Prosecutor plans to prove Nixon involved

WASHINGTON (AP) - Asst. Special Prosecutor Richard Ben-Veniste laid out his case against the five defendants Monday, saying he will prove "a conspiracy that involved the participation of even the President himself."

More than a year, the prosecutor said, the defendants illegally tried to cover up the original Watergate burglars "off on a lark of their own."

Veniste, a 31-year-old attorney from New York, spoke in simple sentences from a lectern only feet from the jury box.

The courtroom jammed with reporters, 35 spectators and some family members of the defendants, Ben-Veniste told the now familiar story of the burglary and bugging of Democratic national offices, were met by an effort to cover up the facts and obstruct the investigation by the most powerful men in the government of the United States in a conspiracy that involved the participation of even the President himself," Ben-Veniste said.

On the trial's 10th day, Ben-Veniste's opening statement was delayed for nearly two hours because a juror, Lucille Plunkett, asked to be excused, saying she did not understand what sequestration meant.

The jurors are living in a motel about two miles from the U.S. District for the duration of the trial and are not permitted to travel to their homes or jobs.

Plunkett was allowed to leave by U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica and was replaced by another woman, Helen D. Pratt.

In the opening statement, Ben-Veniste said whenever Watergate investigators appeared to be getting near one of the defendants the defendant would be given assurances that his fellow conspirators would help him if he kept the investigation from going any higher. The prosecutor said even former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell was promised White House help for not telling Watergate prosecutors all he knew.

Ben-Veniste did not elaborate.

The prosecutor said that a major element in the coverup conspiracy was an attempt not only to cut off an FBI investigation, but to attempt to find what persons FBI agents were planning to interview. The conspirators, Ben-Veniste said, constantly tried "to stay one jump ahead of the investigation."

Ben-Veniste cautioned the jury about the hundreds of hours of White House tape recordings to be admitted as evidence. Saying many of the tapes are hard to hear, the prosecutor also warned, "The language used is sometimes vulgar and coarse."

He said the jury should accept that men in high office use obscenities and not allow that to distract them from the substance of the conversations.

In listening to tapes of the later days of the coverup, Ben-Veniste said the jury must be wary because some of the coverup participants spoke of "a scenario" that planned to testify about rather than actual events.

Sex discrimination law confounds MSU officials

By PETE DALY
State News Staff Writer

Guidelines detailing the application of a new law prohibiting sexual discrimination in higher education are creating more confusion than understanding.

MSU administrators do not like the law as they are now written and said so in a report sent to the federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare on Monday.

HEW, which drew up the guidelines for application of Title IX, had invited comment on them by all interested persons and organizations by Oct. 15. The guidelines were released in MSU administrators do not like the law, they say, because they are filled with contradictions, incongruities and uninterpreted clauses. Their criticisms are contained in a report sent Monday.

Title IX of the Education Amendment of 1972 prohibits, with a few certain exceptions, sex discrimination in education programs or activities which receive federal financial assistance.

The law would cover three major areas: admissions, treatment of students and employment. Virtually all public schools in the country, as well as 2,500 institutions of higher education currently receiving federal funds, would be affected by Title IX.

HEW has asked all interested citizens and organizations to comment on the proposed regulations by Oct. 15, when they will review the comments and "make any indicated changes." After approval by President Ford, the regulations become effective 30 days following publication in the final form.

Administrators at MSU are most concerned with "contradictions" within the guidelines, especially relative to remedial action to eliminate discrimination and affirmative action.

Some paragraphs in the guidelines require remedial action where there has

"It seems like it is written by a little old lady from a small Eastern college who wants to see women guaranteed four badminton scholarships each year." - Earl J. Fretz, MSU asst. professor of business law been previous discrimination or indications of such.

However, the MSU report says the language of Title IX provides that "nothing contained (in the act) shall be interpreted to require any educational institution to grant preferential or disparate treatment to the members of one sex on account of an imbalance."

Some people are wondering how the law can thus recommend or require affirmative action - preferential treatment of one group over another because of past injustices - and at the same time, in other clauses, guarantee that such moves not be taken at any time by anyone.

MSU's report suggests that the affirmative action law "be rewritten to remove the apparent inconsistencies with the language of the statute."

The biggest questions are being asked by persons in athletic departments, special programs for women only and student housing offices both on campus and off.

Stiff opposition to the law by the National Collegiate Athletics Assn. (NCAA) and athletic departments at many schools centered on its applicability to varsity and "revenue earning" sports, such as football.

Some athletic departments fear that funding of a women's football team - comparable to the men's team - would be a financial burden damaging to the entire department.

Earl J. Fretz, MSU assistant professor in business law, worked with Neil Jackson, asst. director of women's athletics, on the legal impact of the law on women in athletics at MSU.

"As the law is written it would certainly appear to include revenue earning sports," Fretz said. "The recently published guidelines for Title IX say the law means what it says."

A clincher in the law that athletic administrators are mulling over is the clause requiring an annual poll or survey to determine in which sports students of each sex would like to compete.

The report said such a requirement does not illuminate what degree of interest is necessary to support a particular sport: "It makes it difficult to differentiate between those who really want to compete and those who may wish to observe, and the annual stipulation fails to recognize

President Ford vetoes legislation to cut off U.S. military aid to Turkey during a White House signing ceremony Monday.

Ford vetoes Turkish aid

WASHINGTON (AP) - In his first major confrontation with Congress, President Ford vetoed a measure Monday to cut off U.S. arms aid to Turkey, declaring the ban would dash hopes for a Cyprus peace settlement.

House leaders arranged a vote today on a move to override the veto. The measure had been enacted by a lopsided vote, but Democratic leaders acknowledged chances of overriding the President's action were slim. A two-thirds vote is necessary to override a veto.

The Turkish aid cutoff amendment was attached to a resolution continuing the funding of such major government operations as foreign aid, health and housing programs, while Congress decides on the agencies' annual appropriations.

The amendment would cut off U.S. aid to Turkey until Ford can certify substantial progress toward a settlement on reduction or withdrawal of Turkish troops from Cyprus. The President also would have to certify that the invasion of Cyprus did not violate U.S. foreign aid laws.

Because of the threatened veto, Congress delayed the scheduled start Friday of its month-long recess. Unless the dispute is settled, some government agencies could be without funds to meet their payrolls Nov. 1.

It was Ford's sixth veto since assuming the presidency Aug. 9, but the first on major legislation.

In a written message to the House, the President declared that if the measure became law "we would inevitably be forced from the (Cyprus) negotiations because the Congress would have taken from us the tools we need to affect the outcome."

He added that the amendment would "imperil our relationships with our Turkish ally and weaken us in the curial eastern Mediterranean. It directly jeopardizes the NATO alliance."

In a separate statement he read for television cameras and radio microphones, Ford said he vetoed the resolution "in the interest of preserving the ability of the United States to assist the governments of Greece, Turkey and Cyprus to negotiate a peaceful settlement."

Ford said the amendment "in no way helps the Greek people or the people of Cyprus who have suffered so much in the past month. In fact, by dashing hopes for negotiations, it prolongs their suffering."

"I ask that the Congress...send to me a bill that we can all support; a bill that provides the flexibility needed to carry forward the foreign policy of the United States," he said.

Last Thursday, in a Detroit speech, Ford pleaded with the House to delay the effective date of the Turkish aid cutoff for 60 days. But the House rejected the delay by a vote of 187-171.

This vote was much closer than the 291-69 margin by which the House rejected a conference committee's compromise on the issue. The senate has accepted the proposal by a 40 to 35 vote. Despite the lopsided margin, even Democratic leaders questioned whether the House would vote to override Ford's veto. And in the Senate, Republican leader Hugh Scott has predicted the Ford action would be sustained if the House voted to override.

Rocky OK moves slowly

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) - Disclosures about Nelson A. Rockefeller's political philanthropy have created a dilemma for congressional Democrats - if they approve him for vice president in 1974, can they criticize his ethics in the 1976 campaign?

It is another reason why most congressional observers now expect the House and Senate to move very slowly on the Rockefeller nomination, perhaps putting off final action until after the new Congress meets in January.

Democratic leaders want to make sure they have fully checked the former New York governor's background before giving him what amounts to a congressional "Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval."

Sen. Howard W. Cannon, D-Nev., indicated Sunday that the Senate Rules Committee probably will recall Rockefeller for further questioning.

And the House Judiciary Committee, which is believed conducting a more extensive background probe of Rockefeller than the Senate panel, has not even set hearing dates yet.

The impact of the unique congressional screening process introduced by the 25th Amendment was demonstrated earlier this year when President Ford was out on the political hustings as the newly confirmed vice president.

Speakers repeatedly noted that he had undergone closer scrutiny than any president or vice president in the nation's history and had come through it without a blemish.

In Ford's case there was little in his background that gave Congress much pause. Most votes against him were founded in disagreement with his views, or a belief he would prove inadequate as president.

Analysis

In the Rockefeller case, however, serious ethical questions have arisen tending to mar the "clean" image Rockefeller had when he was nominated.

These include the disclosures that he gave nearly $1.8 million in gifts to present and former aides, reports that the Rockefeller fortune was used to underwrite other ventures such as a newspaper once run by columnist Tom Braden and Rockefeller's admission that his brother financed a 1970 campaign book attacking Arthur Goldberg, his opponent that year for governor.

Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., a Rules Committee member, said Monday that the panel should hear from Goldberg and the recipients of the gifts as part of its reopened hearings.

And the House panel will doubtlessly go into these matters in detail. Some liberals on the latter panel, such as Rep. Robert Drinan, D-Mass., have talked of asking Ford to withdraw the Rockefeller nomination, but it is unclear so far how much trouble it is really in.

