Experts claim erasures caused tape gap

WASHINGTON (AP) — Technical experts said Tuesday that an 18-minute gap in a subpoenaed White House tape was caused by erasing and rerecording and any speech on the tape cannot be recovered.

At a court hearing after the release of the panel's findings, Watergate prosecutor Richard Ben-Veniste tried to get the experts to say whether the erasure was made deliberately.

But that line of questioning ran immediately into a flurry of objections by White House lawyer James D. St. Clair and the lawyer representing separately President Nixon's personal secretary.

The judge tried to get around the objection by asking the witness, Richard H. Bolt, "Is it your opinion this 18.5 minute erasure was accidentally or deliberately done?"

That also went unanswered because of objections.

The experts said they could tell that at least five starts and stops were made with the erase-record button on and said there is electronic evidence on the tape to support that.

"The buzzing sounds were put on the tape in the process of erasing and rerecording at least five and perhaps as many as nine separate and continuous segments," said the report to U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica.

The six-man panel that has been examining the tape of June 20, 1972, said "the recording controls must have been operated by hand in the making of each segment."

The conversation in question, on one of nine tapes subpoenaed from the White House by the Watergate special prosecutor, was between Nixon and H.R. Haldeman, then his chief of staff.

The report was made public by Sirica, who then called a hearing in open court for testimony by the experts.

The office of the White House counsel issued a statement saying it would withhold immediate comment. It noted that Sirica has received the report and added:

"Since this received report is only a summary, and since the matter is still within the jurisdiction of the district court, any premature comment would only contribute further to existing public confusion surrounding the tapes."

The experts said in their report that at three locations in the 18.5-minute section of the tape, "we have observed a fragment of speech-like sound lasting less than one second. Each of the fragments lies exactly at a place on the tape that was missed by the erase head during the series of operations in which the several segments of erasure and buzz were put on the tape."

As to whether the speech can be recovered, the experts said "we think not. We know of no technique... Even the fragments that we have observed are so heavily obscured that we cannot tell what was erased."

Haldeman's notes introduced at a hearing in December showed that the missing portion contained conversation about the Watergate break-in that had occurred three days before the tape was made.

Nixon's secretary, Rose Mary Woods, has testified she accidentally pushed the record button for some five minutes while transcribing the tape.

"The magnetic signatures observed on the tape show conclusively that the 18.5-minute section could not have been produced by any single, continuous operation," the report said.

At-large members assail proposal to reduce seats

By MIKE GALATOLA
State News Staff Writer

The future of minority student seats on the Academic Council dominated Tuesday afternoon's opening debate on the report calling for the council's streamlining.

Student councilmembers, particularly at-large members, assailed the provision of the report of the Ad Hoc Committee to Review Academic Governance that called for a reduction of the at-large members on the council.

The committee has suggested that only six at-large members sit on the council, requiring that two female and five nonwhite students be included.

Ten at-large members currently hold council seats. Present bylaws require that five female and six nonwhite students sit on the council.

The council did not vote on an amendment presented by Larry Bartrem, chairman of the Student Affairs Committee, to retain the present composition of the at-large seats because the meeting was adjourned.

The next meeting will be Tuesday.

Though the nonwhite at-large seats would decrease by only six-tenths of 1 per cent in proportion to the rest of the Academic Council, at-large members said the reduction would seriously stifle minority representation if the provision is adopted.

"If the number of at-large seats is reduced," Ron Bowden, at-large member, said, "the means to express our opinions will regress from the gains we've made in the council to the protest methods we were forced to use before."

"Minority representation must be maintained to insure that the values of this body won't become too narrow," Jeff Davis of the Office of Black Affairs told councilmembers.

But Herbert C. Rudman, representative for the College of Education, presented the council with attendance figures provided by the secretary of the faculties that indicated what he viewed as a lack of participation in governance affairs by at-large members.

The average attendance of student members — excluding at-large members — at council meetings was 75 per cent for 1971-72 and 50 per cent for 1972-73, Rudman said.

He added that at-large member attendance for 1971-72 was 49 per cent. It dropped to 25.5 per cent in 1972-73. The attendance of those female and nonwhite student members who were elected through their colleges rather than as at-large members averaged 43 per cent for 1972-73.

"It appears that minority students elected by their peers in the colleges performed better than those elected at-large," Rudman said. "The number is not as important as the participation."

Trowbridge Road rail depot gains favor

By LINDA SANDEL
State News Staff Writer

Rumblings within the ranks of people involved in planning the upcoming Lansing area Amtrak passenger service may be instrumental in persuading local officials to choose property along Trowbridge Road as the site for a new train depot.

The Capitol Area Council of governments meets tonight to recommend a location for the new depot which will serve passengers using a Port Huron - Lansing - Chicago rail line, scheduled to begin serving Lansing in early April.

Controversy over the location of the depot has been raging for months among representatives of local governments, the Dept. of State Highways and interested citizens.

Questions have centered around two possible sites: one at the Depot Restaurant at 1203 S. Washington Ave. in Lansing and the other along the train tracks at Trowbridge Road, just west of Harrison Road in East Lansing.

Originally the Amtrak committee of the council informally favored the Washington Avenue site, but events of the past week may lead to a change of mind.

After the council hears the Amtrak committee's recommendation at its 7:30 p.m. meeting today in Lansing City Hall, the full council is expected to recommend whether the Trowbridge Road or South Washington Avenue site should be approved by East Lansing, Lansing and Ingham County.

Kevin McKinney, manager of railway operations in the state highway department's Bureau of Urban Transportation, outlined his reasons for believing that the council should firmly support the Trowbridge Road site.

McKinney, who was instrumental in forming the Amtrak project, said that the owner of the Depot Restaurant, Vincent Maccagni, has begun to tighten the strings on his initial financial proposals.

"Maccagni, who originally was to provide depot services free of charge, now wants the cities to employ three people to service train passengers — a bartender, a cashier and a waitress," McKinney said. "The depot would be the only train station I know with a staff bartender."

In addition, local officials have been concerned with the lack of available parking at the South Washington Avenue site.

Owners of the property for the Trowbridge Road site have agreed to lease it to East Lansing on a $1 option for 18 months, providing that the city pays the taxes on the land.

In addition, McKinney believes the site would provide greater flexibility because "it would not be piggy-backing on the services of a restaurant."

"The state highway department and the Urban Bureau of Transportation are firmly in favor of the Trowbridge site," McKinney said.

McKinney, a former MSU student, as well as others in the railway division of the transportation bureau, base their approval of the Trowbridge Road location on a combination of personal experience and firm statistics.

McKinney reminisced of the days when he served as a station manager for a depot located at Farm Lane.

He remembers that many students used the old depot, which was actually only a three-sided structure with no heat and a single pay telephone.

"People could have gone to the old depot in Lansing if they had wanted to," said McKinney. "The lack of facilities at our small station was not appealing, but East Lansing people, particularly students, apparently found the station convenient."

McKinney also said that he has no doubt that if the two stations had been of equal size and comfort, the East Lansing station would have been, by far, the one most often used.

He estimated that the East Lansing station attracted about 400-450 passengers a week, and statistics provided by the Grand Trunk public relations director bear him out.

They also show that ticket sales hit their lowest ebb during the summer months, which indicates that students may have been the most faithful users of passenger train service.

Mark Hinsdale, who originally proposed and developed the reinstatement of an Amtrak passenger line to this area for an 18-month demonstration period, is studying transportation at MSU.

Hinsdale, who is employed by the transportation bureau, also favors the establishment of the Trowbridge Road depot.

He explained that passenger service to the area was discontinued, not because of lack of ridership, but because it was a victim of the Amtrak takeover of private ownership of passenger rail service and the subsequent cutbacks.

COMMISSIONER ACKNOWLEDGES

Horseman's return prearranged

By R.D. CAMPBELL
State News Staff Writer

The Ingham County Fair Board may have pulled one of the biggest political ploys in county history when it decided at its Dec. 26 meeting to contract with Charles Casagrande to maintain and supervise the county's fairgrounds in Lansing.

A stormy drawn-out battle erupted last October when the fair board decided not to renew a lease with Casagrande for horse barns and trailer lots that Casagrande had leased to 11 families who raised and trained harness horses at the Fairgrounds.

Casagrande, also a harness horse racer, lived on the premises in a house trailer with his family. He was responsible for upkeep of the barns and the race track.

Late Tuesday, following publication of a State News article exposing a scheme among county officials to return Casagrande to the fairgrounds after the families were evicted, Fay called a special meeting of fair board members to reach some kind of compromise in the situation. Details of the meeting were not available when the State News went to press.

However, earlier Tuesday county commissioner John Hayden, Williamston, acknowledged to the State News that plans were being readied for Casagrande's return — even before the fair board meeting in October where representatives of the 11 later evicted families asked the board to reconsider its action and allow them to form an association. They wanted to lease horse barns and a trailer area directly from the board, eliminating Casagrande as middleman.

