U.S. orphans swept aside by Viet tide

WASHINGTON (AP) — As people begin to adopt Vietnamese war orphans, thousands of American children remain neglected and ignored. Government officials estimate that there are between 100,000 and 120,000 children in orphan homes and institutions around the country. Many are victims of parental neglect. Others are caught in legal snarls and have never been freed for adoption. Most are members of minority groups, a factor that makes them less attractive to some foster parents. And many have physical handicaps, emotional problems or come only with brothers and sisters in a package deal. Most are no longer infants, while many prospective foster parents desire only infants.

"We must do everything possible for American children," said Ursula M. Gallagher, an expert in child adoption in the Children's Bureau within the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare.

"Some Americans think we have a greater responsibility to Vietnamese children fathered by American soldiers than to those children already here," she said. But Gallagher said she has reservations about some of those offering to adopt Vietnamese children.

"It seems to me the reaction to the Vietnamese children is an emotional response in a crisis," she said. "Many people haven't thought through what it will mean to them if they adopt one of these children."

"They must be aware of the different needs the child will have in respect to his identity, his biological parents and his homeland. Many people who are reaching out haven't thought about the psychological and financial problems. They're reaching out to children who need the most, but children here need homes too."

Adoption experts explain that the number of American babies available for adoption has been declining steadily for the past few years because of the increased number of abortions, improved contraceptive methods and a general interest in smaller families. It also has become more socially acceptable for unwed mothers to keep their children.

Social workers express delight that the recent focus on the Vietnamese orphans has sparked a general public interest in adoption.

"We've received 3,500 calls in the last five days," said Lenore Campbell, director of the Los Angeles County Dept. of Adoption in California. "A lot of people are interested in the Vietnamese children because they want infants, and we simply don't have them. But some say if they can't have a Vietnamese child, they'll take any child."

Dr. Alan R. Gruber, director of research and evaluation at the Boston Children's Service Association, said one reason more American children aren't adopted is because they are caught up in red tape.

"Most states don't have themselves in order enough to know what kids are available for adoption," he said.

WANTS POWER TO EVACUATE AMERICANS

Ford asks $1 billion for Viets

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford asked Congress Thursday night for nearly $1 billion in emergency military and economic aid for South Vietnam and for clear authority to use U.S. military forces to evacuate Americans, if necessary.

In a prepared State of the World address, Ford said Congress should appropriate "without delay" $722 million for military hardware and an initial $250 million in economic and humanitarian aid "to ease the misery and pain of the monumental human crisis which has befallen the people of Vietnam."

Ford's first State of the World address continues a practice that started in 1970 when former President Richard M. Nixon decided to emphasize his foreign policy activities.

While indicating it may be too late to rescue Cambodia from a Communist takeover, Ford said a stabilization of the military situation in South Vietnam "offers the best opportunity for a political solution."

The $972 million combined military and economic aid request for South Vietnam more than triples the $300 million Ford sought in January and which Congress has not yet approved.

Ford made no new request for Cambodia, simply reminding Congress that a parallel plea for $222 million for Phnom Penh remains on the table.

"The national interests of the United States and the cause of world stability require that we continue to give both military and humanitarian assistance to the South Vietnamese," Ford declared.

At the same time, he said Congress should immediately clarify its restrictions on the use of U.S. military forces in Southeast Asia "for the limited purposes of protecting American lives by ensuring their evacuation, if this should become necessary."

Ford urged Congress to complete action on his Indochina proposals by April 29

"because of the urgency of the situation."

"Let us start afresh," the President said in outlining his Indochina program. "The options before us are few and time is short."

He said, however, that "it may be too late" to assist Cambodia, where rebel forces are currently pressing Phnom Penh, the capital.

Addressing North Vietnam, Ford called for an immediate halt to military operations and compliance with the 1973 Paris cease-fire agreements. He said the Soviet Union and China as well as all other members of the Paris conference were being urged to use their influence to halt the fighting in South Vietnam.

He renewed the pledge he made on entering the White House last August to work cooperatively with Congress while asking the legislators "to keep America's word good throughout the world."

The firm tone throughout his address, delivered to a joint session assembled in the House, belied advance billing that he would strike a conciliatory stance.

Despite Ford's expression of sympathy for the Cambodia government, he significantly made no new request himself for food and ammunition for the Cambodians.

Ford's speech reflected a grim assessment also expressed previously by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

The President said, however, "We will stand by our friends. We will honor our commitments."

On other fronts, Ford said:

• In seeking peace in the Middle East the United States has "agreed in principle" to reconvene the Geneva conference but is prepared "as well to explore other forums," moving ahead on whatever course looks

Alan Chadburn sets out from Nauset Harbor in East Orleans, Mass., Wednesday, to cross the Atlantic in an eight-foot sailboat. It took him 2½ hours to clear the harbor. Making a long-time dream come true, Chadburn, 29, hoped the voyage would end at Porto de Leixoes, Portugal, sometime in June.

Decision on 'U' lettuce boycott may rest in student referendum

By MICHELE BURGEN
State News Staff Writer

The Residence Halls Assn. (RHA) tentatively approved Wednesday night a draft of a referendum that would allow students to vote for a University boycott of non-United Farm Workers Union (UFW) lettuce.

The referendum would permit only students under room and board contracts to vote. The vote is tentatively scheduled for between May 5 and 9, said Mark Bowen, chairman of the RHA referendum committee.

Students will be asked to vote yes or no to boycott non-UFW iceberg and head lettuce and table grapes, with an understanding that alternate greens will be served when available.

Students will also vote on a proposed two-bowl system in cafeterias, which could be implemented if the students or the MSU Board of Trustees votes down the boycott measure. Two bowls, one of Teamster lettuce and the other of UFW or Michigan lettuce, would be available.

The two-bowl system would be more costly than the present University policy of using mostly Teamster lettuce. To implement this plan cutbacks would have to be made in the amount of Teamster lettuce now purchased to provide an alternative bowl, Bowen said.

The two-bowl idea was included in the draft of the referendum because Robert Underwood, residence halls manager, expressed an interest in using the system if students respond favorably, Bowen said.

The committee expects the boycott referendum to pass, since about 9,000 signatures from students living on and off campus were collected last term supporting the action. The results of the referendum will be presented to the trustees at their May 16 meeting.

If the board votes in favor of the boycott, MSU would stop purchasing Teamster lettuce immediately, said Robert Herron, manager of food stores.

"Whatever policy is set will be my policy," Herron said. He said that the store of Teamster lettuce would be used up in two or three days. However, there would not be enough UFW lettuce available to supply University cafeterias and restaurants, he predicted.

"There hasn't been any (UFW) lettuce on the Detroit market since December," he said. "At least, none that I know of."

Trustee John Bruff, D-Fraser, a strong supporter of a strict boycott of non-UFW products, said he does not know whether the board will vote to support the boycott.

The other trustees could not be reached for comment.

'WORLD OF '60s GONE' Author foresees change

By DIANE SILVER
State News Staff Writer

Frank Herbert sat in the ordered calm of a Kellogg Center hotel room, looking through his Santa Claus jolly eyes and saying that our way of life was dying. There is just no way our children are going to be able to live on the same consumer level we did. The world of the '60s is gone. There is no way that (a country like) America is going to be able to return to it. The science-fiction author has a wide, gentle-looking face. He speaks softly with a sharp, low voice: "We are on a collision course, right now as society, with decreasing energy. And we've been exploiting this (consumer) myth of the good life and yes, we'll show you that's a damn lie! There is no way we can have it."

It is not just that energy is running out, he said. "The fact that we are using oil for fuel and we should not be using oil for fuel." Herbert was on campus this week to meet with MSU faculty and present the first volume in a series entitled "Tense Future" sponsored by several MSU colleges. The novels include "Dune," a sequel to "Dune" and "Hellstrom's Hive." A sequel to "Dune" will be published early next year. Herbert stressed that the end of the '60s consumer lifestyle does not have to mean the end of a satisfying way of life. "It doesn't mean we won't live quality lives," he said. "It does mean that we are going to have to think of other things that we are going to say 'yes, I'm happy to be doing this.' You are going to have to find other values, like doing things with your hands, building and creating."

As America will be forced to find new values, it will also be forced to find new energy sources. And Herbert, who has just finished a new design for a windmill, believes wind power may be the answer.

Atomic energy, once the hottest idea in science fiction, is no solution. Herbert calls it an "energy sink."

"There is no way you get back more energy than you put into it," he said. "Energy is used in the manufacture of steel, the building of materials, the construction project. On top of that, these things won't last more than 10 years. The present record is that they break down every six months. So, you don't get the full flow of energy for that (10-year) period. Then you have 250,000 years of management of the garbage."

In the future, solar energy could be a solution, but it is still too expensive to translate solar energy into electricity, Herbert said.

Herbert believes that wind power can someday power most of the world. He has designed a windmill that, he says, is more efficient than any ever made.

Herbert's design consists of a concrete tower 30 feet tall topped with a cylinder. A horn projects on top of the cylinder and focuses the wind on a shaft that has vertical vanes attached to it. The shaft is attached to an automobile alternator, a type of generator, to produce electricity.

A traditional windmill has vanes that project horizontally from the face of a shaft and runs a water pump.

"The horn concentrates the wind," he said. "It allows you to use a lower wind of maybe 4 knots, at least 5 knots and increases the energy you get out of the system theoretically by a factor of 12. Even if we get half of that, we are way ahead of any present windmill technology."

The wind speed in the Lansing area has averaged about 9.1 knots or 10.4 m.p.h. over the past 15 years.

The beauty of the design is its simplicity, Herbert said.

Herbert said there are only a few areas, like sheltered valleys with very low winds, where wind power would not be feasible.

The industry to manufacture his windmills already exists, Herbert said, in the air conditioner industry. Herbert said he will be meeting in May with representatives of a San Jose firm to discuss construction of a pilot model. The estimated cost of the model is $6,000.

A science-fiction author who deals so intimately with reality may shock some, but to Herbert, science fiction is just another form of reality.

The author began his writing career as a journalist. For over a decade, Herbert worked as a reporter and later as asst. city editor for the San Francisco Examiner.

"I used to write from four to six hours in the morning and go in the afternoon to the city desk of the Examiner," he said.

Science-fiction writing and journalistic writing appear to be two opposing styles with opposing aims. Why change? What is the kick of science-fiction writing?

"It's a high. You wouldn't do it if it wasn't a high. I'm sure it is partly an ego massage. You have to have an ego to say you are going to put words on paper and that they are going to be interesting to people."

Connally prosecution rests

The government rested its case in the John B. Connally bribery trial Thursday after only one witness, Jake Jacobsen, testified that the former secretary of the treasury took $10,000 in illegal payoffs.

Hospitals cancel surgery

Elective surgery in Mansfield, Ohio's two hospitals was canceled for the second consecutive day Thursday because seven anesthesiologists cannot get what they consider adequate malpractice insurance.

They are refusing to participate in all but emergency operations after an old, larger insurance policy expired earlier this week.

The two hospitals, Mansfield General and People's, continued normal operations except for surgery. Fifty-five operations have been canceled. A patient suffering from appendicitis was transferred to another hospital for an operation.

Athlete refuses questioning

Former Olympic athlete Phillip K. Shinnick went before a special grand jury probing the Patricia Hearst case Thursday after vowing not to answer questions.

