The military - backed government of Greece fell Tuesday in the aftermath of bloody turmoil on Cyprus and the president of the island's rebel government resigned. Archbishop Makarios said he expected to return to the Cypriot presidency in a few weeks.

These developments came in quick succession in advance of a scheduled Cyprus conference set up by Britain with Turkey and Greece in Genova.

Former Greek Premier Constantine Caramanlis, who had called the overthrow of Makarios a "national disaster," was invited by Greece's military president to return from exile to head a civilian govern ment of national union. The cheers of Athenians filled the Greek capital's Caramanlis' office in Paris said the French government offered him a special plane for a four - hour flight to Athens Tuesday night.

Glafcos Clerides, speaker of the Cypriot House of Representatives during Makarios' old regime, was named to take over the Cypriot presidency. Under Cyprus' constitution, Clerides was the next in line for the presidency.

Makarios told a news conference in New York that he expected to regain "in the next few weeks" the post he lost in a Greek army officer - led coup July 15. The archbishop said he was firmly convinced that Clerides was now acting in his behalf. Makarios added that he was gratified that Nikos Sampson had quit as president of the Cypriot rebel government and that Greece would get a new civilian regime.

In announcing his resignation, Sampson said in a Cyprus radio broadcast that itself, there were new outbreaks of fighting, according to the United Nations and the British Defense Ministry. But the action, which at first was described as serious, later was reported to be sporadic incidents that did not seem to endanger the cease - fire that went into effect on Monday.

U.N. headquarters in New York said Greek Cypriot national guard troops advanced on a U.N. force camp in Nicosia, the capital, and the international force was given orders to resist them. However, a U.N. spokesman said later that the U.N. unit, made up of Canadians, "was not attacked or invaded."

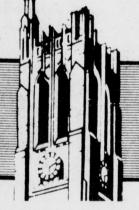

The British reported fighting on the northern coast beachhead established by Turkish forces in their invasion Saturday.

committee, so far as I'm concerned, will have made up his mind," Hogan said.

Hogan predicted that at least five of the 17 Republicans on the committee will vote for impeachment. He said if the full House studies the evidence as carefully as he did it also will vote to impeach

President Nixon. Presidential counselor Dean Burch, after consulting with White House staff chief Alexander M. Haig Jr. in San Clemente, summoned newsmen Tuesday to denounce Hogan.

Burch charged that Hogan's "ambition to be governor of Maryland ... weighed > what he views as his political interest." Hogan said his decision was made within the last few days but "the real body blow was when the President released his tapes and I read in his own words things that shocked me."

Hogan generally was not listed among those committee republicans most likely to support impeachment.

Nearly all of the 21 Democrats are regarded as virtually certain to support impeachment while 11 Republicans usually are listed as hard - line voters against. Hogan is the first member to formally announce his vote though others have indicated their intentions.

The committee announced that the impeachment debate, to be aired on nationwide radio and television, would begin at 7:30 p.m. EDT Wednesday. The committee continued on Tuesday debating procedural questions.

The likeliest scenario for the debate is that it will open with introduction of a resolution declaring that it is the committee's recommendation to the House that Nixon should be impeached. Then would come first phase of the debate, with each of the 38 committee members having 15 minutes to talk. The resolution may be tabled without a vote and then the committee will turn to debate on individual articles of impeachment.

The Democrats reportedly were working on three proposed artic impeachment based upon the presentation made last week by John Doar, chief counsel to the impeachment inquiry.

The three articles would charge the President with obstructing justice in the Watergate investigation, with contempt of Congress for his refusal to obey committee subpenas and abuse of power for his alleged role in surveillance activities as well as attempts to make the Internal Revenue Service more politically responsive.

Committee members also will have an opportunity to offer their own proposed articles as well as amendments or substitutes. Each member would have five minutes to speak on each article and amendment.

During debate, any member may yield all or part of his time to another member. Thus, if an individual has used up his five minutes and has more to say, another member may be heard saying he yields his time to so - and - so. In other developments Tuesday:

 About 600 supporters of President Nixon prayed, sang and listened to speakers at a fast and a vigil on the Capitol steps. It was organized by supporters of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon of South Korea and the National Committee for Fairness

Escaping mosquitoes: head for nearest tree

By GARY HOFFMAN State News Staff Writer

You can escape the swarms of mosquitoes by climbing a tall, sturdy tree if unreliable insecticides fail to do their job this summer.

Harold Newson, associate professor of entomology, said Tuesday that insecticides sprayed by contractors on vegetation or in fogs sometimes have no appreciable effect on the mosquito population.

