In Israel, Premier Golda Meir won parliamentary approval for her agreement to pull Israeli forces back from the Suez Canal, clearing the way for separation of the Egyptian and Israeli armies to begin

According to the agreement signed last week, Egypt and Israel must complete the disengagement within 40 to 60 days. The process is expected to start Friday.

This means Arab oil could be on the way to the United States no later than the end of March. And Kissinger appeared to signal a much earlier resumption when he answered "yes" to the question: Do you expect the embargo to be lifted before the agreement is finalized?

Though optimistic, the secretary injected words of caution and warning in his first news conference since returning from his peacemaking Middle East trip. 'Failure to end the embargo in a reasonable time would be highly inappropriate and would raise serious questions of confidence in our mind" he

However, when asked if American force might be considered to overcome a continued boycott, Kissinger responded, "I don't think the embargo will go too

Annon M. Card, senior vice president of Texaco, told the Senate investigations subcommittee in Washington that the 15 year prediction on achieving self sufficiency assumes that no restraints are placed on exploration and production.

The subcommittee, seeking to determine the extent of the current energy shortage, took sworn testimony for the second consecutive day from executives of seven major oil companies.

Much of the session was spent discussing oil profits, which generally shot upward during the first nine months of 1973, despite only moderate increases in sales volume.

Card cautioned against interpreting the figures to mean that oil companies are reaping windfall profits because of the fuel shortage.

Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D - Conn., told the committee that Congress is certain to move against tax privileges of the big oil companies. Sen. Russell B. Long, D - La., chairman of the committee said he would support tax legislation to induce oil companies to explore new domestic fields.

The House Ways and Means Committee will hold hearings beginning Feb. 4 on proposals to tax energy companies' windfall profits generated by the petroleum shortage.

A student - supported consumer group charged the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) Tuesday with negligence in its Calif., Naval Petroleum Reserve after inspection and transportation of potentially dangerous radioactive materials throughout the state. The Public Interest Research Group In

Michigan (PIRGIM) called untrue the AEC's claim of the indestructability of the lead casks which are used to transport irradiated fuel rods. Thousands of people could be killed, under certain conditions, if radioactive cesium, a soft silvery - white metal that is explosive and boils at moderate temperatures, escaped, PIRGIM said. However, an official from the AEC said an accident of this sort is "absolutely impossible," though he did not deny the potential danger of cesium. He added the casks have never opened under any conditions before. The report, authored by Marion Anderson, PIRGIM's legislative analyst, was released after eight months of studying transportation of nuclear power wastes and the AEC's safeguards.

Marc Ross, a nuclear physicist from the University of Michigan who assisted in the report, said a truck carrying the leaden casks could be involved in an accident which could lead to the release of cesium

When shipments of fuel rods are made, the casks are filled with water, which quickly rises above the boiling point because of the heat generated from the fuel rods, PIRGIM said. An accident caused by fire, collision damage or faulty workmanship in the casks could cause the water to escape, allowing pressure to build up. As the water escapes, the cask could become dry, leaving only the fuel rods. PIRGIM said the temperature of the rod or attorney consider "unduly sensitive or would rise above the boiling point of cesium in such an accident and allow it to escape as gas or aerosol through the same leak as the water. This type of accident could cause a person one - half mile away to die from doses of cesium, PIRGIM said. William Brobst, an official of the AEC in Washington said, however, before an accident could kill this many people the casks would have to be totally destroyed, which he termed "absolutely impossible." He said it would take the most severe type of catastrophe to allow even a leakage of the water inside the cask. He added that the water itself would have such a low - level of contamination it would not harm anyone.

PIRGIM also contends the casks are not immune from faulty workmanship.

A report compiled by the General Accounting Office, a federal agency answerable to Congress, said: "Seventy five per cent of the AEC operations offices do not have the expertise available to evaluate cask designs.

PIRGIM said the AEC employs only 22 full - time inspectors and three investigators to cover 1,877 institutions considered high priority for AEC inspection.

Two nuclear power plants now exist in the state with three more under construction. Shipment routes pass through Grand Rapids, Holland, Kalamazoo and Benton Harbor on the western part of the state and Saginaw Flint, Pontiac, Detroit and Ann Arbor on the eastern side.

PIRGIM also contends that none of the casks are tested to destruction, which PIRGIM said means the AEC does not know at what point the casks will open.

Brobst said the AEC spends millions of dollars testing the casks agaisnt fire, bullets and even dynamite. He said the AEC firmly believes the casks are

He said AEC inspectors view the manufacture throughout the critical

PIRGIM also charges that: truck drivers carrying radioactive material are not given special training; drivers do not have radiation devices to determine escapage; trucks are not inspected; drivers choose their own routes and drivers do not check road conditions.

The AEC official said truckers are subject to spot inspections by a field staff of the AEC and by the federal transportation department. He said their routes are specified by the Interstate Commercd Commission and the transportation department, and truckers are advised to use less congested routes.

PIRGIM's recommendations include: •Filing an annual report by owners of nuclear power plants to show how many people would be affected by an accident. Determination by the state Dept. of Public Health of shipper's routes. Testing of all casks coming into the state by the non - AEC laboratories of the public health department.

•Inspection of trucks before each shipment by the state police. •Appropriating more funds toward the Computerized carpooling to start soon on campus for faculty, staff

By SUSAN AGER State News Staff Writer

MSU will be ready to start computerized car pooling within two weeks, but only facuity and staff will be eligible to apply for the service, Robert Perrin, vice president for University relations, said Tuesday.

The University has been investigating possibilities for the service since fall term and is now waiting for application forms and area maps which are being printed, he Application forms for the service will probably be distributed with pay checks, but only to faculty and staff, Perrin said.

"Right now we don't want to go to the expense of distributing forms to 41,000 students, most of whom don't require transportation," Perrin said. "Instead we prefer to work out the problems with the faculty and staff, then consider if we can extend the program to the students."

Perrin said considerations are being made to distribute forms to commuting students at spring term registration, but no positive decision has yet been made.

Earlier cost estimates, made by computer laboratory officials, were that each applicant would pay from 25 to 50 cents for the service, which would match them with eight to 10 persons living near them who would like to car pool.

But Perrin said the University will assume the project's minimal costs, which will include only the cost of computer time printing, and mailing.

The high cost of programing the computer for such a service has been avoided by using a program recently developed by the Burroughs Corp., available to the University free of cost.

Applicants to the service will be asked for their address, phone number and time of departure in the morning and evening. Perrin said. They will then locate their home on a map and indicate the coordinates on their application.

The map, covering an area 25 miles from the MSU campus in all directions, extends to Weberville to the east, Ionia to the west, Maple Rapids to the north and Olivet to the south, Perrin said.

In its early stages, only persons living within those bounds can be served by the computer car pool, but Perrin said that if enough requests from commuters in Grand Rapids, Jackson and other outlying areas come in, they may be matched

No distinction will be made for persons who arrive at opposite ends of the campus, Perris said. "This will have to be worked out among the commuters themselves."

Decisions on continuing the service through future terms will be made only after the University can guage the response from faculty and staff, Perrin said.

"A major problem with faculty and students, more so than staff, is that their departure times change each term as their schedules change," he said, which means the University would need to run most names through the computer each term.

Randy Whyte is lord witch of the state.

Advisory unit to trustees proposed

By ACE BURGESS

Over the years many intelligent individuals and outstanding athletes have enrolled at MSU. But the University has never been honored, as it is now, with the presence of a potential exorcist in the form of the Lord Witch of Michigan.

State News Staff Writer

Randy Whyte, lord of all male and female Druidic witches in the state, says: "I can perform exorcism when it is necessary, but as of yet, no one has approached me about the subject." Whyte, who enrolled last fall term as a graduate student, hopes to establish a witches' coven in East Lansing.