Shinnick, a long jumper, is the latest sports figure to come to the attention of federal grand juries in the Hearst kidnaping and its bizarre aftermath.

The reason for the grand jury's interest in Shinnick has not been made public by any official, but former Olympic hammer thrower Hal Connolly told The Associated Press he was questioned by the FBI and told by agents "they had reason to believe that Phil was at the farm house."

Woman pleads for orphans

More than 300 Indochina orphans are scheduled to leave Saigon and Phnom Penh on Friday for homes in the United States thanks in part to an American woman who vowed, "I am not going to let the Communists have these children."

The woman, Betty Tisdale of Columbus, Ga., told newsmen in Saigon on Thursday that Deputy Premier Phan Quang Dan gave permission for two plane loads of Vietnamese children to be airlifted to the U.S. West Coast. Tisdale, who arrived Tuesday to empty the An Lac orphanage in Saigon of its nearly 400 residents, called Dan "one of the most compassionate men I have ever met in such a high position."

Abortion fund ban rejected

The Senate Thursday rejected an effort to ban the use of federal funds to perform abortions for the needy.

By a 54-36 vote, the Senate tabled a proposal by Sen. Dewey F. Bartlett, R-Okla., that would have prohibited federal medical care funds from being used "to pay for or encourage" abortions except to save the life of the mother.

However, the Senate later voted 91 to 0 to make it a federal crime for a doctor, official or anyone else in a federally financed program to coerce a welfare recipient into either having an abortion or being sterilized.

Sikkim eyes Indian statehood

With the support of Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, the legislature in the Himalayan kingdom of Sikkim voted Thursday to abolish the monarchy and seek full Indian statehood.

The expected absorption of Sikkim, ruled for 11 years by Chogyal King Palden Thondup Namgyal, could further strain Indian relations with Nepal and China, which criticized last year's partial Indian takeover of the state. Sikkim is now an associate Indian state with representation in the Indian parliament.

Chilean cabinet resigns

The Chilean cabinet has resigned to give the military regime a chance to search for new solutions to the nation's crippling economic crisis.

The press officer of the ruling junta said the 16 military and civilian ministers quit voluntarily Wednesday night to give Gen. Augusto Pinochet, head of the junta, a free hand.

For the second straight year, the Chilean inflation rate is the highest in the world. Last year it totaled 370 per cent, and last week the government announced it was already up to 61 per cent for the first quarter of 1975.

S. VIET BATTLE RAGES FOR THIRD DAY Rebels surge closer to Phnom Penh

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) — A battle for a key city 40 miles east of Saigon headed into a third day while in Cambodia insurgents on Thursday drove to within two miles of Phnom Penh airport, their deepest penetration ever, field reports said.

North Vietnamese gunners poured salvos of rockets, artillery and mortar fire into the fighting for Xuan Loc. The South Vietnamese responded with their own rumbling artillery, and sent helicopter gunships and warplanes to pound rubber plantations where they suspect North Vietnamese troops and tanks are held up.

Communist-led forces, who already control three-fourths of the country, also shelled Mekong Delta areas south of Saigon and Tay Ninh City, 55 miles to the northwest.

In Cambodia, rebel forces pushed closer to the Phnom Penh airport after a misdirected government artillery barrage rained death on Phnom Penh troops on the northwestern front, softening the perimeter for an insurgent assault, field reports said. The rebels also forced the U.S. rice lift into a five-hour suspension. The U.S. Embassy flew in six more Marine guards from Bangkok for security duty and they helped stockpile rifle ammunition at the embassy. One diplomat said more Marines aboard a carrier in the Gulf of Thailand might be landed to evacuate Americans if chaos breaks out in Phnom Penh.

In other developments:
• In Bangkok, Thai officials said Communist-led rebels launched a major ground assault, using rockets and automatic weapons, against government forces in northern Thailand, killing government troops and wounding 20.

• Cambodian President Lon Nol flew from Bali to Hanoi for medical treatment, Indonesian officials said. He left Phnom Penh April 1 in hopes his departure would create a climate for peace talks.

• Both the Vietnam and Cambodia embassies say they need of American material aid but they are politely turning down the offers of individual American volunteers who want to help them fight their wars.

At the Cambodian embassy, information secretary Abdul G. Peang-Meth estimated that over the past few months 400 letters and telegrams had been received from all parts of the United States and also many phone calls from persons who want to help fight for Cambodia. He said that some had even offered to help for their own transportation. In addition, a small group asked for Cambodian citizenship, he said.

"We regretfully told them that we cannot accept the offer though we are grateful," he said.

The action around Xuan Loc was being followed closely for indications of whether it might signal the start of a major thrust already nervous Saigon. Military analysts said it was too early to tell whether the South Vietnamese were setting up a new strategy.

The South Vietnamese command said government forces drove back tank-led North Vietnamese units at Xuan Loc following the same pattern of the day before. The North Vietnamese were reported to have moved in after heavy artillery rocket and mortar barrages, and then to have been pushed back.

One tank was destroyed, Saigon spokesmen said, raising the number knocked out in two days of action there. Government reinforcements were moved into the region, and helicopter planes criss-crossed the sky on missions in support of the ground troops.

The Saigon command has reported 300 North Vietnamese killed in the fighting in the Xuan Loc area, apparently including 100 from air strikes. There has been no report on government casualties.

Commerce Dept. predicts upturn in economy for final half of '75

By Washington Star News

WASHINGTON — A very sharp drop in the economy in the January to March quarter laid the groundwork for an "assured" upturn in the second half of this year, the Commerce Dept. top economists said Thursday.

"I do not mean to suggest that the outlook has all suddenly turned rosy," said James L. Pate, asst. secretary for economic affairs, in a speech prepared for a meeting of the conference board in Chicago. "In fact, there is a considerable amount of unfavorable economic data still to be reported."

He predicted that government statistics to be released next week would show that Gross National Product (GNP) — total output of goods and services — dropped 10 per cent or more in the first quarter, following a 9 per cent decline in the fourth quarter of last year.

This would be the biggest drop since 1946, during industry's conversion from war to peacetime production. GNP declined 12 per cent that year and 14.8 per cent in 1932, in the depths of the Great Depression.

But the bad news actually is favorable for the outlook, Pate said. He said the drop in GNP resulted mainly from very sharp liquidation of excessive inventories by business.

Sales have held up quite well, he said, so production and employment must rise as business works off excessive inventories.

Besides the inventory adjustment, Pate cited as indicators of an impending economic upturn such developments as increased availability of mortgage credit, moderation of inflation, the leveling off of the job lay-off rate and "some improvement in public confidence."

Pate predicted that the GNP will grow at an average annual rate of 4 to 6 per cent in the second half, and noted that this pace still would leave output at the end of this year substantially below the fourth quarter of 1974.

Many economists call for a much-sharper growth of the GNP in the range of 8 per cent, as necessary to reduce unemployment substantially.

Pate predicted the unemployment rate, which was 8.7 per cent of the labor force last month, would rise to a peak above 9 per cent. This was a slight escalation of the Ford administration's most recent forecast that the rate would peak at about 9 per cent.

The rate probably will not decline "appreciably" until late this year, Pate said.

Despite his moderate optimism, Pate pointed to several weak spots including an expected decline in business spending for plants and equipment and a bleak outlook for automobile sales at least until the 1976 models come on the market this fall.

Though the recession is "approaching a bottom, we have not yet reached bottom," he said.

Recovery in the second half of this year will be spurred he said, by a sharp rise in consumer purchasing power resulting from about $28 billion of regular tax refunds this spring and the tax cuts enacted by Congress.

CHANGE NEW CONSTITUTION

CTs set quorum at 50 in compromise decision

By BRUCE RAY WALKER
State News Staff Writer

Over 200 clerical-technical employees attended a special noon hour union meeting Thursday and voted to lower the number of members required to form a quorum from 100 to 50.

their coworkers wishing to change the recently adopted constitution of the MSU Employees Assn. (MSUEA), which represents MSU's more than 2,000 CTs.

In the 45 minutes available over their lunch break, the members were only able to consider one of the more than 20 amendments proposed. That was the one asking for the quorum rule be lowered from 100 members to 25 and was considered to be the most important.

When the first vote was taken on the amendment, it was easily defeated. But a member of the audience immediately suggested after the vote that the quorum be set at 50. Another vote was taken and the amendment passed setting new quorum level at 50.

The accusations leveled at the union leaders that they had "railroaded" the constitution through at least February's meeting surfaced again at Thursday's meeting. When Hawkins ruled at one point that a two-thirds vote was needed rather than a simple majority, someone in the crowd shouted "railroad" and Hawkins agreed to let the majority vote stand.

The amending group was also accused of railroading, because it was trying to get changes made without adequately notifying the membership.

Time was up before any other amendments could be considered. Hawkins said the board was considering another special meeting in May.

Discussing their differences of opinion over the proposed amendments to the MSUEA constitution, Beatrice Lin, the initiator of the amendments, and John Hawkins, president of the clerical-technical workers' union, wait for Thursday's special meeting to begin. SN photo/Bob Kaye

M worker gets hit by rate man

Working with the public can sometimes be tough, but Dennis Mayer has seen rougher times than most.

Mayer, a recreation graduate student, 1604 Perch St., was working in the Men's Intramural Building when a man came up to him shortly after 12:30 Wednesday and slapped him in the face.

"First he hit me, then he explained why," Mayer said.

The man explained to Mayer that he was irate because he could not secure a reservation for the Turf arena. He did not say what he wanted the arena for. Apparently the man called earlier and Mayer told him reservations could be made anytime after 10 a.m.

"He said 'I sent my man over here after 10 and you (Mayer) said all the reservations were filled at 10 to 10,'" Mayer said.

Mayer said the reservations did not begin until 10 a.m.

Mayer survived the incident better than most bank tellers during the days of Bonnie and Clyde. He suffered a split lip and, as he said, hurt pride.

George A. Hough III, professor of journalism, has filed a complaint against an unnamed driver who refused to yield to him as he strolled across W. Circle Drive between the Journalism Bldg. and Linton Hall Tuesday morning. The complaint, naming a specific person, is the first of its kind in at least seven years, according to campus police, who say they do, however, regularly ticket drivers who refuse to yield to pedestrians. Hough, who calls himself "a pedestrian at heart," said the driver was an MSU station wagon, no. 450. He recognized the driver.