"Days or weeks after they may be back," he said. But he said mosquitoes usually stay near the ground - tree level or below.

But in certain circumstances, a bitten, tormented refugee perched upon the top of Wonders residence hall may see an occasional mosquito.

"Under the right atmospheric conditions, mosquitoes have been found several thousand feet up," he said.

Newson said ridding property of mosquito breeding areas may help. "If they are in your own yard, they can be produced in water in old containers, puddles and flooded areas," he said. But he said eliminating these spots may not be enough to do away with the bloodthirsty insects. "Some mosquitoes fly a number of miles from their breeding grounds," he said. "It's rare to find one lot that is the only mosquito - producing spot in an area.' Newson said spraying can help in some cases if it prevents new mosquitoes from coming in and breeding.

He warns that insecticides used against mosquitoes, aside from having small residual effects, are poisons and that the contractors who use them have to be licensed by the

Nixon threatens consumer veto

President Nixon has promised to veto a bill creating a federal consumer protection agency unless the measure is toned down.

The threat was made in a letter to Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R - Neb., and Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott. The letter was disclosed Tuesday by Curtis, who opposes the bill.

Debate continued on the bill Tuesday in the Senate. It is generally conceded that 60 of the 100 senators support the measure. But conservative opponents are trying to talk the bill to death, and it would take a twothirds majority to cut off that filibuster or over - ride a

Roy L. Ash, director of the White House Office of Managment and the Budget, had indicated on May 15 that the administration was troubled by the proposed agency's "sweeping and unbridled" power to command reports from businessmen on their operations, and by language in the bill allowing the agency's administrator to be fired only for cause.

The agency to be created in the House - passed bill would have authority to intervene in any federal agency or court proceeding at which a consumer interest is at

Florida's Gurney withdraws

Sen. Edward F. Gurney announced Tuesday that he would not seek re - election because his first priority is to attempt to clear himself of bribery, perjury and conspiracy charges.

"There is no sensible or sound way to conduct a statewide political race and prepare for, and go through a major trial," the Florida Republican said in a written statement telephoned to Miami by his Washington office.

"I am innocent of any wrongdoing and the first priority is to clear my good name," he said. "After that is done, I will decide whether or not to resume a career in politics and government."

Gurney, a member of the Senate Watergate committee, was indicted by a federal grand jury in Jacksonville on July 10 in connection with a $233,000 secret fund collected from builders seeking influence with the Federal Housing Administration. He has pleaded innocent.

Bomb kills Irish militiaman

A militiaman, father of three children, was killed early Tuesday and four other persons were injured when a car bomb exploded in the village of Garva in County Londondery, Northern Ireland.

An army spokesman said Cpl. John Conley, 43, of the Ulster Defense Regiment, a predominately Protestant militia, was helping police clear the area of bystanders when the 300 - pound bomb went off.

Authorities had raised the alarm after a passer - by saw a man park the car beside a garage and then flee in a second auto.

Conley's death raised to 1,045 the number of known fatalities attributed to guerrilla warfare between extremist Roman Catholics and Protestants in Northern Ireland since August 1969.

Veteran kills town postmaster

A Vietnam veteran, apparently angry because a government check was delayed in the mail, has shot and killed a postmaster and later was slain by police, authorities said.

Otis Muldrew, 29, the veteran, shot and killed Postmaster C. B. Ward in the Emmet, Ark., post office according to Deputy Prosecuting Atty. Charles Honey of Prescott.

Honey said Muldrew had been firing random shots with a .22 - caliber automatic rifle as he walked down the streets of Emmet.

The Nevade County sherrif's office was called, but by the time two state policemen and a deputy sheriff arrived from their office in Prescott, eight miles away, Muldrew had reached the post office, where Ward was standing behind the counter.

Equal rights passage predicted

U.S. Rep. Martha W. Griffiths, D - Detroit, vowed to a national women's organization Monday in Chicago that backers of the Equal Rights Amendment will win its ratification this year.

"Now we have five states to go to ratify, and we are going to get those states," she told about 3,000 delegates to National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc.

Griffiths is one of 170,000 members of the organization which has supported passage of the ERA for more than 30 years. She spearheaded the movement for the bill's passage in Congress as the house's senior woman member. She has served since 1955.

Sugar prices hit record highs

The free - market price of sugar on the London terminal market hit an all-time high for the second day in a row Tuesday and sold at $659.40 a ton under the pressure of a persisting world shortage.

