2 trees felled as project for campus road begins

By TERI ALBRECHT
State News Staff Writer

Intersection construction efforts are moving eastward. Construction is scheduled to begin in September on redesigning the Grand River Avenue - Collingwood Entrance intersection and extending Bogue Street across the railroad tracks out to the Life Sciences Building.

The program is part of an overall highway design by the University to improve the facilitation of traffic movement.

It includes the controversial work by the City of East Lansing altering the Michigan Avenue - Harrison Road intersection.

However, work at that intersection is currently tied up in a court fight initiated by area citizens contesting the environmental effects of the construction.

At least two healthy elms have been cut down to facilitate the road construction which has been planned for almost six years at the Collingwood Entrance.

Milton Baron, director of campus parks and planning confirmed Tuesday that the healthy trees were cut for the construction.

"The plans call for redesigning the intersection similar to the one at Abbott Road," Baron said. "The engineering plans will allow two lanes to enter from Grand River Avenue and three to leave, plus changing Physics Road to more of a right angle turn at the intersection."

No parking space will be lost on the East Circle Drive curve and the intersection will have more yield signs for the Physics Road crossover. signs

Baron could not comment on whether a memorial plaque on the island would be removed. The plaque commemorates Levi Taft, a professor, who in 1889 was the first man to use spraying as a device to control orchard diseases.

He added that the island will be replanted with flowering crab apple trees and dwarf greens.

Baron said he did not have the details of the plans with him outlining how many more trees would be cut, the amount of land involved and the total cost of the project. But previous estimates have set the project's cost at more than $70,000.

Jack Breslin, executive vice president and secretary of the board of trustees, said Tuesday the construction efforts on the Bogue Street extension tie 'into the cross - campus highway controversy.

"We would not have had to put a dime into that project had the route gone through, but it is necessary to allow campus traffic access from the northern part of campus to the medical complex," Breslin said.

The cross - campus route, which would have extended I-496 from Trowbridge Road to Grand River Avenue was vetoed by the board of trustees in 1971.

Uncertain future

The plaque which commemorates Levi Taft, ar. MSU professor, may have to be removed from a traffic island, when work is started in September on the Grand River Avenue - Collingwood Entrance intersection. Some work has been done, and at least two Elm trees have been removed.

Though dollar figures are not available, it appears that there could be some major redistributions of budgets between academic departments during the 1973-74 school year.

However, any changes that may be made depend on whether the board of trustees approves administration budget recommendations at their special meeting next Wednesday.

Provost John Cantlon would not discuss specific recommendations or dollar figures Tuesday because he said it would be inappropriate to discuss such figures before the board has an opportunity to discuss the budget.

Speaking on the budget generally, however, Cantlon said: "Depending on how you look at it, the budget is either a good one or a poor one."

"If you consider that there will be an across - the - board 6 per cent salary increase for faculty and administrative - professional personnel and if you remember the significant increases that the medical schools will be getting, then it is a very good budget," he said.

"However, if you consider the fact that, except for the medical schools, not one department will be getting any increases as 'add-ons,' as actually legislatively approved appropriated increases, then the budget isn't as good."

Excepting the medical schools, any increase departments may get will be from redistributions of other department monies.

"The money will go to where the student's are going," Cantlon said. "And where enrollment has leveled off or decreased those departments will not be getting increases."

Cantlon said departments and colleges such as agriculture, human ecology, and Lyman Briggs College would be getting increases, where colleges like arts and letters and James Madison College would receive decreases.

Agnew agrees to free records

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew said Tuesday he would make available to federal prosecutors personal records requested in a probe of alleged political corruption in Maryland.

In a letter to U.S. attorney George Beall in Baltimore, the vice president said the records may be inspected and copied at Agnew's office at any time by Beall or any of his assistants.

However, Agnew made clear that he was granting access only to his personal financial and income tax records sought by the prosecutor's office and not the official records of the vice president.

"You understand that, by making these records available to you, I do not acknowledge that you or any grand jury have any right to records of the vice president," Agnew declared.

"Nor do I acknowledge the propriety of any grand jury investigation of possible wrong doing on the part of the vice president so long as he occupies that office," he said. "These are difficult constitutional questions which need not at this moment be confronted."

Agnew also said he would cooperate fully with the prosecutors and would be happy to meet with them "for a personal interview so that I may answer any questions you may have."

Copies of Agnew's letter were given to newsmen by his office as the vice president's attorneys reportedly met in Baltimore with the prosecutor's staff.

Beall had asked Agnew to voluntarily turn over his financial and tax records dating back to 1967 for examination in connection with a federal grand jury investigation of possible violations of tax, bribery, extortion and conspiracy laws.

Meanwhile, President Nixon said through a spokesman that he wanted the federal investigators to take "all appropriate steps" in probing allegations that Agnew may have been involved in the alleged bribery and kickback scandal.

Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said Nixon was not intervening in the investigation and had not sought a report on it from the Justice Dept. and he denied reports that Nixon and Agnew had discussed the vice president's resignation. Those stories, as well as reports that Nixon opposes Agnew's turning his personal records over to the grand jury "are totally wrong," Warren insisted.

Agnew worked in his office on Tuesday but was unavailable for comment.

Beall held a news conference in his Baltimore office Tuesday at which he answered all questions with a "no comment." He wouldn't even identify individuals with whom he had appointments.

The chief justice of the U.S. District Court in Maryland told the Associated Press in an interview that a new presiding judge, probably from another state, will be assigned to the political corruption case, possibly as early as this week.

Pilots to make final bomb runs

PHNOM PENH (AP) — American pilots were assigned their targets in Cambodia for final strikes before the Congress - imposed bombing halt designed to get the United States out of its combat role in Indochina.