That do "Handsome Al" Mandelstamm, Richard Nixon, Josh McDowell and the CBC 6500 computer have in common? They're all losing the Top Turkey race to a pair of MSU students — Tom Hurley, 109 W. Holmes Hall, and Francis X. 601 S. Case Hall. Hurley forged into the lead with 2,931 votes (costing $1 each) Wednesday evening, after Otto (2,883 votes) had already surpassed Mandelstamm (2,582 votes). The former MSU professor of economics, now at Michigan Polytechnical Institute, said he would hurl Otto from the top of Hubbard if he continued to pick up votes. "Otto is a prune," he said. The contest is sponsored by the Alpha Phi Omega fraternity for the benefit of Lansing's inner city Scouts. Voting closes at 2 a.m. Saturday in the Alley-Ey.

ntlon cornered again

Invest John Cantlon found himself cornered and tongue-tied again this week at MSU budget hearings before the Senate Appropriations Committee's subcommittee on higher education. One of the senators proposed that MSU could save money by cutting back on the number of sabbaticals granted to faculty. Cantlon replied that there was no waste because the separate departments should be able to handle the workload of the 107 faculty members presently on leave. "You mean you got 107 faculty that we don't even miss and we're still paying them?" asked the senator, amazed. Cantlon balked.

s drivers collect bumpy miles

Fifteen MSU campus bus drivers were honored Thursday night by the MSU for their safe driving records. All told, the 17 represent 125 years of accident-free driving over 3,125,000 miles of campus roadways. Two drivers even received awards for 10 years without a chargeable accident. They are Claude May and L. D. Smith.

ckster tangles with topchy telephone

Male Abbot Hall student faces a misdemeanor charge of tampering with a telephone after he posed as a telephone repairman and fiddled with the phone of women from Mason Hall early this week. The women say they received a call from the man who told them their phone was working improperly, then appeared at their door shortly afterwards, refusing to show identification because he was busy. The women called the police and filed charges. The student claims he was pulling a prank which just happened to tangle him in the long arms of the law.

REASONS FOR REACTION VARY

MSU vets bitter on S. Viet fall

By GREG KRAFT
State News Staff Writer

The MSU community has a unique group of individuals who waded through rice paddies and dodged bullets in Vietnam.

Now, because most of South Vietnam has fallen to Communist forces, these veterans are bitter.

Randy Gatlin feels the United States still has a commitment to the South Vietnamese. Michael Chernoby says the problem results from the corrupt Thieu regime. Joe Lam does not think the United States belonged there in the first place. Wendell Weber could care less what happens in Vietnam.

Gatlin, who recalls seeing 5,000 Viet Cong bodies turn black from sun exposure during the Tet offensive, feels the United States has a commitment to continue helping the people of South Vietnam.

"The waste of American lives that transpired since we initially got involved is enough to make anyone bitter," said Gatlin, a junior in a pre-med curriculum. "I would give up what I have to go back over. I don't like to see people oppressed."

Joe Lam, who is stationed near Da Nang in the Army infantry, feels that peace is impossible in Vietnam. The U.S. presence there only expanded the war, he claims.

"The governing body wanted American assistance, not the common people," Lam said.

Wendell Weber, who also served in infantry patrols, says he definitely would not go back in the Army if he was called.

"I couldn't care less what happens over there," said Weber, a junior majoring in zoology. "Most of those people don't care who rules them."

But Michael Chernoby, who was a Navy medic for the People Civilian Aid program, does care.

"If I was going to go over there to fight, I think I'd rather fight the Saigon government," said Chernoby, a sophomore majoring in nursing.

He also feels that the people in South Vietnam do not care who is in command. "Those people are peasants and farmers," he said. "They are only running south to save their lives from gunfire."

Lam also thinks the South Vietnamese are only concerned about where the next bowl of rice will come from.

"I feel the South Vietnamese don't care who governs them," said Lam, a senior in Marketing. "They only care about themselves and their families."

Gatlin disagreed. "I personally think we have a commitment," he said. "We started it in the '50s and now it's haunting us. The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong have made asses out of the American government. It's a shame North Vietnam should bring the U.S. to its knees."

But Chernoby thinks that mentality is what got the U.S. into Vietnam.

"Three hundred million in aid won't bring 50,000 dead back to life," Chernoby said.

Banks wary of rebate checks

By DEBBIE WOLFE
State News Staff Writer

Government tax refund checks will be nice presents for MSU students, but may cause a few headaches at the teller's window because area banks are hesitant to cash them.

Many people try to cash stolen or lost checks with fake IDs, which leaves the unfortunate bank stuck with a loss. The U.S. and state governments clearly state on each check that positive identification must be presented to the bank to insure that the right person receives money for the right check. A further precaution stipulates that the check be endorsed in the presence of the teller handling the check.

Gary Sullivan, asst. vice president of First National Bank of East Lansing, 435 E. Grand River Ave., said the bank would cash checks up to $50 for customers having accounts in the bank, but would require deposit of the funds for amounts exceeding that figure.

"When the check is deposited in the account, the customer can then withdraw the amount of the check after we compare their signature with bank records," he said. "This policy helps to prevent forgery and a loss for the bank."

Sullivan's bank also requires check cashers to have two pieces of picture identification for security purposes.

Beverly Nye, asst. cashier at East Lansing State Bank, 100 W. Grand River Ave., said her bank will cash government tax refund checks only if the customer has an account at the bank and presents a current student ID and a driver's license.

"We have to be careful with the identification of the customer because if a mistake is made the bank has to eat the loss," she said. "Many forgeries have already been made and because of this our policy usually requires the customer to have an account with us."

If a person without an account at the bank wishes to cash a check they must receive the approval of a bank officer, which is hard to come by.

Another security precaution stipulates people with joint accounts must cash their own checks.

For students who do not have an account at a local bank, the Administration Building offers a viable alternative.

Rita Day, asst. cashier at the Administration Building bank, said it requires only a current student ID to cash government tax return checks for $50 or less. If the check exceeds that amount, two pieces of picture ID are preferred, but exceptions can be made by being cleared through an officer of the bank.

JMC offers Mississippi canoe trip

By PAUL PARKER
State News Staff Writer

Travel down the Mississippi River in a canoe from Minneapolis to New Orleans for six weeks this fall and receive 11 credits for it.

It sounds too good to be true, but the 1975 Justin Morrill College Bicentennial Mississippi River Project will give 30 students the opportunity to get a lot of exercise, learn a lot of history and learn a lot about themselves.

"I don't think it's your normal canoe trip," said Cliff Borbas, creator of the project. "People travel down the Mississippi all the time, but not in canoes."

"It'll not only give us a first-hand chance to look at the Mississippi region, but 30 people living together for six weeks will give us a chance to see how people interact in stressful situations."

Since there are no rapids or dangerous stretches of water on the part of the Mississippi being traveled, Borbas felt that the only problems would be those developing from camping out each night and cooking meals over an open campfire.

The students participating in the venture will spend three weeks preparing for the trip, two at MSU for intensive historical background of the Mississippi River region and group interaction exercises and one at the Pine River Canoe Camp near Sault Ste. Marie working on camping skills.

The 11 credits would be earned in JMC 400B, the Justin Morrill College field experience class. Borbas suggested that students take one or two independent studies related to the trip.

Borbas hopes that applicants will be able to swim at least 100 yards and have some background in camping or canoeing, but emphasized that such knowledge is not necessary.

"I don't know what we'd do if someone said they can't swim 100 yards," Borbas said. "For their own benefit, I would suggest being able to swim. They'd have the whole summer to learn."

The cost of the project will be $500 per student plus tuition. Included are transportation, food, lodging and equipment for the seven weeks away from MSU.

Applications can be picked up in 129 Snyder Hall until April 30.

Orphans' plight nightmarish

Notes on a recurring nightmare:
I'm driving through Lansing listening to my car radio and here comes Joe Potatoes, ace used-car salesman with a brand new pitch:

"...yes friends, you heard it right the first time. Dyke Jackstra Ford is offering orphan rebates. Yes, with every new Pinto, Maverick or Mustang we sell, we will include—at no extra cost—a genuine orphan."

"Not just any orphan, mind you, but a just-off-the-boat, certified Vietnamese orphan. They got all their shots too. We got orphans coming out our ears. So get on down here cause we're gonna move 'em out..."

Not believing my ears I stopped in at my favorite bar—The Wild Horse on Turner Street—to get a beer and buy a lottery ticket.

I was astounded. There, above the lottery advertisement was a new sign: "Orphan Sweepstakes! Win $10,000 and three orphans. A new drawing every week. Do your humanitarian duty and win a fortune."

The ticket buyers were falling all over themselves to get in line.

But things were to get worse, much worse.

Stopping in at the city market for fresh produce I noticed a big, U.S. government truck unloading crates of orphans.

Inside, at the orphan stand, housewives were squeezing the little buggers to see if they were fresh.

"Do you think these here is hothouse orphans or organic orphans?" one woman asked another.

"Ah, don't know Harriet," the other replied. "With all these chemicals they're adding to orphans these days I don't know whether to buy any or not."

"Are they giving green stamps?" she added.

Things were getting out of control. They had just announced a special bat and orphan day for Tiger Stadium.

Can you imagine it? Gates Brown hits a home run and all those little leaguers pound their bats and wave their orphans with glee before the roving eye of the TV camera.

Labor unions will protest the importation of foreign orphans claiming it will ruin the market for domestic producers.

Junkies will smuggle hash in suitcases of orphans.

Hamburger stands will offer McOrphan cards. Buy nine and get one free.

I could see there was no escape. No exit. They had just booked a band of orphans in for a week at The Brewery.

I felt there might be an orphan shortage developing. Surely, this orphan boom would dangerously deplete world stocks.

Then I thought of Henry Kissinger and was reassured.

If we ever run out of orphans, Washington will simply create more.

Legislating morality

Victimless crimes. Crimes without victims.

It seems logical that if there is no victim, there is no crime and there should be no punishment.

But the laws prohibiting such crimes still exist, defying logic and forcing citizens to run the risk of punishment for actions that should be the personal, moral decision of each.

A state executive task force, however, is in the midst of a study of victimless crime. In about a month and a half, the task force will make recommendations to the governor about some victimless crimes — including prostitution, gambling, pornography, marijuana use and sex between consenting adults.

The task force will decide whether these crimes should be decriminalized. (Decriminalization is the removal of criminal penalty with the retention of some control or regulation.)

Undoubtedly the task force will be reminded that large amounts of money from drug sales, prostitution and gambling flow to organized crime today. Decriminalization of these things would take that money and power away from criminals and give some of it to the state.

Police forces in Michigan devote 40 per cent of their time fighting victimless crimes. If those crimes were decriminalized, police could better devote themselves to halting serious crimes such as murder, heavy drug traffic and rape that endanger people's lives and well-being.

Marijuana use heads the list of those crimes in need of decriminalization.

Use, transportation and personal cultivation of marijuana should be allowed, and the state should wholesale marijuana as it does liquor. Sale, of course, would be limited to adults, and care would have to be taken that that law would be enforced strictly.

Outdated laws forbidding adultery, homosexuality and sex between consenting adults should also be swept from the books.

Prostitution is a service for which there is a demand that the law should acknowledge. Brothels should be permitted, and weekly medical examinations of prostitutes should be required. Advertisement or soliciting by prostitutes — the public's chief complaint today — would be unnecessary and illegal.

Gambling, too, is a pastime almost universally indulged in and one that should not be banned. With the introduction of off-track betting, dog racing and casino betting that would result from decriminalization, the state's budget would receive a much-needed injection of money from taxation of these establishments.

Pornography is another bugaboo of today's legal system. Courts have been struggling for years to define obscenity. Why not forget the debate entirely? Give people what they want with very tight control on advertising and promotion of such material. Pornography should not be forced on anyone, but it should be available to those who desire it.

Some people, because of religious or other reasons, will always believe that use of marijuana, prostitution, pornography and gambling are inherently evil.

But that does not give them the right to make victims out of those who believe differently.

Return SWU cards

The Student Workers Union is in the last phase of its drive for union authorization cards, and with a little help from its friends, an election can soon get underway to determine whether student workers want the SWU to represent them.

