

Legal authorities questioning /69 search tactics at Tull show

By MARTY SOMMERNESS State News Staff Writer

Hundreds of Jethro Tull concert-goers were subjected to what may well have been illegal searches by officers of the MSU Dept. of Public Safety (DPS) Sunday evening in Jenison Fieldhouse.

As the crowd filed into the concert site through various entrances, many individuals were stopped and searched by DPS officers.

Legal authorities contacted by the State News questioned the legitimacy of the nower of any law enforcement agency to conduct such searches.

The DPS officers said they weresearching for alcoholic beverages and drugs which they thought the audience members might be carrying. (Such searches have been carried on before at concerts at MSU.) Nevertheless, the attorneys, citing numerous legal precedents, said the concert-goers' civil rights may have been violated by the searches.

"It (such search and seizure techniques) is a violation of civil liberties and constitutional rights," said Zolton Ferency, associate professor of Criminal Justice.

"There are many constitutional grounds on which a charge can be made against this practice," said Ferency, detailing the 1968 precedent-setting decision of the U.S. Supreme Court in the case of Terry versus Ohio. The decision, written by Chief Justice Earl Warren, set protections against arbitrary police searches.

"A search may not be made of an interior garment for contraband other than weapons," unless such a search is done in accordance with an arrest or a search warrant, Ferency said.

If any contraband was found by the police, Ferency said he believed it would have to be excluded as evidence in court, since the material was seized illegally.

"I think it would be clear in any court in this land that those officers don't have any probable cause," Ferency said. "Probable cause is defined to be all of those facts and circumstances that seem to indicate a crime is being committed. Frankly, a young person going into a building to hear a concert would not appear to be probable cause for a search."

"We don't search without probable cause," said Major Adam Zutaut, commander of the DPS.

"Probable cause is established by our experience," Zutaut said. "Why would you carry a big bag to a concert?"

"We weren't arresting, we gave them a choice to leave," Zutaut said. "We don't seize it if they take it back to their car."

State News staff members attending the concert say they observed no such alternatives offered to the members of the audience.

"One of the conditions under University ordinances is they (concert-goers) can't enter with booze. We can use reasonable means to stop them," Zutaut said.

(MSU Ordinance 22.00-1 states "the use of alcoholic beverages is expressly prohibited...within buildings or arenas where athletic events, lectures and concerts are held.")

Ferency said the DPS practice of having male officers pat down female concertgoers, inspect their purses and check the hairstyles of women with long hair, all in search of contraband, which was done

Sunday evening "goes contrary to normal decency

State News staff members at the Jethro Tull concert witnessed bottles and cans of beer, wine bottles and bottles containing hard liquor being confiscated by the police as the audience entered the building. The staff members said they witnessed the searching of people who had no suspicious bulges in their clothing and did not appear intoxicated.

Attorneys agreed that openly displayed contraband was subject to confiscation, but not hidden material.

V. Paul Donnelly, a Detroit attorney, thought the search and seizure issue should be investigated.

"I think the issue is a good issue as to whether they (police) can do it," Donnelly said. After all, you're talking about private property, not criminal offenses.

"It seems to me an over-exertion of police power. I think it's a damned good issue that should be fought," Donnelly said. Phil Dean, an East Lansing attorney, concurred. "The question is, if they (the police) had no concrete reason to believe there was any contraband-no probable cause-then it was an absolutely clear-cut civil rights violation," Dean said.

liquor sales on campus

Imagine going through a hot day of lasses and tests, walking home to your residence hall, dragging upstairs to the cafeteria - and drawing an ice cold beer to help wash down the greasy fare.

The dream might not be as distant from reality as it seems. Senate Bill 642, expected to be voted on this week, would ift the current ban on Universities obtaining liquor licenses, by amending the 1933 Michigan liquor control act.

The bill was defeated 24-8 by the Senate July 8 but is up for reconsideration. If the bill becomes law, not only would students be able to avoid wandering off campus to purchase liquid entertainment, but they could drink with the satisfying knowledge that every glass of beer or wine

An amendment approved July 7 requires that all profits from campus drinking "shall be designated for student scholarship and/or low interest loan programs.

Unfortunately for would-be campus drinkers, an amen dment approved that same day limits universities to one license apiece. If the amendment stays on the final version of the bill, it would probably result in merely a drinking spot in the Union -unless some residence hall lobbied hard for the single campus license.

Sen. Gilbert E. Bursley, R-Ann Arbor, sponsor of the bill, blamed the July defeat on a lack of student support, perhaps because school was out for the summer. "In July, with students away, there was would be helping some poor student to meet no strong support for it," Bursley said. "If they support it this time, it will pass."

A graduate student in economics has made a study of a phenomenon which most off campus students are all too aware: the closer available housing is to the campus, the higher the rent will be. Craig Weaver, a Grand Rapids native

now enrolled in the master's degree ustrial Relations, made the study last November while still an undergraduate majoring in public affairs management. His report, written for an urban economics course, appears in the Fall 1975 edition of the MSU Economist, a journal of prize winning reports dealing with economic problems or analysis.

MSU officials meeting with NCAA in Denver

By LARRY MORGAN and JOE KIRBY State News Sports Writers

A group of MSU officials left for Denver Monday to appear before the NCAA Committee on Infractions to present arguments on alleged recruiting violations by the school.

University officials would not confirm exactly who made the trip to Denver other than President Wharton, Executive Vice President Jack Breslin, and football coach Denny Stolz.

Robert Perrin, vice president in charge of university and federal relations, said he thought former athletic director Burt Smith made the trip but he didn't know which, if any, assistant coaches made the trip

Leland Carr, vice president for legal services (MSU's only full - time attorney). was not in his office Monday and also is believed to have gone west.