The halt was imposed beginning midnight Tuesday (EDT). That is 11 a.m. Wednesday in Phnom Penh, giving the U.S. warplanes time for a last morning of bombing runs before the end of their intensive eight - year air campaign in Indochina.

The 7.4 million tons of bombs and other explosives rained by the United States on Indochina since 1965 was three times the amount the United States used in World War II and 10 times the amount in the Korean War.

The bombing during recent months has been credited with a large role in keeping the Cambodian government of President Lon Nol in power.

Informed sources said Tuesday in Saigon that thousands of ethnic Cambodians living in South Vietnam, including some drawn from South Vietnamese army units, have been flown to Phnom Penh to help the Lon Nol government survive after the U.S. bombing ends.

The U.S. Embassy in Saigon and a spokesman for the South Vietnamese military denied the report.

The daily bombing of Cambodia for 6½ months, since 10 days after the January Vietnam peace agreement, had slowed but not stopped advances on Phnom Penh by Communist - led insurgents. U.S. bombing errors in the final weeks of intensive attacks also killed scores of civilians and government troops.

The last American raids included continual strikes around Phnom Penh's perimeter. An estimated 4,000 insurgents are massed for an attack west of the capital's international airport.

The fate of the capital of 1½ million, including thousands of refugees, was open to speculation. The antigovernment forces loosely surround Phnom Penh and control an estimated 80 per cent of the country militarily.

Premier In Tam of Cambodia vowed his government would "fight along with the people until the final victory, both militarily and politically."

New rules on welfare established

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secret state investigations of welfare applicants and recipients, abolished in the 1960s, were reestablished Tuesday by a new set of federal rules.

The Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare said the sweeping changes affecting relief eligibility determination, fair hearings and recovery of overpayments will help reduce errors costing taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars annually.

"The purpose of these regulations is to make sure welfare funds get to those in need, and to help restore the public's faith in our welfare system," said HEW Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger. "The longer large overpayments and payments to ineligible recipients continue, the more people in real need are deprived of funds intended for them."

The rules were bitterly contested by welfare organizations, recipients and legal aid groups who argued that return to secret probes might lead to harassment and invasion of privacy.

In response to those comments on the original April 20 proposals, HEW included a section which it said "restates that constitutional rights are to be observed and protected."

Robert B. Carleson, special welfare assistant to Weinberger, said another regulation to be proposed soon would allow states to act immediately in cases of suspected fraud.

Carleson said states had asked for many of the changes to enable them to reduce their rate of error in welfare caseloads and avoid threatened federal penalties of withholding matching funds.

U.S. denounces Israel

The United States Tuesday denounced Israel's forcing down of an Arab airliner as a "violation of the United Nations charter and of the rule of law in international civil aviation."

"Travel by air, as was travel by sea in an earlier age, must be insulated and protected from unlawful interference," Ambassador John Scalo told the U.N. Security Council. "It must no longer be a pawn in international conflicts."

Scalo thus made clear the United States would support Security Council condemnation of the interception of the plane last Friday night in an unsuccessful Israeli hunt for Palestinian guerilla leaders.

Outside the chamber, diplomats sought to work out a resolution that would command unanimous support from the 15-nation council. But the United States has objected to Egyptian and Soviet demands for sanctions against Israel and no acceptable compromise appeared close.

"They're bogged down in language," a Western diplomat told a newsmen.

A vote is not expected before Thursday.

Israeli Ambassador Yosef Tekoah accused the United Nations of a double standard in the Middle East and rejected any condemnation by the council while Arab terrorists go unpunished.

Skylab will finish mission

In a renewed burst of confidence Tuesday, space officials said Skylab 2 will be permitted to complete its record 59-day space mission. A rescue craft, it needed, will not be launched before Sept. 25.

A rocket and spacecraft that could be used to return the men of Skylab 2 to earth rolled to its launch pad at Cape Kennedy, Fla. on Tuesday morning.

But Skylab director William C. Schneider said the rescue craft won't be launched before Sept. 25, the day Skylab 2 was originally scheduled to end.

The belief among officials strengthened that no rescue flight will be needed and that the crippled Skylab 2 Apollo taxi craft will work well enough to bring the astronauts safely home.

Demonstrators arrested

Peace activists Daniel and Jerome Berrigan were among sixty demonstrators arrested Tuesday as they knelt at the White House.

Daniel Berrigan said the protest was over U.S. bombing in Cambodia "and a lot of deaths in Vietnam."

About 80 demonstrators waited among the tourists to get into the White House tours. They sang, "We Shall Overcome."

White House police did not stop the activists from going through the tourist gate. But most of the demonstrators stopped and knelt on the steps before entering the White House.

When one leader tried to address a gathering over a microphone, a White House guard warned its members to continue moving or leave the grounds, or face arrest.

VVAW trial recessed

The judge temporarily recessed the Gainesville Eight trial Tuesday after a juror fell ill. But he complained the proceedings were getting bogged down in lengthy questioning of witnesses by both sides.

U.S. District Court Judge Winston E. Arnow suspended the morning session of the trial of eight Vietnam Veterans Against the War, which is in its third week. The antiwar activists are accused of plotting violence to disrupt the 1972 Republican National convention.

Arnow sent Lois Hensel, 40, to her physician after she complained of dizziness and nausea.

Arnow said he wanted to consult with her doctor before deciding if Hensel should remain on the jury. He later recessed the trial until 9 a.m. Wednesday to give Hensel "more time to rest."

Kent State witnesses found

The Justice Dept. has been told that several Kent State University students can identify the National Guardsman who fired the first shot in the 1970 campus shootings, a knowledgeable congressional source said Tuesday.

