John D. Ehrlichman says President n "indicated his after - the - fact val" of the break - in at the office of el Ellsberg's psychiatrist, according to nce released on Thursday by the Judiciary Committee.

plumbers activities, which included the 1971 break · in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Ehrlichman's sworn statement, given on April 26, contradicted the President's view expressed at an Aug. 22, 1973, news conference that the break - in was "illegal, unauthorized as far as I was concerned and completely deplorable."

Ehrlichman quoted the President as telling him on April 18, 1973, that "in substance, that the break - in was in furtherance of national security objectives."

The Ehrlichman affidavit was filed in the White House plumbers case, in which the former Nixon aide was convicted last Friday on charges of conspiracy and perjury. It was included in five volumes of evidence released by the Judiciary Committee.

Other highlights included:

•A top - secret letter in which the late J. Edgar Hoover informed the President that the FBI had learned "from extremely sensitive sources," apparently wiretaps, that former Defense Secretary Clark Clifford planned to write an article for Life magazine critical of the administration policy in Vietnam.

The Hoover letter triggered a series of White House memoranda discussing how to counter such an article. They culminated with a hand - written note to H.R. Haldeman from Ehrlichman in which he noted,"This is the kind of early warning we need more of - your game planners are now in an excellent position to map anticipatory action."

The evidence volumes contained 133 statements of staff and 32 more from the White House. Each statement was supported by documentary evidence. No attempt was made to say how any of the statements might fit into a case for or against impeachment.

However, the main thrust of the material submitted in behalf of the President was that there was extraordinary concern over alleged security violations and that the concern prompted the President to authorize unusual but not illegal methods to halt them.

activities, beginning with the initial wiretaps in May, 1969, that originated because of seemingly legitimate national security concerns but degenerated into overtly political operations.

Nixon and his aides were further shown to have expressed concern about the "liability" to the Administration that could result from public disclosure of the extensive wiretapping. None of the wiretaps, according to the House documents, produced any relevant information about national security leaks.

The House materials indicated that it was this awareness, coupled with blackmail threats from E. Howard Hunt Jr., a former member of the plumbers unit, that prompted the President to seek to withhold information in the spring of 1973 from the various Watergate investigators.

Rep. Charles Wiggins, R-Calif., Nixon's leading defender on the committee, said, however, "I'm happy to get any evidence bearing on the case.'

St. Clair gave the committee a 21/2 page different matter," Massoglia said. David Rathke, the Human Rights party candidate for Ingham County Commissioners 8th District seat, said that the HRP would probably benefit from the recall drive and that if he can find enough support, even if the drive is voted down, he intends to continue circulating petitions. "The drive would become more of a radical student movement, rather than the effort of somewhat hesitant liberal homeowners," Rathke, an MSU sophmore,

Many East Lansing political observers who have voiced strong opposition to the recall off the record, will probably be extremely relieved to see the drive halted and the petitioners' energies either dissipated completely or directed towards the upcoming campaigns.

Bevis, of Leeds University, said he was "sickened" by the publicity given to his announcement. He said he decided to quit when a newspaper offered him $72,000 to reveal the identity of the doctors concerned in the births.

Bevis told the annual meeting of the British Medical Assn. on Monday that the three babies, at least one of them British, were born in Europe in the past 18

South Korea's Central Intelligence Agency Thursday picked up Kim Young - sam, a national assemblyman and vice president of the major opposition New Democratic party, but let him go after questioning him about a prepared statement.

When Kim turned down a request by a CIA agent to retract controversial remarks from the statement, he was whisked away in a black sedan to a downtown office of the intelligence agency.

The agency charged that Kim's statement, though not publicly released, constituted violations of the emergency decrees.

Fallen Cypriot seeks U.N. aid

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Deposed Cypriot leader Archbishop Makarios arrived in New York Thursday to plead his case before the United Nations, while the leader of Turkey accused Greece of invading Cyprus and committing aggression against his country.

Turkish Premier Bulent Ecevit said in London that Greek military planes had landed armed forces on the Mediterranean island during the coup.

"This amounts to a Greek invasion of Cyprus," declared Ecevit, who had come to London to enlist British and United States help in trying to restore Makarios to power.

In Nicosia, Nikos Sampson, whom the military installed as the new Cyprus president, confirmed that Greek planes had landed, but said they carried only medical supplies.

Though accusing the Athens junta of committing "an act of aggression" Ecevit did not say that Turkish troops would intervene unilaterally.

Hundreds of demonstrators greeted Makarios at Kennedy Airport and chanted support, with some carrying signs reading, "Save the Republic." Markarios was scheduled to address the U.N. Security Council on Friday in an appeal to the international community to help restore him to power.

But in Cyprus, Sampson called a news conference Thursday to display bicycle chains, clubs, whips, rubber hoses and electrical implements which he said Makarios used to torture opponents.

City council gets revision plan for stiff housing law

By MARY ANNE FLOOD State News Staff Writer

East Lansing City Council received a list of proposed changes to the controversial housing code and briefly discussed MSU's new housing policy for sophomores at this week's relatively quiet council meeting.

The council accepted a list of proposed changes to the housing code that the Housing Commission has been struggling with for months. The changes include such items as allowing cellars to be used for living space, allowing tandem parking, allowing less stringent zoning and less strict ceiling height requirements. These items have caused tenant and landlord headaches for over a year now as the commission has heard hundreds of appeals for liveable spaces declared uninhabitable by the code.

"We want to find an acceptable balance for the housing code so that we can offer safe, clean housing at reasonable costs," said Council woman Mary Sharp.

"We find that we've outlawed half the basements in town.

