inder the present PIRGIM contract MSU, the campus chapter of the ewide research organization will lose lace in the fee check - off system if it collects contributions from less than 33.3 per cent of the students in any two consecutive quarters.

PIRGIM received contributions from about 32 per cent of the undergraduate students at fall registration.

Joseph Tuchinsky, executive director of the statewide PIRGIM, said he hopes the board of trustees at its February meeting will adopt a proposal to keep PIRGIM in the fee collection system.

The proposal, recommended by the MSU Student - Faculty Affairs Committee at its Nov. 19 meeting, would permit PIRGIM to stay in the collection system if it averages 20 per cent fee contributions during any two - year period.

The proposal must be approved by President Wharton before the board can

"We never expected to meet the 33.3 per cent figure," Tuchinsky said. "It was miraculous that we even came close." Tuchinsky said he anticipates that the trustees will change the guidelines.

Marion Anderson, legislative director for PIRGIM, said, "It will be a bad scene if the board rejects the proposal. The cost of collecting donations from MSU students by other means would be prohibitive."

Anderson said the 20 per cent minimum average contribution would be realistic. "With less than 20 per cent contributions, we couldn't finance our operations effectively anyway."

She said a steady source of contributions from students around the state is necessary to finance long - term research projects.

Anderson said that student contributions at the University of Michigan rose from 40 per cent in fall to nearly 50 per cent at winter registration. Eldon Nonnamaker, vice president of student affairs and ex officio member of the Student - Faculty Affairs Committee, said he personally favored reducing the minimum contribution figure to permit PIRGIM to stay in the fee collection system, but perhaps not as low as 20 per

If the trustees fail to approve the proposal for a new contract, PIRGIM's last recourse is to initiate another referendum among MSU students to regain a place in the fee collection system.

This would require obtaining signatures from 33.3 per cent of the undergraduate students to stage the referendum and a favorable vote by half of all students voting in the referendum.

Approximately 40 per cent of PIRGIM's statewide $75,000 budget comes from MSU.

The action is an attempt to form a cushion protecting current MSU faculty and staff from possible future budget cutbacks by the state, Herman King, asst. provost for academic administration, said Wednesday.

Cutbacks may loom in the near future if the energy crisis, with it's adverse effect on Michigan's auto and tourist industry, lowers state revenue.

Milliken gets crisis powers

By TOM HAROLDSON

MAUREEN McDONALD

State News Staff Writers Gov. Milliken will have his emergency energy powers to cope with dwindling fuel supplies and allocation needs as a result of a measure passed by the state Senate Wednesday afternoon.

Against grudging Democratic comments on the measure, the Senate voted, 19-14, to allow the governor the power to declare a state of emergency if deemed necessary. The bill will also allow the Public Service Commission to begin regulating all state action on the energy crisis including:

companies and energy suppliers in the state concerning their supply and demand figures and quantities in reserve.

· Conduct research on the energy problem and means to combat it.

· Coordinate all state action in case of • Have the power of subpena, intrusion and entrance to the oil industry in the state if these companies prove to be uncooperative. The commission will not be able to break any laws regarding entrance or collection of information

The governor's powers will include the authority to close schools, to order emergency use of private property, to evacuate a stricken area and to control highway use and business hours. The governor will essentially have the same powers as he would during any natural

The Senate delegated $150,000 to the commission to accomplish these goals.

But Senate Democrats managed to add amendments to weaken the power of the bill. Sen. Pat McCollough, D - Dearborn, added an amendment terminating the special powers on June 30, a move with which some Republicans were disgruntled.

Democratic resistance to the measure was high since the bill could be interpreted as a vote of confidence in the Republican governor's policy in an election year. Only two Democrats voted for the measure. The acceptance vote was lower than usually required due to the sudden resignation Tuesday of Sen. Charles Youngblood, D -

The Democrats had successfully blocked passage of the measure late last year. They debated 45 minutes, calling the governor's proposal a usurpation of powers from the legislature. The state House passed a stronger bill Dec. 7.

Some Democrats have not changed their feelings. Sen. Daniel Cooper, D - Oak Park, said: "The Senate's move today represents an unholy delegation of powers that can only resemble a junior Gulf of Tonkin resolution."

He added that the measure would increase the "junior beauracracy," but would not be effective in solving the crisis. A few other Democrats grumbled that the energy crisis did not exist, calling it "a figment of the Republican's imagination."

Most of their expressed concern was over the possibility that the governor could become too powerful in matters of energy crisis coordination. But Republicans were assured, as well as the two Democrats who voted for the bill -McCollough and David Plawecki of Dearborn Heights - that there were sufficient legislative checks on Milliken and the commission.

The main check, and in fact the only one needed, was that the legislature can block at any time any action by the governor or the commission if it feels the two have gone too far. There is also a 180 - day statute of limitation clause included. With these restrictions and checks, McCollough said, the legislature should have all the power to stop any action it does not agree with.

McCollough said that the bill was needed because it takes the legislature too long to pass legislation, and it would not be able to handle energy crisis operations on a day - to - day basis.

Youngblood resigns, insists on innocence

By TOM HAROLDSON State News Staff Writer

Sen. Charles Youngblood, D - Detroit, resigned on the Senate floor Wednesday afternoon before his silent Senate colleagues - most of whom wanted it that Youngblood, convicted Oct. 17 of conspiracy to bribe a state liquor official, said he had been "going through hell" to fight his case the past two years. In a 15 minute unprepared speech spoken in a steady voice in the tense legislative chambers, Youngblood insisted he was still innocent despite the conviction.

He said he had planned to fight for a suspension from the Senate without pay or voting rights until the moment he stepped up to address the hushed Senate. "When I hit that mike I was willing to fight for suspension but I looked at my colleagues and decided to quit," Youngblood said as a throng of people crowded around to see the man who was the first Michigan state Senator to be convicted of a felony and consequently

He said he did not want the Senate to spend anymore time trying to decide his fate, especially when it was apparent to him that the Republicans would not go along with anything less than explusion. He said that no one in the Senate Democratic caucus, which had met at 11

Donald Spyke, computer lab business manager, said the availability of free programs substantially reduced a cost estimate lab officials made early last fall, when they first began investigating the

At that time they estimated programing would take 60 to 90 man days of labor and would cost about $7,000, Spyke said. Such high estimates were made, he said, to give some leeway to the lab, inexperienced with carpool programs and uncertain what factors the program would have to include. Since then lab officials have learned of programs being developed by the Burroughs Corp. and the State Highway Dept., both of which would be free to the University. Computer lab officials are simply Spyke guessed that either of the programs would probably be completed any day. Small costs might arise in modifying the program to run well on MSU's computers, or adjusting it to include other factors, Spyke said, but added that he hopes the cost would be near $100.

