Streaking epidemic hits boisterous MSU students

Scores of carefree students, clad only in shoes and a hat or necktie, scrambled in and out of residence halls Thursday as a hefty dose of the national streaking epidemic struck

About 1,200 people, egged on by warm weather and academic boredom, gathered at three local spots at 5 p.m. to watch small groups of streakers

The crowds at south and Brody complexes saw about 25 mostly male studente shed their clothes, following widespread rumors that hundreds of streakers would bare themselves along Grand River Avenue and at the two residence hall locations.

Two male students, who were picked up by plainclothes MSU policemen outside West Holden Hall in late afternoon, were still waiting at 6 p.m. for other Holden residents to post $200 in bail money for them.

Police would not name the men, who were the first two students arrested despite a warning Thursday from Ingham County Prosecutor Raymond Scodeller that he would prosecute whoever was apprehended for indecent exposure.

The widespread streaking, which started sporadically on Sunday and erupted across campus Wednesday night, was interspersed with chants, flying panties and an occasional Streakers cited weather, upcoming final exams and general boredom as reasons for their bravado.

But one student from India, standing in a crowd of 200, may have had the best perspective. "I think these crazy Americans are a little cuckoo," she said.

Six charged with burglary of Ellsberg's doctor's office

Ehrlichman, already charged with conspiring in the Watergate coverup, was indicted again Thursday-this time for allegedly sending White House agents to rifle Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office and lying about it later.

The federal grand jury charged Ehrlichman, along with former White House aide Charles W. Colson and four men tied to the Watergate burglary, with conspiring to violate the rights of Dr. Lewis J. Fielding of Los Angeles.

Meanwhile, the chief counsel of the House Judiciary Committee said Thursday that President Nixon appears to be trying to limit its impeachment inquiry to Watergate and to restrict its access to White House documents.

But counsel John Doar advised the committee to refrain from issuing a subpena for other information at this time. The committee agreed, with a clear warning that it will exercise its subpena power later if it feels necessary information is being withheld.

"It seems clear the White House is attempting to define the limits of our inquiry, and that is totally unacceptable,' said Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif.

The committee also voted unanimously to authorize Chairman Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J., to formally request that District Judge John Sirica turn over a grand jury report believed to link Nixon to Watergate to the committee.

In New York, a government witness testified Thursday at the Mitchell-Stans conspiracy trial that hours after financier Robert Vesco made a $200,000 cash contribution to Nixon's re-election campaign, then-Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell set up a "very productive" meeting between Vesco's lawyer and the head of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Vesco aide Harry Sears testified in U.S. District Court that the meeting which Vesco had been trying to arrange for months jelled quickly once the cash was delivered to former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans, who was then Nixon's re-election finance chairman.

The indictment of Ehrlichman and the others said their intent was "to search for confidential information concerning Ellsberg" in the September 1971 break-in at Fielding's office.

At the time, Ellsberg was under indictment for unauthorized possession of classified materials - and was held responsible for leaking the Pentagon Papers, a study of the development of the Ehrlichman, who resigned as Nixon's top domestic adviser last April 30, had denied knowing in advance about the Fielding break-in but said national security could justify it.

The White House special investigations unit, nicknamed the plumbers, had been put in his charge by Nixon.

The conspiracy charge, carrying maximum 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine, named Ehrlichman, Colson, G. Gordon Liddy, Bernard L. Barker, Felipe DeDiego and Eugenio R. Martinez.

Additionally Ehrlichman alone was charged in one count of lying to the FBI and three of lying to the grand jury. Each carries a maximum five-year prison term and a $10,000 fine.

If convicted on all counts in the Watergate coverup and Ellsberg case indictments, Ehrlichman would be liable for a 55-year prison term. He also is scheduled for trial April 15 on conspiracy, burglary and perjury charges in Los Angeles.

Watergate is one of six areas of presidential activity the Judiciary Committee is investigating. Orhers include allegations of illegal campaign contributions, the actions of the White House plumbers, allegations of the use of government agencies for political purposes, Nixon's personal finances and the secret bombing of Cambodia.

The apprehensions of committee members and Doar about White House intentions were based on a letter Doar received from James St. Clair, Nixon's special counsel, outlining Nixon's offer to give the committee everything he has given to the Watergate grand jury.

The letter states that Nixon believes this material is "more than sufficient to afford the judiciary committee with the entire Watergate story."

In another development a California official accused Nixon's tax lawyer Thursday of fraudulently backdating the deed to Nixon's vice-presidential papers to claim a massive tax deduction.

Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. said "there's the possibility of an attempt to defraud" in the execution of the deed in an effort to gain the tax break.

Trustees to get coed housing plan

By SUSAN AGER State News Staff Writer

Eldon Nonnamaker, vice president for student affairs, reversing his earlier decision, told the State News Thursday that he would present the coed housing proposal to the board of trustees at its March 15 meeting.

"Several trustees have asked that it be placed on the agenda," Nonnamaker said, explaining his decision. He said he has talked to no board members since the last

February meeting, and has no idea what the vote on the proposal will be.

Nonnamaker's earlier refusals to present the proposal to the board were based on informal discussions he had with the trustees during late January and early February, after which he was "99 per cent sure the board would split 4-4 on the proposal," which would defeat it for the third time in 31/2 years.

The proposal, which would allow men and women to live on the same floors if "separate and identifiable" bathrooms and showers were provided, was made public in mid - February, but was not proposed at the later February board meeting.

Nonnamaker said the executive group of MSU's vice presidents discussed the proposal at its meeting March 1, but the decision to present the controversial proposal to the board was not made until after a discussion with President Wharton Wednesday.

Nonnamaker first announced the change of mind at a Residence Hall Assn. banquet Wednesday night in Hubbard

Trustee Pat Carrigan, D-Ann Arbor, confided to the State News Monday that she had written a "strongly worded" letter to President Wharton urging that the proposal be brought to the board for a

On Tuesday, Trustee Jack Stack, R-Alma, said he had also written a letter to Wharton, with a copy sent to Nonnamaker, asking the same thing. Stack said the issue had been discussed at an informational meeting in January "with the understanding that it would come to the board for a vote at a public meeting."

"I think this one's ripe," Stack said of the issue.

Nonnamaker said Trustee Don Stevens, D-Bloomfield Hills, had also spoken to him personally after the February board meeting and asked that the item be brought before the board. Trustees Carrigan and Stevens have supported the proposal in past votes, and Stack has said he would support it as well.

Until Feb. 21, Nonnamaker was very firm in his refusal to present the proposal, saying that the controversy created by an even split would not be good for MSU or its students.

Some fears also centered on possible negative reaction from parents and legislators - both fund sources for the University.

If the trustees approve the proposal, MSU will join seven other state institutions which offer a coed housing option. These include the University of Michigan and Central, Western and Northern Michigan universities and Saginaw Valley State College.

Included in the proposal is a clause requiring a 75 per cent sign-up rate for the option by returning students.

Gary North, coordinator of Residence

Halls Programs and a member of the committee which drafted the proposal, said this meant that at least 188 students. or 75 per cent of the 250 spaces which would be available, must sign up for the option in order for it to be offered.

If the signup is smaller, the proposal reads, "the number of rooms set aside for this option will be reduced."

"That is simply a test to see if real commitment is as great as verbal commitment," North said.

First-term freshmen or transfer students would not be eligible for the option.

Which residence halls would offer the coed option would not be determined until after the trustees approved the proposal, North said. He added that signups for the coed option rooms would probably occur before regular room signups begin April 16, so that rooms could be converted to other options if too few students apply.

North said the Housing Options Committee, which drafted the proposal, will probably consider the popularity of residence halls, their class and major mixes, and other factors in determining which should offer the option.

Some students, particularly those in McDonel Hall, have criticized the assignment of other coed options like alternate wings only to unpopular halls in order to increase their popularity and thus their financial stability.

simon to use gasoline reserves hike service station allocation

WASHINGTON (AP) - Federal energy chief William E. Simon apped gasoline stocks Thursday to increase distribution in March and keep service - station waiting lines from getting as long as in

Simon announced increases in March averaging only about 2.9 million gallons per day -- an improvement of about 1 per cent ver February - but the increases were concentrated most heavily states with poor supplies, and improvements there should be

The increases were distributed so that no state would receive s than 85 per cent of its March 1972, gasoline supply, adjusted growth of motor vehicle registrations since then. Also, Egypt has asked Arab oil countries meeting in Cairo unday to lift their five - month - old embargo against the United ates, an Oil Ministry official said Thursday.

Informed sources in Kuwait said that rich Persian Gulf oil eikdom also is ready to drop the embargo.

There were reports that Saudi Arabia and several Persian Gulf ates, in addition to Kuwait, endorsed the Egyptian call for an d to the embargo. Meanwhile, the American Petroleum Institute reported that toline production decreased about two per cent last week, atching a decrease in refinery inputs.

The institute, an oil industry organization, blamed the decreased refinery operations largely on "scheduled shutdowns for repairs" and "partially to lack of crude oil."

Simon told the National Governors' Conference, where he announced the March allocations, that further emergency allocations could be made if new problems arise but he did not think they would be necessary.

Simon also told the governors he was considering the idea of lifting the voluntary ban on Sunday gasoline sales, to aid the recreation and vacation industry, but his deputy, John C. Sawhill, later told newsmen that Simon meant Sunday sales might be resumed after the Arab oil embargo against the United States is Simon's action, instead, increased the supplies of 30 states to at least 85 per cent of their adjusted 1972 levels.

Simon emphasized that the increases were coming from inventories, not from the supplies of other states.

Even the six states with more than 100 per cent of their adjusted 1972 supplies were untouched; they are Alaska, Kansas, Louisiana, Minnesota, North Carolina, Texas and Wyoming. But Simon warned that he would start equalizing the distribution in April, allowing no state to receive more than 95 per cent of its adjusted April 1972, base supply. He said his goal was to bring all state supplies within five per cent of the national average.