House committee investigators have turned over to the department reports of interviews with some 60 individuals who witnessed various parts of the confrontation, including those who say they can identify the guardsman, the source reported.

The material also included film showing free lance photographer Terrance B. Norman handing a pistol to a campus policeman and another film showing the group of guardsmen firing upon the students.

The latter is believed to be the only existing movie film which shows the actual shootings.

Contest prize: 4,000 'nice' letters

By BECKIE HANES
State News Staff Writer

A "nice letter each day for 4,000 consecutive days" is the promised prize for the two winners of a new contest called the "Best 10-Word Sentence contest."

The judge in the contest and also the writer of the 8,000 letters to the two winners started the contest because he wants mail and responsibility.

Everyone who enters a letter in the contest is considered a winner.

"However, one fella and one gal will become special winners," the rules state.

Who has the time to write these letters?

Evidently John J. Desmond Jr. who is a prisoner in a U.S. penitentiary on McNeil Island, Wash.

The State News found out about the contest when a staff writer answered a letter from Desmond who offered a "super sensational idea which is sure to interest all of you" if a staff member merely wrote him a letter.

The State News receives on the average five letters a term from prisoners asking someone to write to them.

Desmond responded to the State News reply with return of a five-page letter outlining his project. In fact, the reporter who answered his letter was made the national chairman of his contest.

In his second letter, Desmond says that the winners will "at least... know that someone cares."

There are no age restrictions to the contest that ends Oct. 8, 1973. The 10-word sentence can be on any subject, but only one entry per letter or postcard is allowed. All entries are to be sent to: Desmond 19491, Box 1000, Steilacoom, Wash., 98388.

On Oct. 8, 1973, Desmond will begin the grand prize of 4,000 consecutive days of nice letters to "one fella and one gal" who write the two best sentences.

And one of the rules is that Desmond promises to be a good judge.

On page three of Desmond's letter are five suggestions for the national chairman to follow. He guarantees it will be a fascinating experience and concludes the suggestions with "Trust me."

"I'm convinced that a few students using their resources and ingenuity at MSU could bring a bit of happiness to many people in this country," Desmond writes.

In contrast to Desmond's longhand-written letter is a form letter which comes with all prisoners' mail from McNeil Island. It explains the procedure for corresponding with a prisoner and how any letter to a prisoner is regularly inspected. The official letter reminds the reader that not only is a prisoner's life restricted, but his correspondence also.

COLBURN'S COUNCIL POST

Members discuss vacancy

By JIM BUSH
State News Staff Writer
Few names are being mentioned, but East Lansing political leaders have begun to consider who they will seek to get appointed to Councilman George Colburn's now vacant seat.

Colburn, 35, ended a rash of speculation Monday by resigning from council, effective immediately, in a letter to City Manager John M. Patriarche. Colburn's brother, Neal, had announced Sunday that Colburn would resign within six weeks.

Council members are not naming names, but acknowledge that local residents have already suggested possible successors to Colburn, who reportedly on a Chicago-area newspaper.

Colburn was unavailable for comment Tuesday. Neal Colburn said he had gone to the West Coast for the rest of the month.

Councilwoman Mary Sharp said Tuesday 10 names had been suggested to her, but she would not name the suggested appointees.

"I've been thinking that maybe we ought to request input from citizens on the kind of person we should select," Sharp said.

The remaining four council members under city law have 30 days from the formal receipt of Colburn's resignation — which will come at council's Tuesday meeting — to name his successor, by at least a 3-1 vote.

Sharp said the 10 names suggested to her include several "young men," who, she believes are "more conservative than I feel George's successor should be."

Another councilman, Robert Wilcox, said two names had been suggested to him to succeed Colburn. "I'd like George's successor to be a person who has some business sense, who knows the economics of taxation," Wilcox said. He added that he did not want Colburn's successor to hold an "extremely left or extremely right" political viewpoint.

Mayor Wilbur Brookover would not comment on who he would like to see succeed Colburn. Councilman George Griffiths was unavailable for comment.

Al Clobridge, campaign manager for Nelson Brown and Margaret McNeil, who, with Sharp and John Polomsky, are seeking two vacant council seats in November, said a coalition of liberal groups will meet soon to discuss asking council to make their deliberations over Colburn's successor public.

Clobridge is also a member of the Coalition for Human Survival, the Convention for a Responsible Council and East Lansing Democrats. He said he was speaking for all four groups.

Sources familiar with East Lansing politics have suggested that residents such as former Mayor Gordon Thomas; two unsuccessful 1971 council candidates Duane Bone and Max Philips; Neal Colburn; Ann Silverman, who worked in state Rep. Lynn Jondahl's 1972 campaign; Betty Duley, who served in the local McGovern campaign and Elinor Holbrook, a new member of East Lansing's Planning Commission, may be considered for Colburn's seat.

Grand jury takes up mass murder hearings

HOUSTON, (AP) — A grand jury investigating the largest case of mass murder in recent American history returned indictments against two teenagers allegedly involved in the Houston torture-sex case slayings.

State District Court Judge Noah Kennedy announced the indictments against Elmer Wayne Henley, 17, and David Owen Brooks, 18, after the grand jury met for 6½ hours.

Henley was charged in the indictments in the July 27 shooting death of Charles Cary Cobble, 17, and the strangulation of Marty Ray Jones, 18, on the same day.

Brooks and Henley were jointly charged in the July 10 strangulation of William Ray Lawrence, 15.

The bodies of Cobble and Jones were found with 15 others in a boat shed in Houston. Lawrence's body was recovered near Lake Sam Rayburn in east Texas.

Twenty-seven bodies have been recovered by authorities from three locations since last Wednesday.

