Saigon surrenders to Communists

Neighbors inspect shelled homes before the fall of Saigon Tuesday.

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnam declared unconditional surrender to the Viet Cong Wednesday, ending 30 years of warfare

President Duong Van 'Big' Minh spoke to the nation only hours after an armada of U.S. Marine helicopters had completed an emergency evacuation of nearly 900 Americans and thousands of Vietnamese from the besieged capital.

Minh, a retired general and neutralist, was named president Monday in a desperate and unsuccessful attempt to negotiate a peace with the communist leaders.

In a five minute radio address, Minh demanded that soldiers of the Provisional Revolutionary Government stop firing and stay in place.

"We are here waiting for the Provisional Revolutionary Government to hand over authority in order to stop useless bloodshed."

General Nguyen Huu Hanh, deputy chief of staff, then went on the air to order all South Vietnamese troops to carry out Minh's orders. "All commanders must be ready to enter into relations with commanders of the Provisional Revolutionary Government to carry out the cease-fire without bloodshed," he said.

As they spoke, Saigon fell silent and shellfire subsided along the northern rim where Viet Cong gunners had been bombarding the airport. Saigon police and militia men remained at their posts indicating the communist-led troops had not yet entered the city. Some South Vietnamese officers complained that the evacuation of Americans had caused panic in the military, with many top army officers and most of the air force fleeing.

But it had been obvious that the capital would fall. More than a dozen North Vietnamese — Viet Cong division — were ringing Saigon, which was defended by less than one division of demoralized green troops.

Associated Press special correspondent Peter Arnet, touring the city, reported nervous soldiers fired occasionally into the air but saw no dead or wounded.

Soldiers near the radio station at the northeastern edge of town said Communist-led forces had moved up to the Saigon River Bridge and were poised to enter the city.

Streets around the abandoned U.S. Embassy and Ambassador's residence were littered with paper and broken furniture left behind by looters who charged in after the Americans left.

Americans going to assembly points for the emergency evacuation dodged random shots fired by bitter South Vietnamese soldiers and fought off desperate civilians trying to go with them. In Washington, there was no immediate official reaction to Minh's announcement. One high-ranking official said he got his first word from a reporter.

However, he and other officials indicated the surrender was a logical development in view of the communist strategy evidenced this last Sunday, when the Viet Cong and North Viet Nam made it clear they were forcing events.

Until then the Ford administration expected some form of negotiation and not a final military decision.

Prior to the fall President Ford said Tuesday the evacuation of Americans from Vietnam was complete. He and secretary of state Henry A. Kissinger joined in asking the nation to avoid recriminations earlier in the day.

In a statement read by White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen at a nationally broadcast briefing, Ford said removal of the U.S. presence "closes a chapter in the American experience."

The briefing was postponed several times during the afternoon until the evacuation was completed at about 5 p.m. EDT or 5 a.m. Wednesday, Saigon time.

Kissinger briefly sketched the last days before the President ordered the evacuation, saying the U.S. objective was first to "save American lives."

In addition, Kissinger said, "our purpose was to bring about the most controlled and humane solution possible."

Kissinger mentioned saving the lives of 56,000 South Vietnamese who were in "severe jeopardy." But he said "it is too early to tell" if a final, bloody battle for Saigon still might be fought.

Declaring that the 1973 Paris peace accords have little relevance, Kissinger added that the question of future aid for South Vietnam will have to wait for a determination about "what kind of government emerges if, indeed, there is a South Vietnam."

The secretary declined to detail American diplomatic activities concerning Vietnam. But he said the role played by the Soviet Union in arranging for the evacuation was of "some help." Still, he added, it was too early to make any further assessment of the help.

Indicating the evacuation as it was carried out came suddenly, Kissinger said that until Sunday night "we thought there was some hope the North Vietnamese would not seek a solution by purely military means."

He was asked if the United States would be reluctant to come to the aid of an ally in the future.

"We must be very careful in the commitments we make, but scrupulously honor those commitments we do make," Kissinger replied.

Regarding other countries, including Israel, he said "no lesson should be drawn by the enemies of our friends" from the U.S. experience in Vietnam.

The American diplomatic situation in Southeast Asia is unclear, Kissinger said, adding that the U.S. attitude toward South Vietnam is now in abeyance.

He said a lesson to be drawn was that a foreign policy must be capable of being sustained for decades to be effective.

He reaffirmed relations with Japan and treaty relations with the Philippines.

But he said the United States would have to wait to see what happens in South

The final evacuation from Source of

The final evacuation from Saigon of nearly 500 Americans and thousands of Vietnamese began shortly before noon Tuesday from the roof of the fortress-like U.S. Embassy as Communist-led troops pressed Saigon. Neutralist Saigon President Duong Van Minh and his cabinet maneuvered for talks with the Viet Cong for a cease-fire to avoid a blood battle for the capital.

TA, safety officials fume about improper ventilation in LBC labs

By BRAD MARTISIUS State News Staff Writer

A Lyman Briggs College (LBC) teaching assistant is advising students to take chemistry courses through MSU's Chemistry Dept. instead of LBC because of "unsafe" conditions in Briggs laboratories.

David L. Cox, who is also a staff analyst for the Chemistry Dept., said students will be forced to breathe air laden with noxious fumes in the biology and chemistry labs in Holmes Hall until the college allocates the money to improve the ventilator safety hoods in the labs.

Cox has made official complaints to the Dept. of Public Safety (DPS) at MSU and to the federal Office of Safety and Health Administration, which referred the problem to Michigan's Bureau of Industrial Health. The complaints were centered on the lack of drawing power of the hoods, which are supposed to draw fume-laden air out of the labs.

Both the DPS and the health bureau have issued negative reports on the labs.

However, no action has been taken by LBC or the University. Michael Harrison, dean of the college, said he was aware of the complaints and the DPS recommendations, but that Briggs does not have the funds to deal with the problem.

Carl Eigenauer, DPS safety engineer, said in his report that the lack of ventilation is not a life-hazard situation.

Several students have complained, though, that the air in the room has made them ill.

Cox said the ventilators fall short of standards.

"The American Chemical Society recommends that ventilator hoods should be able to draw at least 150 linear feet of air per minute," he said. "The hoods in C5 and C6 Holmes Hall draw at most 70 linear feet when the safety doors and the windows in the rooms are closed.

"When doors and windows are open, the hoods draw from nine to 25 linear feet."

Cox said he obtained those figures when the DPS made its inspection during November 1974.

Eigenauer said that he recommended an increase in the capacity of the ventilator fans in the rooms after he made his inspection.

"I also recommend that several more fans be used," he said.

Presently, all the hoods lead into one large shaft, which contains only one fan.

Eigenauer said the use of several smaller fans would increase the drawing power and make the ventilation more efficient.

