It was a long walk to the locker room Saturday for Ohio State football legend Woody Hayes after the unheralded Spartans poked out the Buckeyes 16 - 13. Along the way, Spartan fans taunted the quietly fuming Hayes, who wasn't sure whether his team had won or lost. Finally, after cheering students had grabbed at his cap and jabbed at his ego, his anger exploded, and he landed a backhanded punch on the jaw of the fan pictured at the far right.

Bar to receive warrant for overcrowding

By JOHN TINGWALL

State News Staff Writer For the first time since East Lansing ent wet and student - jammed bars name the city's most lucrative business, y officials will attempt to prosecute a owner for crowding his bar beyond pacity limits.

City attorney Dennis McGinty said inday that a complaint against the mers of the Alle - Ey bar will be filed in at Lansing District Court early this week, after the warrant for prosecution is signed by the complaining witness, Fire Chief Philip Patriarche.

The complaint will charge the Alle -Ey owners with allowing more than 563 people into the premises, which is beyond the 413 capacity set by the city.

Patriarche said a State News article exposing frequent violations increased the interest of students and city officials in pursuing overcrowding violations, leading to the complaint.

The charge, punishable by a fine of up to $500, lists four witnesses to the violation. McGinty said all four witnesses, police and fire officials, conducted head counts and arrived at crowd estimates "almost exactly identical in number."

McGinty said District Court Judge Daniel Tschirhart will set the number of days by which the Alley - Ey owners have to respond.

"If the owner pleads guilty, the judge very well might not assess him the full fine, since it's the first violation," McGinty said

George Eyde, who owns the bar with his brother, was informed of the suit Sunday and said he would "absolutely" plead innocent.

"They've been on our back for over a year now," Eyde said. "Dooley's has been much more crowded than the Alley - Ey during the past year. It seems like some kind of vendetta."

Eyde, co - owner of both the Alle - Ey and The Stables, said he and fire officials in enforcing these codes, but hopefully have disputed the Alle - Ey's actual capacity since it opened nearly two years

"We are willing to follow the code, but we feel the fire chief is using his own interpretation of the code, rather than following it."

McGinty said a plea of innocent in the criminal suit would delay action for six weeks, the normal waiting period for District Court action.

"I wouldn't have filed this suit if I didn't think we were assured of prosecution," McGinty said. "I was present for the head count, and we sectioned the place off and assigned two officials to each section, so we have the definite proof."

Fire Chief Patriarche said previous violations of the capacity code were not followed through with legal suits because of the difficulties in obtaining accurate head counts.

"There was pressure on us to check out the crowding in the area bars, especially those located in the basement," Patriarche said. "I admit we were slacking off a little this suit will make other bars stop and think about how many people they allow Though other bars have violated fire codes, Patriarche defended the Alle - Ey prosecution, saying he received numerous calls and complaints from Alley - Ey patrons concerning overcrowding.

"They've been on our back for over a year now. Dooley's has been much more crowded than the Alley - Ey during the past year. It seems like some kind of vendetta."

MSU STOCKPILES IN GOOD SHAPE Coal strike assured; talks continue

By Associated Press and State News

WASHINGTON - Negotiators maining knotty issues blocking a miract settlement between the coal dustry and mine workers as the nation epared for at least a two - week strike. Though both sides indicated a nent was within reach, a strike is and because of the United Mine others' (UMW) "no contract, no work" dition. The union's current contract pires at 12:01 a.m. Tuesday, and infration of a new pact would require

Paul Nilsson, MSU physical plant retor of auto and utility services, said

MSU has four or five months' stockpiles of coal on hand.

"We consider ourselves to be in a very good position in the event of a coal strike," Nilsson said.

UMW President Arnold Miller said problems still remained in four or five areas but added, "we're making progress." His industry counterpart, Guy Farmer, who had been hopeful of a weekend settlement, said Monday was more likely.

"It's not because we're hung up on anything, it's because we have so much to do," Farmer said as he arrived at the hotel negotiating site to receive the union's latest proposed contract language.

An industry source inside the negotiations said the main sticking point standing in the way of a settlement was the union's insistence on the right to strike over grievances. "Everything else is negotiable," the source said.

The industry says that it has to have a guarantee to safeguard against strikes to permit high - level production. Wildcat strikes and absenteeism led to 2.4 million lost man - days in 1973, according to the industry's figures.

A UMW spokesman denied the grievance issue was the stumbling block. There's a whole host of issues," he said, adding that there had been no movement by the industry in the economic area for the last three days.

The spokesman also said some safety issues were still outstanding and the whole grievance procedure, not just the right to strike.

As the negotiations continued through the weekend with both sides presenting proposals and counter - proposals, other industries dependent on coal prepared for the inevitable walkout by 120,000 UMW members who produce two - thirds of the

Most miners cleaned out their lockers after working overtime on Saturday shifts and were not expected back Monday because it is Veteran's day, a holiday under the UMW contract. In the tiny mining towns scattered up and down the hollows of the Appalachian coal fields, the men were preparing to live without their paychecks.

"I'm ready," Gerald Dulley, a miner from Grant Town, W. Va., said. "I've killed beef, I've saved money, I'm stocked in groceries. No one is going back until we get what the union is asking for." A walkout lasting longer than two weeks would be expected to disrupt the nation's economy severely by forcing production cutbacks in numerous industries and result in widespread layoffs. The Interior Department estimates that 24 per cent of U.S. steel production would be halted within seven to ten days of the start of a coal strike and would be cut by two - thirds within 10 days. Railroads, which receive 10 per cent of their revenues from hauling coal, will be affected immediately. But the electric ver industry the nation's higgest coal user, is not expected to feel the effects for a while, as most utilities have several weeks' stockpiles on hand.

The U.S. Office of Economic Opportunity said a nationwide coal strike would have disastrous consequences for the poor and elderly, who depend on coal for heating.

Judge orders 8 acquitted for Kent State shootings

From Wire Services

CLEVELAND - U.S. District Court Judge Frank J. Battisti Friday ordered the acquittal of eight former Ohio National Guardsmen charged in the Kent State University shootings and termed the killings of four students "a series of tragic blunders and mistakes."

The former guardsmen were on trial in federal court here on charges of conspiring to violate the civil rights of the students who were killed and the nine wounded in a 13 - second volley of gunfire during an antiwar demonstration at Kent State on May 4, 1970

Battisti ruled after three weeks of testimony that the prosecution, which had introduced 32 witnesses, failed to prove that the guardsmen were guilty of conspiracy-the specific count with which they were charged.

Chief U. S. Prosecutor Robert Murphy said he was not surprised at the decision by Battisti to agree to a defense motion of acquittal and said the government would not appeal the verdict.

"On the basis of the evidence presented by the government, reasonable jurors must find a reasonable doubt as to whether the eight defendants possessed the specific intention to deprive the students of their constitutional rights," Battisti said in a 17 - page written opinion.