The three - day NCAA meeting opened Sunday, but NCAA officials would not even confirm that MSU would be discussed at the meeting.

"I can't mention any names, but we are studying allegations against several schools," said NCAA chief investigator Warren Brown. "It is our policy to wait until an action is taken and upheld before making any announcements."

Brown said if a decision was reached on any violations, a school would be given 15 days from the day it receives notice in writing to appeal the findings of the committee. He said it could be at least three weeks from the date a decision is made before it is made known.

Asked why the meeting was held in Denver instead of Kansas City (NCAA headquarters), an NCAA official would only say that the meetings are often scheduled in different locations around the country.

The fact that MSU was under investigation by the NCAA first came to light April 18, 1975 when Wharton made an announcement at a board of trustees meeting.

At that time Wharton, in a prepared statement to the trustees, said MSU would cooperate fully with the NCAA in their investigation.

"I am directing appropriate officials of the University to study the issues involved and supply me with full information,"

He chose to sample 95 apartments in the East Lansing area, both one and two bedroom furnished and unfurnished dwellings. Comparisons were made only within these categories, that is,, rent for twobedroom furnished apartments was contrasted with other two - bedroom furnished dwellings, and so on.

Weaver opted to use rental rates charged on 12 - month leases, and discounted small price differentials because of such luxuries as air conditioning, dishwashers or swimming pools.

Bessey Hall was selected as the central point on campus which would determine distance. He chose Bessey Hall, he noted in the report, because it is the center of an area with a high density of students and classrooms.

After compiling data for each category, Weaver found that the average rent for furnished apartments drops more rapidly than for unfurnished apartments according to increased distance from campus.

Thus, the rent for a two - bedroom apartment averaged $320 within one - half mile from campus and decreased about $22 each succeeding half mile up to two miles from campus. At four miles away, average rent amounted to $210. The study noted, however, that there was not a significant number of furnished dwellings between two and four miles from campus to include in the data

Poisoning blamed on MSU

By SUE WILLOUGHBY State News Staff Writer

An MSU student has claimed that the University is responsible for her dog eating a cake of rat poison near the main entrance to the library

Marge Halperin, 745 Burcham Drive, said her dog, Splees, was playing on the grounds near the library two weeks ago when she found a cake she described as "smelling like food" in the bushes. Thinking it was part of someone's lunch they had dropped, Halperin allowed the dog to eat the cake. But when Splees found another cake, Halperin became suspicious and took it away from her.

The six-month-old border collie seemed fine until Halperin took her to Benson Animal Clinic to be spayed a week later and the dog began bleeding uncontrollably.

"They asked me if the dog was a hemopheliac (a blood disease where the blood does not clot), but I knew she couldn't be, and I became suspicious," Halperin said.

Many types of rat poison will not kill the animal immediately, but will keep the blood from clotting. The animal will bleed to death if injured in any way.

Splees needed blood transfusions to stop the bleeding, and became quite ill, Halperin said.

Halperin said she talked to an unidentified Department of Public Safety (DPS) official who said the rat poison was put there by the University.

"He said they have it placed all along the river and it was probably theirs," she said.

"I can't believe they just throw that kind of thing around and don't tell anybody," she said. "I feel really ripped off."

But John Haslem, pest control officer for DPS, said that he was sure the area along the river has not been baited with rat poison in at least two months. DPS officials keep close tabs on baiting stations and always remove unused bait after a few weeks, Haslem said.

"I can assure you that there has been no poison set in that area for two months or more," he said. "I can't even remember the last time we baited that area.'

Rat poison is never just randomly thrown into the bushes, but is placed in metal baiting stations, he said. But it is possible that an animal, or even a human could have moved the poison.

"We're very careful about where we put this kind of thing," Haslem said. "In the past we've even refused to use the poison in areas where it might be found by children, dogs and other small animals.

"Pest control is a very technical things," Haslem said. "You can't just go and throw poison around. But we can't control the situation when someone has moved the bait, and we can't check on poison we didn't set."

Halperin said she thoght the poison looked fresh, and claimed that it could be found "all along the river in the bushes."

"I looked at it and I'd never seen anything like it before, but it looked really edibile to me," Halperin said. "It looks like some kind of cookie or cake."

Haslem seemed to think the final responsibility for the dog is with her owner.

"I'd never let an animal of mine eat anything he found on the street," he said.

Broadway musicians end strike

NEW YORK (AP) — Broadway musicians and theater owners ratified a new contract Sunday night, ending a 25 day strike which had darkened a dozen theaters and lost $3.5 million in ticket sales.

The strike, the longest walkout ever to hit the Great White Way, had put hundreds of singers, dancers, barmen and restaurant employes out of work.

Members of Local 802 of the American Federation of Musicians voted 189 to 76 to accept the new contract. A short time later, the League of New York Theaters and Producers endorsed it by unanimous voice votes.

Hunter's fire feeding on winds

EAGLE, Colo. (AP) — High winds continued to fan a raging forest fire that has consumed 3,200 acres of timberland in northwestern Colorado since it broke out on Saturday, a U.S. Forest Service spokesman said.

Nearly 500 fire fighters were called up to help battle the blaze today. The fire, burning out of control in the White River National Forest, was believed to have been started by hunters, the spokesman said.

Torture trial starts in Athens

ATHENS (AP) — A court - martial began Monday for 26 army officers and nine enlisted men charged with torturing opponents of the former military dictatorship. It is the second trial of its kind in a month.

Specific charges include abuse of authority, causing heavy bodily injuries and assaulting superiors. Most of the accused denied the charges, while others accepted "partial responsibility" saying they had acted under orders.