This admission verified charges made by Commissioner Patrick Ryan, Lansing, in the Tuesday State News article.

Apparently the eviction of the 11 families and Casagrande had been part of a pre-conceived plan that would take the heat off the fair board. Meanwhile, certain members had private conversations and made plans to bring Casagrande back after a couple months as a caretaker.

Hayden would not name other fair board members involved in the scheme. However, Commissioner Richard Conlin, D-East Lansing, said Tuesday that Hayden told himself and two other commissioners Mary Schoemehl and John Veenstra, following a county committee meeting that Derwood Dickinson, fair board chairman, and Fay, R-Stockbridge, had told Casagrande that he would have to move out for a couple months.

Conlin added that he learned the fair board would do "as much as it could" to bring him back to maintain the fairgrounds. Schoemehl said Monday that Hayden informed her of the scheme.

Hayden said they chose Casagrande because he knew the set-up at the fairgrounds and because an exchange of services could be arranged. Casagrande would plow the driveways around the fairgrounds and the fair board office, while Casagrande, in turn, could train his horses on the county track, stable them in one of the horse barns and live — free of charge — on the grounds in his mobile home.

Both Fay and Dickinson deny that they were parties to conversations and the resultant attempts to insure that Casagrande be reinstated on the fairgrounds. Both admit, however, that they thought there would be an eventual need for someone to act as a caretaker for the fairgrounds and that Charles Casagrande was the only name mentioned. This they said happened even before anyone had been evicted.

David Hollister, who is both chairman of the commission and a member of the fair board, said he thought it was the

MSU employees' group named union for C-Ts

By DIANE SILVER
State News Staff Writer

Almost 14 months after the 1972 election, the MSU Employees' Assn. was declared Tuesday the official bargaining group for MSU's clerical-technical workers.

When the remaining 92 challenged votes were opened and counted Tuesday by the Michigan Employment Relations Commission, the MSU Employees' Assn. had received a total of 725 votes, with the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) getting 701.

The ballots were opened after a decision by the commission was upheld by the Michigan Court of Appeals on Dec. 6. The opening was held up by difficulties in scheduling a day convenient to all parties.

The election held in November 1972 was the result of an inconclusive election in October 1972 which only determined that C-T employees did want to be represented by a collective bargaining unit. Since neither union received 51 per cent of the October votes, a runoff election was held.

In the November election AFSCME received 634 votes and the association 617, with 179 unopened ballots challenged. The challenges centered around whether supervisors had been allowed to vote and whether all C-T employees were able to vote. Over the past year many of the challenges were dropped and the ballots opened, leaving the remaining 92 challenged ballots opened Tuesday.

Art Underwood, administrative assistant to AFSCME's Council of Seven, said his reaction to the election was unprintable.

"We've called for a meeting of the people involved in the election for Wednesday night to decide on our future plans but it appears that we want to petition to set aside the results," Underwood said.

"The results as announced today are so close — less than 30 votes apart — that I feel it's inconceivable that the association would not want to be fair and get this determined in a more definitive way."

China negotiating for U.S. 'copters

China is negotiating for large American helicopters that could be used in military patrols along her borders with the Soviet Union.

The United States has taken the initial step of allowing the United Aircraft Corp. to give Peking sales information on the helicopters. United Aircraft spokesmen confirmed that preliminary talks with China for a fleet of helicopters are under way in Peking and at the company headquarters in Connecticut.

Any completion of the current talks between United Aircraft and China will involve a policy decision by President Nixon, even though the firm would be selling the commercial version of a military helicopter.

Court rules against rights group

An effort by civil rights advocates to halt an alleged conspiracy against blacks among law enforcement officials in Cairo, Ill., failed in the U.S. Supreme Court Tuesday.

Civil rights advocates filed a federal civil rights class action suit charging county judges with handing out longer sentences and setting excessive bail for blacks.

Reversing a decision that the blacks were entitled to seek an injunction against local judges and prosecutors, the high court ruled 6-3 that their complaints did not add up to a real case or controversy, the constitutional requirement for obtaining relief in the federal courts.

The court also said that issuing an injunction against acts by state judges would amount to interference unwarranted by the facts of the case, "nothing less than an ongoing federal audit of state criminal proceedings" that should be avoided unless "irreparable injury" is imminent.

Beef costs up, tight supply seen

Consumers are paying more for beef at the supermarkets and industry spokesmen predict beef supplies will be tight for the first half of 1974.

Wholesale beef prices have risen 33 per cent in the last six weeks, though it has not yet reached last summer's peak of $56.38 per hundred pounds for a live, choice steer at Chicago-area markets. On Jan. 11 the price was $49.50.

Prices had gone down after the beef price freeze ended in September and cattlemen started sending animals to market they had withheld earlier, increasing supply. But fewer cattle had been placed in feedlots for fattening during the freeze, so when the temporary supply rise ended, prices rose again.

Britain shuts resettlement camp

The last resettlement camp for Asians expelled from Uganda closed Tuesday amid charges the British government was treating the immigrants badly.

The 40 to 50 families leaving the former British air base of West Malling near London were the remainder of about 22,000 persons suddenly uprooted when Uganda announced in August 1972 that all Asians on British passports in Uganda would have to leave.

Immigrant leaders claim there was no sustained attempt by the British to resettle the Asians. However, the government-appointed Ugandan Resettlement Board said it was satisfied and was prepared to go out of existence by Feb. 1.

Indonesia sets curfew after riot

The Indonesian government imposed a dusk-to-dawn curfew Tuesday after students protesting the visit of Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka rampaged through the streets of Jakarta.

Unconfirmed reports said one student was killed and at least 10 were seriously injured after the army fought the students in an attempt to restore order.

The students, like those at other stops on Tanaka's Southeast Asia tour, are protesting that the Japanese get too big a slice of the Asian market. Protestors claimed that Japanese aid helps Japanese businessmen, not Indonesians.

Geisel new Brazilian president

In a routine government-run election Tuesday, denounced by the political opposition as a farce, Gen. Ernesto Geisel, 65, a Lutheran, became president of Brazil, the world's largest Roman Catholic country. Many Brazilians were unaware of the election and, when questioned, did not know who Geisel was.

The son of German immigrants, Geisel, a teetotaler and nonsmoker, had been head of the government oil monopoly Petrobras. He succeeds President Emilio G. Medici on March 15 to a five-year term. He had been named by Brazil's ruling military regime last June to be Brazil's next president, and drew 400 of 497 electoral college votes.

Though the opposition Brazilian Democratic Movement candidate received 76 votes (there were 21 abstentions) it is the government's Arena party that has run the country since the military overthrew a civilian president in 1964 because of fears of alleged Communist influence.

Troop pullback remains doubtful

JERUSALEM (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger reported Tuesday that Israeli leaders were finding "constructive aspects" of the Suez troop disengagement proposal he brought them from Egypt. The Israelis were less optimistic.

Foreign Minister Abba Eban, asked whether he agreed with Kissinger, replied: "I would like the Egyptians to see constructive aspects in our proposal."

Israeli sources suggested the disagreement between their own withdrawal offer and the Egyptian plan was considerable. Eban, in talking to newsmen, said negotiators had gone over the Egyptian plan and map "in very great detail" and the talks were at "a delicate intermediate stage."

Asked whether Israel was satisfied with Egypt's proposal, Eban said: "We took note of what Egypt says and we remark on the things they say to which we have counterproposals."

Kissinger held two sessions with Eban, Deputy Premier Yigal Allon, Defense Minister Moshe Dayan, Chief of Staff David Elazar and others.

Kissinger was to stay overnight in Israel for more talks today in efforts to narrow the differences between the Egyptian and Israeli withdrawal plans. He then planned to fly back to Egypt for another round of reconciliation talks with President Anwar Sadat.

The back-and-forth mediation efforts by an American secretary of state were unprecedented in the memories of observers with Kissinger. He already has been to Egypt twice in his current shuttling between Sadat and the Israelis.

One principal item in dispute apparently is the number of men and kinds of weapons Egypt would retain on the east bank of the Suez Canal. Along these lines, Likud, the leading Israeli opposition party, charged the government of Premier Golda Meir with "endangering the nation's security and our soldiers' safety" in pursuing disengagement with the Egyptians.

Likud warned that Soviet SAM6 missiles on the east bank would be able to reach the strategic Mitla and Giddi mountain passes in the Sinai Peninsula, the point which the government is said to be agreeable to withdraw its forces from the canal.

Another major hangup is Sadat's reported unwillingness to include in any agreement the specifics of the troops and equipment Egypt would be permitted to keep on the east bank.

At the very least, Sadat is believed to object to specific terms about how Egypt should operate on what he considers to be Egyptian territory. Kissinger is known to be working on an understanding that would not be put down on paper.

The secretary held a one-hour meeting with Meir, who has stayed away from the talks because of illness. The cabinet was to hear a report on the talks with Kissinger.