"It must be clearly understood that the conduct both of the guardsmen who fired and of the guard and state officials who placed the guardsmen in the situation . . . is neither approved nor vindicated by this opinion," Battisti said.

"It is entirely possible that state officials may yet wish to pursue criminal prosecutions against various persons responsible for the events at Kent State," the judge told the jury of four Women and sich

The eight National Guardsmen can be retried in a state criminal court or a civil court. Officials who ordered the guard deployment are liable for prosecution in those courts also, as well as at the federal level.

"It is vital that the state and National Guard officials not regard this decision as authorizing or approving the use of force against unarmed demonstrators," the judge said.

"Whatever the occasion or the issues involved, such use of force is and was deplorable.'

The decision, which prevents the Justice Dept. from bringing any further action against the guardsmen, ends a long, controversial proceeding that left the guardsmen and their supporters happy while some of the parents of the four students who were killed were left feeling they had been stifled again in their quest for justice.

Arthur Krause, the father of Allison Krause who was killed when a guardsman fired into a group of demonstrators, said: "I still want the truth out, and it didn't come out here."

Battisti, both in his opinion and his discussions in court, said that the government had presented much evidence that showed that the guardsmen may have used excessive force.

"At best," he read from his opinion, "the evidence presented by the government would support a finding that the amount of force used by the defendants was excessive and unjustified; that they intended to harm, or frighten, at least, some of the demonstrators, and that they fired without being ordered to do so."

But the judge brought out that the indictments of the guardsmen were based on Section 18 of the U.S. code under which the prosecution must prove that the defendants were motivated by a specific intent to deprive the students of nation's coal.

FBI captures prison escapees

FBI agents raided a home in a quiet middle class neighborhood in Virginia Beach, Va. late Saturday night, captured one of the nation's 10 - most - wanted criminals and killed a prison escapee who two years ago skyjacked an airliner and bailed out with $500,000 over the Utah desert.

The skyjacker, Richard Floyd McCoy, 31, was shot and killed when he pulled a gun and began firing after agents identified themselves, the FBI said.

Arrested was Melvin Dale Walker, 35, who was on the FBI's 10 - most - wanted list and had escaped with McCoy from the federal prison at Lewisburg, Pa., in August.

Lawyers will play Nixon tapes

The fifth week of testimony at the Watergate coverup trial will be led off by prosecutors who plan to play a series of tapes this week starting with a June 23, 1972, conversation between former President Nixon and H. R. Haldeman, then White House chief of staff.

Nixon released a transcript of the June 23 tape last Aug. 5 and acknowledged that it "may further damage my case." Before the week ended he resigned.

During that June 23 conversation, six days after the Watergate break - in, Nixon approved a suggestion that the Central Intelligence Agency be used to try to get the FBI to limit its investigation.

Court to hear districting case

The Supreme Court considers once more this week what it has called the "apportionment slough."

The court, which last year relaxed the "one - man, one - vote" standard of equal representation, will be asked to relax it still further in a dispute over legislative redistricting in North Dakota.

And in a Texas case, the justices will be asked to decide whether the "one - man, one - vote" principle applies to such offices as elected justices of the peace and constables. They have already said it extends as far down as county commissioners.

After hearing arguments, the court will take the cases under advisement and will rule some time before next June.

cent of gulf production, and raises the governments' take from $8.40 to $9.80 a barrel.

Abu Dhabi Oil Minister Mana Oteiba warned that the foreign oil companies will probably try to pass these extra tax and royalty costs on to the consumer unless foreign governments act to regulate company profits.

"We have decided to restore our right to take some of the huge profits which foreign companies are making and give a portion of this to the consumer," he said.

"They can come to us directly and purchase our tax - free oil. We are explaining now to the consuming countries that they have to keep an eye on the oil companies and not allow them to make unreasonable profits."

In effect, Saudi Arabia, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates have shown they will only lower oil prices at the expense of the oil companies. They will not allow any price reductions to affect their own profits, and are leaving it up to the consumers to fight it out with the oil companies.

Kuwait, Iran and Iraq opposed the price decision, saying it should be taken up at the conference of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC). An OPEC meeting is scheduled Dec. 12 in Vienna to discus one unified price for oil that would replace the present complete pricing system.

Oteiba said the Abu Dhabi decision "does not rule out on single price ... The gulf countries have the right to adjust the prices and it is up to OPEC to accept it or not.

But the three gulf states who voted for the price reductio obviously hope to influence other oil producers. The communique said delegations would be sent to all OPEC member before the Vienna meeting "to explain our position."

Oil industry sources say the 31/2 per cent reduction in poste prices might encourage more direct sales from the gulf countrie to consuming blocs.

But they said the overall effect of the reduction could not b guaged before it is determined how much of the governmen share of production could be sold on the open market.

U.S., Egypt sign wheat pact

The United States and Egypt signed a 200,000 - ton wheat agreement in Cairo Sunday for the last three months of 1974, supplementing a pact for 100,000 tons reached earlier.

Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz said the total value of the two accords was $56.2 million. He said the agreement signed Sunday was for $38.7 million, and the previous accord, worked out in June, was for $17.5 million.

Butz, who leaves on Monday to discuss similar wheat agreements in Syria, said the United States also would provide Egypt with $10 million worth of tobacco and 60,000 bales of cotton.

Reliable sources in Uganda reported that 15 soldiers died last week in an unsuccessful commando revolt against Amin in the Ugandan capital of Kampala.

Dissident physicist Andrei Sakharov urged Sen. James Buckley, C - N.Y., on Sunday to press for freer emigration for all Soviet people, not just Jews, in any U.S. - Soviet trade agreement.

Sakharov, Russia's most prominent civil rights activist, told the conservative Republican from New York that Ukrainians, Armenians, Germans, Balts and other Soviet nationalities should be included in any emigration plan promised in exchange for U.S. trade concessions to Moscow.

Meeting in Sakharov's Moscow apartment, Buckley told the dissident leader that he would convey his request to the U.S. Congress.

Fight for public transit continues

By JOHN TINGWALL State News Staff Writer

Though Michigan voters clearly opposed a $1.1 billion transportation package at the polls last Tuesday, transportation officials will continue waging a battle for implementation of some type of transportation package. Officials differ, however, on how this goal is to be achieved. Only one day after Proposal D a $1.1 billion transportation bond issue was rejected by a 57 to 43 per cent margin, the Michigan Highway Commission announced it would work to put another transit proposal on the 1976 ballot.

The director of the Proposal

D advocacy campaign sharply criticized the plan Friday, saying the two - year delay may be too long to wait for a transportation package in said.

The bond issue, which would have provided $540 million for rapid transit service in metropolitan Detroit, $362 million for rail improvement and development, and another $200 million for airport and lakeport improvement and expansion in the state, was defeated by a 57-43 per cent margin.

Michigan.

John Osmer, secretary of the Highway Commission, said the commission believes the need for a transit proposal will still exist in 1976.