Eigenauer also said the report made

February 7 by James Weber from the health bureau was almost identical to the DPS report.

He claimed, though, that students could defective equipment," he said. "Students open the glass doors on those hoods more than they really need to in order to do their experiments. The ventilators would work better if their doors were left further down while students work with them."

"It would shake the very foundation of the University laws," he said. Ferency added that the University would not be completely powerless, but would instead have to charge criminal suspects under state or local laws.

Ferency also blasted the ordinance because of its vague language. He said that it could possibly be construed to mean that a professor cannot move a lectern or that a student may be arrested for moving a wastebasket in a classroom unless given prior approval.

"What does it mean not to meddle with University property?"
Ferency asked. "Whatever the police officer wants it to, apparently. It (the ordinance) does not tell people what is expected of them. It's not possible for a reasonable person to read it and know what's prohibited.

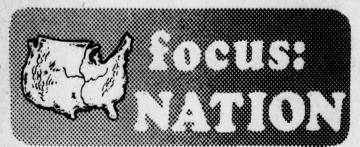

"It leaves police and other University officials complete and unfettered power."

"We issue warrants quite a bit under MSU ordinances," Conant said.

Blanche Martin, D-East Lansing, chairman of the MSU Board of Trustees, said that a ruling against the University would have "fascinating implications."

"I'd have to give it some thought and look into some of the ordinances we have enacted since that time (1963)," Martin said. Both lawyers will submit written briefs to the court arguing the point within 30 days.

Halt of Haldeman suit denied

A federal judge denied defense motions Tuesday calling for dismissal of a $1.2 million damage suit involving former White House aide H. R. Haldeman.

The suit was filed by 19 young persons who claim they were illegally excluded from an Oct. 15, 1971, rally honoring evangelist Billy Graham. The rally was attended by former President Richard M. Nixon.

Remaining as defendants are Haldeman, former White House chief of staff under Nixon; three other White House advance men; 11 Secret Service agents; members of the Charlotte Police Dept., and members of the local VFW

CIA denies murder charges

Former CIA Director Richard M. Helms has become the first government official to deny flatly alllegations of CIA involvement in the assassination of foreign leaders.

Helms, now U.S. ambassador to Iran, told reporters Monday that "as far as I know the CIA was never responsible for the assassination of any foreign leader." Both President Ford and current CIA Director William E. Colby have declined to comment on assassination reports.

Helms' comments followed 31/2 hours of closed-door testimony before the Rockefeller Commission investigating all domestic wrongdoing by the CIA.

Vice President Rockefeller said the eight-member commission still intends to call more witnesses, including Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

Students oppose budget cuts

Some 30 to 40 students protesting proposed budget cuts Tuesday occupied a campus building at Brandeis University, in Waltham, Mass., that an earlier generation of students used to coordinate a nationwide student strike.

The students, who said they were members of the "Student Action Committee," entered Pearlman Hall at 8 a.m. Two hours later, about 100 supporters carrying banners marched on a grassy slope in front of the building.

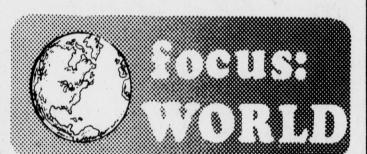

Brandeis student spokesman said demands included offsetting a $650 increase in fees with increased financial aid, no academic cutbacks, no nonacademic staff cutbacks and matriculation of Asian students.

U.S. air base to shut down

American and Greek officials negotiating the future of U.S. military installations in Greece have agreed to shut down an Air Force base and terminate home-porting for six destroyers of the U.S. Navy's 6th Fleet, a joint announcement said Tuesday.

The air base to be closed is adjacent to Athens International Airport and is a support and maintenance center for U.S. aircraft in southern Europe.

Affected by the new agreement are about 8,000 military

The announcement did not set a date for closing the Air Force base or ending homeport privileges.

30 years of Viet fighting over

By JOHN WHEELER

AP Newsfeatures Writer Before 30 years of war began in Vietnam, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt tried to change the course of history in Indochina.

Roosevelt argued France should not be allowed to return to Indochina after World War II and re-establish colonial rule.

France, the president said, had "milked" the region and after a century of French rule the Southeast Asian peninsula was "worse off" than before. "The people of Indochina," Roosevelt said, "are entitled to something better than that."

At one point, Roosevelt offered Indochina to Chiang Kai-shek, Nationalist leader. Chiang Chinese He said Vietnam, declined. Laos and Cambodia could not be assimilated into China.

Roosevelt and the six other presidents after him, through Gerald Ford, tried to control history in Indochina, but each man's policy failed to achieve its goal. America was drawn into its longest war; [a seemingly endless and frustrating struggle fostered social unrest and made many Americans skeptical toward government.

Roosevelt died and his anti-French Indochina policy lapsed. But American OSS teams had been supporting Ho Chi Minh and his Viet Minh guerillas in the struggle against Japanese occupation troops, and in 1945 OSS members joined the Viet Minh for the triumphal march into Hanoi. The flag the guerilias carried that day — a gold star against red background - soon became the national banner of the Republic Democratic Vietnam, founded by Ho.

Ho's declaration independence might have been nothing more than a footnote in history if President Harry S. Truman had not decided to help the French. At the end of the war, they lacked the ships, planes and arms to return to Indochina and resume their colonial government. The administration provided the transportation and weapons, and by 1946 the Viet Minh were at war with the French for independence.

The struggle against the French and then against the Americans would not end for nearly 30 years, and would set off similar wars in Cambodia and Laos. More than two million Vietnamese would die, along with 56,000 Americans. More than 100,000 Americans would be wounded, and 1,300 would be listed as missing in action, presumed dead.

Between 1960 and 1973, the U.S. government spent $140 billion in Vietnam.

Ho Chi Minh died in 1969, long before the fighting ended. But it was his movement that triumphed, first over the French in 1954, then over the American military and the South Vietnamese army.

America attempted no major role in the early years of the French-Viet Minh war. The larger issues of a prostrate Europe and the cold war with Russia preoccupied Washington under Truman.

Some say the United States took a fatal step in Vietnam on Feb. 7, 1950 when Truman recognized the "independent" Vietnamese government established by the French in the area under their control. The U.S. recognition came just seven days after the Soviet Union recognized Ho Chi Minh's rebel Democratic Republic of Vietnam.

The United States took another major step in July 1950, only weeks after the start of the Korean War. That month it sent to Vietnam a U.S. Military Assistance and Advisory Group MAAG - the start of the American force that would grow to 550,000 men in the 1960s.

The Indochina war is divided into two general phases: The French era that began in 1946 and ended with the final French battle of Dienbienphu in 1954, and the American era that started in 1959, pitting the North Vietnamese and their Viet Cong allies against the South.