Some of them are crummy but some of them offer pleasant living," she said.

The council will meet with Housing Commission Chairman Robert Rice and City Atty. Dennis McGinty to discuss the merits and legalities of the commission's proposed changes.

The nine - member citizen group was charged with enforcing an ordinance that members, along with many tenants and landlords, often found impractical and overly strict.

One of the worst problems seen by the study group that designed East Lansing's housing ordinance was a lack of communication between MSU and the city, especially about

Though the Planning Commission requested council to ask the MSU Board of Trustees to gather information concerning MSU housing policy, council decided to put off further discussion until a council - trustee meeting in the fall. Housing observers see few spots in East Lansing for the sophomores to squeeze into and there is no place on campus considering an expected 1,200 triples - for upperclassmen to move on campus.

Michiganders Friday their gas pains will be relieved if he has his way at the Midwest Governors Conference the end

He added that he has also asked federal energy chief John Sawhill about why the pricing system is established the way it is because "The people of this state are asking me about this. . . and I don't know the

Cavanagh's suit without basis, defendent claims

DETROIT (UPI) - Democratic National Committeeman Neil Staebler Tuesday said there was no basis for the $15 million lawsuit filed against him and attorney Louis Rome by Jerome P. Cavanagh.

"As the suit progesses and the facts come out," Staebler said at a Detroit news conference, "it will become clear that there is no basis for the charges against me."

Cavanagh, Democratic candidate for the August gubernatorial primary, last week charged Staebler and Rome with libel, slander and conspiracy.

The charges stemmed from allegations made by Rome that Cavanagh was unfit to be governor because of his "proximity to Detroit's underworld" when he was mayor from 1962 -

Cavanagh said Staebler was named in the suit because he was working together with Rome "on this smear campaign.

Attorney James Wells, also a contender for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, earlier charged opponent Sander Levin with masterminding the attack on Cavanagh. Levin denied the charge.

Staebler said he has never libeled or slandered Cavanagh nor had he conspired to do

Rome has denied that he conspired with Staebler in the matter, saying he acted as "my own man in this matter."

Rome was executive director of the Michigan Commission on Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice from 1966 - 70.

Six members of an East Lansing labor group were forced to ave the premises of Cosmo Graphics Wednesday afternoon ere they were talking to strikers walking a picket line.

EDITORIALS For want of rationality recall effort should die

On July 29 or thereabouts initiators of the Sharp - Brookover recall attempt will decide whether their floundering effort should be killed. It will be best for all concerned if this ill - advised project, conceived when flaring tempers obscured any logical consideration of the local political situation, is buried as quickly as possible.

Though there is no question that a segment of the community often disagrees with Councilwoman Mary Sharp, her resounding re - election for a third term just eight months ago shows that she has a broad base of support in the city. An attempted recall of Sharp would give the dissidents a chance to show their strength at best – but this can be done through constructive channels - or, at worse, a poor recall showing could strengthen Sharp's alleged irresponsiveness to vocal minorities.

The recall supporters have yet to give an adequate explanation of how they picked Mayor Wilbur Brookover for their second target. Brookover has often voted with Councilman George Griffiths on the "people's" (i.e. – vocal minority's) side of key issues against a majority composed of councilmembers Sharp, John Polomsky and Thelma Evans.

The argument that Polomsky and Evans should be spared since they were not around when council's original approval to the recaller's pet peeve - the Michigan - Harrison project - was given is irrational, they go about exercising their since Griffiths also voted for the now controversial project.

charges that council members were unresponsive to the public were true, Sharp's election victories indicates this is not the case. And certainly it would be unfair to single out Sharp and Brookover for recall on the scant grounds given by the recall group. The fact that city council has often appeared unresponsive to a group of demonstrators marching on the sidewalk or orating in council chambers is circumstantial evidence at best. Overlooked are the quieter contacts that occur constantly between council members and the public.

While a recall could be justified if

Though the council's action on some evironmental and social issues has been questionable, no body can please everyone all the time. The council has been listening to both sides, and certainly has not weakened the city's economic structure by supporting "unnecessary roadwork" as the charges of some council critics

Many local political figures are backing off from the recall drive with the fear that being involved in such a "negative election" may foul up their own campaigns. While this attitude would be deplorable if there were legitimate reasons for a recall, it is best that the current effort be discouraged from all sides.

In the future, it is to be hoped that East Lansing citizen groups will exercise a little forethought as governmental rights - especially one so serious as recall.

Moon landing recalled

Friday marks the fifth anniversary of the first human moon landing. Though some Americans are pushing a drive to make July 20 a national - or even international – holiday, for most of the world's residents, and most Americans, Friday will be a day like any other.

Perhaps the biggest effect of the U.S. lunar spectaculars on the mind of common man, here and abroad, is to make human despair more poignant. Probably a bridge could be built to the moon and back with all the lamentations beginning, "If they could send a man to the moon, why can't they. . ."

NASA's scientists and other government officials were. continually on the soapbox during the early years of the space program, delineating all of the direct and indirect ("spin - off") benefits of the space program. Certainly many scientific achievements in fields ranging from weather forecasting to resource recovery were made, which are now benefitting the global population. But one must wonder what would have been reaped if the NASA billions would have gone directly into programs designed to make life better on earth, such as food

And then the flip side of the coin is seen. Emphasized even more than peripheral benefits as a justification for the space race was the necessity of catching up with the Russians.

Ironically, on this fifth anniversary it is questionable if man will ever again visit the moon. The double - pronged technology that made lunar landings possible has also given man the power to destroy his world – and history has shown that man tends to exercise all of his powers.

