Heated confrontation seen for Raymond, labor office

By JUNE DELANO
State News Staff Writer

Confrontation between ASMSU President Raymond and staff members of the ASMSU Labor Relations Office is unavoidable at tonight's ASMSU

board meeting.

Raymond's proposed change in the role of the Labor Relations Office and his appointment of an interim director who has no ties to the Student Workers Union (SWU) touched off a series of heated arguments, charges and countercharges Friday which both sides expect to continue at the meeting.

Raymond announced his appointment Thursday of Steve Skowron, a freshman with experience in the United Auto Workers but no background with the SWU, as interim director of the Labor Relations office.

He accompanied the appointment with proposal to neutralize the role of the labor office and end its active support of the SWU.

"It's perfectly legitimate for a student group, maybe Doyle O'Connor's group, to take an advocacy role," he said Sunday. "But it is improper for the ASMSU Labor Relations Office to use subjectivity in presenting the facts."

O'Connor, now ex-director of the labor office, believes Raymond is trying to destroy the union.

"These next three weeks are crucial," he said. "We have a hearing Thursday with the University and if ASMSU support is weakened, the University is in pretty good shape."

O'Connor and the rest of the labor staff say that the appointment of a director from outside the organization is unprecedented.

Members of the current labor staff, including O'Connor, Jeff Greenwald and Tim Cain, former ASMSU president, said Raymond assured them he would appoint a director who sympathized with the union and could work with the staff.

Raymond denies any such promise. "I never said I was going to talk with them," Raymond said. "I can receive advice from board members, but it's not binding. They have no authority to dictate to me. They can reject a director, but not appoint one."

Temper erupted Friday afternoon when O'Connor, Greenwald and ASMSU board member Curtis Stranathan, College of Arts and Letters and Justin Morrill College, confronted Raymond in his office.

After the SWU supporters demanded that Raymond explain his appointment and proposed change in the labor office's role, Raymond declined and, after asking the group repeatedly to leave, left himself.

Raymond cited the incident as an example of why he could not work with current members of the labor staff and why he appointed an outsider.

"It's obvious from Doyle's antics today that I couldn't work with him," Raymond said Friday. O'Connor and Greenwald were the only two members of the labor staff to apply for the directorship, Raymond said, and "they're coming from the same place."

SWU supporters cite the incident as an example of Raymond's refusal to cooperate and his ultimate goal of defeating the union. The office was created in 1973 after Cain, then president of the Kellogg Center Student Employees Assn., petitioned the ASMSU board to provide active support for the unionization effort.

The labor staff is calling for all supporters of the SWU to attend tonight's 7:30 board meeting, at which Raymond will be asked to withdraw his appointment of Skowron and find someone who is willing to head the office in aggressive support of the union.

WATER RATE HIKE, DEC MAJOR ISSUES

Council wrestles '75-76 budget

By LINDA SANDEL
State News Staff Writer

The East Lansing City Council will have to answer two questions there any alternatives to large increases in water and sewage rates?

Should the city have more control over funding of city social services — particularly the Drug Education Center

City council members say they are wrestling with ways to avoid the water and sewage rate increases in the new budget, they reluctantly agree that there is no other way to pay for the city's inflated bills.

As a result, council members say they are trying to justify the 25 per cent increase in water rates as well as the 35 per cent increase in sewage rates when discussing the proposed $10,116,390 budget is before citizens at the public hearing 8 p.m. Tuesday in City Hall.

"When I first saw the large increase in the water rates my reaction was to say 'no way,'" Councilwoman Thelma Evans said. "But after going through the itemized statement of water and sewage treatment

"Environmentalists wanted such pure water in the Red Cedar River that we had to build new treatment facilities. Was the trade-off worth it? Pure water in the Red Cedar is proving to be excessively costly in fuel and energy. Maybe we didn't make a sound trade-off."

— Councilman John Polomsky

while the water system fund is increased $95,000 to a total of $818,700.

The necessity for the increases is attributed to the spiraling costs of labor and inflated prices for the energy and chemicals needed to operate the new waste-water cut some of the other fat out of the budget in the area of labor, for instance.

"As an example, I don't see the necessity of having both a landscape architect and a city park manager. Their job functions overlap. I don't think our landscape architect is earning his keep. The park superintendent could combine most of his jobs and delegate authority better."

Polomsky also criticized management of labor funds in the building department: "We could save a lot of city hours and employ fewer people if we hired competent building inspectors instead of relying on training nonqualified people."

"Other than that I don't have too many complaints," he said.

But Polomsky has another concern that could spark considerable controversy — he would like to see the $46,106 allocation to the Drug Education Center sliced.

"We should cut their funds because I'm not impressed with the way the DEC has been kept up. I wouldn't want my wife to be examined there. I'm not impressed with its cleanliness. It's my belief that management of funds over there has been a slipshod operation," he said.

Polomsky's concerns could cause the continuation of an argument that has enlivened public hearings on city budgets for several years — whether or not the city should be involved in funding social services.

Polomsky is not the only council member with reservations on social service funding.

"I have reservations about our funding of the Listening Ear," Councilwoman Mary Sharp said. "We should have more control of the funds. I'm not saying they haven't been responsible — I just think we should have more control when we're funding private agencies."

Under the proposed budget, the Listening Ear would receive $7,680 from the city, an increase of $1,680 over last year.

Social service allocations in the proposed budget remain at their previous levels, but there is no provision made for increased health services in the city — a topic that had been considered by the council earlier in the year.

"My guess is that we will finally have to sit down and study where we are going to go with social services in the next few years," Sharp said. "We'll have to sit down with the county, figure out our needs and define our role in these services as well as our funding priorities."

UFW readies justice rally

United Farm Worker supporters are kicking off an 82-mile "March For Justice" this morning at the State Capitol. The march is designed to highlight the problems of farmworkers, with supporters carrying their message through Williamston, Fowlerville, Brighton and Farmington before a final rally in Detroit on May 10.

Speakers at the 10 a.m. rally this morning include House Speaker Bobby D. Crim, D-Davison, Sen. Earl Nelson, D-Lansing and Harold Julian, UAW legislative lobbyist.

costs and after reading the whole budget I just don't see how we can get around it."

In the proposed budget the sewage system fund is increased, over last year's fund by $435,943 to a total of $981,296.

Rate increases are also attributed to the fact that people are using less water than they have in previous years. The city must raise rates in order to compensate for the lower revenues generated by smaller water bills.

Evans said she hoped the council could at least soften the blow of the increases, which could result in higher rents for some students next year, by making them smaller and cutting costs elsewhere.

If the rate increases are approved, East Lansing residents will pay the same amount to have their water recycled as they pay to use it in the first place.

Presently East Lansing residents pay $2.88 per thousand gallons of water for the first 3,000 gallons they use. Once they have used 3,000 gallons the rate decreases to 50 cents per thousand gallon used.

Under the new rate structure proposed by City Manager John Patriarche, which was given to council for consideration three weeks ago, the rate for the first 3,000 gallons would be increased to $3.45 per thousand gallons used and 65 cents per thousand for amounts over 3,000 gallons.

Under the new budget the city figures that it would have to recycle, or provide sewage treatment for, 100 per cent of the water each household uses. Rates therefore would be the same as they are for actual water usage.

Currently the city figures it only provides sewage treatment for 90 per cent of the water a household uses. Thus, rates are assessed at $2.59 per thousand gallons for the first 3,000 gallons of water used and 45 cents per thousand for amounts over 3,000 gallons.

"I don't like the increase in sewage costs," Councilman John Polomsky said. "Environmentalists wanted such pure water in the Red Cedar River that we had to build new treatment facilities."

"Was the trade-off worth it? Pure water in the Red Cedar is proving to be excessively costly in fuel and energy. Maybe we didn't make a sound trade-off."

"These costs are a reflection of better water treatment," Mayor Wilbur Brookover said. "These are two major increases. Do you charge them to users or to property owners? The council really hasn't decided yet but my guess is that we'll charge the users by raising rates, rather than tuppung property taxes."

Under the new budget property taxes would be decreased to $17.40 per thousand of property value, a decrease of 10 cents per thousand from last year's rate.

"There has to be some alternative to these increases," Polomsky said. "We can

TV stars beam into Fairchild, treat Trekkies

By BRUCE RAY WALKER
State News Staff Writer

There are some things that just do not die easily — like hopes, dreams and the legend of "Star Trek."