Other costs would include printing application forms and grid maps and clerical work, computer time, and mailing. Andy Johanson, supervisor of applications programing, described how the system would operate in a memorandum dated Jan. 4.

According to the description, a map of Lansing area would be printed with a grid printed over it. Each grid square would equal one square mile

Thai students ask U.S. to leave

In a new show of their political muscle, 4,000 shouting Thai students Wednesday demanded the ouster of the American ambassador and the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency.

Over 4,000 students, professors and other Thais massed outside the U.S. Embassy for two hours in Bangkok demanding that Ambassador William R. Kintner, then on a trip to northern Thailand, and the CIA leave the country.

The students, whose demonstrations toppled Thailand's military regime in October and then became the country's only significant organized political force, also angrily protested a visit by Japanese Prime Minister K akuei Tanaka. Tanaka, who is on a five - nation tour of Southeast Asia, noted in a speech that the demonstrations made him aware of "the concern of the Thai people about the role of Japanese influence" after students barricaded exits to his hotel, jeered him and thumped on his limousine.

Cambodians attack insurgents

A major counteroffensive was launched by Cambodian troops Wednesday to protect the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh and its airport from K hmer Rouge rebel forces. In the heaviest and closest fighting at the capital since American bombings came to a halt in August, 600 government forces and 50 armored personnel carriers met heavy resistance from the Khmer Rouge forces estimated at 300 to 1,000 men five miles west of Phnom Penh.

U.S. sources reported the 18,000 troups within a 25mile were attempting a takeover of the capital and possible destruction of the Ponchentong airport, a few miles away, but they believed government forces would

Loyalty oath for parties ended

The Supreme Court unanimously ruled Wednesday that states may not bar political parties from election ballots for refusing to renounce violent overthrow of the government. In its first confrontation with a loyalty oath as it applied to access to the ballot, the court struck down an Indiana oath challenged by the Indiana Communist party requiring the foreswearing of violence.

Justice William J. Brennan Jr., representing five of the justices, said that the Indiana statute intrudes on the freedoms guaranteed by the First and Fourteenth Amendments.

"It sweeps within its condemnation speech which our Constitution has immunized from governmental control," said Brennan.

The court also upheld a decision by Congress to restrict suits against Amtrak to the attorney general. A group attempting to prevent cancellation of three passenger trains in Georgia brought the charge to court, but the court, in a 7-1 decision, held that suits against Amtrak must be referred to the government's lawyer.

Welfare reform kept from budget

President Nixon, while deciding against including welfare reform in the fiscal 1975 budget, plans to send Congress a proposal featuring incentives for the poor to work.

The proposal, still being drawn up, may tie welfare to the tax system in some modified form of the negative income tax.

Under the negative income tax concept, a family earning less than the subsistence level would be paid enough welfare to reach that level.

"We cannot say, 'taxes you go one way, welfare you go another'," said Roy Ash, director of the Office of Management and Budget. "The issue is not whether they are related, but how they are related."

It is the second year in a row Nixon has decided not to include welfare reform in the budget. However, he is expected to deal extensively with welfare reform in his State of the Union address this month.

Anderson on trial for extortion

In the second day of the trial of Baltimore County Executive Dale Anderson, former county administrative officer William Fornoff testified Wednesday that he received envelopes full of money from engineers and architects and passed them all along to Anderson.

Anderson, who succeeded Spiro T. Agnew as county executive, was named last year in a 43 - count indictment alleging conspiracy, bribery, extortion and tax evasion. He allegedly extorted $46,420 from eight engineering firms and an architectural company between 1968 and 1972.

Singer Bing Crosby hospitalized

Singer Big Crosby, hospitalized in Burlingame, Calif., for ten days with fever and chest pains, was reported in stable and satisfactory condition Wednesday after doctors removed tissue samples from a lung lesion. Tests for cancer were negative, the hospital said.

Stanely M. Hanfling, Crosby's doctor, said the lesion may be the result of pneumonia. The entertainer is suffering from a cough and mild - to - moderate chest pains and a fever of about 100 degrees, which are being controlled by medication.

"Mr. Crosby is confident, has a good appetite and is optimistic," Hanfling said.

Red tape blossoms from crisis

The energy shortage has fueled a burgeoning bureaucracy of commissions, agencies, advisory boards and committees headed by coordinators, chairmen and allocators from the federal government on down.

An Associated Press spot check turned up at least 22 state agencies or organizations specially named to deal with the energy

And that does not count the pending proposals, the city and county agencies or the industry efforts. The Michigan Senate Thursday approved, 19-12, a bill granting the Public Service Commission power to regulate energy usage in The measure, pushed by Gov. Milliken and approved earlier by the state House, had been stalled for more than a month by the Senate. Across the country the motto seemed to be: When in doubt, appoint a commission. The Federal Energy Office, headed by William E. Simon, is operating on a sort of temporary budget that thus far has been well under $10 million. Legislation is pending in Congress, however, to set up a far - reaching federal energy administration

Gov. Reubin Askew appointed a 26 - member fuel allocation and conservation council to act in an advisory capacity. And the legislature set up a $25,000 - a - year post of fuel allocation officer effective Jan. 1.

In other energy developments Wednesday: • President Nixon invited the foreign ministers of eight hard pressed oil - consuming nations to a conference in Washington Feb. 11 to consider ways of dealing with the international energy

• Pay disputes involving Britain's coal miners and train engineers neared a deadlock, confronting the nation with the possibility of almost total industrial collapse. Prime Minister Edward Heath spurned proposals by opposition Labor party chief Harold Wilson for a compromise with the nation's 280,000 coal miners, whose ban on overtime work has cut output by nearly 40 per cent. Parliament was recalled to debate the emergency.

The world's major oil countries, which have boosted prices 4 per cent in the last year, pledged at a meeting in Geneva to h the line until April 1.

But they said industrial nations would have to show they control inflation and reduce the profits of oil companies if prices are not to rise still more. The oil - producing nations do want to have to pay more for the same imports.

• France and Saudi Arabia are negotiating a massive agreement that would ensure France 5.6 billion barrels over years, officials said in Paris.