Between studying vertebrate paleontology and taking karate classes, Whyte spends his time enhancing his knowledge of witchcraft; or, as he calls it, the Craft.

"Only by enhancing one's knowledge of the Craft can one hope to climb the 10 degrees, or steps, which constitute the hierarchy of the Craft," Whyte, 23, said.

He would not comment upon recently published reports that indicate a Catholic priest has performed the complicated rites of exorcism for a California family, who had claimed that it had been bedeviled by Satan in the last year.

"I can't tell you any more about exorcism," Whyte told a reporter, "because that would violate Craft law." Exorcism is a long process in which the spirit of Satan is forced from one's mind by invoking the power of God. Whyte is presently a third - degree witch, and that makes him the highest ranking official witch in Michigan. He pointed out that there is usually only one or two of his ranking in a given

Whyte said he became interested in the craft about six years ago while a professional palm reader. He did not officially become a witch until two years ago, when he was initiated by the Lord Witch of Wisconsin, his home state.

After being initiated, he rose in the hierarchy of the Craft and is now listed in the Occult Directory as the tarot card reader for the Midwest.

The Occult Directory is a Yellow Pages for Midwest witches. "People have contacted me from as far west as Los Angeles to do tarot card readings for them," he said. Besides being a professional tarot card reader, Whyte said he likes to teach poeple what true witchcraft is all about. He is infuriated by pseudo - witches who have no knowledge of the Craft but who claim they do.

"I know this is the age of Aquarius and many people are calling themselves witches, but it just isn't so," Whyte said. "For one thing, people should realize that witches aren't born; they are initiated into the Craft."

To be initiated into any of the five Crafts - Druidic, Celtic, Traditionalist, Alexandrian or Gardenarian - one has to attend formal classes under the supervision of a witch. The classes last anywhere from four months to a year.

Whyte said it is necessary for the student of witchcraft to learn the history, philosophy and magical spells in a classlike situation. The last thing that is taught is magic, and all phases of it are taught, he said. That includes black, white and yellow.

'73 inflation highest in 27 years

Fuel led the way in raising retail prices 0.5 per cent in December, closing the year with the worst inflation record since 1947, the Labor Dept. reported Tuesday in Washington.

Inflation chopped almost nine cents off the dollar's purchasing power.

The Consumer Price Index rose 8.8 per cent from December 1972 to December 1973, the biggest jump since the surge of inflation following the lifting of price controls after World War II.

Nixon administration officials and independent economists predict an acceleration of inflation, at least in the first half of 1974, because of strong price pressures for fuel and food.

Meanwhile, beef prices are expected to rise at the retail level due to recent price increases at the wholesale level.

Also, the nation's farmers intend to boost 1974 corn plantings 10 per cent when they take to the fields this spring, the Agriculture Dept. said.

Corn is the most important livestock feed grain for producing meat, milk and poultry. This year's crop, to be harvested in the fall, will be a key to those supplies through 1975.

New date set for Nixon speech

President Nixon will deliver his State of the Union message at 9 p.m. Jan. 30 before a joint session of Congress.

Nixon's economic report will go to Congress Feb. 1 and his budget message Feb. 4.

Nixon will send his energy message to Congress today, to be followed by his actual legislative proposals in the near future.

N. Viets holdings POWs, rep says

Eight to 10 American pilots are still being held as prisoners by the North Vietnamese, Rep. Benjamin A. Gilman said he was told.

Gilman said Tuesday that Laotian Gen. Vang Pao, commander of a military region in Laos told him of the prisoners while Gilman was on a trip to Laos for the House Foreign Affairs Committee earlier this month.

Pentagon officials said the report was new to them and they would investigate. Pao said he could get no information on the identities.

Meanwhile, in Cambodia, an armor - infantry pincer movement put insurgents to flight Tuesday northwest of Phnom Penh, field reports said.

Western observers said the action blunted the first phase of a rebel offensive against the capital.

Union threatens strike in Britain

The British miners' union threatened a national strike Tuesday, reacting to the government's refusal to lift wage controls. Currently working under an overtime ban which has cut coal supplies by one - third, the miners' union is demanding that the government lift its 7 per cent pay increase ceiling and grant them a 30 per cent

A total shutdown of coal production could freeze most of Britain's industry by spring if it lingered. It is believed the government would call an election before this happened, letting the people decide who runs the country – the elected government or the trade unions.

Fight disrupts Belfast assembly

Militant and moderate Protestant deputies traded punches Tuesday over seating places in the Northern Ireland provincial assembly in Belfast and halted the work of the trouble - plagued chamber.

One hardliner danced on the speaker's table yelling into a microphone. Police officers carted legislators bodily out of the chamber.

It took six men to remove the Rev. Ian Paisley from the chamber. The Rev. Paisley had insisted that his supporters occupy the front - bench seats assigned to Chief Executive Brian Faulkner and his coalition administration of moderate Protestants and Roman Catholics.

Asia ushers in Year of Tiger

Chinese communities throughout Asia apprehensively ushered in the Year of the Tiger Tuesday evening. Soothsayers say the Year of the Tiger means war or similar conflict, and only one year, 1926, passed without incident in the past 60 years.

In 1914, A Year of the Tiger, World War I broke out: Hitler invaded Austria and Czechoslovakia in 1938; in 1950 the Korean War started and in 1962 the United States - Soviet Union conflict over nuclear arms in Cuba almost triggered in a nuclear war.

The People's Republic of China celebrated the new year on Jan. 1, but the traditional new year is still observed by some.

South Vietnam celebrated the holiday, called Tet, amidst war, despite the year - old cease fire.

The Ad Hoc Committee to Review Academic Governance successfully withstood student and faculty attacks Tuesday on its plan to streamline the Academic Council.

proposal to provide each college with an additional representative for every 40 faculty members after the first 40 members. The ad hoc committee has proposed that additional representatives be granted for every additional 50 faculty members.

If adopted, the student amendment would have increased the proposed student representatives on the council to 42, instead of the 38 student seats the ad hoc committee has suggested.

The faculty proposal would have lessened the reduction of faculty representatives from the present 85 to 74, instead of the 63 faculty seats the ad hoc committee has proposed.

Futile arguments made for the student amendment to preserve the at - large seats said that it would assure women a voice in the council.

"If women are to have an adequate voice in academic governance, then the at - large seats should be preserved." Ken Tannen, Council of Graduate Students' representative, said. "At present they're underrepresented among student and faculty on the council."

But the amendment was defeated with much less debate than had taken place at last Tuesday's council meeting.

Jack Stieber, College of Social Science representative and author of the proposal to increase faculty seats from what the ad hoc committee had recommended, said the faculty members were the real workhorses for the council.

"I don't mean to offend either the student representatives or administrative members," Stieber said, "but I believe it is the faculty participation that gets a decent job done on committee and council work."

"We have already reduced the faculty voice by taking away the Academic Senate's power to propose amendments to council action," Stieber continued. "Reducing faculty representation here will further dilute the faculty voice."

But Lester V. Manderscheid, chairman of the ad hoc committee, said the committee was not interested in numbers

"To concern ourselves with the number of seats among faculty, students and administrators is to assume an adversary role about each group," Manderscheid said.

"This was not the assumption of our committee. which has sought to insure that council members will have more of a University - oriented perspective than a bloc perspective," Manderschied

The council did approve Stieber's amendment to the ad hoc committee's proposed council composition. The amendment requires that each college with three or more representatives elect one nontenured faculty member to the council.