Both Cannon and Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said Sunday they would probably still vote for Rockefeller, barring further embarrassing disclosures.

And the likely negative vote so far appears confined to the far left, Drinan and other outspoken liberals, and the far right, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and other strong conservatives.

But Rockefeller's opponents may be helped by the growing impact of the morality-type political issues in the Watergate aftermath.

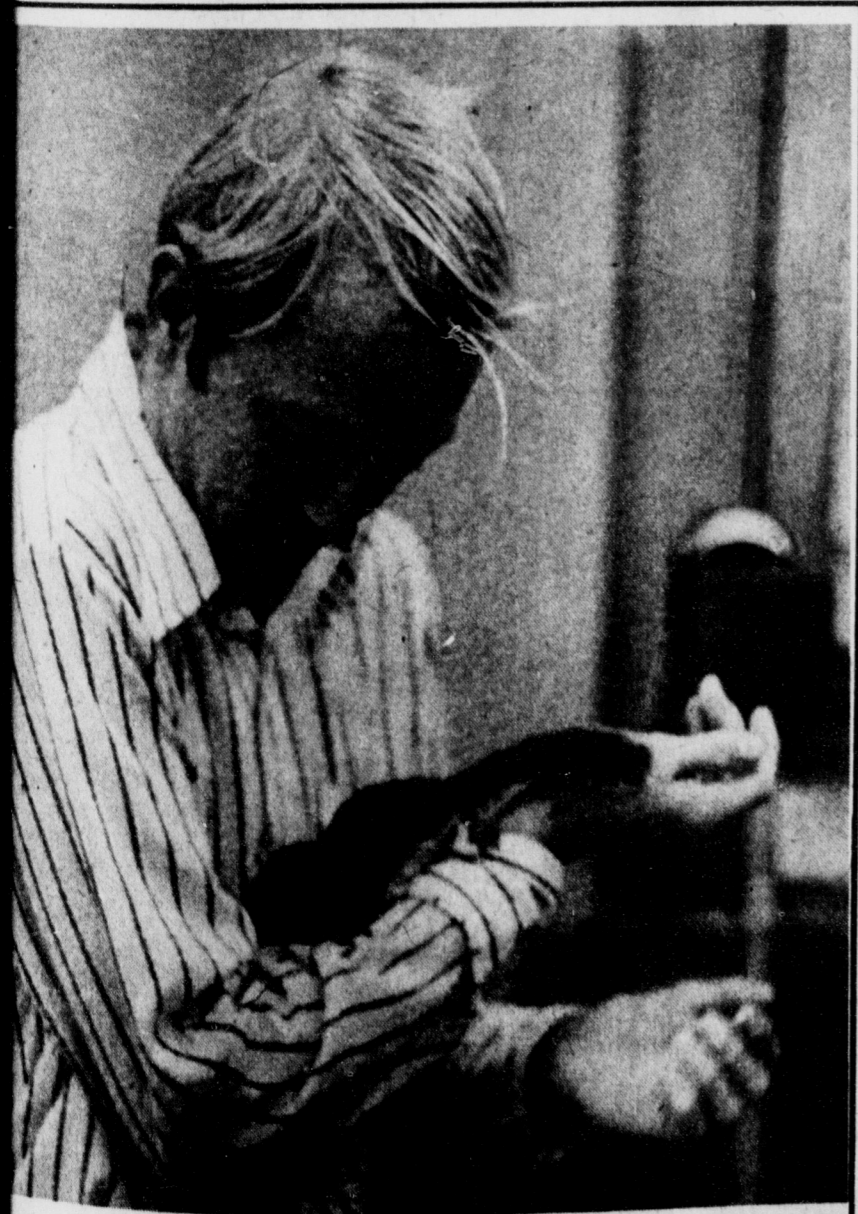

A number of candidates in next month's elections are running "Mr. Clean" campaigns, attacking "politics as usual."

Their showing may indicate how much mileage there is in the morality issue.

Especially if many of them win, the Democrats are likely to make a big point in 1976 of the Republican administration's scandals.

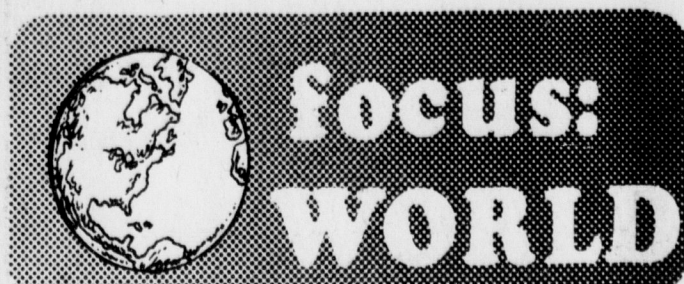

In a morality-based campaign, the vice president designate's background could be a GOP liability.

But a confirmed Nelson Rockefeller would be able to say, with some justification, that he had been examined and cleared by the Democrats who run Congress.

This baby red squirrel apparently mistook Mike Watters' leather gloves for his mother Monday morning in the woodlot between Demonstration Hall and the ice arena. Watters, a senior majoring in zoology, says he first saw the critter "running as fast as he could after a guy with leather boots." Shortly after the squirrel hopped on that unidentified person's pantleg, Watters came to the rescue - much to the delight of the squirrel, who decided that Watters' gloves, sleeves and pockets were as warm and loving as mother.

Cyprus POW trade to resume

Greek and Turkish Cypriot leaders agreed Monday to resume the interrupted exchange of prisoners of war and detainees on Friday, following a three-week delay.

The agreement was reached during the weekly meeting of acting President Glafkos Clerides and Turkish Cypriot leader and vice president Rauf Denktaş.

The exchange of POWs ended abruptly Sept. 26 after the release of 1,946 of the 5,298 prisoners held at the end of the fighting.

Denktaş told newsmen the interruption was due to technical difficulties connected with the return to the island of Greek Cypriot POWs held in camps on the Turkish mainland.

Wilson calls for national unity

Prime Minister Harold Wilson appealed Monday for a partnership between his newly re-elected Labor government and the "whole of our national family" to meet what he called Britain's gravest economic crisis since World War II.

The primary enemy, he said in a television broadcast to the nation, is rising prices.

Wilson told the British people he could promise no improvement in the country's standard of living "over the next two years or more."

Italian to form new government

Amintore Fanfani, a staunch anti-Communist Catholic leader, got the nod Monday to form a new government to try to bail Italy out of its political and economic crisis without Communist participation.

President Giovanni Leone called on the 66-year-old Fanfani, a four-time ex-premier and secretary general of the dominant Christian Democratic party, after 11 days of uncertainty about Italy's political course.

Premier Mariano Rumor resigned Oct. 3, creating a vacuum that many Italians speculated could only be filled by bringing Italy's big Communist party into the government.

Shah moves to revive oil plan

The Shah of Iran is pressing in international circles for a revival of his eight-month-old proposal for the creation of a development fund of several billion dollars to ease the problems of poorer countries caused by high oil prices.

The proposal has been largely ignored since Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi made it in February after having conferred with international banking and monetary officials.

The Shah's idea calls for oil-producing countries and their major customer nations to provide the money as loans in cooperation with the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and the International Monetary Fund.

2 Americans freed from sub

Two Americans were rescued from the bottom of the North Sea off Scotland on Monday after being trapped for six hours in a 20-foot midge submarine that got tangled in an anchor rope.

The Americans, identified as Gilbert Blevins and Leslie Lynch, were securing an oil rig anchor rope when the minisub's propellers became ensnared 275 feet below the surface.

Two divers struggled for 20 minutes to free the 10-ton minisub, which then rose to the surface under its own power.

The Americans, working for a British subsidiary of an American petroleum firm, were trapped inside the 20-foot craft with about a 40-hour life support system.

Book compared to Watergate

Former Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg on Monday compared Nelson Rockefeller's admission of responsibility for a derogatory book about Goldberg to former President Richard M. Nixon's acceptance of responsibility for Watergate.

The book, by Victor Lasky, was written in 1970, when Goldberg was Rockefeller's opponent for the New York governorship. Laurence Rockefeller put up $60,000 to finance the book.

Goldberg said Rockefeller's apology about the book was "very reminiscent of another statement" in which Nixon once said he would take "full responsibility for the Watergate affair."

He would gladly testify, Goldberg said, if the Senate hearing on Rockefeller's vice presidential nomination were reopened.

Cabinet members may face ax

President Ford will begin making changes in the cabinet after the Nov. 5 congressional election, according to his close associates.

Though Ford has not yet made firm decisions on who will be leaving his administration, the associates said, there are four cabinet members who are expected to depart by early next year: Roy Ash, Director of the Office of Management and Budget; Peter Brennan, Secretary of Labor; Caspar Weinberger, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare; and Claude Brinegar, Secretary of Transportation.

Palestinians to join UN debate

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) which coordinates the activities of Arab guerrilla groups, won an overwhelming vote Monday to take part in the debate on Palestine by the UN General Assembly.

The assembly voted 105-4 with 20 abstentions to invite the PLO to take part in the coming debate as "the representative of the Palestinian people."

Only Israel, the United States, Bolivia and the Dominican Republic voted against the resolution tendering the invitation.

The United States said before the vote it "presents some very serious problems."

Arab sources said PLO chief Yasir Arafat would be joined by many Arab foreign ministers at the Palestinian debate, expected to begin Nov. 7 and last about two weeks.

Jordan voted for the resolution but was not among the 71 sponsors, most of which were Communist or Third World countries. King Hussein has declined to recognize the PLO as representative of Palestinians under Jordanian jurisdiction, though he recognizes its authority elsewhere.