The grand jury first heard from two police detectives working on the case which involves 27 victims. The boy, identified as Billy Ridinger, was to testify later.

What information has been available about Ridinger comes from a signed statement by David O. Brooks, 18, one of two charged in the slayings.

In his statement to police, Brooks said: "I was present at that address... when they got Billy Ridinger. I took care of him while he was there. And I believe the only reason he is alive now is that I begged them not to kill him."

Ridinger's testimony before the grand jury may shed more light on how so many young people were lured to the suburban Pasadena home of Dean Allen Corll, 33, who allegedly masterminded the ring.

Nixon to give national address on Watergate scandal tonight

By GAYLORD SHAW
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Nixon will make his nationally broadcast address on the Watergate scandal at 9 p.m. (EDT) tonight, the White House announced Tuesday.

The President's long-awaited response to allegations flowing from the political conspiracy controversy will be delivered live from his Oval Office. It will be 20 to 30 minutes in length, a presidential spokesman said.

At the same time, officials said, Nixon will release a more detailed written statement giving his account of the events that have spurred widespread investigations by Congress and the executive branch.

The address, to be carried by all the national television and radio networks, will be Nixon's first extensive response since May 22 to the scandal that has shaken his administration.

As Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren announced the time and format of Nixon's speech, the President was in his hideaway Executive Office Building suite putting the finishing touches on what's ranked as the most important speech in his quarter century of public life.

Warren would not give details of the address, but other sources indicated it would include these major elements:

• A denial by Nixon that he was aware of plans to bug the Democratic National Committee's headquarters at the Watergate, or that he was aware of or participated in the subsequent cover-up.

• A concession that he discounted allegations that White House and re-election committee officials were involved in the scandal because his subordinates told him a thorough investigation had turned up no such involvement.

• A review of his first-term accomplishments, coupled with an urgent plea to the American people to join him in overcoming the scandal's impact by pressing ahead toward the goals of lasting peace abroad and an end to inflation at home.

The address is expected to touch on offshoots of the Watergate controversy — such as 1971 break-in of Pentagon Papers figure Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office.

Station refuses to run programs

By BECKIE HANES

State News Staff Writer
WJIM-TV, Channel 6, Lansing's local CBS affiliate, announced Monday night that it would not run the "Sticks and Bones" drama and a rerun of a two-part "Maude" program because of their controversial nature.

The two network programs will be carried by Detroit's WJBK-TV, Channel 2, however.

"Sticks and Bones" is an adaptation of the Tony Award-winning contemporary drama about the relationship between a blind American veteran of the Vietnam War and his family.

The show was first scheduled to be broadcast March 9, but CBS president Robert Wood decided it would be shown at a later date. The reason cited for the postponement was the return home of Vietnam POWs at that time.

Half of CBS's 198 affiliates refused then to show the program, including WJBK in Detroit.

James H. Gross, president of WJIM, said in a statement released Tuesday, "We thoroughly reviewed the 'Sticks and Bones' drama when it was first offered several months ago and declined to accept it.

"We see no reason to reverse that initial decision. In our judgment, the mordant, allegorical treatment of delicate, sensitive subjects would be perceived as highly offensive by a significant segment of our viewing audience," he said.

More than 25 CBS affiliate stations have decided not to carry the "Maude" reruns which involve Maude's decision to have an abortion.

WJIM carried the two segments during the regular season but reversed its decision when it came to reruns because of citizen protests.

"Our audience has had an opportunity to view these programs at prime time," Gross said. "We see no reason to repeat them in view of legitimate concern expressed by a substantial number of viewers."

WJBK will run both programs at their regularly scheduled times. "Sticks and Bones" will be shown at 9 p.m. Friday and the first segment of "Maude" began Tuesday at 8 p.m.

Students living in married housing will be able to view both programs on channel 2 because of married housing's cable television.

WJIM will show a feature film starring Hayley Mills, "The Trouble With Angels," in place of "Sticks and Bones" and will carry a sports preview both nights to replace "Maude."

The Lansing station defections from the normal "Maude" lineup apparently resulted in part from an intensive letter campaign directed by the U.S. Catholic Conference.

The conference recently sent out statements to 160 Roman Catholic dioceses and 20,000 parishes urging bishops and priests to discourage local CBS affiliates from carrying the "Maude" episodes.

AGREES WITH COUNTY REQUEST

Nixon OKs mass transit bill

An Ingham County Board of Commissioners resolution asking that federal highway taxes be used to finance mass transit probably was not a prime cause, but President Nixon has agreed with the commissioners' viewpoint.

Nixon on Monday signed a milestone measure breaking up the Highway Trust Fund and diverting some of its $6 billion in annual revenues to build mass transit systems, just as the commissioners had asked. The commissioners on July 10 resolved that part of the trust fund, financed largely by a 4 cents per gallon federal gasoline tax, should be diverted to mass transportation development.

Commissioner Kenneth A. Hope, D-District 2, one of the four sponsors of the county resolution, was pleased with Nixon's approval of the bill.

"Anything that would take away the prohibition in the Highway Trust Fund against using the tax money for something than highway construction is a benefit," Hope said Tuesday.

The $23 billion, three-year bill that Nixon signed into law Monday makes $200 million available in the second year for purchasing buses. Another $800 million is earmarked for financing rail systems, including subways, in the third year.

In addition to the trust fund money, the bill provides $3 billion out of the federal government's general revenue for grants to urban mass transit projects.

This new law represents a compromise between the highway lobby, made up of oil, gas, automotive and road building firms, and urban environmentalists who have been long distressed that the trust fund was locked into highway development.

The fund had been specified, since its organization in 1957, solely for the development of the interstate freeway system, which is now 80 per cent complete.