Government spokesman Jean - Philippe Lecat said after cabinet meeting that France had agreed to buy 189 million barrels of Saudi oil over the next three years.

Cantlon said the action should not limit the number of faculty positions filled next

"In fact it might increase the positions slightly with departments hiring more junior members," he said.

However, faculty positions could be reduced because the memorandum also asked "all units to fill only those vacancies which are essential to

MSU unit OKs new plans for construction of bridge

By CHRIS DANIELSON

State News Staff Writer Despite Wednesday's passage by the University Building, Lands and Planning Committee of a recommendation that MSU approve the revised Kalamazoo Street bridge project, the board of trustees is not expected to act on the proposal this month.

The committee approved the new plans for the controversial $700,000 Ingham County Road Commission project by a 12 - 3 roll call vote.

Jack Breslin, executive vicepresident and secretary of the board, said the trustees may discuss the project informally during their January meetings, but said he had no definite idea about when it would be acted on.

Donald Gochberg, associate professor of humanities who introduced the motion for approval of the revised plans, said the new proposal - which drops plans to rechannel the Red Cedar River - is ecologically sound.

"I felt that all significant segments of the community had been heard from on the matter, and the project will not only expedite traffic movement and improve traffic safety, but will provide a beautiful entrance to the campus," Gochberg added.

The project would widen Kalamazoo Street between University Village and Clippert Street from two lanes to four, replacing an existing bridge, which has inadequate water passage capacity, with a larger William Drew, professor of plant pathology - who was joined by James Beach, C8 Twyckingham Apartments, junior and Cynthia Sarver, 208 Cedar St., senior, in voting against the motion, said more information was needed on the project's impact to the Red Cedar Natural Area.

"We only found out about the revised plan on Monday, and I didn't have time to see how the construction area had been staked out," he noted.

"The revised proposal is a great improvement over the original plan, and its safety features figured heavily in the committee's vote," Drew added, referring to a presentation made by Richard Bernitt, director of the Dept. of Public Safety.

Bernitt said that dangers to bicyclists and pedestrians would be reduced by the proposed sidewalk - bicycle path on the south side of the road and fencing on both sides which would keep toddlers from University Village off the road as well as prevent motor vehicles from entering the natural area.

James Anderson, instructor in humanities and one of 20 people who attended the 90 minute meeting, later questioned the need for a four lane highway, noting that a prolonged energy shortage could wipe out the projected increase in road usage - one of the reasons for which the first plan was rejected by the East Lansing Traffic Commission.

Anderson also questioned the lack of a comprehensive environmental impact statement and said that the construction closing could be worse than the occasional flooding problems on Kalamazoo Street.

planning, noted that the road commission made a last minute change in the revised plan Tuesday, at the request of the University, designed to save at least half of 45 trees slated for removal.

The modification involved moving the bridge slightly to the north to save 20 trees on the south side of the road.

Baron said more trees may be saved through special construction procedures.

Donald Beaver, asst. professor of zoology, said that he was disappointed that the plan was approved before he and his students could conduct a proposed impact study during the wildlife breeding season from May to July.

Federal funding deadlines require that the project be approved this spring.

Beaver said the Lansing Audubon Society plans to study the wildlife populations in natural areas near the city to preclude such a lack of impact data from arising again.

EDITORIALS COGS cry of alarm well founded over proposal to abolish council

The Council of Graduate Students (COGS) cry of alarm over the recommendation of the Ad Hoc Committee to Review Academic Governance to replace the policy - making Graduate Council with an advisory committee is well founded.

Reduction of the 28 member Graduate Council to an eight - or 12 - member graduate school advisory committee, part of the ad hoc committee's master plan to streamline academic governance, could endanger graduate education at MSU.

A major reservation about any proposed streamlining is that the ad hoc committee left the method of determining advisory committee membership to the discretion of the Academic Council, with no mention of how many students, how many faculty members or how many colleges should be represented.

The reason for streamlining academic governance is to aid communication and cut through the bureaucratic tangle that has developed with the ever - growing Academic Council and the maze of standing, advisory and administrative committees.

It is probable that committees could become more effective and efficient in their work if the sheer number of their members were reduced. Communication and productivity become strangled when large groups try to decide on a common course of action.

But if streamlining means that fewer students will have seats and fewer colleges will be represented, then it is a change for the worse. As it appears now, the ad hoc committee found an arbitrary method to streamline University governance but gave Academic Council the difficult chore of implementing the plan.

A formula must be established that will insure equal representation of students and faculty on the eight - or 12 - member advisory committee. And streamlining cannot afford to eliminate small colleges or deny large colleges their voice.

The Graduate Council, threatened by a drastic reduction in size and policy - making ability, is a case in point. The council has been instrumental in revising the graduate grading system, in creating COGS and in developing the graduate rights and responsibilities document. How much clout would the council have as an advisory committee, with eight or twelve assorted members striving to strike a balance between faculty and student representatives for 11 colleges?

Until it is specified what the representation ratio for committee members will be, it will be difficult to determine if streamlining is really a change for the

Humiliation Day a mistake

The date selected for the day of humiliation is April 30, which in 1974 falls on a Tuesday. If this holiday is celebrated as are other ones in this country, it will mean a four - day weekend.

The first people to take advantage of an official day of humiliation will be the department stores and discount houses. Our newspapers will be full of humiliation day sales. While the churches will stay open it will be the stores that will run the banner headlines "Glunk Bros. will humiliate itself by cutting every item in our store 50 per cent."

But the worst thing of all is that gasoline stations will probably be clos on Humiliation Day.

With forced closing on Sundays a then no gas stations open on Tuesda you'll have people at each other's thro again just as they were during Christmas and New Year's holidays.

Rather than humbling themselves a asking forgiveness for their sins, they only commit new ones in an effort to enough fuel for the weekend. The truth is you cannot get this count to stand still and pray for itself declaring another holiday, no matter ho noble the purpose. I think the Senate should have debate this resolution very seriously before passing it by a voice vote.

Hatfield is a very religious man a there is no doubt in anyone's mind that was completely sincere in offering Humiliation Day bill, but I suspect the are quite a few senators who went alo with it because they could see the gre possibilities it offered them to get aw

Nation's papers sound off on fuel shortage, poverty

Here are excerpts from editorials around the nation last week:

The Livingston, Mont., Enterprise: "Are you the unhappy owner of a gas - guzzling automobile, trying to unload the obsolete behemoth and faced with a huge loss? Consider the nation's airlines, stuck with fleets of jumbo jets which gulp 600 gallons of fuel a minute. Know anyone who wants to pick up a slightly used Boeing 747?"