President Dwight D. Eisenhower said that Indochina was vital to American interests. He was nearly persuaded to lift the siege of Dien Bien Phu with air strikes from 7th Fleet carriers.

The 1954 Conference on Indochina partitioned Vietnam along the 17th parallel, giving the North to the Communist government of Ho Chi Minh and the South to the government in saigon, at first headed by Emperor Bao Dai. America was a participant in the agreement, but not a signatory. ... American officials of both parties had come to regard Vietnam as vital to U.S. security," wrote Frances Fitzgerald in "Fire in The Lake," a study of the Vietnamese and the Americans. "Since the victory of Mao Tse-tung five years earlier, American officials judged that China in alliance with the Soviet Union. . . constituted the leading threat to American global interests. . . It had begun build a wall of anti-Communist American dependencies around China. Vietnam, as the officials saw it. constituted the crucial southern element of that wall: Vietnam 'fell' under Communist domination, then the whole of Southeast Asia would follow it.' That position later became known as "The Domino Theory," the key to American involvement in Vietnam.

During the '50s, as Diem consolidated his power, American advisers trained the South Vietnamese army to fight against the insurgent National Liberation Front, popularly known as the Viet Cong, or Vietnamese Communists. By 1960, there were 695 American military advisers in Vietnam, and this jumped to 3,200 in 1961, the year that President John F. Kennedy first committed Special Forces, or "Green Berets," to Vietnam. They were trained in the kind of counterinsurgency that Kennedy thought would defeat the Viet Cong. Diem's Meanwhile, increasingly oppressive regime was becoming a problem for Washington, and officials began to despair over the white-suited aesthetic that Lyndon Johnson once likened to [Winston Churchill.

It fell to President Kennedy to deal with the Diem crisis of leadership. And Buddhist dissatisfaction with the Diem government set the stage for the coup that finally took place in 1963.

Kennedy received conflicting advice. Dump Diem, many experts said, and then find and back a more representative regime that could win popular support for the looming countrywide war. Others told Kennedy he should pull out American troops, leaving the ,Vietnamese to settle their differences.

The president refused to order a pullout. Dissident Vietnamese generals were quietly told that Washington no longer supported Diem; his ruthless brother, Ngo Dinh Nhu, and Nhu's wife, Madam Nhu, called "The Dragon Lady" by press and diplomats alike.

With predictable swiftness, the generals revolted on Nov. 1, 1963; and Diem and his brother were killed. Madam Nhu was visiting in the United States and survived. She chortled openly when Kennedy was assassinated just three

Mag. Gen. Duong Van "Big" Minh, who replaced Diem, was ousted three months later by Gen. Nguyen Khanh, an intensely ambitious man who lasted until June 19, 1965, when another military coup put Air Marshal Nguyen Cao Ky in power. President Johnson never succeeded in his search for a popular strongman who could win the loyalty of the South Vietnamese and lead them to victory. Ky lasted until the summer of 1967 and then agreed to run for vice president on a ticket headed by Nguyen Van Thieu.

They were elected on Sept. 3 that year and Thieu remained the president of South Vietnam, with American backing, until the final days of the war. He resigned on April 21, 1975, with the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong at the gates of Saigon.

way up" from the last school year. But Bissel cautioned about making any firm conclusions until the final statistics are compiled Badgley said he sees the greatest increase in those crimes involving property loss. He also said there has been an increase in theft from academic buildings.

The bright spot in MSU's crime statistics is a dramatic decrease in drug-related offenses committed within residences halls.

There have been no drug arrests within residence halls this year. Badgley said most drug arrests on campus this year happened after a motorist stopped for traffic violations was found possessing drugs.

In addition, no drug-related armed robberies have been reported in residence halls this year. This compares with at least seven drug-related armed robberies in 1973-74, nine in 1972-73 and 12 in 1971-72.

Badgley could only speculate about the drop in drug-related crime, but thought students in residence halls were being "a lot more careful" about drug dealing. He also said he thinks the use of hard drugs is on the decline.

"The college student is more aware of the dangers involved in the use of hard drugs," he said.

East complex director Douglas Zatechka said that he wanted to think that last year's controversial drug policy, which required resident assistants to report illegalities, had played a part in the drop of drug-related crimes, but conceded that other factors could have been involved.

Though none were drug-related, six armed robberies were reported in residence halls this year. Three involved firearms and all took place within students' rooms.

"Armed robberies tend to go in streaks," Badgley said. "The same group of people are usually responsible for most of them." He explained that a rash of robberies of pizza deliverymen seemed to have stopped after only a single arrest. Earlier this year the arrest of three persons accounted for almost $20,000 worth of equipment, mostly calculators, stolen from MSU

Robert Minetti, hall director of the graduate staff for Phillips - Snyder Halls, said that he has seen an increase in property thefts. But Alvie Tirado, cohead adviser for Akers Hall, said she has seen less thefts in Akers Hall than in the past.

MSU is not alone in coping with the specter of increased crime. The 1974 annual report of the East Lansing Police Dept. showed that the number of shoplifting cases more than doubled and illegal entries has almost tripled. The total complaints for East Lansing increased by 14 per cent in 1974.

Though most law enforcement officials refused to speculate about the reasons for the jump in property crimes, David Hewson, head of the Records Bureau for the East Lansing Police Dept., said he thought the economic recession was largely responsible.

They covered the hill in front of Beaumont Tower to begin the revolution. About 300 of Guitarist Matt Callahan and his wife Sandy, the group called Prairie Fire, were brought to MSU Tuesday by the United Front Against Racism and Imperialism to sing revolutionary songs and talk about government repression in the United States.

Many spectators came for the music or to sit in the sun. Others came to express contempt for the capitalistic system.

Was it like the 60s? "Not at all," Sandy Callahan said. "You would have had Crosby, Stills and Nash music, waves of dope fumes throughout the audience, wine bottles and half-naked people all over the lawn with flowers painted on their chests.

"They talked in generalities about peace and anti-establishment. If this was the 60s, we wouldn't have been talking about concretes."

"To know what is right and not to do it is the worst cowardice."

Save Waste Control

It would be a tragedy for a program as valuable as the recycling program to die because of confusion, abuse and disinterest. but if members of the University community do not change their way of thinking, this could well be its fate.

The recycling program does indeed want and need newspapers, but to save time and money, the workers want the newspapers stacked next to the recycling bins, and not put in them. The bins are needed to gather office-type paper, envelopes, junk mail, computer printouts and cards, magazines and other more valuable forms of

But leave newspapers there, too. Presently, the recycling program is getting a mere 3 per cent of available newspapers. If the program could collect just 6 per cent, its financial woes would ceiling after which the program ed to take part. faces termination.

Granted, recycling is not always profitable. But the University simply cannot expect that a socially useful and productive stead of recycled, we despoil an effort need rake in profits to justify its existence.