The SWU's friends in this case are — and must be — MSU student workers. Thirty per cent, or about 2,100, of the 7,100 student workers must turn in signed authorization cards in order for the Michigan Employment Relations Commission (MERC) to hold an election.

The union was shy only 42 cards at the end of winter term. To allow for possible disqualifications, the union mailed authorization cards to all campus workers again this week hoping to get a return of at least 200 cards for a safe margin.

If enough cards are collected, the union can file for an election in just a couple of weeks.

Without a union, student job grievances and security and wage matters will continue to be handled in an arbitrary manner.

But MSU student workers can do something to change their present powerlessness in those matters. If you're a student worker and haven't signed an authorization card yet, do so. It could be the signature that puts the SWU over the top and leads to an election and a union that would finally inject some democracy into the campus work situation.

PIRGIM REPORTS

Old Kent following lending law

A student-sponsored public interest organization which previously charged the Old Kent Bank and Trust Company with multiple violations of federal and state law reported Thursday that the bank has come into full compliance.

Surveys in 1973 and 1974 by PIRGIM (Public Interest Research Group in Michigan) found many Old Kent branches in violation of truth-in-lending laws. PIRGIM's complaints to the Michigan Financial Institutions Bureau and the Federal Reserve Board resulted in warning letters to Old Kent. According to PIRGIM, Old Kent was previously the worst violator of the lending-disclosure law its survey found.

However, a third survey, completed early in March by students at Grand Valley State Colleges headed by Bob Hendricks, found Old Kent in perfect compliance.

Calls were made to each branch of Old Kent asking for an interest rate quotation on a new car loan. All 37 branches that quoted a rate correctly stated the interest in terms of Annual Percentage Rate (APR), the only form legally permissible.

Uniform interest quotation was mandated by Congress to allow consumers to compare rates and shop around for the best available deal on credit. Previously, different ways of calculating the rate, such as the "add-on" or "discount" methods made it impossible for consumers to accurately compare loan costs from different sources.

"We are very pleased that Old Kent has come into compliance with the law," project director Bob Hendricks said. "We decided to survey them a third time because of their substantial violations in our first two surveys: in 1973 PIRGIM found violations of 19 of 29 branches surveyed. In 1974, five of the 29 branches previously notified of violations were still quoting illegal rates. This year, we surveyed every branch and obtained uniformly good results."

"The percentages quoted provided an outstanding example of the usefulness of this law," said Richard Conlin, the staff member who supervised PIRGIM's truth-in-lending project. "Even just calling different branches of the same bank, surveyors who gave identical information and asked identical questions were quoted rates ranging from 10.98 per cent to 13.16

Higher grades

I would like to believe that Prof. Barbara Hurrell's article, "Better teaching — higher GPA?" (April 1) is the true explanation for inflated grades, but I must offer a demurrer for myself—and a perhaps a few others. While the GPA in my own courses is lower than the total University wide GPA, it is considerably higher than it was some years ago. I doubt that I am teaching better; I am just giving higher grades for the same performance. Why?

The answer for me is that my grading has become increasingly permissive in direct relationship to the growing power of students over academic standards. In previous years, I could hold to high standards because I was not confronted with a call from the ombudsman, a hearing before a student-faculty judiciary committee, a charge of racism based on low grades or the cancellation of a class because I was not "popular" enough to draw a sufficient number of students. A few such experiences, plus the emphasis on SIRS reports in promotions and salary raises, will, I suspect, convince some professors of the absurdity of maintaining high standards.

I would also like to believe the students themselves are advocates of high academic standards, but again I must offer an objection. They believe in high standards of achievement from our athletic teams, and doubtless some believe in high academic standards, but my experience has been that they are more concerned with high grades than with high academic standards. The test of this is that my SIRS evaluations, if taken before the midterm, are always much better than those taken after the midterm. In fact, professors who desire high SIRS evaluations should either get evaluated before the midterm or give excessively high grades on the midterm.

My own solution is an unsatisfactory and perhaps not completely honest compromise. I still demand high standards for 4.0 and 3.5 students so that I can write honest recommendations on their applications for graduate school or law school. At the lower levels of grading, however, students now get higher grades for less ability or less ambition than did former students. And when a student becomes a member of the board of trustees, as will doubtless happen in the not-too-distant future, even these feeble standards will doubtless evaporate.

In the long run, I suspect that the inflation of grades, for whatever reason, will prove to be a severe disadvantage to the students themselves. Eventually they will face the disillusionment that their abilities do not match the grades that they received, and if they do not discover this fact, their future employers will. Graduate schools and law schools will also find that our products cannot fulfill the promises implicit in their grades. The cheapening of our degrees must eventually effect the future careers of our students.

I wish that I could accept Hurrell's assessment of the reason for inflated grades, but my own experience corresponds more with the lead article in the same issue of the State News, "Test scores show students' grasp of basic skills dropping."

Cheap lives

"It seems life is very cheap to the Communists." Ellen Sponseller quotes an American doctor in her mawkish article on bringing children of mixed Vietnamese-American parentage to the United States. This quote, and this whole new "humanitarian" concern for the lives of Vietnamese children would be comic if the entire situation were not so tragic.

Indeed, we showed Diem in the 50s how to kill Vietnamese people and gave him the Letter policy

The Opinion Page welcomes all letters. Readers should follow a few rules to insure that as many letters as possible appear in print.

All letters should be typed on 65 - space lines and triple spaced. Letters must be signed, and include local address, student, faculty or staff standing — if any — and phone number.

Letters should be 25 lines or less and may be edited for conciseness to fit more letters on the page.

No unsigned letters will be accepted.

NYA bigoted

Once again the Organization of Jewish Students feels it necessary to clear up a serious misrepresentation. Though the United Front Against Racism and Imperialism (UFARI) and the Organization of Arab Students (OAS) viewpoint (April 2) contained many false and misleading statements, we are most concerned with the distribution of literature from the National Youth Alliance (NYA), an anti-Semitic white supremacist organization, by these groups.

UFARI and OAS claim that their "investigation" showed only that the NYA is "conservative and right-of-center" with "no justification for calling it anti-Semitic and Nazi-like."

To see the nature of the NYA, one only need look at any issue of Attack, the publication of that organization. We offer the following examples as only a very few of the type of attacks regularly offered by the NYA:

1. Attack, Special Edition no. 2, exposed the "Marxist-revolutionary leaders" as being Jewish. It further goes on to speak of this as a "kosher monopoly."
2. Attack, Issue No. 3 (January 1971), dedicated to the ideal of the racial superiority of the white European. Articles include "Facts of Racial Science Blandly Suppressed" and "Liberals Hide Racial Truth." In the same issue, many stereotypes of blacks and Jews are affirmed, as well as attacks against the anti-apartheid movement.

3. In an editorial entitled "America and the Third World," in Attack, Special Edition No. 24, the NYA suggests that which it feels should be fundamental to American foreign and domestic policy: "Race is everything. The destiny of America is inextricably linked by ties of blood and culture to those of other nations of the world, whether in Africa, the Pacific or Europe."

Other issues also criticize the women's movement, the ACLU, Jehovah's Witnesses, Adventists and Christian Scientists. Examples could go on. But the NYA best explains its own goals in its application form, where it expresses "opposition to all race-defiling efforts... whether through school integration, forced housing, artificial job quotas or other means."

Once again, we can only hope that the expose of the "factual" basis of some of the arguments with which we are confronted will help encourage constructive dialog. We hope to end racist attacks against all people as well as end the distribution of such literature on this campus.

We call on all people to attack racism even if it is furthered by those who claim to be in a front against racism. Only through these means can a constructive dialog be achieved between MSU's Jewish, Islamic and Arab student communities.

Top Turkey

We, the committee to elect Andrzej Pawel Zmurkiewicz, do hereby wish to publicize his numerous qualifications for the title of "Top Turkey." "Handsome Andy," as he is lovingly referred to by 639 women in Akers Hall:

1. Is a true Polish gentleman.
2. Is an RA whose door is always open.
3. Has "Paul Newman blue" eyes.
4. Has unending patience for the jokes constantly played on him.
5. Has a great gobble.
6. Lays a lot of eggs.
7. Has avoided 22 consecutive Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners though Butter Ball has his number.
8. Always wears weekenders.

A further qualification one must consider is that of availability. "Handsome Al" Mandelstamm is unquestionably a worthy turkey. However, if elected, he is too remote to fulfill the duties confronting him and accept the prizes offered him. On the other hand, Andrzej Pawel Zmurkiewicz, with the tortuous load of six credits this term, would do justice to the award of "Top Turkey," and be able to attend all functions which an elected celebrity should attend.

Food list no. 2

The article Tuesday on the "Terrible Ten" by the Center for Science in the Public Interest was interesting, but I don't feel the interest went far enough, so here is a revised list of the "Terrible Ten":

- (1) Milk—not only are some people allergic to milk, but the recent investigations into Nixon's re-election campaign showed that the monolithic Milk Producers Assn. selfishly conspired and bribed to keep milk prices high. Milk is mostly water, anyway.
- (2) Lettuce—just ask any UFW activist, when stand back.
- (3) Oranges—the orange growers of Florida have been shamelessly exploiting the name of Crosby for years. Besides, oranges are mostly water, anyway.
- (4) Fish—Fish caught anywhere in the U.S. today contain almost as much mercury as fish caught in the U.S. 50 years ago!
- (5) Wine—wine has little nutritive value—its meager alcohol content is worse than empty calories than an equivalent amount of sugar, and the rest is high-priced water. For an additional hazard, see (2) above.
- (6) Coffee—Contains caffeine and tannic acid which the government admits have been proven to cause kidney failure and most trouble in some persons. Besides, it's mostly water when prepared.
- (7) Tea—same as above, only it's usually not fixed as strong.
- (8) Hot Dogs—Ralph Nader has been saying for years that these are unhealthy; just because he was wrong about the Corvair doesn't mean he's always a loser.
- (9) Whisky and other hard liquors—most water, the empty calories of the alcohol give little nutrition, and the addition problems cause our nation's No. 1 health problem.

(10) Wheat and Flour—We have all heard how the grain growers have exploited and manipulated the grain market to force up the price of their product, so they should be boycotted at all costs. Besides, we should be sending all that expensive grain overseas to feed the rest of the world, not eating it ourselves.

This list is respectfully offered in the interest of better nutrition and in the fond hope that the Center for Science in the Public Interest will choose between politics and nutrition—the two are not compatible.

GPA inflation

Grade-point inflation, humbug!

I must agree that according to the data presented there is strong evidence of grade-point inflation throughout the nation's universities, but I disagree as to why.

The start of the trend of increasing grade point averages has been tied by most articles to keeping students in college and out of Southeast Asia. Maybe there is some truth in those articles, but the amount is questionable.

I would propose that GPA inflation has been minimal within the nation's four-year universities, but the rule in junior colleges. I would also propose that the transfer of most if not all courses up to a limit (90 credits) has only helped to bring in focus a fact of university academics: students get better grades in their freshman and sophomore classes.

I do not want to smear junior colleges.

They have proven themselves to be valuable assets to getting individuals interested in learning after the high school experience. I would, however, like to ask the genius behind the computer where and how he got his data. I would also like to see the entire study in print not verbal garbage. I am sick and tired of hearing about how easy it was to get the grades I got.

So how about it, you little men with glasses in that air-conditioned, temperature-controlled Ivory Tower. Give us all the facts, not just the aspirin study.