"With problems like the energy shortage, where there is no immediate solution, Michigan will still be lagging in transportation services," Osmer

The statement released Wednesday by the commission said that voters must have another opportunity to consider the need for a transportation plan in Michigan.

But to William Blue, director of the Michigan Citizens for Better Transportation, a 1976 proposal is too late to address the needs of the state.

"We can't wait," Blue said. "Rail abandonments will soon become a reality. It's just too convenient to say that we'll throw the thing back on the ballot next time.'

Blue, general manager of the Flint Mass Transit Authority, year period would increase support for the proposal.

"Even if it did pass in two years, the number of cities and states ahead of us in line for federal funds will have increased considerably," Blue said.

Detroit would have been eligible for a possible $4 billion federal subsidy if the proposal had passed.

John Woodford, director of the Michigan Dept. of said the highway commission exist in the voters' minds," will continue to work with the deficit in the state budget.

"The voters have spoken, but the problem is still with us," Woodford said. "But for transportation improvement in said he did not think the two Michigan, I can say this - it ain't gonna be easy.

Woodford said he did not expect a 1976 transit proposal to be much larger than the $1.1 billion dollar proposal this year, since the inflation rate was accounted for in this years' bond issue.

Blue maintained that the same opposition to the proposal will still exist two years from now.

"Even if there are no economic problems in 1976, Highways and Transportation, the same questions will still blue said. The outstate versus

Unit recommends U.S. policy changes

By PETE DALY State News Staff Writer

An end to the U.S. boycott of Cuba and or military changes regarding Latin America two of many recommendations concerning Latin American policies made by a group nominent Americans, including President

The Commission On United States - Latin merican Relations, financed privately by the enter of Inter - American Relations, made 33 recommendations recently to the Ford inistration.

Wharton is one of 23 American businessmen, omer government officials and scholars on the ission, which urges major changes in U.S. dicies toward Latin America.

The commission recommended a halt to the 2year U.S. economic boycott of Cuba, gesting that the United States should take initiative in seeking a more normal tionship with that country.

While emphasizing that improved relations equire positive action by both sides, the on urged the United States to act now ending the trade embargo on Cuba. the commission also called for a halt to the supply grants there. The group recommended an end to military advising programs in Latin America.

"This commission felt the Latin American and world situation has changed dramatically in the last few years," Wharton said Thursday. "No purpose was being served by a continuation of the old U.S. policy.'

Wharton said the most important recommendation, in his opinion, related to the cessation of U.S. military actions in Latin America.

"The second most important point, I think, is the recommendation that the United States should condemn any violation of human and civil rights by anyone in Latin America," Wharton said.

The commission recommends efforts at arms limitations agreements among supplier and consumer nations and the termination of military grants by the United States to Latin America. However, it specifies that "legislation restrictions on arms transfers that discriminate against Latin America ought to be repealed."

The report states further that "conventional military equipment should be available to Latin American countries on a competitive, commercial and nondiscriminatory basis - the nations, except those engaging in military hostilities or whose security forces are found by appropriate international processes to be violating human rights."

Wharton explained that previous U.S. legislation aimed at ending arms sales to Latin America did not prevent them from buying their weapons from other nations, such as France. Wharton said the commission is not, however, recommending that arms sales be promoted by the United States.

"We would give them (Latin America) economic aid and then they would spend it on weapons from some other nation, and often at a much higher cost to them," Wharton said.

Wharton was asked why the United States should be producing arms for sale to any nation.

"You have to start with the basic premise that all governments will have armies for their self - defense," he said.

Wharton said stopping all arms sales to all nations would be "denying them their right of internal defense.

"For years, the United States has been playing big brother to Latin America in deciding what is best for them, and that has made them very angry at us. This commission is saying that no paternalism by us should be allowed," Wharton said.

The committee also recommended abandonment of coercive activities toward Latin American countries expropriating American - owned companies or barring commercial American fishing within 200 miles of their coast.

Also recommended is greater U.S. tariff preference for Latin American goods and elimination of the U.S. veto power in the Inter -American Development Bank, which receives more than one - third of its funds from Washington.

The commission also took up the controversial question of American involvement in the Panama Canal Zone. It recommends the signing and ratification of a new Panama Canal treaty that would recognize the right of Panama to ultimately become sovereign over the waterway.

"These are very radical statements by the commission, and on some of the recommendations - for example, the Canal Zone suggestion - we are already getting reactions," Wharton said.

governor and the legislature to solve transportation problems in the state.

"We'll consider going to the legislature," Woodford said. "But the state's general fund will be undergoing some serious belt - tightening, with the sales tax repeal and other drains."

EDITORIALS Remember Kent State

"We must avoid violence," the State News editorial read two days after four students, one a former MSU student, were gunned down at Kent State University. "Our strength will be shown not in bricks and bottles thrown through windows but just by disrupting 'business as usual.' "

But now, 41/2 years later, we're back to "business as usual."

A former Ohio National Guardsman, acquitted Friday by Judge Frank J. Battisti of conspiracy with seven other guardsmen to deprive the students of their civil rights, said: "It was a terrible tragedy and we are sorry it happened. But it's pretty much over now."

The chief U. S. prosecutor has agreed, saying the government would probably not appeal the verdict. Battisti pointed out in his verdict that Ohio officials may still criminally prosecute "various persons responsible for the events at Kent State."

But what will fuel another trial? Where is the outrage that exploded on campuses across the country on May 4, 1970, and for months afterward over the "business as usual" attitude of administrations from the White House to the state Capitol to City Hall to MSU?

In the past four years we have forgotten Kent State. We have forgotten Spiro Agnew's "effete snobs" charge. We have forgotten Vietnam and Cambodia.

We have somehow forgotten that outrage as we have been forced to do furious battle against devouring inflation, a shrinking job market and a fading idealism. "What you see and hear is not rage, but injury, a withering of expectations," one newspaperman called it two years ago.

Editorials can urge further criminal prosecution of the guardsmen. They can bemoan the re - election Nov. 5 of former Ohio Gov. James Rhodes, who ordered the guardsmen to Kent State. They can condemn a judicial system which would level a charge of conspiracy against men who might more properly be convicted of murder.

But unless the outrage is there, "business as usual" will continue, and the Kent State saga will end easily and emotionlessly.

U.S. still lacks leadership

BOSTON, - It was more a ritual cleansing than an election: a way for voters who were taken in by a con artist to express their shame and their resentment. They washed their hands of Richard Nixon by voting against Charles Sandman, Joseph Maraziti, David Dennis, Wiley Mayne, Earl Landgrebe and Watergate.

Nixon's last election: that is what it was. Even after his resignation, doubt remained that we were really finished with that strange and baleful figure. Now at last our political process should be free of his distorting effect.

All that ought to make the 1974 election an occasion for hope, but somehow it does not arouse feelings of great optimism or enthusiasm. That must be because the campaign was so utterly remote from the real issues facing this country and the world.

