N. Viets conquests unchecked; Thieu's political position fragile

By the Associated Press

North Vietnamese forces rolled south toward South Vietnam's most populous areas Tuesday, virtually unchecked by the broken South Vietnamese army. The Saigon government's control was cut down to the southern corner, only one-third of the land mass, and Communist-led forces were biting into that.

The rapid Communist conquest further weakened President Nguyen Van Thieu's fragile political position and produced new calls for his resignation.

Government soldiers abandoned Qui Nhon, the third largest city in South Vietnam, and later Nha Trang, 200 miles north of Saigon. Government officials were also reported abandoning Phan Rang and Phan Thiet, within 100 miles east of Saigon, apparently conceding the two provincial capitals without a shot being fired.

Chaos was reported in Nha Trang, its population of 200,000 swelled by more than 60,000 refugees, as Communist-led forces moved in from the west. Refugees and residents mobbed the airport for flights that never came. The American captain of an evacuation plane hurled deserting soldiers to the ground and let women and children aboard.

The U.S. consulate in Nha Trang burned its records and evacuated the staff before the advancing forces arrived. Shops and hotels were closed and shuttered. Sources said most government and military staffs had been evacuated. Witnesses reported rioting and shooting.

It was apparent that Thieu would have to move quickly to stabilize his forces, return order and draw the line of retreat where the Saigon army would stand and fight.

Some military analysts see the government eventually pushed into a tight circle around Saigon, and hardpressed to defend it.

Saigon opposition Sen. Ton That Dinh said he had been joined by a handful of normally pro-government legislators to call an extraordinary session of the 60-man senate on Wednesday to discuss a motion forcing a change of government.

The Viet Cong called for Thieu's ouster in a broadcast Monday and said it would then be ready for peace talks with a new Saigon government "to quickly settle all the affairs of South Vietnam."

Some U.S. government experts in Washington are saying privately that there is no way to stop the Communist offensive from gobbling up all of south Vietnam. They say the only questions are whether it will be days or weeks or whether it will come by military or political action.

President Ford has let it be known indirectly that he attributes Hanoi's military successes in South Vietnam to its violations of the Paris accord and Congress' failure to grant more aid to South Vietnam.

White House press secretary Ron Nessen told newsmen Monday he was sticking close to words Ford had used with him in private as he said:

"I know he (Ford) feels the pullback of the South Vietnamese forces to a line which President Thieu feels is defensible was caused by two things: one, the violations of the Paris accord by the North Vietnamese; and second, by the effect on the morale of the South Vietnamese of the prospect of no further American ammunition and equipment which would enable them to fight for their own survival."

Nessen's comments came after Ford declined, for the third straight day, to respond directly to questions from newsmen about the situation in Vietnam.

Thieu's forces are now outnumbered about 2 to 1. He has lost about half of his 13-division force in recent weeks — to casualties, desertion or capture. All of the main force divisions are now concentrated in the Saigon area and the Mekong Delta. They are faced with eight North Vietnamese divisions already in the southern region and at least six more Communist-led divisions freed after the easy march down the coast. Lead North Vietnamese elements are just 50 miles from Saigon.

Another beleaguered Indochinese leader, President Lon Nol of Cambodia, made a tearful departure for Indonesia on the first leg of a trip that is expected to turn into political exile. The 61-year-old president said before leaving that he hoped his exit would open the way to peace negotiations with the Communist-line Khmer Rouge insurgents, who were shelling the airport as Lon Nol boarded a plane.

SAYS CLASS INSULTED INTELLIGENCE

Student sues university

By ROSANNE LESS
State News Staff Writer

How many times have you voiced the universal student gripe: "This class is boring and I am not learning anything?"

A Connecticut woman thought the same thing, and has filed a $350 lawsuit against the University of Bridgeport for insulting her intelligence with a required teaching-methods class.

The suit that Ilene Ianniello, of Shelton, Conn., is bringing against the University of Bridgeport is believed to be the first of its kind in the nation. Lawsuits filed by students against schools in the past have challenged financial refunds, civil rights issues or possible violations of privacy.

Ianniello, a housewife who attended the university on a part-time basis, is charging that a required teaching methods course was an insult to her intelligence. She is attempting to prove misrepresentation and breach of contract. If her suit is successful, students would have the same rights that any consumer has if a product is faulty.

Misrepresentation means that the product that was advertised was not delivered. Breach of contract means that the value of the commodity (in this case the course material) was not worth the money paid, and therefore the money should be returned.

The Ianniello case will be heard by a jury in the Second District Court of Connecticut, but no trial date has been set.

Ianniello told the State News she had a very difficult time finding an attorney to take her case and almost had to settle for a court-appointed lawyer. She also said that the cost of her suit is considerable, but that the suit is something that she feels compelled to pursue.

Ianniello said she went through the proper complaint channels at the University of Bridgeport but nothing was settled to her satisfaction. She accused the college of refusing to bargain with her in settling the matter out of court.

"I have learned nothing in this class," she said. "Can you imagine an instructor passing out papers to 15 people for 40 minutes? That's what went on in the class."

Though she accuses the instructor of incompetence, she said she wants to leave that issue out of the suit to avoid humiliating him. However, Ianniello said she believes universities have a legal, if not moral, obligation to represent themselves truthfully as well as to educate and the university failed in both of these areas.

Ianniello added that there were no tests,

"MSU is sensitive to incidents of malpractice by the faculty," said Chitra Smith, associate professor in James Madison College. "I wouldn't expect a lawsuit to

"While incompetency of the faculty is a common complaint, I don't know that there is a law against incompetency. I don't think the courts have the moral authority to decide competency, nor do I see how competency can be legislated."
Carolyn Stieber, MSU ombudswoman

no work of any sort in the class and that the professor had no basis upon which to grade students.

"Basically, he will have to prove that he taught something," she said.

Most administrators here agree that there is little likelihood that MSU students will attempt to sue the University for poor quality education, since MSU's academic grievance procedure is "precise and effective."

MSU spokespersons also agree that the Ianniello lawsuit is a difficult if not impossible one to win.

happen here, because MSU has a very effective system dealing with individual academic grievances.

"A lawsuit would be an unnecessarily expensive and protracted way of complaining."

Presently, a student with an academic complaint would first approach the instructor to discuss the matter. If this proved unsuccessful, a student would approach the department chairman. Failing this, the dean of the college would be consulted. If this also fails, a student's last recourse is the Student leaps from hall window in apparent attempt at suicide

By RALPH FRAMMOLINO
State News Staff Writer

An MSU sophomore jumped from the elevator lobby window of the eighth floor North Hubbard Hall early Tuesday morning in an apparent suicide attempt.

The student, identified as Warren Richard Dolan Jr., 20, 339 E. Wilson Hall, was taken to Sparrow Hospital after campus police received a call from a North Hubbard Hall resident about the incident at 6:53 a.m.

Dolan was listed in serious condition at the hospital late Tuesday afternoon, suffering from multiple fractures of his legs and hips.

From the information police obtained from Dolan before he went into surgery, he intended to jump from the 10th floor, but wound up on the eighth floor and went out of the window there.

"He was lucky," Captain Ferman Badgley said. "He hit the corner of the overhang, which gave, and bounced down into the trees from there."

Badgley said that Dolan, a Detroit native, escaped more serious injury because he landed feet first.

Dolan, a hotel, restaurant and institutional management major, was employed as a page in the Michigan House of Representatives. House Sergeant-at-Arms Frank Selmer said he became suspicious when Dolan did not show up for work or call.

"He didn't seem to have any problems," Selmer said. "He was doing well in school. It's just an awfully hard thing to believe."

"He didn't live on the floor," said Dan Weingarden, 853 N. Hubbard Hall. "A guy on the floor found his notebook and cigarettes (on the window sill)."

Pete Edmonds, 870 N. Hubbard Hall, said he discovered the notebook and pack of cigarettes shortly after 7 a.m., when he was going down to the lobby to get a newspaper.

"It crossed my mind that someone had gone out of the window, but I thought, 'that's a bunch of crap—no one would go out the window,'" Edmonds said.

Edmonds said all he saw when he looked down from the window were policemen looking up.

"It was a complete surprise for us," said Thomas Bolin, Dolan's suitemate.

Doug Zatechka, area director of east complex, said the jump was the first he could recall since he took over in 1968.

Police have offered no explanation for the apparent suicide attempt and say they will question Dolan further today.

Saying it would be irresponsible to do otherwise, Gov. Milliken signs a bill that will raise Michigan's income tax from 3.9 per cent to 4.6 per cent. The increase was needed to maintain services and replace about $210 million lost when voters repealed the sales tax on food and prescription drugs.

Colleges up security to ease fear of rape

By New York Times and State News

Sexual assaults on college women are triggering massive reactions across the country from students and administrators concerned for the safety of the more than four million women enrolled in American colleges and universities.

At school after school contacted by the New York Times, officials reported broad-scale counteractions to the growing problem of rape on campus. Expensive new security systems have been installed in many places, escort and rape-aid services are burgeoning and courses in the martial arts, designed for women, are being offered free of charge and, in many cases, for college credit.

With all this, however, police, school administrators and students all agree that because so many victims fail to report the crime, attempts to tabulate the incidence of rape on campus are relatively futile. They do not know whether increases or decreases in reported rape indicate changes in the effectiveness of reporting or in the frequency of the crime. (In 1973, the latest statistics available, the FBI reported the number of known rapes totaled 100 on 31 campuses.)

At MSU there were three rapes and one attempted rape reported on campus in the 1973-74 fiscal year. There are no plans for extended security systems.

"What we do have is an educational program to prevent rapes in the future," said Richard Bennett, director of the Public Safety Dept. at MSU.

The program, which has been in operation for about two years, is presented to any interested groups.

Bennett said he has no idea how many rapes go unreported.

"There is a stigma involved and the victims don't tell us the same as they don't tell their parents," he said.