Political pawns

Okay! During the last week or so you've printed letters from non-Indians using us, native Americans, as examples of United States oppression. Now how about hearing from us?

After World War II, when Zionist immigration reached its peak, the British assured the Palestinians that the Jews would never be allowed to gain a majority in Palestine. We were told the same thing when we allowed settlers to move into the Ohio River valley. Before we realized what was happening the United States has passed a law providing for the removal of all tribes east of the Mississippi to Indian Territory, now known as Oklahoma. The reservation became our refugee camp.

Claiming land by Divine Right is nothing new either. During the period of westward expansion, everyone spoke of Manifest Destiny. This meant that, basically, the Indian did not utilize the fertile plains and therefore, the white man had the God given right to remove the Indian from the plains to make room for the plow. There was always a rationalization for the taking of our land until the government reached the west coast. Is this any different from the Zionist expansions of '48, '67, '73?

We native Americans stand alone in our fight for treaty rights in this country. We have been forced to resort to armed confrontation to retain what land we have left. Our Palestinian sisters and brothers have been forced into the same situation. Most of the time, those who voice rhetorical support for us are merely using us as political pawns.

Palestinians have supported us in the past and we, of the American Indian Movement, stand by our sisters and brothers who are working for the liberation of their homes. We have, and will extend our support, both moral and physical, to our arrival. The Second Coming itself would scarcely merit such a display.

On the surface, I would have liked to have seen the man. After all, solving the mystery of resurrection, predicting the future, and enlightening us to a concept called "Maximum Sex," is a heavy task for one man to undertake in only three nights.

However, I am so fed up with pompous, overzealous religious fanatics that I shall stay away.

To me, religion is a deeply personal thing.

ance. The audience, which had paid to hear a debate, was cheated by Buckley's irresponsible neglect to furnish his prospective challengers with a copy of his proposed remarks or, indeed, to inform them of the topic to be discussed.

Buckley added nothing new to his oft-repeated defense of the free marketplace. The "15-second bellow of approval" Buckley received could only have been for the style and self-serving wit of his remarks, not for their freshness or profundity.

In addition, his thinly veiled contempt for the intelligence of his understandably unprepared challengers was inexcusable. Buckley may have glittered; he didn't "shine."

Josh is here

About six weeks ago the suspense began to build. It started with a few mysterious notices on walls around campus telling us that "He is coming." Later there were more urging us to "Hang in there."

Now, after thousands of posters, newspaper ads, radio messages, leaflets, costumed publicity creatures and (perhaps most appropriate) scrawled messages on the John wall, no part of our world has been left unannounced by the miracle of "Josh's"

It is not a badge I wear, and is most certainly not something I force down someone else's throat. Yet for the better part of a month, The Campus Crusade For Christ has been doing both these things. Did it ever occur to them that there might be a few of us on campus who have no desire, if not the need, to be saved?

I, for one, am tired of having someone else's religion forced on me. As I see it, "That's Josh!"

Buckley show

Steve Orr's report of the Buckley appearance at the University of Michigan last Friday does not represent a unanimous appraisal of Buckley's perfor-

Viet refugees

In regards to the "Vietnam Project" and Professor Wesley Fishel's suggested alternatives for bringing the Vietnamese to the U.S. and relocating them in the South, I suggest that more complex questions arise, generalized by "What about the U.S.?"

If, in fact, the economic and political situation in the U.S. made American involvement unlikely, why is it more economically or politically stable to feed, house, educate and employ an estimated two million refugees, when we have a gross amount of Americans who are starving, homeless, uneducated and unemployed?

Can the U.S. afford the opportunity cost of the obligation it is so painstakingly faced with?

Why you should buy the Advent 201 stereo cassette deck.

The Advent 201 stereo cassette deck combines the high fidelity performance of open-reel tape decks with the greater convenience of the cassette format. It incorporates the Dolby Noise Reduction System, special playback equalization for the new Chromium Dioxide tapes, and an extremely rugged, American-made tape transport mechanism (Advent makes the electronics themselves!)

The Advent 201 can make cassette recordings that are indistinguishable from the source, whether it's a phono record, FM stereo broadcast or another tape. So with the Advent 201 you can put together a serious music collection for a fraction of what you'd spend for records. And unlike records, cassettes can be played over and over without deterioration!

Why you should buy it at Tech Hifi.

Making high quality home recordings on the Advent 201 is surprisingly easy... once you've mastered some simple techniques. So when you buy one of these excellent cassette decks at Tech Hifi, we'll take the time to explain everything you need to know. We'll show you how to hook the Advent 201 into your system, how to set recording levels with the Advent's single VU meter, and how to maintain the tape heads for maximum performance. We can recommend the best tapes to use with the Advent 201 and even tell you where you can get the highest quality pre-recorded tapes to play through your new deck.

We want you to get the most out of the audio equipment you buy at Tech Hifi.

Come, hear.

Tommie's Bar in Lansing is a friendly place where customers can find anything from deep conversation to cold beer.

Tommie's has beer, chit-chat

By JAMIE CONROY and SUE WILLOUGHBY
State News Staff Writers

A red neon sign flashes "Liquor" from the window at Tommie's Bar in Lansing.

Inside Stevie Wonder, is on the jukebox and "The Rookies" soundlessly battle crime on the tube. Most of the stools at the bar are occupied by middle-aged men, both black and white, who puff at cigars while darting quick glances around the smoke-filled room.

The door creaks open and another lone bar-stool sitter shuffles in and gets a Budweiser. The man he sits next to grunts "hello," and the conversation is officially opened. The sign may flash "Liquor," but inside there's mostly just talk.

Roy sits alone in a booth along the wall bundled up in two overcoats and a scarf, while Ray and Pete sit hunched over their untouched beers with their hats pulled down low, discussing world affairs. Superfly sits munching Cheetos and checking out the scenery, while Bob stands talking on the phone labeled "out of order."

Superfly makes the first move.

"I was out standing on the street, but it's boring and cold out there so I came in to talk."

His main immediate goal is to avoid a third visit to the penitentiary as a long-term guest of the state. His first visit lasted 40 months.

"My first day in there I had to bust a head. Sex — you know. I was in the hole two weeks, but he was in the hospital two months."

He was convicted for pimping, but armed robbery and narcotics were other possible alternatives. After a second 17-month stay, he decided to study law books on his own to avoid a third trip. So far, so good.

Roy has also studied law, but his studies have been conducted outside penitentiary walls. He uses his mail-order knowledge to keep friends from being cheated on disability claims.

"I've studied law for 14 years, but it's too late to be a lawyer. That's for when I was younger."

Just then the door bangs open and in stumbles an elderly white woman who proceeds to fling herself into the nearest booth.

"I've been robbed," she croaks, showing the room her empty wallet. "Somebody buy me a drink!"

Ray accommodates by handing her a dollar which turned into a gin and tonic.

Ray offers to buy the next round and a fight ensues over who should have the honors — Roy, Ray or Superfly. Superfly wins and Ray proceeds to offer his advice on the key to success instead.

"Gonna make money off of two movie stars — hit the jackpot and go home," he says.

Tommie's is never lacking for customers, even when it opens at 7 a.m.

"Only the alcoholics are here then," Roy explains. "I sometimes come in and have one and go. I don't know why I do it, but I'm not an alcoholic.

"I come here often — hell, Roy lives at Tommie's."

Another newcomer breezes in, but it's obvious that he's already had his first drink of the evening.

"Germany will kick our ass!" he predicts, even though no one is listening. He also seems terribly concerned with determining the exact cast in the movie "The Professionals." He is not willing to let the matter slip past unnoticed — he insists on getting the opinion of everyone present.

"Wanna buy me a drink, honey?" he breathes to a woman customer, winking profusely. And then he offers to tell her a secret.

"I'm really the hunchback of Notre Dame," he confided. It seems that's why many people go to Tommie's — to tell their secrets and talk.

Silver Dollar Saloon drives Brewery bird far, far away

The Brewery bird has flown the coop.

The bird, once the cherished mascot of the cavernous bar on the western fringe of MSU, left town following the recent demise of The Brewery.

Before departing, the bird sent an open letter to all his many friends which read in part:

"I'll miss you. I'm going on the road to try to put my life back together. But wherever I am...I'll be thinking of my friends back in my beloved East Lansing, wallowing in mud and slush..."

As the tearful bird hitchhiked toward warmer places, work went ahead on the new Silver Dollar Saloon, which will occupy the old Brewery building on Michigan Avenue.

Richard Becker, once a co-owner of The Brewery, bought out his two former partners and has instituted several changes in the atmosphere of the Lansing night spot. He hopes to open the bar tonight.

He said the Silver Dollar would be better lit, the music would be more danceable and toned down and the crowds would be less boisterous than at The Brewery.

"I'm going after the middle-of-the-road college student," he said.

Becker added that he is considering instituting some sort of dress code on weekends.

Other plans for the new bar include special pizza and pitcher nights. Silver Dollar will be given in charge at the door to patrons paying the cover charge.

Blue Oyster Cult to appear

Blue Oyster Cult, "the thinking man's heavy metal band," will perform 8 p.m. Monday at the Metro Ice Arena near the Lansing Mall.

The cult will be accompanied by Bob Seger.

The concert will be presented by Paul Stanley Productions, which recently staged the successful Aerosmith concert at the ice arena.

The cult's character is macabre and menacing, yet intellectual, with titles like "Dominance and Submission,"

"Career of Evil" and "Subhuman" illustrating the group's thematic concerns.

The cultists are Alan Lanier (keyboards and guitar), Eric Bloom (vocals and guitar), Albert Bouchard (drums), Joe Bouchard (bass) and Buck Dharma (guitar).

Tickets are $5.50 in advance and $6 on the day of the show.

Brubeck's group just another bar band

By DAVE DIMARTINO
State News Reviewer

recently dubbed Sky King, is playing music that is reminiscent of Kool and the Gang strangely combined with Paul Butterfield.

Rock inclinations

Sky King's two-day stint at Lizard's revealed a lot about leader Brubeck's rock inclinations. "We're trying to reach as many people as possible with a blend of contemporary musical directions, encompassing rock, funk, Latin and jazz," the bassist said at one point. Such admirable intentions have thus far produced "Secret Sauce," the group's first album on Columbia records, and its current promotional tour.

Sky King is not exactly Brubeck's first rock venture. He and his present guitarist, David R. Mason, were previously in an aggregation called New Heavenly Blue. That group released one album that failed to go anywhere — possibly due to public confusion over the group name, which sounded suspiciously like a religious commune or a laundry detergent.

Mason is the only carryover from Brubeck's first band. His surprisingly good rhythm guitarwork is responsible for the group's present sound. Also featured in Sky King are vocalist Chris Coan, guitarist Rick Jacobi, saxophonist Jerry Bergonzi and Peter "Madcat" Ruth on harp.

Inadequate PA

Sky King's performance at Lizard's was severely handicapped by an inadequate PA system, yet occasionally those failings went unnoticed while the group concentrated on instrumental rather than vocal work.

The atmosphere at Lizard's displayed Sky King in its most comfortable surroundings. Despite the group's new album and the inclusion of the famous name of Brubeck, the group is destined for only limited exposure — probably only in small college bars throughout the country. The reasons lie in the fact that Sky King is, for all purposes, a very good bar band and little else.