On election day, Henry Kissinger was warning the World Food Conference in Rome of "disaster" ahead if nations did not have the will to act together against starvation. What relevance did the 1974 campaign have to that life - and - death issue, or to the oil problem, or to the looming international financial crisis?

The President of the United States,

meanwhile, was telling his people that the Americans voted on no issues, then, voted against corruption and deceit in politics. That is a good thing, but negative. The 1974 election gave us very little by way of affirmation - very few signposts of belief or policy for a troubled time. Similarly, in the new Congress negative action will be easier than affirmative. The huge new Democratic majority in the House may well force changes in some long - standing Nixon - Ford policies, for example the obsessive demand for ever more aid to South Vietnam. Congress will doubtless block any "further attempt by the least to expect affirmative leadership from a legislature. A body of 435 men and women cannot ordinarily govern a country - cannot conduct diplomacy or negotiate world policies on food or energy.

Congressional government is a creature long thought to be extinct, if not indeed mythical - a figment of political scientists' imagination. But we may have no alternat that is a marvelous change. But sooner or later we are bound to ask more of a president, and to look desperately elsewhere for leadership if he does not provide it.

After these last years, no sensible person wants or expects an overwhelming presidency. But there is very little sign that Gerald Ford has any idea of the seriousness of the times, or a clue to any way out of our difficulties. He has not even had the sense or the courage to clear many Nixon holdovers out of his government. He still has William Saxbe advising him on the law, and Earl Butz on food.

As inflation and unemployment mount - and they will - the public will look to Congress for remedies. In the House of Representatives especially, the problems will be severe. The Democrats are already restless under their present leadership, and the incoming members may make change inevitable when the new Congress meets in January.

The reckoning will begin then. Like it or not, we may be in for a trial of, if not congressional government, then "see the situation as it is."

In reply to Mr, Whitson's letter of Nov. concerning the "one - sided" Vet Panel on CATV, I felt the article by Gary Hoffman fairly portrayed our views and concerns. But as a panel member, I also feel he inaccurately paraphrased our purpose.

Because I believe Veterans are divided, we produced the show to counter the one sided lobbying efforts of Amvets, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the American Legion.

These groups are the voices being heard. We feel they have enjoyed 99 per cent of media coverage for their side, and it was time to hear our side.

Aside from that paraphrase in the State News, no attempt was made by anyone to except to place our hopes During our campaign the president of on it now. For it would be an France, Valery Giscard D'Estaing, 'told his overwhelming piece of optimism to place people that the curves of population, any reliance on President Ford for resources, energy, food and finance were leadership. all "leading us to disaster." He said he With all the concern about the imperial thought French citizens were entitled to presidency in recent years, there has been some talk of dividing the office - with a ceremonial figure as head of state and a prime ministerial one as head of government. In Gerald Ford we may have achieved the first without the second.

Watching this President when he speaks or answers questions, I have found myself focusing more on his character than his words. He is a decent human being, and portray this show as an unbiased presentation with a balanced point of view.

Even though our moderator was the only member of the panel to wear a suit and tie, he functioned as a coordinator. He immediately identified himself as a Vietnam era vet, and functioned more as a participant who opened and closed the show than as a moderator, since all the vets expressed pro - amnesty sentiments in opening statements.

I believe we also made it clear that we were speaking for ourselves and not all vets. The closing statement emphasized that we wanted to express what "some veterans, at least" think about amnesty.

The motivation of draft evaders should be obvious. If one could save his own skin by going to school, pretending to be sick, being rich or even joining the National Guard, why should he do something as difficult as become a "criminal" in his own country, unless for moral reasons?

The Vet Panel will be shown again at 7:30 tonight on CATV Channel 11.

No porno

The article on my film activities Oct. 25 was very misleading. I show no porno and only an occasional movie for children. (And to equate a film that is sexy with porno is the writer's problem, not mine.)

Unitarian Universalist Church is MUSIC. On Nov. 15 I'm playing "The Beatles at Shea Stadium." On Nov. 22, "Celebration at Big Sur" with Crosby, Stills and Nash and Joni Mitchell will be presented.

The "news" at the East Lansing Library is a new series entitled "Alexander Korda Presents." Korda is the man (along with J. Arthur Rank) who revitalized a dying British film industry in the '30s and '40s. The first film in that series is "Four Feathers" (1939) on Nov. 25.

My film club is called "Movielovers." It's a hobby that loses money. I might at least break if the State News would give me a break.

I think there are students on campus who are tired of a steady diet of porno and (worshipful) Hollywood flicks . ! . but it's hard as hell to reach them.

What's wrong with campus film study? Maybe the best way to answer that one is to tell you the name of the flick that was featured the last time the "film educators" got together. It was "Mr. Majestyk" starring Charles Bronson. My case rests.

MSU brownshirts?

I certainly hope that the majority of MSU's band members do not empathize with Peter Turkus ("Band's concert delayed by Nazis," Nov. 4 State News). I can understand his desire to appear separate from the American Nazi rally, but an expressed desire to disrupt a legal gathering in the guise of patriotism is hypocritical. Drowning out the Nazi demonstration with "As the Caissons Go Rolling Along," "Semper Fideles" and "Anchors Aweigh" is a mockery of the basic American principle of free speech. Or has the status quo now become the self righteous public censor?

Turkus was reported saying that he wished to overturn the van used as a speaking platform and run the Nazis out. Such militant closed - mindedness is reminiscent' of the street battles which plagued Berlin prior to the rise of Adolph Hitler. Does one curb fascism using such tactics? Will the MSU band's green and white become the brownshirts of the '70s?

I am thankful that the resentful band members were restrained from any embarrassing physical violence. However, I feel the sentiments of Turkus and like him are a disgrace to the Universi well as American morality. S. F. Pator While covering the elections Tuesday night at East Lansing City Hall I overheard one disgruntled poll - worker blurt out, "You know, they were very well behaved. I interrupted her chit - chat with the clerk behind the desk.

PEGGY GOSSETT

"Do you mean the students were well behaved?" I gueried.

"Why, yes. I expected students to be smart - alecky, make a lot of trouble," the middle - aged woman said, looking rather peeved that I should ask.

I moved closer to the woman. She seemed to be trying to move away from me, edging further and further into the masses of poll - workers and little grey ballot boxes that crammed city hall temporarily.

"On what basis did you assume students would be smart - alecky," I asked. She gathered her purse and glanced longingly toward the door. "Why did you think students would give you any more trouble at the polls than anyone else?"

"Well, they always cause trouble demonstrations, picketing with signs, throwing rocks. When they get into politics, they get into fights and the like," she said. With that, she darted for the door, her drenched old raincoat was flapping in the perfumed breeze she left behind and hanging unbuttoned so that the double - knit pantsuit underneath, with the too - short pants, displayed her official poll - worker's badge.

If this is the attitude of East Lansing residents, that students are "into" causing trouble, especially at the voting precincts, perhaps some of the residents should take a stroll about campus.