Ever since the popular science-fiction TV show was canceled over five years ago the legend has continued to grow, along with the number of Star Trek enthusiasts, until the fans number in the tens of millions and the stars of the show are larger-than-life.

But even though their exploits aboard the U.S.S. Enterprise have made them famous and inspired countless books, souvenirs, conventions and a new full-length movie, the people responsible for putting "Star Trek" together are not that different from the rest of us.

Gene Roddenberry, the creator and producer of Star Trek, his wife Majel Barret (Nurse Chapel), Jimmy Doohan (Scotty), Nichelle Nichols (Lt. Uhura) and the star attraction, William Shatner (Captain Kirk), were all at the show the Residence Hall Assn. (RHA) presented Friday night at Fairchild Auditorium and the atmosphere was of a family reunion of first cousins.

As over 100 enthusiasts lined up at the entrance to the auditorium at least an hour before the doors opened, the handful of show organizers and a couple of stagehands waited backstage for the legends to arrive. Tom Leach, the organizer of the lecture-show, hustled around making sure that backstage entrances were effectively barred against overexuberant "Trekkies" that might want to mob their idols.

"It's like a circus," Leach said as he watched someone climb up a wall into the balcony when the doors opened.

Two Star Trek notables — Mark Lenard, who played the part of Spock's father, and David Gerrold, author of the prize-winning "The Trouble With Tribbles" episode, wandered backstage for awhile, marveling at Fairchild's stage, then decided to go out front and get a seat to enjoy the show.

Within a few minutes of taking their seats, eagle-eyed fans picked out the two lower-level luminaries and descended upon them for pictures and autographs. They way back to the safety of the backstage area.

"Anytime you have an audience they gather around you like that," Lenard said with a look in his eyes that told he had been through the same thing many times.

"They even cornered me when I visited Disneyland. The best thing to do is to keep moving — quickly."

A few minutes later the door swung open and the greatest legend of all, William Shatner, came walking in with his hands in his pockets. He looked around with detachment and shook hands with the small group backstage. He greeted Lenard warmly and then took up a newspaper laying on the table and retired to his dressing room — but not without first stopping and admiring for himself the dual stage design of the auditorium.

The next few carloads to arrive from the hotel bore the remainder of the group, and once inside the gloomy backstage atmosphere brightened with the banter of old friends with new stories to tell. Handshakes and kisses went around as everyone caught up on what everyone else had been doing.

A blooper reel of funny goofs made in the filming of "Star Trek" was started for the crowd and the legends sneaked out under cover of darkness to stand with the audience and watch the show. Doohan thoroughly enjoyed the film and pointed out to his young wife Wendy parts he particularly liked.

Even Shatner, who had remained detached from the rest of the group after he had retired to his dressing room, could be seen peering around the curtain watching the film clips and enjoying them.

When the lights came back up, the stars sat together in the backstage area. The number of chairs was limited and Doohan perched on a packing crate with his wife on his lap. Roddenberry sat munching rock candy, while his wife leaned on his shoulder. Shatner was the most withdrawn of the group, as he sat staring at the ground before going on. The only thing that brought a chuckle to him was when someone asked what the toilets on the Enterprise looked like.

At a small reception, for about 30 students afterwards, the stars opened up and mingled with the commoners. Shatner sat at the bar and talked to women students who tended to range on the attractive side. Doohan taste-tested beer for the bartender and then headed for a table filled with students and made himself at home. For the next hour and a half he talked and laughed about any subject brought up, all the while trying to convince listeners that American schools are not as good as those in England.

Shatner waited until Roddenberry was wallowing deep in conversation with a student, then picked Roddenberry's plate clean, smiling all the while. Gerrold gave prospective writers in the group tips on how to write, and Doohan gleefully looked over a complete set of diagrams someone produced of the Enterprise.

Shatner posed for numerous pictures with women in the group and then headed for his hotel room.

The rest kept going strong, though, as they made the rounds of small groups.

"Hey, how about an X-rated movie called 'Deep Trek,'" someone shouted. Roddenberry smiled and said he would consider it.

Voters to determine fate of extended care facility

By MARY FLOOD
State News Staff Writer
The fate of Ingham county's well-respected but aging extended care facility will be in the hands of the voters Tuesday.

If voters approve the addition of 1 mill to property taxes for the next three years, the Ingham County Extended Care Facility on Dobie Road in Okemos will be renovated to meet federal and state nursing home standards, and will also be expanded.

If the voters say no, inhabitants will gradually be moved to private nursing homes and the facility will be closed.

The additional mill would mean an increase of around $3 to $5 a year for a student renter whose landlord is passing on property tax increases to tenants. For a homeowner, the increase in taxes would be approximately $15 a year on a dwelling with a $30,000 market value.

The three-year increase would net $4.4 million for the county to improve the two existing wings of the care facility, built in 1929 and 1954, and to build and additional wing. The 187-bed facility will be expanded to 204 beds with room for additional programs.

But some limitations, like crowded rooms and community toilets, narrow hallways and doorways, and inadequate ventilation must be rectified because they are in violation of federal and state health regulations.

So even if the millage is defeated, the facility will need major remodeling just to stay open. The only other possible sources for these improvements are a $500,000 federal grant and $350,000 in county-federal revenue sharing monies. But it is unlikely that these funds, if they come through, would be able to keep the facility open and certainly not at its current occupancy level.

"If this is defeated it will only be because people are against any tax increase and don't know the facts about this millage," said Ingham County Commissioner Richard Conlin, D-East Lansing.

Conlin, who has been going door-to-door on campus in support of the millage, said that student response was very positive, but he is not sure whether they will bother to vote or not.

Voter approval would mean that the new wing, scheduled for completion in 1977, could be used to more efficiently house patients. They are now somewhat inefficiently housed while paying one of the highest per person rates in Michigan, said Ingham County Commissioner William Sweet, D-Holt.

The buildings now standing would be used for administrative purposes and for new elderly day-care and out-patient care programs. The millage would also allow an increased emphasis on care for moderate self-sufficient elderly patients who only need temporary care.

But Ingham County Commissioner John Bos, R-Lansing simply feels that it is no longer the duty of the county to spend public monies on a nursing home facility.

"I feel general principle that the government should not participate in activities where there is a lot of competing private enterprise," he said.

Flood cleanup completed

By JIM KEEGSTRA
State News Staff Writer

The first stage of work in the reconstruction of the flooded East Side of Lansing is completed.

Work finished about 4 p.m. Friday on removing water-damaged furniture, food and other items from homes in the once-peaceful Urbanville section.

A city-organized drive to pick up debris brought out from the curb to curbside, dubbed "Operation Sparkle," was completed about 10 a.m. Friday.

Mayor Gerald Dwan headed Sparkle's volunteer force of citizens, police, labor union officials and reserve units.

Friday, more than 700 tons of debris were loaded into trucks and taken to a landfill. Mayor Lawler, flood cleanup director of the Eastside Neighborhood Organization, said the group sent about 50 volunteers into homes Saturday to remove junk and debris rooms.

As far as we know there is no house left which needs help carrying stuff," he said. "We're only doing disinfecting now for senior citizens or the handicapped. The other homes all have able-bodied people in them."

Lawler complimented the MSU students who volunteered and said the number of students who came back after working last weekend was surprising.

"If it wasn't for the students we'd be in tough water," Lawler said. "They worked their butts off."

The neighborhood organization held meetings Sunday morning to begin the next stage of reconstruction. The group will work with Ingham County Drain Commissioner Richard Sode to survey the water damage and identify what remains to be done.

Repair estimates will be made for individual homes to give owners an idea of how reasonable building contractors' charges are.

Ingham County is one of 21 counties declared a disaster area by President Ford. Figures forwarded to federal officials by Gov. Milliken showed Michigan sustained more than $60 million in damage during the storms and flooding, most of it in losses to private property.

Milliken expressed surprise Saturday at the low numbers of disaster victims who registered for aid since Wednesday at the four state-federal centers across the state.

Neighborhood leader Lawler explained that response is slow since flood victims do not have radios or televisions to tell them about aid programs. He said the only way of getting out the information is to distribute leaflets door-to-door, which the East Side group has done, and then translate the leaflets for Spanish-speaking or low-literacy residents.