Eban said that with each Kissinger visit the talks were becoming "more and more detailed," and were going at an "energetic pace."

In a related development, Saudi Arabia's King Faisal reportedly said he is willing to end the oil embargo against the United States if Washington declares publicly that Israel withdraw from all occupied Arab territory. Sen. J. Bennett Johnston Jr., D-La., said Faisal made the remarks to him during a meeting in Saudi Arabia last week.

Chess players move toward top

By JOHN TINGWALL
State News Staff Writer

Who will be the next challenger to face the controversial Bobby Fischer in the 1975 World Chess Championship? MSU Chess Club members believe it will either be Boris Spassky or Anatoly Karpov, both of the Soviet Union. They are currently vying for a chance to dethrone the world champion. Quarterfinal matches are being held in Puerto Rico, Spain, the Soviet Union and the United States to determine who will face Fischer in 1975. Spassky, the world champion Fischer defeated in 1972, and Robert Byrne, an American grandmaster, played a draw in the opening game of the quarterfinals in San Juan, Puerto Rico. David Whitehouse, named a chessmaster last month by the U.S. Chess Federation based on his tournament play, said Spassky is the superior player. "Byrne's recent successes don't hold up. Spassky is a tremendous player, said Whitehouse.

"In the finals, it will be Spassky against Fischer," he added. "Fischer does more work than anybody else and he knows more than anybody else. He has tremendous depth in the game and he'll probably defeat Spassky easily."

Scott Dykstra, vice president of the Chess Club, also favors Spassky over Byrne.

"Byrne has just gotten into competing at this level of competition," Dykstra said. "He has played very energetically and successfully recently, especially in the last couple months, but Spassky has a little more drive and experience. I'd say it's about 3-2 in Spassky's favor."

Though Dykstra favors Spassky in his current match, he does not believe Spassky has the energy to make it to the finals against Fischer.

"It will probably be Anatoly Karpov in the finals," he said. "He is the top Russian player. Though he has a reputation for playing the game safely, like an old man, he does have youth on his side."

"In the finals, Fischer will probably crush Karpov," he added. "It's hard to equal Fischer. His attitude and ways add an air of competition that make it much more difficult for any of his opponents."

Gary Fladmoe, secretary-treasurer of the Chess Club, said either Spassky or Karpov will progress to the finals against Fischer, but neither will defeat him.

In other quarterfinals, Henrique Mecking of Brazil meets Viktor J. Korchnoi of the Soviet Union in Augusta, Ga., Karpov plays fellow Russian Lev Polugaevsky in Moscow and Tigran Petrosian of the Soviet Union plays Lajos Portisch of Hungary in Palma de Mallorca, Spain.

Trustees to hear report on fees for publications

By DIANE SILVER
State News Staff Writer

The creation of a central fund for student publications is one of three recommendations concerning publication fees that will be presented to the board of trustees at its meeting Friday.

The Committee on Student Publication Fee Revision, created by the trustees last June, will also recommend that the $1 State News fee be retained and that the fee collection code, which allows for fees to be modified or removed by referendum, be amended to include the State News.

The trustees will only vote on the two recommendations concerning the State News fee, trustee Aubrey Radcliffe, R-Lansing, and committee chairman, said. The creation of a central fund is a recommendation to ASMSU and the Council of Graduate Students (COGS).

The two governing bodies may carry out the recommendation in the form suggested by the committee or set up a different structure to allocate the funds, Beth Andrus, president of COGS and committee member, said. The fund must be approved by the student body in a referendum before it can be set in operation.

The committee's model of the fund consists of two boards. An evaluation board of four professional journalists would act as consultants by evaluating each publication's request for money. A student literary appropriations board of nine students would make the final decision.

Andrus noted that the committee has not formally approved the recommendation concerning the literary fund.

The committee was created by the board last year in response to a presentation by Grapevine Journal editors on the financial problems of the Journal. The newspaper suspended publication in October because of these difficulties.

George White, senior editor of the Grapevine Journal, said that Journal officials have been included on the trustees' agenda and will comment on the recommendations at the meeting.

FACULTY VIEWPOINT

A significant and far reaching policy decision was made by the MSU Board of Trustees when, in 1972, it directed that a complete faculty salary list should be published each year as a matter of public information.

This decision on the part of the Board was very much welcomed and supported by MSU/FA which had long sought such information as a legitimate means of demonstrating the pay inequities that have long existed among equally qualified faculty members both within and between ranks, and between males and females generally.

MSU/FA from its inception has endeavored to impress upon the University the need for a rational pay policy that would result in fair and equal treatment of all members of the faculty without regard to the contingencies of the marketplace, variations in disciplines, or discriminations on the basis of race, sex, or religion.

After all, the cost of living increases just as rapidly for the one person as the other without regard to his or her academic affiliation. In other words, when two faculty members have reached the same level of achievement within the University, it is illogical to assume that the one should be paid less than the other on grounds of some assumed differentiation in level of competition for jobs in their respective fields or otherwise. Similarly, there is no reason to assume that women faculty members are any less qualified for appointment or promotion, or have fewer economic needs, than male faculty members, and thus should be paid less for the same tasks, particularly when the facts tend to demonstrate the contrary.

The ready availability of a detailed faculty salary list is essential to the task of identifying gross inequities in pay among faculty members, as well as to reveal patterns in such regards. For such a listing to be maximally useful, however, it is essential that it also be presented in a manner and form most convenient for purposes of comparative analysis. Simply identifying faculty salaries in alphabetical order as was done by the Administration in 1972 does nothing to satisfy the needs and interests of the faculty, or of the public.

In 1972-73, for example, MSU/FA found it necessary to re-order the information provided by the Administration to show a breakdown of salaries by rank, department, and so forth. This was done in cooperation with the Michigan Education Association, and involved considerable time, effort, and expense, with the result that a final publication of 1972-73 faculty salaries, presented in a manner and form most convenient for use, was not made available until late in the Spring of 1973.

Now what about 1973-74 information? Has the Administration gained from this earlier experience? Apparently not, for according to a recent State News article, University spokesmen indicate that while the faculty pay list may be expected to be off the press next week, it will be in the same form as in the past with names listed alphabetically. This in spite of the numerous requests made by faculty groups and individuals otherwise.

MSU/FA regrets this decision of the University, for a simple alphabetical listing of salaries makes it impossible for the average faculty member to make any meaningful comparisons between his or her salary and that of others. It will be difficult, for example, to determine whether sufficient improvements have been made in salaries for faculty women to justify modifications or additions to the sex discrimination complaints which MSU/FA filed against the University some months ago with both the Michigan Civil Rights Commission and the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission.

Without such detail, it will be difficult to determine whether other inequities have been removed or remedied as well, particularly with regard to differences within ranks, or between departments, which might also be said to be the product of discrimination or favoritism.

As indicated, it is the position of MSU/FA that the arbitrary nature of faculty salary determination must be eliminated at Michigan State University, and a rational salary policy created. A simple alphabetical listing of faculty salaries, while complying with the directive of the Board of Trustees, does little, unfortunately, to facilitate development of such a policy.

Trowbridge Road best for service; only real choice for Amtrak depot

When the Amtrak committee of the Capital Area Council of Government meets tonight to recommend the location of a depot for the proposed Chicago - Lansing - Port Huron train run, the committee would do well to opt for the Trowbridge Road site.

For several weeks, committee members have discussed two possible sites for the new run, which will start in early April.

One site is in East Lansing, on Trowbridge Road west of Harrison Road. The other is at the Depot restaurant on South Washington Avenue in downtown Lansing.

Until recently, it seemed likely the Lansing site would get the nod for a financial reason: the owner of the Depot restaurant offered to provide the depot and services free.

But now the Depot restaurant owner wants the city to provide the three employees to run the depot that he originally offered to supply.

With good reason, it looks as though the Trowbridge site is the best bet.

Parking area is inadequate at the Lansing site, while the owners of the land at the Trowbridge site — where there is room for parking — have agreed to let the city of East Lansing take the option on leasing the land.

And a depot at Trowbridge Road could take advantage of two intersecting train lines, the Grand Trunk and the Chesapeake and Ohio. The Lansing site is only serviced by Grand Trunk Rail.

More important, a great number of MSU students would benefit from the comfort and relative low cost of riding a train between school and their home towns.

In fact, figures compiled by Grand Trunk show that when a run did go through East Lansing from 1968 to 1971, MSU students formed the bulk of ridership in the Lansing area. Students deserve to have their transportation needs considered by locating the depot at a convenient spot for them.

A Trowbridge location would not only be more convenient for students, but also for residents of outlying areas. The Amtrak committee would make a great mistake if it did not recommend the Trowbridge site tonight.

signed on Jan. 2 by President Nixon, states have 60 days in which to reduce their speed limits to the required 55 m.p.h., or face loss of federal funds.

The Michigan Legislature has not yet moved to reduce the state's speed limit, and time is fast running out.