Tenants challenge legality of fee or cleaning of rugs by landlords

The outcome of a case in which a group Wayne County tenants are suing their dords for charging rug cleaning fees in dition to security deposits could make charges illegal.

the purpose of the new law by placing the burden of proof back on the tenant if he says that the house or apartment was clean when he moved out and didn't need to be cleaned.

East Lansing apartment complex managers and landlords vary their methods of charging and refunding cleaning fees.

Larry Scott, manager of Twyckingham Apartments on South Hagadorn Road, said he charges a $40 prepaid rug cleaning fee. He said that all apartment rugs are cleaned when tenants move out whether the rug is cleaned by a commercial company or not.

He said that because students are always moving in and out, charging the uniform nonrefundable fee is the best possible

"It's reasonable because it's not a hidden charge," Scott said. "If they change (reinterpret) the law so that the fee is illegal, then the cost will just be added to the rent."

At Burcham Apartments, 731 Burcham Drive, manager Kathleen Morris said that a $20 cleaning fee is charged which is given back if students don't leave the apartment

The same situation exists at Woodmere Apartments, 139 Woodmere Ave., where Manager Mildred Chandler charges a $25 cleaning fee that is returned "if they want to clean up everything."

J. Donald Gadsden, who owns apartments and houses in East Lansing, said that he presently charges a $75 prepaid cleaning fee which includes carpet cleaning, as well as windows and walls and anything else that needs it.

Gadsden said that he would return the fee if his tenants leave the apartment or house in reasonably clean shape.

Kissinger warns of trade veto

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger warned the Senate Thursday he would recommend a veto of the administration's trade bill if it is passed with a provision that would deny the Soviet Union "most favored nation" trade status unless Soviet Jews are allowed to emigrate freely.

At the same time, Kissinger in testimony before the Senate Finance Committee announced for the first time publicly an administration willingness to compromise on

The concordat, attacked by both the church and state as an anachronism in recent years, bars trial or arrest of bishops without permission of the Vatican.

The break, if it developed, would leave the government free to try the bishop for what it called "a grave attack on national unity" by urging more freedom for the Basque minority. It would also mark the lowest point in church-state relations since the end of the civil war in

EPA orders Chrysler recall

Some 826,000 Chrysler Corp. cars and trucks were ordered recalled Wednesday to replace a faulty antipollution device that allowed an illegally high level of nitrogen oxides in exhausts.

Covered by the recall were all 1973-model Chrysler cars and light duty trucks built after March 15, 1973, plus about 1,000 light duty trucks assembled at the beginning of the 1974 model run.

Orders for the recall came from Russell E. Train, administrator of the federal Environmental Protection Agency. He said the defect was voluntarily reported by Chrysler.

The defect allowed the release of nitrogen oxides between 15 and 60 per cent in excess of the three-gram-a-mile limit set by the Clean Air Act of 1970, Train said.

Warning of Syrian attack puts Israeli army on alert

TEL SHAMS, Occupied Syria (AP) - Reinforced Israeli troops and tanks were on high alert Thursday after warnings of a Syrian attack on the October war battleground, front line military sources said.

Intelligence reports of the possible Syrian attack were cited as the reason Defense Minister Moshe Dayan canceled his resignation and extinguished a cabinet crisis that nearly forced Premier Golda Meir to quit.

Some Israelis had suggested Wednesday that the attack reports might have been more a device to enable Meir to settle the crisis than a real danger.

But Israeli military sources at the front about 25 miles from the Syrian capital of Damascus said messages had been received outlining the proposed Syrian offensive and the political strategy behind it.

The reports disclosed that President Hafez Assad of Syria wanted to launch a limited offensive to heat up the Golan Heights front and apply pressure on Israeli - Syrian truce talks, the Israelis said.

The talks, arranged by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger on his last trip to the Middle East, are to start in Washington in about two weeks with Kissinger as go -

The primary source of campus news for students living on campus is newspapers even though 96 per cent of the students have a radio in their rooms, a study conducted for all - campus

Slightly more than 81 per cent of 1,076 campus residents surveyed last fall said they got most of their important campus news from newspapers, with 10.5 per cent naming other individuals, 4.4 per cent radio, 1.1 per cent television and 7 per cent other means as primary news sources.

The 16-page report on ownership and use of the mass media on campus was prepared by John Abel, asst. professor of television and radio, and a group of students in one of his classes.

In addition to the pervasive presence of radios, the study found that 71.8 per cent of the students had record players in their room, 57.7 per cent had televisions and 42.3 per cent had tape players.

Those who had record players listened to them more than other sources -- averaging 2.7 hours daily.

More than 92 per cent said they read the State News daily. while 26.6 per cent were reading the Detroit Free Press and 3.2 per cent the Lansing State Journal on a daily basis, with 5.2 per cent not reading any newspaper daily.

Different music, better reception, better disc jockeys, more news and more black music were the changes in campus radio most desired by the students, though nearly half failed to suggest

Wrong to attack justices on basis of political views

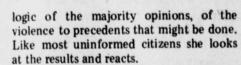

To the Editor:

I am a lawyer, a staunch liberal, generally favor the "due process revolution" that took place from 1961 to 1969 in the Supreme Court and usually disagree with the current conservative majority on the court in criminal cases. Therefore I should be pleased with Melissa Payton's Feb. 28 column on the court.

Payton took 2 1/4 columns to say: "conservative is bad, Burger court majority decisions are conservative, Burger court

John W. Lindstrom Campus editor

While I do not deny the existence of an emotional element in law cases, there is a lot more to it than that.

Several things are deeply troubling about Payton's column. First, she offers no compelling reason for me to agree with her. If that is how the law operated purely on emotion - there would be no stability and the Warren court gains would have been completely overridden three

Secondly, she implies that we can judge legal decisions solely on the basis of labels. This further implies that the conservative judges and all their work are completely bad. In fact, lawyers usually realize that judges (and people) who disagree with them are not moral lepers. People disagree sincerely and reasonably.

I have a suggestion for the editors of the State News. Before you allow columnists to analyze the workings of the Supreme Court, require them to take a course in constitutional law or criminal procedure. Of course, I cannot guarantee that after a criminal procedure course my students will think carefully and rationally about both sides of an issue, but I can hope they Marvin Zalman

Fishy excuses provided for store's poor labeling

I want to alert the readers of the State News to a problem that concerns not only me but also other fish enthusiasts in the East Lansing and Lansing area. My concern is with the manner in which people at Noah's Ark Pet Shop sell the tropical fish.

They do not label their fish tanks with the correct name or price tags for the fish. In fact, the great majority of their tanks are mislabeled with discontinued price tags. When one tries to purchase fish one must have the assistance of the sales clerks to help name and price the fish.

Some people feel it is a customer service it is not! People who are purchasing fish from "Noah's" are being led blindly by the management into a purchase without really knowing what the price or name of the fish is, except what the sales clerk tells

I have personally talked to the sales clerks at Noah's Ark about this problem and they tell me that it is too hard for them to keep current prices on tanks because they get large orders of fish every week. Their reasoning, however, does not seem to make sense.

I checked with the other pet shops in the area, Fish Monger and Frandor Pet Center, and they told me that they receive large orders of fish every week, too, but they are able to keep current names and price tags on all their tanks. I ask "Why can't Noah's Ark?"

Not having the current name or price tags on the fish tanks takes away from the American tradition of free enterprise, because we as tropical fish buyers can not compare prices with other fish stores.

With name and price tags on the tanks, fish enthusiasts will be better able to recognize and learn the different prices and names of the fish - just like at other pet stores.

If not, the old cliche' "consumer beware" will return to the retailing scene at Noah's Ark.

Crowd loved big fire show

To the Editor:

Boy, that was a pretty good fire the other night at Hubbard Hall. The firemen spent 20 minutes trying to figure out how the extension ladder worked. Finally they mastered that only to discover the dumb thing reached barely midway the height of Hubbard Hall.

I guess the fire lasted a bit longer than i should have, but the crowds outside love it. The short ladder trick brought a round of applause and the breaking out the windows stunt pulled numerous gasps o

I will just bet no one in that crowd was even thinking of all the hours of praction the firemen and the women on that to floor had to put in to make that show come off as perfect as it did. Dealers, 'dries' unfairly suppress bill allowing campus liquor sales

A bill allowing state colleges and universities to sell liquor on campuses has been in the House Committee on Colleges and Universities since last fall and shows no signs of moving from there, despite efforts to get it on the House floor.

The bill, introduced by Rep. Jackie Vaughn III, D-Detroit, will amend the state law now prohibiting the sale of alcoholic beverages on state - owned land.

An attempt was made last October to get the bill out of committee and onto the floor, but it failed, 6-4. Surprisingly, the vote split along party lines.

Voting to have the bill reported out of committee were Reps. Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor; H. Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing; Daisy Elliot, D-Detroit, and

Voting to keep the bill in committee were: Reps. Richard D. Buth, R-Belmont, Bela E. Kennedy, R-Bangor; Charles H. Barnum, R-Manistique; Robert D. Young, R-Saginaw; and two Democrats, Lucille H. McCollough, D-Dearborn, and Geritt C. Hasper, D-Muskegon. Rep. Dale Warner, R-Eaton Rapids, is also a member of the committee, but was absent from that

The major opposition to the bill seems to be coming from an unlikely alliance of tee totalers and retail liquor dealers. The tee totalers' reasoning is obvious, but the dealers' logic is more complex.

Dealers say the bill is an attack on the free enterprise system because colleges and universities, due to location, would have an unfair advantage over retail liquor outlets.

What they fail to mention is that liquor dealers already have an oligopoly over the distribution of alcoholic beverages, as only one license is issued per 1,500 population. Most colleges and universities have indicated support for this measure. On the MSU campus, the sale of liquor would provide a needed shot in the arm to places such as Kellogg Center, which would attract much - needed business and conventions.

