reform battle. Write them and urge then to keep up the good

It is widely held, since Jessica Mitford's expose in Atlantic magazine, that Famous Writers School is not much more worthwhile than Sociology 241; its sister programs, Famous Artists School and Famous Photographers School, enjoy somewhat lower esteem.

I have, however, recently learned of a similar institution which, while promising its students similar seemingly grandiose miracles, comes across with results. As a service to you readers, herewith is reprinted an advertisement for the Famous Professors School:

OBA stereo purchase: money very well spent

At first glance the Office of Black Affairs' purchase of $612.30 worth of stereo equipment - two tape recorders, one amplifier, one preamp and one record changer - seemed like a serious abuse of students' ASMSU taxes.

Actually, however, the purchase could turn out to be the wisest investment made by any student government group this year. At the very least students will get an actual product from the OBA stereo equipment purchase: a series of documentary - like presentations about problems confronting all students, particularly blacks.

OBA is hard at work making tapes to provide the audio part of a number of slide/audio presentations to be shown this fall in campus auditoriums. These tapes will present a new angle into the troubles plaguing our society.

One tape which has already been made gets across the agony of drug addiction far more explicitly than any scare pamphlet ever will. The man's screams, his inner conflicts, his outward agony get across the real psychological horrors of drug addiction, the dark side of drugs so few people are really familiar with.

Additionally, the equipment provides the invaluable ability to help train blacks in the use of audio and broadcast media – a vital area in which minorities are woefully underrepresented. OBA has worked in close concert for some time with the Dept. of Communications toward this end. University equipment has been utilized when possible, but there are manifest problems involving portability and availability. The modest OBA purchase guarantees blacks virtual 24 hour access.

The OBA stereo equipment purchase will add one more channel to this campus' already impressive communications network. The OBA audio - visual approach will enhance the messages already being blurted daily by the State News, MSN, WKAR and closed circuit TV.

The improved campus communication will be well worth the $612.30 spent by the OBA.

This money instead of being wasted on floor bureaucracy will provide the students with an actual service, a visible product from their 50 cents a term tax.

Granted ASMSU needs pencils and papers to keep running, but it is nice for once to see student tax monies being invested in programs that will demonstrably help the students. ASMSU would do well to provide the students with more such services in the future.

Not too long ago Cotillion Records released an album called "Woodstock II." As a recording, the new product was actually better than the original. Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young were on key. Paul Butterfield showed "Love March" was the exception, not the rule; and even Canned Heat demonstrated competence.

However, the whole idea of recording a "Woodstock II" disturbed me. Last summer "Woodstock" keynoted the entire season. Everyone bought the album; everyone saw the movie at least three times. Everyone who was anyone living within 200 miles of a festival site last summer just had to be there.

People were making Woodstocks by the kilo, pound and ounce, and they were missing the whole point.

According to all the people I knew who went to the real, the one and only, happening - of - the - century Woodstock, what made Woodstock was not the music, not the dope, not the mere presence of hundreds of thousands of kids, but the way the dope, the music and the kids interacted. No fights, no hassles, just help

You can contract the best bands in the world and have the best facilities possible, but unless the people themselves have the Woodstock spirit, you aren't going to have any Woodstock.

Spirit has been lacking. Just look at the Pop Entertainment series. During the Havens' concert, everyone wanted to hear "Freedom." Why? Because it was on "Woodstock," and because nobody in that whole auditorium had ever heard any other Havens' numbers besides "Freedom."

And they wanted to hear Havens' music, not his rap. Havens said at one point that his rap was the music, but most of the audience missed the whole point.

Of course there were the bits with the matches and cigarette lighters when the lights were out. Where had we seen that

There we were making our own "Woodstock II" right there in Jenison. Openly smoking dope in the seats, just like at Woodstock. Catching the sounds of the heavy groups, just like at Woodstock. But then, when the concert was over, instead of sticking together, a community of 10,000 under one roof, we split, each in his own direction, still mildly ripped, fully knowing that if it hadn't been for the music and the dope, we would never have made the scene

— wherein lies the whole problem.
Woodstock is part of the proverbial scene, just like marches in Washington, D.C., Kentucky Derby Day and spring break in Florida. Whatever Woodstock might have been in August, 1969, has been reduced to no more than a hip status symbol. Under 30 folks go to rock festivals for the same reason their parents buy Cadillacs and go to Hawaii. The contradiction lies in that kids put their parents down for their status symbols, while ignoring the very same symptom within themselves.