Twelve of the officers were found guilty of torture at an earlier trial and given jail terms ranging from six months to 23 years.

Additional charges were brought against them on the basis of suits filed by persons who claimed to have been plaud the decision of Mexican tortured.

Azevedo's rule openly defied

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) - The radical left's campaign to destroy the unity of Portugal's armed forces gathered momentum Monday as three well-known pro-Communist officers openly defied the government.

The underground "Soldiers United Will Overcome" said the leftist drive was laying groundwork for creation of a Soviet-style state by "preparing the conditions that will permit the destruction of the bourgeois army and the creation of an armed branch of workers' power-the Popular Revolutionary Army," a statement by the movement said.

The announcement came with Prime Minister Jose Pinhiero de Azevedo mounting an effort to convince the country's divided political parties and armed forces to work together to end the country's growing anarchy.

A government communique said the prime minister would make an "important address to the nation" Monday evening at a time of increasing unrest.

Sunday, in a series of anti-government rallies, First Lt. Miguel Judas, a leftist ousted from the military's powerful Revolutonary Council, and Capts. Andrade y Silva and Duran Clemente openly threw their weight behind the mutinous soldiers.

"The organization of the revolutionary soldiers will impede the neo-fascism of the armed forces," Judas told a rally in suburban Cascais.

"The revolutionary soldiers organized within the armed forces are on the march and will create conditions in the short term for the recomposition of political power."

Meanwhile, the campaign to oust Azevedo's month-old

Socialist-dominated government stepped into high gear. Communists organized a surge of anti-government rallies a meeting among rural workers and neighborhood committees

Envoys return to Spain

LONDON (AP) - Ambassadors called home in an outburst of anger at Spain's execution of five terrorists are returning to their Madrid posts as governments ease their protest. But public resentment against the regime of Gen. Francisco Franco simmered Monday in Western Europe. Government leaders and Pope Paul VI had joined in condemnation of the Sept. 27 executions following courts martial that were widely felt to be merely drumhead trials. Fourteen ambassadors were called home or told to prolong their vacations.

Some two weeks later, the ambassadors are nearly all back at their posts in Madrid, and their governments appear to be having second thoughts.

Sadat ratifies death sentences

CAIRO (AP) --- President Anwar Sadat ratified on Sunday death sentences for a Palestinian national and an Egyptian cadet convicted of plotting to overthrow the government. He commuted the execution sentence for a third man to life imprisonment.

The three and 89 other Egyptians were accused of attacking a Cairo technical military academy in April 1974 in a bid to seize weapons for an insurrection. Eleven persons were killed and 27 were wounded in the attack.

The suspects were charged with forming a secret organization to overthrow the government, murder and illegal possession of weapons. An Egyptian state security court last May sentenced the three to die, gave 29 others prison sentences ranging from five years to life and acquitted 60.

Koreas pledge to resume talks

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea agreed Monday to meet with North Korea on Oct. 23 to try to arrange a resumption of Red Cross talks to reunite separated families. South Korea also proposed that political talks between the two governments be resumed. Red Cross representatives from the two Koreas held seven plenary meetings in 1972 - 73 to seek ways to reunite families separated by the division of the Korean peninsula. North Korea has boycotted the talks since August 1973, because of the South Korean government's stringent anti -Communist policies.

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli cargo will pass through the Suez Canal for the first time next week as part of the second Sinai agreement with Egypt, sources close to Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Monday.

children is unique to the many MSU students who are both parent and student and many times the sole financial support of the family. The Married Students Activities Unit Day Care Center on Crescent Road in Spartan Village is a partial solution to the problem for many student parents, though it is not the total answer.

left for a full day of classes

The problem of day care for four and a half years ago as a response to student pleas for a place to leave their children while they attended classes and work. Today it can accommodate 110 children, a number not sufficient to meet the heavy demand, as the center has over 30 children on a waiting list. About 140 children receive day care at the center, some from one month old to five years old and are separated into age group classes. Under - staffed

The center has a staff of 38 full and part - time teachers. About 30 MSU students also help at the center each term for credit in various education and family sciences classes.

Suzanne Franzini, director of attending half day sessions the center, said this number only, so there is never more enables the center to meet the than 110 children in the center state required ratio of one adult for every five children. In some classes of younger children, such as the infant one, the ratio is as low as one adult for every two and a half children.

There are advantages Franzini said that the center has many advantages because of its relationship with the University. The center is under the supervision of the Institute for Family and Child Study and gets much guidance from the people on its staff.

Other colleges also offer professional assistance such as the Psychology Dept., which makes psychologists available to the center and the College of Human Medicine which offers the center a physician on full - time call.

All eight head teachers at the center have degrees and at least two years experience with day care which is rather unique for a day care center, Franzini said.

Needs improvements

Though the center must meet state standards as far as programs and facilities, there are some concerns about the facility, said Kris Guthrie, secretary of the Married Students Union.

Both Franzini and Guthrie said when the center was built it was put up as quickly and cheaply as possible to meet the students' dire needs. Now as age has taken its toll on the facility, the students would like to see improvements made.

Needs money

The problem is money. The University originally put up the down payment for the facility and contributes $10,000 a year to help with the mortgage. The rest of the payments must come from the $6.50 daily fee the center assesses the parents. The center is nonprofit and this money just covers operating expenses, Franzini said.

Nancy Carlson, asst. director of the Institute for Family and Child Sciences, said the University has been fairly responsive to the center's needs though "The city counted the villages as low - income areas when they applied for the funds. It was the villages that helped the city get the funds but now none of those funds will be used here," Guthrie said.

High tuition

Another major concern of the union is the high cost of tuition at the center. Parents pay $6.50 per day which is in line with other area day care centers, but for the average MSU student parent this is often a difficult expense to meet.