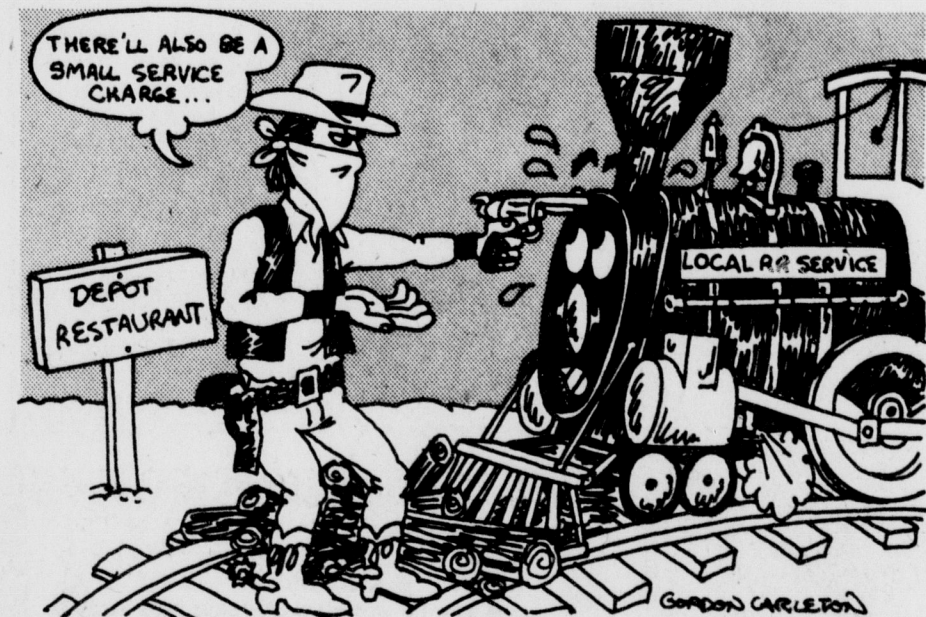

In view of this data on reduced death rates, coupled with the energy crisis that prompted the move in the first place, there is no reason for Michigan to wait the full 60 days before the reduced speed limit is implemented.

Studies have shown the reduced speed limit gives better gas mileage and less wear and tear on vehicles and helps to reduce the traffic fatality rate. All are very good reasons to slow down.

The change has to be made eventually, like it or not. It is going to take time and effort to change highway signs to the reduced speed. It is also going to take a massive public relations effort to acquaint the people of Michigan to the new reduced speed and make it work.

The Michigan Legislature would be well advised to allow the Dept. of State Highways to start posting the reduced speed limit signs immediately.

The energy crisis and a reduced death rate are two excellent reasons to speed up to slow down.

Speed up action on 55 m.p.h. limit

The U.S. Dept. of Transportation announced that in November highway traffic fatalities declined nearly 19 percent in the states with lowered speed limits. In the rest of the nation, including Michigan, there was a decline of only 2 percent in traffic fatalities.

According to the new speed law,

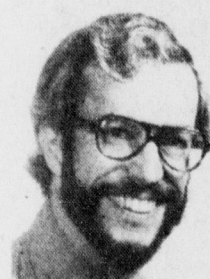

Apply for city positions

Registered student voters should look into applying for one of 10 East Lansing City Commission posts that are up for grabs to interested persons.

City council was unable to fill the posts last week, and is looking for people to apply. There are openings on the Cable Communications Commission, the Board of Canvassers, Human Relations Commission, Board of Review, Fine Arts and Cultural Heritage Committee and the Environmental Quality and Aesthetics Task Force.

Here is a good chance for students to become involved in East Lansing city government, so take advantage of it. Send your resume to council at City Hall, 410 Abbott Road.

The Doctor's Bag

By ARNOLD WERNER, M.D.

Letters may be addressed to Dr. Werner at University Health Center. Names need not be included unless a personal reply is requested.

We are a group of students aged 25 to 27 and we are having an argument about when men and women reach their "sexual peak." What exactly does it mean to have reached or passed your sexual peak? Is it concerned with frequency of orgasm, intensity or desire? Do we have something to look forward to or is it all behind us? (Signed by two married couples and a man and woman of unidentified marital status.)

Material dealing with sexual peak tends to be directed toward sexual interest and capacity for a high frequency of orgasm in a given period of time. Typically, it is said that a man in his late teens to early 20s has his greatest capacity for repeated orgasms. He also tends to be more easily aroused sexually. Other evidence cited for sexual peak at this age is frequency of masturbation and nocturnal emissions (orgasms during sleep).

The woman is usually described as developing a greater capacity for orgasm and increased sexual desire in her mid- to late 20s and for some women this does not occur until their early 30s. There are women whose interest and capacity for sexual enjoyment increases even later in life than that. Signs of sexual peak include multiple orgasms, orgasmic dreams, greater frequency of orgasm and greater intensity of orgasm.

Among the basic differences between men and women is the greater importance of psychological factors and experiences in determining initial sexual activity in men. In nonhuman species, parallel findings in the male can easily be demonstrated, further supporting the notion that factors other than socialization determine how we function sexually.

Present University bus fee system fine

To the Editor:

This is a reply to the inane comments printed in last Friday's bus service article. Says Mary Gust, "The fee is too much... we should pay each time we use the bus."

Perhaps this is not too bad an idea, if one does not mind digging in one's pocket every time one rides the bus and does not mind walking on the days one does not have correct change.

She goes on, "It should be a small fee." Well of course! Everything today should be cheap!

Apparently Gust is unaware of the present availability of tickets for use on a per-ride basis.

Allyn Kaye, no math wizard, rides the bus about four times a day and finds the higher-priced winter bus pass fee too expensive. Let me make the unrealistically low estimate of a possible per-ride fee of 10 cents. Riding four times a day, five days a week, for 10 weeks yields a cost of $20 per term. Throw in a couple weekend rides and the $22 fee is a bargain indeed. My wrath, however, is directed toward Fred Coleman, who said that bus costs should be included in tuition. He added: "They could work out a system where students who didn't want to use the buses could get a refund."

The practice of financing one's ventures by grabbing everyone's money and saying, "Well, if you don't want our service, you can just go to the trouble of coming back later for a refund," is a rip-off. It is ridiculous. The review of the Ted Nugent concert at the Brewery in which the reviewer stated the antics of two gay drag queens was the highlight of the evening.

Besides the fact that I felt that the excellent music was the highlight of the evening, I would also like to inform your reviewer that not all drag queens are gay, and that unless he had more information about these queens, he should refrain from making allegations about them.

It must be recognized that those persons who desire a certain service must be prepared to pay its full cost, or else forego the service. Users of a service have no right to subsidize it by stealing from nonusers.

Chinese pandas not symbols

By William Safire
New York Times

WASHINGTON — A world unabashedly hooked on symbolism has — mistakenly, as we shall see — looked upon the two happy, healthy pandas as the symbol of detente between the great powers.

"Ling-Ling and Hsing-Hsing: Years of the Panda," a new book by Larry Collins, keeper of the pandas at Washington's National Zoo, and James Page Jr. of the Smithsonian Magazine, offers a delightful and astute look at these gifts to the United States from the people's Republic of China.

Our pandas' keepers point out, for example, that an elongated wristbone serves as a kind of thumb, giving these black-eyed huggables a manual dexterity denied to most other animals.

Let me add one item to panda lore: The naming of the two specimens sent by Chou En-Lai was a matter of top-level concern at the White House. With infinite subtlety, the Chinese had assured us that "Ling-Ling" and "Hsing-Hsing" were only working titles given to the young pandas by their keepers, and that the President was free to name them whatever he pleased.

Special consultant to the President, Richard Moore, fresh from his triumph of renaming Air Force One "The Spirit of '76," was asked to survey his colleagues on appropriate names for this historic state gift.

Several White House aides, including John Scali, now ambassador to the United Nations, lobbied for "Ping" and "Pong," after the game that built the first dramatic bridge to what we used to call Red China.

My own suggestion was "Peter" and "Wendy," on the theory that a beast that would always look like a baby would be well-named Peter Panda. These and other options were duly sent to President Nixon for his decision, along with caveats that Ling-Ling sounded like an unanswered hotline to Peking, and Hsing-Hsing carried an inappropriate, penal connotation, especially since the animals were to be caged.

The President decided to hang tough: Chinese gifts should have Chinese names, he ordered, no matter what everybody said, and so Ling-Ling and Hsing-Hsing remained the names. I registered my vigorous dissent and still feel it would have been wiser to panda to public opinion.

Be that as it may, these two loveable, popular, bearlike mammals have been cavorting together for a couple of years now and nothing has happened. That is, the breeding of pandas in captivity has proven to be as difficult as ever.