Kent State: evolution of despair

For most of us today, five years after, what happened at Kent State on May 4, 1970, is only as real as what happened at Pearl Harbor almost 34 years ago.

The media and some older observers say the events of the raucous four-day anti-war demonstration at Kent, which ended in four students dead and nine other wounded by the Ohio National Guard, taught students that such violent tactics are bankrupt. They seasoned their strategies by what they learned, and began to work peacefully.

Temporarily split by the shattering bullets at Kent and in Vietnam, the generations have since come closer, these older observers say, as students saw the error of their ways and adults realized that all was not well in America after all.

But now Nixon, the Vietnam war and dissent have faded away, generations do not curse each other, and the nation is no longer troubled by such deep divisiveness, such intense emotion. So they say. We disagree.

Instead, we see an America troubled by a far deeper, more difficult to define ailment — a growing fear, a sudden feeling of futility, a numbing realization that deaths — at Kent, in Vietnam, in the streets of American cities — really don't make a damned bit of difference.

The symptoms of a lingering disease are gone, to be sure, purged slowly and painfully by a joint effort of public opinion, the press and the ever-blowing winds of change.

But other less obvious symptoms have since spread. The skepticism, the cynicism, the disenchantment, the fear are growing — in suburbia, in the central business districts, in the giant corporations, on the farms.

If nothing else, remembering what happened on a grassy hill at Kent State five years ago should remind us that though "that wasn't the way to do it," as one wounded student concluded, "it" still cries to be done.

Student interest first

At the ASMSU meeting tonight, board members and Student Workers Union (SWU) organizers can prove by their behavior that they are responsibly and reasonably representing their constituents' best interests.

Or they can prove a worrisome possibility: That in their first meeting the new student government and allied groups are already in disarray, torn by emotionalism and an atmosphere charged with feelings of betrayal, antagonism and even hatred.

This evening's meeting will see ASMSU President Brian Raymond's appointment of Steve Skowron as interim labor relations director challenged by SWU organizers. Union organizers will not say what action they are planning, but they have demanded that Raymond appoint an advocate of SWU.

Whatever happens tonight, Raymond must remember that the goal of establishing a student workers' union, which he himself endorsed, will require vigorous prosecution and his full cooperation.

SWU organizers must keep in mind that they do not yet formally represent 7,000 campus workers and threats of a University shut-down can only alienate many of those they hope to serve.

By repeating the antic-filled, emotional debates that characterized several meetings of the last ASMSU board, both groups can on only lose the respect of MSU students.

Calm at war's end

Some observations on the end: The war in South Vietnam ended Tuesday night, and unlike the nights and days that saw the ends of other wars, there was no rejoicing on the streets of East Lansing. To the many of us that were weaned on the Vietnam tragedy and the counter-culture that the war years spawned, the end of the war was a highly sentimental occasion.

Vietnam, after all, has been with me since I was old enough to leave the house and go downtown to Detroit's Wayne State to take part in rallies and marches. Vietnam, after all, provided part of the impetus to go to college someday so that I could protest and go to more marches and rallies. Vietnam, after all, was why I slept in Grant Park in Chicago in 1968, and that experience led me to legitimate channels of political action in 1972, to support George McGovern and work for peace.

About 10:45 p.m., a terse news bulletin and equally terse TV reporters cut in on programs in progress to simply say what we all knew was imminent. The fighting had stopped. It was very anti-climactic, and the sign of the usually ominous news bulletin chroma-key on the TV screen failed to provoke fear and alarm in most viewers. There was mostly just a sigh of relief. Only a hermit would not know that the end, like peace many years ago, was at hand.

Outside on Grand River Avenue, it was almost 11 p.m. and the streets were nearly empty. I thought about all the pictures I'd seen in old newspapers and magazines that showed the rallying and joy in the streets on Victory in Europe and Victory in Japan Days. There wasn't anything like that this night, and I wondered if on V-E and V-J days MSU students of another era had taken to the streets to celebrate, or did they too sit in isolated dorm rooms, not knowing what was finally happening?

My mind also jumped back to those spring days in 1972, when MSU students took to the streets for the last time to demonstrate against stepped-up military action in Cambodia. Before the tear gas, the scene was a moving sight, but where were all those people tonight?

Making my way up to M.A.C. Avenue, people in bars there weren't even aware that the war had finally ended. Nor, probably, did they care. It was so ironic. We are all a product of the war, and the culture and attitudes it helped produce. The draft is no longer a threat to young men, so why even worry anymore?

The manager of one of the bars hadn't heard the news yet either. He said that there were a lot more people out drinking this night than was usual for a weeknight. But, he speculated, it was the first really warm day of the year, and that's why the kids came out. The only thing they were celebrating was spring.

I got to thinking about how all those people that had sons killed in South Asia felt tonight. I thought about the in federal hospitals, crippled and mangled for life — what were they thinking about ex-POWs? Flashes and flashes of history raced through my mind. Kissinger saying peace is at hand, Nixon holed up in California, the cop Thieu, Lon Nol in Hawaii and then Lyndon Johnson.

I really wanted to know what did man — the one responsible for the nightmare of the 60s — what did he do tonight? Then I remembered that he had died.

I wanted to go over to the armory on Grand River Avenue and to see the nightmarer of the 60s — what did he do tonight? Then I remembered that he had died.

After a couple of hours, it was late and time to go. I stood out on M.A.C. Avenue and watched a 1962 Corvette for the red light in front of the ROTC (where were Roots in '62?). When the light changed, the car disappeared into the darkness of the student ghetto, with the words of a John Denver song and the concerns of people today:

The Rockies are living, they never will die.

Straight classics

In my three years at MSU, the Performing Arts Company's productions of classics have come more and more to resemble the efforts of a clever student to get out of doing real work on an assignment by being "creative" and making a joke of the whole proceeding (I have used the technique myself). This process has reached its culmination (I hope) in the recent "Henry V".

The spirit of travesty cut through every layer of the production. Serious scenes were treated as farce in this version, and scenes written as comic relief seemed absolutely demented. Then we were all requested to join in this good-natured fun by exhortation to acts of "audience participation" that would have put the audience of a Victorian melodrama to shame. Many of the people involved, I know, are very talented, but the production concepts didn't let them show it.

I realize there is a long tradition which states that Shakespeare was just a sort of Elizabethan hack with a gift for gab who wouldn't have minded any treatment of his plays which drew a crowd. Space does not permit a refutation of that view. Suffice it to say there are those of us who think otherwise. When a proposed schedule for next year was put up on the Fairchild bulletin board, under the entry for "Hamlet" somebody wrote, "Could we do it straight please? We're tired of classics on a 'schtick.'" We eagerly await the answer.

West Coast's thrifty gov

Most of the citizens of the nation's largest state are enjoying the way their new, young governor appears to be setting the bureaucracy on its ear.

Edmund G. "Jerry" Brown, Democratic successor to Ronald Reagan, jolted some of the liberals who supported him by "out-Reaganing Reagan" with an austere state budget. He followed this up with the ostentatious symbols of thrift, spurning the governor's mansion for a modest bachelor pad, waiting until other state officials had chosen their limousines before ordering a small Plymouth, and now grumbling loudly about the potential cost to the state of Vietnamese refugees.

Some of the publicized frugality causes old-timers to smile. Brown posted a savings by doing away with his predecessor's private aircraft; eight years ago Reagan did the same by getting rid of the jet used by his predecessor (Jerry Brown's father) until hijack-conscious airline officials prevailed on him to stop jeopardizing passengers' lives by his presence on commercial flights.

Young Brown, however, has concentrated on a central problem facing governmental executives today: how to appear to be on the taxpayer's side as the cost of government relentlessly mounts. More significantly, he shows signs of understanding the basic question facing all government today: How can an elected executive take charge of a powerful, self-protective alliance of civil servants and special interests?

Most elected executives enter office determined to "clean out the dead wood" and wind up on a political Boot Hill, having presided over the swelling of the bureaucracy. Governors do not govern any

Elderly abuse

Imagine 186 crippled, sick and elderly people with nowhere to go, forced out of their home simply because it does not comply with federal fire regulations. This scene will become a reality if the Ingham County Medical Care Facility does not receive the millage it needs to stay in operation.

"Elderly abuse" is a common theme in social work classes. However, only recent media attention through Jack Anderson's columns and articles in large newspapers such as the Detroit Free Press have publicized this misfortune.