This is equal to 29.44 cents a pound. Monday's previous high was $654.85 a ton, or 29.32 cents per pound. Sugar for delivery in August, which opened as high as $669.20 a ton, later settled in trading to $650.08 a ton, or about 29.02 cents per pound.

Seven years ago free - market sugar, about one seventh of total world consumption, was being traded as low as 2.03 cents a pound.

Busing restriction considered

WASHINGTON STAR NEWS

WASHINGTON - Senate and House conferees have agreed to stringent restrictions on the power of federal courts to order busing for school desegregation.

If the new limitations become law and are not overturned in court, they are unlikely to reduce existing busing but could significantly affect future busing ordered by federal courts, particularly outside the South.

Before this busing compromise becomes law, the Senate and House must vote approval and President Nixon must sign the measure. Senate approval had not come by Tuesday afternoon. Whether the House and the President, both of whom favor even tougher restrictions, will agree to the compromise is uncertain.

The new limits would generally restrict busing to the next closest school to a child's home, though courts are given leeway to order more distant busing if needed to guarantee the constitutional rights of minority children.

Part of a $25 billion, four - year federal school aid bill, the busing curbs - if they become law - are likely to inspire a spate of court suits challenging existing school desegregation busing

The constitutionality of the new restrictions is also certain to be tested in court by civil rights groups, raising the prospect of an ultimate confrontation between the Congress and the U.S. Supreme Court on this emotional issue.

One provision of the compromise, adopted Monday night after 16 days of conference sessions that began June 6, would prohibit federal judges from ordering busing across school district lines between cities and suburbs, for example - unless it can be proved that the school boundaries were drawn with the intent of segregating black children.

For weeks, a U.S. Supreme Court decision on this issue has been awaited in the case of Detroit and its suburbs. If Congress adopts this legislation, the new law could be in conflict with the

Witness refutes Mitchell

WASHINGTON (AP) -California Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke Tuesday denied that he decided before entering a Senate hearing room two years ago that he was going to protect former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell.

Reinecke's trial testimony conflicts with Mitchell's testimony two years ago before the Senate Judiciary Committee about the details of an ITT financial pledge to the 1972 GOP National Convention.

Mitchell testified before the committee that he did not learn of the pledge until after an out - of - court settlement of several ITT antitrust suits.

Prosecutor Richard Davis asked Reinecke whether he had resolved before he entered the hearing room that he was going to protect John Mitchell. 'Absolutely not," replied

Reinecke. The lieutenant governor testified a total of nearly six hours Tuesday and Monday. Reinecke told the Senate committee on April 19, 1972, that he had no discussions with Mitchell about the ITT financial pledge until September 1971.

Since that time, Reinecke has said he did tell Mitchell of the ITT pledge in a telephone conversation with the attorney general on May 21, 1971. The antitrust cases were resolved in July 1971.

Reinecke also testified Tuesday that he was promised by the special prosecutor's office that he would not be charged in the ITT case if he cooperated with the prosecutor's office.

Reinecke said he met last July 30 with Joseph J. Connolly, at that time head of the special prosecutor's ITT probe. A grand jury indicted Reinecke last March, charging him with lying to a Senate Judiciary Committee about his role in trying to obtain the 1972 Republican National Convention for San Diego.

Reinecke had told a Senate hearing that he did not discuss

The conferees rejected strong House provisions which won give school boards the right to reopen busing cases to bin earlier orders into line with the new limitations restricting bush to the next closest school to a child's home. Civil rights grow have maintained that the House reopener provision could re back much existing school desegregation.

Instead of the House provision, weaker Senate language adopted which could give parents or school boards the opportunity to go to court and argue that existing court order busing is a risk to the health of their children and harms the education.

Another section of the compromise would provide the existing busing orders be terminated, and no new busing require provided it could be shown that the constitutional right minority children to a desegregated education would

EDITORIALS St. Clair's faith offers religion to the masses

James St. Clair, President Nixon's impeachment lawyer, preached again Monday night. This fact in itself is not unusual, as St. Clair has been keeping the faith with the Washington press corps almost daily in recent weeks. However, the California press conference Monday was carried live on national television and radio.

Following a day of briefings with the President - who has not had the gumption to give a press conference himself for more than four months - St. Clair sweated through a half hour under the TV lights, returning bland nonanswers to most of the questions from the

Of special note was St. Clair's dismissal of all but one possible impeachment charge (hush money payments), his apparent failure to pursue one of the key facets in the case against his client and his refusal to speculate on whether Nixon will obey the upcoming Supreme Court ruling.