A spokesperson at the Women's Resource Center said that outside of the MSU Karate Club, which advertises that it will teach women self-defense, there are no programs directly aimed at self-defense for women.

The campus of Wayne State University in Detroit is dotted with blue lights, marking hotline phones. As soon as the receiver is taken off the hook, it pinpoints for University police the scene of trouble. A similar system of 100 white phone boxes has been installed at the University of Chicago.

And the Ann Arbor City Council voted an expenditure of $50,000 for the formation of a community anti-rape advisory board to develop a comprehensive prevention program for the city—home of the University of Michigan—where the incidence of reported rape increased markedly last year.

In some instances women students are known to have been raped by other students. Of the six cases the school judicial officer at the University of Florida said he had dealt with last year, for example, in most of them, he said, "The people knew each other, or at least the girl could identify her assailant by name."

Sometimes, also, the rapist is someone who has infiltrated the campus community and just likes "to hang around."

Sometimes, college administrators say, the rapist will travel long distances to rape a student. At many other places, however,

Mother renounces Maharaj Ji

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The mother of Guru Maharaj Ji, the 17-year-old Indian religious leader now living in the United States with an American wife, renounced her son Tuesday and accused him of being a playboy instead of a holy man.

In a signed statement, his mother declared she was removing her son as spiritual leader of the Divine Light Mission and no longer recognized him as the "perfect master," as he is known to his followers.

Known as Shri Mataji, or holy mother, she said her son, "under the instigation of certain bad elements in the U.S. Divine Light Mission, has continuously disrespected my will by adopting a despicable, nonspiritual way of life."

Susan Butcher, a 30-year-old Canadian devotee of the Divine Light Movement, said the Guru's relatives in India were upset with the way Maharaj Ji was living in the United States.

"He has not been practicing what he has been preaching," said Butcher, who became a devotee of the Guru when he visited Toronto in 1971.

Speaking in behalf of the Guru's mother, Butcher said: "He has always preached and recommended his devotees to live a life of vegetarianism, celibacy and abstaining from alcohol and all excessive forms of materialism. Now he himself is indulging and encouraging his devotees to eat meat, to get married and have sexual relations and to drink. He's not living a spiritual life. He's being a playboy."

Butcher said she thought many of the guru's devotees, which number eight million in India, would still remain faithful to the Divine Light teachings, though they would not recognize him as their leader.

The Divine Light Mission was founded in 1961 by the guru's father, who died in 1966. After his death, his widow proclaimed her youngest son to be the next head of the movement while she remained its patron.

The guru was last in India in June 1973 when he posted a $13,000 bond with Indian authorities. He had become embroiled in a customs case involving several hundred thousand dollars worth of jewelry, other valuables, foreign currency and travelers checks seized from disciples who traveled with him.

C. L. Tandon, general secretary of the Divine Light Mission in India, claimed the guru had "shown disrespect to his mother by removing her pictures from the American Divine Light missions, saying she is not worthy of worship but that his wife is."

The guru married his American secretary last May. They had their first child, a daughter named Prem Lata, meaning Vine of Love, last month.

The American Divine Light mission is headquartered in Denver, Colo., but the guru and his 26-year-old wife were last reported living in a mansion in Malibu, Calif.

Congress rates low in poll

Most Americans believe President Ford is doing a poor job but more feel that Congress' performance is worse, according to the Harris poll.

In results released Monday, the polling organization said that of 1,536 households surveyed, 60 per cent feel President Ford is doing a poor job and 67 per cent feel Congress is doing a worse one.

The poll said the only time in the last 12 years the Congress has received a lower rating was in January 1974, just before the impeachment hearings. At that time, 69 per cent reacted negatively to the Congress and 10 per cent were not sure. Currently, 7 per cent are unsure.

Mayors seek re-election

A long-time political pro in Chicago and a 29-year-old Wisconsin mayor once known as the "hippie alderman" sought re-election Tuesday in races that both were expected to win.

The expert was Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, who was heavily favored to win an unprecedented sixth term. The maverick was Mayor Paul Soglin of Madison, Wis., seeking a second term.

Daley's opponents were Republican John Hoellen and Socialist Worker candidate Willie Mae Reid.

Soglin's challenger was former Mayor Harry Reynolds, who argued that city government has grown too big under the leadership of the one-time radical.

Judge rules on jet crash

A judge has ruled there is no proof sabotage was involved in the crash of a United Airlines jet which killed the wife of Watergate figure E. Howard Hunt and 45 other persons.

Circuit Court Judge Nicholas Bua ruled Monday in Chicago that United Airlines was negligent and "violated its duty as a common carrier."

After the crash at Midway Airport on Dec. 8, 1972, there were rumors it was part of a conspiracy linked to the Watergate scandal and investigation because one of the victims was Hunt's wife, Dorothy.

In September 1973, the National Transportation Safety Board blamed the crash on failure of the pilot "to exercise positive flight management" during an instrument landing.

Unit asks to donate assets

The Richard Nixon Foundation, which announced dissolution several months ago, has asked Superior Court for permission to donate its assets, including written materials and oral interviews, to Whittier College.

The foundation, which has no financial assets, was set up in 1969 to develop a Nixon presidential library but never engaged in fund raising and did not select a site or design for the library.

Dissolution of the foundation was announced two months ago following approval by the 25 trustees at the suggestion of President Leonard K. Firestone, Patricia Reilly Hitt and others.

No current financial estimate of the documents is available.

Mazda announces rebates

Mazda Motors of America Inc. announced Tuesday it will offer $500 rebates on its 1974 rotary engine Japanese-made cars.

The rebate program will be effective until May 31 on all 1974 RX2, RX3 and RX4 models. The program is an attempt to reduce inventories and the 1975 models are not included.

The list price on the RX4 models is $4,245 for a Sedan, $4,295 for a hardtop and $4,445 for a station wagon.

Mazda sold about 68,000 cars and trucks in the United States last year.

Fighting erupts in Cyprus

Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriots fought raging gun battles for nearly three hours in Nicosia early Tuesday. A Canadian officer with the UN peace force was killed while two Greek Cypriots were wounded, officials said.

A UN spokesman said the officer was found dead on the balcony of his room in the Ledra Palace Hotel with a bullet wound in the head. Authorities at the UN presumed he was killed during the gun battle.

The hotel is on the green line separating the Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot communities and is used as a barracks by the Canadian contingent of the peace force. The officer's identity was withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Army advances on rebels

The Iraqi government announced that its army was advancing on the last strongholds of the rebel Kurdish tribesmen along the Iranian border following the expiration of an amnesty offer. The Baghdad regime claims that thousands of Kurds have surrendered, but about 9,000 guerrillas are reported holding out in the mountains of northern Iraq. About 100,000 troops with tanks and planes are reported massed against them.

Iran, which had been the chief support of the rebellion, came to terms with Iraq recently and was expected to close its frontier to Kurdish refugees today. The Turkish border also is reportedly closed to them.

5 POUNDS OF SUGAR DROPS UNDER $2
March grocery prices fell over 2%

By The Associated Press

There's good news at the grocery store. An Associated Press marketbasket survey shows prices declined on a wide variety of items during March, cutting supermarket bills by more than 2 per cent.

The decreases did not follow any particular pattern and they were offset, in part, by increases in the price of chopped chuck and eggs. But the declines do provide an indication that grocery prices may be leveling off and that this year's rate of increase will be below the cost spirals of 1973 and 1974.

The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and nonfood items, checked the price on March 1, 1973 at a supermarket in each of 13 cities and has rechecked at the start of each succeeding month.

During March, the marketbasket bill declined in 11 cities, down an average of 3.2 per cent, and increased in two cities, up an average of six-tenths of a per cent. Over-all, there was an average drop of 2.7 per cent.

The situation was an improvement over February, when the bill dropped in nine cities and rose in four, but the price of groceries was still much higher than last year. In the 12 months preceding March 31, the marketbasket bill went up an average of 14.2 per cent. Over the 25-month period during which the AP has been checking prices, the bill went up 29.8 per cent.

Farmers have been getting less money for their products, but the decrease has not been fully reflected at the supermarket, mainly because the cost of the food itself is only a small factor in the over-all price paid by the consumer. Higher costs for transportation, labor, fuel and other items have taken up much of the decrease.

In addition, the food processors and retailers are trying to make up for profit lost during the 1973 price freeze.

The government said Monday that farm prices dropped 2 per cent from Feb. 15 to March 15. It was the fifth straight monthly decline and compared with a 4 per cent drop from Jan. 15 to Feb. 15.

Dept. of Agriculture economists have said they expect food prices to go up about 3 per cent in each of the first two quarters of 1975. They are reluctant to predict what will happen after that, noting that a lot depends on weather conditions in the farm belt.

The decreases in the AP survey were led by sugar which dropped in price in every city checked and was down an average of 15 per cent during the month. In four cities — Chicago, Dallas, Detroit and Los Angeles — the price of a five-pound sack of granulated sugar was below $2 for the first time since last fall. Sugar prices remain two and three times what they were in March 1973, however.

Beef prices, which have been declining recently because of abundant supplies, increased in March, partly because of Easter sales that featured other meat items at the expense of things like hamburger.

The price of a pound of chopped chuck went up in seven cities during March, with increases ranging from 9 per cent in Miami to 40 per cent in Providence, R.I.

In contrast, pork chops, which have been going up in price, were down in six cities, despite smaller supplies of pork caused by production cutbacks on the part of farmers who say costs are too high for them to make a profit.

Proposed N.Y. college program combines undergrad, law studies

By NEW YORK TIMES

NEW YORK — City College and New York Law School have completed plans for what their officials believe will be the first program in the country to integrate undergraduate studies and legal education, allowing students to get law degrees six years after entering college.

Not only will the program shorten the usual sequence by one year and provide freshmen and sophomores with law courses, but — at a time of intense admissions competition — it will also virtually assure qualified students at the end of the junior year of getting into law school.