Charleston, S.C., Evening Post: "Critics of the proposals to handle scarce fuels contend many a boiler could be stoked just by burning bureaucratic red tape."

The Lawrence, Kan., Daily Journal -World: "The current fuel shortage has brought about unpleasant and difficult problems for many people, and the problems probably will grow in the months to come. Blame seems to center upon inept and selfish management of our huge oil companies and a lack of proper attention by government officials; but no matter who is to blame, the shortage is a fact of life which has an effect upon nearly every American...

"No one should look for trouble, but sometimes trouble is a great teacher; much can be learned through adversity. Perhaps the present fuel debacle will teach million of Americans to live better with what have and to be more aware of the need conservation and cooperation."

The Independent Record, Helen Mont.: "The auto industry is large responsible for the public's attitutoward big, heavy gas guzzlers...Whitbrings us to the question of wheth American industrial giants with the enormous impact on the economy a their enormous influence through sophisticated promotion and oth techniques, shouldn't have to answer actions that prove detrimental to national best interest.'

The Sheridan, Wyo., Press: "The war Indochina is not the only one that t U.S. fought during the 1960s and tried disengage itself from as the 1970s bega Remember the war on poverty? Nixon administration has pursued ambivalent course with respect to to poverty problem... Elimination of povert then, ranks well down on the list current national priorities. But it is issue that has come to the fore many the previously in American history, at surely will be heard from again.

Milk money sways Nixon's mind

For some men the promise of wealth is persuasive, but apparently President Nixon is not one of those men. He bows only to pressure - pressure from Congress, pressure from large dairy farmers and pressure from the threat of lost votes in the farm belt.

In a recent report, humorously entitled "Operation Candor," the Nixon administration disclosed that "traditional political considerations" were taken into account in the 1971 decision to increase federal milk price supports.

Nixon also conceded in the statement that Congress was going to pass bills to raise the supports anyway. Can this be the same President who impounded federally appropriated funds for education and social services in defiance of Congress?

Economic considerations were also a prime factor in the milk price support hike. It seems big milk producers gave a very convincing argument for increased supports. Supposedly it would be good for the country as a whole, and especially for big milk agribusinesses.

Nixon knew of the milk producers' $2 million campaign pledge before his March 23, 1971, meeting with dairy association representatives, but it supposedly never entered into his decision to increase supports.

That is like saying cancer does not affect the decisions of a person dying from the disease. Just because you do not talk about something does not mean you do not think about it.

But Nixon is above all that. Money was not the decisive issue to him. Votes were. He did not want to alienate the farm belt and the many votes of "an essential part of his constituency."

It did not seem to matter to the President that the consumer and taxpayer would have to pay for the support hikes. After all, how important is money?

COMMENTARY

A country of secret sharers?

By TOM WICKER New York Times

NEW YORK - How is it to be explained that while 79 per cent of the 2,000 persons recently polled by the Roper organization believed Richard Nixon guilty of one or more serious charges against him, only 44 per cent of the same persons favored his impeachment?

One explanation, given by a large majority of those opposed to impeachment, was that they feared such a step would have a destructive effect on the country. This belief was re - enforced, no doubt, by the fact that less than half of those polled understood that impeachment is the mere bringing of formal charges against a president, rather than his final removal from office. The fact remains that a large and representative group of people believe the President guilty of one or more of 13 specified offenses that appear to be impeachable - helping to cover up the Watergate burglary, for example, or withholding evidence about that event. If anything, the belief in Nixon's guilt probably is stronger today than when the Roper poll was taken. That was in November, before the disclosure of an unexplained 18 - minute gap in one of the controversial White House tapes, and before Nixon's massive disclosure of his finances - both of which were skeptically received by the public.

Nor can the Roper poll's evidence of a widespread belief in Nixon's guilt be dismissed as a measure of opinion only in "elitist" circles, or among confirmed anti -Nixon elements. Among groups most critical of Nixon or most ready to accept his guilt, analysis of the poll discloses, were union members, Catholics and blue collar workers - all groups which supported him heavily in the 1972

One answer is offered by Howard F. Stein of Meharry Medical College in an article in the American Scholar, for winter, 1973 - 74 (though Stein apparently was unaware of the Roper Poll while writing). He suggests - to oversimplify a complex thesis – that most of the American people are themselves too often guilty of short - cutting or ignoring the law and ethics; that while they demand punishment for those who are too openly and violently criminal, or who threaten them, they do not want to punish those who - like themselves - retain a facade of respectability and legality.

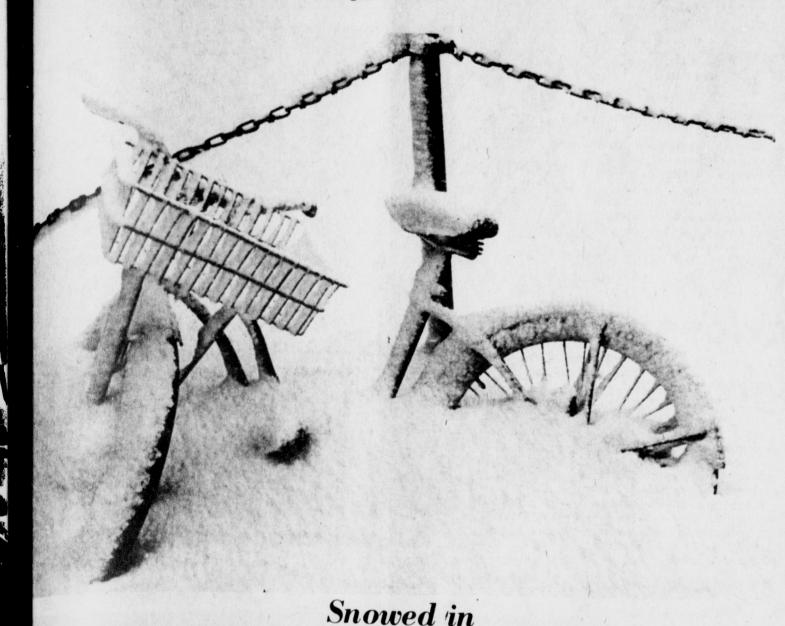

Stein writes of the Nixon - McGovern election, "What was sought and what was preserved . . . is a stern veneer and a

U.S. grand jury probes '70 violence at Kent State

CLEVELAND, Ohio - A federal grand jury is probing the 1970 deaths of four students on the Kent State University campus to determine if indictments should be returned against Ohio National Guard

The grand jury is looking into the May 4, 1970, confrontation between Ohio National Guard troops and student demonstrators protesting American military involvement in Cambodia. The Justice Dept. ordered the jury investigation, which began Dec. 18. reversing the 1971 decision by then - Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell against calling such a probe. A state grand jury exonerated the Guardsmen.