FACULTY VIEWPOINT

Rationale Pay Policy Advocated

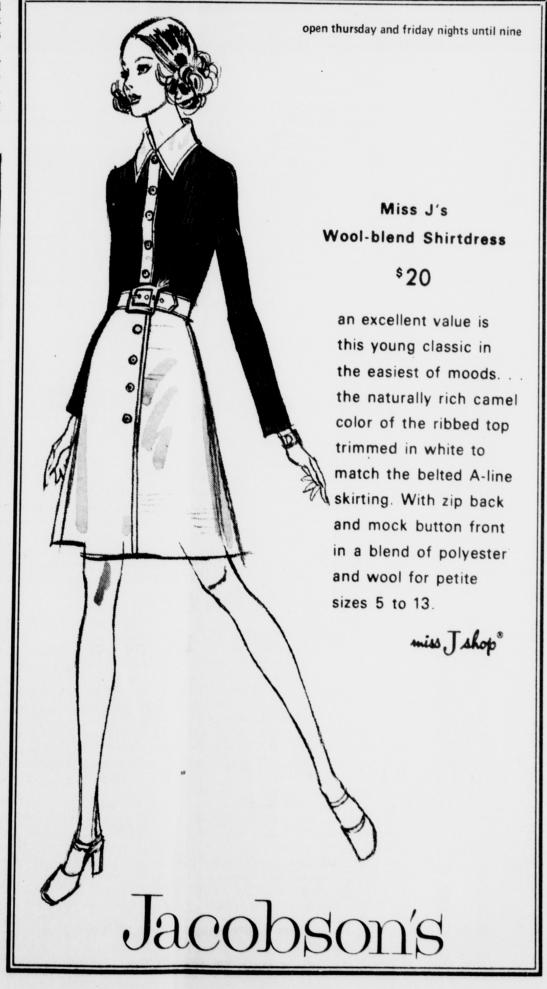

Last week in this column the MSU/Faculty Associates declared that a rational faculty salary policy must be based upon meaningful comparative data available to the entire faculty. We pointed out that, for such purposes, the alphabetized salary list finally published last week by the Administration is meaningless: mumbo-jumbo designed to bamboozle the faculty into believing that it answers their questions. That is, provided they can even get hold of a copy. Don't bother trying unless you also have access to a computer.

suggested remedy of reordering the list so that comparisons among salaries can easily be made. We even heard from some volunteers willing to help us do it. Se we decided to poll the University community. If you are interested please fill in the following form and mail to: MSU/Faculty Associates, 1036 Chesterfield Parkway, E. Lansing. MI.

But was the coffin shot for good, or left open just a crack to allow the germs to breath and fester and grow? Vietnam veterans have been kicked in the teeth by an ungrateful, disinterested homeland, while armament firms have reaped the monetary fruits of war. Society itself has been polarized by a war that few wanted or cared for.

However, the war has managed to contribute to changes in the character of the government that thrived on it. Future presidents and their advisers may shy away from military involvement in other countries' civil wars. They will be leery about youths taking to the street and may heed their angry

For the people of Southeast Asia, Vietnam is still a tragic mistake. There is no lasting peace. Each day brings the threat of screaming rockets and a silent shot in the dark. Women and children still will die as opposing forces struggle to hold small, insignificant blood - stained knolls.

And should the last charge ever be sounded in Vietnam, after a lifetime of war the people will not know what to do with peace in a wasted, devastated land.

Yet for all this misery and gore, American defense leaders still rattle their sabres and threaten renewed bombing...

EDITORIALS Kissinger earns trust not matched by Nixon

In an administration plagued by corruption, scandal and public distrust, the one shining light has been the diplomatic skill of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

It was Kissinger who, as foreign affairs adviser, laid the groundwork for virtually all of President Nixon's achievements in foreign policy: detente with China, improvement of relations with the U.S.S.R. and the Paris Peace agreement, which was signed exactly one year ago.

Kissinger's latest coup, the Jan. 19 Mideast pullback agreement, was almost completely a one - man operation. From Jan. 11 to Jan. 18, Kissinger flew almost daily between Egypt and Israel. After three meetings with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat in Aswan, and three meetings with Israeli leaders in Jerusalem, Kissinger had an agreement in hand.

In the main provisions of the pact, Israel agreed to withdraw its troops to 20 miles east of the Suez Canal, freeing the trapped Egyptian third army in exchange for a thinning out of Egyptian troops.

More than a temporary cease fire, the Mideast pullback agreement is the best opportunity for lasting peace in the Mideast in the 25 years of Israel's existence.

Israel has tacitly acknowledged through the agreement the need to return some territorial gains, while Egypt showed that it recognized the potential of peaceful negotiations with Israel.

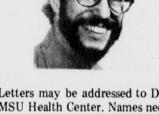

Henry Kissinger downplays his role in foreign affairs whenever he gets the chance, saying that he acts only as an agent of President Nixon.

But it is sad but true that Kissinger, whom President Sadat calls a friend and a brother, commands respect and trust in most parts of the world that Nixon can not match.

Throughout the years of reading your column, I have no recollection of you ever on the use of mechanical vibrators by women to achieve an orgasm. Would you please comment on the "pros" and "cons" of this procedure for single women who have no regular sexual partners.

You missed it. A couple of years ago I indicated that the use of electrical vibrators was perfectly safe as long as they were correctly grounded so there would be no shock hazard. Many of the vibrators sold specifically for purposes of sexual stimulation are battery operated and seem to present no electrical hazard.

Masturbation as a means of sexual release: is a perfectly satisfactory arrangement for the person who has no regular sexual partner or who feels the need for sexual release more often than the partner does, whether the person is a man or a woman, single or married. Since the object of masturbating is to provide sexual pleasure, I hardly see the difference it makes if one uses the classical manual approaches or resorts to mechanical and electrical devices. Surely the energy crisis will be none the worse for electrical

There are, in addition, some people who just do not find masturbation pleasurable. Masturbation need not be considered an obligatory activity; not doing it is also all

My boyfriend won't believe anything I tell him. Recently I had a urinary infection and vaginitis. He insists that I got these infections from another man. I have not had any relations with anyone other than my boyfriend. Please help me convince him that it is possible for a woman to have infections without having intercourse with other men.

Urinary tract infections and vaginitis (inflammation of the vagina) can be found in women of all ages whether they are engaged in sexual activities or not. In fact, such conditions are found in infants and little girls as well. Of course, there are vaginal infections that do come about because of sexual intercourse; and some women with a predisposition toward urinary tract infections have more of them when they are engaged in intercourse.

I am doubtful if the simple facts in this matter will reassure your boyfriend. There are men who are very suspicious of the activities of any woman they are involved with, even though there may be no basis for mistrust. Such suspiciousness often stems from major uncertainties they have about themselves which, unfortunately, may not respond to reassurance.

Budget battles over cocktails

once again the University is gearing for its annual showdown with the Michigan

Legislature. This year, the stakes are higher than ever before and MSU is already going into the fray with one hand tied behind its back. The gauntlet has been thrown down and the governor's recommended 10 per cent increase in MSU allocations will be wiped out during committee deliberations. Few Capitol watchers expect the proposed law school to weather the storm, and another round of beer hall brawls is expected over appropriations for the year - old College of Urban Development.

> Last year, battles over these two appropriation items resembled a hockey game fist fight as legislators took verbal potshots at MSU and filibustered on the floor to chop up Spartan dollars.

This year, circumstances may lead to an even bloodier boondogle as lawmakers carve up the pie with one eye fixed on their home districts. With thousands of auto workers standing in welfare lines and surging inflation eating into pay checks, the legislature is likely to remain tight fisted despite Milliken's assurances that his proposed budget was planned with these problems in mind.

All this, of course, throws University administrators and educators into the wheeling and dealing world of lobbyists and politicos, tarnishing the fabled ivory tower of academia with the soot of

To the Editor:

We would like to make the following comments regarding the recent letters critical of "The Doctor's Bag."

1) Werner does not write about "extra marital sex" as such. Rather, he deals with medical problems, emotional as well as physical, and, whatever the source of these problems, he approaches them medically, not morally.