The University therefore should lift the $40,000 ceiling and give the recycling program a chance to lift itself up unsaddled by financial worry.

Even so, the debt could be wiped out with a vengeance if only more students, faculty and clerical workers would recycle their paper. The 500 to 600 bins located all around campus and the nine off-campus sheds provide a convenient alternative to pitching papers in waste baskets.

Nobody likes to believe that the spirit of environmental concern has gone the way of the spirit of radical social reform that used to be prevalent among students. Ecological economy is no fun-andgames student pastime, but rather is an invaluable means to the end of preserving our brittle natural environment and hopefully reversing the trend toward irreparable damage.

There is no doubt that students These financial problems are can start a new wave of concern for reflected in the $39,000 debt to the environmental protection which, University. The University has once rolling, could easily force given the program a $40,000 debt even the obstinate and shortsight-

Handsome Al returns

How appropriate that ASMSU Great Issues should sponsor the brief return to campus of one of MSU's greatest — the Handsome One, known to the uninitiated as former MSU economics professor Al Mandelstamm.

Handsome Al lugged his 300pounds from the backwaters of Virginia to speak in Wells Hall Monday and insult the institution that made him famous. He had the nerve to call the sleepy southern hillbillies at Virginia Polytechnical Institute — who now reap the benefits of his masterful Everett Dirksen "boom chicka boom" impression — superior to his faithful lieges in Michigan.

But Handsome Al wouldn't be Handsome Al if he didn't scornfully chastise students, or try to molest attractive young women in the audience, or sit on his detractors, or break into a blubbery, yet graceful tango when the mood struck.

He grudgingly conceded defeat in the recent MSU "Top Turkey" contest but revealed that he may enter a similar contest on a slightly grander scale - in other words, he will run for President in 1976. But only if "Ford's economic plans don't work," he said, though that qualification seems hardly neces-

He may have dashed the hopes of many who paid 50 cents hoping to see him finally finish a strip tease or the infamous Texas story. But the cheers of "we want Al" and "story!" as well as the many affectionately thrown paper wads were proof enough to contradict Al's tearfully expressed belief that soon most will have forgotten him

Nonsense. The Handsome One's legacy will remain as long as the thousands of former pupils keep lovingly retelling anecdotes about crazy Al Mandelstamm and Maryushka and the day streakers struck Economics 201.

ART BUCHWALD

A study of mice and men

All sorts of social research is being attacked these days. Recently Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., criticized a federal grant of $84,000 given to a psychology professor at the University of Minnesota to do a study on romantic love. The senator said he did not believe the government should concern itself with why a man falls in love with a woman and a woman falls in love with a

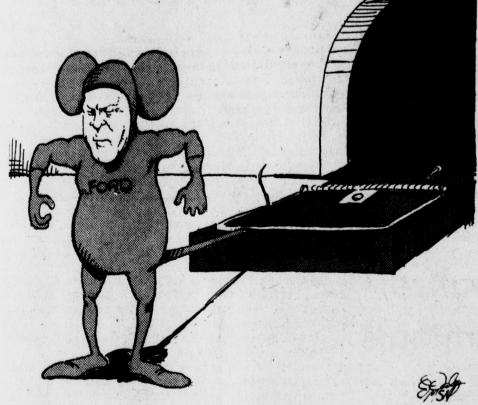

The psychology professor defended the study on the grounds that love is the basis for marriage and family in the American culture, and if the social scientists could find out more about love they could, hopefully, lower the divorce rate in the country.

The assault on this type of research has stymied a project a friend of mine wants funded which has a similar goal. He would like to find out why Americans fall in love with their leaders and then fall out of love with them a few months later.

My researcher, Aaron Schecter, has been dealing with matters of the heart for almost

"It is essential," Schecter told me, "that we know more about why the American electorate have such unhappy love affairs with the people they ask to lead them. If we can discover what the emotional factors are that break up these relationships, we can end the heartbreak and pain that so many of us suffer when we look at the President of our dreams and suddenly decide one day, 'He's not for me.' "

"If you could find the answer to that," I said, "you would really be making a contribution to the social sciences. When did you get the idea?"

"The day I watched the President Ford tell Congress he didn't want a honeymoon; he wanted a marriage. Everyone fell in love with Jerry Ford that day and we all thought it would last forever."

"I wonder what went wrong," I said. "That is what I would like to research. In one year almost all the love for Jerry Ford has been dissipated. If we could find out what went wrong, Mr. Ford could be our President for four more years."

"If the President knew you wanted a grant for that kind of research he would probably give you the money out of his own pocket. Suppose you did get the funds. What would you spend it on?"

"White mice," Schecter replied, set up my cages to look just like witten. In one cage would be mice in Mouse House, in another cage mice representing Congress and cage would be the mice who would electorate."

"That makes sense," I said. "The leader of the mice would be White Mouse House, and since h would be on a higher level all the obwould look up to him. This would start of the love affair. Then I would when, how and why the other as interest in their leader and started their backs on him in their cages, more than 50 per cent of the me paying attention to the White Mone I can assume that their love for mouse has gone out the window." VIEWPOINT: CRIMINAL CODE REFORM

Legislative chamber of horrors

By WILL BLOSSER

The Criminal Justice Codification, Revision and Reform Act (S.1) currently in Senate Judiciary should be more properly called a legislative "Chamber of Horrors." Let me list a few of the horrors which your April 25 article on this bill failed to mention.

The bill grants federal officers and employes, and anyone acting at their direction, immunity from prosecution for crimes committed in reliance on a written statement by the head of a government agency that the criminal acts were lawful, even though the statement is later "determined to be invalid or erroneous." This would have immunized all of the Watergate participants.

The bill makes it a defense to the prosecution of a federal official that he performed the criminal act with which he is charged in the belief that he had authority to do so, even if his belief was mistaken. This defense applies to the use of "deadly force." To give law officers this defense is to hand them a hunting license for murder.

In defining entrapment, the bill authorizes federal agents and their hirelings to engage in criminal activity while acting as provacateurs. It provides no defense for undercover agent solicited them to commit, used deception in luring them into committing it, provided them with the opportunity to commit it or gave them facilities without which they could not have committed it.

In the words of Justice Douglas, it is an open invitation to federal agents to "become the instigators of the crime, or partners in its commission or the creative brain behind the illegal scheme." It invites the FBI to entrap unwary political militants as it did when it infiltrated a group of Catholic war resisters, instigated the destruction of the Camden draft records and provided the burglar tools and truck to do the job.

The bill also provides a three - year sentence for creating "a physical interference or obstacle to the recruitment conscription or induction" into the armed forces. This would make it a federal crime to demonstrate in front of induction centers and recruiting stations, including those on college campuses. One final horror is its definition of "criminal attempt." The bill makes a guilty of an attempt to commit a crime or her conduct "indicates intent to or commission of the crime." Moreover, she is guilty even though "it was in or legally impossible for the actor to the crime." This comes close medieval British law making it a cr wish for the death of the king.