The Six-Year B.A.-J.D. program in urban legal studies is designed to encourage professional careers for blacks, Hispanic Americans, Asian Americans and women.

City College officials hope that the focus of the urban law program, on consumer law, landlord-tenant relations, small business enterprises, geriatric and medical law, criminal justice and civil liberties, will attract substantial numbers of minority-group students.

Ultimately, though, Dr. Robert E. Marshak, the president of City College, and Dean E. Donald Shapiro of New York Law School said there is to be no racial or ethnic discrimination in the program.

Admissions Test, undergraduate performance and continuing interest in urban law.

While admission to law school after three years of college is not unusual, the Assn. of American Law Schools in Washington says there is no other integrated program in which law professors teach undergraduates and liberal arts comprise a major portion of the law-school curriculum.

Boston University is contemplating the start of such a program in 1976.

discuss the Middle East situation, Egypt's official Middle East News Agency reported. It gave no details.

U.S. Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger said in a television interview in Washington that if oil-exporting states impose another embargo as they did during the 1973 Arab-Israeli war, U.S. reaction might be "far more severe this time than last time. He said military intervention in Middle East oil states is "a remote possibility."

Kissinger and Ford made similar statements some months ago. Government officials later stressed that military action would only be considered in extreme circumstances in which the Western economy was threatened with strangulation. But critics of Kissinger pointed out that he could have brushed his question with a "no comment" if he had not wanted to warn the Arabs.

'76 Wolverine staff posts open

The MSU Yearbook, the Wolverine, is accepting applications for positions on the 1976 yearbook staff. All positions are paid and begin next fall quarter. A complete reorganization and redefinition of the Wolverine has recently taken place, with all positions being reviewed and explicitly defined. Staff positions involve a maximum of creativity and responsibility and offer excellent on-the-job training in copy writing, reporting, layout, photography and sales.

Persons interested in applying should call or stop in the yearbook office in 30 Student Services Bldg. any afternoon between noon and 5 p.m. The Wolverine phone number is 355-8263. Deadline for applications is Friday, April 11.

Admission to the program, which will begin next September if it receives final approval from the Board of Higher Education, will be under the aegis of a special committee.

A high school average of 80 or better will be required.

New York Law School has guaranteed that it will admit as many as 50 of the students, and perhaps more in subsequent years, after they have finished their junior studies at City College. Students will be evaluated on the basis of their score on the Law School

Paper suggests Israeli pullback

By The Associated Press

A leading Israeli newspaper has suggested that Israel should pull back its forces in the Sinai Desert another three miles in response to Egypt's decision to reopen the Suez Canal.

There was no reaction from Israeli political leaders or officials. But Israeli ships will be barred from the waterway because Egypt and Israel are still technically at war.

The Israeli army's lines are now 12 miles east of the canal as a result of the disengagement agreement negotiated by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger in January 1974. The suggestion for an additional small pullback was made Monday by the newspaper Haaretz.

It said President Anwar Sadat's announcement that he would reopen the canal June 5, lessens the chance of war, and Israel should respond with "a gesture of its own." The paper added that this "would not cost much and would not endanger Israel's security."

In Cairo, Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy and U.S. Ambassador Hermann Eilts held their third meeting in three days on Monday.

Diplomatic sources said Eilts was sounding out the Egyptian government's latest position for use in the reassessment of U.S. Middle East policy ordered by President Ford.

Ford ordered the reassessment after the collapse of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's attempt to negotiate another Israeli troop withdrawal in Sinai.

Eilts is expected to travel to Washington soon to take part in the policy review.

Fahmy later met Soviet Ambassador Vladimir Polyakov to discuss the Middle East situation, Egypt's official Middle East News Agency reported. It gave no details.

U.S. Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger said in a television interview in Washington that if oil-exporting states impose another embargo as they did during the 1973 Arab-Israeli war, U.S. reaction might be "far more severe this time than last time. 'U' explains class priority policy

By PAT NARDI
State News Staff Writer

Few classes are more popular than Horticulture 323 (Indoor Plants and Flowers). This term 787 students signed up for the class, which can only accommodate 300 students because of limited greenhouse space.

Though department staff are delighted their course is so popular, students who are turned away from the class, especially last-term seniors, are less than pleased.

According to instructor David Sanford, students who do not get the class often complain and one even took his case to the ombudsman last year. The ombudsman reports that she often gets complaints from students who do not get the classes they sign up for.

In order to be fair to students the University has a priority system established to determine which students get into classes. Each department, however, is able to alter that system to fit its specific needs. Therefore, despite University priorities, Horticulture 323, for example, is opened to students with a higher class standing before Honors College students.

According to the registrar's office, the recommended University classifications of students from the greatest to the least priority are: special students like handicapped or athletes in season, graduate students, Honors College students, seniors, juniors, sophomores and freshman.

Within each of these priority groups there is also an alphabetical priority based on the first letter of the student's last name. This alphabetical priority is reversed regularly. This means that a last-term senior is not given preference over a first-term senior.

"We have no way of knowing who is a last-term senior or a first-term senior. I wish we did," Sanford said. "I also wish we knew how many times a person had signed up for this course in the past."

A little-known fact is that incoming freshmen who attended summer orientation generally get priority over everyone else fall term so that they do not have to face the "pit" for their first time around in registration.

After registration is completed, each department gets computer printouts of all students who sign up for each class. The department can then cut extra students itself to fit class sizes or send the printout back to the registrar for "machine discrimination" that cuts students according to the University priority system.

Sanford said some misinformed students do not get the classes they want because they do not sign up for sections that are labeled closed during early registration. A student can sign up for a closed class and get it if he has a high enough priority, Sanford said.

If a student is unhappy about not getting a class, that student should take the complaint first to the instructor, then to the department chairman, then to the dean of the college and then to the ombudsman. While most departments do follow University priority system to the letter, any department can make the final decision on how to admit students.

Nader, Carr to talk on campus

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader and congressman Bob Carr will be speaking on pollution at MSU this week. Nader will be speaking in the Auditorium at 3 p.m. Monday. Carr will be giving a lecture in 109 Anthony Hall at 7 tonight and will hold an open forum in 35 Union at 8:30 p.m. Thursday.

Carr will be speaking on the role of government in solving problems of energy and the environment and Nader will speak about the role of the public in combating those problems. Though both speeches are free of charge, Nader will receive $3,000 and expenses for his appearance.

Carr's lecture and Nader's speech are both part of a course called "Pollution of the Environment: Causes and Cures" that is being offered by chemical engineering. Other guest speakers for the course include W. J. Coppoc, vice president of environmental protection for Texaco Inc., and Hans G. Elias, director of the Midland Macromolecular Institute, an independent research organization that works closely with Dow Chemical.

The course was designed by the chemical engineering faculty for the general student body and requires no unusual skills in math or science.

"We want to give insight on how these problems will be dealt with by engineering and technology," Donald Kilner, course coordinator said. "People by and large tend to sit back and say that technology will take care of it."

Department chairman M. H. Chetrick said that speakers from all fields are lecturing in the course so that students can get all of the points of view on the problem of pollution.

"We think this is what education is all about," Chetrick said. "A person should get data from all points of view and analyze the situation in his or her own mind and come out with what he or she thinks is the answer."

"We're interested in developing more general education courses but it's just a question of not having the resources to do this."

Nader's visit to MSU is also being sponsored by the Dept. of Political Science.

Hall fire probe slows as police seek eyewitness

By RALPH FRAMMOLINO
State News Staff Writer

Investigations to find the person who lit two fires on the second floor of East Holmes Hall Feb. 18 have ground to a halt.

But police still have strong suspicions about who the person may be, and, if one possible eyewitness makes herself known, could make an arrest.

The mid-February fire sent over 500 pajama and robe-clad students into a freezing mist at 4:39 a.m. About 25 of those students jumped to safety from the second floor where the fire originated.

"There's a 98 per cent chance that this is the person," said campus police Detective Jim Quinn about the suspect.

Quinn was in charge of the investigation and went room to room interviewing 133 people in the hall to line up information regarding the fire.

"I need an eyewitness," Quinn said. "I received information that a girl exited a room as the suspect struck the match and lit the fire."

Quinn did say that this information may be unreliable because it was the substance of a conversation overheard as the students stood shivering outside the hall.

"She (the witness) said 'I saw him strike the match. I didn't think there would be that much smoke from such a small pile of rubbish,'" Quinn recounted.

If such a witness exists, Quinn feels that her testimony would take the investigation out of the inactive stages and provide enough evidence to go to the prosecutor's office to seek a warrant.

Police said that the suspect appeared to have severe mental problems. Quinn said that he got this impression from the way he reacted to the few questions, the way he reacted to the whole interview when questioned.

"He talks about being two persons, but I'm not a psychiatrist. He speaks in the abstract about himself quite often," Quinn said.

"The suspect told Jimmie (Detective Quinn) 'That's not really me, it's the other me,'" said Captain Fermin Badgely, who is in charge of the campus police detective department.

Quinn said that the suspect, who has been in the armed services, has been known to use LSD and has had a previous record of mental illness.

"He has been reported as acting strange," Quinn said.

He also said that the suspect is well known in the hall.

But police are the first to admit that the evidence they have is, at best, circumstantial. They put the suspect through a polygraph (lie detector) test, a device often used by police to make sure of their case and encourage the suspect to confess, but the test was inconclusive.

"He passed the crucial questions on the polygraph exam," Quinn said.

Quinn said the police put a great deal of reliance on the polygraph.

"I've probably run 20 to 30 polygraph exams and they've never said that a person did something when he didn't and vice versa," Quinn said.

The police feel, however, that the suspect's mental condition caused the peculiar reading of the polygraph.

Douglas Zatecka, area director of East Complex, said that though he is concerned with the investigation and would like nothing better than to determine who started the fire, he is obligated to protect the rights of the suspect because of inconclusive evidence. He said that he is keeping his eye on any situation that would put students' lives in danger.