As an MSU student working part-time at the facility, I see a sincere, if small scale, effort to alleviate this widespread abuse, which has not yet earned a place in the public consciousness.

MSU students can help the facility stay open. They are eligible to vote in the upcoming millage election, a last ditch effort to get the funds needed for fire improvements.

If the millage fails, the fire marshal shut the facility down. The yes vote of MSU student body Tuesday may be the only thing that keeps a roof over people's heads.

Performing Arts

The proposed Performing Arts Center (PAC) will be, as President Wharton suggested, a boon to the community. However, shouldn't student views be louder voice in campus priorities?

If Wharton thinks students at prefer a PAC over an all purpose capable of attracting good rock concerts is sadly mistaken. Construction of the will exhaust surpluses of administrative energy, funds and the charity of "The University," delaying the much needed replacement of Genocide Fieldhouse too many more years.

Union's 'circus politics' blasted

Monday, May 5, 1975

By BRIAN RAYMOND

By appointing my interim labor relations director, there has been some controversy from the Student Workers Union committee. This forces me to release information I had previously wished to withhold.

I would like to reiterate my support for the SWU as I stated in my "State of the Union" address Thursday. I believe the students should have the right to vote for or against a union. I stated that ASMSU must continue to support union organizing attempts. Since the SWU is an attempt to form a labor union representing employees and not all the students, I felt it was improper for ASMSU to endorse or reject the SWU.

The rationale was stated simply that the SWU on the entire student body would be questionable. ASMSU must keep the interests of the entire student community foremost in mind. I do not want to release the reasons for my appointment of the labor relations director, because I felt it would have an effect on the chances of the SWU in a reality and I personally am in support of the SWU. Now I am compelled to release some of these reasons, though I do so with regret.

First, my cabinet must be composed of individuals that will work with me for the benefit of the student body. The actions of the present SWU have justified my decision. Its antics demonstrate its lack of willingness to talk and its desire for nothing but confrontation politics. This is not acceptable to me.

Secondly, many of the comments and statements made to me by the committee prove it does not have the best interest of the student body in mind. Calls for mass strikes to shut down the University and other confrontation politics undertaken by the committee have convinced me that there could be considerable damage done to the University and student body.

Thirdly, the representatives of the committee have acted in ways I consider unethical. The following statements were made by Doyle O'Connor on May 2, 1975 and witnessed by the ASMSU controller: "The SWU rejects your cabinet appointment for labor relations" and that this is "out of student politics and into union politics." He continued by saying "do not fuck with it."

Doyle added that while I have the authority to appoint the director, he has the power to force the appointment. "You are going to appoint someone acceptable to SWU," he said, and "you have until Monday or you are going to be pushed aside."

In addition: "There is no way you're going to get away with stopping this... We've got more strength than you." If the appointment is not changed, "we will shut ASMSU down, you down, and the cabinet down."

Also, there were several implied threats made in the business office.

Fourthly, it has been stated several times and also at the May 2, 1975 meeting that "ASMSU is going to get pushed aside by this union." The union wants to take over many of the responsibilities at ASMSU. This will result in a minority dictating to the student body.

Fifthly, the SWU organizing committee has made many false or misleading statements. Most recently they published a leaflet stating that I am "attempting to smash the SWU by cutting off its money and office supplies," even though I have given orders that the organizing movement and work for the election was to continue.

It is appropriate for a student organization to endorse the SWU, but ASMSU must maintain its commitment to the entire student body.

The above statements were some of my reasons for not appointing a member of the SWU staff as director. My responsibility is to the student body and I sincerely believe that by appointing a member of the SWU staff I would have committed a disservice to the students. Their threats and attempts to force me to change my appointment only underscores the wisdom of my decision.

When the ASMSU Board discusses this issue, I would like to impress upon them the need to maintain order, logic and to act responsibly. We must not let this destroy the board. This is a serious issue and it must be handled properly. Now is not the time to begin circus politics. I respectfully request that all members attend the meeting with an open mind and respect the positions of both sides.

Finally, I would recommend to the Board that they reallocate a large segment of the money reserved for Labor Relations to the Student Workers Interim Organizing Committee, so it may spend it as they deem appropriate. This way ASMSU will be able to fulfill its obligations to the student body, and the SWU can publish its information.

Let me conclude by stating my desire to have this problem resolved in a responsible manner. ASMSU must reaffirm its support towards holding an election. This can be resolved in a manner which is beneficial for everyone involved and the student body.

J. Brian Raymond is president of ASMSU.

VIEWPOINT: FLOOD

Victims caught at midterms

By DAVID M. HANDLEY

A flood victim is no fun. Really, no fun at all. What makes matters worse is no flood I lived in a major flood plain, when I moved into the place on S. Mifflin Avenue.

Like a fool, I laughed when I traveled to Zoo Street Friday night, April 19, and saw all the water covering the road. I thought to myself, "The dummies at Brody have to walk around the field house to class on Mondays HAI HAI!"

The following night I went out and was stuck at the expressway on Kalamazoo to Michigan Avenue, still three blocks from my house so I felt completely

When I returned to the house about 12:30 the river was up to the end of my driveway—only two city blocks away. I was not but not really worried. Besides, the basement had flooded on Friday, but was dry. This gave me even more

At four in the morning I was awakened by a city fireman informing me the water was now next door and still coming fast. Four in the morning on a Sunday is not my favorite time to get up—so I didn't.

When I finally got up at eight o'clock I found three feet of water around the house and almost six feet in the basement.

The police were nice enough to boat over and pick me up along with my housemates. After taking my most valued possessions my books for class and a bag of underwear, I went in search of aid offered to the victims. The rest of the day (Sunday) was spent running around or standing in line trying to get food or shelter.

After crashing on a friend's floor for duration, I trudged to class the next morning because President Wharton said my Spartan spirit would get me through the crisis. Class was great, students trying to tell me how extensive the flood was because they had clogged the roads all day Sunday and Monday gawking at the mess first hand.

Midweek was spent wading in to save those items not destroyed by the flood.

By Saturday we returned to clean up or throw out the mess created by the flood waters. By Sunday things were just about back to normal. No more police in boats, no more soldiers in jeeps, and no more helicopters buzzing around at all hours.

The only thing to clue you that anything happened last week is the junk in everyone's front yard and the fact that it's midterm time once again and I'm not ready for them yet. But this time I have an ironclad excuse—I'm a flood victim, a real live flood victim. No prof, not even a veteran of years of excuses, could help but forgive me.

Starship soars in stunning act at Munn Arena

By DAVE DIMARTINO
State News Reviewer

Call it what you will—a combination of nostalgia, surprise, relief and joy—but the Jefferson Starship's performance Friday night was, by all counts, the most enjoyable musical event of the year.

For openers, the concert proved a touchy, yet vital point: the Starship is indeed capable of generating the same degree of excitement as did the Jefferson Airplane in its heyday. Furthermore, the bands' candor while performing brought to mind just how long contemporary rock has been lacking the very essential element of spontaneity.

Despite the harsh setting of the ice arena, the entire evening was filled with warmth—with the small exception of Mike Quatro, whose unannounced appearance ably demonstrated that a little knowledge is a dangerous tool in the wrong hands.

Fortunately, Quatro's keyboard antics were either dismissed or forgotten as Starship warm-up act Ray Jason walked onstage. Jason's juggling act—which included bouts with knives, hatchets and torches—was clever diversion that served its purpose well. The audience was laughing and prepared for the works.

A very loud guitar riff pulsed from the darkened stage, and with a burst of light came "Ride The Tiger." The song was a perfect choice for an impressive beginning. With the addition of Marty Balin's surging vocals, the song easily surpassed its blander counterpart on the Starship's "Dragonfly" blessing, as his post-"Blows Against the Empire" material does border on creativity. Freiberg, on the other hand, deserved his share of the spotlight since his memorable work on Quicksilver's "Shine Grove." His union with Slick and Kantner despite the "Baron Von Tollbooth" effort released under the Slick/Kantner/Freiberg name—has yet to produce any truly brilliant results. Friday's performance allowed only a few vocals, mere backing vocals that.

Papa John Creach had little trouble with exposure, being in fact an audience favorite here, particularly when Kantner explained the violinist's temporary absence, also treatment of a cracked rib received during the performance, after falling off the darkened stage. Papa John was greeted with a huge round of applause upon returning to the stage, crookedly shifting with violin in hand.