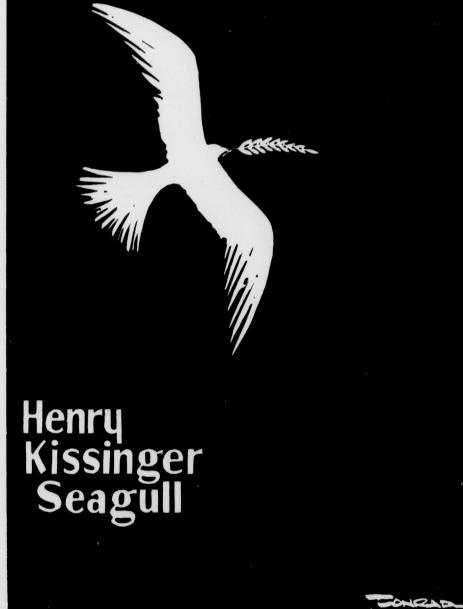

2) While "The Doctor's Bag" deals with sex - related questions, it does not deal exclusively with such problems. Werner has answered letters on a variety of subjects ranging from skin care to nutrition, had how to take care of beards to how? prepare steak tartare.

3) Closing "The Doctor's Bag" woll not rid the world of pre - marital set any other sex), but it would close soutlet for the expression of legitimes health problems.

POINT OF VIEW

Unreasonable law enforcement

By JOSEF M. BRODER

While returning from my office late one evening I encountered a most unpleasant incident. I was stopped by a campus police: officer who informed me that a warrant had been issued for my arrest.

Much to my bewilderment, I followed the officer's instructions which took us to the headquarters of the Dept. of Public Safety. There he informed me that I had received a parking ticket last summer which I had not paid. I was to be held in custody until I could post bond.

I feel that the events leading up to the arrest merit public discussion.

As a graduate assistant with limited parking privileges, I received the ticket last summer term for parking in an 1 unauthorized lot. The lot was only being used at half capacity. I was able to confront the officer giving the ticket, and asked him for his rationale as a police officer with discretionary powers for writing me the ticket.

His reply, of course, was "I am only doing my job." Further questioning as to whom I could contact regarding the department's policy with respect to giving parking tickets proved futile.

Having received a previous ticket in the same area, I expected to receive a hold card at the following registration at which time I would have paid the fine. Instead, I did not receive a hold card and was led to believe that the ticket had not been processed. Not having received a letter informing me that the ticket was still outstanding, I concluded that the case was closed. Unfortunately, this proved

The police officer processing the warrant informed me that a student is vulnerable to a number of different tickets for committing parking violations on campus, depending upon the location of the violation, the registration status of the vehicle and some ellusive discretionary power of the officer.

Of the variety of tickets, only those earmarking funds back to the University receive hold cards.

Unfortunately, this information was not known at the time the ticket was issued. nor was I aware of this at registration. Because of this lack of information, the campus police had to expend additional resources for my arrest, the district court had to devote its valuable time to a mere parking violation and I was detained for an uncomfortable period of time the evening of the arrest and the day of my hearing.

The issue which comes out of this incident is not whether I am guilty of the original parking violation, but whether been an unreasonable there has enforcement of the law. What has the law accomplished by such an incident? The taxpayers will pay a high price for this misunderstanding.

In conclusion, I propose the following: • The Dept. of Public Safety should make explicit its policy for issuing tickets when discretionary

On Oct. 20, 1972, President Nixon signed a bill that has netted East Lansing $830,380 in additional federal funds, with almost no strings attached.

The bill created general revenue sharing and stipulated that over a five - year period, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1972, some $30.2 billion in revenue would be returned by the federal government to state and local units of government with a minimum of federal fetters and guidelines.

East Lansing will receive $404,000 in revenue sharing funds during the 1973 - 74 fiscal year. The city got $426,380 in 1972 -

The revenue - sharing bill, a cornerstone of Nixon's "new federalism" drew bipartisan applause from governors, mayors and other state and local officials - all of whom had advocated a greater flow of federal dollars to the local level without the tangle of federal requirements and procedures that permeated so many of the categorical grants that existed in Washington.

As of Jan. 4, a total of $11.2 billion in revenue has been parceled out to more than 38,000 units of local government in the United States - ranging from multimillion - dollar stipends for big cities like Detroit, Chicago and New York to funds totaling a few thousand dollars for Eskimo villages in Alaska and impoverished Indian tribal governments in the Southwest.

The state of Michigan will receive $86.8 million in revenue sharing funds during fiscal 1973 - 74. It received $114.8 million in fiscal 1972 - 73 and expects to receive about $90 million in fiscal 1974 - 75.

All local units of government in Michigan will have received $404 million by July 1.

Local governments are required under the law to utilize the revenue sharing funds in generally defined priority areas. These •Public safety including law enforcement, fire protection and building code enforcement.

• Environmental protection, including sewage disposal, sanitation and pollution abatement. Public transportation, including transit systems and streets

Health, recreation, libraries, social services for the poor or aged, financial administration and capital expenditures.

'I would like to see the nine priority areas deleted from the bill," East Lansing City Manager John Patriarche said, "We could then spend the money on whatever we felt was the highest priority for East Lansing."

"I would also like to see Congress lengthen the time the act is in effect," Patriarche added. "We could then do some long - term

"We have allocated about 50 per cent of the revenue - sharing funds for capital improvements because there is no assurance that this program will be continued," Patriarche said.

The revenue sharing bill comes up for congressional renewal in 1976. Federal policy makers have not reached a consensus on whether to recommend continuing revenue sharing.

"Another major thing we used the money for was to achieve a property tax cut," Patriarche said. "Taxes were reduced from

Sharing concept urged since '65

The concept of revenue sharing is not new.

In 1965, Walter Heller, then chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, envisaged the federal budget surplus being redistributed to the states. The revenue sharing is in addition to grants for specific projects like Model Cities. Heller believed this would counter the centralizing trend in Washington and aid the states.

However, Heller's plan never got anywhere because the Vietnam War heated up and depleted the budgetary surplus.

President Nixon first proposed revenue sharing in 1970. But he thought $500 million would be adequate. Critics jumped on that proposal, calling the sum "miniscule."

Nelson Rockefeller, former governor of New York, championed revenue sharing, asking that $10 billion be

A bill was introduced in Congress in 1971 for revenue sharing. It provided $5 billion a year for general revenue sharing and $11 billion a year for special revenue sharing.

Special revenue sharing has been bogged down ever since, but general revenue sharing passed.

Special revenue sharing provides for the regrouping of existing grant - in - aid programs. It has been fought because grant - in aid programs have more attraction for congressmen seeking jobs and money for their constituents.

$17.45 per thousand assessed valuation to $16.85 per thousand." While officials across the country have been enthusiastic about the concept of revenue sharing, questions have arisen, some of them stemming from the deliberate simplicity of the wording of

One of the major questions - how the monies were being spent - was recently examined in an interim survey by the Tax Foundation, a nonprofit, nonpartisan research organization based in New York City. The survey found that 52.9 per cent of the revenue sharing funds were spent in five categories - environmental protection, 12.7 per cent; law enforcement, 11.5 per cent; street and road repair, 10.9 per cent, fire protection, 10.4 per cent, and parks and recreation, 7.4 per cent.

Only 1.6 per cent of the funds went for social services and only 1.1 per cent went for health care. The survey was based on questionnaires to 409 cities with populations of 50,000 or more and responses from 212.

East Lansing, with a population of 47,500, has allocated $76,250, 11.6 per cent, for capital expenditures: $25,000 for the land acquisition for City Hall expansion, $20,000 for land acquisition for a new fire station and $20,000 for construction of the fire station.

East Lansing's spending for health and social services is above average. The city doled out $40,000 or 6.1 per cent for health services and $8,280 or about 1.5 per cent for social services.