If these two representatives from Communist China were to produce an offspring in the very capital of capitalism, they would be worthy of remaining the symbols of detente. But somebody has to say the unsayable: Reproductive results are nil. (I'm not blaming either one.) That is why we must look elsewhere for a symbol of detente. What living symbol can we find that could stand for the relaxation of tensions, the normalization of relations, better than these unproductive showoffs?

In Harrisburg, Pa., last month, state legislator Frank Lynch of Upper Darby introduced a bill (House Bill 1708) to designate the firefly as Pennsylvania's official insect. The suggestion came to him from a third grade class in his district.

I would like to join the Lynch mob, not merely to make the firefly the Keystone state's official insect, but as the international symbol of detente.

Most of us think of the firefly as a little airborne, beetle bravely lighting its candle instead of cursing the darkness. But recent entomological research by James E. Lloyd of the University of Florida in Gainesville has revealed the firefly to be a clever trickster, especially in its mating habits.

Did you ever wonder why fireflies seemed to synchronize the rhythm of their glowing? They are not all singing together — more likely, an interloping male is picking up the beat of a courtship song to confuse the female into flying united with him.

Yes, Virginia, fireflies are phosphorescent fools: They glow to mislead, seeming to dance to your tune but doing so with duplicity in their hearts.

In the light of Middle East mischief, The Betrayal of the Spirit of Salt and the quiet buildup of the North Vietnamese — a couple of cute, unproductive pandas would better be replaced as a symbol of detente by the firefly, the amoral beetle expert in getting partners to switch.

Rites slated for director of zoology

Memorial services for Charles S. Thornton, chairman of the Dept. of Zoology, will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday at the Alumni Chapel.

Thornton, 63, died of a heart attack Monday morning. He is survived by his wife, Mary Tyler Thornton, his two daughters, Patricia Ann Emery and of Boulder, Colo., and Margaret Swartzman of Seattle, Wash., and his son, Tyler Stead, of Los Angeles, Calif. He is also survived by his sister, Mrs. Benjamin Wyhyr, of Louisville, Ky.

A graduate of Harvard University, Thornton served as chairman of the zoology department since 1962, when he joined the MSU faculty. He had previously spent 27 years at Kenyon College in Gambier, Ohio, as an instructor and as chairman of the biology department.

Republicans eye Chamberlain's seat

By CHRIS DANIELSON
State News Staff Writer

The names of a dozen area Republicans have cropped up as possible candidates to succeed retiring U.S. Rep. Charles Chamberlain, R - East Lansing. Jockeying for a position on the August primary ballot will continue, with the possible candidacy of State Senator William Ballenger, R - Lansing, being announced this week.

"If tangible financial support and endorsements are forthcoming in the next several weeks, I would be prepared to decide to run," Ballenger, 32, said Tuesday.

"I just have to wait and see what my supporters come up with," he added.

Ballenger, who has served for six years in the Michigan Legislature, is currently chairman of the Senate committees on Health and Social Service and Agriculture and Consumer Affairs.

In addition to James R. Pocock, whose possible candidacy was reported by the State News Monday, state senators James Fleming, R - Jackson, and Philip Pittenger, R - Lansing, and state reps Frederick Stackable, R - Lansing; Thomas Sharpe, R - Howell, and Hal Ziegler, R - Jackson have been mentioned as possible candidates.

Other GOP prospects include Lansing lawyer Clifford Taylor, Lansing Mayor Gerald Graves and Michael Conlin of Jackson, a former U.S. Transportation Dept. official. The only announced candidate - a Democrat - is East Lansing lawyer M. Robert Carr, who was narrowly defeated by Chamberlain in the 1972 election.

Though Ballenger now lives 50 feet outside of the 6th District border, he said he will move immediately if he becomes a candidate.

"My decision on running will not be influenced by who else is or may be running in the Republican primary," Ballenger said.

He admitted a small primary field would conserve party resources, but maintained a large number of Republican hopefuls would not necessarily affect the outcome of November's general election.

Alfreda Schmidt, chairwoman of the Ingham

County Republican Committee, said that it is too early to assess the effect that a large Republican primary field could have on the election outcome.

"The committee will not try to influence anyone's decision on whether or not to run," she added.

Carr attributed the large number of Republican prospects to all the ambitions that have been building up during Chamberlain's 16 years in office, and the fact that the average congressman is reelected four to five times.

"There is no perceived front runner in the Republican party, which makes everyone a possible candidate," Carr noted.

"I'm running my campaign on the assumption that the Republicans will run their best candidate with a well financed campaign," he said.

A serious Democratic challenger must balance any decision to run against the possibility of creating a nuisance candidacy," he added. "I'm sure that the Republicans will take care of themselves," Carr concluded.

Council urged to nix bridge plan

The controversial Kalamazoo Street project will have 3½ strikes against it when it is finally considered by the East Lansing City Council - probably in February.

The city's Environmental Quality and Aesthetics Task Force approved a motion Monday night recommending that council reject revised plans for the project.

The task force and the city traffic commission had earlier taken similar action on the original plans, and the planning commission deadlocked 4 - 4 over a motion to support the revised proposal at its meeting Jan. 9.

Monday's task force recommendation, passed by a 3 - 2 vote with one abstention, expressed the group's displeasure over not being formally given the revised plans. The recommendation continued to question the need for the project and noted that incorporation of some alternatives to the original project - which were set forth by the task force earlier - into the new proposal did not constitute task force support of the revised plans.

The motion further recommended that the number of lanes on Kalamazoo Street between University Village and Clippert Street be left at two if any road work is considered.

In other action, the group unanimously passed a resolution supporting a bill banning some nonreturnable beverage containers.

The bill was introduced in the Michigan House by Rep. H. Lynn Jondahl, D - East Lansing.

Focus on women

Amalie Rothschild, a self-described nonmilitant, is pictured filming in New York. She will conduct all - women workshops all day Friday at the Kresge Art Center. The workshops will involve whatever women on campus express interest in discussing.

Renowned photographer to show movies, hold workshops for women

By LINDA GLADDEN
State News Staff Writer

What happens to a 61-year-old woman whose husband kicks her out of the house or a high school girl whose chemistry book is replaced by "The Joy of Cooking?"

Instead of starving, the older woman adopted the motto "woo who?" and the younger, instead of cooking, started looking for her real identity.

Their poignant, sometimes joyous stories will be explored in a series of films for women at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in 107 S. Kedzie Hall. Admission is free.

Several of the films are the work of Amalie Rothschild, a young free-lance photographer and founder of Anomaly Films, a New York-based firm run entirely by women.

A self-described nonmilitant, Rothschild says that the "time for bra-burning is over" and that perhaps films can help women step out of stereotypical roles.

In addition to showing several films that she wrote, produced and directed, the award-winning filmmaker will conduct all - women workshops Friday at Kresge Art Center.

"The workshops will be on whatever women students express interest in," Arlene Sheer, ass't. professor of graphic design and a coordinator of the project, said.

The films to be shown by Rothschild include "Woo Who? May Wilson," "It Happens to Us" and "Anything You Want to Be," which was filmed by Nancy Williamson.

"Woo Who?" tells the story of the irrepressible May Wilson who, after her husband kicked her out of their Baltimore home, went to New York and became a successful sculptor - after nearly starving in a hotel.

"It Happens to Us" is a 30-minute documentary in which women of all races tell about their experiences with abortion.

Funded by the state of New York, the film deals with the legal, medical and moral aspects of abortion and the universality of problem pregnancy.

"Anything You Want to Be" is the story of a high school student interested in chemistry who is nudged into homemaking.

"Joyce at 34," produced by a New York women's film cooperative, New Day, will be on the program if available, Sheer said.

Joyce is not a professional actress - she is a real wife, mother and college graduate who wonders where she goes from there.

A Baltimore native, Rothschild holds a master of fine arts degree from the New York University Institute of Film and Television.

Her photographs have appeared in such publications as Life, Newsweek, Village Voice and Rolling Stone. Her film on May Wilson has been on national television.

The filmmaker's philosophy is summed up in a work which was aired in New York entitled, "It's All Right to Be Woman."

"Why should strength and aggressiveness be reserved just for men and gentleness just for women?" Rothschild asks.

Sheer said she "hopes to pack as many women as possible" into Kresge Hall for the films. Information on the workshops is available in the Kresge Art Center office.

Tryout workshops for a second multimedia show sponsored by Intermediary will be held at 8 p.m. today and Thursday in 128 Natural Science Bldg.

The aim of Intermediary is to give an outlet to the creative interests of members. After determining the aims of members, Intermediary puts the groups' ideas together in an electric theater - Abrams Planetarium.

The Intermediary group says it is looking for actors, actresses, media artists, technicians and people with an interest in their world.

The group would like to work, explore and learn with other people, which is why the tryouts are considered important.

"Any method of dealing with a problem is valid, so long as it is sincere," Terry Terry, spokesman for the group, said. He added that there is no limit to what can be done with an Intermediary show.