The resolution was formally introduced Monday by Syrian Ambassador Haisam Kelani, who said the PLO was entitled to the invitation since it had been recognized by over 90 countries and had taken part in several international conferences.

But Israeli Ambassador Yosef Tekoah said, "It represents only itself, namely the approximately 10,000 murderers trained and paid for the slaughter of innocent human beings."

The PLO, he declared, "did not emerge from within the Palestinian community" but was established by the first Arab summit conference in Cairo in January 1964, as a cover for terror.

No nationalist movement such as the PLO has ever been heard in the assembly itself, though several of them, including the PLO, have been heard in assembly committees.

In Budapest, Hungary, Arafat said the ultimate goal of his movement is "a democratic state of Palestine where Muslims, Jews and Christians can live together in peace." He did not disclose details about the boundaries of such a Palestinian state.

Arafat said he rejected hijackings by Palestinian commandos. He said the PLO would set up a permanent mission in Budapest. The group maintains a bureau in Moscow and has representative in Bucharest, Romania.

Bomb rips Tokyo offices

TOKYO (AP) — A bomb exploded Monday in the offices of the giant trading firm, Mitsui and Co., injuring 16 persons, including five policemen who had been alerted by telephoned threats and were searching for the device.

It was the second big Japanese corporation to be bombed in six weeks. On Aug. 30 an explosion in front of Mitsubishi Heavy Industries Ltd. offices killed eight persons and injured more than 300.

The Mitsui blast occurred on the third floor in the eight-story office building in downtown Tokyo, 25 minutes after an anonymous caller phoned four different Mitsui departments at three-minute intervals, saying "A bomb has been placed in the building. Evacuate it."

A warning was broadcast over a public address system after the first threat was received, and most of the firm's 6,000 employees were led out of the building to safety before the explosion. The others were led out moments later.

One of the injured was reported in serious condition. Damage was confined mostly to the area of the explosion. Police said cars parked on the street were damaged by flying glass.

Mitsui is one of Japan's two largest general trading firms, with interests in metals, machinery, chemicals, foodstuffs, textiles and other products.

Both the Mitsui and the Mitsubishi buildings are within several blocks of the outer grounds of the moated palace where Emperor Hirohito lives.

There was no immediate link between the two blasts. Police said they never had heard of the organization mentioned by the man who telephoned the warnings — the "Organization for Development of the Asian Continent."

Responsibility for the Mitsubishi bombing was claimed by a group which identified itself as "The Wolf" and said the action was aimed at "Japanese imperialists that feed on the flesh of the dead behind the mask of commerce."

The Mitsubishi blast led to fears Japanese radicals were making big business their target. In recent years, Japanese radical groups generally have been more active in carrying out terrorism outside Japan. They also had been splintered by disputes over leadership and driven underground in battles with riot police.

Hutchison shrugs off kidnapping; will return to Dominican Republic

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — American diplomat Barbara Hutchison arrived in the United States Monday, saying she has no qualms about returning next week to her job in the Dominican Republic, where she was held captive by pro-Communist kidnapers for 12 days.

"Oh, I have no anxiety about going back," said the tall, thin and freckled Hutchison, 47. She will first spend a 10-day vacation in Florida.

"It was sort of a fluke type of kidnapping anyway, and I get the choice of going back there or somewhere else. But I love the country and there are many things I still plan to do there."

The veteran foreign service officer said her only worry was that the U.S. embassy would assign a bodyguard to her. "I sure wouldn't want that," she said with a smile.

Hutchison, embassy public affairs officer and director of the U.S. Information Service in the Dominican capital of Santo Domingo, was abducted from in front of her office by seven leftist rebels Sept. 27.

She and six other persons were held in the Venezuelan consulate before being released last Wednesday when the rebels accepted political asylum in Panama in return for their hostages' freedom.

Hutchison praised Dominican President Joaquin Balaguer for his tough stance against the rebels. Balaguer refused the kidnapers' demands for ransom payments and the release of 37 political prisoners.

She said Balaguer had proved that the government "would not give in to such people" as kidnap leader Radhames Mender Vargas. She said she did not consider political kidnappings a danger any longer in that Caribbean country.

About her ordeal, Hutchison said, "We weren't worried about being shot, we were scared about the dynamite," which the kidnapers had inside the consulate building.

Asked how she felt toward her jailers, Hutchison said: "Well, they are people that already have been punished for other crimes, and inevitably they will be punished again."

She praised Panama for accepting the rebels after Mexico and Peru said they could not do so. "If Panama had not volunteered, might still be there," she said.

Sadat to attempt Arab agreement

By Associated Press

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat assured Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger on Monday that he will try to gain support for interim agreements with Israel at the upcoming Arab summit.

Kissinger obtained the pledge at Sadat's residence outside Cairo, flew to Damascus for a tough three-hour session with Syrian President Hafez Assad, then went on to Algeria.

Syrian sources said Assad insisted on a Geneva peace conference, which Kissinger now opposes, and an Israeli commitment for complete withdrawal from occupied Arab territories, in particular the Syrian Golan Heights which Israel has said cannot revert to Syrian control.

They said Assad also threatened to refuse to renew the mandate of the United Nations observer force in the Golan Heights on Dec. 1 unless Syria gets substantial signs its demands will be accepted.

Asked whether Egypt was prepared to offer guarantees to Israel in return for a withdrawal from Sinai, Sadat replied, "Why am I asked about guarantees? I myself, I need guarantees."

But he agreed to take the initiative at the Arab summit and said he was "very optimistic" about the session in Rabat, Morocco, on Oct. 26.

The West German news magazine Der Spiegel quoted Sadat as saying he would be ready to sign a peace agreement if Israel pulls back from territories occupied during the 1967 war.

Kissinger also announced he would return to the Middle East the first week of November, following visits to Russia for nuclear arms talks and the Indian subcontinent.

As he spoke, a high level Egyptian delegation arrived in Moscow for talks on improving ties with Russia, arranging a visit to Cairo by Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev, and working out new arms deals.

Russia practically stopped all arms shipments to Egypt after Egypt backed U.S. diplomatic initiatives to end last October's Middle East war.

In Jerusalem, sirens went off to mark the first anniversary of the end of last October's war, and former Defense Minister Moshe Dayan signed a petition circulated by the right-wing Likud bloc opposing Israeli withdrawal from occupied Jordan. Dayan's move raised speculation he would quit the ruling Labor party and join Likud.

Student Workers Union to seek support of RHA

By ROSANNE LESS
State News Staff Writer

Tim Cain, leading Student Workers Union spokesman and president of ASMUSU, said Sunday that the fledgling union must organize fully at the local level within the next week. Only about 19 people attended the first weekly organizational meeting.

"Sooner better than later," Cain said, setting the deadline for tentative union organization campaigns in residence halls.

Cain also said that a committee of union representatives will go to the Residence Halls Association (RHA) Wednesday and ask for a resolution of general support. The union representatives will also ask RHA for permission to organize meetings within residence halls, to approve mailbox distributions and to place union organizing tables outside cafeteria lines in residence halls.

"A resolution would be nice to get," Cain said. "Going to RHA is just really protocol, but a lack of it can get you in trouble."

RHA approval is needed for any activity a registered student organization wants to conduct within a residence hall. Cain pointed out that even if RHA does not move to support the Student Workers Union, the residence hall group would still have to approve the other planned activities.

"Management can't say we are violating any policies with authority from RHA," he continued.

During registration week, the Student Workers Union had charged the Brody complex management with tearing down posters and leaflets.

Thomas Dutch, speaking in behalf of Brody management, maintained that the union people did not get necessary permission from the advisory staff of Bailey Hall to put up posters.

Cain called the University "ridiculous" in stating that if the demands of the proposed union are met, room board fees would necessarily rise.

He pointed out that management is saying only people living in residence halls would be paying any increased costs that might be incurred by the existence of a student union. Cain said he thought all students would share in paying any increased costs, but added that the argument itself is not a sound one and just another scare tactic of management.

When nonstudent, union personnel get raises, there is no increase in overall student fees, Cain said. The same would apply to any student union, he added.

"Instead of us trying to justify ourselves to the University, the University should justify itself to us," Jeff Roby, MSU clerical-technical worker said.

Roby called for a release of the University budget, with explicit expense accounting, such as details on salaries and expenditures.