They would see students are "into" going to classes, tossing around footballs, gathering in dorm rooms with a six - pack and adjusting their ten - speed bicycles. The only signs that students carry around are posters advertising their upcoming T.G.

What would students picket, anyway? Too many women on the ballot? Not enough sex in the dorms? Maybe someone should inform this misled woman that students have turned in their rights to peaceful demonstrations and their interest politics and public issues for as long as the beer holds out.

Students are not involved in politics with rigor any more. Just 40 per cent of all those registered to vote in East Lansing voted Tuesday.

Those who did care to jaunt through pouring slushy rain to vote caused no trouble at polls. East Lansing City Hall said students caused no havoc of any sort or disrupted the election process in any Lansing and East Lansing landlords are members of the Tri - County Landlord Assn.

Ellen Moore is vice president of the tri county group. She says that local goals are the same as those of HOME.

"Our major goal is to have a better tenant - landlord relationship," Moore said.

She said the landlord referral service is not a blacklisting measure on the side of landlords.

"There are many landlords now who refuse to rent to people on ADC because of a bad payment rate," she said. "But now they can see which ADC recipients are prompt with their payments and which are not.'

Charles Ipcar of the Tenants Resource Center said he thought the tenant referral service was discriminatory.

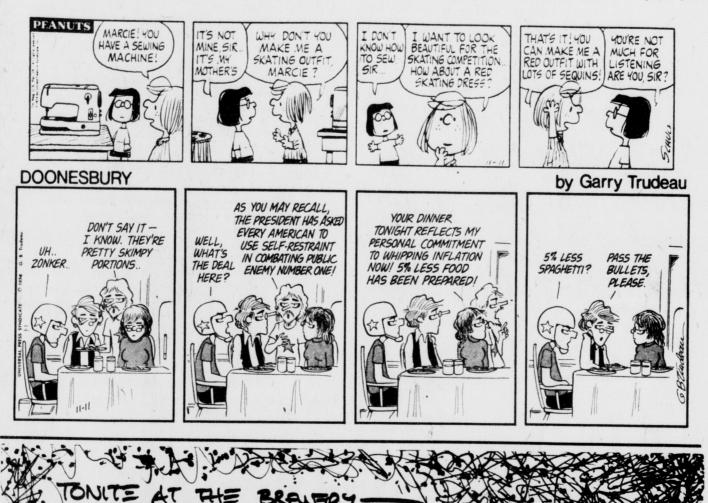

"What if someone is listed as bad according to the referral service - then where are they going to find housing?" he asked.

Both HOME and the tri - county group said recent pro - tenant legislation discriminates against landlords.

They said that by organizing and trying to bring about what they cite as reasonable goals, they will have a better working relation with tenants.

"As it stands right now in Detroit, half the landlords are just ready to give up." Gray said. "It's not many tenants who are irresponsible, but the few there are make it bad for all the rest.'

"There are just too many pro - tenant laws working against us now," Gray said. "It's time we really start to organize."

By CHARLES N. STRANEY

Paul R, and Anne H. Ehrlich have written a new book, titled "The End of Affluence - a Blueprint for Your Future," to be published soon by Ballentine Books of New York.

While their previous book, "The Population Bomb" was targeted at the under - 25 age group in the United States, this offering is directed at all ages.

The book is in the mold of Robert Heilbroner's "An Inquiry into the Human Prospect." However, it treats the perception of worldwide social disaster from an individual rather than a political - economic view point.

The Ehrlichs provide ample references and data to support their perceptions of the coming economic and social upheaval that is beginning to engulf the world. They see this decomposition arising from the interaction of world population growth, increasing disparity between overdeveloped and underdeveloped nations (and on a micro - scale between "have" and "have - not" social groups) and the growth of and increasing dependence on faulty technology to support this disparity.

In the course of developing their premise, the Ehrlichs discuss the world energy crisis and the scientific and social constraints on using alternate energy sources including the open - system limits of massive thermal pollution and climatic modification.

They document specific instances of near disasters in nuclear plants such as that near Detroit in 1953, which involved a Fermi Breeder Reactor. They note that though the Atomic Energy Commission states that the probability of a major reactor accident is minute, no insurance corporation is willing to provide liability coverage against such an event.

Thus federal legislation, the Price Anderson Act, was written to make the government (public) responsible for any damage costs.

The book also refers to a 1952 Presidential Commission (Paley) Report and a 1956 report printed by the American Petroleum Institute, both of which predicted the ultimate energy crunch, the latter forecasting the crisis for the mid - '60s.

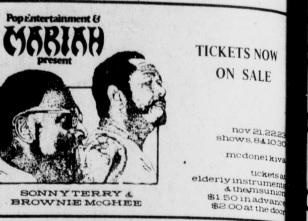

The Ehrlichs develop the systemic limits of the food problem in the world with emphasis on the protein deficiency and the abysmal long - range chances of improving this deficiency.

Further discussion concerns caloric shortages and the interaction of demand and distribution of food assets on world shortages. They note that the food problem is worldwide and debunk the myth that the United States is self - sufficient in food - growing and can feed the entire world.

The Ehrlichs assess current government reactions among the overdeveloped nations to these critical problems, and see a trend toward competition rather than cooperation.

If one then becomes convinced that a true crisis exists, the E hrlichs suggest that we rid ourselves of the idea that governments will react in a proper and timely manner without citizens' urgings. They believe we should all become politically involved, both for local levels of government and the legislative office seekers.

The final section of the book gives suggestions for person energy - saving. It also has some interesting data on achieved nutritional balance in the face of a long - range lack of am protein and other food supplies. These later sections are design to enable the reader to change his lifestyle now, and thus ahead of the majority in facing "The End of Affluence." Perh some college students feel they have long since made such adjustment at MSU.

TEL AVIV - Rioters blocked streets and stoned buses and s Sunday in opposition to the Israeli government's stringent w economic program.

The rioters, from a slum quarter in Tel Aviv, chanted slogans ainst the measures, but riot police broke up the demonstration, estate radio reported.

Unions planned wildcat strikes and housewives jammed permarkets for a last - minute buying spree.

The devaluation of the Israeli pound and other austerity easures, considered the severest in Israel's history, were taken y the government to meet a serious economic crisis. S NOW The devaluation of about 42 per cent - reducing the value of the pound from 24 cents to 16 2/3 cents – was announced in a radio broadcast by Finance Minister Yehoshua Rabinowitz.

Other measures announced included substantial increases in the prices of basic foods, including bread, milk, eggs and sugar, as well as restrictions or bans on luxury imports and higher taxes on travel and capital gains.

Treasury officials said the immediate effect of the austerity plan would be a replenishment of foreign currency reserves for arms purchases and a reduction of Israel's $1.8 billion balance of payments deficit.

For most Israelis the measures mean less food, less travel, no new cars or luxury goods, sharply increased prices for all imported goods and generally far less spending money.

A tankful of gasoline could cost half a week's salary and a flight to the United States half a year's pay.