Nixon lost salvation in saving tapes

It is like watching a slow avalanche.

Two years ago this month, John N. Mitchell resigned as head of the Committee to Re-elect the President immediately after a committee aide was tied to the Watergate burglary.

One year ago this week, Alexander Butterfield testified before the Senate Watergate committee that all of President Nixon's conversations were automatically recorded on tape.

Nine months ago this week, Nixon fired Archibald Cox and tried to abolish the office of special prosecutor. Six months ago, he concluded his State of the Union message with the cry, "One year of Watergate is enough." Four months ago, he was named as an unindicted co-conspirator by the same grand jury that indicted seven of his former aides on obstruction of justice charges.

Two months ago, he moved to quash a subpena for 64 additional tapes for possible use in that forthcoming trial. A decision by the Supreme Court is expected any day.

The avalanche of judgment on this huge mass of crimes and lies has been rumbling down from the mountaintop for so long that many people have begun to doubt that it will ever reach Nixon and sweep his administration away.

Over precipices and across valleys, the avalanche roars. It grows sometimes louder and sometimes fainter.

Mitchell and Maurice Stans are exonerated in a trial in New York, and for a few days, the avalanche seems further away from the capital and less ominous for Nixon. John Ehrlichman is convicted in another trial and the rumbling is louder and closer.

James D. St. Clair rushes about trying to organize defenses. Sen. Barry Goldwater and Rep. John Rhodes, the two guardians of the desert - pure conservative faith, conduct intermittent dialogues in public places as to whether to save Nixon or abandon him when the avalanche finally crashes through the White House door.

Nixon, meanwhile, withdraws for long periods, journeys abroad in search of foreign help, makes ceremonial appearances in the capital to show that, photographically at least, he is still presiding over a government, and then · withdraws again. For more than a year, his routine has been one of Florida and California vacations fitfully disturbed by bits of work. As he tries to show his unconcern about the grim rumbling so plainly heard in the streets of the capital, Washington takes on the disconnected unreal atmosphere of the capital of Laos or Cambodia where terrible sounds are always rumbling in the distance and where everything is so desperate that nothing is

But the legal defenses, the dialogues of the elders, the parade of unconcern can avail nothing. Despite the tricks that sounds play on the human ear, the avalanche of judgement has been moving steadily, inexorably nearer to the President for the entire year since the truthful Butterfield disclosed the existence

Only if the President on the night of that fateful disclosure had summoned up the ruthlessness to destroy every last one of the tapes might he have been able to brazen his way to safety. It would hardly have mattered what excuse he offered for destroying all the tapes - national security, concern for the feeling of foreign visitors, respect for privacy, anything. All that mattered is that he get rid of the tapes before the legal subpenas began to be issued.

Once the tapes were gone, no one on the outside would have dreamed that his conversations were as incriminating as they have proved to be. Unless one of the other insiders - H.R. Haldeman, Ehrlichman, Mitchell - broke and corroborated John W. Dean's testimony, it would have been extremely difficult for the prosecutors to show Nixon's deep involvement.

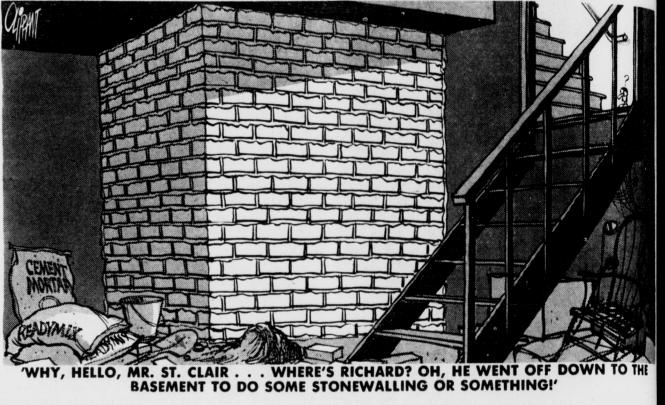

The swift destruction of the tapes would have required great audacity. Nixon is capable of such audacity but he was not capable of it fast enough on that night a year ago, when his secret became known. The obscure impulse deep within his psyche that later caused him to finger the tapes longingly, play them over and recount some of their contents to Ron Ziegler, even as the Watergate hearings impulse stayed his hand.

He procrastinated and was lost, Pr Archibald Cox and causing - or allow to be caused - mysterious erasures a buzzings in certain tapes were inadequ substitutes for that swift act of nihilie failed to perform.

The President could not survive disclosure of any of his phin conversations because they all sene show that Watergate was a characters act of the Nixon regime rather than aberration. He and his closest association regarded the White House & impenetrable shield behind which could safely do anything. All they need they thought, were secret taping devices keep tabs on one another and a pull relations scenario to beguile the public

As the day draws closer when he som another historic first and becomes the president to be impeached and convicts Nixon has one consolation. It has been to longest, best - recorded avalance history.

Cyprus tilt awkward for U.S.

By JAMES RESTON New York Times

The immediate concern of the U.S. government in the latest Cyprus crisis is to avoid open warfare between two of its NATO allies, Greece and Turkey, but beyond that it is faced with an extremely awkward set of political and strategic problems.

• First, Washington deplores the authoritarian military government in Athens, but it is dependent on bases on the Greek mainland and at Soudhas Bay on the island of Crete for its supply routes from Europe to the unstable Middle East.

 Second, while Washington sympathizes with the plight of President Makarios of Cyprus, he has tended to turn for help to Moscow when in trouble, and the one thing the United States wants to avoid, other than losing base privileges in Greece, is to have Soviet forces based on Cyprus, where they could outflank both Greece and Turkey.