Robert White, president of Kent State University when the 1970 campus protest occurred, said Wednesday he hoped the probe of the incident would "clear up the record."

White, called to testify Wednesday, pledged full cooperation, saying he would answer jurors' questions "as best I can."

Asked whether he felt the record was unclear. White answered, "No, but there are a lot of questions in people's minds. The grand jury should be able to answer those questions." White was off campus when the series of demonstrations began May 2, but flew back to meet with then - Gov. James A. Rhodes and other officials May 3, the morning after demonstrators burned a Reserve Officer Training Corps building.

He was at a restaurant near the site of the confrontation when gunfire erupted

The 23 - member jury apparently spent Wednesday morning re - examining about 300 photos which sources said had been arranged in sequence following Tuesday's testimony by the photographers who took them.

Questions had centered on locations of the students and the Guardsmen, what event triggered the troops' gunfire and whether the Guardsmen were in danger from the students, according to witnesses who testified earlier.

Among the pictures supenaed were up to 160 taken by John P. File, a student at the time of the shootings who is now an Associated Press photographer in Springfield, Ill.

photographer William J. McGuire III, said he was questioned for about an hour on how close the students were to the Guardsmen, whether the troops were in danger from the demonstrators and what sparked the gunfire.

Other photographers testifying Tuesday were Don Roese, 37, and Paul Tople, 25, of the Akron Beacon Journal; Douglas Moore, 50, of the Kent State news service: Gregory Moore, 26, a Kent State journalism instructor who was a student in 1970, and John Darnell, 25, who was a student and a reporter - photographer for an area newspaper in 1970.

McGuire said he told the jurors he was about 170 feet from the Guardsmen when the gunfire began, and heard no order to shoot. He said he told the jurors he could One of Tuesday's witnesses, Cleveland see no danger to the Guardsmen.

Local Dem's re-election rapped

By R. D. CAMPBELL

State News Staff Writer MASON - No one objected when Ingham County voters broke tradition and elected a Democratic majority to the county board of commissioners in late 1972, but one commissioner objected Tuesday night when the Democratic board members decided to break another Republican tradition and re elect David Hollister, D -Lansing as board chairman.

Derwood Boyd, R - East Lansing, challenged Hollister's re - election at the Tuesday meeting of the county commissioners

"It's important to me not to break the tradition," Boyd said. "I'm not objecting to him as a person or an individual." "I think it's a shame that there's not another man among the Democrats willing to step forward and take that responsibility," he added.

Grady Porter, the only black commissioner and who minutes later was elected chairman pro - term, defended the Democratic caucus' selection of Hollister.

"He didn't pull any strings to get this nomination." Porter

Bruce Potter, R - Lansing, commented on the chairman's role in relation to speculation that Hollister might be considering running for the seat in the state House of Representatives to be vacated by Earl Nelson, who announced his candidacy Wednesday morning for the state Senate seat of Phillip Pittenger.

"I would hope that no one would take the chairmanship of this board if he were considering running for the state House of Representative's seat in his district," Potter said. Hollister made no comment on Potter's remarks at the board meeting. Hollister said Wednesday in a phone interview that he would not rule out the possibility of pursuing Nelson's seat but had made no decision.

Commissioners in districts holding heavy student populations receiving committee chairmanships included Richard Conlin, Personnel Committee; James Heyser, Public Works Committee, and Patrick Ryan, Human Services Committee.

Conlin and Heyser were re elected while Ryan is getting his first chairmanship.

Conlin, D - East Lansing, is a first - term Democrat who was active in the McGovern campaign locally. He works at the Public Interest Research Group in Michigan in Lansing.

State News Staff Writer The health and dental services offered by the Lansing Model Cities Program will be integrated into existing programs offered by the Ingham County health and dental programs during the next six months

With the expiration of the Model Cities federal program scheduled for June, the Lansing City Council voted Monday night to approve a contract with the county in which $360,000 in remaining Model Cities funds will be transferred to the county to operate the program until June

Model Cities has been a five year federally funded program that offered a variety of services to inner - city residents of Lansing.

Now that the program is ending, County Commission Chairman David Hollister, D-Lansing, said the county must operate under the assumption that Congress will not act to extend the program. For that reason, the county is taking action to continue services it considers vital. However, the

After June 30 the county will cut 25 of the 33 Model Cities employes who were carried over into the interim program, he added.

If Lansing City Council at that time thinks that the level of services is not sufficient to adequately serve the community, the county will match all funds from the city on a 50 - 50 basis.

The county will spend an additional $70,000 to expand its existing program regardless of Lansing's commitment to further services, Hollister said.

Cantlon said he would then send the report, and its supplement, to the University Health Care Authority for

Responding to Cantlon's comments, committee co chairman Fred Tinning, staff resources director for the College of Osteopathic Medicine, said, "Statistics are at best only gross estimates of what a problem is."

Tinning said the committee received such "guesstimates" from employe unions and agencies on campus like the Counseling Center but, realizing their uncertain nature, used national statistics developed by the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare HEW, instead. The committee applied HEW's estimates to the MSU population. HEW estimated that from 4 to 8 per cent of its employes had serious alcohol abuse problems.

Lyrical Josh White appeals to young, old

This was truly realized through a song written by Michael Smith called "Spoon River." This soft - spoken song carried a sort of down home flavor which was very savory to the ears. The descending, then ascending, chord progression served to soothe the listener.

White had a big smile on his face Tuesday night and so did a lot of the people in the audience when he began to belt out "Lean on Me." The hand clapping, foot - stomping and the singing of the crowd lended a rather spiritual effect to this

The crowd was really cool and responded very well to White. But this wasn't the typical Stables crowd that had

Dylan, the Band pleased by sales, good audiences

By JOHN ROCKWELL New York Times

PHILADELPHIA - Bob Dylan, dressed in jeans, a zippered sweat shirt and a fur hat, sat barefooted and cross - legged on the living room couch of a suite in the Sheraton Hotel in Philadelphia Monday wiping sleep from his eyes and gradually overcoming a certain frog - throatedness usually associated with the early morning hours.