A small minority of liquor dealers and tee totalers should not impose their will on colleges and universities, which would benefit by the passage of this bill.

Student media board could work

ASMSU's proposed Student Media Appropriations Board would be a welcome source of funds for struggling student publications. However, certain problems could arise with the plan and deserve close attention if the measure is passed.

The proposed nine - member student media board would be made up of members chosen by ASMSU, the Council of Graduate Students and the Elected Student Council. The board would allocate funds to publications according to their student - interest market and financial need.

Undergraduates will vote on the ASMSU constitutional amendment to establish a media appropriations board, along with several other proposed constitutional amendments, during spring registration.

If passed, the student media board has great potential for increasing the numbers and types of student publications, including literary magazines and other special - interest publications.

Admittedly, many students would not directly benefit from the refundable 50 cent fee that would be collected each term during registration to fund the media board. But everyone would at least indirectly benefit from the greater dissemination of viewpoints and literary talent under the plan.

Possible pitfalls that media board members must be wary of include the danger that publications may become too reliant on board funding without exploring means of broadening their financial base.

Another danger is that student government will use the board's powers for patronage. It is possible that the board might allocate funds only to publications with viewpoints it approves of, as has happened at other universities with similar plans.

Students should support the proposed Student Media Appropriations Board during the referendum at spring registration. But they should also make sure, along with those in student government, that an alternative media board does not abuse its powers.

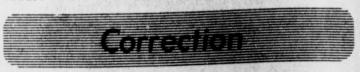

Write letters to support coed plan

The proposed coed housing option could again be buried under the cloak of trustee secrecy unless students shower Trustee Aubrey Radcliffe, R-East Lansing, with Radcliffe has said that on "certain issues" petitions and letters would sway his opinion. Since Radcliffe holds the key vote that means life or death for the coed plan, students must make the effort to contact him and express their views on the proposed living option.

The coed housing plan must be approved at the March meeting of the trustees for implementation next year, as room signups begin in April. So student letters of support are needed now more than ever. Radcliffe's address is PO Box 806, East Lansing,

Should we spank the offender's behind and say, "Naughty, naughty," or fine the offender according to the extent of the problem and history of offenses (the money could go to some charitable organization such as RHA) or should we jail the offender, maybe putting him into a "noise tank" or, best of all for serious offenders, should we brand their bodies with the initials "NM," standing for "Noise Maker"?

We have better alternatives. These are minds we are working with. Why not rebrainwash students into thinking that those people who ask for quiet are peers of those who make noise and are not authority figures against whom they should rebel?

Let us not be taught how to act like adults but how to act more mature than 'adults." Let us come to realize that residence halls present to us an organization that gives us more potential control over what is done than any other organization in our society.

Finally, let us all come to realize that the idea of individuality, by itself, is a dated concept. It is now time for working together, not against each other. Now it must not be "I am I" but rather "we are we." I am not an idealist. Donna Organek

Normal work week ordered in Britain

LONDON (AP) - Britain's new Labor government told the nation's industries Thursday to get back to full time work following the settlement of a miners strike that forced factories into a three - day week. Energy Secretary Eric Varley decreed that factories would resume a normal work week at midnight Friday after 68 days on part time. That will signal the end of the grave industrial crisis that contributed to the downfall of Edward Heath's Conservative

Coal shipments started moving Thursday from pits to power stations and state owned plants on which much of industry depends for its raw materials. The shipments were the first since the 280,000 miners launched a nationwide strike for more money a month

Varley said the three - day week had cost about $4.6 billion in lost production and unemployment payments to temporarily laid - off workers.

The government's swift settlement came as coal stocks neared the danger level.

nonessential industry on a three - day week Dec. 61 sparked mass unemployment and cut most production by 30

The executive board of the miners' union voted 25-2 Wednesday night to accept the Coal Board's one - year, $230 million package, $29 million short of the miners' demands.

The deal still has to be approved by the miners' union locals, but union leaders consider approval a mere formality. The settlement came two days after Wilson's Laborites replaced the ousted Heath administration.

Conservative leaders charged Thursday that the deal was the most inflationary in the history of trade unions" and would aggravate Britain's economic ills. Heath had offered the miners about half what the Coal Board proposed. This was in line with his anti inflation guidelines.

to help. A recent count showed 39 students were unable to get tutors this term. "There are 190 students studying English at the center," Paul Munsell, asst. director of the English Language Center, said. "If we could provide tutors for everyone, at least 150 students would want one "

The reason why people tutor are as varied as the countries the foreign students come from. One student tutors because he is interested in farming in Arabia. Others are awarded class credit.

Anette Baron, A212 Butterfield Hall, sophomore, plans to enter the Peace Corps and is tutoring to help her training. She is helping two Japanese students this term.

"I meet with one of the students once a week," Baron explained. "She's at level E, which means she can speak English pretty good. We work a lot on helping her with her pronunciation, how to form Terrie Newman, 926 S. Hubbard Hall, junior, became a tutor after her own experience abroad.

"I was in Germany for a while and it was hard. I needed help (with the language) and no one was around who would help," she said. "I saw some of the problems the foreign students have."

Newman is tutoring a German student now, but has worked with students from other countries.

"I work on the things they are going over in class and their mistakes," she said. "In their conversations in the dorms, people understand what they are trying to say, so they aren't corrected when they make mistakes. I tell them everything still let the mistakes slide, they know that what they said sounds wrong and they can correct themselves."

But tutors and the foreign students they help aren't always working on grammar and pronunciation.

One Japanese student said that her tutor took her to Chicago one weekend. Other tutors and their students go skating, dancing and to movies. The foreign student then gets a chance to use conversational English in a normal situation.

"One advantage I see in tutoring," Munsell said, "is that the stereotypes or fears, the preconceptions, begin to change. You start to see people as human beings. People are basically the same all over the

"Fortunately, we don't have many tutors who feel sorry for foreign students," he said. "These foreign students are often more sophisticated and braver than the American students - they have to be in order to come over here. The one who feels like he's doing a foreign student a big favor isn't doing a favor at all. He's not taking the 'poor' foreign student under his wing." There are several alternatives available for the person interested in tutoring.

The most common variation is on a one - to - one basis. The American student is given a stack of cards, each containing information about a particular foreign student. The prospective tutor chooses which student he would like to work with and calls him. They arrange times to meet and there are no guidelines about what can or cannot be done.

Another possibility is for one or two American students to work with a small group of foreign students. Munsell cautioned, however, that two American students to each other and leave the foreign students out of the conversation.

A third option is to work as an aide in the English classes also some education students for the foreign students. There are often too many students students getting credit. for one teacher to get around to, so an aide gives all of the students a chance to talk to somebody. There are now at least 10 aides, Munsell said. Some of them are getting

Cities face crisis, says Detroit mayor

Detroit mayor

By DIANA BUCHANAN State News Staff Writer

If the cities of the United States fall, then the nation will shortly follow, Detroit Mayor Colman Young said Thursday.

"America today faces a national urban crisis. We need urban specialists to help the future of metropolitan areas," Young said at the third urban luncheon forum sponsored by the College of Urban Development.

Young stated that if the city is buried and he is to act as the undertaker, he will be the undertaker for the suburbs and state as well, since Detroit holds the center of industry for the state.

"I can guarantee one thing as long as I'm in office. Detroit will be in motion. It may not always be in the right direction, but at least if you're moving you can always change directions," Young said.

Young said that the cities today take on the same type of national crisis that agriculture was in in the 1930s.

"We hope that the first part of this Renaissance of Detroit will be finished at the latest by 1978," Young said.

Young also said that he would like to start work on the crime in Detroit and the police force immediately.

"I intend to clean up the hard drug problem in Detroit. Not the addicts, but the hard drug pushers," Young said. "We are now having a full investigation of the police department. I want to reorganize the police department to be an effective people's police department," Young said.

Young said that he would like to see the police officers live in or near the precincts they work in to better relations between the people and the "Residency is essential to our police force. We want to have new police stations in Detroit so that the police will have a better chance to know the residents and we can develop a mutual respect for each other," Young said.

operate a system. Young said that he wants to look into the Dept. of Housing and Urban Development offer of homesteading HUD - owned houses in the city of Detroit and the rules with which they are to be given away. The mayor said that he would like to see the houses in groups of maybe 200, to turn a community into a living city. Young said that he will be calling on the state legislature and the University for aid in Detroit's problems.

"The city needs help, and helping the city is helping yourself and I know you're smart enough to help yourself," Young said.

Young added that he is looking for urban specialists in

Judiciary to hold hearing on billing for hall damage

By LARRY MORGAN State News Staff Writer

Collective billing for damage done to common areas of MSU residence halls could become a thing of the past if the Student -Faculty Judiciary rules in favor of the men from precinct 4A of Armstrong Hall in a hearing at 4 p.m. Friday.

Originally scheduled for Feb. 27, the hearing was rescheduled when Gary North, residence halls coordinator, and Robert C. Underwood, residence halls manager, were unable to attend due to the fire at Hubbard Hall

If the judiciary rules against the students, they will not drop their case. Karl Bush, A427 Armstong Hall, who represents the students, said once they have exhausted all administrative channels within the University, that they will take their case to

Bush said he has contacted three attorneys, including Zolton A. Ferency, associate professor of criminal justice, who have indicated they would be interested in the case should the students take it outside the Univeristy.

The student's case, based on alleged violations of individual freedoms and the lack of set procedures to enforce the collective billing policy, began last November when they received a letter from Steven Loving head advisér of Armstrong Hall, in which he requested that Rod Olsen, asst. manager of Brody Hall, charge the men for a damaged study lounge table.

The management later dropped the assessment. But the men filed a request for hearing with the judiciary Jan. 14, seeking to have the billing clause removed from the residence halls contract.

The hall management believes the policy is necessary to reduce the amount of damage in the residence halls and to keep room

North said the policy is necessary to maintain responsibility with the persons who are responsible for damage.