Famous name

In essence, the group is covering ground that has been explored more thoroughly by other groups who are better musicians. Such groups do not need a famous name in their ranks to secure a recording contract. That "famous name" is the only factor separating Sky King from the hundreds of other bar bands attempting similar success.

Perhaps Chris Brubeck needs other directions. In the meantime, he is a little more palatable with father Dave and brothers Darius and Dan in the "Two Generations of Brubeck" albums on Atlantic Records. Not, unfortunately, by much.

Disney production minus magic touch

By EDD RUDZATS
State News Reviewer

the Disney Studio execution is unimaginative and predictable.

Mountain" is a bit shopworn in its total execution. Everything about the film, considering its mysterious subject matter, is far too sunny and cute to elicit much interest beyond what the basic plot structure holds.

The plot concerns the special powers of the two lead characters, Tony and Tia, orphans who have telepathic, telekinetic and prophetic powers. Their open display of these powers has caused them to be ostracized from the normal activities of other children, a theme which the Disney studios totally avoid exploring.

But anyway, Tony and Tia keep having these flashbacks to an event that would appear to explain their extraordinary powers. It takes the entire length of the movie for the explanation to unfold and once it does, thanks to overly sunny, unimaginative direction and productions, we are disappointed.

When the denouement takes place, the film achieves a new high of inane Disneyesque. What could have been exciting and suspenseful—qualities we used to get from Disney adventure tales—emerges as a blah time-killer with a clever plot and little else.

Not even the good character performances from Eddie Albert, Ray Milland and Donald Pleasance can save "Escape to Witch Mountain" from being an innocuous program for children.

Like father like son? Those people watching Chris Brubeck's Sky King at Lizard's last week drew their own conclusions. The youthful Brubeck, son of prominent jazz pianist Dave Brubeck, is currently performing in a rock context that is basically miles away from "Blue Rondo a la Turk." His new group, initially formed two years ago in Ann Arbor and

There is a classic Disney format of two blonde, Waspishly beautiful children alone in the wilderness, pursued by some baddy and befriended by some old miserly grouch with a heart of gold.

Furthermore, the visual effects are standard. Disney films of late have included enough flying autos to start a new air force. The shopworn tricks are no longer as good as they once were.

In fact, "Escape to Witch

Veterinary college to hold open house

By DON MC MILLAN

A cow with a window in its side, horse-shoeing and population control of dogs and cats are some of the subjects that will be presented at the 12th annual Vetavisit.

The exhibition, sponsored by the MSU College of Veterinary Medicine, will be held at the Veterinary Clinic on Wilson Road Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"The primary purpose of the open house is to let the people of Michigan know what's going on here, since this is their school of veterinary medicine," said Suzanne Kennedy, cochairman of the exhibition.

Emphasis this year will be placed on animal reproduction with special attention given to population control of dogs and cats. This was instigated by complaints that have arisen in various parts of the country concerning the population of animals.

"There are so many dogs and cats in this country today that if dog bites were infectious there would be an epidemic," Kennedy said. "The No. 1 complaint is some cities, like St. Louis, is dog bites."

The population control exhibit will explain procedures pet owners can employ to prevent the birth of unwanted dogs or cats.

Another of the exhibition's attractions, the cow with the window in its side, has been a public favorite at the animal open house for several years.

"Actually, the 'window' is made out of plastic and is only five or six inches in diameter," Kennedy said. "It gives a view of the cow's rumen, one of its four stomachs. Really, the view isn't very good, but the top is removable so that excess digestive material can be taken out."

The cow is used for research purposes at the Dairy Research Center.

Vetavisit 1975 will also include a display on horse lameness which will feature horse-shoeing, a small animal care booth, a wild animal exhibit and an animal obedience demonstration.

A number of specialty areas will be presented too. The Pre-Vet Club, the animal technician program and career opportunity information will be featured.

Several films will be shown, including the American Veterinary Medical Assn.'s "The Covenant" and "Pethood or Parenthood?" Vetavisit 1975 is free.

WEEKEND FILMS BROM BEAL

LINDA LOVELACE

"The Early Years"

Before Linda Lovelace became a porno queen in "Deep Throat," she made several short films. Even in the erotic underground these films became notorious. These films have been written about in Playboy, Penthouse, Oui, and Gallery. Linda Lovelace's early films have never been exhibited in a motion picture theatre publicly. They are simply too daring. They are held exclusively by private collectors of erotica. Beal Film Group has contacted a private collector and made arrangements to exhibit these films for a special engagement. These Lovelace films have become pornographic classics, much discussed, but rarely seen. They are absolutely hardcore and go substantially beyond anything that Beal has ever presented.

Events in Cambodia, Vietnam cause Thai foreign policy shift

By ANDREW MALCOLM
New York Times

BANKOK, Thailand — Current developments in Cambodia and South Vietnam can only lead to accelerated shifts in Thailand's foreign policy, according to experienced diplomatic observers here.

Many Asian nations keep a close watch on the diplomatic stance of Thailand, a constitutional monarchy that historically has been extremely astute in sensing the tide of regional events and adapting its policies accordingly.

At the height of the United States' involvement in Vietnam, Thailand was one of its staunchest allies. But in recent days Thailand's foreign minister, Chatichai Choonhavan, reinvented top-level Chinese trade officials to visit this country. He had originally invited the officials only last month, the foreign minister explained, but he invited them again this week to make sure they understood this country's eagerness to have them.

The invitation came despite Chinese support of a Communist insurgency in northeast Thailand.

Initial diplomatic exchanges, while hardly amicable, also have begun with North Vietnam. North Korea has made some soundings here. Relations with the Soviet Union have improved. And in recent months Thailand has established diplomatic relations with Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, East Germany and outer Mongolia.

The Thai government also has contacted both sides in the Cambodian conflict, offering to serve as the third party in peace negotiations in Bangkok. Some time ago, the government here all but closed its embassy in Phnom Penh and said it would recognize whatever government came to power there.

And almost in the same breath that it sought to have all 25,000 U.S. troops, mostly airmen, withdrawn from here within one year, the new government also ordered that American airlifts to Cambodia from bases in Thailand cease carrying ammunition and war supplies other than food and medicine for humanitarian purposes.

But the situation is a far cry from the militant Thai foreign policy that not so long ago provided, among other things, air bases for B-52s bombing Vietnam and so-called Thai "volunteers" trained and paid by the United States and sent to fight against Communist forces in neighboring Laos.

"The Thais are definitely trying to break away from the extreme pro-American stance of past years," said one observer here. "You could see it coming in the last couple of years. But it's gained momentum just recently."

Part of the reason is the continuing deterioration of the Lon Nol government's position in neighboring Cambodia and the sudden deterioration of the military situation in South Vietnam.

"There is a very genuine feeling," one diplomat said, "that the United States has no further role to play in this part of the world, and that Asian solidarity is more important for the future."

State's gasoline prices highest in six months

Michigan motorists are forking out the highest average price in six months for regular gas at major-brand service stations.

The Automobile Club of Michigan said Wednesday the average price of a gallon of regular gas is now 56.3 cents, the highest price since October of last year.

This week's half-cent jump in the average price of regular fuel also is the biggest weekly price increase in the past six months, according to the Auto Club.

The Auto Club's "fuel gauge" survey showed the cost of regular gas along major tourist arteries in the state varied this week from 61.9 to 47.9 cents per gallon.

Cedar Point planning Michigan park

By JOE KIRBY and GLEN SPONSELLER
 Cedar Point Inc., the Ohio-based firm, had planned to build the amusement park in the Sandusky area of lower Michigan, but local opposition has influenced the company to look elsewhere. John Hildebrand, communications manager for Cedar Point, said the Irish Hills location, near Onsted, is no longer being considered, and the firm is looking for another site in Michigan.

Calculators worth $900 taken from department

Calculators owned by the Forestry Dept. valued at $900 each were taken from the Natural Resources Bldg. Tuesday. Myer Myers, associate professor of forestry and the department in charge of the calculators, said the room was open to students from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Calculators built into the tables were stolen when someone sawed into the tables, removed some drawers, ripped the front of the table off and cut bolts on the padlock holding them down. The department is contemplating changing its system by requiring a student to forfeit his or her ID in exchange for a key to the room.

Two calculators were taken down by commercial securitization bolts that were fastened to the table. The bolts holding instruments down were removed. Myer said this was the first theft in three years. He's been trying various ways to keep them from being stolen. Myer said, "We've had calculators built into table and chained."

Flint and Lansing, but other areas in Michigan have not been ruled out.

Lee Jewett, project manager for the new park, said the choice of the site will probably be made in the next three months, following a feasibility study of the different areas.

"The three main things we look at are tourism, availability of help and demographics (Population characteristics) of the area," Jewett said. The firm feels that since a large number of visitors to the Ohio Cedar Point come from Michigan, it would be economically desirable to build a park in this state.

Jewett said park planners have no preference on the type of land or whether it is near a lake. If the park site is on the eastern side of the state and closer to the Sandusky park, it will be a smaller park. If located in western Michigan, which is outside the Sandusky market, it will be a larger park to draw people from the Chicago area.

A major aspect which will be considered by the firm will be zoning ordinances, so that they will not be faced with problems similar to the ones encountered in Irish Hills.

The Irish Hills project fell through when local planning officials failed to act on the amusement company's rezoning request.

The delays caused by citizen opposition groups threw a monkey wrench into Cedar Point's plans and put the project so far off schedule that the company decided to abandon the site.

The group leading the opposition to the park, the Save the Irish Hills League, was against the project because it felt it would bring traffic and environmental problems to the area.

David R. Blake, a wealthy Detroit businessman who just built a large home near the proposed Irish Hills park site, was in the forefront of the opposition.

He informed Cedar Point Chairman of the Board George A. Roose that a group of five local families had gathered a $50,000 war chest to fight Cedar Point in court no matter what the outcome of the local planning commission's rezoning decision.

Another group of citizens, Citizens for Cedar Point II, still hopes to revive interest in the Irish Hills project, but it appears Cedar Point officials have given up on the site.

Communications Week series to host off-campus speakers

The 1975 College of Communication Arts Lecture Series will be held in the Union Monday through Wednesday with the theme "Communications in Michigan: Perspectives for 1975."

Gov. Milliken has declared April 13 to 19 Communications Week in Michigan.

The lectures in the series, all free, will enable students to hear off-campus speakers. Each lecture will focus on one of the five academic units within the college.

Monday, 3 to 5 p.m., Randall P. Harrison, adjunct professor of communication in the Laboratory for the Study of Human Interaction and Conflict, University of California at San Francisco, will speak on "Communicating Non-Verbally Around the World" in Parlor C. Tuesday, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., James E. Pugh from the Kresge Hearing Research Institute at the University of Michigan will speak on "Beethoven's Hearing Loss" in Room 34.

Wednesday, 10:20 a.m. to noon, Richard L. Buck, vice president of the Tracy-Locke Advertising and Public Relations, Inc., Dallas, will speak on "Phillips Petroleum Co. and the Energy Crisis" in Parlors B and C.

From 3 to 5 p.m. Wednesday, Jonathan David, attorney-adviser, Rules and Standards Division of the Broadcast Bureau, Federal Communications Commission, will speak on "Newspaper-Broadcast Ownership Combinations" in Rooms 38 and 39.