Fix meeting format

The trustees have shown with their new meeting format that they know the correct direction in which to head. Now they must lock the new format into regular policy to insure that it is adhered to and that there will be no regression to the old way.

More crucial, however, is that the trustees prove their sincerity and good intent by staying clear of the administrative shenanigans that have characterized the board in the past.

Under the old format, the trustees held a closed meeting Friday mornings before the public meetings. Though the trustees deny it, the closed meetings could well have been a place for rehearsing their actions and discussing issues that they might have had to confront in the public meeting to follow.

The new format, in which the public meeting is held first and an "executive financial session" (closed meeting) follows if needed, could erase the stigma of dress-rehearsed meetings. And a revised image of the trustees is not at all a bad idea at this point.

One of the things the new format could do would allow issues that are properly public issues but have financial content to be aired in public instead of in secret as they often were under the old format. As a result, the trustees will have moved a step closer to fully public proceedings. But since they can still hold controversial issues over until the executive financial session, though there is less likelihood of it, only the trustees will know for sure whether or not they are shamming the public.

Also, the new format frees trustees from sitting around a breakfast and financial session and allows them to acquaint themselves with immediate issues that surfaced at the previous night's public briefing session. The old format gave the trustees no time between the public briefing and the public meeting to find out for themselves what was going on.

It has finally come to light that the trustees were indeed discussing issues in those closed sessions that did not merit secret discussion. The trustees say that the new format will prevent such discussion, though there is certainly nothing in the new format that would preclude it.

Hence, depending which way the trustees go with this new format, they could either clear their image, or add even more shades of doubt to their credibility.

City botches parking

Joni Mitchell's song says "they paved paradise and put up a parking lot." To call a half-block area near East Lansing City Hall "paradise" would be stretching the point mightily, but city council's decision to turn the area into a parking lot is an even greater distortion of reason. It is also characteristic of East Lansing's poor parking policy actions.

The council voted during spring break to construct a municipal employe lot on a spot now occupied by three city-owned houses and the Drug Education Center (DEC).

The result will be a loss of living space for a dozen more students in an already tight city housing market, and a forced relocation for DEC. Such a relocation could put DEC in a new home farther from campus with reduced accessibility for MSU students.

The decision to build a new parking lot is consistent with city council's previous actions only in its inconsistency and bad judgement.

City council approved a housing code containing a parking ordinance so ill-conceived that the council has now issued a moratorium on parking ordinance enforcement.

That parking ordinance has been attacked as discriminatory by some East Lansing residents, and the city has demanded the closing of the 50-year-old College Manor Apartments near City Hall because of insufficient parking, even though there are two city parking lots within a stone's throw of the College Manor building.

The city also wants to evict 23 members of a sorority for the same reason, and the sorority has threatened to take the city to court on the issue.

Instead of boarding up student housing, the council should reconsider its decision and take a serious look at alternatives proposed by councilman George Griffiths.

His most feasible proposal was to scrap the new lot and have the city rent spaces in existing city lots for its employes. He also mentioned offering cash bonuses to employes who would use public transportation, or the facilities provided by the erection of a new parking ramp.

Adoption of any of these alternatives would be far superior to the plan approved by council — a plan that both points up a disregard for students by city council and the combined inadequacy and fickleness of a city policy that makes parking in East Lansing far from paradise.

ANTHONY LEWIS

U.S. must feed S. Viets

"I have believed ever since I came to Washington that it is overwhelmingly in our national interest to put the debate on Indochina behind us." So said the man whose policy has kept the issue of Indochina before us for six more years.

Henry Kissinger's news conference last week must have troubled his supporters. It was the performance of a man so wounded by failure that in the course of blaming others he would exaggerate the damage to his country. It was a self-destructive performance.

Governments, like rational individuals, ordinarily try to minimize, not maximize, their losses. They do not go around crying: "Look at the terrible defeat we have caused! Look how unreliable we are!" But that is the way that Kissinger has reacted to the crumbling of South Vietnam's military position.

While in the Middle East, he broadcast his view that events in Indochina showed how allies could not count on the United States. Was that meant to encourage the Israelis to exchange territory for political assurances?

Then, at the news conference after his return, Kissinger spoke of America "destroying" South Vietnam by withholding aid. That, he said, would have a "cataclysmic" or "very dangerous impact on the United States position in the world."

The facts belie such talk. The United States has not caused Saigon's soldiers to cut and run. Nguyen Van Thieu, not we, appointed the corrupt officers who man the Saigon army's command structure. Thieu took the disastrous decision to withdraw without warning, pell-mell, from much of the country. His soldiers, not ours, are deserting and shooting their way on to refugee planes.

What is happening in Vietnam today is the collapse of a myth — the myth of an independent, flourishing, nationalist South Vietnam with the will to fight for itself. It is a case not of America "destroying a country" but of reality destroying an illusion.

Ten years ago Lyndon Johnson took the disastrous decision to make Vietnam a test of American strength. That was a bad enough idea then. To go on with it now, after all that has happened — to invite the world to judge us by Indochina — looks like lunacy.

There was a chance, six years ago, to "put the debate on Indochina behind us." It was to make the settlement then that we eventually did in 1973: the withdrawal of our forces in exchange for American prisoners.

But President Nixon and Kissinger insisted on more. They wanted to assure the survival of the Thieu government in Saigon for a "decent interval" that apparently, in their minds, ran at least until Jan. 20, 1977. To achieve that objective they widened the war into Cambodia, lost thousands more Americans and hundreds of thousands of Vietnamese lives and bombed all of Indochina.

That policy failed. All the death and destruction could not make a myth real. It is possible for anyone to believe that an unimaginable amount of American aid, over three years or whatever, will not create a viable anti-Communist country in the southern part of Vietnam?

At this point there is one great American responsibility in South Vietnam. That is help feed and care for the millions — both sides of the political line — whose homes and families and lives have been wrecked by this horrible war. That is a cataclysm we should be worrying about. That is the real test of our dignity and decency as a country.

Instead of focusing on the desperate need for food and medicine, Americans still argue about military questions that are being overtaken by events. We have the spectacle of one more American general visiting Saigon. And Henry Kissinger tells us that the answer is more military aid, voted annually, if he has his preference with "no terminal date."

"The cumulative effect of nearly a decade of domestic upheaval is beginning to take its toll" on American foreign policy, Kissinger told the reporters in a grand voice. He referred to Vietnam as Watergate. But in this country people have the right to change things they do not like and they meant to change Vietnam as Watergate. It is not possible to conduct foreign policy independent of such public views, and it should not be.

What came through at that news conference was Kissinger's impatience with democracy. He plainly would have been happier as chancellor to an absolute monarch though even they do not always stick inflexibly to failed policies. Kissinger would have been ideal.

Policy violates rights

Coordinator Gary North's praise of Residence Hall Program's tripling policy as a preferable way to deal with the residence hall overcrowding problem skirts the real issue entirely.

The problem is not simply to choose between tripling and other alternatives, such as U-M's lottery system. The real issue North must deal with is the conflict between coerced living in the dorms, and the right to live where one chooses.

The choice of whether to live in a residence hall or off campus should be made solely by the individual according to his or her situation. An individual should not be forced into a residence hall lifestyle by the restrictive criteria established by the University (i.e., class standing, age, marital status, military experience, etc.).

WMU is only the most recent of many colleges and universities nationwide to rescind its residence hall requirement. MSU has advanced only to the point of granting a waiver to sophomores who wish to avail themselves of housing options off campus. How nice for MSU to grant me one of my constitutional rights which they took away from me under other circumstances.

The present problem is too many people in the dorms. It only seems logical to pursue a policy which would allow all students to live off campus if they so choose. Perhaps such a policy isn't implemented because fear of half-empty residence halls if students aren't forced to live in them.

If this is the reason for the present requirement, it is an admission of the inadequacies and unattractiveness of this living arrangement.

Typically, when it comes to progressive humane or constitutional policies, MSU falls flat on its green and white behind.

VIEWPOINT: PALESTINE

OJS charges false, misleading

By UFARI and OAS

On March 6 the State News published a viewpoint by the Organization of Jewish Students (OJS). This viewpoint (like several letters published in the preceding days) contains numerous untrue and misleading statements and allegations.

1. Like several previous pro-Zionist letters, it seeks to portray Zionists as lily-white angels who would never stoop to such undemocratic tactics as disrupting a forum with which they disagree. Nevertheless our Midwest forum was twice disrupted — first by means of two anonymous bomb threats, then again by a false fire alarm. Furthermore, about two days before the forum, an admitted Zionist denounced an Arab student as a "dirty Arab" and promised to bring 300 of his friends to prevent the forum from taking place.

Instead of acknowledging the strong probability that one or more of the Zionists were behind these disruptions, the OJS self-righteously tries to shift the blame onto us (UFARI and OAS) — accusing us of disrupting our own forum. This is like calling the murder of a man who has everything to live for a case of suicide; whenever it is not possible to prove the guilt of the probable murderer.

2. The OJS viewpoint accuses UFARI of "using false and misleading maps" in its leaflets. It fails to point out what is "misleading," but apparently refers to a set of four maps showing successive Israeli conquests as of 1947, 1949, 1967 and 1973, respectively. Due to an oversight, we did not indicate that the last of these maps represents the situation after the October 1973 war. (Israel has since been obliged to pull back to six miles from the Suez Canal.) The hypocrisy of the OJS accusation is illustrated by the fact that OJS has a similarly misleading map in its show window display in the student union. This map also fails to show Israel's 6-mile pullback.

3. The Organization of Jewish Students accuses UFARI of "distribution of literature from the National Youth Alliance — an anti-semitic, white supremacist, Nazi-type organization." This is a lie. The truth is that one leaflet published by the National Youth Alliance was distributed by the Organization of Arab Students. Furthermore, distribution of this leaflet by the OAS does not in any way represent an endorsement of any views of the National Youth Alliance other than those expressed in the leaflet.