"The policy has been used selectively where persons responsible for damages were known but wouldn't come forward to pay," North said.

Ferency said there could be serious problems with the policy if the net effect is to penalize several individuals for damage done

"As far as I know there are no guidelines, criteria or checkpoints in the procedure which a person could measure his status against," Ferency said, indicating that this is a necessity of

Union features new radio station

That mysterious voice you hear in the Union these days is probably an announcer for MSU's newest radio station, WTVR.

Students in the Television and Radio Dept. are gathering experience by broadcasting music, news and weather over the Union's public address system from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. every weekday from studios on the fourth floor of the Union.

Academic advising to undergo review

State News Staff Writer

MSU's academic advising system, which has been alternately his said and condemned by students and faculty, is once again being put under the microscope.

Frederic Dutton, consultant to the provost and former dean of Lyman Briggs College, has been asked by Provost John Cantlon to lyman briggs the current advising system and suggest possible changes. Dutton completed a study in February on the feasibility of hanging MSU's academic calendar from a quarter to trimester

Dutton said he does not view his job as a search for a simple

"Whatever evolves will be a system with a variety of advising models," Dutton said. "If you consider the great variety of tudent objectives, aspirations and previous experience, it is obvious that there is not one model that will work for all." Dutton said he cannot yet estimate when the study will be concluded.

MSU's advising system currently ranges from the College of Communication Arts that assigns students a faculty adviser in their major to the College of Education that assigns a faculty adviser and also maintains an advisement center. The center acts as an information clearinghouse and makes advisers more accessible to students.

The University College maintains the largest advisement center with offices in Bessey Hall, Wonders Hall, Brody Hall and Fee Hall. Each department is responsible to develop an advising Dutton's appointment comes as the result of a report by the Educational Policies Committee subcommittee on academic advisement of undergraduate students.

The report, released in May, caused a flurry of discussion when it was submitted to the Academic Council. The council agreed with the report's intent but refused to approve its suggestion that a new position be created in the provost's office to monitor and improve the advising system. Council members feared the position would add one more bureaucrat to the already immense MSU bureaucracy.

Dutton became the obvious choice to do a job similar to the proposed position when he completed his academic calendar study, Dorothy Arata, asst. provost for undergraduate education,

"Since the council did not want the University to commit itself to a permanent position, Dutton seemed ideal since as a consultant his position would not be permanently fixed in the structure," Arata said. "Plus, he has a knowledge of the University having served as a dean and has a real feel for the importance of advising.'

The report concluded after a year and a half of study that MSU's advising system was praiseworthy but noted that there were definite problems.

"There is a tendency to inflate the value of guiding a student toward a degree and a career without an analysis of their relevance as personal educational goals," the report said. "There has also been a decreasing involvement of faculty in academic advising."

Other problem areas the report identified include: inadequate information about requirements and options, no coordination among colleges, inadequate rewards for quality advising and inaccessibility of advisers.

STREAKING!

Bare bodies bounce about campus

By LINDA SANDEL

State News Staff Writer · For the first time in a long time, MSU students lost their heads last night and many of them also lost their clothes.

Barrages of bared bodies bounded their way around the campus in the balmy weather Wednesday night, creating a streaking blitz that roused more excitement than this campus has since since the 1972 Grand River Avenue peace demonstrations.

They streaked in the south, they streaked in the north, they streaked in the east, they streaked in McDonald's Drive - in, they streaked in classes, they streaked on residence hall floors and they streaked across the screens of campuswide television.

Crowds, some of them numbering more than 500, gathered near residence halls to watch the parade of people who ran, walked, bicycled and jumped across stretches of ground, clad in nothing but scintillating ski masks and skimpy

Women stook on the roof of Holden Hall screaming "Skin, more skin!" to the Men and women hung out of windows clapping and screaming as phantom streakers dashed by. Streaking was on the minds of most students, and men and women were caught in the web of amused excitement that accompanies the daring dashes. Streakers struck in relative freedom.

Campus police had little control over the situation because the streakmania was so widespread and varied. However, two students were arrested Thursday.

At south campus, a crowd began gathering between Holden and Wilson halls to witness the first of the nude jaunts around 10:30 p.m. Wednesday. By midnight the crowds numbered close to 500 in that area. Groups of 50-60 nude males charged around the complex.

At one point a group of nine gentlemen in a white van drove up to the crowd, jumped out of the small vehicle and proceeded to build a human pyramid. Gracefully, the nude men completed their act, took a long bow, climbed back into the van and took off, only to be seen later at other spots around the campus.

show, one woman escorted by two disrobed males made a streak appearance. The woman was not worried about being recognized by people in the mammoth crowds. "I didn't think they were very interested in looking at my face," she said. Later, at McDonel Hall about 500 people watched as men and women streaked and created a carnival by jumping in and out of a line of cars.

About 15 males from the sixth floor of Hubbard Hall took advantage of perfect timing Wednesday evening to disrupt a class on criminal and psychological deviancy in Conrad Hall. Three of the men romped before the class of 400 just as the professor was about to begin a lecture on sexual deviancy. Mark Nunes, a nonstudent, wearing only a ski mask and a pair of brown boots, streaked through the Michigan House of Representatives late Thursday afternoon and nearly escaped, but was tackled by an assistant sergeant - at - arms, and later arrested.

Students attributed the streaking to end

Also at the south complex streaker - of - term boredom, rebellion against fina tow, one woman escorted by two exam tensions and the simple need to create some excitement on a relative quiet campus.

One student defended the current fad saying that it was less extreme that goldfish swallowing or phone - boot stuffing.

Some said they hoped that the streaking would not last too long, but whether or no the streaking continues is anyone's guess "I hope it's cold this weekend," or woman said. "I have to study, and this streaking is just too distracting." Fortunately, morning - after embarassment and sniffles from the chills of the cool evening are the only after effects of the streaking shuffle. Early Thursday, one half - asleep man sauntered into the Holden Hall cafeteria. A tired young woman walked to him, gave him a knowing look and a jab in the side and said, "Hey, I saw you last night. You looked pretty good. "6

The man blushed several curious shades of red, beat a hasty retreat to the nearest table and promptly hid his face in an issue of the State News.

Live - TV streakers

Fifteen student streakers finally made it onto live television at 2 p.m. Thursday when the men from 6th floor N. Hubbard Hall, scrambled through Handsome Al Mandelstamm's Economics 201 class in front of about 200 people. The streakers, who had sortied from Hubbard to Conrad Hall and back Wednesday night disrupting a lecture on sexual deviance - circled Mandelstamm and ran out the front of the Wells Hall classroom - television studio. Mandelstamm, whose television lectures have a total 900 - member enrollment, said that he was angry he had not been invited to streak. If he were to streak, Mandelstamm said, it would have a "powerful romantic effect on the women" and would put other men in "sheer envy." Handsome Al added that he was a streaker as a young man and has "done mooning for quite some time." The momentary incident was blacked out by MSU television officials in subsequent taped broadcasts of the lecture.

Sneakers: Copout for streakers

The fad for dashing about nude has brought a new definition of chic to college campuses: anything goes on the head and the toes.

The individuality of the streakers emerges in their hats, masks and footwear. Fig leaves are out; Lone Ranger masks are popular in the West; and tennis shoes are big all over. "Anyone who wears place to place already was outdated. About 175 streakers who entertained a crowd at the University of Mississippi at Oxford wore helmets, masks and capes. One young man covered his entire face with tin

At the University of Montana in Missoula, a streaker painted himself red, white and blue for his dash across campus. "This is a true art form," explained one of his companions. A lone streaker in a ski mask eluded campus security agents at the University of Southwestern Louisiana. The security men lay in wait with a rope to try to lasso the streaker, but they missed.

Several of the 45 young men who streaked along the streets at Columbia University in New York City late Tuesday wore floppy - brimmed white tennis

It also helps to have clothes if you run afoul of the law. Lincoln, Neb., police arrested two streaking students and charged them with disturbing the peace. Asked what the streakers wore to jail, a police spokesman replied: "They are covered up with whatever is available until clothing becomes available."

Everything from the lack of job openings to a defiance of authority to spring fever is being offered as reasons for the recent student streaking phenomenon by campus sociological experts.

Thomas Nowak, instructor in social science in Justin Morrill College, said the current rage is probably caused by a number of things, including growing job insecurity, the end of American involvement in Vietnam and a disenchantment with the "new left."

He said that streaking is a way of releasing frustrations, much as student protests were a few years ago.

"People have become much less political again and are allowed to be more frivolous," he said.

Nowak said that the movement away from political activism is caused, in part, by the violence which occurred and the feeling that protests did not achieve students' goals.

Duane Gibson, professor of sociology, agreed with Nowak.

"There is a feeling that the protest-type activity did not get what it was after," he said."And current issues are not hitting as sensitive a nerve with students as did former issues, such as the Vietnam war." Gibson put streaking in the same catagory as panty raids and goldfish swallowing-just a novel way of having "I think it has something to do with the warm spring weather," he said.

But another sociology professor said he things streaking may be related to a defiance of authority. He said he would guess that most of the students who are streaking are from white, middle-class suburban families and enrolled in "frustrating fields" where they cannot find jobs, such as the social sciences and the arts. Barrie Thorne, asst. professor of sociology, said she worries that the streaking type of activity will be used to discredit students.

"I would hate to see us return to the view of a student as an adolescent rather than an adult," she said.

She said that students are less overtly politically involved today, but that 'students continue to be concerned with issues that affect them."

10 amendments placed on ballot for spring vote

By BOB OURLIAN State News Staff Writer

The ballot for the ASMSU spring election is composed of four pages of small print, but at second glance, it's actually quite easy to make sense out of.

What you will be voting on is: 10 at large student representatives to the Academic Council; an ASMSU representative from your college; the president of ASMSU and 10 constitutional amendments.

The at-large student election for the Academic Council is for minority and women representatives.

Whoever receives the most votes for the ASMSU presidency will only take over if Proposition A, giving the power of selecting the president to the voters, is passed.