Some prices rose immediately. Gasoline went from $1.53 to $1.76 a gallon, milk rose 60 per cent to 25 cents a quart, sugar tripled in price to 48 cents a pound and bus fares were increased by 40 per cent.

A wage freeze was also ordered to make sure unions did not try to bring salaries back in line with the new prices.

Most Israelis had expected the measures, and for the past week ban on importing cars, shoes, television sets, tape recorders, beer and cement. New taxes were levied on overseas travel, banks, insurance companies and capital gains; the prices of food, gasoline and electricity were increased.

Many Israelis believed the country would be thrown into a bad recession by the measures. Treasury officials said the program would add about 17 per cent to the cost of living, which had already soared by 34 per cent so far this year. By comparison, the U.S. rate of inflation is 11 per cent.

MSU shocks No. 1 rated Buckeyes!

Spartan fullback Levi Jackson said Saturday that nobody was going to catch him once he got into the open on his game - winning 88 - yard run against Ohio State. Here Jackson looks at the open field ahead of him while a trio of Buckeyes start their futile chase after the MSU sophomore.

Wild finish to great game

By CHARLES JOHNSON State News Sports Writer

Ahh... those Buckeyes of Ohio State. As the No. 1 ranked collegiate football team in America, they came to East Lansing Saturday with an air of confidence hedging on cockiness, a reputation as weighty as the Roman Empire and a mission to annihilate just one more opponent on its "routine" schedule. But alas, the MSU Spartans, who the socalled experts only conceded a hope and a prayer in their quest to upend the Bucks, posted the biggest upset of the year over Woody Hayes' "best team ever" and made the country take note that MSU football is on its way back.

The Spartans, rated an overwhelming 25-point underdog to the worshipped Buckeyes, pulled together the fruits of a football program which began its new seeding two years ago in spanking OSU, 16-13, before 78,533 fans at Spartan Stadium and a regional television audience.

But it took almost one hour after play ended before the Spartans were sure that they had indeed won the game.

A frantic, scurrying attempt by the Buckeyes to punch in a touchdown from the one - yard line at the game's end was eventually ruled no good, but it was not until Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke contacted game officials to clarify the confusion surrounding the waning moments of the game that MSU was officially declared the winner.

The MSU defense, which stopped the Bucks cold three times on goal line stands during the game, closed the door on fullback Champ Henson's pummel from the one - yard line with about 30 seconds left on the clock.

OSU, out of timeouts and already in a confused state, helplessly scurried to line up as MSU's players slowly unpiled from the just - finished play in order to run out the clock.

The Buckeyes snapped the ball, but it sailed through quarterback Cornelius Greene's hands and was picked up by OSU's Brian Baschnagel; who took it into the end zone. One official signaled a touchdown, but two others called the play dead.

The Spartans had already started marching off the field amid their jubilant fans when OSU's players began whooping it up with just as much enthusiasm.

What really had happened no one knew until Duke consulted the officials. The verdict was that the clock had expired before the play started. time and time again and had them taking fie goals instead of touchdowns."

MSU halted Buckeye drives three times at the five, three and eight yard lines.

It was by far the biggest victory forands team in years. It perhaps evidenced the resu of a laborious recruiting program which the Spartans began when Stolz took over in 197

The Spartans' young talent was prominence Saturday, highlighted by Le Jackson's 88-yard run, which gave the Sparta the lead for good. The 212-pound sophomo from Detroit Kettering brought the game ba to MSU just when it seemed that hope w gone.

With the Bucks leading 13-9, OSU w forced to punt late in the game and To Skladeny answered with a boot all the way the Spartans 12-yard line. MSU, using its fam up - the - middle play, sprang Jackson free a except for one defender, he found clear sail down the sidelines for the touchdown.

Two series earlier, MSU had closed t deficit from 13-3 to 13-9 as a result of 44-yard touchdown strike from quarters Charlie Baggett to split end Mike Jon Baggett's pass hit Jones on a dime and t senior wide receiver from Detroit Ketten danced into the end zone. A two po conversion attempt failed.

MSU had entered the second half knotted a 3-3 tie with the Bucks, as Spartan kicker Ha Nielson and OSU kicker Tom Klaban both field goals. Ohio State went out front early the third quarter with another field goal Klaban.

The fourth quarter witnessed the Buckey ground game moving effectively, culminating a one -yard plunge by Henson for their or touchdown of the game. The TD ended 44-yard series on eight plays and gave the Buckey a 13-3 lead which remained until the Baggett Jones touchdown and Jackson's excursion.

Jackson wound up as the Spartans' lead ground gainer with 133 yards in 13 carn OSU's Archie Griffin took game rushing hon with 140 yards in 23 totes. It was Griffin's 13 straight game in which he has rushed for o 100 yards.

Baggett completed five passes for 98 ya to aid MSU's offensive attack. OSU quarter Greene completed only three of 11 for yards.

MSU registered 328 net yards total offen OSU posted 377 yards – 113 under its seaso average.

The Spartans defensive effort was led

Ohio State coach Woody Hayes expresses concern, to say the least, during a tense moment in the Spartans victory over his Buckeyes Saturday. Woody, not a real favorite in East Lansing, was the object of several derogatory signs which were displayed throughout Spartan Stadium.

"MSU won the game," Duke announced in the Spartans' half joyful - half bewildered dressing room. "Time had expired, and had not time expired, Ohio State would have been charged with a penalty for not being in a set position for a full second before the start of play."

Nevertheless, the Spartans did win and they looked good doing it.

"I never saw a better performance by an MSU team," Stolz said emphatically. "The defense came up with the great goal line stands

We was busily scurrying around talking officials and coaches after the game trying tertain what happened.

te telephoned head referes Gene Calhoun logg Center from the Spartan dressing After listening to Calhoun's account,

Duke conferred with Stolz and Buckeye coach Woody Hayes, returned to the press box and announced the following:

"At the end of the game, the Ohio State players were attempting to unpile and it was ruled by the back judge (William Kingzett) and field judge (Jøhn Olson), whose responsibility it is to maintain time on the field, that time had expired before the last play started.

"The line_judge signaled a touchdown, which under game mechanics is his responsibility. But the back judge and field judge notified him that time had expired.

"Had time not expired, Ohio State would have been charged with a penalty for not being set on the line of scrimmage for one full second before the start of the play."

Duke said he had no comment about his conversations with the two coaches.

Ohio State wingback Brian Baschnagel, who pounced on the fumble in the endzone on the controversial play, said that he scored.

"The linesman held up two hands for a touchdown, that's all I know," Baschnagel said. "I scored."

Taped replays of the play revealed that Archie Griffin and the left side of the OSU offensive line were not in a set position.

Despite Duke's official announcement, there was still speculation among many sportswriters and press personnel as to whether the ball had been snapped before the final gun.

In that case, the Bucks would have been assessed a five - yard penalty for illegal procedure and given one more shot at the endzone from about the six - yard line.

The game cannot end on a penalty. But the officials ruled time had expired and the Bucks are no longer No. 1.