Dixon classics, band thrill blues lovers

Sing it, Willie

Willie Dixon, one of the most prolific bluesmen in the history of America, sang his blues at the Brewery Monday night. The crowd loved the gentle giant as they screamed out "more" and Dixon and company took care of business with two encores.

By DAVE DiMARTINO

State News Reviewer

If you have a minute, try to name one of the classic blues songs. Then name another. And one more.

Chances are that at least two of those tunes that came to mind were written by the great Willie Dixon.

Dixon, a blues talent extraordinaire, alone is responsible for composing "Back Door Man," "Spoonful," "Seventh Son," "Little Red Rooster," "Hoochie Coochie Man," "I Ain't Superstitious," "You Shook Me" and countless others.

Monday night, Dixon and his Chicago All-Stars played several of these standards at the Brewery. The extremely appreciative audience loved it — at least enough to demand two encores. All-Star blues is a rare commodity; Dixon and his group provide all that and more. It was a dynamite show.

It began with the Chicago All-Stars on stage. The band itself is a mixture of many different personalities and levels of musicianship. A six-piece unit, the blues band consists of Dixon on acoustic bass and vocals, Lafayette Leap at the piano, Buster Benton on electric guitar, Carey Bell on harmonica, Clifton James on drums and Dixon's young son, Freddie, on electric bass.

The difference between the first and the second set was noticeable largely due to the absence of Bell in the first set. Bell, like each member of the group, had driven up from Chicago and apparently got lost in Lansing for an hour. It seemed strange that his performance was not really missed until his first appearance.

Dixon and his All-Stars, without Bell, managed to play a more laid-back, classical blues. Particularly of note was pianist Leap, whose fingers certainly live up to his name. He whipped out the blues at a tremendous rate making the first set an interesting synthesis of Dixon compositions, piano solos and more blues classics. The second set was another story. After Bell's arrival, the group was high-energy for the rest of the night. Dixon himself was a sight to see — his broad, beaming face indicated that he was pleased with his reunited band.

The last few minutes of the show were unquestionably the strongest. After Dixon sang "I Just Wanna Make Love To You," the All-Stars climaxed with "Wang-Dang Doodle." The audience, with a little prompting from Dixon, responded by singing with him.

Immediately afterward the group was called back for an encore. "Got My Mojo Working" was not enough, apparently, as the Brewery audience rushed the stage to hear more. Dixon, overflowing with geniality, was quite pleased to play a second encore. To finish the show he played a new composition — "I Don't Trust Nobody."

At that moment Dixon surely could have trusted a lot of people.

It was fortunate the group's itinerary included East Lansing in the first place. Dixon said that the group had just returned from a concert tour on the West Coast, and that it had extensive tour plans. Within the next four months, the band will have traveled to New York, Philadelphia, Australia, New Zealand and Japan.

Dixon is a very friendly person and an extremely influential one. He has not only composed and arranged, but also produced for such talents as Muddy Waters, Howlin' Wolf, Chuck Berry, Little Walter, Bo Diddley, Jimmy Rogers, Sonny Boy

Williamson, Magic Sam and Koko Taylor, among others.

As a producer Dixon has his own record label, Yambo Records, a part of Chicago's Ovation Records. "Catalyst," Dixon's latest recording, has been released on that label and is well worth checking out.

Dixon's genuine enthusiasm for the blues, coupled with his tremendous musical talent and that of the All-Stars, provided Monday night's audience with a first-class taste of Chicago blues. It was mighty fine.

Singer to start concerts

Ed Trickett, recording artist for Folk-Legacy, will make his first Lansing area appearance at 8:30 tonight at Elderly Instruments, 541 E. Grand River Ave.

Trickett's music is diverse, ranging from traditional ballads, sea songs, hymns and contemporary music written by such authors as Bruce Phillips and Jean Ritchie.

He matches his choice of music with intricate guitar work that underscores the meaning of each song.

This concert will serve as a starting point for a new community organization devoted to traditional music. Admission is $1.50.

From Brussels, the Ballet of the 20th Century has brought a freshness to ballet that may well be felt in the 21st century, as well. Will Big Ten let Van Pelt play baseball?

Brad Van Pelt

By GARY SCHARER
State News Sports Writer

One year ago Brad Van Pelt, Michigan State's most celebrated athlete in recent years, was on the eve of making a momentous decision. He answered the dilemma by turning down a lucrative professional baseball offer from the St. Louis Cardinals in favor of an even better deal with football's New York Giants.

When Van Pelt signed a reported three-year, no-cut contract for $300,000 with the Giants, it was generally assumed he would roam the gridiron for years to come and baseball had lost a potential prize.

But that is no longer a valid assumption.

Van Pelt will have the opportunity to pursue his baseball fortunes on the Spartan mound pending Big Ten adoption of the recent NCAA rule allowing an athlete to compete professionally in one sport and on the collegiate level in another. The former two-time all-American safety has enrolled for winter term classes and is two or three terms away from graduation.

Despite the anticipation of Van Pelt's presence in an MSU baseball uniform this spring, several hitches remain before that possibility becomes reality.

The Big Ten Conference must pass a vote by faculty representatives before the adoption of the new NCAA eligibility rule becomes effective for its 10-member institutions. The league's next meeting is Feb. 17. Should the rule pass, it would take 60 days before becoming operative.

A league school could petition for suspension of the present rule, opening up an immediate avenue for a player to gain eligibility, but MSU Faculty Representative John Fuzak does not believe that will happen.

Passing of such a petition would require seven of the 10 faculty representatives' votes through either the mail or a conference phone call.

Since so many alternatives and modifications are available Fuzak said he does not know in what direction the league will go.

"As of right now he's not eligible.

Chances of getting him are slim, but at least there's a chance now we didn't have."

—MSU baseball coach
Danny Litwhiler

"It's unreasonable to expect that the Big Ten will charge into immediate action that may later turn into mistakes," Fuzak added.

The Giants could also veto Van Pelt's move into collegiate baseball, though he does not think that will happen.

"I have to check yet with our owner out in New York, but I don't think he'll say no to it," Van Pelt said. "There is something in my contract which could possibly allow him to put the stops to it. But I think he'll be more than happy to see me active."

Spartan baseball coach Danny Litwhiler welcomes the possible return of Van Pelt, who in his last campaign with the batsmen posted a .040 ERA, recorded 84 strikeouts in 69 innings and registered a 4-2 mark, but he cautions against speculation of Van Pelt's return.

"The NCAA says he is eligible, but we operate under Big Ten rules," Litwhiler said. "As of right now he's not eligible. Chances of getting him are slim, but at least there's a chance now that we didn't have."

Should Van Pelt gain athletic eligibility a super baseball season might influence the 6-5, 230 pound flame-thrower to stay in that sport, but he does not want to make any serious considerations at this time.

"I'm looking forward to playing baseball again and being a Spartan, but I'd have to be very wrapped up in baseball at the end of the year to think about pro baseball," he said.

"I'm going into the baseball season to enjoy myself and hope that Michigan State can win quite a few games this year," Van Pelt added. "But as far as decisions, if there's anything like that, I'll put it right off to the end. I'm not going to worry or even think about that right now."

The Cleveland Indians drafted Van Pelt last week and have contacted him since, though offering no firm proposition.

"All they want to know is what my plans were," Van Pelt said. "At the time I wasn't aware that I could possibly play baseball at Michigan State. I told them I had a lot left on my contract in New York and I actually would be a fool to sacrifice that unless I could come close to something in baseball."

"They said they'd be in contact with me later, and now that I'm able to play college ball, if the thing passes, I would imagine that they'll follow me throughout the year and talk to me again at the end of the year," he said.

Van Pelt has not thrown a baseball for one year, but Litwhiler does not think the layoff will have an adverse effect.

"I don't think it would hurt him too much," Litwhiler said. "He's a dedicated athlete and when he works he works hard."

"One year ago he could have been an outstanding baseball pitcher," Litwhiler said. "By not playing all year, however, he has foregone all the fundamentals. We think they'll come back to him. Evidently the major leagues still do too."

Though there are many "ifs" involved, Van Pelt may get a chance to finish his senior year on the Spartan mound, and if he has an exceptional season and a fantastic offer from Cleveland, then he may be influenced to think again.

The key word is "if."

Timing perfect for new arena

MSU's new Ice Arena will be opening just in time. That is clear when you look at the crowds jamming into the old Ice Arena.

Attendance at home Spartan hockey games should reach an all-time high this season as the third-place icers enter the final half of regular season play. Seven of the 11 home games have been sellouts (4,174), and hundreds have been turned away at the door.

The Spartans finished last season with their best record ever and the future looks very bright.

Even though the playing conditions at Demonstration Hall are some of the best in the country, it is time for the change. While the fans are crowding closer and closer together as they stand up and watch the game between the numerous posts the number of press, radio and television personnel covering the Spartans is increasing.

When Wisconsin was here for a Saturday night game a couple of weeks ago, there were two television stations, four radio stations and a host of newspapermen covering the game.