Trustees may debate chances of campus abortions at meet

The MSU trustees may finally discuss the possibility of abortions being performed in the University Health Center.

Discussion of abortion and other matters may occur at the trustees' special meeting next Wednesday.

The meeting was originally called to discuss MSU's budget but several trustees indicated a desire to get some issues that had been delayed out of the way.

Robert Perrin, vice president for University relations, said two items concerning the health center were on the meeting's agenda, but he would not say if discussion on abortion was one of them.

"Just be patient and see," Perrin said cryptically.

Earlier in the month Perrin had said discussion of abortions was tentatively scheduled for this meeting.

Perrin said he was not aware of what the administration's proposal would be to the trustees concerning abortion.

Along with the budget and abortions, other topics the trustees may discuss are changes in the traffic ordinances and the sexual orientation discrimination policy.

Campus mail ZIP Code changes to 48824 today

Mail to MSU addresses gets a boost today as the University's own ZIP Code goes into effect.

The number, 48824, was issued by the Post Office Dept. as part of an effort to improve postal service to the campus.

It should be used on all mail addressed to MSU academic and administrative units on the East Lansing campus.

The only exceptions are married student and faculty housing and non-University agencies located on campus. These will continue to use the East Lansing ZIP Code 48823.

Leonid I. Brezhnev: major investments in two Nixon summits.

Aide says bugging scandal may harm relations abroad

By KENNETH J. FREED
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Watergate has inflicted upon world capitals an edgy uncertainty about the United States, and in Washington a high administration official concedes that the scandal may already have placed recent accomplishments of American diplomacy in jeopardy.

The official, a foreign policy expert, said the scandal "can and may already have had an effect" on U.S. relations around the world, but he stressed the word "may."

"It is my gut feelings," he said, that foreign leaders "are not rushing to identify themselves" with the strategy laid out by President Nixon and Henry A. Kissinger. But he emphasized that he was discussing a potential danger rather than suggesting that U.S. leadership was falling apart.

Obviously, however, many a foreign capital is worried about such matters as damage that might have been done to President Nixon's image, to the prestige and authority of the U.S. presidency as such, and to the American leadership role which, under Nixon, has moved the powers toward an era of easier relations. These worries are shared by many in the United States.

Authority jeopardized

The administration official insisted that "the great respect foreign leaders have for President Nixon has not been impaired." Yet he acknowledged that things are not the same as in those heady days of secret Kissinger trips to Peking and the President's widely acclaimed approaches to China and the Soviet Union.

Most administration officials claim that the President's authority to carry out foreign policy remains relatively intact, though they admit that Watergate could have weakened his influence on Capitol Hill. One case in point was the congressional ban on further bombing in Cambodia, which halts today despite bitter opposition from the administration.

Sen. J.W. Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, observed in an interview that the scandal's impact could be detected in a Senate vote in June on reducing military aid to allies. He attributed this to "White House preoccupation with Watergate."

Moreover, he observed, even Republican leaders in Congress no longer automatically yield to White House pressures on given issues.

But, said the high administration official, if Nixon's authority is not soon re-established, "it may be lost entirely."

"Europe, then China, the Middle East and the Soviet Union perhaps less so" would then question the ability of the United States to hold up its end of an effort to develop a new set of superpower and world relationships, he added.

Clearly, Soviet leaders are worried. The concern is reflected in Moscow's treatment of the scandal. Soviet media scarcely mention it. When it is mentioned, the tendency is to defend Nixon.

Leonid I. Brezhnev, head of the Soviet Community party, has a big political stake in being able to show dividends from the major investment he made in two summit meetings with the President.

Brezhnev came to Washington at a time when there were signs of opposition in his own regime to the detente policy. U.S. officials now say the Kremlin leadership is convinced that Nixon is the best American available to make arrangements Moscow deems necessary for cementing

Sen. J.W. Fulbright: "White House preoccupation with Watergate"

Appealing for public and congressional support of the Nixon foreign policy, the official said he was not suggesting the Watergate probe should be stopped or that nobody should be indicted, but that "the authority, the ability to deliver, the vitality" of the administration must be restored.

Sen. Fulbright said the way to restore authority to American's foreign programs would be to re-establish Congress as a full and equal participant in policy making.

"We're not any smarter than they are, but we can provide the kind of collective wisdom that would avoid serious mistakes," Fulbright said. But he seemed pessimistic that the administration would buy his view.

Evidently, the administration intends keeping on with its current course involving arms limitation talks with the Russians, a drive for trade and monetary reforms establishment of stronger ties with Japan and efforts to solidify relations with Moscow and Peking.

European leaders, so far as public statements are concerned, seem determined to be calm and detached about Watergate.

"We regard it as an American domestic affair," an Italian Foreign Ministry spokesman said adding that Watergate would not be permitted to have an impact on traditional warm relations with the United States. Generally, that was the attitude officially expressed in most of Europe and Asia.

For the most part, the reaction seems to have been that two-way government-to-government relations have been undisturbed, though some sources see Watergate as responsible for unforeseen obstacles to the smooth progress of U.S. policy.

Southeast Asian leaders have special worries. Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew of Singapore said in an Ottawa interview this week that Watergate could permanently damage the power of a U.S. president to act in time of crisis, "and if you do not act decisively in a crisis, but go into committee between the White House and Congress, well, you make for a different globe."

Japan, with much riding on good relations with the United States, according to U.S. Embassy sources in Tokyo, chooses to be largely sympathetic on Watergate and regard it as purely a domestic American problem. The government doesn't intend to let it interfere with projects involving the two countries.