Wednesday, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Werner Veit, editor of the Grand Rapids Press, will speak on "The Possibilities of a Press Council and Press Credibility in Michigan" in Room 35.

Sights and Sounds of Yesteryear at the Depot

New Orleans jazz in Lansing? It sounds strangely out of place, but at 9:30 every Friday and Saturday night at The Depot Restaurant, the flavor and the excitement of the Dixieland band comes to life.

The Basin Street 5, provides the sounds of the Dixieland jazz. To complete the decor of this time period, The Depot is embellished with 100 year old leaded glass windows, an antique baggage cart, railroad benches, waitresses with granny dresses, warning signal lights, and some beautiful antique Standard Oil gasoline pump crowns set above the booths constructed from actual benches from trains. Amidst this beautiful setting there is dancing to the Basin Street 5. Patrons can also sit and enjoy the smooth up-tempo music provided by this group.

When the Basin Street 5 are not performing there are many things at the Depot to remind customers of the trip down Memory Lane. The Depot, a 70 year old building which was converted from a railroad station only two years ago by owner Vince Mancangi, has an excellent salad bar ingeniously built into an antique baggage cart. The menu, which offers some delicious entrees for everyone at a moderate price, is printed on an oversized replica of everyone at a moderate price, is printed on an oversized replica of a railroad baggage check complete with twine to tie it to the baggage!

Whoosh! A train races by only 15 feet from the Depot. Inside the antique warning lights flash and the bells clang, lending even more authenticity to the already genuine atmosphere.

The Depot offers a superb seafood selection including crablegs, shrimp, and clams. Other specialties are fried chicken, strip sirloins and even spaghetti. On Sunday, spaghetti, fried shrimp and fried chicken are all at reduced prices and all include the salad bar. The Depot is also open every day for lunch with a special luncheon special.

For cocktails before lunch or dinner or just a quiet drink any time of day, The Depot has an

City unit votes against 1-way streets

By PAT NARDI
State News Staff Writer
In order to avoid disrupting a residential neighborhood, the East Lansing Planning Commission approved Wednesday a staff recommendation that the commission not make a one-way pair out of Ann and Albert Streets which would involve extending Ann Street to Hagadorn Road.

That vote initiated a staff study to look into legal aspects of amending the city master plan drawn up in the early '60s.

The plan calls for the extension of Ann Street between Milford Street and Hagadorn Road. That study will also suggest possible uses of the property between the streets.
The one-way pair had originally been proposed by the Traffic Commission in order to absorb some of the traffic from Grand River Avenue.

Though this plan would initially improve traffic flow on Albert Street, the Planning Commission rejected it because it would drastically increase the traffic volume on Ann Street and bring unwanted noise, pollution and traffic hazards.

If the one-way pair did go through, the traffic volume on both streets would number between 11,000 and 14,000 cars a day. Presently Albert Street handles 5,000 to 6,000 and Ann Street has 500 cars a day, associate planner Michael McCormick said.

"The one-way pair would only serve to deteriorate the environment," Benjamin said.
Commissioner John Czarnecki said the land between Milford Street and Hagadorn Road could be used for housing or a park. The city owns all the lots in that area except for two privately owned homes.

Benjamin said the Bailey Community Assn. would be happy to see a park go up there.
"Even if they just turned one lot into a park it would be nice," she said.

One part of the staff's recommendation that the commission did not accept was the inclusion of a bike path along Ann Street. It felt that would lead to the eventual extension of Ann Street.

most promising. "We will not accept stagnation or a stalemate, with all its attendant risks to peace and prosperity and to our relations in and outside of the region," he said.

• Congress should lift the U.S. arms embargo against Turkey, a vital ally for the security of the Eastern Mediterranean, the southern flank of Western Europe and the collective security of the Western Alliance.

• He hopes for a final agreement this year with the Soviets placing limits on strategic nuclear weapons that "would mark a turning point in postwar history and would be a crucial step in lifting from mankind the threat of nuclear war."

Student vote may decide lettuce issue

The board voted down three attempts to establish a boycott of its meeting in March. The first 4-4 vote defeated a motion to end purchases of Teamster lettuce, totaling about $85,000 per year. The second vote, which would have authorized a Universitywide student referendum, was defeated 5-3 because the board said it was illogical and poorly written. The last decision killed a motion for a referendum among residence hall students, 4-4.

Bowen explained the referendum was only tentatively approved because the committee wants to allow sufficient time to inform students of both sides of the controversy. The RHA constitution states that the vote must be held within 10 days of formal approval.

"Our committee wants to get a fair and accurate picture of student preference for the boycott," Bowen said.

He said the committee is planning an open forum for UFW and Teamster representatives to present their views to be held sometime before the referendum.

Union protests utility rate hike

LANSING (UPI) — Some 3,000 Flint and Lansing-area residents protested the "continuous and unreasonable rate increases" granted Consumers Power Co. in stacks of petitions presented to Gov. Milliken Thursday.
The petitions were delivered to the Capitol by officials of two Flint United Auto Workers locals who threatened "the biggest demonstration in the history of Lansing" if the utility fins approval of the new electric rate hike it plans to file shortly.

It's baseball season in Chicago, but you wouldn't know it by the way these four women bundled up to watch the Cubs open their season Thursday against Pittsburgh.

Baseball home opener cancelled second time

By MIKE LITAKER
State News Sports Writer

One of these days, the MSU baseball team is going to open its home season at Kobs Field. Don't count on that happening Monday, though, as the Spartans once-postponed doubleheader with Albion has been rescheduled for April 28. Tuesday's scheduled home twinbill against Western Michigan has also been tentatively moved to May 12. Norm Arman's grounds maintenance crew has been working on the field all week trying to clear most of the snow off the dirt portion of the infield with snowblowers. Unfortunately, the rest of the field is still covered with snow. "It looks pretty good that we'll be able to play Minnesota and Iowa next weekend but I doubt if the field will be ready any time during the week," said MSU coach Danny Litwhiler with a frown. "The snow melts in the day and freezes at night. You have to have a definite thaw overnight," he added. "The ground crew shoveled off the snow around the dirt area so that will help a little in keeping the infield from getting soggy." This is the first time in his 12 years here that Litwhiler can recollect having been snowed out. The MSU skipper is optimistic that a warm rain could vanquish the snow, however, it could cause the field to flood once the mighty Red Cedar starts its spring rampage. More important right now for Litwhiler is getting his team thawed out and moving again after last weekend's split with Ball State in the Indiana tundra. "It was so cold down there that whatever they did was almost an accident so there's been no change in our play, though some of the guys played well," Litwhiler said. The Spartans will be in Lafayette, Ind., today to take on Purdue in a doubleheader before capping the road trip Saturday with a pair against Illinois. With the balance this year in the Big Ten, Litwhiler sees the pennant race going down to the final week of the season. "We expect Purdue to be very unpredictable. They have won their squad back from last year," said Litwhiler, who will be on the hill with Duane Bickel and Rick Moore. The Spartans took a pair of wins from the Boilermakers last year on home ground when Purdue wound up in the Big Ten year-end poll. Two of this weekend's baseball games will be broadcast by station WKAR-FM. The first game of Purdue begins at 7 p.m. today and the second game of Saturday's twinbill at Illinois will be aired beginning at 3 p.m.

Illinois could pose a threat in the crucial early season when the Spartans have the nucleus of their club, which finished second in the standings last season, back. "Last year Illinois had the best team they've had in the last five years and with the balance in the league this year we're going to have to win these road games," Litwhiler said. "You expect to win more games at home than on the road, normally, but we're going to have to play .750 ball both at home and on the road this year. I can see the team that wins it all in the Big Ten losing possibly four or five games." Righties Jim Knitvilia and George Mahan will take the lead in the batting department with a .377 average. Outfielders Amos Hebert and Mike Fricke lead MSU with 13 RBIs apiece.

Birds hammer clawless Tigers

DETROIT (UPI) — Jim Palmer hurled a three-hitter Thursday and Lee May hit a three-run homer in his first American League at bat to help the Baltimore Orioles open defense of their American League East title with an 10-0 victory over the Detroit Tigers. Palmer, 7-12 a year ago when he suffered elbow and shoulder problems, retired the first 12 batters before Nate Colbert, another former National League who came to the AL in a winter trade, singled to center for the first hit. Aurelio Rodriguez singled with one out in the sixth and Art James, one of five Detroit starters not with the club a year ago, singled with one out in the eighth.

Loser Joe Coleman, 14-12 last season, began the weather-delayed season opener for both clubs by walking Ken Singleton on four straight pitches. Singleton was a third NL player on the field. Tommy Davis singled him to third before May cracked his home run. Don Baylor had four singles for Baltimore and drove in runs in the fourth, sixth and ninth innings. Paul Blair had three hits. Brooks Robinson had run-scoring singles in the sixth and eighth, his second being the 2,700th safety of his major league career.

Women netters ready for OSU

By ANN WILLIAMSON
State News Sports Writer

MSU's women's tennis team opens its season Saturday with a match which has special significance. The Spartans will meet Ohio State at 5 p.m. at the Lansing Tennis Club, located in Research Park in Okemos. There is no admission charge. MSU has amassed an almost unbelievable record in past years, sporting undefeated seasons from 1971 through 1973. The team came close to matching that perfection last year as well, but its winning streak was broken by Ohio State. Obviously, the Spartans are very anxious to take on the Buckeyes again Saturday. "We are very definitely looking forward to a very good match with Ohio State," coach Elaine Hatton said. "Because the quality of tennis is getting better by the year, the competition is getting tougher—the popularity of the sport is producing better players and Ohio State has several of those better competitors. "The matches between the two teams were very close last year and will most likely be so again this weekend. But, the girls are ready to even the score with Ohio State." The Spartans returned all of last year's team members, which include several outstanding players. Senior Sue Selke, beginning her fourth season for MSU, has won the Big Ten title at the No. 1 singles position for the past two years. Selke has also won every one of her singles matches during regular season play in her three-year career. Senior Allison Scruggs should also prove to be another strong Spartan competitor, having won the Big Ten title in both the No. 4 singles position and the No. 2 doubles position the past two years. Other Big Ten title winners include Becky Dickieson and Kathy Jo Bock in the No. 3 doubles position.

MSU women tracksters stride into home opener

The MSU women's track team opens its home schedule Saturday afternoon at 12:30 with the MSU Invitational meet at Ralph Young Field, weather permitting. The meet will be moved indoors to Jenison Fieldhouse in the event of bad weather. There is no admission charge. MSU will be hosting Western Michigan, Central Michigan, Calvin College, Kalamazoo College, Nazareth College, Jackson Community College and Bowling Green University this weekend, and Spartan coach Nell Jackson believes the action will be worth watching. "It should be a pretty interesting meet," Jackson said. "Central has a lot of depth on its team and should probably give us the most competition. "But I still believe MSU is the favored team Saturday over any of them," she added with a smile. Some of the Spartan performers to watch this weekend are Marjorie Grimmer and Karen Dennis in the 100 and 220-yard dashes, Sheri Hohenstein and Ann Forshee in the 880 yard-dash and Laurel Vietzke, Linda Porter and Denise Greene in the long jump.

MSU's men's and women's track teams brought out the shovels Wednesday in an attempt to clear the track at Ralph Young Field. The women's team is scheduled to host the MSU Invitational meet Saturday at the outdoor facility. Even men's asst. coach Jim Gibbard (foreground) lent a hand to the effort.