Papa John's accident was not the mishap, but as far as the audience was concerned, the only noticeable one. Several preshow problems actually came close to cancelling the group's performance altogether—including difficulties with constructing the stage at Munn Ice Arena that had lasted the entire afternoon.

Though the band was disturbed by incidents—Kantner actually took a moment to berate the MSU Physical Plant personnel announcing "your school is really hot" up to the cheering crowd—the quality of the Starship's performance remained level.

"After a strong set of new material, the group was further bringing the house down replacing its classics. 'Somebody to Love' was its last selection — it was close to the strongest — and, of course, an encore was no problem. The audience was continuously screaming . . ."

album. This combination of sound and sight—with Balin, Grace Slick, Paul Kantner and David Freiberg, San Franciscan heroes all, onstage, — was somehow incredibly reassuring.

Going through its paces, the Starship let its performance assume aspects of the prototypical variety show. Each member of the band was featured and allowed his own solo spot, which is no small deal considering the group's current eight-piece format.

The Starship's heavyweights—Slick, Balin and Kantner—shared their best moments singing in unison. The classic triple harmony, absent since "Volunteers", is back—admittedly a little rusty due to lack of practice, but potentially just as powerful. Hot Tuna or not, these three vocalists were, and still are, the core of the Jefferson Airplane.

Slick was largely responsible for the evenings' informal feel, partly due to her between-song patter and her generally inimitable stage manner. As usual, her voice was remarkably well-controlled—much looser and less stiff than her recent recordings might lead one to believe—and her miking technique impeccable.

Balin, the newest addition to the Starship was the proverbial sight for sore eyes. Peculiarly aloof for the duration of the show, he managed to liven up on occasion for his own solo spots, which thankfully were quite numerous. "Caroline" and "Drifting," from his days with Bodacious, let Balin fly loose, if only sporadically, for alone at the microphone he seemed either guarded or preoccupied. Be that as it may, his compelling stage presence was a highlight of the night.

Not so with Kantner, who strangely stayed out of the spotlight for most of the night. Introduced by Slick as "my old man", Kantner sang one or two lead vocals, but basically concentrated on harmony, where—in the Starship context—he excels.

Both Kantner and Freiberg no longer are as influential to the Starship's sound as they were during Balin's absence. In Kantner's case, this might be a hidden Amidst some excellent soloing by guitarist Craig Chaquico and bassist Sears, the Starship managed to sail through most of "Dragonfly," much new material and a few surprises that for most people made the night the spectacular celebration that it was.

First came "Have You Seen the Saucer"—followed by the very unexpected "White Rabbit," a song that most people assume would never be heard live in concert again. Immediately, everyone was on their feet. Slick used to complain about members of the audience calling for "White Rabbit" when the group was playing its new material. Not a soul called for it Friday night, but as those famous four basses were played, at least one person screamed "I don't believe it!"

When that was followed with "Somebody to Love," near-hysteria was inevitable. After a strong set of new material, the group was further bringing the house of replaying its classics. "Somebody to Love" was its last selection—it was close to the strongest—and, of course, an encore was problem. The audience was continuously screaming, glowing in the light of hundreds of tiny match-flames.

Triumphantly, the Starship returned first with "Wooden Ships," and finally answer to all the screamed requests: "Volunteers." A stronger climax could have been asked for.

At the show's end, most of the audience was ecstatic and the band members themselves looked quite satisfied with their performance. Justifiably so—for the Jefferson Starship, now on its third tour, is a full-fledged rock and roll band—and not any hastily thrown together substitute for the Jefferson Airplane.

With a new album due for release soon as it is mixed, and a respectability due to "Dragonfly," the Jefferson Starship is not standing still. It guaranteed Airplane audience, new to the Starship, and nowhere to go but up seen Friday night, that should be a problem.

The core members of the fabled Jefferson Airplane visited MSU Friday in their new incarnation as Jefferson Starship. Newly reunited with the band, Marty Balin (top left), contributed some of the concert's strongest vocals while Grace Slick (top right) treated the audience to her classics "Somebody to Love" and "White Rabbit." Paul Kantner (bottom) guided the Starship through two of its greatest songs, "Wooden Ships" and "Have You Seen the Saucers?"

Producer's belief keys success

By JUNE DELANO
State News Staff Writer

Science fiction films must be documentaries of the near future, not fantasies, if they are to equal the cinema successes of producer George Pal.

The small, animated Hungarian, who produced "The Time Machine," "When Worlds Collide," "War of the Worlds," "Destination Moon" and the newly-released "Doc Savage: Man of Bronze," believes everything in his films will happen sooner or later.

"When we made 'Time Machine,' we all believed sincerely that time travel was possible," he said with the defensive shrug of a man whose ideas are often viewed with skepticism. "I still believe in it, I guess."

Pal's movies, known for their mind-boggling effects, are the result of conscientious research and preparation. "I believed we would go on the moon when I made 'Destination Moon,'" he said. The film was made before any of the moon shots. "We used scientists, rocket engineers and Werner Von Braun to make sure it was realistic."

"We knew the moon didn't have cracks on it, because there's no water, but we had just $600,000 for the film and we could only afford a 90-by-60 foot stage set for the moon scenes.

"We used parallel cracks to give a false perspective, put life-size asteroids and full-size actors in the foreground and midgets and miniature asteroids in the back."

Pal's methodical approach to the creation of the fantastic is based on his rigorous and diversified schooling in Europe.

"I came from a poor family of actors—comedians, violinists, all of them on the stage—and being a young revolutionary, I decided to become an architect," he explained while walking across the MSU campus Thursday.

He walks with a limp and tries to keep facing the person he's speaking to, so he progresses in an odd, sideways shuffle which is almost as disconcerting as his conversation is interesting.

"I graduated in architecture in 1928, but there was no building in Hungary then. In order to become an architect, you had to work as a carpenter or brick layer for two years, so I had carpentry skills, but I could draw, so that's what I did."

Pal worked as a poster artist and commercial artist and then "gypsied around Europe" until he settled in Holland.

He invented the art of puppetooning, a three-dimensional take-off from regular cartooning, which he used to make commercials for movie theaters.

"Eventually, I used it in making training films during World War II," he explained, adding that he created a puppetoon version of D-Day months before it happened.

He turned to film-making because of its unlimited potential.

"I felt the stage was too restrictive, but nothing was impossible in film," he explained. "There were no end of arguments in my family, they saying that the stage was the thing, me saying the movies."

Pal concentrated on science fiction films, because they seemed like such good feature material, and developed his reputation for dazzling special effects, like the scene in "The Naked Jungle" which columns of soldier ants devour a South American peasant.

"The studio forbade us to do that sequence, afraid they'd get sued by the actor no matter what precautions we took," he recalled, chuckling about the subterfuge he had to use. "We got a guy who said he'd do it and smuggled him into the studio at night."

They dressed the actor in a plastic body suit, taped his eyes shut and painted eyes on his lids. Huge bottles of ants were brought in from the desert.

"The filming of the ants climbing up his body was easy. The part where they cover his face was a little harder. We poured ants on his hands and he quickly raised them to his face, screaming 'My eyes, my eyes.'"

Then four special effects men rushed in with vacuum cleaners and got all the ants." Pal's newest film, based on the Doc Savage pulp novels of the 1930s, which he didn't read until the 1960s when they were reprinted, features more of his personal trademark—special effects.

"The film cost $3 million to make and I'm told it looks three times as expensive," he said, laughing at the seriousness with which he takes his work and waving his age-spotted hands in anticipation of the film's summer release.

When he left, heading for more speeches and interviews, which he gives wherever he's invited, he stopped in the West Akers Hall Lounge and patted a sleeping woman on the shoulder.

"Did you have a good nap?" he asked, looking more like a loving grandfather than a successful film producer. The sleeper nodded in confusion and after Pal disappeared down the hall, asked in a stupor, "Who was that man?"

Elementary education professor dies at 59 of heart attack May 1

HICKS

William V. Hicks, MSU professor of elementary and special education and administration and higher education, died of a heart attack last Thursday at the age of 59.

Hicks had served as coordinator of student teaching, director of the Student Teacher Education Program and Elementary Intern Program and chairman of the Dept. of Elementary and Special Education. Widely known among educators throughout the country, Hicks was the author of numerous books, including "The Elementary School Principal at Work," "Introduction to Education" and "The New Elementary School Curriculum."