However, a few communities have seen fit to decide that one of their priorities would be capital improvements for such things as golf courses, tennis courts and, in one case, improving a bridle path.

Lansing has appropriated $8.2 million of its revenue - sharing funds, with $316,500 going for police department operations and

'Most of the money is being used for capital improvements drains, construction, sewers, new garbage trucks and police department expansion," said John Hargett, head of Lansing's federal program-accounting.

"One reason we spent the money in these areas is because council was expecting special revenue sharing to come through," Hargett said.

Special revenue sharing is the companion to general revenue sharing. It was designed by the Nixon administration to replace hundreds of categorical programs with broad block grants that would give states wide discretion as to their use. The bill has been bogged down in Congress.

Though it now appears likely that the Lansing area Amtrak located on Trowbridge Road in East Lansing, the question of who will pay for it is yet to be resolved. The Lansing City Council is apparently having second thoughts bout guidelines which call for the city to pick up 50 per cent of ne depot tab. When the Capitol Area Council of Governments recommended he Trowbridge Road site Wednesday, the proposed bylaws for a w rail council called for a 13 - member group composed of five epresentatives from Lansing, three each from Ingham County nd the parent council itself and two members from East Lansing. Funding was to be in proportion to each body's representation n the rail council - with the exception of the three council This would mean that Lansing would pay half of the depot's stimated $45,000 capital and operating costs for the first year of il service, while East Lansing would pick up only 20 per cent of George Griffiths, East Lansing City councilman, said townships vere excluded from the rail council because their taxing powers re more limited than those of cities.

The rail council representation was established on the basis of the population of the localities involved, he added. However, Terry McKane, Lansing city councilman, said Tuesday the possibility of an alternative rail council setup giving Lansing less members - hence, a smaller share of the costs - was discussed at a recent city council working session.

"This is not a sour grapes attitude — we want to work with all the bodies interested in the depot," McKane, who favored a Lansing site for the depot, said.

Representatives from Meridian and Delhi townships expressed interest in rail council membership and financial support from their townships at the January council meeting, he added. The government council chairman John Patriarche, East Lansing city manager, said copies of the proposed bylaws have been sent to Lansing, East Lansing, the county board of, commissioners and several area townships, as well as MSU.

The response of these units in the next few weeks will determine the makeup of the rail council, but it is not known how long it will take for the interested parties to approve the proposed bylaws and appoint members to the rail council.

A final vote on the location of the Lansing area Amtrak depot will not come until the council meets for the first time.

This episode of Jan Johnson's "Perspectives in Black" was filmed last spring. White talks about himself, his father, his work and his philosophy. He also sings three songs.

An elegant sequence opens with White rehearsing "Wildflower;" it moves into a look at him walking downtown and feeding some ducks. During the program White discusses his father — legendary folk singer Josh White. White talks about his father's life in the South and his own childhood on the road. His own little boy hoots in the background of a later interview with Johnson.

The sequence provides viewers with insight and background without the tedious talking - head look that afflicts a show when the camera focuses only on the face. It proves visually satisfying and provides insight into the background of this performer.

The show concentrates on White as an entertainer. It makes no tedious attempts at what Josh White Jr. is really like. The film focuses on his public face - what he does and why he does it. He discusses his unique position as a black folk singer who usually plays to white audiences. White prides himself on the fact that his audience today is getting more integrated.

White empahsized that folk singing is a special thing. As he put it: "Ya gotta' take a trip on the words, not the music." White loves to see people listening with their eyes shut because then he feels they are concentrating on the song.

Ojars Upatnieks' cinematography and Robert Burke's direction gives viewers a unique look at this artist. Imaginative camera work and graceful editing make this look at White a special treat for

Choir, soloists excellent offer spicy, polished style

By EDWARD ZDROJEWSKI State News Reviewer

The MSU Chamber Orchestra's winter concert, held Monday night at the Kellogg Center auditorium, offered both the spice of the Cello Choir and soloists who displayed polished and virtuostic techniques with their Maestro Dennis Burkh led the strings in Francesco Geminiani's "Concerto Grosso in E Minor, Op. 3, No. 3." This work features a string quartet as the solo group. The quartet consisted of Catherine Britton and Dan Rizner, violins; John Snyder, viola, and Sara Montgomery, cello. The quartet blended well with the rest of the orchestra. The only problem was that the musicians did not play long enough for one to truly appreciate the piece. This was the fault of Geminiani and not the performers.

was Mozart's "Concerto in C Major for Flute and Harp, K. 299." This featured flutist Alexander Murray and harpist Mary Gerstenlauer MacNair as soloists. This concerto contains written for either flute or harp. MacNair certainly reflected this in her playing, which can only be described as inspired. Murray had the right lightness of interpretation for Mozart though his tone seemed a bit breathy on some of the quicker passages. The performance received quite an ovation. Louis Potter led a choir of eight cellos in "Bachianas preperformance explanations Brasileiras, No. 1" by the distinguished Brazilian composer Hector Villa - Lobos. The work was modern in sound even though the composer was consciously trying to inject something of the style of Bach. The choir played expressively and flawlessly. However, such a lengthy work with nothing but cellos can become tiring.

closed the concert with that famous work that has delighted many youngsters at Leonard Bernstein's concerts and insulted the intelligence of many students in music some of the finest music ever appreciation classes, Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf, Op. 67." This piece can be entertaining for an adult audience if it is not obviously "played down" at them. The orchestra gave the work a spirited performance and Burkh did not make the mistake of underestimating the intelligence of the audience. There was none of the usual of the piece such as "If you can remember that this is what a clarinet sounds like, then you know when the cat enters the story." Special mention must be made of the first chair flute and the entire brass section who did an exceptional job.

There was a moderate turnout for the concert. However, there were a number

The place was full, packed with rowdy people that demanded to see and hear "their" Iggy. As one of the premier rock bands to emerge from the Michigan scene, the Stooges had no difficulty in maintaining audience interest throughout their show - no trouble at all - because of a skinny man who moans,; stagger, spits, jumps on tables, rolls around on the floor and threatens "make the sound system right or I'll take off my pants!"

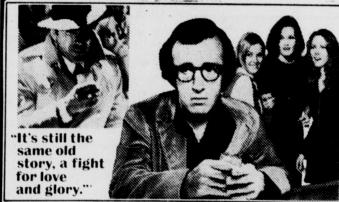

It was quite a show. First, the Stooges came onstage without Iggy, playing an introduction to "Raw Power." The band consisted mostly of familiars: guitarist James Williamson, brothers Ron and Scott Asheton on bass and drums respectively and Scotty Thurston on piano. Raw is a good term - they rocked very hard. Suddenly Iggy jumped onstage and began singing, getting things started by shaking his body back and forth like some sort of screaming lunatic. The crowd

Then the real show began. What did Iggy do? A number of things, actually. He accepted a glass of beer onstage from a girl in the audience and walked back onto her table to return it. At this point, one could easily see that the Brewery bouncers seemed somewhat worried about Iggy's antics. Understandably. Things did not get much better. Iggy slipped offstage like some sort of baton. Occasionally the stand fell into the audience.

All three forms of magic can be performed in a number of ways. These include ritual, candle, mental and sexual, he said. "I practice all of these forms, depending on what I want to accomplish."

Magic is usually performed to gain some kind of wish, and it is usually performed in the nude, Whyte said. Things for which one may wish include money, a happy life or a new girlfriend. It all depends on what turns you on, he said.

Most people can spot pseudo - witches, Whyte said, because they claim to practice black magic and believe in the devil.

"I want to make clear that true witches don't advocate the use of black magic, nor do we believe in the existence of a devil," he said. "There is

Whyte said witches don't believe in the devil because they believe in reincarnation and the two don't go together.