Jubilation took over as the delayed decision of Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke and other officials in the press box.

> "If they give it to Ohio State, Wayne Duke better not come out of that press box 'cause I'd shoot him," one MSU fan snarled.

Another MSU fan began razzing OSU Coach Woody Hayes. Hayes, already furious after someone tried to snatch his cap from his head, belted the offending student with the back of his fist.

"We won that game!" Hayes growled while storming off the field

A throng of happier people clustered around the press box where Duffy Daugherty, Chris Schenkel and Wayne Duke powwowed over a final announcement. Fans held up others who reached for autographs from the celebrities

Both the campus and East Lansing police were plagued by a large number of rowdy drunks, police said.

A $75 MSU football helmet was stolen in the stadium during the game, but was later recovered on Grand River Avenue

This was the scene at Spartan Stadium Saturday when it was announced over the public address system that MSU had indeed defeated Ohio State, 16 - 13. Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke announced the decision of the officials in the press box and the word was then relayed to the approximately 50,000 fans who remained about an hour after the game to hear the news.

PAT FARNAN Hello Spartans: good to see you that his program was going somewhere. Now Spartanland's own miracle worker can boast a following tantamount with that of Moses.

And Woody...ah...Hayes has taken another lump.

Woody lost poise

The flustered Ohio State coach witnessed his second straight bid for an unblemished record and national championship fizzle away Saturday.

And the "genial" veteran of the gridiron registered his despondency in a most unsportsmanlike fashion by biffing a Spartan spectator while exiting the playing field.

Bye - bye Woody.

Down in Ann Arbor the folks are a little more appreciative of the "greenies."

"They redeemed themselves, those damn greenies did," an exuberant Wolverine fan hollered amidst the revelry at Dooley's Saturday night.

Denny's got a program

Now Denny Stolz has a program, and the program is going somewhere.

"We're going up. That's where we're headed," Spartan quarterback Charlie Baggett said in the ecstatic, steam - filled dressing room following the game. "Nobody had faith in us. But we had faith in ourselves.

Those puzzling Spartans did it all right, and in inimitable style. Nothing commonplace about this one. They laid the leather to the Bucks, miracle or not, as the Big Red Machine suffered a mechanical breakdown.

The Bucks ate the big green apple.

Defense shines

Stolz showered his defensive unit with praise and rightly so. It was one helluva performance. Archie Griffin got his 100 yards and Cornelius Greene danced for his share. But the mighty Bucks crossed the goal line but once.

Three times the Spartans kept OSU from six points inside the ten yard line. They could not believe that OSU could win.

Meanwhile the stuttering Spartan offense moved the ball well at times against a vaunted, though untested, OSU defense. The Spartans used just three big plays to demonstrate their offensive prowess.

Hans Neilsen's 39-yard field goal, which knotted up the score in the first half, looked like a total failure until it floated over the cross bar. Bad snap, shaky hold, low kick - good. Hard to believe.

Charlie Baggett's touchdown pass to Mike Jones? Well, he couldn't have placed it in his hands any better.

Levi Jackson's 88-yard touchdown run on a fullback - up - the - middle play was also hard to believe. Jackson had about 90 yards of fairway staring him in the face, and he just burned it up with a quick feint and a display of 9.6 speed.

Day of the Spartan

It was simply an incredible performance. The Spartans made mistakes and overcame them. It was a tribute to Stolz and the whole damn bunch of Spartans.

And the Buckeyes? I have got to hand it to them. They never quit. Of course they are supposed to be the best team in the country, but what the Spartans did to them, particularly Jackson's run, would have sent most teams home in a catatonic state.

Nga · Mamba Machema, a special delegate to the United Nations and member of the Front for National Liberation of Angola, says that his country wants to establish a transitional government by December 6. Angola is currently a Portuguese colony and the richest nation in Africa.

An African liberation group is threatening to destroy Angola's capital city if attempts to form a transitional government there are hampered by Portugal, a United Nations official said at MSU Thursday.

Nga - Mamba Machema, a member of the special UN delegation representing the un official provisional government in Angola, said that the Front for the National Liberation of Angola's (FNLA) threat is intended to help sever his nation's colonial ties to Portugal by the end of the year.

During Machema's three - day visit, sponsored by the African Study Center, the 1967 MSU graduate discussed the current situation in Angola with students and faculty.

Angola, the third - richest nation in Africa and one of Portugal's last three colonies on that continent, has had trouble establishing itself as an independent nation.

Machema said that Guinea - Bissau declared its independence a year ago, and is receiving a limited amount of opposition from Portuguese citizens and mulattos living on the country's coast.

Mozambique has had no major difficulties in negotiating her independence, he said, because a major African party has emerged to help form a transitional government.

But Angola, which has been Portugal's chief supplier of raw materials and minerals, has met all sorts of opposition toward independence.

"Portugal's economy is based on Angola," Machema said. "If Angola got her independence tomorrow Portugal would need help from Angola."

This economic dependence on Angola has led Portugal to use various excuses to delay the colony's drive to independence.

De

Machema said that the Portuguese claimed that they could not negotiate with Angola because the people were divided between three groups.

"They said, 'we will wait until the country is united,'" Machema said.

Machema said one barrier to independence was that two other African liberation groups located in Angola could not agree with the FNLA on the method of forming a transitional government.

Another problem, he said, was the negotiations with Portugal.

"The Portuguese socialists didn't want to talk to the FNLA because the FNLA wasn't a socialist group," Machema said. The Portuguese proposed an agreement to halt the fighting between Portuguese soldiers and African citizens in Angola. The agreement also stated that if the Portuguese began maneuvers again, the FNLA could resume hostilities.

The FNLA in turn agreed to cease hostilities in return for the establishment of a transitional government, Machema said.

Machema said that Angola's cause is not a desperate one, however,

"History and time are on our side," he said. "Africa belongs to Africans."

Machema said his duties as a member of the Angolan UN delegation were to help express Angola's views toward Portugal's colonial policy to member nations, and to contact UN service agencies on possible assistance to Angola.

Court reaches decision on narcotic prescriptions

By United Press International

The state Court of Appeals ruled today that doctors may prescribe narcotic drugs for patients they neither see nor examine.

The decision overruled a judgement by a Recorder's Court judge and ordered a new trial for a 76 - year - old Detroit doctor convicted of violating the state's controlled substances act.

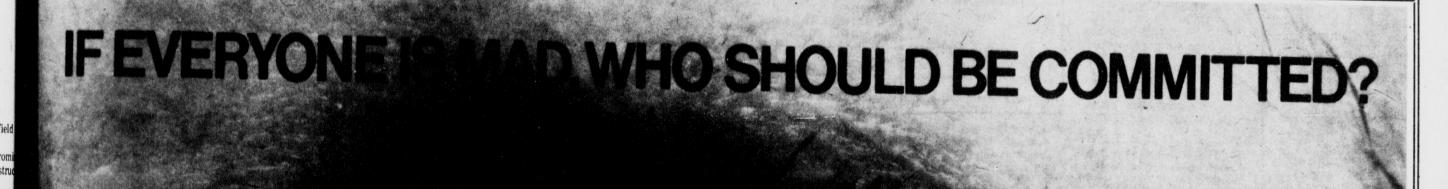

The physician, William V. Kerwin, was arrested after undercover policemen requested, and obtained, sedatives and diet pills without being examined.