St. Clair said he believed Congress would eventually restrict the impeachment proceedings to determining the President's possible involvement in the Watergate coverup. St. Clair's implication that the flagrant abuses of executive power - including the Ellsberg break - in and campaign sabotage which have occurred under the Nixon administration would be overlooked in the final Nixon probe lucky.

It may well be the latter, if St. Clair's handling of one crucial point is any indication. Shortly before Watergate burglar E. Howard Hunt received his hush money White House tapes show Nixon told aide John Dean to "get it." When asked what the "it" referred to, if not the hush money (a question which has been debated for weeks), St. Clair said not only that he did not know, but that individual words were not important – only the entire context of the censored conversations should be considered.

The smiling presidential lawyer also managed to sidestep about 10 questions concerning Nixon's probable response to the Watergate tapes case now before the Supreme Court. These were questions that should not have to be asked. But the recent rumblings of carefully coached presidential spokesmen has raised the possibility of the nation's chief law enforcer defying the law, and St. Clair did nothing to dispel such a disheartening prospect.

A mountain of faith would be required to believe St. Clair's brazen defense of the President, but opinion polls show millions of Americans have it. Certainly his message will not die for lack of exposure while he gets free prime time TV to deliver it.

Billy Graham, you should be so

Poppies went for guns

In recent years the U.S. government has tended to view Turks as flower people. Turkey was pressured into halting its poppy production two years ago, since Turkish poppies were the major source of heroin smuggled into America. Though this measure caused hardships in poppy growing villages - where poppy products were used for fuel, fodder and handicrafts - the ban was imposed to avoid loss of American

Due to the perversions of the U.S. military - industrial philosophy, the Turkish government was able to trade flowers for guns. The resumption of Turkish poppy production earlier this summer apparently indicated that Turkey had enough American military hardware to take on archrival Greece.

The latest outbreak of war in Cypress is merely smoldering. Elements of the regular military forces of both Greece and Turkey have now reinforced the opposing factions of Greek and Turkish Cypriots which live on the divided island, but a shaky UN cease - fire has been established

Though some U.S. industrialists may be gratified by a war in which most of the casualties on both sides are inflicted by American - made weapons, the U.S. role as the world's armorer should weigh heavily upon the consciences of American taxpayers. During the latest fighting in Cypress, scores of helpless hospital patients died in apparently deliberate Turkish bombings, and thousands of foreign visitors found that their lives were endangered in a world not as civilized as they thought.

Khrushchev's legacy noted

By C.L. SULZBERGER New York Times

JIDDA, Saudi Arabia - I can think of no resemblance but one between Francois Rene. Vicomte de Chateaubriand, French nobleman, romantic writer and eccentric politician, and Nikita Sergeivitch Khrushchev, Russian peasant revolutionary who became boss of the Soviet Union. The single exception is fascination in their posthumous literary work - respectively "Memoires D'Outre -Tombe" and "Khrushchev Remembers -The Last Testament."

Chateaubriand's elegant periods dealt with relatively reflective matter. Khrushchev's, published in the United States (Little, Brown & Co.) on the basis of secretly dictated recollections, can also be read with urgent political pungency.

I had the opportunity to peruse Khrushchev's last volume during a lengthy flight here and was surprised to discover how closely the conclusions of this man responsible for the Hungarian occupation and the Cuban missile crisis - tallied with those of Henry Kissinger.

The Secretary of State came away from the recent Moscow stalemate believing "both sides have to convince their military establishments of the benefits of restraint." Khrushchev wrote in the epilogue to his reflections:

"The military can't be reminded too often that it is the government that must allocate funds; it is the government that must decide how much the armed forces can spend, and it is the government that must set policy on the nature of our relations with other countries, including the obligations our country undertakes with regard to arms control and disarmament."

Khrushchev's analysis is not just based upon the obvious - namely that nuclear warfare simply cannot be contemplated and therefore the generals and admirals must be prevented from exercising too much influence in policy - making that involves war and peace: a virtual mirror image of current United States governmental thinking.

There can be surely no difference here with Brezhnev who is known to be at odds with his own military - industrial establishment as symbolized by Marshal Grechko. Where Khrushchev's voice from the grave differs radically from contemporary Soviet thought is in stating that an unrestrained arms race will ruin the Soviet Union and benefit the United

This is an idea neither Nixon nor Kissinger - and, I venture to say, neither

Scoop Jackson nor Jim Schlesinger - has thought up. But Khrushchev's theory is neat and pungent. In a nutshell, he says: "Military competition is profitable for the circles of monopolistic capital in the West, while its economically damaging for the socialist" (meaning Communist) "world."