In describing Propositions A-J, the ballot states the formal proposal and then provides an informal explanation of what the proposal would do if voted in.

Following is a rundown of propositions which will face the voters and what the proposals would do:

B. Membership of the Student Traffic Appeals Court would be opened up to any students regardless of local residence. Presently, the STAC has quota regulations which prohibit it from having more than one - third representation of any of the five governing

C. The ASMSU student tax, currently set at 50 cents, would be raised to $1. The original motion requested a raise to 75 cents, but University regulations dictate that taxes be in multiples of 50

D. Instead of holding special elections if a board member resigns, ASMSU would appoint a representative to fill the vacancy. Special elections are too costly officials say.

E. If a constitutional amendment petition drive signed by 10 per cent of a eligible voters is presented to the student board, it has 15 days to hold an election. If a proposed constitutional amendment is passed by the board, it will stay in policy committee until the following spring's election, when it would be

F. College representatives would be seated on the board at the same time the new president is seated, which is two weeks after the election.

G. The newly formed College of Urban Development would be included in ASMSU representation.

H. The All University Elections Commission would be seated four weeks earlier to insure commissioners are there for spring

I. If the student body petitions over a decision of the student board, the board will be given an extra five days, making it 15 days, to consider the petition and set up a ballot.

J. A Student Media Appropriations Board would be created. The job of the media board would be to collect 50 cents per student per term to distribute to alternative publications at MSU. The 50 cents would be refundable.

ASMSU, council candidates give positions

Students voting at registration will need to choose from among the following didates for positions of ASMSU president, representatives from colleges to ASMSU and Academic Council

ASMSU presidential candidates speak

By LARRY MORGAN

State News Staff Writer For the first time in several years, undergraduate students are being asked to directly elect a student government president instead of having the ASMSU board designate the president.

Each of the six candidates for ASMSU president was asked Thursday afternoon what he thought about a current phenomenon-streaking-and how he places himself on the political spectrum. James H. Beach, C8 Twyckingham, a 20-year-old junior majoring in botany is now on the Building, Lands and Planning Beach greatly believes in individual freedom and views

streaking as an expression of that freedom. "I don't see anything morally wrong if they (streakers) want to do it, that's their business," he said. Hailing from Southgate, Beach said he doesn't like to classify

He has also served two years on the University Committee On Public Safety (ASMSU appointed), chaired the subcommittee of University Committee on Public Safety which held hearings last spring on police surveillance of political groups on campus, and is now current director of ASMSU Labor Relations as appointed by the ASMSU president.

Cain, from Grand Rapids, is a junior with a double major in economics and journalism, and looked on the lighter side of streaking and said that it adds a little novelty to the day.

Sparse crowd hears Denver Symphony

Brian Priestman

Conductor of the Denver Symphony, Brian Priestman, holds his own with the baton, putting on a fantastic performance before a sparse crowd at the Auditorium Wednesday.

By EDWARD ZDROJEWSKI State News Reviewer

Only 30 per cent of the seats were sold at the Auditorium Wednesday night, according to box office sources, and this was unfortunate because the Denver Symphony put on a fine performance in front of the sparse crowd.

The Denver Symphony orchestra has been around that part of the country since 1934. However, it has only recently gained national recognition, mostly due to the new leadership of conductor Brian Priestman. Since he took over, the orchestra's budget has doubled and audiences have tripled in size. This is a state of affairs which causes a lot of envy among many major American orchestras.

Priestman is very painstaking with his conducting. He is very clear and concise with his motions, making sure to cue all the instruments, even for the most obvious entrances. The result is a very tight sound that never runs out of control. The Denver Sumphony is a well balanced orchestra. You can hear every instrument clearly and no section ever drowns out another. Strange as it may seem, the Denver Symphony, though a relatively new American orchestra, actually has a better balance than the grand old European Warsaw Philharmonic.

The major problem with the orchestra is that they tend to be a bit over - controlled. Pianissimos are never quite as soft as they should be and only the percussion section ever achieved a real fortissimo. A lot of this could be attributed to the bad acoustics of the Auditorium.

"Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg" by Richard Wagner. Throughout the playing of this old standby concert opening, the orchestra was well balanced. However this piece lacked the luster it needed. Only the very end of the overture came across as exciting as it should be.

The concert opened with the prelude to the opera,

Pianist Stephen Manes appeared as the soloist in Schumann's "Concerto in A Minor for Piano and Orchestra, Op. 54" Though it is not the most impossibly difficult piece in the concerto literature, it is a beautifully melodic work. Manes gave the work a gushing, romantic interpretation that fit the music very well. He is not an extremely loud and strong player but Priestman kept the orchestra subdued enough that the soloist was never drowned out. There was some beautiful clarinet playing in the first movement of the piece.

The second half of the concert was definitely much better than the first. It opened with Ralph Vaughan Williams searingly gorgeous "Symphony No. 18 in D. Minor" written in 1956. The work is full of rich English harmonies and marvelous percussion effects. The percussion section was overwhelming in the finale playing everything from triangles to bells to

The best was saved for last. Richard Strauss' tone poem, "Don Juan," written in 1888, is a showpiece for orchestra. The entire group was brilliant in this work. The famous horn solo that can make or break the piece was note - perfect and charged with raw power. It was an overpowering performance.

Unfortunately there were very few people there to hear the concert, Those who might have been disappointed with the Warsaw Philharmonic and did not come to hear this orchestra, would have been pleasantly surprised.

Kitty changed women's roles in Westerns

By KATHY ESSELMAN State News Reviewer

Amanda Blake has decided not to return for the 20th season of "Gunsmoke" next fall. One of the only women to carve out a place for herself in the masculine world of Westerns, she leaves the television Western immeasurably poorer.

Blake said the long ride by plane from her home in Phoenix, Ariz., to Hollywood and her other outside activities have proven too heavy a burden to continue the series. John Mantley, the executive producer of "Gunsmoke," pointed out they have been lucky to keep her the last two years. Commuting has been a real hassle ever since she moved the macho world of Westerns are Barbara Stanwyck, Dale Evans and Maureen O'Hara.

But Blake did a unique thing. She created a character without the tomboyish toughness which characterizes Stanwyck's and without the genteel femininity which inflicted '50s heroines like Grace Kelly in "High Noon."

Kitty Russell was initially created by John Meston and Norman McDonnell for the radio version of "Gunsmoke" in 1952. As a typical harlot with a heart of gold Time magazine once said of Miss Kitty: "She's obviously not selling chocolate

Her character was drawn from numerous other saloon owners, saloon girls and gambling women who became prominent in Western films in the late '40s and early '50s. These women reflected the Western - makers fascination with their new toy - sex. Sex was only discovered by the men who made Westerns in the mid - 40s and still held them in thrall in the early '50s.

Throughout the radio version of the series, which starred William Conrad ("Cannon") and Georgia Ellis and ended in 1961, Kitty remained a subsidiary character. Like any woman of easy virtue she could be discarded anytime a good woman attracted the marshal, as in "The Newspaperwoman."

Like all women in Westerns, she was expendable. As one fan put it "To Love a Cartwright is to die," Good women were deemed too dull and bad women unworthy of full equality in western film.

A measure of Blake's success in the role is the fact that in 1966 she was the first and only woman to date installed with the Great Western Actors in the Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City, Okla.

Blake, described by Mantley, as a wonderful actress, invested this tough, witty woman with warmth and frustrated tenderness. Over the years she emerged as a character in her own right whose relationship with Matt Dillon was just one facet of her existence as his relationship with her is one facet of his.

Kitty existed as an independent entity who carried within recent years a full third of the show.

Mantley said that she would have to be replaced but had no idea how, or by whom. He had not even decided whether the new character would be a man or woman. They have not as yet decided how to write her out of the script. When asked if

> Trinity's backin

the saddle

Mantley first said no, then amended that with, "Don't say that, we might do it." The only thing he was certain of was that they would not replace Kitty with a young lady, but with an older woman.

Albums of 'jazz-rock' groups merit praise

'mag' worth looking into

State News Reviewer

The term "jazz - rock" has plagued musical literature since the eption of Al Kooper's Blood, Sweat and Tears. Today it is still thus, though applied so loosely it seems to know no bounds, th us, though the similarities of the following artists, all which play hat has been referred to as jazz - rock: Chicago; Soft Machine; man Brothers Band; Grateful Dead; Pentangle; Blood, Sweat d Tears; Focus; Emerson, Lake and Palmer; Quicksilver; the thers, Traffic...even the good old MC5. Quite an impressive ray of "jazz rockers," to say the least.

Add two more to the list.

Manfred Man's Earth Band, and Caravan - two of Britain's tter "jazz-rock" units (and here the term is applied as loosely as Manfred Man's Earth Band is at least a half - familiar name to most people. Mann, founder and namesake of the group, has been a part of the pop scene since "Do - Wah - Diddy" hit American shores in the mid - '60s.

Since that time, he has seen several prominent musicians enter and leave his group's ranks, among them Jack Bruce, Paul Jones, Tom McGuinness, Mike D'Abo and a host of other well known artists. After the failure of his "third" official group, Chapter Three, a 10 - piece conglomeration of musicians that were much more jazz · oriented than any of his usual crew, Mann did a swift turnabout and formed the Earth Band.

Welcome to the present. The Earth Band has released four excellent albums since its birth -- a track record for Mann and his many groups, one supposes -- with its newest being "Solar Fire."

Mann has, with the Earth Band, finally found success in his attempted integration of jazz and rock. From a debut album that sported categorically solid rock or jazz compositions, the Earth

Band has, under Mann's guiding hand, merged this dichotomy until it no longer seems present.