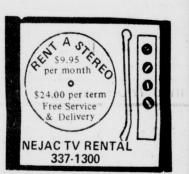

Another way in which Whyte says one can detect a pseudo - witch, especially a male one, is to note if he calls himself a warlock. "A warlock in Craft terminology is defined as a betrayer. There is no such thing as a male warlock - we are all witches, male or female.

Because there is a difference between pseudo - witchcraft and true witchcraft, Whyte said it is his job to make sure that the truth is known. .

Not wanting to fight the battle alone, Whyte said he is thinking of getting together enough interested people in the area to join the Craft.

County commissioner may run for position in Michigan House

By JIM KEEGSTRA State News Staff Writer

David Hollister, Democratic chairman: of the Ingham: County Board of Commissioners, says there is a chance he will run for the state House of Representatives seat being given up by Rep. Earl Nelson, D - Lansing. However, Hollister has not made up his mind yet.

"I hate it when politicians say that, but I haven't," he Nelson announced plans Jan. 9 to campaign for the 24th District - Lansing and East Lansing - Senate seat now held by Republican Philip O. Pittenger.

While admitting that he will have to make a decision soon, Hollister insisted that whether or not others announce intentions to compete with him in a primary race will have no influence on his choice.

The "grueling life" he now has is the source of the delay in making a decision to run for Nelson's 57th district House seat, Hollister said.

He attributed his busy lifestyle to the combination of serving as chief county official and teaching high school dropouts at Cristo Rey Community Center in Lansing.

If he does not run for representative, Hollister said he would enjoy the job of county executive, similar to his responsibilities as chairman. There is no such position now, but a group of commissioners is studying a new Michigan law allowing counties to either appoint or elect such a chief official to represent them. The group's recommendation will be placed on the ballot this year for voter approval, Hollister said.

Even if the county executive job is not approved, Hollister saidit is not likely he will run a fourth time as county commissioner from his north Lansing district.

Hollister has a distinctive view of the politics of elected officials. In his end of the year reports to the board of commissioners, Hollister emphasized the progress for the county made through cooperative politics and urged that unselfish actions continue.

"Government isn't declaring war on other local governments or people, but just wants to get things done," Hollister said.

A 1964 MSU graduate, he began what he calls his 10 vear activism with his teaching job in an all - white school in Hollister said he taught his class a unit on black history and included a visit from a black family. He said a cross was burned in his front yard and his life was threatened. At the end of the school year, Hollister said, all nine of the first - year teachers resigned with him.

He also taught two summers on a volunteer basis in Holly

Springs, Miss., Hollister said. Hollister began his political career in 1968. He said that after Martin Luther King and Robert Kennedy were killed, a group of friends, including H. Lynn Jondahl, now East Lansing state representative, and George Griffiths, now East Lansing City Council member, got together one afternoon and asked themselves if they were going to drop out of activism.

They all decided to run for political office. They all were Draft boards to use mail-informs "We are maintaining

By JOHN TINGWALL State News Staff Writer

The Vietnam peace treaty is year old today, and no chigan men were inducted to the Army during 1973. But for 18 - year - olds who rget to register for the draft, enalty of five years in jail a $10,000 fine still hang er their heads.

Now the government is ing to make it easier for to remember to register mail system beginning operation in early February.

The system, tested in Michigan and three other states in spring 1973, will make forms available at public buildings, like post offices, for men who cannot conveniently register at a local draft board in their state, said W.J. Myers, state deputy director of the Selective Service system.

And it may be inconvenient for quite a few Michigan men

The Selective Service system, being scaled down to a 'low profile operation" because of reduced funds since suspension of the draft, is consolidating local draft boards into area offices, Myers said.

The 94 draft boards in the state in 1972 have been consolidated into 27 area "This number will be minimal manpower inventory," he said. "But we're prepared for expansion if the draft is reinstituted."

With the new mail - in system and the draft boards' practice of transferring registrations from one locale to another, it is possible to register almost anywhere in the country 30 days before or after a man's 18th birthday.

"If your hometown is in Vermont and you're traveling through California on your 18th birthday, a guy can register at any local draft board and the registration will be transferred, as long as the correct permanent home address is put on the form," a draft board employe said.

"We're trying to make it easier to comply to the law," Myers said.

Since suspension of the draft, more than 90 per cent of Michigan men have registered on time, Myers said.

On campus, men can register in 162B Student Services Bldg.

Co-rec water polo gains interest of MSU students

By GARY SCHARRER State News Sports Writer

Walk into the Women's Intramural Building and pass the pool area on any Sunday afternoon this term. You will hear shouts and screams and see a lot of bare chests mixed with those covered by two - piece bathing suits. Everyone will be bouncing around in inner tubes and water will be splashing.

Though metropolitan papers have not yet begun covering MSU inner tube water polo, enough interest is building here to make the new sport one of the most popular co - recreational activities.

It was first offered by the Women's Intramural Dept. last winter term and seven teams totaling 77 participants responded. Many requests prompted the department to offer it again spring term, and the team total jumped to 10. This term 19 teams have registered, despite little publicity.

Penny Knupp, asst. director of the Women's Intramural Dept., cited several reasons for the surge in the popularity of inner tube

"It's something new, and students want to find out what it's about. And, co - recreational activities of all kinds are growing on campuses in the United States," she said. "The popularity for these activities is much greater right now that it has been in the

"I think the novelty of this sport is what attracts people," she added. "And just the students, by word of mouth, have caused the growth from last year to this year."

Katie Barber, B423 Rather Hall, freshman, is manager of her team, the Brody Whalers. It is the first time in for the entire team, she said.

"I went to an organizational meeting to get the info on it," she said. "We needed a bunch of guys and there was a guy there who said he needed a bunch of girls, so we just threw a team together. We practiced Sunday and had a really great time."

Barber said there was not much contact involved, but admitted play could become wild at times.

"It's fun. You can be sneaky by splashing under the water while the officials aren't watching," Barber laughed. "Your hands slip sometimes and you just can't help it."

Determined swimmer

for the MSU swimming team. Henson, a Niles sophomore, had no high school swimming pool or swimming team on which to compete. He worked out on his own and, through his determination, has placed himself into a key role on the competitively oriented.

"Even losing teams seem to enjoy the sport and come back for more," she said

Knupp is the person responsible for bringing co - recreational water polo to MSU. She saw a slide presentation of the sport at a national intramural convention two years ago.

"It looked really interesting, and the participants seemed to enjoy the activity," Knupp said. "Since we have a second pool in this building I thought we could make good use of it."

The University of Michigan initiated the sport one year earlier. so Knupp received a set of printed rules for it and made several modifications. Rules for co - recreational play are similar to regular water polo except that players must be sitting in inner tubes any time they play the ball. Three men, three women and an additional player of either sex compose a playing team. Most squads have 11 or 12 members.

"It's a noncontact sport," Knupp said. "The only way that players can hinder another person's path is by bumping each other's inner tube.

"Inner tubes take away the advantage of a strong swimmer," Knupp explained. "The inner tube has a tendency to level off the skills and make it more of a team game.

Jim Manor, 414B Butterfield Hall, senior, and manager of the Jellyfish, is another rookie to the sport.