"If we try to compete with the West in any but the most crucial areas of military preparedness, we will be further enriching wealthy circles in the United States who use our military buildups as a pretext for overloading their own country's arms

"The reactionary forces in the West know it's expedient for them to force us to exhaust our economic resources in a huge military budget, thus diverting funds which could otherwise be spent on the cultural and material needs of the peoples. We must not let ourselves be caught in that trap. We must remember that the defense industry is a nonproductive sector of our economy.

I cannot imagine that Brezhnev, who in many other respects represents the opposite faction of Moscow's political kaleidoscoep, disagrees with Khrushchev's conclusions on the exorbitantly expensive arms race, even if he does not (at least openly) share the latter's analysis. This analysis may best be cited in one senten "The arms race has been part of calculated plan to hinder the development of our economy, impede the growth our standard of living, sow the seeds disarray and dissatisfaction - and, possible, bring about the collapse socialism and a restoration of capitalismi our country.'

Were that goal, as Khrushchev states if indeed realizable, I suppose that a goo many Americans including farmen workers, and other citizens in addition the generals and the admirals, mig reckon the burden of financing such program might even then be worthwhile for, in the end, it would be bloodless an victorious.

Unfortunately, neither of the assumptions is correct. The cost of unchecked arms race - as both the latterday Nixon and Brezhner governments acknowledge and as Kissing warns - is unsupportable and with point.

Moreover, looking at today's gluindices of the capitalist world's presen economic condition, one might venture the guess that capitalism stands just much chance of "collapse" by unrestrained arming as does Communist credo Khrushchev was seeking to support by the logic of peace.

Impeachment to shape future

By ANTHONY LEWIS New York Times

An admirer of President Nixon, sickened by Watergate but still opposed to impeachment, explained the other day: "Why bother impeaching him? He has been punished enough by what has happened, and that will be an example to future presidents. It is better to stop

If the person of Richard Nixon were the issue, that argument would be persuasive. There is no great purpose in merely pursuing him into further disgrace. History will record him for what he is.

But the issue that faces Congress is not Nixon. The process that finally reaches the stage of judgment in the House Judiciary Committee this week will decide what kind of government Americans are going to have, two centuries after winning independence. It will decide what kind of country we are.

That large sense of what is at stake is irresistably conveyed in the Articles of Impeachment proposed by the committee counsel, John Doar, and the supporting findings. Even after all the disclosures of the last two years, the list of things done by this President and his men is awesome.

Obstruction of justice, subordination of perjury, burglary, interference with the judicial process, illegal wiretapping for political ends, destruction of evidence, use of the tax system to punish enemies. misuse of police and intelligence agencies, tax fraud, comtempt of Congress: those are some of the wrongs committed - all, as the draft resolution says, "to manifest injury of the confidence of the nation and the great prejudice of the cause of law and

That those things happened is not really in doubt. The question is what Congress should do about them - do to prevent them happening again. Some congressional Republicans, reluctant to impeach, are evidently trying to convince themselves that there is some method short of impeachment. Rep. David W. Dennis, R -Ind., said, "We really ought to be thinking about some remedial legislation.'

But the remedy already exists. It was written into the Constitution. Failure to use it now would necessarily appear to a degree as a condoning of what has happened. If a future president were lawless, would he be put off by the history of a predecessor who survived disclosure of such wrongdoing? Or would he be tempted to think that he could be more effective in the abuse of power?

In maintaining law and order in society, deterrence is a crucial factor. The potential criminal is most effectively deterred by the sense that punishment is likely to be swift and sure. It would not be much of a deterrent if judge or jury refused to enforce existing laws and suggested that others be passed.

It is not just the character of the presidency that these next weeks will define. It is our own character as a people: our values, our sense of legitimacy, our

Will that special American reverence for the law survive? Will our wounded respect for the institutions be revived, or will we become an altogether cynical people? Will we believe again in the possibility of leadership - believe that our constitutional system can work?

Those are some of the larger questions that may be profoundly affected by the course of impeachment. Underlying then all is the idea of moral responsibility.

"I will not place the blame or subordinates . . . ," the President said in his Watergate speech of April 30, 1973 "The man at the top must bear th responsibility." Yet now the man whose personal and political staff was rife with criminality says that somehow it has nothing to do with him. Is that to be our standard of responsibility?

I WISH I COULD SHARE YOUR OPTIMISM, JIM, BUT TO ME IT ALL LOOKS RATHER HOPELESS-THE NFL WILL NEVER SETTLE THIS STRIKE BY FALL!