"Solar Fire" is supposedly based on Gustav Holst's "The Planets." The disc is apparently a guided tour of the solar system. It doesn't do the best job of closely following its theme - it seems to stray a little -- but musically, it stands as the Earth Band's best. Likewise for Caravan's newest, "For Girls Who Grow Plump in the Night." This, the group's fifth album, is its strongest work for several reasons. First, the return of organist David Sinclair, from Hatfield, and earlier with Robert Wyatt's Matching Mole, back into the original fold, is indeed welcome. Sinclair's melodic organ bursts were at one time the only truly unique facet of this otherwise faceless group that somehow musically transcended its potential blandness.

Sinclair's return, along with the addition of bassist - vocalist

John Perry and violinist Peter Richardson, have brought the group from its previous depths (its last work, "Waterloo Lilly," without Sinclair, was its worst effort) back to its normal heights.

Perry's harsh vocals provide Caravan with the voice it has always needed. Gone is former bassist / vocalist Richard Sinclair, whose deep - throated voice was more often than not obnoxious, whenever it found its use. Perry's replacement of Sinclair is a vital part of the "new" Caravan, as is violinist Richardson, who provides Caravan with a new lead instrument other than organ -- a real improvement over lead guitarist Pye Hasting's dreary solos.

Thus what were once the major weak points in Caravan are now gone. David Sinclair's organ, Peter Richardson's violin and John Perry's vocals have made Caravan quite a strong musical unit. This new band works well together: "For Girls Who Get Plump in the Night" is Caravan's best album by far.

The only complaint with the issue is that since it is a double one, couldn't there have been another short story included to thoroughly satisfy the fiction addicts? But. undoubtedly, printing costs on something of this kind were quite high and it's best to be thankful that the story included is such an exceptional piece.

Review" and, in a way, the title "short story" is misleading, for Schieber's piece comprises almost half the issue. It's a sober, quite sombre work that is Faulknerian in tone and quite an ambitious undertaking. "Boden's Ground" chronicles the lives and misfortunes of one family, composed of the father, his three sons and the eldest son's wife. Basically the story is presented in four separate segments (the father's viewpoint excluded) with each segment done in a style akin to the personality of the character who's doing the telling. The tale relates the fates of Matthew, Lucas, Frank and Matthew's wife, Monica, with each individual presenting a viewpoint that offers both insight into his or her psyche as well as gradually advancing the plot. In essence there is very little plot as Schieber examines the inner mechanics of these people's minds.

Matthew is curiously detached, yet emotionally explosive when coming into contact with his father over life on the farm or his departure for college. Monica ultimately loses touch with reality and her segment fully reveals this fact, for it is told in a first - person stream - of - consciousness technique that shows the disjointed nature of her thought processes. Hers is by far the most difficult segment to read for it lacks any form of punctuation and seems one, with the poetry dealing confusing until one realizes the author's intent and total control of his subject. Lucas, the middle son, eventually proves to be the sturdiest member of the Boden family, perhaps because he is most like

Tuesday was celebration day in honor of the death of my ON TAP column. Today's column was to be the last of 20 and I was busy celebrating in Lizards on polka night. Everyone was having a good time, but all I could think about was my first column last September.

At that time, Dooley's was only a rumor, the Stables and Pretzel Bell were slowly dying, the Brewery had most of the freak set, Lizards had all the undergrounders, the Alle Ey had most of the fraternity set and the Coral Gables had a steady overflow from the other showbars.

The first abrupt shift in this picture occurred when the Stables regrouped its energies and booked the best jazz-blues-folk acts it could find. The cost and risk was heavy, but in the long run the Stables and the East Lansing community both have benefited greatly from the profitable likes of Les McCann, Muddy Waters, Mason Williams, Chick Corea, John Stewart and now Roger Mc Guinn for amazing week-long stands.

Despite the Stables slow re-emergence, the bar scene was fairly quiet until Dooley's opened its doors at Thanksgiving, just in time for the final game of the MSU football season. The upper deck opened first and was a smash success. Local showbar owners were calling Dooley's the finest piece of bar property in the country, let alone the Midwest. If nothing else, it was the most expensive with a price tag of $1 million.

Fierce rivalry alters bar scene

When the lower dance-deck opened just before finals week in December, the club had definitely taken a large chunk out of the East Lansing bar scene. The bar was beautiful and its newness was stealing thousands of customers from the other bars in town. Dooley's took most of the older fraternity men from the P-Bell, most of the younger ones from the Alle Ey and even stole some of the freaky set from the Brewery. The Coral Gables and Lizards were somehow able to hold onto their crowds.

Christmas vacation belonged to Dooley's while the other showbars tried to stay alive by making New Year's wishes. And when school reopened in January, something strange began to happen. The newness of Dooley's wore off and people began relocating in other showbars.

The Alle Ey and P-Bell started to swell again, but this time with a de-emphasis on fraternity men and an emphasis on younger and older people, respectively. Though the Alle still has its Friday TGs and the P-Bell its Thursday Greek nights, neither one has to rely solely on the Greek crowd as in the pre-Dooley's days.

While the Alle added a special Tuesday drink night to its calendar, it was the Brewery that slammed back with the greatest counterattack to attract customers.

Adding special Tequila Sunrise and 8-ounce malt liquor nights to their already busy special night schedule, the Brewery also doubled their concert schedule to include

both Monday and Wednesday

The Brewery had always been an entertainment bar first and foremost, but now has unlimbered all its guns.

The result has been far greater crowds than in the pre-Dooley days.

Even the Coral Gables got into the entertainment swing, bolstering its customer population with a concert by Vince Vance and an anticipated show by the Raspberries.

In retaliation, Dooley's, which said initially that it would not need any special nights, now has a two-for-one mixed drinks special on Tuesdays. It still pulls in the weekday crowds in spite of a nonweekend cover charge. Dooley's is still the nicest place in town, but now the other bars have tempting extras to even the balance. Meanwhile, at Lizards, I was getting my fair share of the Hokey Pokey, the Bunny Hop and the Mexican hat dance. I even learned how to polka again, after a lull of perhaps 15 years.

MSU students to curtail trips to Florida

The annual MSU student exodus to Florida has been curtailed by the gas crisis reported in that state.

More than 70 per cent of the Florida - bound students interviewed in an informal State News survey Wednesday said they have changed their plans.

Some said they would not go on vacation at all, while others set their sights on shorter hauls around the state or to sunny areas believed to have better gas supplies.

"With the energy shortage and the way money is right now, I figure it's better to work," Bob Carabelli, 563 N. Hubbard Hall,

"We did have somebody that was to drive us down, but he changed his mind because of the gas shortage," Pat Gray, 225A Armstrong Hall, freshman, said.

"We still want to go, but what can we do?"

"I'm going to stay home and do a lot of cleaning instead," said Melanie Warner, 1644D Spartan Village, senior. "We decided it would be a bad idea anyway, and we don't have enough money." "If you get caught in Georgia with a bunch of long - hairs and no gas you're in trouble, said Frank Hoover, 211 Ferndale, senior. "And if you want to sightsee in Florida on Sunday you're

Many students have decided to go some place else where the gas shortage is reportedly not so severe.

"We are going to Texas instead of Florida as we had originally planned," said Valerie Sitka, 324 Michigan Ave., senior. "Some friends came back from Arizona recently, and they said that Arizona was the only state they had any difficulty getting gas in." "A group of us was going to Florida, but due to the gas shortage we are now going camping in the Thumb (area of Michigan)," said Linda Weeks, 209A Butterfield Hall sophomore.

"Some of my friends who just returned from Florida said they had to leave their car and hitchhike through Florida," Pat McNally, 183 Milford St., senior, said. "I was planning on going with the Rugby Club, but instead I'm going to go skiing in Colorado."

'There's a great possibility that I'll be going to Colorado, because the company my boyfriend's brother - in - law works for will pay at least half of the gas expenses," said Carol Casbon, 321 Bogue St., senior.

A majority of the students still going to the Sunshine State have only modified the means by which they will travel. "Because of the gas shortage we are going in two cars instead of four," said Dalrois McBurrows, 214 Ferguson St., senior. "I'm going down with the Campus Crusade for Christ International," said Joel Glupker, 425B Bailey Hall, junior. "At first many of us were going to drive down, but now we are all going on buses."

Rick Proppe, 122A Emmons Hall, senior, said that he and some friends would fly there. The friend we're staying with in Florida has a motorcycle we can use to travel with once we get

A number of students surveyed said they would hitch - hike and some said they have not changed their means of transportation.

"We called the American Automobile Assn., and they said going down to Florida, as far as gas is concerned, should be no problem," Linell Krepsky, 316A Butterfield Hall, senior, said.

"My roommate is going to Florida, but I'm going to Chicago," said Celia Bartlow, 311A Bailey Hall, freshman. "My roommate isn't worried about gas because she is going with her boyfriend and he is handling all that."

Pamela King, 364 Landon Hall, freshman, reserved her flight to Florida before Christmas as a precaution.

"We would have had trouble if we had waited," she said. "As it was, we got the last reservation on that flight."

Only a week is left before those students going to Florida will find out whether the gas shortage is as bad as recent travelers returning from Florida claim it is, or as good as AAA reports.

Florida gas supply fair, but shaky

By MARGARET GOSSETT

Students planning to head south over spring break should have no problems getting gasoline for the trip down, though they may encounter fuel shortages coming home. Still, the situation is far from catastrophic.

Gasoline is now plentiful in Florida, though a few limits are still set in Tampa and other west coast towns, especially for out of state cars, the American Automobile Assn. said.

Information on prices was spotty, but reports two weeks ago indicated that prices in some areas of Florida were as high as 70 The student migration from MSU does not start until the middle of the month however, when gas stations will have probably used up half of their fuel. AAA said the gas situation then will be comparable to that of the middle of February, when reports varied throughout the state.

Miami and surrounding areas reported half their stations were fully open for unrestricted sales in the middle of February, while half were allocating gas according to odd or even license plates on the odd and even days of the week, AAA said. Very few, usually on the busiest corners were selling only $1 - $2 worth.

Tampa and the west coast towns had by far the greatest shortages and were rationing $5 worth of gas to all customers even before the middle of last month.