• Third, the official view here is that it would be extremely difficult to support the U.S. Sixth Fleet in the Eastern Mediterranean without the Greek bases and equally difficult to get Congressional support for a Greek government that tries. to overthrow Makarios through Greek officers in Cyprus.

Even before the coup d'etat in Nicosia, the United States was in trouble with Turkey over the revival of the opium trade, with Greece over its internal suppression, and with the Soviet Union for meddling in the Greek - Turkish dispute to weaken the southern flank of the NATO

Direct U.S. aid to Greece is not large. In the last fiscal year, Greece was allowed $50 million in foreign military aid credits to buy F4 fighter aircraft. In the present fiscal year, the Nixon administration has indicated that it would furnish an additional $17 million in credits for military purposes, a ceiling imposed by Congress and only on condition that the President found this to be in the strategic interests of the United States.

In addition, Greece gets limited aid from the Eximbank on the ground that this support U.S. exports, and a small amount of agricultural aid for a Greek school lunch program, but there are no U.S. combat forces in Greece other than a small artillery unit to protect U.S.

Even this limited assistance program, however, was in jeopardy before the coup. The Senate passed a bill in January by Sen. Clairborne Pell of Rhode Island and Henry M. Jackson of Washington which would have forced the President to get specific authority from the Congress to continue credits to Greece, with an amendment by Sen. Jacob Javits of New York insisting that the President could proceed only for reasons of "over - riding national interest."

This bill has not yet passed the House, and unless the present crisis is settled fairly soon, the opposition to the Greek government here is likely to increase. For there is strong feeling in Congress that the American presence in Greece lends support to the repressive policies of the military government and helps keep it in

This is another of those cases, however, where the Nixon administration needs the support of a government it does not like but tolerates for larger strategic reasons. No doubt the planners at the Pentagon would like to see Greece and Turkey control the island, settle their intercommunal differences on Cyprus and permit it to be used as a NATO base, but this is not a notion favored by Makarios. the Soviets, or the United Nations.

What the latest crisis does is to give Secretary of State Kissinger not only one more problem, but, as in the recent Middle East War, one more opportunity to reach a more stable compromise in what has been a danger - spot for more than a generation.

Preoccupied with other questions, Washington has not been able to heed the recent warning signs that the shaky arrangements on Cyprus were breaking down and that the Greek officers on the island were going to try to settle the issue by force of arms.

So the question is back again at the United Nations and the issue is far big than the fate of one Mediterranean island The superpowers, with their nar following one another night and day a that inland sea, are maneuvering to influence and position around the great fields of the Middle East.

The recent oil crisis demonstrated basic strategic point: any nation that a control or even influence seriously t flow or price of oil to the industr nations of the world can influence to commerce and security of those nation and even force them to reduce the military budgets to meet the higher prices

Any island from Malta to Crete Cyprus can change the strategic balance controlled by one antagonist or the other Both Moscow and Washington out tolerate a neutral Cyprus, but neithers likely to tolerate its control by the other Thus the Nixon administration faces of more dilemma. It is embarrassed not of by the internal policy of the Green government but by Greek subversion the Makarios regime. Still for strate reasons it needs the cooperation of Athe in order to defend its vital interests in

Jondahl nuclear stand hit

I have recently taken note of a bill introduced into the Michigan House (HB-6126) which would place a moratorium on the construction of nuclear fusion power plants. This bill introduced by Rep. H. Lynn Jondahl, D -East Lansing, could only have been introduced with a total lack of understanding of our current energy needs. Admittedly, there are problems associated with nuclear waste, but there are also problems associated with environmental contamination from fossil fuel plants and limited resources. As a consumer advocate, Jonda apparently has not taken into accounts consumer that would be severly restrict by lack of available energy, and resulting higher cost of electricity. I can only hope that Jondahl wol consider the long range effects of su legislation and would achieve thought of a more positive nature in future, than trying to side step problem and do nothing.

VIEWPOINT: ABSENTEE BALLOTS

Larrowe 'exploitation' hurt voters

By ALLEN CLOBRIDGE

This week the city clerk in East Lansing will begin sending out absentee ballots to student applicants who are out of the city for the summer. Approximately 1,000 students who responded to the spring ASMSU drive or applied at city hall will be receiving their ballots in time to vote in the August 6 primary election.

Unfortunately, another group, perhaps as many as 2,000, may not be so lucky. That is the estimated number of applications that the Charles P. Larrowe 6th District Congressional campaign group is now holding and refusing to turn over to the city clerk. Monday the city clerk told a member of our campaign that her office can process and send out about 800 ballots per week. This means that some of the voters who trusted Larrowe with their applications may not have time to cast their ballots.

Two weeks ago, Larrowe claimed that he was holding the applications because he had been denied access to Ingham County Democratic lists. This is totally untrue. All Democratic candidates have access to party names, even those supplied to the party by the M. Robert Carr campaign. The only restriction is that they be used in the county Democratic headquarters. The Larrowe campaign or any other Democratic campaign can take a mailing to county headquarters, supplying postage and volunteers. The party will provide mailing labels, and mail the whole completed mailing for the candidate. This plan was agreed upon early in the year to protect the work of many party volunteers from unnecessary abuse. The Carr and Larrowe campaigns both consented to this

The Larrowe campaign charged Monday that the Carr campaign did not care about students, another untruth. Carr lead the fight in 1971 to enfranchise students as the chairperson of VOTER, and joined Zolton Ferency in suits against the city clerk for disenfranchising students.