Then, in one of his rare press interviews, he discussed the response to his national tour, his first in eight years.

'Now that it's happened, it pleases me," he said, "But if it hadn't happened, it wouldn't have disappointed me, either."

Dylan acts

In the interim period when Bob Dylan was not recording or touring the country, he tried his hand at acting. Here he is pictured in Sam Peckinpah's "Pat Garrett and Billy the Kid." In this film Dylan did very little acting - in fact he was seen as a sort of shifty knife thrower. Dylan is touring the country now for the first time in eight years and will come to the University of Michigan in early February.

"Being on tour is like being in limbo. It's like going from nowhere to nowhere" he said. "But at least the audiences are different. The audiences on this tour have been very warm," he "Chicago's always good. But on our last tour, Stockholm and London and New York and Austin, Tex. - we are not making it to Austin on this trip - they were good, too. After we finish this we'll sit down and decide what we're going to do next. Maybe we'll go to Europe."

The mood among those associated with the nationwide Bob Dylan tour that began last Thursday in Chicago might best be described as prudently euphoric. David Geffen of Elektra Asylum Records, who brought Dylan and the Band back together for the occasion, called the reception at the first four concerts "fantastic." Robbie Robertson, lead guitarist and spokesman for the Band, says it's been "incredible."

The response to the announcement of the tour, with over $5 million in ticket sales and some $92 million in orders, astonished

Robertson, talking later in his own room, was not as calm. "The ticket orders and the audience response have been just great," he said. "We've all been waiting a long time, especially Bob. And when we finally get there, to have it be a disappointment would have been really heartbreaking. But it's been wonderful."

"The last tour we did, in 1965 - 6, was like a hurricane," Dylan recalled. "This one is more like a hard rain. The last tour, we were going all the time, even when we weren't going. We were always doing something else, which is just as draining as performing. We were looking for Loch Ness monsters, staying up for four days running - and making all those 8 o'clock curtains, besides. There won't be any of that on this tour - for me,

Dylan is not particularly sympathetic to the "glitter rock" phenomenon that has become popular of late. Though he said that he had "no feelings" about the glitter rockers, he offered on reflection that he liked David Bowie - "he probably got started listening to us, back in '65 or '66" - and even Alice Cooper, "good, basic rock 'n' roll."

Robertson is more explicit in his distaste. "It's heartening, the audiences' response so far. We don't take our clothes off, or hang ourselves on stage, or paint our hair. We don't have anything to offer but the music. We are not a bunch of cutie - pies; we're

The current tour repretory has been drawn from a group of about 80 Dylan songs that Dylan and the Band ran through last November and December in Malibu, Calif. "We've tried to do as much as possible," Dylan said. "We want to keep things fresh," added Robertson. "There aren't any arrangements as such of any of the Dylan songs we are doing. There's no set beginning, or end, or key. We just play along together, and hope it comes out right." Dylan has been experimenting with new additions to the program and with the format at every concert and plans to continue with that experimentation. He said that he was surprised at the roaring ovations that have greeted the beginning and end of his solo acoustic sets, but said that he did not plan to expand that portion beyond the present five or six numbers. Robertson said the Band will eventually begin introducing some new songs, definitely by the New York concerts at the end of this month.

Dylan admits to being pleased about the way his new Asylum album, "Planet Waves," has turned out, and Geffen understandably but apparently genuinely - waxes downright lyrical about it.

"I particularly like the song 'Something There Is About You,' Dylan said. "It completes a circle for me, about certain things running through my pattern. But I think they are all good," he added quickly. "I don't play favorites."

Retired MSU prof leads new local band

Stringing it together

style similar to that of older days. The group is open for anyone in the area that is not playing in an orchestra now. State News photo by Dale Atkins By EDWARD ZDROJEWSKI State News Staff Writer

There is a new musical group in the East Lansing area. The East Lansing String Ensemble's purpose is to provide a means for amateur musicians to get together to create music. The ensemble is under the direction of Glen Halik. Halik is a retired professor of engineering at MSU. Before the Depression he was a private music teacher. While at MSU he also taught violin. Halik himself is an accomplished violinist, having played with the Lansing Symphony Orchestra.

Halik said the East Lansing String Ensemble is not a string orchestra. Rather, it is an expanded string quartet. The ensemble plays music that was originally intended for four string players. At the present there are approximately 30 musicians in the ensemble so there are at least six people playing each part.

Halik has a flair for directing this type of group. He selects music that the least experienced members of the ensemble can play. During rehearsals he often stops to explain details of bowing, technique and musical terms that many less experienced musicians are not familiar with.

Halik began to assemble the group in December. It was at that time that he received a grant from the Michigan Council of the Arts. The ensemble is under the People's Program and the School - City Activities Program.

The ensemble is intended for amateur musicians who do not have the ability to play in the local orchestras and chamber ensembles. It is open to anyone who can play a stringed instrument (violin, viola, cello or bass).

The group meets weekly, at 7:30 Monday nights at Hannah Middle School.

Max Ellison, a modern poet born and raised in rural Michigan, will give a poetry reading tonight at 7 p.m. in McDonal Hall kiva. Ellison is considered the poet laureate of Michigan, and he read at Gov. Milliken's inauguration in 1970.

Josh belts 'em out

The incomparable talent of Josh White Jr. can be heard at the Stables today through Saturday. White sings a wide reportory of songs that appeal to everyone from middle - aged couples to students, all of whom boogied together to the sounds of White on Tuesday night.

MUSIC BACKGROUND

Of late, the group has released two albums in this country. The first, "Catch a Fire" was an excellent work that to most people became their first real introduction to reggae. While not creating a panic in the music industry, it was received with open arms by most critics. Things seemed to be setting themselves up for the Suddenly, reggae was flooding the market. Cliff's "Wonderful World, Beautiful People," a past hit of some note, was rereleased in its album form. Radio stations received bizarre sounding singles by artists with names the likes of "Toots and the Maytals" and Bob Marley, leader of the Wailers, had written and worked for Nash at the time of his recording the extremely popular "Stir it Up." The song, earlier performed by the Wailers, was a great success that was eagerly consumed by the record - buying public.

many as one of the best albums of the year - definitely the reggae album of the year - and justifiably so, for it is a fine album that is authentic right down to the roots. Cliff dominates

But the Wailers, with the release of their second LP, "Burnin'," have surpassed Cliff most assuredly. The group is a superb self - centered musical unit. Marley is a tremendous talent that can be showcased more than adequately in the setting of the Wailers. If reggae is to come, hopefully the Wailers will be leading the way.