Most foreign diplomats and leaders who have mentioned Watergate publicly evidently are willing to stay with Nixon. A senior Foreign Ministry official in Kenya, complaining that Nixon never had much time for Africa anyway, said he probably now has none at all because the "American President is so enmeshed in domestic problems created by Watergate that foreign policy seems suddenly to have taken a back seat."

That's not how many officials inside the U.S. foreign policy establishment see it. But the administration official who reviewed America's foreign policy status conceded that foreign leaders "have much to wonder these days about the health of the nation after a decade of assassinations, riots, war and now Watergate."

The Nixon policy itself is new and fragile, the administration official noted, and while all the elements for success are present, "this situation cannot be frozen for 3½ years until there is a new administration."

"You can't take the United States out of foreign policy for such a long period," he insisted.

"This is a period of transition. Many of the leaders of the world are old. If we don't solidify the gains made toward detente with the Russians and China before those leaderships change, we may have to start all over again."

Politicians assess Watergate's effects on domestic policies

By RICHARD E. MEYER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With Senate hearings in recess, government officials and politicians from the White House down have begun assessing the wear and tear of Watergate on the administration and the country. After 10 weeks of often conflicting testimony, culminating in a constitutional collision between President Nixon and Congress over the White House tape recordings, the ultimate impact of Watergate remains elusive. But some interim effects are clear.

At the White House, reorganizations and resignations have brought drastic changes and some internal dissension. Former Defense Secretary Melvin Laird, a newcomer at the White House because of Watergate, says: "There's some resentment of my being here." And aides say the turmoil has helped delay some programs.

In Congress, Watergate has diminished the President's strength. House and Senate passed measures limit his ability to impound money and force him to stop bombing Cambodia after today. Watergate, says Rep. John Anderson of Illinois, third-ranking Republican, "swelled the margin of those votes."

Shuffle

In some Cabinet departments and executive agencies, Watergate resignations have caused a hectic shuffle. Twenty-five sub-Cabinet posts remain unfilled, or have acting directors.

"Everybody is an acting," says one executive department official. "Some decisions are difficult to make."

Among Republican party officials across the country, queried by the Associated Press, some felt Watergate had hurt the GOP, more thought they could divorce the party — on the local level at least — from Watergate, and others said that all politicians, regardless of party, had been hurt.

The President's popularity dropped to a low in a Gallup poll last month, with 40 per cent approving and 49 disapproving. A random sampling of ordinary citizens by the AP showed a broad spectrum of reactions, from people who thought Watergate was ordinary politics to others who felt the President was to blame. A number professed boredom with the whole subject.

Some administration officials concede that Watergate caused a slump in government. On July 6, when he agreed to succeed John D. Ehrlichman, who resigned because of Watergate as the President's top domestic adviser, Laird said: "Government in some quarters is at a standstill."

Momentum

An aide says now that Laird exaggerated — deliberately, perhaps, to keep a standstill from happening. And Laird, citing recent successful compromises with Congress, said in an interview that the government now has regained momentum.

While acknowledging "there are many things that are going to take time to mature and blossom," retired Brig. Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., who replaced H.R. Haldeman, another Watergate casualty, as the President's chief of staff, said recently: "The directions have been set and are accepted and understood by all... I am optimistic that we can establish a relatively dramatic difference from the last few months..."

Laird didn't go into details about lingering staff resentment over his replacing Ehrlichman, but he acknowledged that White House advisers are split into hard-liners and soft-liners on Watergate questions.

Laird, according to Republican House Leader Gerald Ford, was among "soft-liners" who counselled the President to turn over the presidential tapes, advice which Nixon has rejected.

Many congressmen and officials believe Watergate has brought a slackening of governmental pace, though examples are seldom clear-cut.

Officials feel the long-pending fuel allocation program to counter the gasoline shortage has been delayed partly "because there was nobody in the White House willing to make a decision."

In Congress, the administration is recovering from the effects of Watergate, Laird says. House Republican Leader Ford sees "a minimum" of Watergate impact upon Congress.

But Anderson, the third-ranking House Republican, says that Watergate has become "a watershed event" in a basic realignment with the White House.

This view is shared by Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, who says Watergate has restored the balance of power between Congress and the executive branch.

Impact felt

Both point to passage of several bills to demonstrate Watergate impact. They include the Cambodian bombing deadline and measures that would restrict the President's power to make war and limit his authority to impound money appropriated by Congress.

Anderson concedes that the legislation might have been approved in the absence of Watergate, "but the effect of Watergate is there in all of those..."

"It contributed to the feeling that Congress simply couldn't go on deferring to the President forever on matters foreign and domestic. In concrete terms it swelled the margin on those votes. And, more important, it encouraged the proponents to be more aggressive, to push harder..."

"Unquestionably, Watergate did weaken the authority of the President."

Two Cabinet departments and several executive agencies have suffered, too, because of Watergate. The resignation of Atty. Gen. Richard Kleindienst began a shuffle that brought Defense Secretary Elliot L. Richardson into the Justice

Dept. and left the Pentagon without a secretary of defense for several weeks.

It was during this period that the Pentagon sent to Congress false information about Cambodian bombing raids. One administration aide says the false information might not have been sent had the office of secretary of defense not been in mid-changeover.

In addition to the 25 sub-Cabinet posts still unfilled in the President's second term, the administration faces 450 vacancies in "Schedule C" jobs in executive departments and agencies — meaning that 30 per cent of these jobs, filled by political appointment, are empty.

No slowdown
An AP check of major states shows no significant slowdown in federal-state operations, although some state officials say federal decisions have been harder to come by.

In May, for instance, Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott announced he was initiating criminal proceedings in an alleged life insurance swindle.

"I'm sure the federal government will be getting into it," he said at the time, "but let's face it... a week ago there was no attorney general and no head of the SEC... There's no one at the top to push a button..."