Furthermore, this spring - while Larrowe was attacking Carr's personality - Carr held forums on financial aid and sent testimony to the U.S. House of Representatives on a proposed bill to extend financial aid to students of middle income families. There seems to be a little confusion about the ASMSU drive. In January, Mark Grebner delivered to me 1,000 absentee ballot applications which he claimed were from ASMSU. On later inspection we found instructions that asked applicants to return the forms directly to Mark Grebner, who we discovered was working with Larrowe. Fearing possible abuse of our efforts, these applications were shelved in our headquarters. In the spring, President Tim Cain of ASMSU contacted our office about another absentee ballot drive. We were cautious about participation, but when we were assured by Cain that this was a nonpartisan effort and that resulting names would be supplied to us for a copying charge, we agreed to handle West Circle and Brody complexes, using new applications. The fact that the Larrowe campaign did not participate in this program and that ASMSU did not receive any applications from them indicates to me that Larrowe is less interested in student voting than in manipulating the election.

The most important question still remains: why is the Larrowe campaign endangering the rights of 2,000 people to vote in the primary? The reason seems simple. The Larrowe campaign is afraid that if Carr is able to send a single last minute reminder to voters, Larrowe's support will evaporate. This seems absurd, even to us. The Carr campaign will be mailing a reminder postcard to absentee voters. We hope to win their votes, but we know we will not be 100 per cent successful. However, even if we felt that we would lose all of those votes, we would not interfere with the voting rights of Absentee ballots are for the convenience of voters, not for the exploitation of candidates. We believe that Larrowe should stop playing games with the election, and turn the applications he has over to the city clerk so that ballots can be sent out now. (Even if they are turned in Tuesday, the city clerk is not sure all voters will be able to return their ballots in time.) Carr is not afraid of competition. That is what free elections are all about.

Allen Clobridge is deputy campaign manager of Carr for Congress.

Editor's Note: Larrowe turned in between 1,500 and 2,000 absentee ballot applications to the East Lansing city clerk Tuesday afternoon.

National GNP continues to drop

nation's real output of goods dropped for a second consecutive quarter, the government reported Thursday. Some economists consider this the definition of a recession, but others disagree, saying additional factors should be considered.

The Commerce Dept. said its preliminary figures showed the Gross National Product increased by about 7.5 per cent to $1.38 trillion over the last three months, but this was adjusted to a 1.2 per cent decline because inflation measured at almost 8.8 per cent wiped out the gain in real terms.

All figures represented the quarterly changes projected at an annual rate.

It was the first time national output had dropped for two consecutive quarters since late 1969 and early 1970. That was formally defined by the official arbiter, the National Bureau of Economic Research, as a recession.

President Nixon had promised in his state of the union address this January: "There will not be a recession in the United States."

The latest drop was accompanied by a revision of the first quarter figures to show a 7 per cent decline instead of the 6.3 per cent decline reported last month. The Commerce Dept. adjusted the inflation rate for the first quarter upward by eight - tenths of 1 per cent to a 12.3 per cent rate.

Though a decline of a nation's gross national product for two consecutive quarters is considered a prime indicator of recession, the National Bureau of Economic Research has said earlier this year - when recession became a political issue - that the drop in Gross National Product alone is not enough to constitute

The independent nonprofit research group assembles economists after the close of an apparent slowdown and looks at other factors during the period, including the unemployment rate, the trend in industrial production and the depth and length of the slowdown.

Unemployment is currently running at a rate of 5.2 per cent, up from the low 4.6 per cent last October. In all five recessions since World War II, the unemployment rate was not lower than 6.1 per cent and the increase in unemployment was no less than 2.3 per cent.

These five recessions also exhibited a drop in industrial production of at least 7.2 per cent. The latest report on current industrial production showed it holding steady, only one - tenth of one per cent below last year.

Military junta in Cyprus accuses Makarios regime of torture, abuse

By HOLGER JENSEN

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) - The new military - backed leader of this Mediterranean island on Thursday accused Archbishop Makarios' deposed administration of "torture and corruption" and assured the world there was no need for international intervention in Cyprus. Flanked by bodyguards carrying submachine guns and wearing green berets, President Nikos Sampson staged - in his first news conference since Monday's coup a flamboyant display of what he called "evidence of the tyranny of the former

But on arriving in New York to ask the United Nations to step into the Cyprus situation, Makarios denied the charges.

Sampson brandished bicycle chains, clubs, whips, rubber hoses and electrical implements that he claimed were found in prisons and interrogations centers by national guardsmen who staged the coup. About a dozen alleged torture victims were paraded before foreign newsmen, displaying their wounds and gasping in

The injured men were laughing and drinking beer before the news conference at the Information Ministry, but they began groaning in apparent pain when Sampson called them forward.

Sampson's voice shook with emotion as he described how Makarios, Cyprus's president since it gained independence from Britain in 1960, had surrounded himself with a "close circle of unscrupulous men whose basic aim was to satisfy their personal interest, . . . who would stop at nothing and flagrantly violated personal liberty.

"The new government is finding a host of evidence of corruption, scandalous squandering of the results of Cypriot labor," Sampson said as he promised more "surprising revelations as our investigations continue.'

To contrast the alleged treatment of prisoners under the Makarios regime, Sampson paraded three police officers who were arrested by Greek - officered national guard units for opposing the takeover. All were clean - shaven, wore marks of ill - treatment. Maj. Andreas Pantazis, head of Makarios' personal bodyguard and the hated Police Tactical Reserve, said he had been handled "impeccably" by his freshly laundered clothes and bore no

captors since his surrender on Monday. He denied that his men had participated in torturing opponents of the Makarios regime but admitted: "We heard such tortures were carried out at the Paphos Gate Police Station" in Nicosia. After the display of alleged torture victims and implements, Sampson repeated an earlier claim that the 11,000 - man national guard "had to intervene to Sampson denied that the guard's Greek officers were controlled by the Athens government. Makarios asked during the 1960s that the officers, thought to number about 650, be posted permanently in Cyprus to train the national guard, the Cypriot army.