"It was by far the biggest jam we've ever had," Nick Vista asst. sports information director, said.

One reporter should have been given a two-minute elbowing penalty when he smacked a colleague in the head as the Spartans scored an important goal.

The new arena, which is scheduled to be opened this summer, could hold up to about 7,000 spectators, according to Gene Kenney, assistant to the athletic director for facilities.

There will be a few chair and mostly bleacher seats. But, here is the best news for hockey fans — no posts and no more standing up for two hours.

"The arena has a great sight line and there's not a bad seat in the house," Kenney said.

The new press box will be located on top of the stands on one side of the arena, approximately within the two blue lines. There will be more than 30 seats.

"It's a superb location," Vista said. "And it will provide a nice overview of the rink. This way, we can do our job better, too."

The current press facilities at Demonstration Hall include a long table in the front row of the upper-deck seats. Information on goals, assists, saves, attendance, etc. is relayed to the media either by passing a paper down the table or watching Rick Martin, who helps at games, as he leans over the table with a pad of paper containing the vital information.

Under the circumstances, Vista and his assistant, Mike Pearson, do an excellent job.

"The arena was long ago outmoded," Vista said. "Even though at the time it was turned into a hockey rink (early 50s), we didn't have crowds like this. But interest has mounted in leaps and bounds. Never before have they been beating at the doors as they have now."

"This really marks an impressive step upward."

What about recruiting?

"Where the old rink may have hurt us in the past, I don't think the new rink will help us that much simply because other teams have comparable facilities," Alex Terpay, asst. coach, said.

"But the fans have to be loyal to come to this barn every weekend," he added.

And MSU's hockey fans, who enjoy watching the sport, will continue to pour into Dem Hall until the final game.

Cagers now placed in contender's role

By CHARLES JOHNSON
State News Sports Writer

The expression "better late than never" couldn't have fit any situation better than with MSU's resounding 90-82 victory over Illinois, Monday night at Champaign.

The crucial win boosted the Spartans' conference record to 2-1 and moved them firmly into contention for the conference title.

After falling behind, 12-0, at the start of the game, MSU began battling back with the proficiency of a UCLA. A torrid 72 per cent shooting outburst in the second half all but sealed the Illini's fate, and deposed coach Harry Schmidt's team to a 1-2 Big Ten record.

The Spartans were stifled in their scoring attempts until midway through the second half, when Lindsay Hairston converted two free throws. The fact that the Spartans took so long to score their first points makes their final 90-point production even more incredible.

A goaltending call on a Terry Furlow shot yielded MSU its first field goal with 12:27 left in the first half and made the score 14-4.

With the score 33-19, MSU's scoring machine began to click. A crowd of 4,685, the lowest in Assembly Hall history, watched the Spartans reel off 14 straight points to deadlock it 33-33 and then forge into a 41-39 halftime advantage.

Again, Spartan reserve forward Edgar Wilson came off the bench to ignite MSU's attack. Wilson, a 6-5 freshman from Dowagiac, stole the ball two straight times, with both steals resulting in baskets.

Holding a 63-59 lead with 9:12 left in the game, the Spartans never relinquished the lead.

Turnovers continued to plague MSU, as it handed the ball over 25 times as did the Illini. The Spartans committed 23 against Ohio State last Saturday and the Buckeyes also made 23, which indicates that if the Spartans can keep their turnover output below or equal to the opposition, then they can win.

A balanced scoring output by MSU outdid a tenacious Illini defense. Robinson came through with 24 points, followed by Furlow's 21. Lindsay Hairston produced 20 points and 12 rebounds, while Brian Breslin sank 12.

The Spartans came up short in the rebound contest, permitting the Illini to grab 45 compared to their 32. MSU shot 54 per cent from the floor, finishing with 34 of 63 field goals in comparison to Illinois' 33 of 77 for 42.9 per cent.

In the only other Big Ten action Monday, Indiana rallied in the last two minutes to edge Northwestern, 72-67. The Hoosiers are now 2-1 in the Big Ten and tied with the Spartans for third place in the league.

The MSU win set up a big game Saturday with Michigan at Ann Arbor. The Wolverines are riding high with a 2-0 conference record and a 10-2 overall mark, good for 18th place in the national rankings. A win over UM could well catapult the Spartans into a bonafide conference power.

Milkovich feeling fine after row with gunman

By PAT FARNAN
State News Sports Writer

Tom Milkovich never had much trouble outmaneuvering a wrestling opponent. He was always a little quicker, a little smarter.

But nobody ever said that Milkovich was "faster than a speeding bullet."

A four-time Big Ten wrestling champion while at MSU, Milkovich encountered such an opponent shortly after Christmas in a Cleveland, Ohio, shopping mall.

"My brother (Mike) and I were returning some gifts," Milkovich recalled. "I was walking behind my brother on the way out and a guy bumped into me. I just kept walking when I heard him say something to me. I turned around and apologized. But he kept pressing the issue. Then he moved toward me like he was going to hit me."

A squabble ensued. "He started swinging and I picked him up and threw him on the mall floor," Milkovich said. "All of the sudden I heard a shot and saw another guy standing there."

Milkovich said the man shot twice and connected with the second shot.

"The bullet entered at the small part of my back, barely missing my spine, then came out my side," he said. "I was really lucky."

The wound required 12 stitches and Milkovich avoided any internal damage.

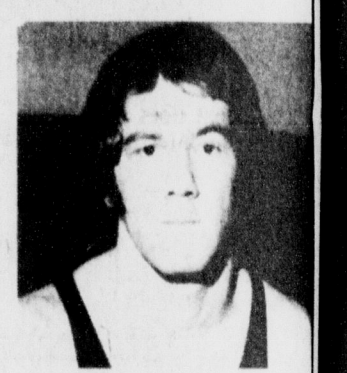

"I knew this type of thing went on," Milkovich continued, "but it really makes me mad. I was totally frustrated. You just can't fight a bullet. There was a policeman standing nearby, too, and he took no action."

Milkovich commented that the injury has sidelined him for about a month.

"I haven't been on a wrestling mat for nearly 30 days now," he said. "I've had a little trouble sleeping, too. But the wound has made progress as of late. I'll live."

Milkovich is currently working as an assistant to former MSU wrestling assistant Doug Blubaugh at Indiana University and enjoying his work thoroughly.

"There was some transition from wrestling to coaching, chiefly in handling the kids' attitudes," he said. "But it's fun. My father, brother, uncle are all successful coaches. I think I'm geared for it. I like Blubaugh, too. I've idolized him since I was a kid. He's a good man."

Milkovich said he still hopes to compete in the Pan American and Olympic games before retiring from the wrestling circuit.

"I'm ready to start wrestling but I've got to wait for people to quit taking plugs at me," he quipped. "I've got a few years left yet."

In the meantime, Milkovich will continue his coaching duties with Blubaugh at IU in hopes of developing into a successful coach.

"I've got my eye on a Big Ten and national championship team," he said.

The demand for use of intramural facilities has caused the intramural office to initiate a program which would keep most of the facilities open until midnight four days a week.

The program, beginning Monday, will be held each week, Monday through Thursday, on a trial basis for the remainder of the term.

If the program proves to be manageable and gains a great deal of support, it may be expanded to other nights.

With basketball games scheduled each night from 6 to 10 p.m., this new program means that the Men's Intramural Building will be open for an extra two hours.

The one hangup with the extended schedule is that the supply room will still be forced to close at 10:30 p.m. This stops the checkout of towels and equipment at that time. Anyone who is going to take advantage of this program should bring his own towel and locks. However, the locks must be removed at the end of the evening because, if left overnight, the locks will be removed by the building staff.

The areas open for the additional period will be the sports arena, gyms 1, 2, 3 and the paddleball and squash courts.

There will be designated areas for basketball, tennis, badminton and volleyball, with the most availability for basketball.

The courts will be run on a first-come, first-serve basis with the first person that gets to a court gaining possession of it.