Republicans are worried about what Watergate will do to their party. The Republican National Committee, faced with a potential $1 million deficit in the wake of the scandal, is cutting back its staff by 25 per cent. A May 15 mail campaign for contributions drew half of what was expected, says press aide Jackie O'Connor.

Some state and local party officials say, however, that Watergate has hurt politicians in general. Says Kansas GOP chairman Jack Ranson: "It won't necessarily affect just Republicans."

Auto, steel companies seek price increases

WASHINGTON — U.S. Steel Corp. and General Motors Corp. greeted Phase 4 with requests for price increases Tuesday while administration officials prepared consumers to expect further rising commodity prices.

As President Nixon's Phase 4 system of price controls closed out its second day, the giants of the steel and automobile industries announced they were seeking price increases.

GM said it wants approval for a $102 price boost on its 1974 models. U.S. Steel said it is proposing increases for sheet and pipe products, probably averaging 4.8 per cent. American Motors and Chrysler corporations as well as some steelmakers had already proposed increases.

At the Cost of Living Council, Director John T. Dunlop was preoccupied with the domestic and worldwide surge in the prices of such commodities as grains, metals, cotton and oil. "Read it and weep," he told newsmen as he showed them a report on how these prices have gone up this year, affecting the cost of such basics as food, clothing and consumer goods.

One council official said it may be necessary to impose controls on exports of some kinds of wheat — a move that the Agriculture Dept. strongly opposes.

Wheat sold in Minneapolis Tuesday at $5.07 a bushel for September delivery, the first time that wheat has traded at over $5 in the nation's history.

Dunlop said rising commodity prices, which are not controlled, pose a dilemma for the administration's Phase 4 control program.

Dunlop also said that the slaughter of beef totaled 100,000 head Monday, which he said was only 10 to 12 per cent below normal.

"Any notion that smaller and smaller amounts of beef are being slaughtered are not true," Dunlop said.

The administration's price freeze has been lifted from everything but petroleum and beef, but unhappy beef producers have been warning of serious beef shortages and higher meat prices.

Charles Emely, the Cost of Living Council's asst. council director for operations, said between 20 and 25 big companies notified the government Monday of their intention to increase prices in 30 days.

He said this was a "pretty light" figure for the first day, but predicted the volume of increase requests would pick up as the week progressed.

However, Emely said he didn't know which companies had asked for price increases, saying procedures for publicizing this information hadn't yet been worked out.

A council source said it wasn't definitely decided even whether the information would be made public at all.

The Internal Revenue Service is processing initial filings of price increases at 29 key district offices. Small and medium-sized companies can raise prices immediately under Phase 4 as long as the increases are justified by high costs, but major companies such as auto manufacturers must give 30 days notice.

Another council official, Dawson Ahalt, told newsmen the country faces a "tight" supply situation in providing enough grains to meet both domestic demand and export needs.

Asked if the administration might consider export controls on wheat, Ahalt said, "That's right."

A resolution setting "high priorities" for the use of county revenue - sharing funds will be considered by the Ingham County Board of Commissioners tonight.

The measure asks that $367,988 of the county's total $1.8 million in federal revenue - sharing funds be set aside for use in nine areas, including legal aid, jail recreational facilities and the MSU Volunteer Action Corps.

"These priority items represent allocations for the rest of 1973," Commissioner Kenneth A. Hope, chairman of the finance committee, said Tuesday. The county board announced in June the budget areas in which it spent $700,000 during the first half of the year.

Hope said the commissioners are reluctant to specifically allocate all of the revenue sharing monies the county is slated to receive in 1973 because they are not sure they will receive all the funds.

The board, which meets at 7:30 p.m. at the Mason County courthouse will consider a resolution supporting Gogebic County in its efforts to halt the alleged pollution of Lake Superior by Reserve Mining Co.

He said in an interview that despite the bombing cutoff, "our American friends are still providing us with more material to modernize our army. The situation here is very much improved and there is nothing for us to be worried about. The other side has suffered heavy losses by bombing over the past few weeks."

Rumors circulated that Tan would resign from the post he has held since mid-May. He denied having any such plans.

The United States will continue to fly reconnaissance missions and cargo missions in Cambodia, according to Pentagon sources. Some of the U.S. warplanes based in Thailand will remain there as a deterrent to new offensives by North Vietnam in Indochina or against Thailand.

The United States will start pulling some of its 660 planes and 45,000 servicemen out of Thailand in about a month, sources indicated.

To some Phnom Penh residents, the bombing halt came as good news.

Mrs. Van Ny, a 30-year-old widow who opened a shop near the central market two years ago after moving here from the countryside, reflected the attitude of some Phnom Penh residents.

"It's better for them to stop bombing," she said. "My house was destroyed by bombs. The Khmer Rouge were hidden in the village. They shot at government troops when they had an operation to clear the area. I can't blame anyone. But it was a total loss for us. Nothing was left."

The Khmer Rouge are an element of Cambodian Communists fighting against the U.S.-backed Lon Nol regime.

Communists' actions predicted by analysts

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia — As the last American bombs fell on Cambodia, the question was not what the Communists will do next, but when.

Western diplomats and military analysts in Phnom Penh who have been watching the war develop agree the Communist-led insurgents have the capability to do these things:

●Mass a regiment-sized force of 3,000 to 4,000 men to attack the poorly defended Pochentong airport west of Phnom Penh and effectively close it for at least a few days. Many U.S. air strikes on the last full day of the bombing were against insurgents north and northwest of the airport.

●Mass a two-regiment force of 6,000 to 8,000 men against the southern Phnom Penh suburb of Takhmau. Takhmau, an industrial area with about 50,000 inhabitants, is the key to the southern defense of the capital. Its loss would cripple Phnom Penh.