PEANUTS

The notes in the Paul Kantner album said it best: "Make your own Woodstock, you aren't going to find it in a no-dope movie show.' Attempting to recapture an illusive, ethereal Woodstock at every waking hour defeats the whole purpose of life. Woodstock is strictly past tense; it is a new version of "the good old days." Woodstock and the proverbial good old days have much in common. What made the good old days good was the spontaneity, the communal spirit and the fact that they'll never be back again. In our own lives, instead of recreating past experiences, we look for new things to do. The same should apply to rock festivals. Instead of making Woodstocks, we should be seeking new methods of interaction. After the abortive Celebration of Life and the fiasco at the fairgrounds in Detroit, rock festivals will be no more signif than the end of the Edsel, the death of three - hour church service and the defun nickel cup of coffee. The end of festivals will mark only passing of time. Given the circumstan the potential for Woodstock is gone, the spirit which made Woodstock such phenomenon can still be captured on own time in smaller groups, perhaps of briefly, but long enough to let us know that the spirit is still within our reach.

Ferency noted that Hotchkiss broadly interpreted the statute in question, Sec. 168.499, which grants clerks the power "to require any applicant for registration to answer under oath any questions touching on his qualifications as an elector and . . . to administer oaths and to swear persons as to the truth of the statements contained in affidavits."

Under Hotchkiss' ruling, Ferency said, clerks could require documentation.

Ferency said he told the city council if they wanted the clerk to have that right they should go to the legislature. "It is improper for city clerks to assume that authority,' Ferency said. Ferency said there were several alternatives on how to proceed with the case after the denial, appeal being one. He added he was

New credit union

The MSU Employes Credit Union may have an extra office building if the proposed cross-campus highway is not built. The credit union erected the new building after being notified that its office would be demolished to make way for the highway.

Trustees' decision snarls new office building plans

The MSU Employes Credit Union may end up with an extra office building on its hands. After the Dept. of State Highways notified the credit union that its office building on Trowbridge Road would be demolished when a cross - campus highway was built, construction was begun at a new site south of the Manley Miles Building on Harrison Road.

However, the board of trustees rescinded their approval of the new highway in June, leaving the fate of the cross - campus highway in doubt.

And if the highway is not built, the present Credit Union Building would be permitted to remain, leaving the credit union with its present office building and the building now under construction.

However, Vern Severance, president of the board of directors of the credit union, said Friday that if the proposed highway is not built it would not be disastrous for the credit

"If something happens and the south campus highway does not go through, we have opportunities to lease or sell the present building," he said. Severance said that, at the time the construction of the new building was initiated, "East Lansing, MSU and the Dept. of State Highways had all approved the cross campus highway."

If an agreement is reached to go ahead with the proposed highway, the state will probably purchase the present credit union structure in early in 1972, he said.

LEGISLATION to establish an office of "Welfare Inspector General," designed to reduce the number of abuses of the state's welfare system, has been introduced in the Michigan House by Rep. Frederick L. Stackable, R-Lansing.

The office of Welfare Inspector General would receive and investigate complaints of fraud and abuses of the welfare program and the laws of this state, Stackable said. "There is no question in my mind that most people receiving assistance do so legally, however, I am equally certain that some welfare money is being fraudently acquired," he said.

GOV. MILLIKEN SIGNED a bill into law Friday which allows the state to continue its June spending levels through July.

The emergency bill, approved by the legislature last week, is intended to "buy time" for state legislators still wrestling with a new state budget.

A HOUSE-PASSED BILL which would require industry to report to the state what it discharges into the air offers "an unparalleled opportunity" to help reduce air pollution, Gov. Milliken said Friday.

The bill, which would also stiffen penalties for air pollution violations, was passed by the House Thursday night.

"We have an unparalleled opportunity in this bill to strengthen and extend the state's efforts in reducing air pollution from all significant sources," Milliken said.

"I urge the Senate to speed consideration of this measure which would allow us to implement the 'Truth in Pollution' concept for air pollution.'