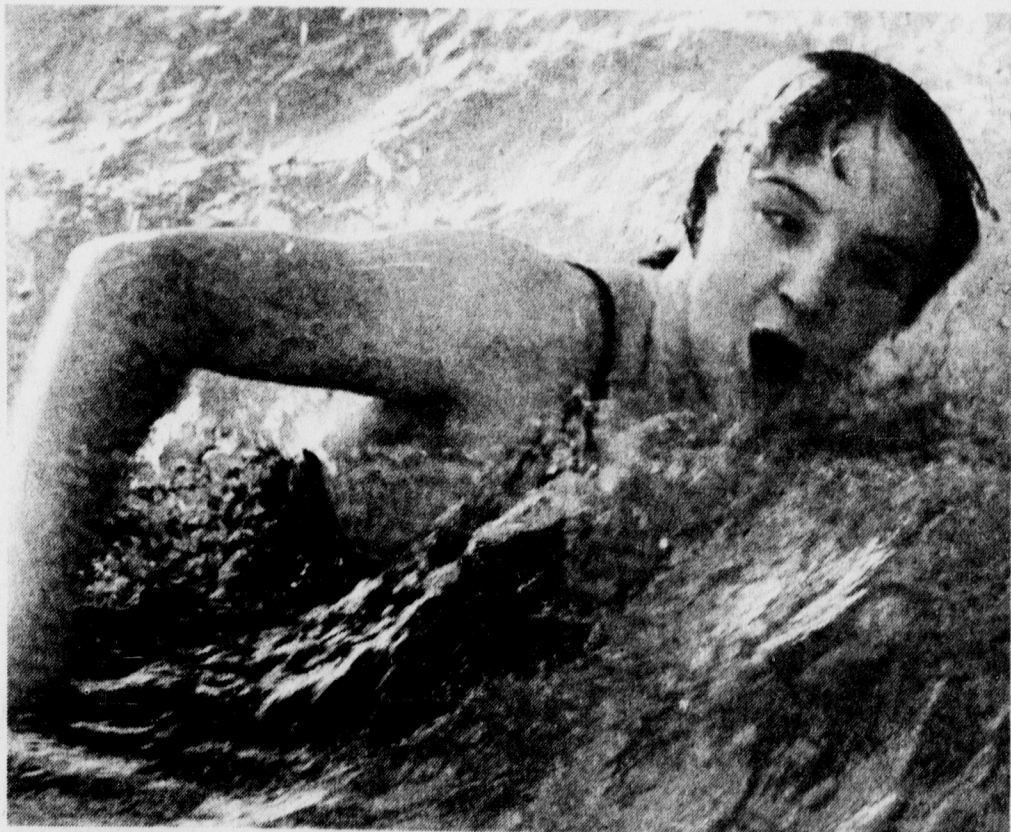

There will be a challenge method used to allow others to use the courts, however. The first team on a court plays a game to 15 baskets. If a team wants to challenge at that time it may play the winner, again to 15 baskets. This continues if there are still more challenges.

A supervisor will be on hand to help keep the program organized each night, but it will take the total cooperation of the participants to make the program go.

Lucy Johnson, Grand Rapids freshman, displays the style which captured the 1973 state championship in the 100 and 200 freestyle events for her. Johnson has been called the "fastest woman freestyler to come out of the state of Michigan." She is a rarity in the field of athletics because she hates competition.

DISLIKES COMPETITION Tanker shuns honors

By PAM WARD
State News Sports Writer

Lucy Johnson is a champion whether she likes it or not.

Johnson, 447 W. Holden Hall freshman, is fast becoming Michigan's hottest prospect in women's swimming. The first-place position in the 100 freestyle event appears to have a "reserved for Johnson" sticker on it for the 1974 season. There is little doubt that she could capture state and national recognition this year if she wants it. But that's a big "if" for her.

Johnson is a rarity in the winner's circle. She disdains competition and shuns the public light so she might not stick around for her honors.

Unlike most star athletes, Johnson finds it hard to speak about herself and her accomplishments. She becomes nervous in the presence of her teammates and the excitement of a practice or meet. When she wins she walks over to her beaten opponents almost apologizing for her superior performance.

"I really don't like competing," Johnson said. "It just rubs me the wrong way. I don't like beating someone else."

"I used to be really competitive but I'm trying to get away from it," she continued. "It's not good. I don't believe I have to prove I'm better than someone else."

The fact remains, however, that Johnson is better than most. She currently holds the state championship for the 100 and 200 freestyle events with the times 54.8 and 2:01.8 respectively. She qualified in the first Spartan meet for the 1974 national competition.

"Lucy is the fastest woman freestyler ever to come out of the state of Michigan," Jennifer Parks, women's swimming coach, said. "She has extreme natural ability. She has a strong, efficient stroke and the ability to concentrate on what she's doing."

Johnson wants to be a swimmer, though, not a champion. To her there is a big difference. When asked about her accomplishments and awards in swimming she said she had none.

"I like to relax and enjoy swimming," Johnson said. "I want it to be fun. But I'm really not that good. People think I'm good. I guess I win for them. I swim for myself."

Parks admires her ability and respects her principles. She puts no pressure on Johnson to beat her opponents and shies away from rah-rah tactics.

"Lucy is a fine competitor," Parks said. "She doesn't want to beat people, she wants to excel. She feels good when she swims but wants it to be less competitive. She would rather compete against herself or against a stopwatch."

It is not hard for Johnson to excel. The hardest thing for her is to remain on the team where she is forced to defeat others.

"I like the kids on the team," Johnson said. "But it's the pressure that's hard to take. I don't want to let them down."

"It's an effort, but I keep telling myself it's good," she continued. "It gives me the chance to swim and to improve."

There is little doubt that Johnson's appearance is good for the team, also.

Johnson isn't looking for any titles or awards. Her future goals contain no aspirations for championships or recognition.

But she will probably get them, whether she wants them or not.

Head of defense probing alleged spying by chiefs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger has begun his own informal investigation into reports that the Joint Chiefs of Staff spied upon the operations of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

At the same time, Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim said Schlesinger continues to have confidence in "the personal dedication and honesty" of Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Sources close to the Watergate investigation have said top military officials set up a chain of information which ran from military men in the National Security Council to the joint chiefs. The chiefs set up the chain because they were reportedly kept in the dark during Kissinger's negotiations ending the Vietnam War, improving relations with China and the Soviet Union and the strategic arms limitations talks.

RHA to put booklets on VD in halls

The Residence Halls Assn. (RHA) in conjunction with ASMUSU and the Dept. of Osteopathic Medicine will distribute booklets on VD in all residence hall mailboxes.

As a follow-up to VD programs held in the residence halls, the booklet will discuss the symptoms of VD and treatments for it. There is a high rate of VD in Ingham County and Gene Buckner, president of RHA, said that this booklet will help increase student awareness of the problem. Students are asked to leave the booklets in their room folders so that students next year will be able to use them.

If a student does not receive a booklet in his mailbox, he may pick one up at the University Health Center or the ASMUSU office.

RHA is also looking for volunteers who will let high school students stay in their rooms for one night during the Alumni Distinguished Scholarship tests to be held two weekends in February.

Over 1,000 high school seniors from across the country will be coming to MSU to compete for 10 scholarships on Feb. 1 to 2 and Feb. 8 to 9. They will stay Friday night and leave Saturday afternoon following the test.

Any student wishing to allow one of these students to stay in his room is asked to notify either his resident assistant or head adviser.

Fuel allotment priorities knotty

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new federal regulations governing the nation's distribution of petroleum products pose a complex set of priorities describing how much each is entitled to get.

Here, at a glance, is a summary of some key features of the allocation system.

TOP PRIORITIES — Agriculture, emergency services, energy production, telecommunications, public passenger transportation, sanitation services and the heating of medical and nursing facilities are top priority activities in the allocation of five petroleum products: gasoline, middle distillate oils, residual oil, propane gas and butane gas. Oil-burning electric generators would not have a top priority, however.

The top priority activities get all the fuel they need. In addition, drug manufacturing and related research gets the same top priority for middle distillate and residual oils.

Nonmilitary marine shipping, except for recreational cruises, is also a top priority for residual oil.

The top priority lists for propane and butane also include the marketing of bottled gas by stations selling up to 15,000 gallons per year. Petrochemical input is a top priority use for butane gas.

GASOLINE — Top priority bulk purchasers get 100 per cent of their current needs. "All other business activities" which purchase gasoline in bulk are allocated as much gasoline as they received during the corresponding month of 1972. John Hill, asst.

Police seize marijuana in raid on Lansing motel

Five hundred pounds of Mexican marijuana was seized by Metro Squad officers Monday night in a raid on a Lansing motel which police declined to identify.

Three men arrested in the raid were arraigned Tuesday morning in Lansing District Court on charges of delivery of marijuana. The men, identified as Ronald Welton, 21, Eaton Rapids, Terry Griffin, 36, Okemos, and Donald Lovely, 43, Holt, were being held in Ingham County Jail Tuesday following failure to post bond on the charges.

The men were arrested when they sold the marijuana to a Metro Squad officer for $50,000. Internal Revenue Service officials estimated the marijuana seized had a street value of $160,000. At that value, the grass could cost $320 per pound or $20 per ounce.

director of the Federal Energy Office, said, however, that this does not include gasoline stations, which have no priority and receive whatever is left.

MIDDLE DISTILLATE OILS — These include home heating oil and diesel fuel. Top priority activities get 100 per cent of current needs.

Residences and schools will get only enough fuel to heat six degrees lower than in the corresponding month of 1972.

Other buildings will get fuel to provide heat 10 degrees lower than in 1972.

AVIATION FUELS — Emergency, safety and mercy flights get all the fuel they need.

Local service air carriers and air taxis get as much fuel as in the corresponding month of 1972.

Domestic and international airlines, including scheduled cargo carriers, get 5 per cent less than in 1972.