The two major expressways to Florida, I - 75 and I - 69, have had no major problems with gas shortages whatsoever, AAA said, and the situation should remain stable throughout the month. About 29 per cent of the stations are closed nights and Sunday, but the others are open for full service.

The state - operated Sunshine Parkway, which runs along the east coast of Florida, operates all the stations on the route and is still selling only half a tank of gasoline to all customers.

Returning home certainly will draw sweat on the brows of most tanned Michiganders, however, when stations will have nearly depleted their monthly allocations.

AAA reported, however, that stations were allocated a heartening 10 per cent more gas for March than for February in

OS TOUR

MSU fans to say goodby to Mike Robinson U

Collegiate career ends Saturday

By CHARLES JOHNSON State News Sports Writer

When the MSU basketball team plays Michigan Saturday at Jenison Fieldhouse to wind up its season, the game will culminate the collegiate career of perhaps the greatest athlete in Spartan basketball history.

Mike Robinson, the pride of the Big Ten's "little men" and the nucleus of MSU's cage teams for the past three years, will make his final appearance in a Spartan uniform Saturday. And though it seems like only yesterday when the 5 - 11 scoring marksman was gracing the courts of the Detroit Public School League, Robinson has come a long way since then and he has the credentials to prove it.

Robinson is currently in pursuit of his third straight Big Ten scoring title, after capturing the crown in his sophomore and junior years. Every point he scores establishes a new MSU mark. as he is No. 1 on the Spartans' all - time scoring list with 1687 career points. He has been selected all - Big Ten unanimously for two years straight and it's a cinch for him to attain the honor again this year. The list of accomplishments goes on.

But despite all the individual acclaim, Robinson regrets that his primary goal of playing on a championship team was never

"When I came out of high school (Detroit Northeastern) I had the impression that it was better to go to a school not considered as a basketball power," Robinson recalls, "That's why I chose State because I felt I could help bring a championship here. But. it's a hard thing to do ... really hard. Sometimes its been frustrating, but I believe that I always gave 100 per cent in trying to achieve that goal."

This season has been a difficult one for Robinson. Though he enters Saturday's game with a 21.7 conference scoring average, second only to Michigan's Campy Russell with a 23 point mark, Robinson believes he could have done more. He needs to score 15 more points than Russell Saturday to become the Big Ten's top

"I haven't been completely pleased with this season because I know I could have produced more than I did," Robinson said. "But, I guess it wasn't needed because of our supposed depth.

"I'm a bit confused about the assertion that our team has depth when a lot of the guys on the team haven't been used much this season. I don't think my talents have been utilized to the fullest this season, either. When the season began I was aware of the talent we had on this team and I sacrificed my game in order to show the way for the other guys to sacrifice. I figured that if I set the example, then maybe the other guys would follow suit and we still could win. But, it didn't turn out that way."

Robinson is averaging less than he did in his sophomore and junior years when he posted 27.2 and 26.7 marks, respectively. He is also shooting less than he was previously. The big problem has been a severe ankle injury he has been playing with.

In 13 conference games, Robinson is averaging about 18 field goal attempts per game compared to 23 and 22 in the two years

"It was brought up in one of the early season meetings that we couldn't win the Big Ten title and myself take the scoring crown at the same time," Robinson said. "I don't know how that conclusion was drawn, but being the team captain, I didn't want to spark any dissension on the team and I adjusted my game accordingly. Now, look at Michigan. They're on the verge of winning the championship and Campy will probably take the scoring title.

"I don't think any of the guys on the team consciously disrespected my playing ability. It's just that no one likes to play second fiddle. I don't like to be second, either. One of the diseases of disappointment is jealousy and maybe I've been the victim of some of that this season. I never felt the success of the season depended on my winning the scoring championship. You need points to win. When we were winning, my shooting was cool, but when we started losing, some of the guys said, "don't shoot." I've been playing three years so I can understand why they feel that way. Its just a misunderstanding of a team who hasn't experienced much success," Robinson concluded.

Though his worth may not have been fully recognized by his teammates, Robinson believes he has gained the respect of the opposition.

'Maybe if the respect doesn't come from my teammates, what do the other teams think of me? Why do the other teams double and triple team me? What do the other coaches have to say about me? Those are the kinds of things that don't make me too paranoid about my ability," Robinson said. "I feel I'm just as much an all - American as anybody. I think I'm a threat whether I shoot or not. Being even second in the league is a great honor for me, especially being second to a Campy Russell who plays forward and gets a lot of his points around and near the basket. While Robinson has been practically ignored on the national basketball scene because of MSU's mediocrity as a basketball school, the Spartan fans have been enough to keep him going.

'The MSU fans are the most beautiful fans in the state of Michigan," Robinson said. They're enthusiastic and they're honest. I don't blame them when they don't want to come and see us play at certain times because no one likes to see you lose. The fans have truly been an inspiration to me and I'm going to miss those loud Jenison Fieldhouse crowds.

They'll miss you too, Mike.

Mike Robinson has provided many thrills for Spartan fans during his three years on the MSU varsity. After Saturday's Michigan, his patented jump shot will swish no more through the Jenison Fieldhouse nets.

MSU's Mike Robinson goes in uncontested for a layup in a game earlier this season against Northwestern. At 5-11, Robinson has captured two consecutive Big Ten scoring crowns. Saturday he will go for his third straight title, but he needs to outscore Michigan's Campy Russell by 15 points to do it.

Rosie Casals and Francoise Durr, two of the world's finest women tennis performers, will be showing off their talents in a special benefit singles match March 16 at Jenison Fieldhouse.

They'll be joined by former MSU tennis star and now local physician Dr. Tom Jamieson and a male celebrity player to be named in a mixed doubles match.

The program is being sponsored by the American Cancer Society and the MSU Varsity Club, the undergraduate lettermen

The action will begin at 7:30 p.m. and will take place on a special surface provided by the Detroit Loves of the World Tennis League to be spread over the fieldhouse's basketball layout. Casals is a member of the Detroit Loves while Durr is with the Denver Racquets of the WTL.

MSU, U-M cage contest

MSU's basketball team will have an opportunity to salvage some semblance of a respectable season when it takes on arch rival Michigan Saturday at Jenison Fieldhouse before a sellout

Tip - off time is 2:05 p.m. There's a lot on the line for both teams entering the game. though Michigan undoubtedly has much more at stake. The Wolverines are presently tied with Indiana for the Big Ten lead with an 11-2 record and a victory would assure them of at least a

However, the Spartans, who sport an 8-5 record in the Big Ten and stand 13-10 on the season, need a victory to keep their flickering hopes of a bid to the National Invitational Tournament (NIT) alive. Though the possibility of a a tourney berth appeared remote at best when the Spartans dropped their last game to Wisconsin, the situation has changed since then. The NIT still has three berths to fill and, as yet, it doesn't have any of the major conference schools committed. Purdue, which stands in third place in the Big Ten with a 10-3 record, will probably get the nod for one of the spots and that leaves two chances for MSU, which holds fourth place in the conference. "It's important for us to win this game against Michigan because there's still some slight hope that we could get in the NIT," Spartan coach Gus Ganakas said. "Also, our fourth place players are primarily concerned with just playing good basketball and we plan to give it all we've got."

Michigan has emerged as perhaps the most surprising team in the country, thanks to an excellent season by 6-5 forward Campy

Russell has been completely amazing this season, coming into Saturday's contest with a league - leading 23 points per game scoring average and an 11 per game rebounding average. MSU's Mike Robinson is second in the scoring race with a 21.7 mark and he needs to outscore Russell by 15 points to take his third straight Big Ten scoring crown.

Robinson will be playing his last game as a Spartan, as will starting forward Brian Breslin. Breslin bows out with an impressive 8.0 scoring average in three seasons with the Spartans. After sitting out last year, Breslin joined the team this year and moved into the starting lineup.

The Spartans dropped the first Michigan encounter this season in Ann Arbor, 84-82, when center C.J. Kupec put in a last second jump shot to chalk up a Wolverine win. The Wolves have been completely astonishing since then, winning seven out of

Though the Spartans' record doesn't indicate an outstanding season, the team's play has generated a lot of excitement and

"I'm very pleased with this year's team," Ganakas said. "We developed into a bonafide contender and we came darn close to coming out on top. What we have to do is continue to look

Key to indoor score held by 4 trackmen

By GARY SCHARRER State News Sports Writer

MSU's four - man track squad of Marshall Dill, Bob Cassleman, Bill Nance and Mike Holt could be enough to propel the Spartans to a high finish today and Saturday at the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships at Cobo Arena in Detroit.

Actually, MSU has qualified eight men for the national championship, but it will be Dill and Cassleman in the 60 yard dash and 600 - yard run, respectively, and the same two along with Nance and Holt in the mile relay that will provide the bulk of MSU's point potential.

Quality determines the outcome of a national meet and the champion team rarely scores more than 24 points. The defending NCAA champion, Manhattan College, totaled 18 points last year. MSU's best showing at the nationals came in 1972 when it scored

"We would like to win it this year," MSU asst. track coach Jim Bibbs said, "but realistically I'd be happy finishing in the top five Cassleman appears to have the best chance for an individua title for the Spartans. Both he and Dill captured third place honors last year. MSU's mile relay team will enter the meet with the country's top time. The quartet established an American record last week with a 3:11.7 time in the Big Ten meet.

Also in the Spartan entry are freshman miler Stan Mavis with 4:05.7 time, Dane Fortney in the 1,000 - yard run and hurdler Mike Hurd and Paul Zolynsky.

"Hurd has a chance to place but competition is very keen."
Bibbs said. "And you never know about freshmen like Mavis H could represent himself real well but not get a place.

Hurd won the Big Ten 70 - yard high hurdles title with a 8. time, tying MSU'S varsity record set in 1967 by Gene Washington and equalling the same year by Charles Pollard.