But let us look into the nature of this National Youth Alliance. Investigation indicates that this organization is conservative and right-of-center, but there is no justification for calling it "anti-semitic" or "Nazi-like" unless one wishes to apply these terms to anyone who is critical of Israel.

The National Youth Alliance viewpoint, as expressed in the aforementioned leaflet is as follows: "Zionists...are loyal to a foreign power — Israel. They have applied blackmail pressure to the government of the United States, forcing it to adopt policies which are favorable to Israel which are bad for the American people. These policies, by alienating our Arab friends in the Middle East, have caused the present oil crisis."

Nowhere does the leaflet attack Jews or make anti-Semitic statements. The reverse side of the leaflet documents the Zionist domination of the major news media in the United States, namely ABC, CBS and NBC news and the nation's two top newspapers, the New York Times and Washington Post.

The OJS viewpoint states that "many lies and misconceptions have (been) spread the attempt to inform the public of the other side of the view of the conflict." This is true, but not in the way its authors intended. Consequently, we call upon Jewish students (both members and nonmembers of the OJS) to make an objective inquiry into the facts of the Palestine conflict. We are confident that most of those who do so will repudiate the Zionist doctrine, which holds that Palestine should be taken from the three million Palestinian inhabitants and given over to a state for adherents of the Jewish religion.

UFARI (United Front Against Racism and Imperialism) and OAS (Organization of Arab Students) are registered student groups.

The Doctor's Bag

BY ARNOLD WERNER, M.D.

Letters may be addressed to Dr. Werner at MSU Health Center. Names need not be included unless a personal reply is requested.

This is not meant to be a vulgar question but, when a man performs cunnilingus on a woman is it possible for his mustache to grow faster? In my experiences I have noticed this to be very true. Is there something to this or is it just my imagination?

A number of years ago a researcher reported that his beard hair increased in growth during a period of time when he anticipated having sexual relations. It has also been noted that the rate of growth of hair varies over time. But it seems that you are speaking of a specific isolated effect since you are not referring to your beard or your head hair.

You have presented one of the more unique and, I suppose, charming notions I have heard in recent years, but one which appears to be quite impossible.

Just how harmful is caffeine, and how much of an improvement is caffeine-free coffee? We've had a number of discussions on the debilitating effects of coffee, cocoa, tea and coke and would appreciate an informed opinion.

Caffeine is an effective central nervous system stimulant and is present in all of the beverages mentioned. Coffee contains the greatest amount and tea, while containing less, contains other potent chemicals that are closely related. A cup of coffee contains about 100 to 150 mg. of caffeine, a therapeutic dose of the drug. The usual cola drink contains about 35 to 55 mg. of the stuff as does cocoa and tea. In addition to its alerting effects, caffeine increases gastric secretions, increases the production of urine and increases heart rate.

The usual one to three cups a day of coffee that most people have doesn't seem to have any harmful effect, though some people who are extremely sensitive to the drug are bothered by even this small amount. As the intake increases, there is a greater chance of developing irritability and nervousness (sometimes perfectly mimicking anxiety), palpitations and other irregularities of heartbeat and symptoms of gastrointestinal irritation all the way up to development of duodenal ulcer.

In fact, people with duodenal ulcers are advised not to drink coffee or other caffeine-containing beverages. Caffeine toxicity is not unusual, as many people consume huge amounts of coffee. Children in particular are highly sensitive to caffeine and the amount they consume should be quite restricted.

The decaffeinated coffees circumvent most of the side effects under discussion. Of course, they don't do much to keep you awake and alert either. However, in part because of the familiar taste and odor and in part because of other chemicals which are not removed, many people find caffeine-free coffee to be a good substitute for the real thing. The fresh-brewed variety (as opposed to the instant type) is indistinguishable in taste from regular coffee.

I would like to know if insertion of a tampon before stimulation of the clitoris by the penis would in any way act like a contraceptive prohibiting any sperm cells from getting into the vagina. Is there anything else that could be inserted to block the occasional release of semen.

A tampon is not an effective contraceptive. The type of petting you describe so closely resembles sexual intercourse that one is hard put to make a real distinction. Certainly pregnancy can occur if ejaculation is that close to the vaginal opening.

The best thing to block semen would be a condom worn by the man or a diaphragm and contraceptive jelly used by the woman. Contraceptive foam used by the woman will also be effective though less so than the two previously mentioned methods. The combination of the condom and contraceptive foam is highly recommended.

YOU WILL NOT BE SPYING, MISS LA RUE—YOU WILL BE INVESTIGATING HOW WE CAN REAP A TAX ON IT.

VIEWPOINT: SCHOOL OF NURSING

Black nurses want fair chance

By Black Student Nurses' Assn.
 In response to the numerous articles regarding discrimination within the MSU School of Nursing, we, the black student nurses would like to share our views. We feel that clarification should be related to black nursing students as individuals, the Minority Project, and the overall nursing program.

We are writing this article as a black student organization, after having discussed and shared our ideas about the current issue of discrimination. We reject the idea of being stereotyped, and feel that we do not fit the same category that is often overwhelmingly believed by whites to be representative of the black population. We would like to be recognized and accepted as individuals with differing abilities and levels of potential.

For example, not all black nursing students feel there is discrimination within the School of Nursing, but many have identified behaviors that may be interpreted as discriminatory. There are also black students who believe that this is not a total black-white issue, but an overall student problem within the School of Nursing.

The point should be made clear that there are problems within the school, and that our situation should not be used as a scapegoat for discontent. It should be recognized that dissatisfaction exists among many students. It is even felt by some students that discrimination is present as an overall problem for both black and white students.

In relation to the Minority Project, the need for the program was recognized, because there is an insufficient number of black professional nurses in the health profession today. The major aim of the project is to increase the number of minority students in baccalaureate programs of nursing, and to provide supportive measures to assist these students in successfully completing such a program.

The feeling has been expressed that it is discriminatory to admit minority students with minimum grade point averages into a program such as MSU's School of Nursing where many qualified white students must be rejected, but it must be made clear that the Minority Project allows for minority students to be admitted in addition to the regular admission. Thus, minority students are not replacing anyone and, furthermore, we do not see the problem as being one of replacement, but one of either having special admissions of minority students through the project or having none at all.

Also, in relation to this whole matter of being discriminatory in admitting minority students with minimum grade point averages, we would like to point out that though there was an unbelievable degree of academic deprivation in the secondary education of these students, they have proven that they have the potential to become excellent professional nurses.

It should also be pointed out that some black students entered the nursing program by means of the Minority Project, but do not participate in tutorial sessions, special counseling or other black activities, because they are able to meet nursing course objectives without special assistance. Another important point is that many white students have used and are presently utilizing the services of the Minority Project.

We feel that black professional nurses are necessary if the quality of health care is to improve. Our purpose for being enrolled in this University is to try to meet the demand for more black professional nurses. We feel that an understanding of the health-illness continuum should be possessed by all black nurses and other health professionals so that a high quality of care can be provided to the community.

We would like to offer suggestions that we feel would improve conditions in the School of Nursing:

- Employ more black faculty members and administrators.
- Offer more widespread clinical experiences, involving inner city health facilities and black patient care.
- Have faculty members identify behavior that might be interpreted as dis-

VIEWPOINT: SAVE THE WHALE

Letters, boycott may halt extinction

By JIM CORVEN
 There is an emergency on the high seas of the Japanese and Soviet whalers are near. These two facts are becoming near to more and more people and are the basis for a major conservation effort. Whaling is an old profession that has required the advantages offered by modern technology. Today enormous "factory ships" cruise the oceans processing whole carcasses brought to them by high speed, heavily armed "catcher boats" aided with sophisticated electronic and military gear. All the species of great whales face rapid extermination with little hope of survival under this sort of attack.

Much of the debate has centered around the severe shortage of protein foods in Japan. This becomes an empty argument as it is applied to whaling. Only 1 per cent of the Japanese protein intake is derived from whales and the country continues to be a major exporter of fish.

Sperm whales constitute at least 50 per cent of the harvest and are inedible. This species does, however, supply oils used by the cosmetic industry as well as for shoe polish, pet foods and fertilizer. The greed and arrogance which drives people to carry on massive slaughter to the extinction of whole populations for such goods is unforgivable.

The United States banned whaling and importation of any whale products in 1972.

The Japanese and Soviets have refused to even listen to such pleas, until an effective letter-writing campaign and general boycott caught their attention. Now they are beginning to respond. The term "compromise" has worked its way into the agenda of the International Whaling Commission.

Serious discussion of meaningful quotas may be allowed if public pressure continues. Backed by virtually every major conservation group, the "Save The Whales" campaign is now yielding positive results. With increasing numbers of consumers expressing their opinion through businesses and letters, the extermination of these very special creatures may be headed off.

'Dune' author to talk at MSU

Frank Herbert, author of "Dune," will speak Monday in the Auditorium at 8 p.m. on "The Future Game — How Man Adapts."

Herbert, an award-winning science-fiction author, is the first in a series of two authors who will speak on the theme "Future Tense — Tense Future." The last speaker in the series will be veteran science-fiction writer and editor Frederick Pohl on Monday, April 28.

"The series is designed to bridge some of the gaps between science and the arts through the common endeavor of speculation," said Glenn Wright, director of the series.

Wright noted the authors are being asked to discuss their ideas about the future in light of current environmental and energy problems. They will also confer with the faculty on these problems.

Herbert's best known book, "Dune," won the Hugo and Nebula awards and inspired the Apollo 15 crew to name a moon crater in its honor. It is now being made into a motion picture.

The author has worked as a newsman and has written about 20 novels.

He lives with his family in Port Townsend, Wash. One of Herbert's current projects is turning his six wooded acres into an ecological demonstration project. He hopes to show how a high quality of life can be maintained with a minimum drain on the total energy system.

State may up aid to meet tuition

Some 25,000 Michigan students will receive financial assistance from the state totaling more than $18 million next school year through the Scholarship and Tuition Grant Programs, the State Board of Education announced Monday.