Some scholarship money is available from groups like the Council of Graduate Students (COGS) and the Alumni Fund, but there are not enough funds to meet the needs. Parents' groups have held bake sales to benefit the scholarship funds also.

Last year the center had between $1,200 to $1,500 for scholarships which was divided up among eligible families. None of the children had their entire tuition paid, Franzini said.

COGS has about $500 for day care scholarships this term and so far has had about 15 to 20 applications for the aid.

State aid is not much help to most student parents. Only single parents qualify unless one parent is disabled and graduate students do not quality for state aid at all.

The day care center estimates about 25 per cent of the families using the center receive outside aid for tuition fees.

SMSU offers student tenants a hand with survival kits on landlord problems

By CASSANDRA SPRATLING State News Staff Writer

In an effort to acquaint students with the problems that arise hen they move off - campus, ASMSU has purchased 150 survival ts that clarify common off - campus housing problems from the cal Tenants Resource Center (TRC).

The TRC, located at 855 Grove St., offers advice and material to nants with housing problems and has published a kit containing ur booklets with information about the most common problems udents are confronted with once moved off - campus, such as how get security deposits back, eviction, the ins and outs of leasing and hassles with landlords.

The kits can be purchased on a loan basis in the ASMSU Business office, 307 Student Services Bldg. for $1.50. Students can keep the kits for a period of two weeks and their $1.50 will be returned at the end of that two week period.

Joe Mallia, co - director of ASMSU's Legal Services Dept. said the booklets are not meant to take the place of a housing attorney. "Sometimes a problem is just too complex, or too serious, and at that time a lawyer should certainly be consulted," Mallia said. ing goals appears from the depths of bureaucracy. The ASMSU All -University Council's proposal is one of those, and should be hastened through the legislative process with all possible speed, but not before provisions for fiscal control are added.

An all - university council would function much the same as ASMSU cabinets, except the council will serve particular segments of the student population - such as black or women - while cabinets such as Pop Entertainment and Legal Aid will cater to the student population as a whole.

The proposal came out of a summer's work by the Human Relations Commission, which was set up last spring to find a solution to what was viewed as proliferation of special interests and minority demands upon ASMSU.

The problem is clear: ASMSU has long been plagued by a dual role - that of governing in the general student interest and trying at the same time to serve various special interest organizations. What has often resulted could best be characterized as an identity crisis.

The All - University Councils concept would provide a clarification between general and special interests that is direly needed.

Every now and then, one of Perhaps more significant, howthose rare proposals that stand to ever, is that once the proposal is benefit two factions with conflict- enacted it will allow both ASMSU and minority concerns to conduct their respective business without unduly interfering with each other.

Autonomy of the minority councils with regard to ideology, policies and projects is fine and even productive. However, a critical drawback of the entire proposal is its potential for fiscal irresponsibility. Currently, ASMSU gives the Office of Black Affairs what is tantamount to uncontrolled use of over $5,000 of student tax dollars. while budgets of all other organizations are monitored with considerably more scrutiny. Either the privilege should be extended to all organizations, which would be pure idiocy, or it should be granted to nobody.

With this single exception, the All - University Councils proposal is a good one and contains the potential of starting a trend toward improved student government - something MSU has needed for a long time, and something that still may be a long time coming.

In response to Mr. Lengel's assumption (SN, Oct. 7) that the reason for the popularity of downers "could be attributed to the profits of the drug manufacturers," may I say that it wasn't the drug manufacturers that swallowed the pills that made those profits possible, nor was it the manufacturers who reaped the profits made on street sales. Alas! The government has again failed to protect us from our own appetites, and the omnipresent street dealer is still with us, only his prices have changed. And thanks for the tip, Mr. Lengel, I'll never again buy another Roche product, not as long as those snowy white campus chemists are enterprising enough to sell their combination of stolen chemicals at 70 per cent off the street price. After all, I'm subsidizing their operation to the tune of 14 hours.

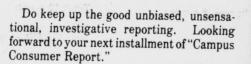

Thank you

I would like to thank those people who stopped to assist me when I was hit by a car while riding my bicycle on Shaw Lane near the Engineering Building, Monday, Oct. 6 at 3 p.m. It sure is nice to know that people who care about other's welfare still exist in this selfish world. Spelling game

I noticed in last Monday's article on the MSU - Notre Dame game the mention of one of MSU's players - Hans Nielson/Nielsen/Neilson.

This spelling guessing game would be excusable if it concerned a Notre Dame player, but I think you should do one of our own players the service of spelling his name correctly.

Tim Nielsen (no relation) 1539 K Spartan Village Editor's note: The correct spelling is Nielsen.

Birth control

The Senate will soon be voting for Senate Bill 339. This bill would allow the teaching of birth control in public schools. It is permissive legislation in that it would allow individual districts to decide whether it is put into effect. Further, it specifies that nonparticipating students shall not be penalized.

According to the Michigan Planned Parenthood Council, young people clearly need this information because: 1) Births to teenagers are increasing both in number and proportion to all births. In 1974, 26,478 live births in Michigan were to women under 19. Forty per cent of those births were illegitimate. 2) 20-25 per cent of teenagers seeking contraceptive care are already pregnant. 3) V.D. is the most common communicable disease in Michigan except for the common cold. 4) Ignorance does not reduce sexual activity: it only promotes unwanted pregnancy. Whether you join me or not in supporting

S.B. 339, write your senator and make him or her aware of your views.