Reggae as a music form will be an interesting trend to observe.

Many say that it has already done as well as it ever can. However, artists such as Elton John, Roger McGuinn, Paul Simon, Loggins and Messina and even the Beatles (with "Obladi Oblada") have shown by their incorporation of reggae into their work that an interesting and valid art form is on the rise. The promising future

Reggae, street music of Jamaica, introduced to Americans in movie reggae invasion.

State News Reviewer

"Shanty Town, Jamaica - where the best grass in the world sells for $2 an ounce in the street, where shooting a film can be held up when an actor is shot (two have died since the film was completed), where people sing in church till they have an orgasm. Thank you, Lord.'

The above serves as the introductory liner notes to "The Harder They Come" starring Jimmy Cliff, the first movie to introduce reggae music to Americans. Though it has yet to play in the Lansing area, it has nonetheless set the stage for national acceptance of reggae as a valid musical form.

What is reggae? It is the age - old music that has developed in the West Indies and become very much a part of the culture of

Bob Marley - Reggae king

Jamaica. It centers around a way of life that is only understood by the few who live it. Reggae music is as much a true music of the streets as anything else one might suggest.

America has been exposed to reggae many times in the past, though perhaps unknowingly. "My Boy Lollipop," by Millie Small, released in the early 1960s, was reggae, as was "The Israelites," by Desmond Dekker and the Aces, quite popular a few years ago. Johnny Nash officially broke the ice with reggae with "I Can See Clearly Now." Since that time, critics and trade magazines alike have been officially declaring reggae to be the next big American youth craze. Just when this craze will take hold, however, is unknown.

However, the reggae music market is expanding gradually in this country. In Britain, reggae has already established itself, as several bands of local quality try their hardest to produce reggae as best as they can - usually in extremely watered down form.

Reggae is subtle and not at all easy to duplicate. It is a music that is polyrhythmic, containing many varied and interesting melodies and choruses. It is easy to recognize, but again, hard to duplicate.

Of the leaders in reggae music today, one group clearly stands in the forefront. From Jamaica, they are the Wailers, the island's No. 1 group. They are the epitome of reggae music in its most commercially acceptable, while authentic, form.

MSU makes headway n battle to save fuel

In the continuing saga of light and heat versus cold and dark, MSU seems to be gaining ground. Paul Nilsson, associate director for utility services, said not only did the University save 2,000 tons of coal between mid - November and mid - December, but it also saved about $44,000 in the process, at today's market price for coal.

In 1972, during the same period, energy eaters on campus gulped down 16,103 tons of coal, but only 14,119.4 tons were conserved under an energy conserving project started in November.

But Nilsson warns that the oughest test is still ahead, during mid - Michigan's frigid winter months. He says that earlier coal savings may be due partially to temperatures which were about 10 degrees warmer than during the previous year.

A recent step taken to squeeze off unnecessary energy includes replacing water fountain handles with pushbuttons to prevent people from locking the handles so water runs all day.

Running water requires electricity to pump it, he said.

In MSU married housing, apartment temperatures have been reduced four to six degrees to about 70 degrees, and 18 per cent of the outside lighting has been eliminated, manager John Roetman said. University architect Robert

Research monkeys join growing list of shortages

By PAULA HOLMES State News Staff Writer

Another shortage - in this era of shortages - has struck. This time it has hit science researchers across the world.

bad that he is urging his colleagues to set up breeder colonies so that the United States will not be dependent on other nations for Scientists are faced with a lack of nonhuman primates for biomedical research. Monkey business? Not according to Richard Dukelow, director of the MSU Endocrine Research Laboratory. The shortage is so

"The shortage has occurred because countries are restricting exports of monkeys to conserve their natural supply," Dukelow

Over 250,000 monkeys are used annually in experiments throughout the world and less than 1 per cent of them are born and reared in captivity. This number does not include monkeys that are used in the production of the polio vaccine, sold as pets and sold to zoos and circuses.

"Of 200 monkeys caught in the wild only one is left alive at the end of one year," Dukelow said. "About 100 monkeys die in transport and never make it to the States. When the governments of India, Indonesia and South American countries see this tremendous waste they are afraid that it will deplete their

"South American and Indonesian countries have already restricted their monkey exports and it's just a matter of time until India does," he said.

Rhesus and squirrel monkeys are most commonly used in

Researchers have not developed breeding colonies because it they needed one, Dukelow said.

"It costs about $1 a day to raise a monkey to maturity," he said. "And they take from three to six years to reacn maturity so by the time it's ready for research quite a lot of money has been

"Normally a monkey costs about $80. The person who catches it only receives about $5 so you can see what a markup there is," he said

For the past four years MSU scientists have studied the reproduction of monkeys with an aim at improving fertility in

The establishment of breeder colonies will result in better research animals," Dukelow explained. "We will know the animal's exact age and heredity.

"Also, when we want to test the effects of a certain drug, like thalidomide, on pregnancy we will know the exact day of the monkey's pregnancy and what type of effect occurred to the Four other research units are also trying to build up breeder colonies in Washington state, California, Lousianna and Switzerland.

MSU researchers have also been working on "in vitro" fertilization of monkeys. The scientists recover the egg and sperm from the monkeys so that fertilization can occur in a test tube.

'We have been successful in fertilization and we have been able to keep the embryo alive to the four - cell stage, about 24-48 hours," Dukelow said. "Our ultimate goal is to fertilize the egg and put it back in a foster mother. No one has ever been successful in the transfer back."

Two other centers have been successful in fertilizing monkey eggs, the University of Georgia and The Southwest Foundation in San Antonio, Tex.

GREASE

The New 50's Rock 'n Roll musical Hit Broadway's longest running musical brings back teen-age life styles of the 1950's. The boys wear short hair swept back into elaborate greasy coifs called "D.A.'s" sporting motorcycle jackets, pegged pants, turned-up shirt collars and T-shirts with cigarette packs secured in rolled up sleeves. Girls wear beehive hairdos, chew gum and wear boys' windbreakers with their names sewn on. They're in pedal pushers, spongy white bobby-sox, cinch belts, long felt skirts and crinolines. Together, they dance the Hand Jive, the Hully Gully and the Stroll and their songs include "Freddy My Love," "Rock 'n Roll Party Queen," "It's Raining on Prom Night and "All Choked Up.