IM NOT

Men's intramural softball games scheduled for Sunday have been postponed because of the snow still covering the IM fields. The contests will be played at the same times and on the same fields May 18. Games scheduled for May 18 will be moved up to June 1. People are urged by the IM Dept. not to walk on the IM fields in order that the fields may dry up as soon as possible. The deadline for entry in the men's intramural soccer league is noon today. League games are played Saturday mornings and Sunday afternoons. The deadline for entry in the men's intramural independent volleyball league is today. There is no residence hall league, but residence hall teams can sign up as independents. There is a $10 team entry fee.

Stickmen whip Buckeyes, 12-8

Attackmen Dave Sorrick and Ron Hebert led the MSU lacrosse team to an overtime victory over Ohio State Thursday, 12-8, in a Midwest Lacrosse Assn. game at Old College Field. Sorrick and Hebert each had four goals in the match. Hebert added an assist for good measure. Play started out sloppy on a slippery field and MSU had to battle back from behind most of the game. Sorrick tied the game with 1:09 left in regulation time and from then on MSU had complete control of the contest.

Club Sports

MSU's Synchronized Swim Club will present its annual water show at 8 tonight and Saturday night and at 2 p.m. Sunday. Admission is 75 cents at the door.

Senior netter Larry Stark displays his serving form. MSU opens its Big Ten campaign at Iowa and Minnesota this weekend.

Netters swing into Big Ten against Gophers, Hawkeyes

By DAN SPICKLER
State News Sports Writer

Unusually weather has left the MSU men's tennis team with quite a few unanswered questions as the squad begins its Big Ten dual meet series this weekend. The netters open their 60th season today against Iowa, a team that defeated MSU coach Stan Drobac's racquetballers, 7-2, last year in East Lansing.

Stark and sophomore Tom Gudelsky from Muskegon are expected to be the biggest Spartan threat in the doubles category. The Spartans have been holding practices indoors to improve their play after early losses.

Suddenly, the latest fad on campus is to attack the basketball program, and specifically coach Gus Ganakas. This past season basketball team finished with the best record in over a decade, victories over every Big Ten team except Indiana (No. 1 in country) and a big upset victory over nationally ranked Notre Dame at South Bend.

Most fans are confusing their dislike for the players' play with the actual performance of the team (17-9) during the season. The recent letter by Len Bokuniewicz of Detroit, in which he expresses his dissatisfaction with Ganakas as a no-name coach, recommends coaches like Lofton Green, Will Robinson and John Snowden, is the last straw.

First, Green is just a Class B high school coach (no matter how successful) and unknown by everybody outside of the Big Ten. Second, Robinson announced his retirement within two years. Third, Snowden has been a head coach for a limited time and certainly is not a household word in the country.

Ganakas was a very big winner in high school. Dick Versant, assistant, had a 102-19 record in high school and was named coach of the year twice in Chicago.

Vern Payne was an assistant at the University of Denver before coming here and Pat Miller has the physical and mental toughness needed.

As long as the fans do not support the basketball program, basketball offices are crowded and antiquated, Jenison Fieldhouse is the laughing stock of the Big Ten and the coaches do not have carte blanche for recruiting, the basketball program will not be first class. A lot of progress has already been made by adding quality coaches and by spending more money in recruiting, but it will stop there. The University has to go all the way, as it is doing with the football program.

74 candidates spent almost $74 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the first of the freewheeling, spending elections, candidates for House and Senate seats used almost $74 million in their campaigns last year, Common Cause reported Thursday.

The Common Cause survey says this much was spent by 1,161 candidates for Congress who ran in the 1974 general elections. The figures cover primaries, runoffs and general elections.

This was the last major campaign before the new campaign reform law took effect on Jan. 1.

Democrats spent $38.4 million in House and Senate races with candidates for both major parties running. Republicans spent $32.5 million in the same races.

Another $1.7 million was reported by 63 incumbents, 62 Democrats and one Republican, who did not have major party challengers in the general election.

Common Cause, a citizen's group that monitors campaign spending, said Democratic incumbents outspent Republican challengers by an average of more than two to one.

Republican incumbents opposed by Democrats in House and Senate races outspent their challengers by a margin of three to two.

While candidates for federal office in last year's elections had to report their fund raising and expenditures, there was no limit on how much money they could use in their campaigns.

Under the new law now in effect, each House candidate may spend $70,000 in a general election, plus $14,000 for fund raising, though the state and national party organizations may spend in his or her behalf. The candidate may spend an equal amount in the primary.

Senate candidates now may spend only 5 cents for each person of voting age in the state or $175,000, whichever is greater, in both primaries and general elections. They also are allowed more for fund raising expenses, and help worth $10,000 each from the state and national parties.

In 1974, candidates in the 435 House races reported spending $45.1 million. Twenty-two of them spent more than $168,000 each, which equals the limit of $84,000 each for primary and general election under the new law.

The biggest spenders were winners Robert Krueger, D-Tex., $312,000 including a primary runoff; James Scheuer, D-N.Y., $301,000; Abner Mikva, D-Ill., $286,000, and defeated Reps. Samuel Young, R-Ill., $215,000 and Joel Broyhill, R-Va., $249,000.

In the 34 Senate races last year, candidates spent $28.9 million. Seven, including five incumbents, spent more than $1 million each.

The top spenders were incumbents Alan Cranston, D-Calif., $1,336,000; George McGovern, D-S.D., $1,173,000; challenger John Glenn, D-Ohio, $1,149,000; incumbents Robert Dole, R-Kan., $1,110,000; Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., $1,090,000; Birch Bayh, D-Ind., $1,024,000, and challenger Wendell Ford, D-Ky., $6,007,000.

Sixteen of the 65 major party Senate candidates spent more than the combined over-all spending limits they would be allowed under the new law.

U.P. students scoff secession

Peninsula lawmakers think their constituents to secede from Michigan to set up a new state, but MSU students from the Saginaw area disagree.

Jacobetti said that the movement to secede from Michigan is sincere because U.P. residents are dissatisfied with their treatment by the downstate-dominated legislature.

He said the 51st state would be called Superior "because it's the superior part of the state and the superior part of the nation as far as I'm concerned."

Gov. Milliken says he's "positive" that the majority of U.P. residents have no desire to secede from the rest of the state.

James Williams, B125 Butterfield Hall, said she thought the movement was funny.

"We haven't got enough business up here. There's only the tourist industry in the summer," said Jim Renhart, 622 E. Holden Hall.

Fred Hofer, 243 Louis St., has developed an interesting theory concerning the secession movement.

"I've been telling everybody that we're going to discover oil in 1976 for the bicentennial and we'll be rich like the Arabs," he said. "But nobody believed me."

Maybe MSU students from the U.P. should start saving their money, because if the U.P. secedes, they'll have to pay out-of-state tuition. And to be able to do that, they'd better be "rich like the Arabs."

think it makes more to join Wisconsin.

Senate OKs bill to aid energy saving

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill giving federal and state officials broad powers to force Americans to save energy without paying the higher prices advocated by President Ford was passed by the Senate Thursday.

The final vote was 60 to 25. The measure, still subject to House consideration, would virtually kill Ford's own conservation program by allowing either house of Congress to block his plans for removing federal controls from oil prices.

Ford has indicated he will attempt to remove the controls next month in an effort to force energy conservation. Opponents say such action would raise fuel costs $19 billion a year.

In addition to the provisions requiring joint federal-state efforts to save fuel, the bill would give the president standby authority, with congressional approval, to ration gasoline if foreign countries again curtail oil shipments to the United States.

At the last minute, the Senate adopted an amendment that would impose price controls on the 40 per cent of U.S. oil production whose price is now free to rise to the world level of about $12.40 a barrel.

The amendment by Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, approved 54 to 31, would not allow the price of such "new" oil to rise above the Jan. 1, 1975, level of about $10.40. Presumably, this would mean the oil now selling for $12.40 would be reduced in price by $2.

The Senate rejected an attempt by Sen. Paul J. Fannin of Arizona, senior Republican on the Interior Committee, to eliminate the mandatory conservation provisions from the bill. The Fannin amendment failed on a 60-25 vote.

Under those provisions, the Federal Energy Administration (FEA) would establish regulations designed to cut energy consumption by about 4 per cent over the next 12 months. This would be equivalent to saving an estimated 800,000 barrels of oil a day.

In a statement, Fannin and other Republican members of the Senate Interior Committee indicated that voluntary conservation and Ford's plan of higher fuel prices would be a better solution to the energy problem.

Under the bill, the states would use the FEA regulations as the basis for energy conservation programs tailored to fit their special requirements.

A tourist state, for example, might meet its share of the 4-per-cent goal by requiring stores to close by 9 p.m.

Another state could do its share by closing service stations on Sundays or allowing motorists to buy gasoline only on alternate days.

All conservation programs would be administered by the states but the cost would be shared with the federal government.

Congress would have authority to veto any conservation regulation proposed by FEA for state enforcement. The bill specifically bars any state from using rationing or higher taxes to conserve fuel.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chief author of the bill for President Ford's own conservation plan, which is based on raising energy taxes and allowing fuel prices to rise to curb demand.

The bill extends federal controls over oil prices at least until March 1, 1976.

U.S. has spent over $141 billion, 46,000 lives to save S. Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) — Before President Ford made his latest appeal to Congress and the nation for assistance for the besieged government of South Vietnam, the United States had spent more than $141 billion in 14 years to aid that Southeast Asian country.

And, since 1961, when President John F. Kennedy decided to commit the United States to a major effort to combat a Communist takeover of South Vietnam, more than 46,000 Americans and 241,000 South Vietnamese have died in the fighting.

The Pentagon estimates that during the same period more than 1 million Viet Cong and North Vietnamese died in combat.

Pentagon officials also estimate that the South Vietnamese army currently has more than $2 billion in American military equipment.

During the current fiscal year, American aid to South Vietnam has totaled almost $700 million.

That figure is a small fraction of what was spent during the peak years of U.S. involvement between 1967 and 1970. During those four years, direct spending for the Vietnam war was successively $22.2 billion, $26.3 billion, $26.5 billion and $18.5 billion.

The heaviest U.S. spending for Vietnam took place during the period when U.S. forces in that country reached a total of 550,000.

During the 11 years between 1961 and the signing of the Paris Peace accords in January 1973, 2.6 million American troops served in Vietnam. During the same period, the United States lost 4,900 helicopters and 3,700 planes in combat.

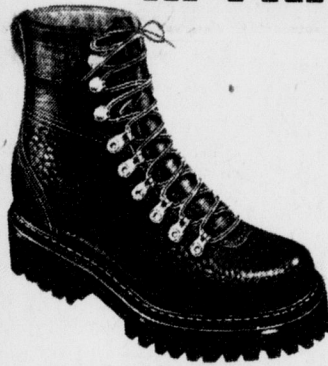

The 11-year involvement of U.S. forces in the Vietnam fighting made it the longest war in American history. But it was far down the list in terms of casualties and financial cost.

The Civil War, during which 498,332 Americans died, and World Wars I and II resulted in more combat deaths.

The cost of World War II is given as $330 billion, a figure which Pentagon officials estimate could be multiplied by four to account for the effect of inflation during the past 30 years.