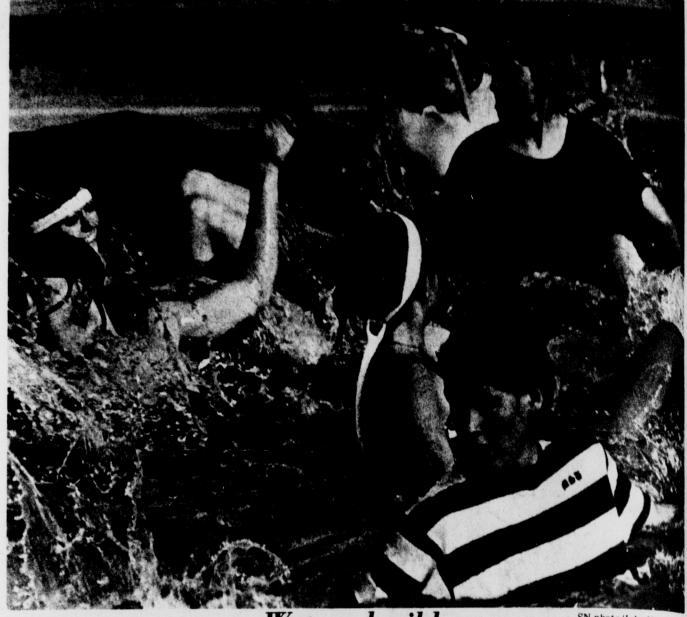

"I'm really impressed," Manor said of the new sport. "Everybody on our team is really crazy about it. There are quite a few people who don't swim well, and they're still have a lot of

"It'll grow," Manor predicts. "I'd really like to compete with U

Manor said there was not too much contact in the water -"not until afterwards," he laughed.

Since large crowds of swimmers have swamped the two Women's Intramural Bldg. pools, the co - recreational water polo program has been restricted to Sundays only, and the 24 - minute games run continuously from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m.

"I guess we'll start looking for pool space in Jenison or the Men's IM, or any place we can," Knupp said, should the activity become any more popular.

Surviving the final cut on a college athletic team is difficult enough for someone who has competed on a high school squad. But making the team with no high school competition is nearly impossible.

Sophomore swimmer John Henson is an exception to the rule. He is from Niles, a town where the only high school has no swimming pool and no swimming team.

Henson survived, though, and through a lot of work and determination has placed himself into the position as one of the keys to this year's

He is not one of the widely known members of the Spartan tankers because he has the misfortune to be swimming in the 50 - and 100 yard freestyle events. At most schools there would be no problem, but at MSU there is Glen Disosway and Bruce Wright, each of whom won Big Ten titles a year ago as freshmen in the two events. Henson makes his presence known by swimming freestyle in the anchor leg for the medley relay team.

He started his swimming conditioning program in high school.

"My senior year I worked out four days a week at the local YMCA, swimming 2,000 yards a day," Henson said. Later that year he received the break he needed from Ed Weede, Niles High School athletic director.

"Weede worked out a deal for me to swim with another area school, St. Joseph, in a dual meet with East Grand Rapids," Henson explained. "They operated the meet as a double dual and in effect, I swam for Niles against both in high school," Henson said. "Everyone else was

St. Joe and Grand Rapids."

Henson won both the 50 - and 100 - yard freestyle events, and his times in the two events qualified him for the state high school meet.

At the state meet, Henson finished third in the 100, but because of a mis hap he came in only seventh in the 50. "I had the second best time in the 50, but I only got a seventh because I slipped off the starting block and got off to a bad start," he said. Henson narrowed his choice of colleges down to three schools; MSU, Miami of Florida and Michigan, and chose MSU.

"Michigan State has a real good fisheries and Idlife program, and that's why I came here, Henson said. "I came for an education, not especially to swim.' Asked why he did not go to Indiana, the swimming capital of the United States, Henson replied, "I couldn't make their team. Their team is of national caliber and I'm just not that type of swimmer." Henson's final decision to come to-MSU was helped by the fact that both Wright and Disosway were coming here, even though he would be competing against the two for a starting spot.

"I had thought about swimming for a smaller school, but when I found out Bruce and Glen were both coming here, I decided to come also," he said of his decision. "When you swim against the best, you're going to perform your best. Besides, money was no trouble because I have a trust fund."

Upon arriving at MSU, Henson found the going rough against swimmers who had competed in high school.

"It was a strong team effort," Parks said. "We have a lot of depth and this is going to be ! strong asset for us this year."

Hopes remain high on the Spartan squad and motivation has been stirred. Arizona has been to take MSU seriously and acknowledges the Spartan's threat to its national title position. "The Arizona coach said they came to the meet just to swim against us" Parks said. "They have started to consider us a serious threat.'

Spartans' wrestling trio intent on winning

By PAT FARNAN State News Sports Writer

Seniors are good guys to have on your side. MSU wrestling coach Grady Peninger will attest to that. He has three such veterans who have yet to taste defeat.

Larry Avery, Conrad Calander and Jeff Zindel refuse to lose and Peninger couldn't be happier about it.

"All three of them exemplify the dogged determination it takes to be a wrestler," Peninger said of the talented trio. "They've given me everything I asked from them. You've got to want it to be a winner. I feel like these guys do.

"Everyone of these guys should at least win the Big Ten," Peninger asserted. "They've got the talent, intelligence and, most importantly, the determination and confidence. I feel they all should win.' The road to success was not exactly gold - paved, though. All three had inauspicious beginnings with the MSU wrestling program, but the tide has since turned.

During the 1971 - 72 season,

Avery competed in two matches. He lost both of them. At MSU, his career record is 17 - 3 - 1. One of his defeats was a default at U-M. Peninger says Avery has improved more in one year than any wrestler he has ever had. Avery just might "I tell everybody I'm tough," Avery says. "I tell them in the locker room. I tell them in the wrestling room. I need that. It reinforces my confidence in myself. I believe in myself. I believe I've got what it takes to win."

Avery was a state champion for Brooklin Park High School in Baltimore, Md. His decision to attend MSU was influenced by his brother James, a graduate student in criminal justice here at the time. It sounded fine and good to Avery. But upon arrival he got a rude awakening. "I was scared," Avery said. "My wrestling techniques I'd acquired in high school had to be refined in order for me to compete in college. I never had to worry about such things in high school. I never lost."

Avery did not have to worry very long. Peninger didn't

"That's why I have a policy of not cutting a wrestler," Peninger said. "Avery can beat anybody. He drew with Chris Taylor at the Midlands last year before being penalized two points for getting thrown off the mat. His improvement is hard to believe. His is purely a case of mind over matter. If you don't mind, it doesn't Avery is not a big heavyweight (230 - 235) but he doesn't care. "I'm a lot stronger than I used to be," he said. "But the vital part of wrestling is confidence. I've got a lot of that."

Conrad Calander came to MSU as a state champion, too. He wrestled at Maple Heights High School, Maple Heights, Ohio. That's where the Milkovichs (Tom and Pat) come from and Calander thought he was in for a free

"He never paid the price of being a good wrestler until this year," Peninger declared. "He told me at the beginning of the year that he wanted to be a national champion. He's never worked before like he has today. He's finally paying the price and it's really gratifying. Calander is good enough to be national champion."

It didn't look that way last year, though. Calander got off to an atrocious start. He was 18 - 5 the year before. But after 18 matches last year, Calander was a lowly 6 - 12. Then he went nuts. He nearly pulled off the upset of the year in the Big Ten last season but ended up second. He finished third in the Midlands and completed the year as sixth best in the national tourney.

Now with an extra year of eligibility, Calander's got it

"I live with Pat Milkovich now and we keep tabs on each other," Calander said. "We're training, eating right and getting enough sleep. The difference has been tremendous."

Peninger would probably agree with that.

"Sometimes it takes a wrestler a long time to dig out of a rut," Calander explained. "Well, I'm out of it now and I'm just going to keep my mental and physical self together and hope I peak at the right time."

Then there is 'Stork,' er . . . Jeff Zindel. He's the last of a five - man brother act which spans more than a decade.

"My close friends call me 'Stork' but that's all," Zindel said. "The term doesn't even have a wrestling origin. My dad (chairman and professor of the MSU Poultry Science Dept.) stuck me with that. He was taking a chicken apart once and he said of all us kids I most closely resembled the wing."

An aspiring doctor, Zindel divides his time between wrestling and academics and finds the schedule time consuming.

"With a daily workout and running in my free time, I have to spend the rest of the day studying," Zindel said. "But that's part of the game. It's part of paying the price of winning.'