Student families hurt by IM pool rules

As a married student and parent, I feel compelled to write a letter of protest regarding the appalling regulations upheld during children's swim at the two intramural buildings. For example, last Saturday my husband, my son and myself, in company with two alumni guests, came over to the Men's IM to beat the heat for the one scant hour allotted to students' children, from 4 to 5 p.m. Arriving early we nevertheless waited in the sweltering line over 20 minutes, a common occurrence at family hours. We entered the pool for little more than a half hour swim at a cost of $2.20 with everyone

In the Women's Ma children's swims we've been charged little as 30 cents and as much as $1 wil two current IDs depending on who working that morning!

Why does each employee charge wh he feels like? Why are fees so abominable high for children? Children don't for around in the pools; they also have to parents to watch them. Why can't children swim during the week like last year? Wh do student families get to swim only hours a week at considerable financial of while single students can swim all day lot for free? Why do student families have wait in long lines even with a current while single students breeze past? A who sets these discriminatory police against hard - working contribute members of the University community I'd appreciate some answers. I'm sick s the damnable treatment accorded stude families by this University.

N-plants present 'risks'

To the Editor:

According to Rita M. Laurin's July 17 letter, Rep. Lynn Jondahl was not considering the future energy needs of Michigan people when he introduced House Bill 6126 which would place a moratorium on the construction of nuclear fission power plants in Michigan. (Note: the correct word is fission - not fusion, as Laurin stated).

I'm sure that Jondahl and the 13 cosponsors of this bill are well aware of the energy needs, but they are more concerned about the problems of nuclear waste which Laurin dismisses so lightly. The statistics on infant mortality, leukemia and cancer deaths and immature births in Charlevoix County, Michigan, where the Big Rock Point Nuclear Power Plant is located, should give all of us reason to question whether a nuclear reactor can be built with adequate safeguards.

Citizens in other states are questioning whether the energy from large central nuclear plants is worth the risks of contamination. There are two bills in the U.S. Congress which place a moratorium on building such facilities; in the Senate, a bill sponsored by Senator Mike Gravel (D -Alaska); in the House, a bill sponsored by Rep. Jerome Waldie (D - Calif.) and Rep.

Les Aspin (D - Wis.). An initiative petition is almost certain to place a moratorium on further construction of nuclear fission powerplants in California.

Furthermore, there is growing evidence that solar and geothermal sources can be used to supply our energy needs. Both are safer, cleaner and potentially less expensive than nuclear power which has been subsidized from beginning to end, from mining and research to waste disposal and insurance. Citizens should request that funds be allocated to hasten research which would put alternate sources of energy into reality.

There are no drugs that can safely be used to grow hair on one's chest or anywhere else. The administration of male hormones for such a purpose would be highly dangerous and probably not effective.

The major determinant of body hair distribution and appearance is genetic. Of the changes which begin at puberty, the appearance of hair on the chest and body is the slowest and latest to develop. Body hair often continues to increase in amount and distribution into the 20s.

There are some medical conditions in which hair will grow very slowly or in which it will break off before it gets very long. One such condition is hypothyroidism, or low thyroid function. This is usually associated with dry hair, dry skin and fatigue as well as discomfort in cold weather. The scalp condition you describe could also go along with this. Safeway Stores has just announced a new pricing policy. It says it will only stamp one price on a box or can of food and will not change the price while it's on

My friend Milton Wallach was highly critical of the Safeway proposal. "The think I liked about going to a supermarket is that it was like going to a casino in Las Vegas. The big gamble was to get out of the store before they changed the price on you. You only had a half - hour to do it and the excitement for me was running down the aisles pushing my cart, with a stockboy chasing after me trying to stamp my goods with a new price before I got to the checkout counter.

Wallach, who has spent a lot of time in supermarkets, said that in recent months there have been so many prices on food packages you could hardly read the labels.

"I would go into the store and ask the clerk, 'Where are the baked beans you advertised for 40 cents?' He would reply, 'Oh those must be the ones we raised to 55 cents this morning. They were marked down from 62 cents, 57 cents and 45 cents last week. You better get them right away because I think they're going up to 70 cents in 10 minutes."

In his observation Wallach discovered that in every supermarket the manager makes his own decision on what to charge for an item. "I was in one store and I saw a box of crackers with 65 cents stamped

MSU red tape, legends fill orientation

By ANN STUART

Orientation begins with a brief check - in at South Wonders Hall. Dozens of people mill around the lobby, searching through alphabetized tables for the one with the proper letters above it.