Hicks came to MSU as an associate professor in 1953 after working as a high school teacher in Carbondale, Ill., and elementary and junior high school principal in Mokena, Ill. and Grosse Pointe.

In addition, Hicks served as a visiting lecturer at universities across the United States, including Wayne State University, University of Michigan, University of Southern California and University of Oregon.

For several years he was involved in programs for the Dept. of Elementary School Principals of the National Education Assn. (NEA) appearing as a consultant and speaker.

Hicks is survived by his wife Jean, two daughters Martha MacDonald of Kalamazoo and Cynthia Worfel of Grand Rapids; a son Russell, his parents Mr. and Mrs. William James Hicks of Harrisburg, Ill., and three grandchildren.

PLAY IN KAZOO TODAY

Men golfers take fifth

The MSU men's golf team is keeping busy as the all-important Big Ten tournament grows closer.

The Spartans, who finished a strong fifth of 14 teams at the Northern Intercollegiate tournament in Ann Arbor this past weekend, will compete in the 36-hole Bronco Invitational in Kalamazoo today.

Every conference team but Purdue participated in the Northern tourney, and of the nine teams, the Spartans finished third.

Indiana won the 72-hole affair held Friday and Saturday with a 1,506 total as Ohio State came in second with 1,523. Illinois State and Ball State tied for the third spot at 1,539, and the Spartans trailed those two squads by just one stroke.

Steve Broadwell led the six-man Spartan contingent with a 76-74-77-78-305 card, while Gary Domagalski and Bill Brafford checked in with 308 totals. Brad Hyland (311), Scott Malaney (313) and Doug Lemanski (318) rounded out MSU's scoring.

"It would have been nice to slip into third, but we played as good or better than teams who have played a lot of golf this year," said MSU coach Bruce Fossum, whose team has been hurt by the inclement weather this spring.

The Spartans, who will finally get their first chance to work out on their home Forest Akers course this week, will be sending another six-man team to Kalamazoo today.

Fossum said that Domagalski, Brafford, Malaney, sophomores Kurt Hassberger and Eric Knauss and freshman Mark Baran will represent the Spartans at Western Michigan University.

The Spartans will host their annual Spartan Invitational tournament at Forest Akers West next weekend. Just one week later, the squad will travel to Bloomington, Ind. for the conference tournament.

IM NOTES

The high jump competition of the women's intramural track meet, canceled last Wednesday because the approach was too slippery, will be held at 6 p.m. today at the outdoor track.

Entries for that event will be taken until noon today in 121 Women's Intramural Building.

Starting today, the No. 1 court on each row of tennis courts will be designated as a challenge court. The challenge will be based on one set of play, when others are waiting to use the court.

In addition, intramural supervisors will now be checking the courts to insure that all participants honor their reservations.

MSU junior June Oldman shows her winning form during the Spartanette Golf Invitational held Friday and Saturday at the Forest Akers West golf course. Oldman and the Spartans both went on to win top honors in the invitational.

Club Sports

There will be a special meeting for all MSU Water Polo Club members at 4:30 p.m. today in the Jenison Fieldhouse pool.

All those attending should come prepared to play.

Volleyball meeting slated for today

All those interested in trying out for the MSU women's varsity volleyball team for next year should attend a meeting at 4 p.m. today in 106 Women's Intramural Bldg.

Oldman cops individual title as women golfers win again

By ANN WILLIAMSON State News Sports Writer

MSU's women's golf team couldn't have asked for a better ending to the Spartanette Golf Invitational held Friday and Saturday at the Forest Akers West golf course.

Not only did the Spartans win the invitational with a 36-hole stroke total of 699, but MSU's Big Ten champion June Oldman won the Spartanette individual crown following a three-hole sudden-death playoff with Eastern Michigan's Laurie Reynolds.

Reynolds shot an 81 for the first 18 holes Friday, giving her a solid five-stroke lead over Oldman, who shot an 86, but Oldman turned the tide Saturday with an 82 while Reynolds turned in an 87. Both women were then tied at 168, playing three extra holes until Oldman finally outshot her competitor.

"I'm really excited about having won this tournament, especially after being behind on Friday," Oldman said. "I felt my game was in good shape and that I would be able to play as good a game Saturday as anybody there. I'm very pleased I'm having such a good year so far. I really couldn't ask for very much more."

Illinois State gave the Spartans the toughest team competition, finishing second with 714 strokes. The margin between the two teams was extremely narrow after the first 18 holes, however, as MSU held a 355 stroke total to Illinois State's 359.

"Illinois State came very close to catching us Friday, but as things turned out, they didn't have the depth they needed," MSU coach Mary Fossum explained. "They had three very good golfers, but the lowest four scores are counted for the team total, and they just didn't have a strong fourth player."

"But all the teams were very pleased with the tournament, and every team told me they'd like to return again next year."

The Spartans entered two teams in to the tournament, a Green and a White team. The Green team captured first place in the competition while the White team finished fourth, with 749 strokes, behind Ohio State with 727. One of the standouts on the White team was junior Cindy Vollmer, who broke 90 for the first time on the Forest Akers course with an 86-87-177 for a fifth-place tie with teammate Karen Escott.

"I'm very pleased with how well both our teams did, and I think the fact that our White team finished fourth in the tournament proves we've got a lot of depth on this team," Fossum said.

Finishing behind MSU, ISU, OSU and MSU's White team in the team standings were Bowling Green with 382, Marshall University with 825 and University of Cincinnati with 880.

SUNDAY'S GAME RESCHEDULED FOR TODAY

Mahan shuts off 'M' bats, 4-0

By MIKE LITAKER State News Sports Writer

ANN ARBOR — George Mahan thought he was in a little bit of difficulty Saturday when he put runners on first and third in the first inning. But eight frames later it was Michigan who was in a heap of trouble as the Spartans rolled up a 4-0 win.

Mahan turned into the main man on the mound for MSU in rolling up a three-hit shutout to raise his record to 5-2. The junior hurler fanned nine Wolverine batters in continuing his mastery over Michigan.

Sunday's game MSU-U-M game here was cancelled due to the weather conditions and will be played at 2 p.m. today at Kobs Field. Duane Bickel will be on the mound for the Spartans while Craig Forhan will get the starting nod for Michigan.

Over the past two seasons Mahan has owned his Ann Arbor cousins with a string of 14 and two-thirds shutout innings in which he has yielded only three hits. Nothing was sacred Saturday in the land of maize and blue. Not even U-M catcher Ted Mahan, who was a victim of two of brother George's whiffs despite the family ties.

"I didn't really want to strike him out the last time but I threw him a change-up and he wasn't looking for it," Mahan said. "The first time I needed it though."

Michigan threatened only once in the game when it put runners on first and third in the opening inning, but Mahan settled down to retire the last 10 men he faced in the game after Randy Hackney's sixth inning double.

"It's got to be the best game he's pitched," said MSU asst. coach Frank Pellerin. "Last year he came on in relief against them and pitched hitless ball for the final 5 and two-thirds innings. That's one of the reasons we decided to go with him."

Michigan righthander Chuck Rogers, 5-2, was the victim of four infield hits and five costly errors that enabled the Spartans to increase their Big Ten record to 6-0 over second-place Wolverines.

"That's the worst I've ever seen a Michigan team play in Ann Arbor," Pellerin said. "They looked a little bit tight and when the pressure's on you don't throw as well."

The Spartans picked up their initial run in the first when second baseman Joe Palamara led off the game with his first hit of the day and scored on Mike Fricke's ground out. The score stood up until the sixth when MSU capitalized on the U-M infield blunders.

Fricke led off the inning by reaching first on shortstop Jim Berra's throwing error and stole second. Amos Hays second hit of the game, his safeties in three years ago to third. A passed ball catcher Ted Mahan allowed speedy centerfielder to score home with the second run. He lost his footing in the clay.

Back-to-back infield hits Pat Simpson and Palamara the top of the seventh drove off the final two-run drive MSU and give Mahan a 4-0 work with in the bottom stretch.

After another passed ball brother Ted, Terry bounced a single over first to score both runners when ball scooted under the glove U-M rightfielder Pete Hoes rolled halfway back to Lansing.

Sunday's game was postponed a day after it was forecast that Kobs Field was to be wet with an unfavorable forecast on its way.

"Weather events up the anybody can play equally sloppy weather," Pellerin said. "But the better team will through in good conditions."