After reading the editorial comment in the Oct. 7 issue of the State News by Terry Wareham, "Boys will be," I am inclined to agree that the blame for their plight is still being placed on females who are rape victims rather than on the males who attack them. This still occurs despite recently passed legislation in Michigan and in other states that is designed to focus more attention on the rapist rather than on the ra victim. Even the outcome of the mu publicized Joan Little case has done little alter traditional attitudes regarding th savage crime.

I don't wish to point a finger at Adam Zutaut, who was recently quoted saying "We hope that people (and] obviously meant women) will learn son thing from these two cases (of rape)" or criticize other law enforcement officials suggest ways for women to guard again rape. IRS life is 'charmed,' but not charming Internal Revenue Service (IRS) Commissioner Donald C. Alexander is feeling picked on. It is a feeling familiar to the ordinary taxpayer. He is being audited these days about "Operation Haven," one of IRS's gaudier exercises in intelligence-gathering, and the kind of thing which Alexander says he has sternly put a stop to. It is for that reason, he protests, that "faceless liars," presumably stymied spooks who resent the retreat, have spread scandalous charges about his handling of the case -which was an attempt to stop Americans from seeking haven in Bahama banks.

Alexander is a small, grey-haired man with a full lower jaw and the manner of a small-town minister with an unruly flock. He confesses their sins and promises reform.

He gives little sermons from time to time about his deep belief in and devotion to the Constitution. He finds it painful to discuss the sordid details of IRS's past transgressions.

He closes his eyes, puts his head back, waves to an assistant to divulge the squalid facts - of which, by the way, there are practically none in the case of Operation Haven.

One of Alexander's assistants was unable to say even whether it has been terminated. He would have to look it up, he said. The man who knows the most has refused to talk. He is still on the payroll.

When Alexander, who was one of Richard Nixon's last appointments, went before the Senate CIA committee, he was pelted with bouquets. The members could hardly remember when they had met a more scrupulous, upright man, one who frowned and shook his head as he spoke of the hellish plots hatched before his time.

But the House Government Operations Committee was markedly less cordial - much more like the kind of people who examine your records and demand the last recorded penny of the maid's Social Security payments. Alexander passed all the hard questions to members of the large entourage he had brought with him. They didn't know the answers, either. He limited himself to homilies about the importance of obeying the law while tracking down tax dodgers.

In Operation Haven, which flourished before Alexander issued his guidelines, little attention was paid to legal niceties. And that is how the IRS ended up in possession of a list of 300 names of haven-seekers.

The list was in a briefcase negligently left in a hotel room in Miami in January 1973 while its owner, a Bahama bank official, dallied with what Rep. Robert Drinan, D-Mass.. delicately called "a blind date," thoughtfully provided for him by the IRS. The contents were removed. photographed by the IRS and replaced, with the owner none the wiser, probably, until just lately. What names are on the list?

asked by Drinan, he replied piously, "They are American citizens. I don't care if they're Mafia or whatever. I

Like other members, Drinan had trouble understanding why the list had lain around for 20 months until a stench arose from it, causing IRS officials to decide it was "tainted" evidence and could not be used to

"This is a document that just doesn't stay in a drawer," said Drinan. "People have a right to know

Nobody could explain. The briefcase contents had been flown immediately to Washington to IRS headquarters and taken to the Justice Department, which has not moved against anyone involved in the illegal windfall.

In July 1975 the IRS finally took up the question of whether or not Project Haven, which is also known as "Project Trade Winds," should go forward. They decided it should, but a month later decided that dissemination of the list of 300 should not. Alexander took no part in the decision - he was out of town at the time - but was briefed about it later.

Chairman Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y., inquired if Alexander might have been protecting the names on the list.

"I categorically deny that," said Alexander, flinging down the little gold pencil he always carries with him, to indicate his indignation. Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., a freshman, taxed Alexander with be ing responsible for making the decision

"Your agency has led a charmed life," Moffett retorted, in a tone that suggested that Alexanders's returns on "Haven" will be subject to further scrutiny.

merica is confused and a little frightand it is groping for myths to sustain President Ford has offered us one in licating the gigantic new FBI building on nsylvania Avenue — commemorating, Edgar Hoover. The nation is creating ther in the extraordinary rediscovery of rry Truman — "Give 'em Hell, Harry!" as nes Whitmore has depicted him simuleously showing in 1500 family movie aters across the nation, held over in ces. Surely this is a psychological sign at the nation is yearning for some kind of ral support or leadership.

et's consider the two men. liest in Washington and you can't miss it million, and its architecture is peoplerepellant. It honors the memory of "a pioneering public servant," president Ford explained; under his director the FBI became "the superior professional organization it is today . . . with the best scientific crime detection facilities to serve the federal government and the American people.'

Hoover, of course, is the man of whom the New York Times editorially said in March that he "tried to destroy Dr. (Martin Luther) King's reputation and his marriage." Offended by some of King's views, Hoover' sent anonymous material to Mrs. King. It wasn't the first time; the FBI's Operation Cointelpro (Counterintelligence Program) was set up specifically to confuse and harass dissident groups using dirty tricks. The FBI sent a spurious, threatening letter in 1969 to a black Baptist minister, Donald W. Jackson, to compel him to quit his civil rights work in Mississippi and return north. Hoover had private files on prominent people; "that fellow' was a master blackmailer; he had a file on Truman. Can anybody doubt that his everybody," former FBI asst. director William Sullivan said.