Wilson Hall auditorium was the setting for a welcome meeting for a "small intimate group" of about 450 of us, and for the inevitable placement exams. Residence assistants (RAs) cheerfully passed out pencils as we groaned over the rows and rows of grids to be marked in. The vocabulary test was "a bunch of words nobody ever heard of. It's to see how good you are at guessing," commented one student later.

After finishing the tests, students had an opportunity to visit two of the colleges they had interests in, and speak with advisers on courses and requirements. Some visited the Honors College and others took the final exam for determining foreign language

"As many as 50 per cent of you will change your majors today," we were told at the welcome meeting. An hour before dinner had been provided for this. We sat in line at Wilson Hall auditorium, clutching numbers like children in an ice cream parlor. As the minutes ticked by, those waiting exchanged information.

The first question was always "Where are you from?" often followed by "What are you going into?" and finally "Where are you living in the fall?" Strangely enough, most people did not exchange

An hour after major changing began, the number 28 was called. The student holding number 60 looked at his watch, groaned, tossed the number in the wastebasket and headed for the cafeteria. Others followed his example. RA Scott Case led the after - dinner bus tour, assisted by Nancy Fea. Freshmen were treated to a gold mine of solemnly - intoned statistics ("There are more than 45,000 students at MSU. 18,000 live on campus. The library has two million volumes. There are 165 majors to choose from. . . "), local stories about points of interest ("The legend surrounding the ceramic statue of Sparty is that he will drop his helmet the day a virgin graduates from MSU.") and information on residence halls ("To your right are Yakeley and Gilchrist Halls, womens' dorms, also known as the Chastity Belt and the Nunnery.") There was plenty of opportunity to ask questions. ("How old are you? Are you married?")

After the bus tour was a half hour break. At this point the general reaction seemed to be a mixture of awe and fatigue. The appearance of aspirin tins stood as mute evidence of RAs conducted meetings on how to build a schedule and patiently explained the purpose of each of the papers in the welcome packet. A question and answer period followed, with discussion centering mostly around life in residence halls, and particularly the guest and animal policy.

"Guests are welcome," advised one RA, "but be kind to your roommate. Don't have Clyde up every weekend. And no pets except goldfish! How would you feel if someone's parrot kept you up every night spitting seeds in your face?" she asked, illustrating an actual occurence in one dorm.

"Of immediate concern to you at this time is the beginning of a successful transition to the University and the development of your academic program for fall term. Times of transition are often both exciting and difficult. We have established the Academic Orientation Program to assist you in making this initial transition." - excerpt from a welcoming letter to incoming freshmen

Frustration peaked at schedule planning that evening. Students worked out schedules and brought them to an RA for approval, only to discover they had scheduled two classes at the same time or forgotten to check the closed course list. We had been warned it took from two to four hours to build your first schedule.

"Do we have to do this every term?" was a frequently asked question.

While future MSU scholars were going through their ntation, their parents were getting an introduction to MSU of

The Parents' Orientation Program is one designed to acquaint ents of freshman orientation students with the University. in its third summer, the program is similar to the students' entation set up—the parents get a green and white folder with follection of maps, itineraries, notes and schedules inside, they to eat residence hall food and sleep on residence hall beds (if want to), they get a speech from President Wharton and y operate on a strict timetable with their own associate ctor to shepherd them around.

One main event in the day - and - a - half parents' session was a one main even in the day and a large parents session was a sell with three actual MSU students. Monday evening, a group about 80 parents assembled in a basement lecture room of den Hall. Baiba Kruklitis, Jim Flora and Pat Baker, all summer dence assistants (RAs) with the Office of Orientation grams, composed the three - student panel.

After a brief introduction by the three students, an open

The scrimmages are scheduled to consist of two 20 - minute running time periods. Teams will be chosen from among those who played before and after 1962.

Both contests will be open to the public and fans will be able to contribute a donation, which will got to help furnish the MSU played its hockey games outdoors from 1922 to 1930, except in 1924, when no team was organized. In 1931, all of the contests were postponed because of bad weather conditions and the sport was dropped until 1950, when the Spartans moved into the Demonstration Hall arena.

Some 100 players from the past 25 years of competition will be on hand at the reunion and they will be joined by a few alumni from the 1920s era.

Notable returnees include Dick Lord (1951 - 53), the only black player to ever play varsity hockey at MSU, who currently serves as a judge on Canada's Immigration Appeals Court in Montreal; Doug Roberts (1963 - 65), a member of the Detroit Red Wings; Weldon Olson (1952 - 55), former Spartan scoring ace and U.S. World Team player and Joe Selinger (1957 - 59), former All - American goalie.