Have you ever been ripped off by a door - to - door salesman or repairman and not been able to get your money back or even ret customer satisfaction?

Now you may be able to get help from the Consumer and Business Affairs Division of the Ingham County prosecutor's office. The division was established to provide consumers with a nediator and handle their complaints, Raymond Scodeller, rosecuting attorney, said.

The consumer division, in operation since Dec. 1, operates on t $33,000 budget funded by a federal and state grant through he Office of Criminal Justice, Scodeller said.

The division was approved by the Ingham County Board of commissioners in late August, but not more than $750 of the ounty's money goes into the fund's operation.

Since Jan. 2, the division has received 34 calls from consumers the have complaints about repairmen, used auto sales and mobile

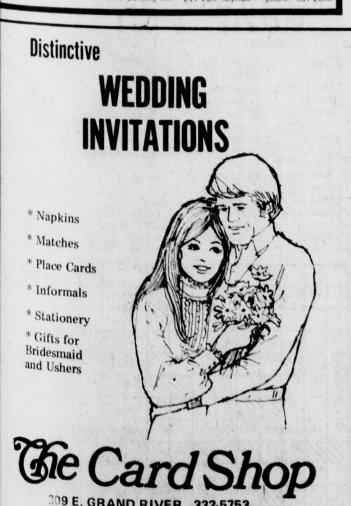

If a consumer has a complaint, he can contact the office by alling 482 - 1517 or he can fill out a complaint form in the first office of the Ingham County Building, 116 W. Ottawa St.

The division is staffed by Director Lawrence Emery, asst. rosecuting attorney; Alex Schwartzkopf, investigator, and eorgia M. Farr, administrative assistant. Scodeller said the division will serve as a mediator between

If the consumer cannot get satisfaction through mediation, the division suggests he take the business to small claims court. The division is not authorized to handle civil cases in court, Scodeller

Though some consumer sources expressed doubt about the effectiveness of the new program, Richard Conlin, county commissioner, said it was too early to evaluate the program.

Scodeller said consumers can alleviate problems by avoiding deals with door - to - door salesmen, fly - by - night businesses and mail order firms. He suggested consumers thoroughly check out a business before dealing with it.

He also said the division is planning to educate consumers via newsletters, the media and public speaking engagements.

Consideration of a mediation panel, composed of community representatives, is underway in Scodeller's office. He said no action will be taken on the panel until a definite need for it is

Two of the consumers contacting the division since Jan. 1 have been MSU students. Most of the consumers have been residents of Ingham County though the division will handle nonresidents complaints also.

Scodeller said there are only five or six other consumer divisions in county prosecutor's offices in the state.

He said consumers calling the prosecuting attorney's office for advice is not new, but a separate consumer division was not set up until funding was available, Scodeller said.

Scodeller, Ingham county prosecuting attorney for five years, is currently serving a four - year term which began in 1972.

Schwartzkopf, who serves as investigator for the office, said he follows up complaints by personally contacting the business in question. He said he also follows up complaints which have an overtone of a criminal nature.

For example, he handled a complaint about two building contractors who were doing unsatisfactory work. They have since been arrested for operating without a license.

Schwartzkopf also serves as a liaison between the division and police agencies who may receive consumer complaints. A retired policeman, he served 25 years with the Michigan State Police and

He said he believes the division is a good idea because it is close to the people at the county level.

Wine boycott backed by Bullard resolution

The next time you take a swig of cheap wine, note the brand name and city. If it came from Modesto, Calif., it is a scab product, according to Rep. Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor.

"Many people who would not ordinarily buy scab products don't realize that all Gallo wines are scab wines," Bullard said. He introduced a resolution supporting the United Farm Workers union boycott against wines made from nonunion grapes.

Included in the scab wine list are Ripple, Boone's Farm, Spanada, Paisano and Thunderbird, Bullard said. "The United Farm Workers, under the leadership of Cesar Chavez, are fighting for the simple right of union reco collective bargaining for better working conditions," Bullard said.

'Most American workers won this right in the 1930s.' His resolution also named some other brands not covered by the boycott. They are: Italian Swiss Colony, Annie Green Springs, Bali Hai, Zapple, Santa Fe and Mission Bell.

Milliken proclaims day for Martin Luther King

The man who first proclaimed "I have a dream" now has a day dedicated to his good works.

Gov. Milliken proclaimed Tuesday that this Sunday will be Martin Luther King Jr. Day in Michigan.

The proclamation precedes state legislation sponsored by Rep. Jackie Vaughn, D Detroit, to make the second Sunday of January a state holiday commemorating King. The bill is expected to pass the state Senate today

"We had great support from both sides of the aisle in recognizing King's achievement," Vaughn said.

Kissinger will discuss with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat proposals made by Israel for a military disengagement near the Suez Canal before traveling to Israel to see Premier Golda Meir. Kissinger last visited Mideast trouble spots in December. This will be his third visit to the region since the October war. Accompanying Kissinger will be Ambassador - at - Large Ellsworth Bunker, Middle East troubleshooter Joseph Sisco, Deputy Asst. Secretary of State Alfred Atherton, legal adviser Carlyle Law and Harold Saunders of the National Security Council staff.

In other Mideast developments:

• Israeli and Egyptian generals suspended deadlocked days to allow their governments time to make new political decisions. The recess of the brief meeting, the sixth since talks began Dec. 16, will give the United States and the Soviet Union a chance to nudge the parties closer to agreement. While Kissinger visits Cairo and Tel Aviv, Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy will confer in Moscow with Soviet lèaders.

Informed diplomats said the Israeli delegation has not yet presented the plan for the disengagement of Israeli and Egyptian forces on the Suez front which Kissinger and Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan discussed in Washington Friday and Saturday. The plan is understood to be an Israeli offer of an 18 - mile withdrawal from the Suez Canal if Egypt reduces its forces on the east bank. Both sides are observing a strict news blackout on the talks

• A 50 - yard advance by 10 Egyptian soldiers a mile north of Suez City has created tension in the area, a United Nations Emergency Force spokesman reports, but other areas along the tenuous cease. fire line were reported "relatively quiet." In Tel Aviv the Israeli military command reported fighting on the Syrian front and said one Israeli soldier was killed and six injured Tuesday by Syrian guns. There were 17 cease fire violations along the Suez Canal.