Senator Hart of Michigan is on Judiciary Committee where this h currently being considered. I m persons to write Senator Hart about "Chamber of Horrors."

State News bias

The State News has completely dropped its already thin veneer of objectivity and resorted to a constant, shoddy series of attacks directed at whatever it happens to dislike. The most blatant examples surfaced during election time last term when a series of editorital attacks appeared denouncing Tim Cain.

What became remarkable about this was the fact that the editorials carried through to numerous articles which were not labeled as editorials. Everything Cain said, did, or was involved in (including several things he did not say, did not do and was not involved with) came under the State News vendetta.

Lacking any real "news" the State News invented "scandals" such as the amazing fact that the Labor Relations Cabinet paid for the Student Workers Union brochure which was mailed to all student workers. The fact that this expense came out of a budget which was specifically allocated to the Student Workers Union, with the approval of the ASMSU Board, in complete agreement with the provisions of the Labor Relations budget, did not stand in the way of the crusading State News and their "scandal."

Anyone who has managed to continue reading the State News (read: State Editorial) can see that the vendetta is not yet appeased. Cain is now responsible for parking ticket increases-he somehow caused Wharton's inaction.

The latest example of incredibly rotten reporting is the article which appeared April 21 by Bruce Ray Walker "INCAR protest short on spirit." Aside from the fact that there were 30 people who picketed, not 20 (but why let facts stand in the way of a 'good" story) the entire article was an irresponsible editorial comment on such important issues as the physical details of the picket line-how much space was between each picketer, how many people chuckled and when, who burped on the third step of the Administration Building,

The very serious issue of the firings of Georgia Johnson and Lois Humphrey and the impending civil suit (be prepared for some more belt tightening, folks) of course pale in significance when compared to Walker's sensitive reporting of amounts of "tension" and nostalgic reverie of the "good old days.'

I would like to see a similar style used in describing a board of trustees meeting. It would run something like this:

"One by one the trustee members straggled into the meeting, desperately. trying to fill a quorum. Their numbers finally swelled to eight, when they halfheartedly began the meeting amid the yawns of a sparse crowd of bored spectators. Twenty minutes into the meeting Wharton chuckled as Eldon Nonamaker dropped his glass of water on the floor."

The real fact of the matter is that the "lack of spirit" is exhibited by the board of trustees who are merely slightly bored with the tedious issue of racist and sexist firings of faculty members. Leslie Shields

The Doctor's Bag

BY ARNOLD WERNER, M.D.

One of my favorite pastimes is collecting different beer cans. However, simply to assemble various brands of beer containers is not my goal - my collection requires that I must drink the beer in each can in order to save it. My question concerns what (if any) effect drinking old beer may have on my health. Some of the cans I have found were slightly rusted and the beer had a definite metallic tasts. Can drinking beer out of such cans do me any harm (like death, blindness, impotence, etc.)? Beer can collecting has become a popular pastime; but purists such as yourself, who insist on drinking the contents before they collect the can, are rare. One summer while in college, I worked in a chemistry lab of a can company. One of my jobs involved analyzing cans and their contents after they had been stored for long periods of time to determine if any corrosion of the cans had taken place or, if the contents had been damaged. One hot summer afternoon I sucked up 50 ml portions of beer from over 100 beer cans. In addition to recalling the one hell of a the iron content of the canned beer was the same as bottled beer, though the cans were not as old as yours seem to be. By and large, if the material going into the can is sterile in the first place (as it should be) and the can has not rusted through to the outside or in other ways had its seal broken, the stuff should be safe. It may taste lousy, but the amount of iron or other minerals present is harmless. The outside of the can should be clean before you open it to prevent contamination with infectious agents.

Perhaps you can solve the problem created by your ritual through the use of a little symbolism. Take a small sample of the beer you are collecting and mix it into a glass of fresh beer and drink that.

I have a wartlike growth on my penis. It developed as a sore during a recent urinary infection. VD tests have been negative but the growth remains. A doctor treated it with a brownish corrosive which has caused it to scab and flake and instructed me to use something else if it didn't completely vanish from the treatment he administered headache I got that day, I remember that It does seem to be getting less protrusive, but the skin is left shiny and discolored. Would it not be possible to have this surgically removed?

The wartlike growth on your penis sounds like a wart. Warts, wherever they are, are caused by a virus and can be transmitted from one person to another. Sexual intercourse with frogs is not responsible, but you surely could have gotten it from intercourse with some who had venereal warts (also known as condyloma acuminatum).

Approaching male or female genitals with knife when simple procedures would suffice is considered poor form. Since the wart is improving, I would suggest following through on the advice the doctor gave you. The shiny discolored spots will improve with time.

Information about variety of health concerns, including contraception and sexual activity, is now widely available. The time has come to move on to other projects. I will stop writing the column at the end of this term. Other sheds are located in Yankee Plaza,

Paper can also be dropped off at the recycling operation's warehouse at Aurelius and Jolly Roads.

COGS backs traffic proposal to seperate cars, pedestrians

By MARY ANN CHICK

State News Staff Writer The Council of Graduate Students (COGS) took a stand on the traffic situation on campus Monday night by supporting a proposal that asks the Campus Parks and Planning Dept. to immediately relieve congested and dangerous points on campus by implementing separate pedestrian, bicycle and vehicular routes on campus.

COGS also asked that private motor vehicular traffic be reduced as much as possible to relieve the growing transportation problems.

The action is in reponse to a report on the campus traffic situation released last month by a subcommittee of the Building, Lands and Planning Committee.

The committee will vote on four proposals from the report at their next meeting on May 14. Its recommendations will be passed on to President Wharton for further considera-

A report drawn up by the committee suggests that the main advantages would be to reduce congestion, lower fares and allow the planning of area transit services without any problems of

Paul Nilsson, director of MSU automotive and utility services, which oversees MSU bus operations, said he felt the committee had good ideas but was still waiting for a specific plan.

"It would have to be much more detailed before we evaluate the plan," Nilsson said. "We'd have to know time schedules, days the buses would be running and all those specifics."

Charles Downs, chairman of the Mass Transit Committee, said he hoped council would approve further study of the proposed merger at its May 20 meeting.

"In the past the council has indicated that it would be interested in this type of plan," Downs said. If council does accept the plan, they will probably direct city departments to work with MSU on the details. There is also the question, which remains to be decided, of how to finance the plan and the entire CATA system.

Suggestions have been made ranging from a special property tax millage or a possible add-on to the state income tax for the district to an add-on tax to the state motor vehicle registration fee for the district.

All the unnecessary frills have been eliminated in favor of pure clean sound.