Women gymnasts try for nationals at Midwest regional tourney today

The women's gymnastics team will carry an 8-1 dual meet record into the Midwest regional meet, to be held at Wisconsin State University today at Lacrosse, Wis.

A team must score 94 points or more in the regional meet to qualify for the NCAA national finals. MSU has been scoring in the high 90s all season and rates an excellent chance of reaching the point cutoff.

If the team fails to make the 94 - point goal, team members may go to the finals on individual performance. An individual must finish in the top 10 places of an event and receive a score of at least 8.0 in the event to be eligible.

To qualify in all four events the all - around — a participant must total at least 32 points. Ann Weaver and Raeanne Miller have already reached that total several times, while Andrea Schwartz and Cathy Welsh have come within two points of the mark. Spartan coach Barbara McKenzie does not believe that the defeat suffered against Indiana State last weekend will hurt the m's confidence.

"The defeat was not embarrassing so it didn't really have that bad of an effect on the team. We are really looking forward to meeting Indiana State again in the regionals. We were winning the meet after two events, but fell behind three points on the balance beam and couldn't recover. The judges are usually favorable to the home team somewhat, and that helped them a little," she said.

UP cable planned to alert subs

BY TOM HAROLDSON

State News Staff Writer Picture a project calling for the burial of 1,400 miles of adio transmitter cable under 3 000 square miles of the Upper Peninsula which would alert nuclear submarines to bunch a nuclear holocaust on stions who drop H-bombs on the United States in wartime. Bizarre as it may seem, that exactly what the U.S. Navy s now planning. Called Project Sanguine, it has the makings of doomsday defense mechanism designed not only to be effective during war but iso as a deterrent to war. At least that is what the Navy says is for. Critics call it an environmental killer and a notential target for a nuclear attack if such a war begins.

Michigan's legislators from the Upper Peninsula who represent the constituents most affected by the planned project say there is still more to learn about it and that now is not the time to panic, especially since finalization of the project and the eventual site will not come until 1977.

The project itself is rather complex. More than 1,400 miles of 2½ inch thick antenna able would be placed six feet below the ground at three to ive-mile intervals in a checkerboard grid 55 miles on each side. More than 100 stations would be built at each gid intersection each requiring two acres for a control and administrative center. Each station would monitor between 100 and 300 acres.

In a case of a nuclear war, Sanguine would send low-frequency signals to Polaris submarines stationed in the world's oceans to attack certain sites with nuclear weapons. Its advantage over other communication systems is that it can contact submarines deep in the oceans as opposed to present systems which require them to be near the surface. Depth is desirable for submarines in a nuclear

According to Navy spokesmen, it could be used if other communication systems are wiped out. Yet he hedges on whether it would be one of the first systems to be bombed if the country were attacked.

One thing is for sure. Project Sanguine is in the planning stages. It has not been approved, no final site has been chosen and no construction has

That is why state legislators from the UP are urging Michigan residents to avoid panicking and assuming that all plans have been finalized. There are three legislative committees that have some knowledge about the plan. One special unnamed committee established last week intends to thoroughly probe the project's implications for the state. That committee's members have yet to be chosen, but committee chairman John Markes, D-Westland, said more information will have to be gathered before judgments can

Several lawmakers are disenchanted that the Michigan Legislature is even studying the project. Because the funds and final decision for it will come from Congress and because the plans will be made only by the Navy, they see no reason for the legislature to get involved.

"The state legislature will have no final say on the project anyway, because the funding is coming from the Congress," Rep. Dominic Jacobetti, D-Negaunee, said. "If the people don't want the project, they should write and say so, because no project will be forced on them that they don't want."

Two states, Wisconsin and Texas, have already rejected the project. Rejection in both cases came not from the state legislatures but from private citizens' intense protests to their congressmen. In Wisconsin's case, the fact that Wisconsin resident Melvin Laird, who was U. S. secretary of defense at the time, ordered abandonment of the project in his state surely accounted for its rapid end.

Environmental impact reports will have to be submitted by the Navy before the project is adopted. Environmental groups in Wisconsin and Texas were skeptical that it is as environmentally safe as the Navy claims. Some have contended that it would electrify nearby fences, frighten deer from the area, retard the growth of sunflower seedlings and effect communications systems near the Sanguine area. They were also concerned that thousands of miles of cable lanes would have to be cut through forests, farmlands and any other land area. The Navy says the trenches would not have to be cut through such areas, and that they could be laid along roads and right-of-ways. The Navy also says the trenches need not be perfectly straight but could be stopped and started if vital land was to be disrupted. It also contends that any disruption of the land would be countered by quick regrowth over the trenches. Despite the Navy's contentions, some Upper Peninsula residents are up in arms. Seven UP legislators on the Upper Peninsula Legislative Council say they have each received an average of eight to 10 letters about Sanguine. The majority of those letters are against the project, though some of the concerned residents have also said they want more information before passing a final judgment.

The Ohm F coherent sound loudspeaker is the most accurate reproducer of music ever developed. Employing a single 12 inch driver working as a transmission line, the Ohm F reproduces the musical range of sounds from 30 to 20k Hz with virtually no audible distortion. Dispersion is a full 360 degrees. "As to whether the Ohm F is therefore the best' speaker available, we will leave to the ears of the audiophlies; we are prepared to say, however, without reservations, that it is easily one of the best," Hirsch-Houck Laboratories from Stereo

Argentina science project halted

By GEORGEANN KILTS

When the weasel is political instability, the bubble of MSU international programs is likely

Kirk Lawton, temporary head of the Institute of International Agriculture, announced last week the termination of a project in Argentina due to political unrest.

The bubble had burst. A Tri-University

Consortium, consisting of Texas A & M University, Pennsylvania State University and MSU, was assisting the universities of Buenos Aires and La Plata in the formation of a graduate school of agricultural sciences.

Two MSU professors, Alvin Smucker and Robert Lucas, both from the Dept. of Crop and Soil Sciences, have been advised by MSU and by the U.S. Agency for International Development (AID) to return

"Political issues were becoming more time consuming than scientific issues," Smucker said after recently returning to MSU from Argentina.

The consortium contract with AID and the National Institute of Agricultural Sciences in Argentina, made in 1971, will be canceled on March 31, 1974.

Smucker explained the causes of the termination.

A purge of the educational system had resulted from the return to leadership by President Juan Peron which inspired reorganization in many areas, he said.

Also, former administrators were replaced by young and often inexperienced individuals who supported Peron but were unable to supply new directives for the universities. Unrest in the educational institutions coupled with a national political uneasiness provoked the decision to remove MSU from the picture.

"The termination hasn't affected the success of the program to the extent one might imagine," Smucker said. "Two graduate programs have been initiated, one of which has already been completed; library and laboratory facilities have been developed and progress has been made to restock teaching positions in the program.

"For example," he continued, "students such as Juan Braun, Jose Panigatti and Ignacio Salcedo, Argentines who are completing their doctoral degrees at MSU will soon return and assist in the graduate programs of Argentina."

In Uruguay, directly across the border of Argentina, the political climate has enabled the Tri - University Consortium

Groups want open meet on bridge plan

By MIKE GALATOLA

Groups that spoke against the Kalamazoo Street bridge project in an open November meeting of the MSU Building, Lands and Planning Committee will not, at this point in time, get a second open meeting to give their opinions on the revised project.

Those individuals who spoke on behalf of the Audubon Society, the Citizens for a Livable City and other organizations have been getting letters from committee chairman Anne C. Garrison asking them to submit written opinions on the revised plan in time for the April

The trustees voted at their Feb. 15 meeting to table action on the project until July 1. One November opponent of the bridge project thinks that the trustees wanted the "First, they assume that the only people objecting to the project were those who spoke in November," he said. "Secondly, they assume the public knows all about the project by including just one paragraph listing the revisions. I think some charts, graphs and other illustrations should be included.

Anderson said the committee's desire to get the responses by the April meeting of the trustees was an attempt to rush the plan past

Final open meet planned on community aid funds

The last public hearing on a bill which would provide state funds for state community action agencies will be held Monday in Lansing and is expected to draw more than 3,000 people, Rep. David S. Holmes Jr., D-Detroit, said.

The bill would provide money for agencies which have previously been funded by the Office of Economic Opportunity, a federal agency which is scheduled to end operations on June 30.

Community action agencies provide human services for the poor, Rep. Dan Angel, R-Marshall, said. The 32 state offices which have been operating since 1965, have participated in meals on wheels, Head Start and foster grandparent programs.

Angel said the major problem with the bill is to determine from where the money for funding will come. The agencies are requesting $12.7 million to continue the administrative base for federal programs and for locally initiated programs.

Local hearings in Detroit and Gaylord have already been held on the bill and have drawn crowds of about 500 people. Gov. Milliken has been invited to address the gathering. The hearing will begin at 9 a.m. and

Legality of rug - cleaning charge challenged

Continued from page 1 However, Dennis Suydan, who lives in one of Gadsden's houses at 141 Gunson St., said that Gadsden told him that a $35 cleaning charge in his lease was for carpet cleaning.

"He said I couldn't have my friend who was professional carpet cleaner in Detroit do it," Suydan said. "He told me that he was the only one who could have it cleaned." State Rep. Earl Nelson, D-Lansing, who introduced the 1973 bill, said that the court case would provide a needed interpretation of the law on the hazy point on charges for rug

"Some people keep their places spic and span but still don't get the cleaning charge back when they move out," Nelson said. But Nelson maintains that a landlord or residence hall manager has the legal right to include any fee he wishes within the lease

Michigan Legal Services, which has entered the Detroit case as a friend of the court to present the results of its fact finding, has said that landlords charging the rug cleaning fee are evading the January 1973 law.

Gilchrist said that Seven Trails East, an apartment complex in Okemos, has been added

"They charged a carpet cleaning fee for a new apartment before the tenants even moved in," Gilchrist said. He added that by signing the lease with the carpet cleaning fee included the tenants are caught in a bind where they must