On the other hand, J. Edgar Hoover was Let's consider Hoover Building is the a money-honest, dedicated bureaucrat, who gest, most expensive and maybe the inspired morale and elan in his beloved organization, which became a symbol of law might well inspire a great nation in time of tween the White House and Capitol. It and order for millions of anxious Amerisupposed to cost $60 million; cost $126 cans. In fact, in many ways, the FBI is a splendid organization - so long as it is kept in control. But the man to whom the huge building is dedicated was not kept under control; presidents feared him; he became an imperial figure. Asking for 1000 additional agents in 1970, he told a startled committee of an alleged plot by "Catholic priests and nuns" to "blow up underground electric conduits," to disrupt the government and to kidnap "a highly placed government official" - Henry Kissinger. This was the charge against Philip and Daniel Berrigan and others, the "Harrisburg Seven." The case, of course, didn't stand up.

Public figures become legends after they die and the myth is more important than the man. President Ford lends his prestige to the Hoover myth, the symbol of law and order, the incorruptible cop, the protector against creepy-crawly dissidents from our community of shared values. It will be interesting to see if the re-sanctified J. Edgar Hoover icon can still do miracles.

So turn to a happier figure, Harry sudden revival is a deep-seated folk yearning for courage, honesty and direction? Harry Truman was a spunky little cuss, a fox-terrier of a man, who deserves to be remembered with affection and who whistle-stop trip that started out in June, 1948, in a 17-car special with a presidential parlor car in back that, under the paint, still showed the name "Ferdinand Magellan." That was the year, you recall, when the press was 75 per cent Republican, when why should they? All the way West his vernacular got thicker, his folksiness greater, as he told about Grandpa's covered wagon to Oregon, and produced an appropriate relative in every area he spoke. To a storm of Republican counterattacks he TRB, a column which appears weekly in the magazine "New Republic," has recently become syndicated. The State News will be printing TRB in the coming weeks on a trial - run basis.

I was along on that famous "nonpolitical"

The column deals with government decisions, political developments, national moods and trends and other topics of current importance.

Walter Winchell broadcast that the official exclaimed at Pocatello, Idaho, "They can't Truman. That was the year that Governor Dewey picked his cabinet in advance and lapsed into banalities. That was the year when the Saturday Evening Post led with a preelection story by Joseph and Stewart Alsop, "What Kind of a President will Dewey Make?"

Press and politicians - we all lived, slept and worked in the same traveling circus. Truman made 16 speeches a day. Theoretically, he was traveling to California to receive an honorary degree. The press relished him although we all knew that he betting odds were 15-to-1 against Harry prove nothing; they ain't got a thing on me!" At Davis, California, he explained to a crowd that he was going down to Berkeley "fur to git me a degree.

In those happier days, when the press threw off copy from stop to stop, writing the final penciled word on yellow telegraph sheets against the hot side of a dusty Pullman, and shouting "Postal!" or "Western!" as the train began to move, a topical song always arose spontaneously from the press car. It was columnist Tom Stokes. I believe, who saw the inner poetic relevance of Truman's two historic comments and was doomed. Nobody threatened his life; produced what I shall always regard as the finest natural couplet in political balladry. The tune was "Oh Susannah" and its growth traced Truman across America. Sample:

"Oh, Grandpaw went to Oregon, the dough was on his knee. Grandpaw went to Oregon, the West Coast fur to see."

"He got himself a partner in Cal-i-forni-ay,

They bought up Sacramento on a lovely summer day."

Chorus: (roared out)

"They can't prove nothin', they ain't got a thing on me, I'm goin' down to Berkeley, fur to git me a degree." It wasn't all cornpone, either. In his fighting acceptance speech in Philadelphia to a yelling crowd at 2:00 in the morning, off the cuff, he announced that he was going to bring the Republican Congress back to a special session, and would ask them to pass laws for a national health program, civil rights legislation, higher minimum wage and social security, and funds "to provide public power and cheap electricity."

Giv 'em hell, Harry! I can still see him holding up and cackling over that Chicago Tribune headline electing Dewey. Somebody to dream about these dispiriting days.

Ian Anderson

No bungle - Tull concert satisfying

By DAVE DIMARTINO State News Reviewer Jethro Tull is not a band for every taste.

Some people loathe the band and say leader Ian Anderson's songwriting skills are virtually nil. Others proclaim that the group's first album, "This Was," is the only tasteful venture Tull has ever produced - thanks largely to the work of guitarist Mick Abrahams who left the band after that point to form the superb Blodwyn Pig. Even loyal followers of "Aqualung" found themselves in the dark after the mysteriously vacuous "Passion Play" was first released. And of course, there are always the loyal Tull fans, who have remained with Ian Anderson through the highs and lows of career. Like the Moody Blues, Jethro Tull has a steadfast following too large to be called a "Cult" and too small to be anything else of major importance.

In concert Sunday night at Jenison Fieldhouse, Ian Anderson and company proved that, despite all rumors to the contrary, they are one of the best rock and roll bands now performing.

The concert was, in every way, spectacular.

Almost every way, actually. Hammersmith, a Canadian rock and roll band now on Mercury Records, opened the show and displayed true mediocrity in its finest form. Luckily, they escaped without an encore, barely making it off the stage before the applause died out.

The Tull show began as Ian Anderson walked, unannounced, onstage. Acoustic guitar in hand, he began to sing "Thick As a Brick." With the spotlight illuminating only Anderson, the rest of the group walked onto Tull's present direction would hardly object to the material performed. Wisely, Anderson is going out of his way to insure that his "Passion Play" blunder might never be repeated. Instead of subjecting an audience to a work that to this day has not been fully "appreciated" or "digested" (Anderson's terms) - as is "Passion Play's" case he performed reliable standards which generally are regarded as Tull's most popular works.

Thus, were performed "Aqualung" and "Thick as a Brick," the predictable "Bungle in the Jungle," and the best parts of the newest "Minstrel in the Gallery." Even "Benefit" and "This Was" were heard from While performing, Anderson engaged in his usual theatrics. and, thankfully, they worked quite well. Certainly a band is always entitled to use zebras, bunnies, dry ice fog and smoke bombs if they can back it all up with solid musical expertise. And, as was shown, Jethro Tull can.