The Appeals Court said state law only prohibits persons from manufacturing, delivering or intending to deliver or manufacture narcotics.

"It does not prohibit the writing of presciptions for controlled substances by a physician authorized under the act to prescribe such substances," Appeals Court Judge Thomas M. Burns said. "Furthermore, no section of the act contains any provision dictating the manner in which a physician may prescribe controlled substances.

"There is no prohibition against the prescribing of controlled substances by a physician without his first having conducted a physical examination of the patient, nor does the court forbid the writing of prescriptions for one who does not personally appear at the doctor's office."

While Kerwin's actions "May not have conformed with accepted medical practice, they were not a violation of the act," Burns said.

Well-written resumes win with employers

By LARRY MORGAN State News Staff Writer

A person may have the strongest of magnetic personalities and great qualifications, but if he does not have a may never get a chance to show off his assets.

The intention of the letter is to whet the appetite of the employer and convince him that you are qualified for an interview. The resume then gives further details of your qualifications. They are not meant to get a person the job, but only to secure an interview.

The resume will usually be arranged good resume or letter of introduction, he into six categories. These are personal data, employment objective education. work experience, other interests and references.

Sales instrument

"This is an advertisement about yourself. It is not the total information about yourself, but enough to get the employer to talk with you," Tony Rogalski, asst. director of MSU placement services, said.

It is the sales instrument aimed at getting further communication with the prospective employer, he said. For most undergraduates, the resume will usually be only one page long. There is no rule limiting it to this length. But in most cases, Rogalski said, two pages is the absolute maximum. Organization important

The resume must be kept brief and to the point, since many corporation representatives receive close to 100 resumes a day and will not have the time or the patience to read a lengthy resume. Therefore, careful organization is important Under personal data, include your name, address, age, physical description and phone number, making sure to include the area code.

"For a student, it is a good idea to include both his local and home address, to get around any communication problems the employer might have in getting in touch with him," Rogalski said. Employment objective

In giving your employment objective, describe what you want to do when you secure employment.

"Zero in on the particulars, but also leave some flexibility," Rogalski advised.

Some of the phrases to avoid are, "working with people," "challenging position in management," and especially "any position that is open."

Employers are turned off by the person who does not appear to have made up his mind on the type of employment he is seeking, Rogalski said.

Begin the education segment of the resume with the most recent aspects of your education, like college degrees or years attending college, then work in reverse chronological order.

Indicate work accomplishments

Most resumes do not refer farther back than high school graduation.

In describing past work experience, pick the jobs which will be of most interest to the employer. Also, indicate any accomplishments you made while

Even if an applicant has not had any jobs related to the employment he or she is seeking, a person should list any previous jobs. They all indicate experience in a working situation.

honors, are the things that round him or her out. They can also help the person obtain another job in another area of the company if the particular job applied for is filled.

references are helpful. However, it is much better to use a professor who teaches your major or a former employer who would hire you again, Rogalski said.

Student - faculty rapport "The student should develop a rap with some faculty members over the ye This should be an ongoing thing and something which began the second tem the senior year," he pointed out,

It is also a good idea to take a copy the resume to the professor so he can it to refresh his memory.

If a student is going to have resur copied, the copies should be very near as close to the original as possi Rogalski said.

Neatness counts

There should be no typographi errors or smearing. The idea of neatnes very important and anything less than per cent is not acceptable, he said.

"Employers draw a lot of inferen from mistakes," Rogalski said.

Some of the phrases to avoi in resumes: "working wi people," "challenging position management" and especially "ar position that is open." Employe are turned off by the person wh does not appear to have made a his mind on the type employment he is seeking.

The resume should be accompar with a letter of introduction/applicat which is always handtyped, not copied

This letter revolves around t paragraphs and seven ideas, Rogalski s

Knowledge of company

The first paragraph indicates that applicant has some knowledge of company, and with that knowledge wo like a job with them.

Three examples should be given in second paragraph of any backgro aspects that are of interest to company. The examples should refer the resume for details.

In the third paragraph, m information should be requested from employer, such as any training program end the letter with a request for interview.

By requesting more inform person will be sure they received the and will also maintain contact with company

Deaf students face lecture hassle

By SUE McMILLIN State News Staff Writer

A deaf student may be able to lip read well enough to understand most of what his history professor is saying, but if the professor has a moustache or the class is on TV he may be lost.

The deaf student may not be able to lip read at all and must depend on his textbooks or classmates for important information. In cases like these, the student is paying for an education which he is providing for himself, Bob Anthony, graduate student C1570 Spartan Village, said.

Anthony, who is totally deaf, has made a plea to the Office of Programs for Handicapped Students, W409 Library, to find interpreters for deaf students.

Interpreters who know sign language are needed for some deaf students while others are looking for note takers.

"This University is just huge and it is not providing services for the deaf," he said.

He added that few colleges or universities offer special serices to help deaf students communicate more fully.

MSU offers a sign language class and lip reading therapy, John Hogg, graduate student, 408 N. Sycamore St., Lansing, said. There is also a class on lip reading.

But these services do not solve the problems that deaf students are having in a classroom situation.

'Everyone's individual deafness is different and the services they need vary." Penny Atkins, a counselor in the handicap programs office, said.

Atkins said the office knew of four students on campus who are totally deaf and several others who are hard of hearing. A deaf person can sometimes hear sounds but cannot distinguish words, while someone who is hard of hearing can training in sign language because it would take about six months for a person to become proficient enough to communicate well.

Two other deaf students at MSU discussed the various problems they have encountered.

Greg Teschendorf, freshman, 11 Abbot Hall and Janet Wolff, sophomore, 723 S. Hubbard Hall believe that deaf people should learn to talk and read lips so they do not have to depend on sign language.

But Anthony argues that lip reading is a good way of communicating on a one to one basis, but is not always successful in other instances.

Teschendorf agreed that there were cases where it was difficult to use lip reading. He cited difficult situations such as classes where there is no text to supplement the lectures, where the professor has a moustache or where there is much class discussion.

He added that he relied on his classmates to fill in the facts that he missed .

Wolff cited television classes as one of the most difficult lip reading situations. She said that unless the camera is right on the lecturer's face at all times, part of the lecture is missed.

Though she is not seeking an interpreter who is familiar with sign language, Wolff does need someone to help her take notes.

"I can't lip read and take notes at the same time," she said.

There are three general ways which a deaf person uses to communicate - lip reading, sign language or written communication. Often a deaf person will find that using a combination of these three ways will allow him to communicate more widely, Anthony said.

But over 90 per cent of the deaf