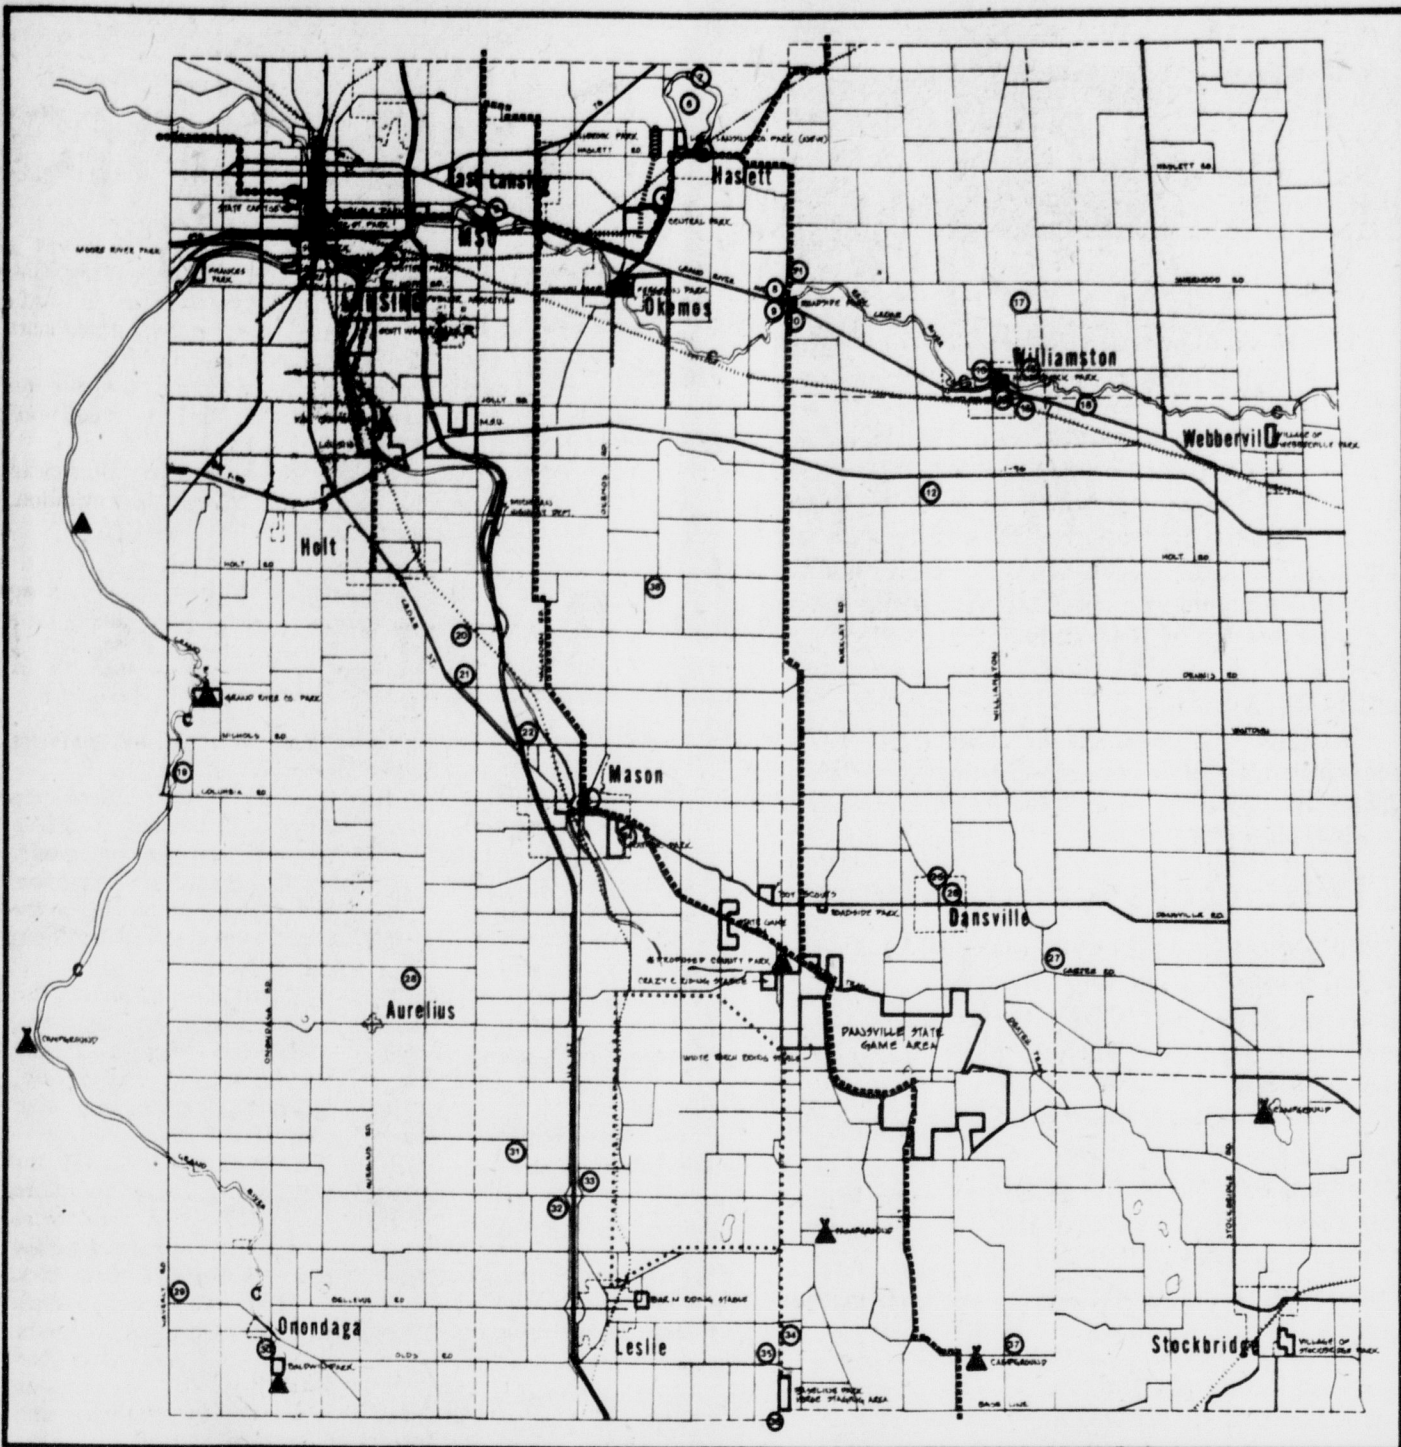

Jack Breslin, executive vice president, said that the University budget is a public record, but that such specific expenditures are not recorded because that is not common business practice.

Roby charged that the University is trying to set students against students, and predicted that the next ploy of the University will be the threat that work-study programs will be cut if the Student Workers Union succeeds.

Also at the meeting, the Waste of Money Research Committee was established to check into the overall University budget and to dig up those itemizations that are not part of the University's public record.

Cain predicted the Kellogg Center would be the first fully organized unit on campus, with at least 90 per cent of all possible signatures obtained, by the end of this week. Initial unionizing efforts began at Kellogg in November 1972. At that time it took only three days to get 65 per cent of all employee signatures.

Cain emphasized that signing a union authorization card is not a commitment to the possible union, but only a method of putting the issue to a formal vote. He said that over 500 cards have already been returned. At least 2,100 are needed to petition for an election.

The above map shows the network of a proposed nonmotorized transportation plan for Ingham County. Included in the plan are bicycle and hiking trails, horse riding trails, canoe routes and landing sites and places of historical interest. The plan was formulated by the county's Non-Motorized Transportation Advisory Group, with the help of a series of public hearings on the group's proposals. The final recommendation now goes to the county's board of commissioners for funding considerations.

Commission to contest city hiring plan tonight

The East Lansing City Council will meet at 8 tonight and will hear from the Human Relations Commission that the city's recently adopted affirmative action plan is unsatisfactory.

The commission is upset that it did not see the city's minority hiring plan before it was adopted and has established a subcommittee to formulate recommendations for council.

There will also be a public hearing on the rezoning of some land to build a parking lot for the Abbott Road post office.

At the Oct. 1 meeting council urged all interested citizens to let council know how they feel about the rezoning.

Council will also listen to reactions to the proposed bike ordinance which will deal with licensing, sale and use of bicycles. The ordinance was introduced at the last meeting.

The Hagadorn Road Improvement Committee will submit a letter containing suggested improvements on Hagadorn Road between I-69 and Lake Lansing Road.

Mayor Wilbur Brookover will appoint a new member to the Commission for the Aging.

The fate of the log cabin in Alton Park will probably be decided tonight when the city manager reports on the bids for either demolition or removal of the building.

Police link youth, booze to fatalities

By STEVE ORR
State News Staff Writer

A Michigan State Police report on alcohol-related traffic fatalities shows that while drivers between the ages of 16 and 25 constitute only 25 per cent of all licensed drivers in Michigan, they make up 42 per cent of the drinking drivers involved in fatal accidents.

The report also shows that 47.5 per cent of fatal accidents involve persons with a blood alcohol concentration (BAC) less than one one-hundredth of the victim's body weight. That figure is considered to be the level at which persons are presumed to be under the influence of alcohol while driving a vehicle, according to the state motor vehicle code.

More than half the fatalities among the 18 to 24 group—44 of 85—were among persons whose BAC was below the minimum level. The percentage decreases among older age groups.

Allen Rice, executive director of the Michigan Council on Alcohol Problems, tried to explain the phenomenon.