The systems heart is Sansul's new AU4400 stereo integrated amp which delivers new levels of performance not available from any other brand near its price. All the essential features are here too, for future flexability and system expansion.

To take the top notch sound coming from the amp and deliver it to your ears, EPI's popular model 110 speakers were selected. The 110s provide an unexcelled range of sound with optimum clarity dispersion and accuracy. The linear sound of EPI has to be heard to be really appreciated.

Obviously the above components demand a quality source of sound. For this source, BSR's 2620W automatic turntable was chosen. Low rumble, wow and flutter combined with an excellent arm and elliptical cartridge assure many years of excellent sound.

The complete system with our full 5 year warranty and buyer protection plan is specially priced now at a $113 savings.

'Waldo' Redford flies in slick fantasy

By EDD RUDZATS

State News Reviewer Like he did in "The Sting" and "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," director George Roy Hill once again sets out to plumb the depths of male camaraderie, this time sans Paul Newman.

Pepper" Robert Redford plays another of those flamboyant, narcissistic, yet supposedly highly likeable guys who through their charm and courage are able to make friends of almost anyone, including the film audience. Redford and the character he plays barely get away with it, but they try hard enough.

What Hill has done in "The Great Waldo Pepper," with the help of a screenplay by William Goldman from an idea by Hill, is to take a serious attempt to depict men obsessed by their what emerged in "The Sting." "The Great Waldo Pepper" tells the tale of a former World War I flying ace who has taken to barnstorming around the countryside for money. Mentally barnstorming along with him is a German pilot who the main character never fought in himself.

In trying to merge a serious attempt at exploring male relationships and one man's drive get a cohesive mixture. The film is either lighthearted and statement about courage and honor and that sort of thing, only to fall flat. Hill cannot have it both ways, though he really tries hard. But in the long run he is simply working against

The basic problem with "The Great Waldo Pepper" is that it is too contrived to be more than an entertainment of minor note. Everything about the film is slick, though it is less slick than "The Sting." With a typical Hollywood script, characters are barely fleshed out, the sequence of events has all the plausibility of a cheap novel and by the time the film has worked its way to its conclusion, the whole thing rings hollow. But it is nice to look at, with Redford looking like he just stepped off the set of "The Sting" wearing the same

The best thing about "The Great Waldo Pepper" is the aerial sequences. Shot with a sureness of hand and a variety of angles, by Robert Surtees, the same man who lensed "Lenny," the moments that this film takes to the air are pretty enjoyable indeed. But after a-while that is all there is besides Redford's good looks. The aerial stunts appear to be padding an already shaky story.

Yet undoubtedly Redford's legion of fans will love "The

Despite the growing audience for jazz in the East Lansing area, there has been a notable lack of live jazz beyond the light commercial blend served up in the local night spots. This situation is broken occasionally by the unheralded excellence of Oregon, the Creative Arts Collective (CAC) and a few other groups.

A major series of concerts with equal attraction for both the connoisseur of avant-garde and the newcomer will be presented here this weekend. Showcase Jazz, under the auspices of Union Activities Board-Student Entertainment, will present six concerts by the Sam Rivers Trio and the Roscoe Mitchell Quartet, featuring Gary Schunk. Performances will be at 8 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. on Thursday, Friday and Saturday at McDonel Hall kiva.

Admission is $2.50 for each show. Tickets are available at Discount Records, the Union Ticket Office and at the door.

In addition, the Rivers Trio will host a free, open workshop at 2 p.m. Saturday in McDonel Hall kiva.

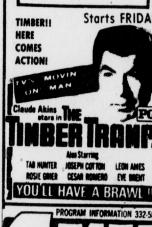

The Sam Rivers Trio is one of the most accessible and, at the same time, one of the most inventive groups in jazzdom today. Featuring drummer Barry Altshul and bassist Dave Holland, the trio is an example

The trio has worked together in a number of formats, most notably Circle (also featuring pianist Chick Corea) and as the Dave Holland Quartet (including multi-reedman Anthony Braxton). Both groups have been recorded on ECM records (Holland's "Conference of the Birds" is a must).

Rivers is notable as the foremost of the heavily Coltrane-influenced sax players extant today. He is the only one of that group to escape from the syndrome of feebly imitating Coltrane and to evolve his own, equally strong musical personality. His most recent Impulse release, "Crystals," features Rivers both as soloist and composer in an expanded instrumental setting and is one of the year's best and most unnoticed jazz albums.

Appearing with the trio will be the Roscoe Mitchell Quartet, featuring Gary Schunk. Mitchell is familiar to those who have seen the CAC concerts or any of the numerous other performances featuring musicians from the Assn. for the

Beneath the surface, the Chinese politburo is probably wondering whether its political and diplomatic preparations are adequate to meet the rapidly changing situation. If Prince Sihanouk, the politburo's guest of the last five years, should have a last minute falling out with the Khmer Rouge, he will be an embarrassment. And the sudden extension of Communist power to the Gulf of Siam may frighten the leaders of other Southeast Asian nations that are groping their way toward relations with China. But on the whole, events are in Peking's favor, and Thailand. Singapore, Indonesia and the Philippines will most likely see their security in terms of a friendly relationship with China now that the Americans' will to prop up the dominos has evaporated.

Is the Chinese hand pushing the dominos, or only helping to support its own allies, which United States had threatened to overturn?

Will Peking rest content with the victories of its friends in Indochina, or assist in the extension of Marxism to Thailand first and then to other parts of Southeast Asia?

Senior Chinese leaders have denied that they support the Thai insurgents with arms, but in such a situation arms can come from many sources without direct attribution. Throughout Southeast Asia tensions exist which could stimulate further insurgencies and even "liberations." Is this in China's interest?

Peking's present prospects are for a friendly trading relationship with the Southeast nations, growing gradually into a useful degree of political understanding. Insurgencies, which by the example of Cambodia and

Vietnam can drag on for years or decades, could open the door to Soviet interference, China's professed nightmare. Most of all, China must worry about the effect on Japan, its biggest trading partner, if it seems too militant in fostering insurgencies in Southeast Asia. Too fast a retreat of American power could lead to a dangerous flare-up in Korea, and possibly desperate acts by the Kuomintang in Taiwan. All this could have severe effects in Japan, with its propensity for political trauma.

The opportunities for Soviet diplomacy and strategic maneuvering are vague, but from China's point of view they are menacing.

It therefore seems likely that Peking will continue to give verbal support to any insurgent movement in Southeast Asia which espouses Marxism and is not clearly pro-Soviet, but the

MSU students to receive Courselector

By ROSANNE LESS

State News Staff Writer On or about May 15, MSU students will receive a magazine called Courselector. Courselector lists up to 700 detailed course descriptions on courses that will be offered at MSU next fall term.