Men, women tracksters both winners at home

By CHARLES JOHNSON and ANN WILLIAMSON State News Sports Writers

MSU's men's and women's track teams both came away with victories Saturday over tough foes in home dual meet action at the Ralph Young track.

Coach Fran Dittich's men's team barely snuck past Purdue, while Nell Jackson's Spartan women battered Illinois State and Ohio State in a triangular affair.

Sprinter Marshall Dill, making his final home appearance, amazed the generous crowd of Spartan fans with two winning performances to highlight MSU's 72-69 triumph. Dill, who will run out of collegiate eligibility at the end of the outdoor season, posted first places in the 100 and 220-yard dashes.

The Spartans had to come from behind against the surprisingly tough Boilermakers and the meet wasn't decided until the final two events. A complete sweep of the top three spots in the three-mile run by the Spartans, and a victory in the mile relay assured the victory.

Dill's performance was outstanding, as the Detroit senior continued to show no effects of his layoff from indoor competition this past winter. He won the 100-yard dash in 9.4 and then copped the 220-yard dash with a 22.0 mark, in addition to pacing MSU's winning 880 and 440-yard relay teams.

Sophomore Herb Lindsay was the Spartans' only other double winner, collecting victories in the three-mile run and tying for first with teammate Stan Mavis in the mile run. Lindsay's clocking in the three-mile was 14:04 and his time in the mile was 4:13.3.

Other victors for MSU were: Chris Casleman in the 440-yard intermediate hurdles (52.7); Tom Wilson in the pole vault (14-6), and Greg Brewton in the discus (137-6 3/4).

MSU's next track action will be this Saturday when the Spartans face Notre Dame in South Bend.

Meanwhile, the women's track team was having a pretty easy time of it as the Spartans collected 75 points, defeating Ohio State with 45 and Illinois State with 41. The win maintains the Spartans' undefeated season, giving them a 4-0 dual meet record and a 3-0 mark in invitational meets.

"I think the meet was a good experience because it ran very smoothly and turned out to be an interesting meet," Jackson said. "I think an outdoor track lends itself to this kind of setup since both the men and women can keep right on competing by just alternating their events."

"As for the girls' performances, an number of them turned in their best personal performances of the season," Jackson added. "The girls are continuing to improve, which they'll need to do if they want to compete in the nationals. Track is the kind of sport where each time you go out to compete, you're testing yourself to try and improve. I think that's what all the girls are doing now."

Karen Dennis took first place for the Spartans in the 100 and 220-yard dashes with times of 10.8 and 25.3, while teammate Marjorie Grimmer finished right behind Dennis with times of 10.8 and 25.4. The Spartans swept first, second and third in the 440-yard dash as Sue Latta, Robin Collins and Peggy Hoshield were timed at 58.2, 60.7 and 61.1 seconds, respectively.

Sheri Hohenstein and Barbara Bronson took first and second in the 880 with times of 2:19.9 and 2:23.1, while Spartan Ann Forshae captured first place in the one-mile run with a time of 5:34.

Denise Greene grabbed top honors in the 100-meter hurdles with a time of 15.3 seconds, while both the Spartan 440 and mile relay teams claimed first place with respective times of 48.6 seconds and 4:21.

In the field events, Spartans Greene, Barbara Grider and Wendy Rogers all claimed second place finishes in the long jump, discus and javelin events. Greene landed an 18-foot 3 inch mark in the long jump, while Grider and Rogers turned in throws of 107 feet 4 inches and 104 feet, respectively.

'Pleasure' enroute to Pimlico

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Kentucky Derby Winner Foolish Pleasure was due to arrive at Pimlico today to prepare to meet several of the horses he whipped soundly in Kentucky, as well as a few new challengers in the Preakness May 17.

Pimlico officials were thinking in terms of a 12-horse field for the 100th running of their second jewel of the Triple Crown, even though Foolish Pleasure had been an emphatic one and three-quarter length winner over Avator and Diabolo at Churchill Downs.

Among new challengers, Cynthia Phipps' Singh seemed a certain entry for the mile and three-sixteenths test.

Singh, winner of New York's Swift and Peter Pan, suffered a torn ligament while winning a division of the Gotham at Aqueduct and had to pass up the Wood Derby. The injury is now healed and the colt back in serious training. As for those who trailed Foolish Pleasure Saturday, Avator's asst. trainer Art Lerrille said in Louisville that a decision would be made this afternoon as to whether the horse would head here or ship back to Kentucky.

Third place finisher Diabolo, who suffered cuts in his collision with Avator in the stretch, was pronounced in good shape by trainer Sid Martin, but Martin said no decision on whether to go in the Preakness would be made for a couple of days.

Smiley Davis, trainer of fourth-placed Master Derby, was undecided on his charge's next race, saying it would be in the Preakness or in the Jersey Derby scheduled May 26.

Lou Rondinello, who had shipped his two Derby starters, Prince Thou Art and Sylvan Place back to New York, reported he had not decided whether either or both would go in the Preakness. The Prince, erroneously called by the announcer as the leader coming down the stretch, finished sixth and his entry mate eighth.

Houston Astro first baseman Bob Watson crosses the plate Sunday to score the millionth run in major league baseball history. He was driven home by a home run by Astro catcher Milt May in the second inning off San Francisco pitcher John Montefusco. Watson had walked to get on base. The run was scored 99 years and 12 days after Wes Fisher of the Philadelphia team scored the first run in major league history.

WEEKEND ACTION

Women's teams roll again

The MSU women's tennis and softball teams both had successful weekends, as the Spartans' varsity and junior varsity tennis teams whipped the University of Toledo by the same 9-0 score at MSU varsity tennis courts while the softball team blasted Green College, 14-0, and Eastern Illinois, 4-1, Saturday in Illinois.

The tennis team had no problems defeating Toledo State with the closest competition coming between MSU's Al Scruggs and Toledo's Sandy Dimarvero in the No. 4 position. Scruggs came out on top, 6-1, 6-4.

"All the girls, varsity and junior varsity, went out there and did their very best effort, even though they really didn't need MSU coach Elaine Hatton said. "I was glad that the junior varsity girls got an opportunity to play, as most colleges don't have teams."

The wins lift the varsity team's record to 3-1 for the spring marks the JV's first win without a loss for the season.

The women's softball team also had a very profitable week beginning last Thursday against Grand Valley with a 9-1 victory the first game and a 4-4 tie in the second. The tie will be completed later this season.

The first victory against Greenville College was awarded pitcher Gwen White, who also pitched in the tie game with Grand Valley Thursday. White's record currently stands at 5-2-1.

The win against Eastern Illinois went to Gloria Beckford, who also tossed the 9-1 victory over Grand Valley. Beckford was undefeated for the season, boasting an 8-0 record.

"We've been playing real high-caliber ball lately, and I'm pleased with our progress," MSU coach Margo Sniely said. "I think things are looking real good for the state tournament next weekend."

Men netters lose to Illini

Kevin McNulty, a freshman playing No. 6 singles for MSU, the only match for the Spartan men's tennis team Friday as the Big Ten foe Illinois, 8-1, in Champaign. McNulty defeated Illini Rick Shapiro in two sets, 7-6, 6-4. The MSU-Purdue match scheduled in Layette, Ind. Saturday was rained out.

Coach Stan Drobac's squad, which fell to a 4-4 overall record with the loss to Illinois, will travel to Kalamazoo today to face nonconference opponent Western Michigan.

Ben-Veniste tells Watergate anecdotes

BEN-VENISTE

By ROSANNELESS
State News Staff Writer

Richard Ben - Veniste, the assistant to Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski, is in his early 30s but could easily pass for any other clean-cut, good-looking guy on campus. The only thing that gave Ben - Veniste away during his visit to MSU Thursday was his gray flannel suit.

Ben - Veniste spoke several times on campus last week in conjunction with Law Day (May 1). ASMSU's Great Issues sponsored his visit and paid him a $1,500 speaker's fee. Ben - Veniste was supposed to talk on white-collar crimes and their damage to society. Instead, he told the 80-person audience at Fairchild Auditorium countless stories and anecdotes on Watergate and gave a detailed account of the unfolding of the Nixon scandal in the special prosecutor's office.