"Jeff is constantly pounding. He just never quits," Peninger said. "When you think you've got him, that's a mistake. Because you don't."

Zindel finished third in the Big Ten last year and is determined to be national champion this year.

"Each win gives me a little more confidence," Zindel said. "Sometimes it gets hard to get up, especially when you've already wrestled a guy three or four times. But it's just like doing a paper. It has to be

Dean for graduate studies urged

By BOB OURLIAN State News Staff Writer

Graduate education at MSU is being slighted because of the University's delay in finding or appointing a new dean of advanced graduate studies, Council of Graduate Students President Beth Andrus told COGS representatives Monday night.

Clarence Minkel, former associate dean of advanced graduate studies, is presently acting dean. Minkel took the position when former dean Milton Muelder resigned during the summer.

Leroy Dugan has been assistant dean all along. Either Minkel should be made the regular dean or a vigorous attempt should be made to find a new one, Andrus told the council. "Most universities with a graduate school this size have 10 deans," she said. "It's unbelievable that nothing's been done '

George Seperich, COGS treasurer, said that COGS ought to assume responsibility for initiating action to resolve the problem, since the Academic Council is wound up in the Manderschied report on academic governance and the Graduate Council is fighting for its existence.

Andrus plans on writing to President Wharton to begin COGS action on the issue. Meanwhile, COGS representatives Paul Smith and Ron Simkins will try to develop a committee to decide how the graduate school should be structured.

In other COGS business, Andrus reported a new development in the Internal Revenue Service case.

She said the Internal Revenue Service, Minkel and Bob Lockhart, asst. comptroller, arrived at an agreement to resolve the graduate student tax dilemma.

No one from COGS was invited to the meeting.

The agreement provides that a graduate teaching assistant would be taxed only for the amount of his stipend, which the University would ordinarily pay a nonstudent teacher to teach the same course. Any amount over what the University would ordinarily pay would not be taxed.

In the past, graduate teaching assistants were taxed while graduate research assistants were not. The IRS claimed that a research assistant is getting paid to further his education while a teaching assistant is paid for a service he performs.

however, argue that in most instances teaching is required in order to obtain degrees. In addition, the teaching is also part of their education, just as research is for the research assistants' education.

Lockhart said Tuesday that the agreement would not be implemented until both the University and COGS have a chance to look at it and offer approval or disapproval.

In other action, the COGS committee on the energy crisis, headed by management representative Gene Buckley, issued a report proposing that Graduates students, 10 recommendations be adopted by the University in order to aid graduate students who commute to school.

The recommendations are all aimed at easing transitions for commuters who would have to temporarily drop out of school in the event of gas rationing.

Also at the meeting, COGS Vice President Bradley Niles pointed out that not a single COGS representative was a member of an American Niles said that of 80 departments in the University, each with one representative, none elected American minority graduates students.

Cable TV firm promises initial service by Feb. 15

By ANDREA AUSTIN State News Staff Writer

With 20 per cent of the cable installed for East Lansing's cable television system, the National Cable Co. promises that initial service areas will be ready for hookup by Feb. 15. Mike Millward, National Cable's local project coordinator, said cable in the area north of Grand River Avenue, South of Saginaw Street and west of Abbott Road to the city limits is installed and residents there will get access within a month to 10 commercial and more than a dozen noncommercial channels. Henkles and McCoy Inc. of St. Johns is now installing cable for the second and third phases - north of Grand River Avenue, south of Saginaw Street and east of Abbott Road for service set to begin by the end of February or early Cable service, which will average about $5 per dwelling, is installed like other utilities with cables strung on existing phone poles or in underground trenches.

March, Millward said.

East Lansing City Council approved a franchise agreement last May with National Cable for construction of a citywide cable television and radio network, culminating several years of planning.

A city Cable Communications Commission implemented a cable ordinance, stipulating levels of city profit from National Cable revenue and use of the noncommercial channels.

Millward said apartment buildings of more than six units must be prewired for cable service, which the company is offering free for the next few months. A charge will be made after that time. Installation crews are working full time at apartments in the city now, Millward said. Building owners or managers should call National Cable for prewiring, Cost of cable service, which is voluntary for apartment residents, varies with the number of units in a structure. The seven - member cable commission met Monday night to discuss operating rules, appeal procedures for censorship on the public access channels and a community needs study.

Nancy Webber, city staff representative to the commission, said the commission discussed the cable company's suggested operating rules and referred its comments back to the company. Under Federal

Communication Commission (FCC) rules, a cable system within 90 days of the beginning of its official operation, Ted Pregitzer, National Cable's local program director, said. Webber said commission members want to establish an appeals process for public access programs that are blocked by the company because of obscenity.

Conventional television systems are required by the FCC to make regular community needs studies, Pregitzer said, but cable television should provide enough commercial and noncommercial diversity to waylay a study.

in the country began in the 1940s to bring better reception to isolated communities, and has grown to include more than 3,000 systems connecting 8 million households in 1973, a President's Cabinet committee reported last week.

The cable television industry

The committee recommended a new national policy for cable operation, which is expected to include 50 per cent of American homes in the next 20 years.

The policy recommendations include FCC regulation of national policies with more authority going to local agencies and safeguards so subscribers can keep out undesired programs considered obscene or violent through scrambling.

Victim risks sight to save eye

By DIANE GALBRAITH

Ramon Ruiz, the 22 - year - old student who was shot in the face and chest at the Cristo Rev Community Center by a purse snatcher, now faces the possibility of complete blindness unless he agrees to surgical removal of his right eye.

Doctors in Lansing and Ann Arbor have told Ruiz there is no hope of restoring sight to his right eye and that failure to remove it threatens irreversible infection to his left eve.

But Ruiz, who was shot on Nov. 1, has not given permission for the operation.

"I have recommended to Ramon and his family that the eye be removed, but Ramon doesn't want it out," said Dr. John Plant, Ruiz's physician in Lansing. "The doctors in Ann Arbor have confirmed that the right eye should be

At first there was some doubt that the eye was permanently lost, but when it failed to respond to weekly treatments, Plant recommended it be removed as soon as possible.

Structure of planning unit under fire from Graves

Future power is the name of the game, and Mayor Gerald Graves of Lansing wants a an Ingham County lion's share for his city.

He thinks the proposed restructuring of the Tri -County Regional Planning Commission should be based on the one - man one - vote principle which would give the city about 35 per cent of the total vote. This is in comparison to 11 per cent that the city would have on the proposal from the commission's By - laws Committee, which will be voted on at the planning agency's meeting today.

Graves has instructed the city attorney to involve Lansing in a court case in Genesee County questioning the structure of the regional planning commission there, and also has drafted a resolution requesting that Ingham County withhold its share of funds going to the commission

Gordon Swix, chairman of the planning commission and commissioner, said Graves' move is "strictly and solely a power grab."

He said that to his recollection Graves has not attended a meeting of the Governmental Coordinating Committee or a general meeting of the commission itself during the past four

Graves, who was unavailable for comment Tuesday, is demanding an expansion that will cause future regional planning decisions to be made for political rather than people - oriented reasons, Swix said.

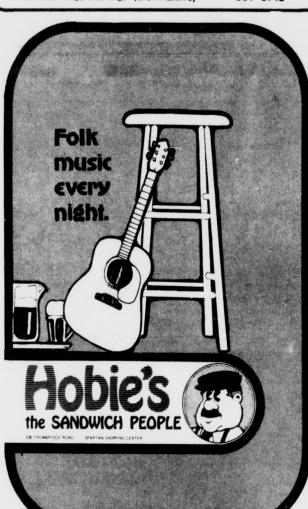

He contends that Graves' "smoke screen" is an attempt to cause publicity pressure that will get Lansing another vote on the restructured commission.