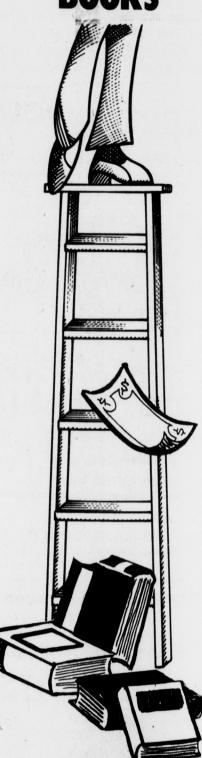

The oldest alumni returning are John Noblet from the 1922 squad and Carl Moore and John Kaiser, 1926 teammates.

feeling lost, empty and slightly a university for the first time desperate. MSU will soon be able to help. At least 15 "mature" women will receive tuition funds fall term from the newly created Mildred B. Erickson

"We think women have been neglected," Mary L. Jackson, one of the originators of the fellowship, said. "There is a deep need for older women to get aid and motivation to realize they can achieve goals that they hadn't before believed were possible." The fellowship is an attempt to give financial assistance to women to allow them to enter or return to school. Jackson noted that many older women need this assistance. Some had put aside their educational goals to help their husbands finish college, while others now realize that college education is a necessity in today's highly competitive job markey. There is no credit minimum to get the fellowship. The fund is designed especially for those women who want to study part time, Jackson said. A woman can apply for a fellowship before she is accepted by MSU but can only pick up the money at registration. Women wishing to apply should contact Jackson, supervisor in MSU's Comptroller's office, before directors. Jackson, who is working toward a degree as an education specialist, said the fellowship honors Mildred Erickson, a woman who had done an outstanding job of awarded by the fund's board of counseling older women Language and the University said the fund already has College's asst. dean for enough money to aid at least late starter in a doctorate program in education. She returned to college after the death of her husband who was Aug. 15. The fellowships will be dean of education and then

> MSU's provost. "Funding of the program is coming along very well," Jackson said. "But we need additional support very badly." The fellowship plans to hold a campaign in September to raise additional funds. The MSU Graduate School, MSU Development Fund and individuals inside and outside Erickson, associate professor of the University have already of American Thought and pledged their support. Jackson

Persons wishing to contribute to the program should send donations to the MSU Development Fund in the Stephen T. Nisbet Building on campus. Contributions should be earmarked for the Erickson Fellowship and are tax deductible. Donors who contribute prior to July 1, 1975, will be designated as program founders. Jackson said both large and small coup on April 21, 1967. Caramanlis was premier of Greece from 1955 to 1963, when he went into exile after losing elections. In a statement in Paris on the day after the national guard coup on Cyprus, he said the uprising against Makarios was "a national disaster and can have painful consequences for the Greek nation at home and abroad.' He called for a return to democratic rule in Greece and said he stood ready to do all he could to achieve that goal. What the upshot of his return will be was not immediately clear. Nor was there any indication of how democratic a successor government would be.

A former Cabinet Minister. Petros Yaroualias, who first reported the resignation of Androutsopoulos after a meeting with the military leadership in Athens, said, however, "There must be hope

Front lawns big political battleground

State milk safe, dairyman says

By JOE KIRBY State News Staff Writer

There were some worried mothers last fall when 41 Michigan dairy herds ate contaminated feed, but nature's favorite fluid is still safe for all those growing kids, according to the experts.

Charles Lassiter, chairman of the MSU Dairy Dept., said there is no contaminated milk on the market and there probably never will be.

"It's almost impossible for there to be any contaminated milk on the market," Lassiter said, referring to the safeguards used in milk processing.

The Michigan lottery almost came to MSU.

of Agriculture and careful records are kept on vaccinations and blood tests. Milking equipment and storage tanks on the farm are checked by state inspectors for cleanliness as are the trucks that haul the milk and the plants where it is processed. The milk itself is checked for nutritional quality and possible contamination at both the farm and plant level.

Even if some contaminated milk did slip through this screening process, Lassiter said, the "dilution factor" would discount the possibility of human poisoning.

The "dilution factor" means that such large quantities of milk are mixed together that any potentially harmful milk would be diluted to such a point that it would not cause any problems.

The fact that no milk from the contaminated herds found its way into the milk supply points out how well the system does work, Lassiter said.

"I think it's been a darn good example of the safeguards of the fluid milk supply," Lassiter said.

The original contamination problem occurred when an employe in a mill mistakenly added a chemical compound to the cattle feed because the bags looked similar.

"But I think the Dept. of Agriculture will be checking for these compounds more often now," Lassiter said.