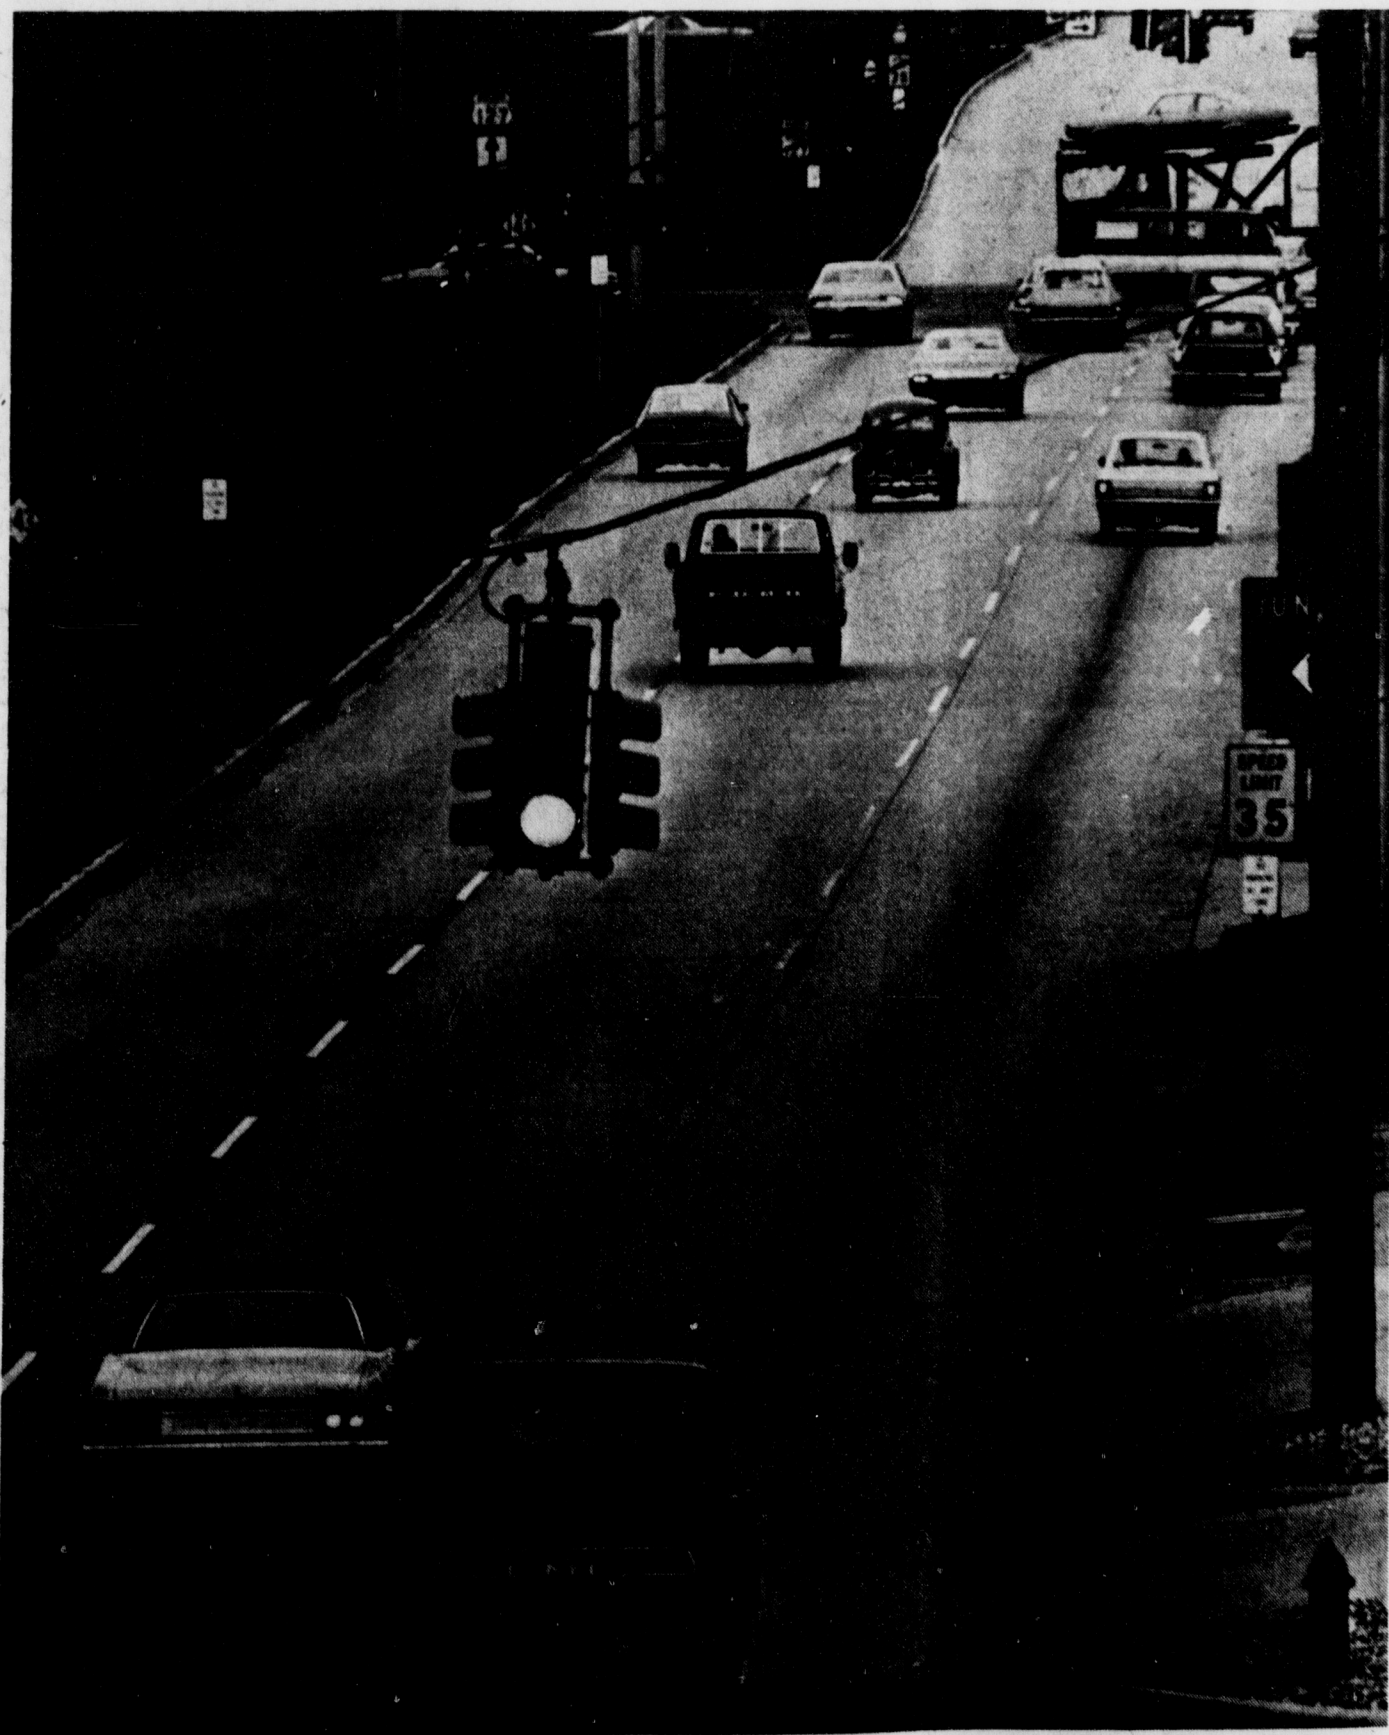

He said it was a simple matter of experience. "In the brain things are done automatically," Rice said. "There are motor responses, and the more frequently these motor responses take place, the more a pattern is established."

"Until these patterns of response become automatic, driving will be more impaired. Young people are just less experienced, and these motor patterns are not yet established."

Consequently, Rice said, young people must rely less on the automatic functions and must make conscious decisions. And this, he said, is something most people just cannot do when drunk.

Rice also said inexperience plays another role in that older people who have been more while drunk know what to expect. Young people, he said, do not know from their own experience to look out for things like the tunnel vision or darkening of vision that he said come with drinking and driving.

The report also indicated nearly 60 per cent of all fatal accidents in which drunkenness was involved took place between the hours of 9 p.m. and 3 a.m.

Drunk drivers on Michigan highways have always been a threat to the safety of other drivers. The Michigan State Police reports that almost half of the fatal accidents related to alcohol involve drivers between the ages of 16 and 25.

Unit readies transit plan

By RALPH FRAMMOLINO
State News Staff Writer

A nonmotorized transportation plan is being readied for county approval following the last of seven public hearings.

The Ingham County Non-Motorized Transportation Advisory Group, now considering public suggestions, will present its plan sometime in November.

The four year plan, costing between $250,000 and $300,000 per year from 1974 - 77, would provide a network of dirt and paved bicycle, hiking, horseriding and skiing paths, plus water accessibility for canoeing. The breakdown per mile for various types of routes would be: $465 for marking bike routes with signs, $545 for stripe bike lanes, $20,126 plus land acquisition for bike trails; $625 plus land acquisition for equestrian trails, and $425 plus land acquisition for hiking paths. All figures except land acquisition include signing, stripping, clearing pavement and base.

William Brehm, planning consultant for the group, said these figures are probably inaccurate since the cost was estimated before the current building year. He said, however, the group used them to get some kind of idea of the expense of the project.

"We used these prices to at least give us a ball-park figure," he said.

Funding of $285,000 for 1974 has been approved by federal, state and county road commissions, but it is still being processed, which will delay building for this year.

The nonmotorized routes under consideration would provide extensive networks under county, local and urban jurisdiction. The importance for all levels of government to coordinate their efforts was brought out by the group.

"We need to get some system and county continuity," John Czarnecki, group chairman and East Lansing planning commission member said.

The group was formed when the county was deciding how to spend its revenue - sharing money. The need of nonmotorized transportation routes came to attention.

"I saw a very urgent need for a nonmotorized transportation system. Bikers, skiers, hikers, etc., all wanted better facilities," Ingham County Commissioner, John Veenstra, D-East Lansing said. Veenstra, the only elected official in the group, sits in but does not vote.

"It is to our credit that we saw this need before the energy crisis hit," he said.

Before coming up with a plan, the group studied the economic, environmental, and social impact that nonmotorized transportation would have.

The group defined economic impact as "... the advantages of all types of benefits over all types of cost." The plan would provide for an increase in employment and sales of construction materials. According to the plan, more jobs would be created in the municipal agencies for supervision, maintenance and operation of these routes.

The environmental impact of the plan, as researched by the advisory group, considered landscape, man made and natural drainage, vegetation, wildlife, and noise reduction.

The group also studied such factors as average traffic speeds, traffic flow and the design of nonmotorized route crossings at intersections.

The group believes its plan would combine access to interesting spots of Ingham County, safety features and access to businesses, shopping centers and schools. Two MSU students, Jean Berry and Pat Cornelisse, assisted in the planning as a senior project in landscape architecture.

One of the first steps in implementing a nonmotorized transportation plan would be public education programs in safety and public distribution of maps and pamphlets the group said.