These officers have been here since 1964," Sampson said. "They all have Cyprus nationality, Cyprus passports and reside here permanently.

Sampson also refused to say how many Greek officers or soldiers are on the island and denied reports that three planeloads of Greek military personnel arrived in Cyprus on Wednesday. The planes carried

The new president said his government would respect "all international treaties and obligations" and would continue talks between Cyprus' ethnic Greeks and Turks begun by the Makarios regime after the island won its independence.

Cyprus has a population of 630,000, 80 per cent Greek and 20 per cent Turkish. Sampson skirted questions about whether his government would seek union with Greece, although he is a long - time supporter of enosis and fought in the Eoka B guerrilla movement against the British to achieve this end. Enosis, Greek for union, was the battle cry of the resistance movement from 1955 - 59.

The result is 588 strikes as of July 15, plus a few in the public - service sector not included by Usery's statisticians. The total, involving 231,000 employes, was about 100 more than Usery had expected. It was the highest total for mid - July since records were first kept in 1959. Kenneth E. Moffett, Usery's director of Mediation Services, has said it probably is the highest total since the outbreak of labor unrest after 20,000 of its members are involved in 30 strikes. "It's four times what we had a year ago," said Donovan McClure, a spokesman. "In almost all of them it comes down to wages."

Wage erosion results in strikes;

With labor out to "catch up" with the soaring cost of living, many settlements for wages and benefits in the first year have been about 10 per cent, an inflationary figure the experts quietly regard as inevitable.

The fear is that higher labor costs will raise prices and the price index next year and touch off another cycle of wage - price, price - wage inflation. "The only choice we have right now is to try to get people to be as reasonable as they can," Usery commented. "It's going to take a period of time to work itself out."

"We have urged restraint on management and labor," Rush said by telephone from his office at Nixon's estate at San Clemente Calif. "We are not jawboning - not trying to bring pressure on any situation. We are urging restraint on the parties. We have no power to determine what the result will

In nonpartisan quarters, the administration's refusal is regarded as realistice in its decision not to engage in "jawboning," lecturing labor in general need for restraint in wage demands. "It's kind of awkward to talk about jawboning in the present context, when labor feels it is its turn to bat," an official commented.

Usery took pains to argue that the large number of current strikes not necessarily indicate deep seated labor unrest. His view is that most employers are sympathetic to labor's desire to "catch up" with the cost of living and are willing to pay accordingly when they can But some companies, he said are caught in highly competitive situations in which they cannot pass on higher costs, perhaps because a big competitor's labor contract has another two years to run.

"It's not bitterness," Usery said. "The issue now is just really — how can I live? How can I keep up? It's not so much aimed at the company. It's just so many things happening to him that he can't keep his head above water."

aworski would keep tapes if he got them

By BARRY KALB WASHINGTON STAR - NEWS

ASHINGTON - If the Supreme Court rules that President on must give up the disputed Watergate tapes, chances appear that the House Judiciary Committee would get any of them time to affect the impeachment vote.

Sources have disclosed that Special Prosecutor Leon A. orski, contrary to views expressed by the White House, feels the has no power of his own to give the committee any tions of the subpenaed tapes if he gets them.

laworksi is said to feel he would have to obtain authorization m United States District Judge John J. Sirica, and, anyway, is preoccupied with obtaining and examining the tapes for his n use at the Watergate cover - up trail to bother at this point the committee's needs.

laworski would comply with any ruling by Sirica, associates but it would be up to the committee, and not Jaworksi to hate action. "If they want the stuff," said one source, "they ow where the courthouse is."

However, Sirica has already indicated that he, too, feels verless on his own to grant a committee request for tapes ained by Jaworski.

The committee would have to file formal court papers, so the ter could be tested in the U.S. Court of Appeals, Sirica has the committee, and the committee in turn has refused to submit its impeachment powers to court review in any way. With nobody inclined to take the first step, it appears at the moment that a stalemate could develop over the issue. It is possible, of course, that once Jaworksi had the tape in hand he would change his mind and give the committee copies of anything that bears on Nixon's guilt or innocence.

However, the prosecutors, who feel Nixon would comply with a Supreme Court order to surrender the tapes despite his hints to the contrary, say they expect that once the ruling is made, Nixon will take advantage of procedural delays to keep the tapes from Jaworski until the House's impeachment inquiry has run its full

The White House's feelings on the matter were stated most recently during the Supreme Court arguments on the subpena, when presidential attorney James D. St. Clair expressed the fear that Jaworski would act as a conduit for the committee, whose own subpenas have been rejected out of hand by Nixon.

If Jaworski were to receive the tapes, they "of course would then become part of the impeachment proceedings," St. Clair hands for a ruling on whether they are relevant to the cover - up

A prosecution source said this week, however, "I don't think that is a valid fear."

The source acknowledged that grand jury material was transmitted to the committee, but noted that this was done by Sirica and at the grand jury's request.

Because grand jury evidence — and therefore grand jury secrecy - was involved, a court ruling was necessary before the evidence could be disclosed to the committee.