The current Tull - Anderson, guitarist Martin Barre, pianist John Evan, bassist Jeffrey Hammond-Hammond, and drummer Bariemore Barlow -4 is a very strong unit, and despite the lack of any truly distinguished soloists, they do justice to Anderson's admittedly eccentric compositions. While pianist Evan soloed with some half-disguised and choppy Debussy - accompanied by a four-piece string section guitarist Barre managed to come across much stronger, demonstrating that his choice of notes was not as important the stage, and with one electric as the rhythm at which he played them.

Anderson, luckily, did not spend the whole of the evening playing the flute. His clowning and prancing about - and the entire band's for that matter made the concert all the more enjoyable.

The night's only real problem was an acoustical one, which several times was remarked upon by Anderson. Jenison Fieldhouse, by and large, has never been very popular with musicians.

At any rate, there is a new

NEW YORK (AP) - In the window of Hurley's, a fine old Sixth Avenue bar frequented by NBC inmates, there is an old photograph of Jack Paar, taken when he was star of the "Tonight" show.

Parr wrote on the photo, When the boys in the band ask who this is it's time to send them back upstairs."

Tom Snyder's "Tomorrow" show will come downstairs to record Hurley's last night in business.

The show will air Wednesday. By then, workmen already will be taking apart the legendary, 50 - year - old saloon for the new owner, who plans to turn it into what he calls "a real old - fashioned 19th century tavern" featuring steaks and seafood.

It'll be a sharp contrast to the current clientele - scruffy journalists, news producers, photographers and other assorted rascals.

Explosive fire causes unestimated amount of damage at refinery site

PHILADELPHIA (AP) -An explosive oil refinery fire was declared under control Monday afternoon, but flames still licked into the air and more than 200 firemen continued to pour water and foam onto nearby storage tanks. The fires at the Atlantic Richfield Co. (ARCO) refinery on the Schuy-Ikill River were confined to an eight-foot trench filled with pipelines that carry oil from the riverbank to 40 storage tanks. Officials said they did not know the cause of the blaze, had no estimate of damages and were unable to say when the flames would be extinguished or burn themselves out.

Only one serious injury was reported. Mayor Frank L. Rizzo, who had gone to the scene Sunday night after the fire broke out, suffered a broken right thigh when knocked to the ground by a fireman or one of his bodyguards as they rushed to escape one of numerous thundering explosions.

"There was an explosion, flame, a big explosion," said Rizzo, a 6-foot-2, 250-pound former police commissioner.

Explosions hit two BIA offices

PINE RIDGE, S.D. (AP) - A series of explosions damaged two offices of the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA), a tribal courthouse and an electric transformer on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation early Monday, the BIA said.

No injuries were reported. Details of the damage were not immediately known. The buildings were sealed off until bomb squads could search for other explosives.

Robert McMullen, the BIA's supervisor of criminal investigators, said there were at least four blasts beginning about 6

Fire Commissioner Joseph R. Rizzo, the mayor's brother, declared the fire under control around noon Monday.

The fire had been contained to about 500 feet of pipeline leading from the river to a tank which contains about 35,000 barrels of alcohol used in blending gasoline, he said. It was being fed by fuel from an adjacent tank, he added, but the flames prevented firemen from reaching the valves which could shut it off.

There is no entry fee but teams John Breslin, defensive back must pay for games they bowl. who injured his ankle Saturday, erson. It was a cheerful social commentary to be sure, but I think nost of us would have settled for just a plain old sports article, referrably sprinkled with clever insights on the game. (We know e can do it.) I believe, however, that female recording artists do ot belong in a column of this sort unless they sing "Killing Me oftly With King Fu," or some other song with a sports minded heme. Beyond this minor shortcoming, Joe has really done a fine ob stirring up spirit with catchy phrases like "I hope the Spartans vin all the rest of their games this season." I am interested in inding out what state Joe Kirby's mind was in when he wrote the rticle for last Monday. I seriously doubt that it was Michigan.

ompliment, only I'm not sure. I really liked that column, but of ourse, I wrote it. I think female recording artists (particularly inda Ronstadt) do have a place in sports columns. Having seen her beform on stage, I can vouch that she puts on a very athletic performance. I believe Joe Kirby's mind was in the state of Idaho Boise to be exact) when he wrote the column. But remember, he's oung and in love.

I was somewhat amused at Joe Kirby's Oct. 6 "sports" article. He

Not surprisingly, there are quite a few such calculators around, but ours stand apart, and ahead. We started it all when we introduced the world's first scientific pocket calculator back in 1972, and we've shown the way ever since.

The calculators you see here are our newest, the first of our second generation. Both offer you technology you probably won't find in competitive calculators for some time to come, if ever.

solve automatically the countless repetitive problems every science and engineering student faces.

With an HP-25, you enter the keystrokes necessary to solve the problem only once. Thereafter, you just enter the variables and press the Run/Stop key for an almost instant answer accurate to 10 digits.

Before you invest in a lesser machine, by all means do two things: ask your instructors about the calculations their courses require; and see for yourself how effortlessly our calculators handle them.

Sex education bill opposed

By MIKE ARNETT State News Staff Writer

The battle of the stork vs. Dr. Reuben is being taken up and this time in the chambers of the Michigan Senate and centering

SB 399, expected to be voted on this week, would ma number of changes in the law which currently regulates education in public schools. It would allow the discussion contraception and venereal disease, and does not specify prohibit teaching birth control.