According to Tom Blesch, coordinator of the state's Scholarship and Tuition Grant Programs, there may be a slight increase in the amount of state aid next year as compared to this year because of the anticipated rise in the cost of tuition and Gov. Milliken's request for more help to middle-income students.

Last year the state initially awarded $17 million in state aid but awarded an additional $1.7 million in February to cover student scholarships that the $17 million did not meet.

Since the scholarship program was initiated in 1964 and the tuition grant program in 1966, more than 77,000 students have received financial assistance from the state.

The maximum amount an individual student can get from the state is full tuition, said Ronald L. Roderick, MSU associate director of financial aid.

He said that if tuition rises at MSU the state could approve an additional amount to each student receiving aid equal to the amount of the increase in tuition.

The board of education also announced that it will be awarding scholarships and tuition grants totaling more than $5.6 million to 7,230 students who will enter Michigan colleges and universities in the coming year.

Group claims Michigan food uncontaminated

LANSING (UPI) — The Michigan Food Dealers Assn. today urged retailers to continue selling meat, eggs and dairy products produced in the state despite a feed mixup that has poisoned thousands of farm animals.

"We want to assure the consuming public that there is no immediate problem with Michigan's food products and at the same time, we urge the Michigan food retailers to support all meat, dairy and egg products produced in our state," said Don E. Taylor, the association's lobbyist.

As a result of the feed mixup, at least 14,000 contaminated cattle, sheep and hogs have been destroyed.

Some state lawmakers and local officials have expressed concern that the livestock which contain even minimal levels of the chemical-polybrominated biphenyl (PBB) provide a health danger to humans.

At least one food chain, Meijer Thrifty Acres, has said it was considering banning Michigan products from its shelves because of the contamination worries.

Taylor said that based on evidence from state and federal authorities, the Food and Drug Administration is confident that all products on the shelves meet its guidelines and are safe for human consumption.

Smokers seek exit from tobacco road

By BRAD MARTISIUS
State News Staff Writer

Are you smoking more and enjoying it less? Would you rather switch than fight?

People are starting to answer yes to these questions, but many are finding that tobacco road is a hard one to leave. They need help because they cannot kick the habit by themselves.

For that reason, the Adventist Forum, a campus religious group, is sponsoring a five-day clinic at MSU for those who want to quit smoking. About 80 persons showed up for the first meeting Monday night in 317 Berkey Hall.

Mixed reasons were given for participation in the session.

"My wife's been after me to give up cigars for years now," one man said. "When she found out about this thing, she almost forced me to come."

"I guess I'll stick with the plan, though. I probably should have quit smoking long ago."

A freshman MSU woman noted that "my dependence on these things is getting scary. I feel like I'm losing control of myself every time I light up."

Jonathan L. Hamrick, a ruddy-faced Grand Ledge attorney who was running the session, said the object of the five-day plan was to get people to give up smoking by use of psychological means.

"A person can use psychological methods to build up the will power that he might not have been able to find otherwise," he said. "We want to make people aware of those methods."

"For instance, many people light up right after dinner, without even thinking about what they are doing." Members of the mostly middle-aged audience nodded knowingly as he said this. Robert Lutz, asst. professor of family medicine at MSU, struck a responsive chord in the audience when he suggested that many people were smoking almost against their wills.

"Every time you feel the urge to light up, remember to say, 'I choose not to smoke,'" Lutz said. "Many people smoke because they seem to lose their power of free will."

Group therapy, the buddy system and appeals to fear are all used to help smokers kick the habit.

The first night starts with a measurement of each person's vital lung capacity with a special machine, to give the individual some notion of what kind of shape he is in. The test measures the amount of air a person can inhale and exhale. After this measurement is correlated with the size and weight of the individual, it gives a doctor a "picture" of the effect smoking has had on a person's lungs.

Fear is the next weapon used against smoking. The smokers are shown a movie of an operation to remove a cancerous, smoke-blackened lung.

Hamrick recognizes the difficulty smokers have in kicking the habit on their own, so a buddy system is also part of the plan.

"Everyone picks a buddy who he keeps in close contact with for the duration of the plan," he said. "Buddies call each other several times during the day to offer encouragement and support."

Another part of the plan features the use of dietary regimens to aid in breaking the habit. Certain spicy foods and coffee are known to create a craving for the relaxing effect of nicotine. Smokers are urged to eat only fruit on the first day and to drink lots of water at all times. This type of diet is said to reduce the craving for tobacco.

Ernest Wendth, director of health services for the Seventh Day Adventists, said 70 percent of the people who stick with the plan have lost their desire to smoke by the end of the five days.

"Since the five-day plan originated in 1962 about 50 percent have managed to kick the habit forever," he said.

All the participants in Monday night's session seemed sincere, at least at the time. As they walked out of the room, most dumped their cigarettes into a wastebasket.

THE BECORD 2200 CASSETTE RECORDER

By BANG & OLUFSEN

Bang & Olufsen engineers have developed a cassette recorder to equal in performance ability of the other B & O components, "already acknowledged for excellence throughout the world."

The Beocord 2200 provides maximum fidelity from technically superior chromium dioxide (CR O2) recording tape, and the Dolby noise reduction system. During recording and playback this electronic circuitry dampens tape hiss as well as the unwanted noise generated by the amplification circuitry.

High density Ferrite heads virtually remove headwear as a source of distortion. Large readable V. U. meters enable the user to easily analyze recording levels and slide potentiometers made adjustment of recording levels exact and effortless.

As with all Bang & Olufsen components, operating controls are logically arranged in a mechanically sound but unobtrusive manner.

Black 'Exorcist' spin-off not even scary

By EDD RUDZATS
State News Reviewer

The forces of good and evil are operative everywhere, it all depends on who gets the upper hand," a stalwart priest says to a character in "Abby," American International Pictures' black version of "The Exorcist."

Unlike that Hollywood blockbuster, "Abby" is an American international fiasco, cheaply exploiting the William Peter Blatty and William Friedkin's film.

Picture this. Beautiful young Abby, wife of the parish minister Louisville, Ky., suddenly begins to behave contrary to her rarefied image. A newly appointed marriage counselor and church leader, she gets excited with a bar of soap in the shower.

Not too abnormal, right? But then she licks her lips erotically while cutting up chickens before gleefully cutting up herself, foams at the mouth and develops an insatiable sexual appetite.

Getting kinky, huh?

Finally, a change in her vocal chords causes a raspy masculine voice to emanate from her sweet throat and her eyes to go glassy. Sound familiar? It is, in the worst way.

"Abby" is such a direct steal from "The Exorcist" that when the exorcist/father-in-law figure pontificates on the presence of the forces of good and evil everywhere, you realize the forces of evil have triumphed in this film and the unimaginative producers, writers and directors have gotten the upper hand.

It's not much of an upper hand, though, since "Abby" suffers from shoddy production values, bad acting, mediocre color and one of the most flagrant cases of plagiarism yet.

The film is as predictable as a bad imitation of an originally shaky production can be. "Abby" makes "The Exorcist" look like the Sistine Chapel by comparison.

American International has, at times, turned out some low-budget horror films that provided the audience with strategically-placed shivers in a fast-paced plot.

"Abby" has neither the shivers nor the plot. When the action really gets going, the director drags out the suspense — what little there is of it — until the film foams, gurgles and growls once too often.

A number of horror-movie clichés abound through "Abby," but to no avail. Nothing save an act of divine intervention could save this stale piece of garbage from being one of the most wretched, insulting films in a long time.

Furthermore, even the advertising is false. Behind an insert of lovely Abby running open-armed into the tenacles of her fate, the ad men have added, "Abby no longer needs a man . . . the Devil is her lover now."

It might have been more interesting if the Devil had emerged as her lover; instead the plot provides a minor demon called Ishu, a name which sounds like someone telling the fifth letter of the alphabet to scam.

The ones to scam should be those thinking of coming anywhere near this piece of trash disguising itself as a horror movie.

Rock succeeds where hockey failed

By FRANK FOX
State News Reviewer

The Metro Ice Arena on Lansing's far west side once used the defunct Lansing Peers, who blew themselves up of the International Hockey League after less than one season of obscurity.

Monday night the ice arena used a blow out of another sort. Thousands of hard-rock addicts assembled for a ritualistic appreciation of the electronic excesses of three bands — Rush, The Amboy Dukes and Arrowsmith.

The concert was presented by Paul Stanley, erstwhile prime mover of ASMSU pop entertainment, who promises more of the same in the future.

The people responsible for setting up the lighting and sound systems did their work with commendable skill. The large open floor of the arena gave everyone ample room to mingle and air to breathe.

The evening moved through a familiar rhythm. Security guards casually confiscated pints of whiskey, downer freaks stumbled through the haze, juicers belched and messed their shoes and aren't the '50s fun, Buffalo Bob?

Ecology buffs grooved on the strange atmospheric phenomenon of a fog that rolled across the audience and prevented anyone from seeing clearly from one side of the room to another.

Anthropologists took notice of cultural oddities. Electricians in the audience admired the craftsmanlike job done by the performers on stage.

Security guards got to look the other way.

Sheriff's deputies and state police troopers hung around nearby sidestreets in unlighted cars, waiting for dangerous teenagers armed to the teeth with joints to run red lights. Reporters took notes. All in all, people got their monies worth and will have another opportunity to do the same when Blue Oyster Cult plays in the arena on April 14.

Theatre group holds auditions

"Intermediary," an experimental environmental theater group, will hold open auditions and interviews at 7 p.m. and at 9 p.m. Monday in the Tower Room in the Union Building.

Intermediary is looking for actors, media artists, designers, computer technicians, photographers, geographers, researchers, economists, environmentalists, scientists, engineers, geometers, psychic scientists, artists, musicians and dancers.