Hot on Courselector's heels is a proposed addition to the MSU Code of Teaching Responsibilities that outlines a plan for similar course descriptions that would be available to students during pre-enrollment.

While some departments already provide course descriptions that include goals of the class, required texts and the required work involved, the proposed addition to the code would make this kind of action by departments mandatory.

The proposed addition to the code originated in the Educational Policies Committee (EPC), which is a standing committee of the Academic Council. The EPC will meet Thursday on the fourth floor of the Administration Building to work out the final version of its proposal for course descriptions which it will then submit to the Academic Council for approval.

While both course description plans are designed to aid students in choosing courses, the plans are different in two major respects.

Courselector is basically a commercial, marketing publication that will pay for itself via national and local advertising. Backers of the magazine, including Brian Raymond, ASMSU president, said that they hope to distribute the magazine to students living in residence halls through the campus mail sys-Off-campus students descriptions is a private, University - affiliated method of acquainting students with available courses. These descriptions would be available to students in both departmental offices and academic advising centers.

"Courselector is something that students can take to their rooms to read and then they are more encouraged to use the magazine," said Raymond, Courselector's major supporter. "Courselector is easy and free, and students won't have to walk all the way over to a department office to find out about a course.

He added that he thought students would be even less motivated to obtain course

That is what Johnston hopes to communicate at an Inner Peace Movement (IPM) seminar tonight at 8 p.m. in Lansing's Ramada Inn. Everything presents opportunity, but it is up to the individual to find out what opportunities he wants to take.

"Students are searching for something," Johnston said.

Or, if you experience mental pictures strongly, you may be visionary. If you just know something, but don't know why, prophesy may be your strong area. When you get good or bad feelings about being in someone's house often, the feeling may be the starting point of self-understanding.

Everyone lives primarily in one of these personality types and partially in the other three, Johnston said. "When it is determined which type is strongest, you can then start

State News Sports Writer

Last Friday at Tiger Stadium, Boston Red Sox outfielder Rick Miller trotted out to leftfield in the bottom of the eighth inning as a defensive replacement. That's the way things have gone the past two seasons for the former Spartan All-American.

Miller came out of MSU in 1969 with a list of college playing credentials that few players even think about. Four years of hard work paid off with a team batting title and MVP award to go with his All-Big Ten selection his senior year.

The Sporting News, America's baseball Bible, named him to its first team All-American squad in 1969.

Four years later, Miller wound up in the Boston starting lineup, hitting a respectable .261 before Red Sox management decided to broom manager Eddie Kasko and bring in Darrell Johnson. Exit Rick Miller from the starting lineup. And he doesn't try to hide the fact that he's not happy with the present situation.

"It wouldn't have been too bad if I'd been playing all along," Miller said about his Boston exile. "A new manager comes in and he's got his own players he wants to play.

"It's a hopeless feeling right now because the, don't want to trade me. They had about three offers for me over the winter. Knowing that they must want me for something, I have the feeling I'm going to play some baseball for them."

The former Grand Rapids native credits MSU baseball coach Danny Litwhiler with helping him to adjust mentally from the college level of ball to the major leagues. With that in mind, the slender flycatcher sees his chance to move back into the regular batting order coming soon.

"The game has changed since he (Litwhiler) played but he gave me ideas on how to think in the big leagues and he told me to expect to have days where you're going to go 0 for 4.

"You play a little different in the first month too," Miller said. "They like to take a look at some people and see if they can do the job. I should be getting a chance to play in a week or so."

If his trial doesn't suit Boston's expectations, Miller feels that displaying his tools with another team would be in his best interest. Detroit's friendly outfield fences and the closeness to home just might make a trade to the Tigers that much better.

"I do have some power and this rightfield fence would be ideal," Miller said, casting a smile toward the rightfield upper deck. "Sure I'd come here if I could play. I'd go anywhere if I could play. Of course there are places where nobody wants to go that have tight organizations."

What few people realize is that Miller still attends MSU in the off season when he and his wife, the sister of teammate Carlton Fisk, take up residence in nearby Holt. He needs 15 more credits to finish his B.A. work in packaging.

Bickel blanks Irish in first of twin bill

Duane Bickel tossed a fourhit shutout as the MSU baseball team came up with a big 9-0 win over Notre Dame Tuesday in improved his season record to 5-1 by not allowing Notre Dame to move a runner past second base. He struck out 10 Irish batters and walked three.

Bickel, a senior righthander,

The Spartans took an early lead, scoring three runs in the first inning, before exploding for four runs in the fifth.

MSU collected four extra base hits in the inning, all on fly balls to left field which carried in the wind. Mike Fricke opened the frame with a triple. After two were out, Randy Pruitt and Al Weston came up with doubles.

Pat Simpson then cleared the bases when he hit a triple to left. He went in to score after a relay throw got away from the Notre Dame shortstop.

The victory gave the Spartans an 18-11 season weekend at Ball State University.

included four other teams.

Last winter's return visit to East Lansing opened the 6-1 lefthander's eyes to the economic difficulties the MSU baseball team and other nonrevenue sports are encountering these days. "I didn't realize things were that bad until I went/back to school last winter," Miller said. "I found out what kind of financial trouble they're in and I'm hoping to contribute to the program and help them out. I don't know what I'll be able to help out with, though, until I see my accountant this week in California.' Miller says that the reason he hasn't been able to donate to the baseball program in the fashion of former MSU stars Steve Garvey or Rob Ellis, to name a few, is because of his still unsteady financial footing caused by the exorbitant cost of living in Boston during the

"One-bedroom apartments in Boston are $700 a month," Miller exclaimed, giving a comfortable thought to the MSU students who feel they are being gouged by local landlords.

"Just to break even in Boston a player has to make at least $25,000," he said. "The students there really live in some holes to go to school."

It only took Rick Miller two years after graduation to make the major leagues, but in the next months you might be seeing the former Spartan great chasing down flyballs once again from his spot in the outfield pastures.

Only thing is, he might be a little unfamiliar not wearing the cap with the old English B.

SAYS WINTER LAYOFF HELPED

Sprinter Dill back in high gear

By CHARLES JOHNSON

State News Sports Writer MSU's chances of going anywhere on the Big Ten track circuit were just about nil during the indoor season. But now that the "doctor" is back in action, the Spartans could well stir up some heat before the current outdoor campaign is Senior sprinter Marshall Dill. or "M.D." as he is popularly known, has been a terror in both of MSU's outdoor meets thus far. After sitting out the indoor season because of academic ineligibility. Dill has posted consecutive wins in the 100-yard dash at the Ohio State relays and the Drake relays.

His most recent victory at Drake in Des Moines, Iowa, last week marked the third straight year that the former Detroit Northern prep star has carried away the Drake century titlea true accomplishment indeed.