Ben - Veniste began his law career as an assistant to the U.S. attorney in New York in 1968. He was recruited by then - Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox in June 1973. Ben - Veniste said Cox's office wanted staff lawyers with the highest academic standards and pristine virtues. "Eventually, they finally got to thinking about having a staff member who could try a case in court," he said.

The special prosecutor's office had hoped to conclude the Watergate investigation in 1973, Ben - Veniste said. However, Alexander Butterfield's revelation during the summer Senate Watergate hearings that former President Nixon kept a tape system of business conversations put an end to that expectation. "We soon began the ordeal of forcing Nixon to give up the tapes," he said.

Following the Saturday Night Massacre when Nixon fired Cox, the special prosecutor's staff found itself at a low morale point but vowed not to quit, he said. Ben - Veniste, at age 30, was then made head of the task force that had two functions in probing the Watergate coverup part of the scandal: to conclude the grand jury arguments on the coverup, and to recommend to the grand jury who should be indicted in the coverup plot.

"I was effectively suing the president of the United States," Ben - Veniste said. "As I got into it, I was representing less and less the government, and representing more and more the public establishment."

Throughout the Watergate ordeal, Ben - Veniste said he was able to keep his personal equilibrium by maintaining a sense of humor, which allowed him to keep his ego in check. More importantly, he said, he tried not to be overwhelmed by the enormity of his job. The special prosecutor's staff worked 16 hours a day, seven days a week, he said.

Ben - Veniste told the audience that he had a reputation in Washington of being "brash, iconoclastic and irreverent." The stories he told the audience bore these descriptions out.

For instance, during the coverup trial, he had to question H.R. Haldeman on the so-called $350,000 slush fund. He asked Haldeman why he put the money in a safe deposit box in a Virginia bank under a false name. Haldeman said he did not know why. Ben - Veniste then figured out the interest that could be accrued on a savings account of that size. He also mentioned that besides a lot of interest, Haldeman could have gotten a free toaster for just opening the account.

The best story Ben - Veniste told concerned a visit to Fred Buzhardt's office. Buzhardt was Nixon's lawyer, and the visit in question occurred the morning after Nixon's speech on the energy crisis, when the former president told Americans to lower their thermostats to 68 degrees. Ben - Veniste and another lawyer were in Buzhardt's office when Buzhardt was called away by some other business. It was exceptionally warm in the office, Ben - Veniste recalled, and the thermostat registered 70-some degrees.

So Ben - Veniste wrote a threatening note, put it by the thermostat, and when Buzhardt returned, Ben - Veniste said, "Oh look Fred, some man in a military uniform left that note. What does it say?"

Buzhardt grew angry after reading it, Ben - Veniste said, and told him that the only way to cool off the room to 68 degrees, as the President requested, was to turn on the air conditioner.

The biggest accomplishment of Watergate, he said, is that the public is now sensitized to the problem of white-collar crime that occurs in all aspects of American life.

Ben - Veniste is modest about succeeding so early in life, and when someone from the audience asked him what is next, he shook his head. One thing is sure: he will not run for any political office.

"Now, I just don't think I could," he said. "I don't have the temperament to get along with people all the time."

Future Watergates predicted

By ROSANNELESS
State News Staff Writer

Watergate was caused by a use of power designed to perpetuate a political organization, thus, in terms of seriousness, there will be other Watergates, said the assistant to special prosecutor Leon Jaworski.

Richard Ben - Veniste, who led the task force that investigated the Watergate cover-up of the Nixon scandals, said rhetorical forces Thursday afternoon with Zolten, MSU associate professor of criminal justice and gubernatorial candidate of the Human Rights party, two legal minds got together to discuss campaign conditions and the marketability of political candidates.

Ben - Veniste began the discussion by saying that "many contributions played a vital role in the unfolding of the whole scandal. The big break for the special prosecutor's office came when it was able to link the dollar bill serial numbers from G. Gordon Liddy to the money from the Cuban burglars, the original five who broke into the Watergate building in June 1972.

It was this connection, and then the discovery of the so-called $350,000 slush fund that H.R. Haldeman was linked to, that was the "most compelling and convincing piece of evidence used to convict the burglars," Ben - Veniste said.

Ferency said the whole political process in this country has "gone awry." This is because the trend in modern American politics is image building and image making.

"Politics is personality-cult oriented," Ferency said. "People want to know what kind of Democrat or Republican you are."

Ferency cited the 1968 marketing concept of heavy advertising that won Richard Nixon the presidency in the same year. He called Nixon's return to national politics, following

Nixon's 1962 denunciation that he was finished, "a comeback just like Lazarus."

This whole chain of events exists because the American electorate has never been issue oriented and lacks a political philosophy, he said.

Ben - Veniste agreed. He said that another major issue that Watergate raised is: does America have the capacity to run on a political ideology?

"Or is it, like John Dean said in March 1972, 'I could sell Wheaties by telling America that everything's OK in the White House?" he said.

Someone in the audience later asked what happened to the Justice Dept., pointing out how in the 1960s the department had men like Robert Kennedy and Ramsey Clark in office.

Ben Veniste said the Justice Dept. had experienced some morale problems, and Ferency added that that is spelled m-o-r-a-l-e.

Ben - Veniste then added that he believes that not everyone in the Nixon White House is immoral and corrupt.

Trustees find job demanding but responsibilities rewarding

By MICHELE BURGEN
State News Staff Writer

There is a rumor going around about the MSU Board of Trustees. They say that the board's eight members come from far-away places once a month to deliberate on University policy and then disappear into oblivion after the Friday board meeting.

It's not quite as simple as all that, says Board Chairman Blanche Martin of East Lansing and Raymond Krolikowski of Birmingham. Being a board member requires hours of preparation before each meeting, and a good deal of ceremonial duty besides the business role.

"I wanted to be involved in some of the things I was interested in here at the University, but I didn't know it would be this much work," said Democrat Martin, an East Lansing dentist and MSU alumnus.

Speaking in his office, his desk and sofa covered with thick packets and papers concerning proposals and other information, Martin pointed to the voluminous materials and said:

"You have to take time and read all of this, at least an hour a day. You've got to keep up or get somebody to brief you in a written statement. I lose two or three days a month preparing for board meetings."

The list of issues with which they must be informed is impressive. They must, for example, be knowledgeable of financial affairs, use of property that is owned by MSU, something of the credentials of prospective department heads and the merit of one policy over a similar policy. They decide which buildings on campus will undergo renovations and, especially significant, who will be the president of the University. Martin estimated part of his job is 60 per cent ceremonial.

MARTIN

Retirement dinners, graduations, speaking engagements and shaking hands are nearly as essential as formulating University policy by maintaining a good rapport with the public. As chairman of the board, he is looked upon as its spokesman but wields no singular power save his one vote.

The task of coordinating meetings of the several board committees is relegated to the chairman, which Martin says can be one of the more tedious chores, since all the board members are professional men and women—lawyers, doctors and what have you—getting hold of committee members to arrange a meeting when all can be present can be a formidable task.

Martin defended the University's closed-door sessions. "Matters of a private nature we discuss are personnel and finance decisions that would be harmed by (premature) public disclosure," he said.

"The people affected by our decisions to hire or selection of awards will want to know before the general public knows."

Krolikowski, one of the two new trustees who took office last Jan. 1, finds that he has to draw a line between the ceremonial functions and his responsibilities as a trustee.

Though the demands have not been overwhelming, he said that with grade school-age children, a thriving law practice and sorting through ample correspondence concerning matters that will come before the board, he must evaluate non-academic requirements of being a trustee.

"I try to minimize those aspects of the job and concentrate on the educational points," he said. "If you respond to every request it could easily interfere (with business and private life), but so far it has not been disruptive at all. You have to reserve that Thursday and Friday (public briefing session and board meeting) of the month and schedule everything around that."

Krolikowski doesn't believe there are prerequisites to being a "good" trustee except open-mindedness.

"You're required to make judgments all the time and therefore shouldn't come into the position with preconceived notions of what a trustee does. "He said. "You are given all the information needed to make those judgments."

Trustees are not paid for their services, though they are reimbursed for traveling and other expenses. In addition, they sometimes received complimentary tickets to athletic events.

Both trustees said they found trustee duty rewarding and even educational. Martin said he is contemplating running for another eight-year term.

"I'd be lost without all these things to do," he said. "It has added a challenge, a new dimension in my life to be able to make contributions to the college community," Krolikowski said of his four-month stint as a trustee.