"Intermediary is a media theatre group," explains the group's introductory brochure. "We seek to utilize available means of communication such as theatre, videotape, feedback, film, print, and programmable environments (such as the planetarium) to press perceptions of relationships among media, consciousness, technology, science, nature and human beings."

The group is beginning its third year. In the past, Intermediary has created planetarium shows, local TV productions and varied multi-media endeavors, explained Intermediary member, Terry Terry.

"We are trying to develop a touring troupe. We intend to do performances around MSU and East Lansing and by next year we would like to have a national tour," Terry said. He said the show that the group is currently putting together concerns visions of America's future and, in part, concerns aspects of the relationship between man and machine about 100 years from now.

"In media theatre, one soon develops an understanding of the meaning and implications of reality manipulation, which presently dominates most of the mass media," one of Intermediary's handout states.

"Through this process the distinctions between our fantasy, future, state life, projections...disappear and we begin to rediscover, via media, the ability to shape our own reality."

UCLA Coach John Wooden wears a smile and the basketball net after his team won the NCAA championship with a 92-85 victory over Kentucky in San Diego Monday night. Wooden, 64, has announced he is retiring from coaching.

Wooden leaves in style as Bruins battle to top

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — After 767 games, 620 victories and 10 NCAA basketball championships at UCLA, John Wooden, the bespectacled, gentlemanly former South Bend, Ind., high school teacher, has ended his fabled coaching career.

Wooden, 64, went out a winner Monday as his Bruins, admitting they were emotionally up after the surprise resignation of their coach, outbattled Kentucky's Wildcats, 92-85, in the national championship finale.

"We wanted to win it bad for the man," said Pete Trgovich, one of two graduating seniors. "There was no way we were going to lose coach's last game," added Andre McCarter.

"Coach Wooden told us there was no tomorrow, so I gave it everything I had," said 7-1 Ralph Drolinger. "I was out there playing for God first, then coach Wooden."

Interestingly, UCLA will lose more coaches than players. Wooden's chief assistant, Gary Cunningham, revealed after Wooden's decision that he planned to leave coaching for health reasons.

Frank Arnold, Wooden's No. 1 recruiter and second assistant, will take over a head coaching post at Brigham Young. Arnold is a Mormon.

J. D. Morgan, UCLA's athletic director, is expected to select Wooden's successor before April 9, the date high school athletes can start signing national letters of intent. One man it won't be is Louisville coach Denny Crum, a former Wooden player and top assistant who announced before his team's consolation game at San Diego that he was not a candidate. Crum denied Morgan had talked to him and insisted he had decided to honor the final four years of his five-year contract at the Kentucky school.

Two names that surfaced in the renewed speculation were those of Illinois coach Gene Bartow and Providence's Dave Gavitt. Bartow's Memphis State team lost to UCLA in the NCAA finals, 87-76, at St. Louis two years ago.

Orientation session set for new cheerleaders

An orientation session for all those interested in becoming a member of the MSU cheerleading team will be held at 4 p.m. Thursday in Jenison Fieldhouse.

All team members must have at least a 2.0 all-University grade point average and have earned at least 24 credits. In addition, students must be presently enrolled as a full-time student (12 or more credits).

Students should take their last semester grades to Clarence Underwood, asst. athletic director in charge of academic affairs, in 220 Jenison Fieldhouse.

AKERS EAST TO GAIN 9 HOLES

Golf course to enlarge

By LARRY MORGAN
State News Sports Writer
MSU's Forest Akers East golf course, presently a nine-hole layout, will be increased to 18-holes, with preliminary minor construction beginning this summer.

The additional nine holes will be integrated with the existing holes to form a near-regulation course. The course will be ready for play in the summer of 1977 if all goes according to plan, said Executive Vice-President Jack Breslin.

The Forest H. Akers Trust Fund, set up by the former MSU student and State Board of Agriculture member, was designated to be used for buying the land and building the golf courses.

The Fund recently made a gift of $60,000 to the University to begin the last phase of Forest Akers' dream of two complete 18-hole courses at MSU. The Akers west course already has 18 holes.

Originally scheduled to be completed by the summer of 1976, the second nine holes will only receive minor construction this summer as major construction and seeding will be held off for another year.

"This summer there will be some trees planted and any fill (dirt) from other University excavations will be moved out to the course and dumped," said Breslin, an Akers trust fund member.

Breslin said he expects enough money to be collected in the fund so the $300,000 project can be completed for play in 1977.

The completion of the course will mean a substantial improvement of University golf facilities and a major benefit to students, faculty and staff.

"This will add to the facilities a great deal and expand them for people who want to play only nine holes. It will also make play faster, because we can start people off both of the nine hole courses," said Forest Anderson, Forest Akers golf professional.

The new holes will be generally longer than the existing holes, and, by combining them, the course will play nearly as difficult as a regulation 18 hole course, Anderson said. The nine-hole east course is MSU's controversy-filled basketball season may have ended several weeks ago, but incidents which were both publicized and not publicized continue to surface at a time when coach Gus Ganakas and his assistants are busy trying to lure high school prospects into the program.

Two incidents took place last December when the team was in San Francisco for the Cable Car Classic basketball tournament.

An employe in the auditing department of the hotel where the team stayed while in San Francisco said that two bedspreads totaling $70 were missing when the team checked out of their hotel rooms. The hotel turned the billing of the account over to MSU Alumni Club Director Michael V. Doyle, who was traveling with the team.

Doyle told the hotel to send the bill to Ganakas at an East Lansing post office box, since Ganakas had allegedly occupied the room where the bedspreads were discovered missing.

Ganakas in fact did not occupy the room, but rather one of the team members did.

When contacted on Monday, Ganakas said the bill had been paid by money order several days ago. He said the bill did not come to his attention until sometime in February and he needed further time to see if the player would return the bedspreads.

When contacted late Tuesday afternoon, the hotel's auditing department said they received a check several days ago covering the bill. The action came after the hotel had received no response from several earlier billings.

On the same road trip, reserve forward Jim Dudley found himself walking eight miles through slums after dark back to the hotel where the team was staying.

Even though Dudley was reluctant to talk about it, a member of the team recalled that another player's uncle and two female friends met the team after the game and crowded into the two rented cars for the players. Before Dudley had a chance to check the other crowded car, it left without him.

"There was a little mixup and I couldn't find transportation after the game, so I just decided to walk instead of calling back to the hotel for a ride," Dudley explained.

Just after Terry Furlow was placed on probation for his part in the celebrated regionally televised skirmish with Illinois forward Rick Schmidt, Furlow punched trainer Don Kaverman in a locker room incident.

Witnesses on the team said the incident stemmed from a season-long series of thefts from the varsity basketball locker room, with Furlow singing out Kaverman as the prime suspect.

MSU Athletic Director Burt Smith held a private hearing on the altercation in his office. Furlow gave Kaverman an apology in front of the team the following day.

Ganakas said that he was unaware of the incident at the time it happened and said that he was not informed of what transpired in the private conference held by Smith.

Smith had no comment to make on the incident which contacted Tuesday afternoon. He did say, though, that Ganakas and Clint Thompson, MSU coordinator of athletic training and rehabilitation, were among those present at the private conference. Ganakas denied being present.

Earlier in the season, several observers witnessed another incident involving Furlow and asst. coach Pat Miller in practice.

Miller drew the assignment of guarding Furlow in a scrimmage game with a group of former MSU basketball players. Witnesses said that Miller's tight defense irritated Furlow to the point where he swung his elbow out and caught the coach in the mouth.

Ganakas said Monday that he couldn't recall the incident ever taking place.

Club Sports

MSU's ROTC Rifle Club team placed fourth of seven teams in Saturday's Southern Michigan-Northwestern Ohio ROTC Rifle League match at the Demonstration Hall rifle range.

Eastern Michigan took first place with 2,691 points, followed by Bowling Green State and the University of Michigan with 2,546 and 2,511 points respectively. Michigan had the highest handicap score.

The top five scores for MSU were recorded by Rod Marvin, 513; team captain Fred Miley, 489; Tom Lee, 476; Linda Ettling, 466, and Dan Seemann, 464. Lee, Ettling and Seemann are new to the MSU team this season.

League awards were given for top individual and team performances and EMU's Karson Carpenter captured four of the five top individual honors. Carpenter garnered awards for top league average, top new shooter, highest tournament score and highest new tournament shooter.

MSU coach Maj. John Crossman was also announced as next year's league president.

IM NOTES

The deadline for women's intramural bloopers team entry cards is noon today.

A required clinic for all bloopers officials and team managers will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday in 137 Women's IM Bldg.

Bloopers schedules will be available at 5 p.m. Friday in 121 Women's IM Bldg. Competition will begin Monday.

The deadline for the women's intramural racquetball ladder tournament is 9 p.m. Friday. Those interested should submit their entries to 201 Men's IM Bldg.

The deadline for men's intramural independent bowling and the single ladder paddleball tournament is noon Friday. A recreational doubles ladder tourney will be held if sufficient interest is shown.

Fan reveals milestone: millionth run on its way

NEW YORK (UPI) — A baseball milestone will be passed this season in the glare of the public eye—thanks to an aspiring baseball fan and his minicalculator.

Mark Sackler, a 24-year-old fan from Westport, Conn., received a minicalculator for his birthday and used it to discover, by research through the Baseball Encyclopedia and 1974 copies of the Sporting News, that 997,869 runs have been scored in the history of the National and American leagues—leaving only 2,131 to go for the 1,000,000th run.

With an average of 625 runs per week scored during the 1974 season, this means that the milestone run should be scored about the second week in May.

Tootsie Roll Industries has therefore decided to sponsor a nationwide contest, now underway, to honor the player who scores the historic run.

Stan Musial, the former St. Louis Cardinal great and Hall of Famer, chairman of the 1,000,000th run sweepstakes, said the company will award $10,000 to the Assn. of Professional Ball Players of America, which is concerned with helping ill and indigent former major and minor leaguers, on behalf of that player.