Concern evinced by the public at the hearings included maintenance of the routes, erosion of dirt paths, the sharing of hiking and equestrian trails and dog menaces. One petition submitted by 150 elderly residents of the Grange Acres housing complex asked that a three-block bicycle path be installed from the Meridian Mall to the complex.

After going to the county commissioners, the advisory group will present its plan to local governmental units, who will be free to accept or reject it.

MSU is such a governmental unit.

At least one municipality, Meridian Township, is considering a .33 mill proposal to help fund the nonmotorized transportation plan. MSU students in the east side of Akers Hall, most of Hubbard Hall and the south sides of Homes and McDonell halls are eligible to vote on the proposal.

Father Lally said it is his intention "to bring about a deeper awareness to the urgency of the struggling United Farm Workers (UFW)."

"The UFW has been struggling against almost unbelievable odds, especially since the Teamsters Union signed 'sweetheart' contracts with some of the growers in California and thus denied the farm workers to choose their own union," he said.

GRAND RAPIDS (UPI) — The Rev. Joachim Lally began the fifth week of a hunger strike Monday 16 pounds lighter, and said he has no intention of giving up his fast.

Father Lally, 31, is a member of the Paulist Fathers at the Catholic information center here.

His diet consists of just water and fruit juices — a protest of the sale of nonunion, harvested head lettuce and grapes.

EDITORIALS Build PAC by Owen

In recent years the esthetics of new construction at MSU apparently has held low priority. The University has raised dorms that look like hospitals and an ice arena that resembles an oversized hat box.

But with the Performing Arts Center, set to be done by January 1979, the choice seems clear. The fields south of Owen Hall offer not only the wide open space that a $16 million structure needs to show itself off, but has other clear advantages over the five alternative sites considered.

This area is close to trees and green grass. It is not cluttered by other buildings which, at least in part, would set the center's design. It is close to students, both where they live and attend class. It is easily accessible to the public by roads designed to carry heavy traffic smoothly. Demolition costs would be almost nil and added noise minimal.

Most important, the architects themselves, who have built performing arts centers around the country, feel that the Owen Hall site would allow them the greatest freedom of design, while meeting the objectives outlined months ago by the Performing Arts Committee.

The Building, Lands and Planning Committee's recommendation of the quonset hut site near the Kalamazoo Street entrance is designed to extort an eventual completion of the age old bridge project plans. Current road capacities on that side of campus are too low to make access easy if the area is bloated with crowd-drawing buildings. Demolition costs there would also be exorbitant, according to the architects, and traffic jams and parking hassles with athletic fans would inevitably occur.

President Wharton should not hesitate to approve the Owen Hall site — the most cost-efficient and people-efficient location.

IM space squeeze sad

In a regrettable move last week, Frank Beeman, director of intramural sports, closed both IM buildings to all but students. He meant to eliminate overcrowding. No doubt he has.

But victory over the locker room crush is certainly no reason to rejoice. Beeman has been forced to substitute one evil for another. Two popular MSU landmarks are now barred to much of their clientele. Since the student body has obviously outgrown the IM facilities, however, a drastic short-term solution was needed.

Meanwhile, floundering somewhere in the administration's bureaucratic maze, a proposal to build a much needed IM building on the east campus awaits consideration. If the new building is approved and built, the doors of the other two IM buildings might very well be reopened.

The future of the new East IM should be decided immediately. Trustees and VPs should consider the decision top priority. Will another IM be erected? Or will officials stall until future overcrowding crises force them to limit intramural access even to students?

A gymnasium is not the sort of place to feature iron doors. A cyclotron, maybe. But not a gym.

Health priorities set?

The University Health Center does not have the budget to support a team of specialists. So the fact that the center does not employ a gynecologist is not primarily a sexist policy.

But considering the number of women who visit the health center for gynecologist services, the hiring of at least one practicing gynecologist would certainly be in order.

Presently, health center doctors are qualified enough to handle routine gynecological problems, just like any general practitioner. If there are complications, however, the doctor refers the patient to a qualified specialist.

It is unfair to chastise the health center for deficiencies it is not budgeted to correct. No one claims it is a fully equipped medical center like the kind seen on TV, even if it should be.

The fact remains that if students want more extensive medical care, they must expect to pay higher fees. Meanwhile, administrators should take a campus-wide survey as soon as possible to ascertain the students' priorities on this and other questions. With building proposals flying like hail, it is high time administrators went beyond small advisory boards for student input.

'Night owls' haunt Cowles House

The on-campus location of the University president's house insures that the top MSU administrator will be, at least symbolically, in close touch with the everyday life of the campus community. However, President Wharton has found himself almost too close for comfort recently. In addition to last week's publicized night-time visits to Cowles House by representatives of a special interest group and freezing concert enthusiasts, Wharton also has been awakened on occasion by late night wanderers pounding around the house during their drunken revels.

Since Wharton begins his day at 5:30 a.m., late night visits not only indicate a lack of the maturity and respect taken for granted by University planners in establishing an on-campus residence for the president, but also unnecessarily burden Wharton with a loss of sleep as he prepares to begin another day of administering.

Besides remembering that Wharton retires early and needs his sleep, the University community can take two other steps to prevent a repetition of last week's incidents. First, individuals or groups interested in meeting with Wharton should either make an appointment or buttonhole him during the daylight hours.

Creation of a Night Ombudsman's Office should also be studied. Campus residents should have someone to turn to when a problem that "must be solved now" arises between 5 p.m. and 9 a.m.

GOP needs economic cure

In the last few days, President Ford has been out campaigning in Vermont, Pennsylvania and Michigan, and in the next few days he will be back trying to drum up votes for the Republicans in Missouri, Nebraska, South Dakota, Indiana, North and South Carolina and Kentucky.

This seems a little excessive for a President who has been in office only two months and needs the support of a Democratic Congress to deal with the sagging economy. For the more he gets involved in the rough and tumble of the congressional and governor races, the more he is likely to weaken his position as a President who is trying to unite and heal the country.

His party is obviously in trouble. The Democrats now hold 32 of the 50 governorships and may come out of the Nov. 5 election with three-fourths of the total, including both New York and California. And nine out of the 10 with the biggest electoral votes. This would greatly enhance their chances of organizing the big states for victory in the presidential election of 1976.

Also, the outlook now is for the Democrats to pick up three or four seats to add to their present 58-42 margin in the Senate, and a minimum of 20 seats to add to their present 248-187 margin in the House of Representatives.

So he has plenty to worry about. "A catastrophic defeat, as some forecasters are predicting," he said in Detroit the other night, "could write the obituary of the GOP." His major theme is "vote Republican and save the two-party system."

Maybe this argument will work, but it is not the two-party system the people are worried about, it is the economic system, and many of the leaders in the Republican Party have been telling him that he can do more for his party by concentrating on mastering his job and fighting the inflation than he can by fighting the Democrats.

Ford's strength is that nobody's mad at him. For the first time since General Eisenhower left town, there is no bitter personal feelings about the man in the White House. Many people disagree with his economic policies, but after years of Vietnam and Watergate and vicious contention over Johnson and Nixon and to a lesser extent Kennedy, the atmosphere is not charged with personal or partisan hatred.

This mood is not likely to last very long with the President flying around the country addressing partisan audiences that love the old party rows. And besides, the more he emphasizes his party's interest the more he provokes cries of Watergate.

Ford has done very well as long as he has concentrated on the larger issues. It is when he has seemed to be acting out of personal or partisan motives that he has gotten into trouble. His pardon of former President Nixon and his excessive financial rewards to his disgraced predecessor raised serious questions of favoritism, and put his judgment in doubt.

His tardiness in weeding out many of Nixon's aides and rewarding other members of the Nixon team with new appointments has also suggested that he had not abandoned the old party ways. And his campaigning for a solid month before the election is likely to erode his general support without changing the balance of power against him in the Congress or the state Houses.

As a matter of fact, many Republicans who believe in him and appreciate his ability to raise funds by his appearances at these party rallies are nevertheless fearful that vigorous campaigning may emphasize national issues and revive memories of Washington most Republican candidates would like to forget. Some of them have

TOM WICKER Ford encouraged anti-busing mobs

Mayor Kevin White of Boston has properly rebuked President Ford for statements lending aid and comfort to those resisting a court order for the desegregation of Boston schools. But the fact is that the federal government no longer has a policy for achieving school desegregation, and Ford's unfortunate remarks only reflected that lack.

At his news conference last week, Ford said a court-ordered busing plan was "not the best solution" for Boston schools. After that, he said, it was no use for him to urge Bostonians nevertheless to "respect the law." Predictably, South Boston's busing foes were overjoyed to be supported in their view from the top of the federal government. The net result, as Mayor White pointed out, was the possible endangerment of school children trapped in Boston's adult folly and intransigence.

Ford's insensitivity to these consequences of his nationally televised remarks was reminiscent of President Eisenhower's adamant refusal, in the 1950s, to give his personal support to the Supreme Court's historic school desegregation decision of 1954. The silence — which he repeatedly refused to break — of so revered a leader encouraged southern politicians of the time to counsel resistance, even massive resistance, to the law of the land.

When such resistance brought a major challenge to the validity of a federal court order in Little Rock in 1957, however, Eisenhower recognized his duty and sent in federal troops — not, in his view, to force desegregation, though that was the effect, but to preserve the integrity of the judicial process. As Mayor White pointed out, Ford has made no move to support the federal court order challenged daily by street mobs (also reminiscent of those in Little Rock and other southern cities in the past).

But Ford's apparent unwillingness to take action to support the law in Boston — Mayor White's request for federal marshals was turned down last week — is not a sudden turnabout on his part or that of the government. Since the advent of the Nixon Administration, Washington has provided little leadership, grudgingly toward the desegregation of schools. Richard Nixon regularly denounced busing. His Justice Dept. went into court.