●Order into action an estimated two to three battalions of sappers and terrorists already believed to have infiltrated into the city, according to senior police officials. These thousand men could attack government installations in Phnom Penh in coordination with outside attacks.

News Analysis

●Attack and probably overrun, with North Vietnamese help, the besieged provincial capitals of Takeo, Svey Rieng, Kompong Cham and Kompong Thom. The important district town of Skoun fell Monday in what might be a forerunner of the immediate future.

●Cut for good the important highway 4 from the coast and Highway 5 from Battambang, leaving open only the Mekong River supply route to Phnom Penh. The river has been opened part of the way, but few observers doubt that the Communists could reapply the pressure any time.

The attacks on the besieged province towns could also come quickly. U.S. air strikes are credited with saving them all, particularly Svey Rieng and Takeo. The North Vietnamese have large forces in the region of those two province towns in eastern Cambodia and with their help the towns could fall quickly.

The cutting of Highways 4 and 5 is expected to come soon. Highway 5 is open most of the time to all traffic but Highway 4 can be used by convoys only with the help of massive U.S. B52 and other bombing.

The overwhelming territorial ascendancy of the Communist-led insurgents may already have condemned the Lon Nol government to death, in the view of experts here. There were hopes last month that some kind of political compromise could be reached to stop the bloodshed. But there are no signs of this now.

ON LEGALITY OF BUSING

Area school board appeals court ruling

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The attorney for the Lansing Board of Education, Fred Newman, filed an appeal Tuesday of a federal court decision ordering the board to reinstate a district busing plan.

Newman said though it normally takes several days to put together an appeal brief, he believed the matter was "sufficiently urgent" that the appeal be filed immediately.

U.S. District Judge Noel Fox of Grand Rapids Friday ruled the busing plan, which will involve 13 of the city's 49 elementary schools this fall, constitutional and ordered the board to reinstate the plan. The board voted Monday to ask the U.S. 6th Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati for a full review of the case, as well as a temporary stay against Fox's order until the case is resolved in the appeals court.

The Lansing school year starts in three weeks. If Fox's order is not stayed, the board will have to proceed on the assumption it will be busing this fall and prepare for the plan by organizing buses, parents and teachers. If a stay is issued, the appeal probably won't be argued until late fall.

The busing plan was first put into effect last summer, but angry voters petitioned for a recall election and the five members of the nine-member board who favored the busing plan all were recalled. The plan was repealed in January as the first act of business after five new antibusing members were elected.

The NAACP then filed suit with Fox, who ruled the plan constitutional.

Board sources unofficially said though they're fairly optimistic they will get the stay, they are not as sure about repealing the plan.

Road project begins

The Bogue Street extension will be a grade-level crossing over the railroad tracks.

Though healthy trees were removed to make way for the Collingwood Entrance construction design, Baron said about 78 diseased elms have been removed this summer on the campus and golf course as part of overall campus attempts at environmental improvements.

"Usually our University Spray Committee designates the diseased trees for removal during the winter months but our entomology experts advised the removal to be done as soon as evidence of the Dutch elm bark beetle is found," Baron said.

He said immediate removal is advised because, though the beetle can be killed by spraying in the spring, a second brood can come in August and thus spread to other healthy elms.

Budget redistributions

town and unable to comment on his college's predicted decrease, but Robert F. Banks, dean of James Madison college said that the Madison's level of funding had been decreasing for two to three years.

"This is nothing new or dramatic," Banks said. "Our level of budgetary funding has gone down because our enrollment has levelled off and we have not replaced faculty members that have left."

Banks, too, declined to discuss specific figures regarding his college because he felt that to do so before the trustees had approved the budget would be inappropriate.

Cantlon said the present budget recommendation was built around a request for a tuition increase.

"The budget is balanced around the assumption that the trustees will approve the fee increase. If the trustees refused to accept the increase, then the budget would be about $2 million out of balance and we would have rebalanced the budget," Cantlon said.

"But I can't foresee them refusing to accept the tuition increase. I don't see how they'd be able to cut off that source of funding," he added.

Parents, children find MSU family day helpful

The family as an institution in America was promoted this week for a change instead of being attacked.

Preceding the National Extension Homemakers Council conference being held on campus this week from Tuesday to Thursday, a "Young Family Day" was held Monday in East Complex promoting the quality of the family as a unit.

Sponsored by the Family Living Education and 4-H youth programs, divisions of the Cooperative Extension Service, the day of classes was held for parents and children ranging in ages from infants to teens.

"We wanted families to be aware that we are concerned for them and their quality as a unit, and this day was held to emphasize that consideration," Dixie Hesler, a director of the program, said Monday.

About 150 Michigan and out-of-state families attended the day session, the first ever held in Michigan. Participants could choose from classes geared either toward children only, parents only or parents and children.

Classes held concerned marital enrichment, infant enrichment, family fun with sports, family fun in ecology and parent-child communication.

After attending the class on ecology, the Carl Wade family from northern Michigan said they found the idea beneficial for their family of eight.

"My husband and I work, so we are not able to spend much time together as a family, but this brought us together and also gave us ideas to use in the future when we can, which is important for a big family," Mrs. Wade said.

Another family from Alma said the program on sports was helpful to them.

"We needed ideas for activities together and this was worth the effort. I also can use the games suggested for my nursery school which I will be starting this fall," Mrs. James Fleischman said.

Fireman Rod Swiger, right, asked for questions from youngsters visiting the Shaw Lane fire station Monday during Young Family Day. Clint Thomas, left, demonstrates fire fighting gear. About 150 families attended classes in Hubbard Hall on aspects of family life.