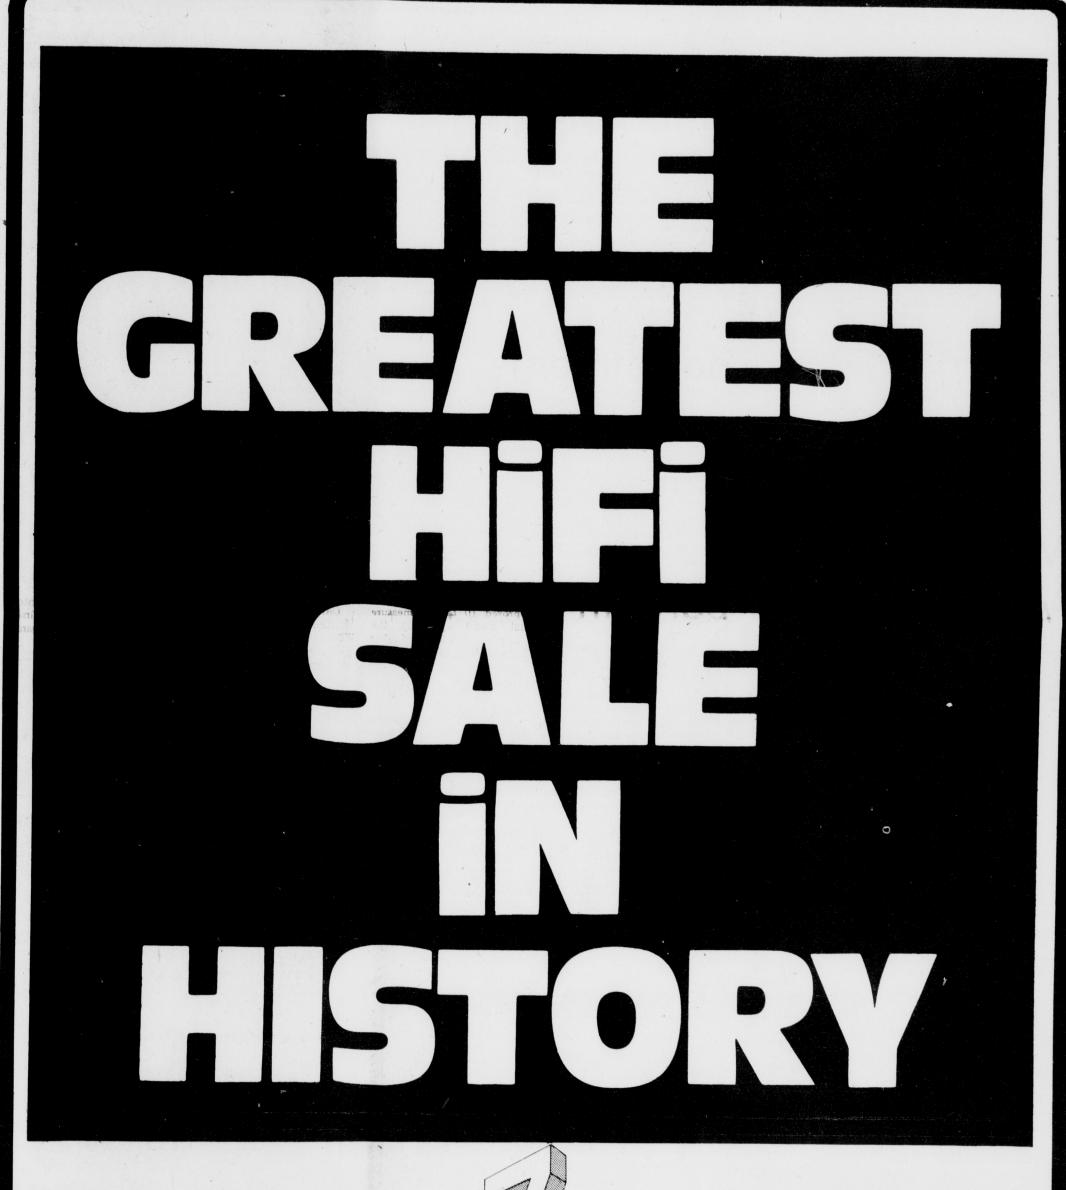

The pending subpena has been issued by the prosecutors themselves for use in the cover - up trial, and it was therefore assumed that with no grand jury secrecy at stake, Jaworski would be free to give the committee anything from the tapes dealing with Nixon's actions.

Members of Jaworski's staff dispute this notion. Despite the fact that the grand jury is not involved, they say, if the tapes are turned over by Nixon they will still have to pass through Sirica's

After the prosecutors issued their first subpena for tapes, Sirica ruled that the President had to comply. The U.S. Court of Appeals upheld Sirica's ruling, but set forth strict procedures for Sirica's inspection of the tapes in private and transmittal to the prosecutors of the relevant portions. Presumably, Sirica would again follow such procedures on any new tapes turned over.

If the Supreme Court does rule in Jaworski's favor, and if Nixon does comply, the prosecutors are still concerned that they might not receive the tapes in time for the cover - up trial to begin Sept. 9.

Under the court of appeals ruling, Nixon can give Sirica the tapes for "in camera" inspection, then appeal any ruling Sirica makes on relevance. While Nixon did not use this tool in the case of the first subpena, he might use it at this juncture.

concept must have looked great on paper. ce much of William Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's m" takes place in the woods, why not actually set portions play in a wooded area? Have the audience led to this area fairies themselves after the play opens and then, when the blications begin to develop, the audience will be right in the t of things, thoroughly involved in the spirit of this immortal espearean comedy. nfortunately, a lot of things that look good on paper never off the ground, as is true for the Summer Circle Free Theater netion of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Its flight of fancy shie and uneven, marred by a novel concept gone awry in dibility, confusion and tedium.

any of Shakespeare's comedies are confusing, overflowing lovers' entanglements, mistaken identities and complicated mes. "A Midsummer Night's Dream" is no exception as the revolves around four lovers madly pursuing one another ngh bush and briar, while fairies sprinkle love potions that everyone to love someone else.

irector John D. Baldwin has only added to the confusion of plot by taking it from the Kresge Court stage and transferring the embankment on the south side of the auditorium. Once the production arrives on that embankment, it falters miserably. Baldwin has failed to consider that Shakespeare should be heard as well as seen.