In addition, the company will give away 1,000,000 pennies ($10,000 or whatever the winner can get for those one-cent pieces) in a public sweepstakes. The entrants have to name the player, team and date on which the record-making run is scored. Entry blanks are available throughout the United States. The last day of the contest is April 30.

Lacrosse team battles U-M; Bagatway Trophy on line

The old Bagatway Trophy will be up for grabs this afternoon when the MSU lacrosse team meets the University of Michigan lacrosse club at 4 p.m. on Old College Field next to the baseball field.

The Spartans will carry a 3-2 seasonal mark into the match while the Wolverines are undefeated with a 7-0 record this season.

"It should be a good game," predicted Ron Hebert, Spartan cocaptain. "Even though Michigan is undefeated, they haven't played as many real strong teams as we have."

The Bagatway Trophy, named after the Indian word for lacrosse, has been battled over between MSU and the Wolverines for seven years. It was brought back to MSU last year after a four-year stay in Ann Arbor.

In the past, the team with the most goals in the two-game series has taken the Bagatway trophy. But this year MSU and U-M will only meet once. The winner of the match will take the trophy.

MSU will be trying to get back into winning form after dropping a tight 5-4 match to Keanu Saturday.

The Spartans and Wolverines split their two meetings last year, but U-M has taken the series 8-2, since 1970 when MSU made lacrosse varsity sport. MSU leads the over-all series 12-8.

Only three schools in the Big Ten scored points in the NCAA swimming and diving championships last weekend. MSU, the fourth-place finisher in the conference, was not one of them.

American records were set in 10 of the 16 events held at Cleveland State's "Super Pool."

Indiana, the dominant power in the Big Ten, took second place in the nation for the second consecutive year behind Southern California.

USC, described as awesome and deep in talent, tallied 344 points to the Hoosiers' 274, clearly demonstrating an even stronger hold on the national title than last year.

Ohio State scored points in only the diving events, most of them coming from Tim Moore, winner of both the one and three-meter diving events and holder of five of the six national diving titles he has sought during his Buckeye career.

Michigan was the other school to chalk up some points for the Big Ten, with high finishes in medley events.

"There was a time, not too long ago, when the Big Ten would be the dominant conference, but this meet made it clear that the Pacific Eight and the Southeastern Conference are taking over the swimming picture," said MSU swimming coach Dick Fetters.

While the Spartans failed to score a point, there were some bright moments for MSU.

Freshman John Apsley swam a 10th of a second faster than his best time in the 100-yard butterfly to break his own varsity record with a 50.5 second clocking.

He also broke his school record in the 200 butterfly with a 1:50.55 timing, just missing scoring a point for MSU with 13th place showing. Apsley joined Bruce Wright, Shaw Elkins and Mike Rado to set a new varsity record in the 800 freestyle relay.

Wright, a junior, set a new varsity record in the 50 meter style with a 20.9-second timing good for 16th place. Wright scored a personal best in the 100 freestyle with a 46-second timing.

'You're Up,' fans, starting this Friday

Well, what do you think? It's your turn, "You're Up," starting Friday.

Almost everyone has opinions, criticisms and questions about sports that need circulating. We want them out in the open.

The State News will begin featuring letters from readers and fans every Friday in the "You're Up" column. A trivia quiz, a grudge against an athlete, a fan, a sportswriter or whatever — you name it, "You're Up."

Chances of getting the letter printed will increase if it is typed, double-spaced and on a 65-space line. Letters can be addressed to sports editor, State News, 345 Student Services Bldg., or delivered to the State News office.

The deadline for Friday's paper is 1 p.m. Thursday.

MSU's Forest Akers East golf course, in the background, will be expanded from its present nine holes to 18. Construction will begin this summer. The job is expected to be completed by 1977.

COGS organizing grad schools' union

By MARY ANN CHICK
State News Staff Writer
The Council of Graduate Students (COGS) announced Monday night that it is one step closer to fulfilling a year-old dream of creating an informal union of graduate organizations from the Big Ten schools.

Big Ten graduate organization representatives have been tentatively set for April 25 and 26 at Kellogg Center. "At least seven of the 10 schools have indicated they are interested in coming to MSU to talk about the union," Brashler said. "But they are not sure if they can make it on this date." The other three schools do not have a formal organization representing graduate students. Brashler said the purpose of the union was to foster the exchange of information with other schools in the Big Ten on problems, such as unionization and income taxes, that face all graduate students across the nation. "Logistically, it's incredible," said Fred Zensen, the COGS corresponding secretary. "A lot of petty grievances and rivalries are being put aside for the betterment of all graduate schools." Zensen has been corresponding with the 10 schools for over a year in an effort to set up this meeting. In other action at the meeting, COGS informally agreed to support the idea of students evaluating instructors and giving students access to the evaluations with the exception that there be no access to the evaluations of assistants or instructors who are teaching for the first time. Representatives from MSU Veterans for Equal Benefits came to the COGS meeting seeking support in their fight for equal benefits for veterans who attend graduate school. The students want to see the veteran benefits for graduate students extended for 45 months. Currently, a veteran is eligible for 36 months of aid while attending graduate school. Undergraduate students are eligible for 45 months of aid. There are 12 bills before Congress to extend graduate students' benefits. COGS will not take any formal action on the request until the next meeting because of the parliamentary procedure that no action can be taken on new business until the following meeting. Steve Tyma, vice-president of internal affairs, resigned after serving for a year-and-a-half. His resignation is effective at the next COGS meeting, April 14. He quit because of a heavy academic load this term. Since the COGS constitution has no provisions for the resignation of officers, the present officers have decided to accept nominations at the next meeting and elect someone at the April 28 meeting. All COGS officers are elected by the departmental representatives of COGS.

Day-care scholarships offered

Graduate students with children enrolled in any of the 21 state-certified day care centers in the area could be eligible for financial aid from the Council of Graduate Students (COGS).

part-time basis spring term. An internal committee of COGS will determine how much aid individual families will receive based on financial need. Applications can be picked up in the COGS office, 316 Student Services Building, Friday, between 10:30 and 2:30 p.m. The applications are due April 18. The only requirements are that at least one of the child's parents must be a graduate student at MSU and the financial aid is needed. The stipends are usually between $40 and $80 and are awarded on a term basis. Day-care costs about $130 a month for full-time care for one child. COGS hopes to increase the scholarship fund to $500 a term during the next school year.

A recent survey by COGS showed that currently there are 15-20 graduate students with children enrolled in area day-care centers. In the past, only a few students have applied for the scholarships.

Student sues Connecticut university office of the ombudsman. Carolyn Stieber, MSU ombudsman, believes that an institution should be accountable for the services it performs. However, she questions the ultimate authority of the courts to resolve accountability.

Stieber said of the Ianniello case that the issue is really one of the instructor's competency or lack of it.

"While incompetency of the faculty is a common complaint, I don't know that there is a law against incompetency," she said. "I don't think the courts have the moral authority to decide competency, nor do I see how competency can be legislated."

Stieber pointed out that incompetency occurs frequently because the tenure system is conducive to allowing some deadwood to remain in teaching positions.

Despite Ianniello's claim that the professor will have to prove he taught something, Zolton Ferency, assistant professor of criminal justice, believes that the burden of proof remains where it always does — on the person bringing the suit. "You can try anything once," Ferency said regarding the novelty of the Ianniello case. He cautioned, however, that a jury must be careful to follow the correct rationale while deciding the case.

Unlike criminal cases, where a person must be found guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, in a civil suit a decision is based on a preponderance of evidence. This means that in order for Ianniello to win her suit, the majority of the evidence presented in court must substantiate her claim that the professor taught nothing.

Ferency also questions the validity of the "I didn't learn anything" argument. In some rare instances, it is possible that a class could not appreciate the refined intellectual capabilities of an instructor, who might be a genius. However, education is subjective, abstract and unconscious — factors that must be considered he said.

Ferency said that it is entirely possible to attend a class in a highly nebulous area, like advanced philosophy, and feel like you learned nothing. In reality, he said, the student just does not realize that learning has occurred. Often, this kind of realization comes much later.

But, Ferency added, whether or not a university could convince 12 people on a jury to accept this broad, liberal view remains to be seen.

Rising sexual assaults on campuses cause concern

the feeling is very strong that students are being victimized by invaders from communities bordering the school. The legendary conflict between town and gown, they suggest, has been escalated to a new degree.

Women's groups explain that college campuses are natural havens for sexual attackers.

Students can easily be cornered studying alone or walking home alone at night — returning from the library or evening classes and traveling on deserted, unlighted paths.

Last year, also, parking lots, libraries, dormitories, bathrooms and classroom buildings all served as setting for rape on college campuses.

Daley wins bid for sixth term

By Associated Press

Mayor Richard J. Daley easily brushed aside token challengers Tuesday to win reelection to an unprecedented sixth term as mayor of Chicago.

Meanwhile, Paul Soglin, the 29-year-old mayor of Madison, Wis., took an early lead in his race for re-election, and Mayor Wes Wise of Dallas moved ahead in his race for a third-term.

With 2,845 of 3,146 Chicago precincts reporting, Daley, 72, had 493,998 votes to 125,777 for Republican John Hoellen and 15,340 for Socialist Workers candidate, Willie Mae Reid. The turnout was light.

Wise appeared to be beating back a challenge by John Schoellkopf and three other minor candidates. With 58 of 225 precincts counted, Wise, who was running as an independent, had 8,548 votes while Schoellkopf trailed with 5,216.

And with ten of 66 Madison precincts reported, Soglin held a lead of 3,445 to 2,393 over former Mayor Harry Reynolds, who argued that city government had grown too big under the one time radical.

Hoellen conceded defeat just after 8 p.m., telling a news conference he had "fought the good fight and lost."

With no illusions about his fate at the hands of the most powerful big city machine in the nation, Hoellen had told newsmen earlier that his plans were to "ride off into the political sunset in the west and hope there are stronger hands around to handle the many problems of Chicago."