"Marshall is one of a very few men who has done that," MSU asst. track coach Jim Bibbs said about Dill's mastery at Drake. "To win down there against that kind of competition only one year is enough, but to do it three times shows just how great Marshall is."

Dill echoed Bibbs' assessment of his feat. "I feel like I'm having a helluva year and I'm real pleased with my performance at Drake. After sitting out three months, it's kind of nice to get back into action and it really feels good to win," Dill

At the OSU relays, Dill posted a 9.3 to take top honors and last week at Drake he coasted to a 9.6 into a strong

The lay-off which kept him out of competition during the indoor season, Dill says, gave him an opportunity to do a lot of thinking.

"I've got my mental thing really together for competition and life," he said. "It wasn't anything physical that kept me from competition. It was the scholastic thing. So, now that I've got that together, I'm in excellent shape as well as having a better perspective on

"Well, of course I'm going for the 9.4 record in the 100 that Jesee Owens holds," Dill said confidently. "And then there's the 20.7 time in the 220 that I set last year. That's going to fall, too.

Marshall Dill is back on the track following a winter layoff due to academic ineligibility and is winning again. Dill has won the 100-yard dash in the Spartans first two outdoor meets.

Two South African netters deported by Mexican officials

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The Mexican government, in a new condemnation of South Africa's apartheid policy, Tuesday deported South Africans Drew McMillan and Bob Hewitt, who were scheduled to defend their World Championship Tennis (WCT) doubles title here this week.

Saigon's fall: end to U. S. involvement

Marines came ashore in March of 1965, and they were followed by paratroop units, infantry, armor, artillery, and ever more helicopters. The North matched the build-up and skirmished with American units until November, when Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces trapped units of the 1st Calvary division in the Ia Drang Valley and inflicted heavy casualties. It was one of the single most costly engagements of the war for the United States. More than 250 GIs

But the initiative did pass to U.S. and South Vietnamese forces until the Tet offensive in January 1968 there were no clear-cut defeats for the Americans and few major disasters for the battered South Vietnamese troops.

The political strength of the South Vietnamese government was another matter. Buddhist opposition to Premier Ky helped create another political crisis and he acceeded in September 1967 to Thieu, who had the loyalty of the major military commanders.

The ground war appeared to ebb in late 1967, but in fact a major Communist-led troop build-up was in progress near Saigon, and enemy troops also were massing near other cities.

For American ground troops, fighting a war without a front line to drive toward and without a thankful and supportive line to drive them, the Vietnam war was one of special confusion and pain. The emotional terror and confusion seemed to erupt for a few men on March 16, 1968, when, in the aftermath of the TET offensive, Task Force Baker of the 11th Brigade, American Division, entered the sandy little hamlet of Mala, on South Vietnam's northern coast.

With First Lt. William Calley leading a group of soldiers inexplicably gunned down Vietnamese civilians, most of them old men, women and

As an inquiry into the most heartbreaking episode of the long war was to reveal, at least 175 unresisting Vietnamese, and possibly more than 400, were killed in Mylai that day.

In Hue, the former imperial capital, South Vietnamese troops failed to dislodge north Vietnamese, and American marines were called in for bloody house-to-house fighting that left many American casualties and undermined the the South Vietnamese forces. American public support for the war plummeted.

United States' confidence in

In March, in a decision that American leaders in Vietnam viewed as the beginning of the end, Johnson stopped the bombing beyond the 20th parallel in North Vietnam and declared that he would not run for re-election.

On April 3 Hanoi announced its readiness to meet with the United States to discuss the end of American operations against North Vietnam so that

On May 3 Xuan Thuy, Hanoi's top representative, met in Paris with W. Averell Harriman and Cyrus R. Vance of the United States.

Meanwhile, war in the South continued unabated.

In June, 1968, Nguyen Van Thieu, now South Vietnam's President, declared that his country was prepared to assume more of the fighting. The policy of "Vietnamizing" the war took hold further in Vietnamization was the principal plan of Nixon, who won the residency in November with a pledge to reach an early settlement.

Nixon and Thieu met in June of that year at Midway, where the new president announced the first withdrawal of American troops - 25,000 and said that the war would gradually be turned over to Saigon's forces. American troop strength at this point had reached its apex - 541,000

In November, the United States declared its concern over a huge build-up of supplies in North Vietnam and on February 8, 1971, launched its last major offensive in South Vietnam. Without American advisers but with U.S. air support it was a disaster for the South Vietnamese troops left alone in the field to fight.

Late in March the North Vietnamese struck across the demilitarized zone, bringing Saigon's forces out of northern Quang Tri Province and taking ground they were never to give mining of North Vietnamese ports to put pressure on the stalemated Paris talks and to block war supplies from the north. The talks gathered momentum again in 1972 with secret negotiations occurring between Henry A. Kissinger and Xuan Thuy toward the end of the year.

American fighting on the ground ended with the withdrawal of the last United States troop on March 29, 1973, two months after the signing of the cease-fire agreements in Paris, and 8 years and 22 days after the first Marine contingent went ashore at Da Nang to begin the United States' longest war.

A total of 56,717 American Nixon then ordered the servicemen had lost their lives in combat, some 900 are still listed as missing. American wounded totaled more than Fighting continued after the American withdrawal, with each side attributing truce violations to the other. Since it was to be a cease-fire "in place," the Saigon forces moved quickly to assert their presence in areas they believed to be theirs.

As a result, the truce broke down almost from the outset.

South Vietnam lost more than 180,000 soldiers. Half a

Arms control agency head calls U.S. unready for nuclear threat

WASHINGTON (AP) - The head of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA) warned on Tuesday the spread of nuclear technology means a rapidly increasing number of countries might possess the atom bomb in the foreseeable future.

"We are not now prepared to defend our country against nuclear threats that could come from so many different sources," Dr. Fred C. Ikle, director of ACDA, said in a speech for the National Press

"Our entire nuclear arsenal and all our strategic doctrines are directed against one or two major adversaries - and these are governments that are in control of their nuclear forces and, we assume, care about the survival of their own country," Ikle said, referring to the Soviet Union and to China.

But, he asked, "How can we protect the American people in a world where nuclear bombs would be in the hands of many more

Stating that this is a "bleak outlook," Ikle proposed action on what he called four fronts. First, he suggested the strengthening of alliances because "for many nations protection through a stable alliance is now the only alternative to a desperate search for security by getting their own nuclear bombs."

Second, he asked for stricter controls on the export of technology and nuclear equipment. "Some things should be exported only under tight safeguards, other items should not be exported at all," he said.

Third, Ikle said that the present international safeguards to detect the diversion of nuclear materials from peaceful uses to weapons purposes are "designed only to detect violation," not to prevent them.

Lastly, he said the 1968 Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty must be strengthened and this will be one of the tasks of the review conference to begin next Monday in Geneva in accordance with the