Shakespearean language is lush, rich and majestic, but it also presents a problem to the modern audience. Its cadence and rhythm are difficult to follow without some concentration or a previous awareness of what the play is about.. Unfortunately, Baldwin seems to have assumed that everyone is so familiar with "Dream" that it is unnecessary to equip his production with audible sound, either by training his actors to project or providing an amplification system. As a result, the core of this comedy is a long, tedious mess that proves virtually impossible to follow, wastes some exceptionally talented actors and ultimately abuses

Ironically, by contrast, the third section of "a Dream" is a delight. Clearly the highlight of the production, it moves the audience to genuine laughter and merriment thanks to the superb skill of Bill Helder as Bottom the weaver. Whenever Helder appears, "Dream" shines with the glow it was obviously intended to have. Armed with a natural relaxed manner and an outstanding comic delivery, Helder even surmounts the amateurish look of the ass' head costume he must wear.

Had director Baldwin moved the audience closer or amplified his production, then undoubtedly Mark Lerner, Dorothy Linnick and Eve Davidson as Lysander, Hermia and Helena, respectively, relaxed performance but are hampered by difficulty in projecting their lines and even some of their movements to so large and spread - out a crowd.

Linnick especially has delightful moments and double - takes whose impact is lessened due to the conditions. Davidson is winning in her portrayal and is matched by Lerner's engaging natural manner, but both seem to be fighting a losing battle with projection and enunciation.

The Summer Circle Free Theater production of "Dream" is being taped by WKAR-TV for later broadcast. Perhaps with the proper sound system and use of close · ups, "Dream" will emerge as an interesting, innovative production. As it now stands, the innovation proves more interesting in its ideal than in its

The abandoned barn, referred to as the "Old Jenks farm," was located at 4407 W. St. Joseph St. in Delta Township, west of Lansing.

Delta Fire Chief Dorin said he did not know how old the barn was but that it had been around for as long as he could remember.

Dorin said the call came in at 7:45 p.m. and the department had the fire under control in about 45 minutes, though the last truck stayed

You could hurt yourself, no kidding. It's cooked just right from a quarter pound of 100% beef. That's nothing to fool around with. It's a hefty hunk of hamburger, lusciously laid out with ketchup, mustard, pickle and chopped onion on a terrifically loasted sesame seed bun. It's even heavier when you order it with a couple of slices of cheese.

Why would anybody be foolish enough to drop such a fantastic feast on their foot anyway?

Running back Jim Strong of the Florida Blazers picks up big yardage on the ground as he runs past Floyd Priester (20) of the Detroit Wheels. Detroit's Dan Lintner (39) comes up to help. Florida edged the Wheels, 18 - 14, in Detroit's first home World Football League game.

Familiar foot punting for Wheels

By STEVE STEIN State News Sports Writer

YPSILANTI - It was a night of odd - colored footballs, new rules, new teams, strange faces and football in July.

It was also the night that Chuck Collins earned himself a niche in the Detroit Wheels history book and proved something he has been trying to prove for four years.

Collins booted the opening kickoff in the Wheels first home World Football League game ever Wednesday night and also handled the team's punting chores. Detroit lost to the Florida Blazers, 18 - 14, at Eastern Michigan University's Rynearson Stadium.

The name Chuck Collins may sound vaguely familiar to MSU football fans. Collins played his college football right here. That is, junior varsity football. The never played with the Spartan varsity squad.

Collins played reserve football in 1971 and 1972 but didn't play last year. In 1972, he punted the ball 32 times for a 38.7 yard average.

The main reason Collins never made it to the varsity was because MSU already had a punter by the name of Bill Simpson.

The 1970 Detroit Benedictine High School graduate, who said he hadn't place - kicked since high school, was thankful MSU did give him a chance to play.

"But," Collins said, "it shows that coaches sometimes don't realize talent when they see it. If I can kick here, I should have kicked at State. Tonight I wanted to show I did have the potential. I had a lot to prove.

Collins, the son of Wheels equipment manager Rip Collins, punted four times for his team and averaged 41.5 yards per boot, the longest being 53 yards. He kicked off the WFL yellow and blue football two other times from the 30 - yard line, a new league rule, and drove the Florida receiver back to the 12 - yard line on his final effort.

The Wheels picked up the 6 -0, 175 - pound rookie just last Sunday soon after he was dropped earlier that day by the Portland Storms of the WFL. Detroit's regular kicker, Dale Livingston, was injured in the Wheels' first game last week.

The crowd at the Wheels inaugural contest Wednesday was disappointing - the announced attendance was only 10,631 - but another 1,000 or so spectators watched the game from a hill behind the south goal.

The fans were enthusiastic, the Wheels final drive, which stalled on Florida's one - yard line. Helped by the PA announcer, the fans got to know the Wheels players and the new rules. The innovation which many fans said they liked most is that no fair catch is allowed on punts. For one fan, Dan Radnovich of Westland, seeing a new Detroit team was nothing special. He said he has seen the first game of every Motor City sports team since the Red

"It's too bad this stadium is not accessible so easily,' Radnovich said, chomping on a cigar while sitting in a top row seat. "Tiger Stadium is much more centrally located.