So encouraged, and with hot public opposition to busing exploited by the administration rather than cooled, members of Congress — Ford prominently among them — sought repeatedly to make busing illegal or even unconstitutional. With that much opposition, vocally and frequently expressed, from both the executive and legislative branches of the federal government, busing has become — as Boston demonstrates — virtually impossible to impose on communities outside the South.

As the question of school desegregation in the North and West has arisen, even the courts have given the appearance of retreat — at least from busing, and perhaps even from desegregation itself, since in many cities, only busing can achieve desegregation. The Richmond and Detroit cases, in which the Supreme Court refused to order the consolidation of central city and suburban schools, appear to have prevented, at least temporarily, the desegregation of most city schools outside the South.

It may well be that busing is inherently unenforceable, that too many Americans — mostly white, but some black — are too strongly opposed to it. It may be, as in the case of prohibition, that widespread and repeated defiance of the law means that the law itself has to be changed or repealed. If so, those who exploited the people's fears, rather than trying to calm and alleviate them, must surely bear some of the responsibility.

Whatever the course, it seems reasonably clear that federal judges cannot go on ordering busing plans if the President of the United States and Congress constantly denounce busing, and if the federal government is unable or unwilling to provide the necessary backing for federal court orders. All the police in Boston cannot make busing work when the highest public officials — even including Mayor White — agree publicly that busing is wrong.

If Gerald Ford was willing to seek candidly and openly either legislation or court orders bringing school desegregation to a halt, that would be a policy, however tragic. If he were able to devise an effective alternative to busing in order to carry on desegregation outside the South, that also would be a policy, and a welcome one.

As it is, Ford and most other politicians of both parties denounce busing and pay lip service to the law. But he is not enforcing the latter and neither he nor any of them has a substitute for the former. That means there is no federal policy for achieving desegregation outside the South, as Southerners never believed there would be, and as Kevin White has learned the hard way.

Editor's Note: In response to mounting criticism, President Ford taped a message Saturday asking Bostonians to "reject violence of any kind" in connection with school integration.

Unfair rent

I am one of the residents of Strawberry Fields Apartments who is paying $180 a month rent for a one bedroom unfurnished apartment while my neighbors are paying $172 for a two bedroom and $150 for the same of bedroom. It is clear to me that because we are a minority, the management and owners are attempting to take advantage of the situation. The management is repeatedly promised to give a definite statement on what they will consider "acceptable" rent. In the meantime we are responsible for the full $180 rent.

As far as there being little protest these policies, I am reminded of the monkeys who can not see, hear or speak. The manager need only step out of the office around the first of the month and listen to the angry and plentiful protest of the tenants. I agree that there has been some improvements to the apartments. However, it is only fair and ethical if everyone pay the same rent for the same facilities.

Bike havoc

MSU should, like a pack of cigars, have a warning label. In this case the label should warn that "walking on this campus is hazardous to your health." One of my class routes requires that I walk from the Library toward the stadium. On the south side of the bridge there are two bike lanes and two sidewalks. Bikes travel in the expected direction on the bike paths, but they also travel in both directions on both sidewalks. If a pedestrian does survive this obstacle course, he then has to contend with the street — on it are cars, bicycles traveling both ways on both sides and also bicycles going both ways down the middle of the street. Until bicyclists use only the streets and bike paths, and until they obey traffic laws while on the streets, this campus is a hazard for all trying to travel on it. The campus police should enforce the laws and issue tickets to prevent serious bike and auto or pedestrian accidents.

Puck danger

This is in response to Mark R. Jenkins' letter of Oct. 9. He expressed sadness that people did not recognize hockey as an audience participation sport, and pointed out that some form of shielding around the new Munn Ice arena would prove annoying and detract from this participation.

I have one question: has he ever been hit by a flying puck? If not, I suggest that he talk with a few people who have "participated." Ask if they think some form of protective device would be a good idea, and why.

Button zaps inflation higher

At the White House they gave me a button that said "WIN."

"It stands for 'whip inflation now,'" an economist said. "Wear it and help beat inflation."

I wore it to the butcher shop and focused its powerful message on the hamburger. The price purred and rose immediately. I trimmed the button with wolf's bane and crucifix, took it downtown and aimed it steadily at the power company. The price of electricity went up again.

Back to the White House. "This one doesn't work. Give me another."

They fitted the new button into my lapel. "Wear it with confidence," they said. "Think of it as a weapon in the war on inflation."

At the haberdasher I stuck it under the nose of a salesman, and he tried to charge $70 for a pair of pants.

At the White House they listened sympathetically. "We'll let you talk to a WIN button expert," they said.

The expert smoked a pipe packed with falling economic indicators. "You are using the button wrong," he said. "You

Almost immediately the airline raised ticket prices again to offset losses created by declining seat sales.

The White House WIN button expert was reflective. "It's true," he said. "There are still some bugs that have to be ironed taking spending power out of your pocket, but that's not the beauty part."

"Give it to me straight."

"The beauty part is that the tax increase will be so small you won't even notice it."

"So my spending power won't be seriously affected?"

"Hardly at all," he beamed.

"Then how will the tax increase stop the inflation?"

"I'll figure that out later," he said.

"Rome wasn't built in a day. Thinking up the WIN button took me three weeks."

In that case, I said, it would take him at least five years to come up with a useful idea. He was hurt. "Don't knock the WIN button," he said. "It has already struck a heavy blow in the war on inflation."

I gave him the graveyard laugh.

"Listen," he said, "not long ago very influential people around here were talking about making war on the Arabs to stop the rise in oil prices. Do you know what that would have meant?"

"No light at the end of the tunnel."

"Inflation," he said. "Inflation like you've never seen. Triple-digit inflation I had a better idea. 'Mr. President,' I said, 'Make buttons, not war.'"

You had to give him credit, all right. At 12 per cent.

are supposed to aim it at yourself, not at rising prices. When you see a rising price, aim the WIN button at yourself and - ZAP! - it will stop you from buying."

Back home I read that the natural gas people were threatening to raise prices. I turned the lapel up, took a full zap of WIN right between the eyes and turned down the thermostat.

Almost immediately the gas people said they would have to raise prices because customers were using less gas.

The next day I cancelled a flight to Newark because the cost of airline tickets had just risen, and a shot from the WIN button overpowered my desire to sojourn in the Garden State.

"You mean it doesn't work, don't you?"

"I wouldn't say that," he said. "The only problem is that it doesn't stop prices from rising when you aim it at prices, and it doesn't stop prices from rising when you aim it at yourself."

"Then what good is it?"

"It's fun to wear," he said, "and it gives you a feeling you're doing your bit in the war on inflation."

He looked intently at the button and suddenly caught a zap in the noodle. "I've got it! I'm going to raise your taxes."

I wept. "There, there," he said. "Don't cry. The tax rise will help beat inflation by

Priceless money may WIN

I'm not one to shirk my duty. I realize that even though Gerald Ford called in everyone from Roy Rogers to the Green Lantern to work out his economic game plan for the fight against inflation, he really came up with nothing. The proposals set forth by the administration are about as clear to the American people as Nixon's income tax reductions, and as useful as a credit card to a pay toilet.

So with no winning play diagrammed by the Ford Administration yet, I'm going to take myself off the bench and fill the void.

My plan for ending inflation is basically simple because it appeals to the foremost American emotion - greed.

To see how I'm going to use this noble American attribute to our advantage, you must understand that the basic reason for inflation is that the consumers have too much money, while there are not enough products.

The obvious solution to the problem is to take away some of the consumers' money. This can be done Mr. Ford's way, which is a surcharge is placed on income, or by just coming and taking away a person's money. Either way can be assessed as dangerous, as people tend to get peeved and do things like riot and shoot tax collectors.

The objective then, is to make the people want to have less money to spend. The way to do this is to immediately stop minting all present coins and introduce a new system of coins.

My plan for ending inflation is simple because it appeals to the foremost American emotion - greed.

Right away people will greedily hoard every coin they can get their hands on in the hope that "someday it'll be worth something." This can be evidenced by the millions of Kennedy half-dollars tucked into closets across the country. Everyone is sure that soon they will double and triple in value and make their owners rich. Why, we could probably support a fair-sized policing action somewhere with just the hidden Kennedy half-dollars.

The benefits of this system are two-fold, as we also can revamp our coin designs to fit in with these modern times.

Perhaps we could have a "Red cent" penny with Lenin's picture on it to give detente a little help. Or maybe a "bugged nickel" in salute to Watergate would be popular. The possibilities are unlimited.

No matter what the new look of the coins through inflation would be curbed significantly because of all the coins that would be out of circulation.

No economic plan is complete without a backup, so I will tender a secondary plan. Wage increases in factories are always termed inflationary, so we must do something to negate them. The secret is to give workers the increase, but in a way that they will not spend it.

My solution here is for every corporation to hire famous athletes and movie stars as treasurers. Then when a wage increase is granted, the extra money a worker is to receive each month is given in a separate check signed by the star or athlete. The prospect of having such an autograph will keep the employee from cashing the check, just so he can keep the signature. And so another problem is solved.

There's the game plan and all Jerry has to do now is take the ball and run - and try to keep from fumbling.

JACKSON INJURY TROUBLES A'S

Series shifts to Oakland tonight

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Oakland A's, still a little troubled by Reggie Jackson's leg problems, hope to turn the home field advantage into a winning one when the World Series resumes here tonight.

"We've won one and they've won one," Jackson said Monday. "But now we're home for three. I hope we win a couple here and then — let's see."

The A's, who are seeking their third straight championship, and the Los Angeles Dodgers traded 3-2 victories in the first two games at Los Angeles. Jim "Catfish" Hunter, Oakland's 25-game winner who saved the opener in relief, will oppose lefthander Al Downing, 5-6 this season, in tonight's game. All three games in Oakland will begin at 8:30 p.m. East Lansing time.

The Spartans kept possession of the Webster Steeby trophy Saturday by defeating the University of Michigan, 20-19.

Oakland was held to six hits in each of the first two games by the Dodgers' two top starters, Andy Messersmith and Don Sutton, each time with help from Mike Marshall.

The lack of hitting is a big worry for the A's, who also managed only five hits in the final two games of the American League playoffs.

Oakland was out-hit and outscored by the New York Mets last year and the Cincinnati Reds two years ago and still won both World Series.

A bigger factor as the series goes along could be the play of Jackson in rightfield, a superb outfielder when he's healthy, but who is hobbled by a pulled hamstring muscle in his right leg.

Hunter, 25-12 with a 2.49 earned run average this season, had a 3-0 record in the last two series. He was the winner in the A's 2-1 pennant clincher at Baltimore last Wednesday, and struck out Joe Ferguson for the final out in the series' opener.

Downing, victim of Hank Aaron's 715th home run in April, was a spot starter for Los Angeles this year, completing only one of his 16 starts. But that was a shutout against the San Francisco Giants in September.

Not going to panic-Stolz

By STEVE STEIN
State News Sports Writer

Dispite three straight losses, including two tough defeats at the hands of nationally ranked Notre Dame and the University of Michigan, MSU football coach Denny Stolz refuses to be discouraged.

"We're one and a half years into a program and we're not going to panic. We've got a good thing going," Stolz told members of the media at his weekly press luncheon Monday.

"I'm going to coach this thing the way I want to coach it and not the way somebody else wants me to coach it.

"It's tough to lose the way we have the last two weeks but we'll be back out there," Stolz added.

The Spartans, now 1-1 in the Big Ten and 2-3 overall, take on Illinois Saturday at Champaign. The Fighting Illini sport a 4-1 season record, including a 2-0 conference mark.

Key fumbles hurt the Spartans against the Irish and the Wolverines and once again Stolz was asked about the problem.

"We work like the devil to make sure our technique is sound but if you can believe that two bodies can run into each other, one with the ball and the other trying to tackle him, and the ball never drops, you're crazy," Stolz said.

Stolz asked his listeners to check the statistics on some of the country's top teams and compare how many times they fumble, also.

"We just have to keep working at it," Stolz said.

Stolz was questioned again about the Wolverines 44-yard touchdown pass at the end of the first half which went from quarterback Dennis Franklin to split end Jim Smith.

The Spartan coach said MSU uses zone coverage, despite the fact that Smith said after the game MSU was playing man-to-man on that play.

"We just got beat outside," Stolz explained.

Someone then asked if MSU was playing a prevent defense.

"That's exactly what we were in," Stolz answered.

Improved seating marks Chicago concert

By JUNE DELANO
State News Staff Writer

Sunday night's Chicago concert at Jenison Fieldhouse marked the first of Pop Entertainment's improvements on its concert setting and according to chairman Paul Stanley, the improvements were highly successful.

The most marked change was the seating system, which included moving the stage to the north end of Jenison and selling all seats on the floor as reserved tickets.

"The road crew for Chicago was here before when the stage was located in the middle of the fieldhouse," Stanley said. "When they saw our new setup they said 'What an improvement.' I personally think acoustically, this was one of the best concerts we've had."

Stanley had nothing but praise for the innovations, which included numbered shirts for the ushers, super-ushers who acted as trouble shooters and generally more intensive security measures.

"The police were so happy with the new seating arrangement," he said. "And I think we finally proved that a student organization could pull something like this off without problems."

The sellout concert also had concession stands, a feature which Stanley says costs Pop Entertainment money, but which he thought was well received.

The concert was not without backstage problems. After the show, Chicago's management demanded to see the ticket manifest (an accounting of all tickets printed) which was locked in the Administration Building.

"At quarter to 11, in the rain, Lorraine Demorest from the comptroller's office drove in from Holt to help us out," Stanley said. "That kind of cooperation is very rare and she didn't even complain."

Future concerts at Jenison will be aided by a sound curtain hung over the ceiling above the house lights. The curtain will be made of some light material, Stanley explained, and should markedly improve the fieldhouse's acoustics.

"The problem now is that the fire marshal has cut the capacity down to 7,000," Stanley said, and he fears that may jeopardize his contract with Frank Zappa for a concert later this term.

Other artists Pop Entertainment is considering include Linda Ronstadt, Billy Cobham, Lou Reed and Bad Company. George Carlin is definitely booked for Oct. 25, Homecoming weekend.

TV host Ed Sullivan dies of cancer at 72

NEW YORK (AP) — Ed Sullivan, whose Broadway column chronicled the doings of show business personalities, many of whom he had made famous on his popular television show, is dead at 72.

Sullivan died Sunday night at Lenox Hill Hospital where he had been hospitalized since Sept. 6 with cancer of the esophagus, a disease son-in-law Bob Precht said Sullivan never knew he had.

His death followed by 18 months that of his wife and chief adviser, the former Sylvia Weinstein, whom he met in 1928 at a speakeasy where she had been taken by her family to celebrate her high school graduation.

The next year Wall Street crashed and Sullivan crashed the big time, taking Walter Winchell's spot as gossip columnist on the old New York Graphic. He moved to the Daily News in 1932.

Jenness and Maisel, along with the SWP candidate for Michigan attorney general B.R. Washington, will speak at a campaign rally in Detroit at 7 p.m. Saturday.

Linda Jenness of the Socialist Workers party was on campus Monday to rally support for black school children in Boston. Jenness ran for president in 1972, and said she was the first woman to do so since the days of women's suffrage.

Ferency also spoke on the problems of crime and drugs.

"We base our party on the idea that we should go to the people with the truth and say, we could do this, or this, or this, and then we should let the people resolve and control the system," he said.

Tom Coyne, vice president for student services, said that the university is negotiating with the physicians and other local physicians to see if an agreement can be reached to gain access to an entire pool of physicians.

Maisel, 30, makes his home in Detroit and said he became involved in radical politics

Maisel said he will not file the legally required list of campaign contributors.

"Such a list, would constitute a ready-made enemies list," Maisel said. "We would turn over the list if we were sure there would be no harassment, but the government has already admitted they have a disruption campaign going against us."

Chemical products, paper rank at top of MSU hard-to-get list

By GARY HOFFMAN
State News Staff Writer

A new shortage is threatening to rob MSU chemistry students of a faithful friend who keeps dirt out of the potassium nitrate, hair and fingernails out of test tubes and the whole shiny laboratory from blowing to bits.

Acetone, the fragrant cleanser of test tubes and sinuses, is in short supply. It is used to clean laboratory utensils so that delicate, and sometimes dangerous, experiments can be carried out safely.

The MSU Purchasing Dept. has enough of the all-purpose solvent stocked for now, but will have to dig harder to meet the University's future needs.

Dick Kasuba, manager of the Purchasing Dept., said Wednesday that his office is having difficulty obtaining many chemical products, including thinners, paints and solvents.

"The chemical industry only gets a certain allotment of raw materials and it supplies us with what it can," Kasuba said.

Almost every commodity is harder to get, but chemicals and paper products are especially hard, he added.

"Index cards are almost impossible to get ahold of," Kasuba said.

His department provides such paper products to offices and departments throughout the University.

These shortages mean that the products, if they can be delivered at all, are often delivered late. The University will also have to pay a higher price for them by the time they are received.

"We get fewer and fewer firm quotations on prices," Kasuba said. "The price will be the going rate whatever the going rate is at the time of the delivery."

Teams of buyers from the Purchasing Dept. scour suppliers across the country for the needed items.

"Our buyers are digging a lot harder to locate the materials," Kasuba said. "They're spending so much time on the telephone that their ears begin to feel like part of the receiver. 'Sometimes the shortages turn out to be fictitious, but other times they are bona fide.'"

Several years ago a purchaser would call a half dozen or a dozen firms to fill the needs of the University for a particular product, he said. Now the same firms might supply only 70 per cent of the needed quantity.

"I guess all this is going to be the vogue in purchasing for a year or so," Kasuba said.

Group calls on Milliken to replace commissioner

LANSING (UPI) — An interfaith church group called on Gov. Milliken Monday to replace Gus Harrison as state lottery commissioner unless he stops promoting the extension of gambling in Michigan.

The Michigan Council on Alcohol Problems, an interfaith group that represents 4,500 churches, objected to recent reports that the lottery bureau has been exploring the feasibility of a state-controlled football betting card operation.

"If Mr. Harrison continues this activity, you should replace him with someone who more nearly represents your views as leader of this state," the Rev. Allen B. Rice II, executive director of the council, told Milliken.

Rice noted that Milliken told a group of church leaders July 9 that he was opposed to any further extension of gambling in Michigan, including sports betting.

When a proposal emerged in the legislature to offset the possible repeal of the sales tax on food and drugs with legalized off-track betting, the council again asked for Milliken's response.

According to Rice, Milliken told the council Oct. 1 that "under no circumstances do I believe any such revenue loss should be made up by extending legalized gambling."

Rice said there is no evidence whatsoever to indicate that legalizing gambling on football or other sports would cut into illegal gambling.

"If Michigan sanctions football betting cards," he said, "the result will be that many thousands of new bettors will be recruited through the lottery commission promotions, many of whom will be attracted to gambling because it would be legal and because some of the revenue would go to the state treasury. This represents our chief objection to Mr. Harrison's proposed extension of legalized gambling," Rice said.