But a group called "Happiness of Womanhood" (HOW) distributed a letter to Senators urging defeat of the bill. The letter says the bill would "use the public schools to be about unwanted, radical social changes.'

In a fact sheet distributed to the press by HOW and the Moth Alert Detroit entitled, "Contraception-Another Deception" groups go into more specific reasons for their opposition to SB

The fact-sheet calls the bill a "sexologist's fantasy for population to approximate the second secon control" and states that "family planning' zealots and 'popular control' fanatics all seem to have one major goal-make teaching birth control mandatory for all public school students."

Allowing the state Dept. of Public Health to cooperate establishing sex education guidelines "is like putting the nut bomb in the hands of the enemy," the sheet says.

Sen. Gilbert E. Bursley, R-Ann Arbor, the sponsor of the said Monday the bill is being fought by "the Catholic Church at Fundamentalist groups and the Right-to-Life organization." Bursley said a similar bill was passed by the House and Sen in 1968 but vetoed by former Gov. George Romney.

A number of changes have been added to SB 399 since introduction, primarily to increase the bill's chance of passage. The amendments approved by the Senate change "birth control of the senate change be" birth co to "contraception" on the list of teachable subjects and allow local school district to use its own guidelines instead of the state in the teaching of certain subjects.

In addition, Bursley has offered an amendment which we take "socially deviant sexual behavior" out of the list of teaching subjects. Current law allows such teaching.

SB 399 was defeated 24-13 in July but was scheduled reconsideration Monday. However, Bursley said Monday planned to motion for a delay in the vote so that press appropriations business could be dealt with first.

FIED PRESIDENTA

"He (the police officer conducting unannounced innergarment searches) doesn't have any right to do that at all." Dean said.

The attorneys based their opinions on numerous legal precedents. Wherever an individual may harbor a reasonable 'expectation of privacy," said Earl Warren, "he is entitled to be free from unreasonable governmental intrusion.

"The sole justification of the search in the present situation is the protection of the police officer and others nearby, and it must therefore be confined in scope to an intrusion reasonably designed to discover guns, knives, clubs, or other hidden instruments for the assault of the police officer," said Warren in the decision

The attorneys cited the fourth and fourteenth amendments to the U.S. Constitution as safeguards against search and seizure.

tects persons and their houses from unreasonable searches and seizures. The amendment also states that no search warrants can be issued without proof of probable cause.

Captain Ferman A. Badgley, who was in charge of the 20 DPS men at the concert, said the listeners' civil rights were not violated by the searches. "That's your perception," he said to a State News reporter. "It (alcohol and marijuana) is prohibited. This (confiscation) is done by command" (of Major Zutaut).

Badgley said Sunday was not the first time campus police have confiscated objects at public events.

Since the confiscation routine began, Badgley said, the number of arrests, "trouble inside" and drunk and disorderly people has declined at the events.

The confiscated material is usually destroyed, Badgley said. However, if the seals on John Bruff, D-Fraser, a member of the MSU Board of Trustees; Jacob A. Hoefer, professor of animal husbandry; Charles S. Scarborough, associate professor of natural science; and Frederick D. Williams, professor of history and adjunct professor of military science.

The committee's report to the NCAA answering the allegations was postponed twice during the summer before being scheduled for the Denver meeting this week.

Since the investigation was announced there have been many media stories about persons and incidents allegedly under investigation by the NCAA. Among those were stories about:

•Joe Hunt, a junior defensive back from Toledo, Ohio, who allegedly used an MSU alumni's credit card to purchase over $600 worth of clothing from a local men's store. Howard Weyers, assistant

Ian Anderson's excitement worth Tull fans' hassles Ian Anderson, leader of Jethro Tull, is a man worth watching. He is a man worth waiting for. He is a man worth suffering the obsolesence of creaky barns and creaky barn-like fieldhouses to see — and hear. Anderson, and the rest of the members of Jethro Tull, have a following that has kept with their musical evolution for years. Their fans think nothing of waiting and waiting and waiting - for a good seat or just to be there for the pre-concert excitement. Finally, after the usual lukewarm band, Anderson and his mad friends took the stage and gave his assembled disciples what they had wanted all along - one of the most eccentric acts in rock. - Frank Fox

Uppity Women organize female cyclist

It doesn't bother Catharine Colon to get grease underneath her fingernails anymore. Colon, organizer of a feminist - based motorcycle club for women, says that the language of professional mechanics can be made understandable to anyone.

By CAROLYN FESSLER State News Staff Writer

They might run a person down who calls them "motorcycle mammas," but members of a nationwide organization for female motorcyclists, the Uppity Women, do not ride in packs with chains and blazing emblems on their leather jackets, terrorizing law abiding citizens and independent bikers.

"We are fighting the Hell's Angels image because most women choose to ride so they can be alone," said Catherine Colon, energetic founder of Uppity Women. "We get together for picnics and to help one another out, not to burn rubber and pop wheelies."

Colon, an energetic 40 - year - old, spent last summer touring the United States on her 650cc Triumph to drum up publicity and recruit members for the fledgling organization.

"There's a spirit in women today that says 'I can do anything by myself but I have to do it now so I don't regret not doing it later.' The motorcycle represents this freedom to me, but it can mean backpacking, scuba diving or acting out any suppressed fantasy," Colon said.

Colon's travels and contact with the press brought her over 200 letters from women who felt isolated in their enthusiasm for motorcycles.

"By next spring, in time for the riding season, Uppity Women will have a national women's directory published so that these ladies who think they are isolated will find they are not alone, no matter what part of the country they tour," Colon said.

"That loneliness is there and it can be scary. But I love it."

The directory, broken down by state and city, will list a woman by her first name, phone number and size and make of her motorcycle. A code will designate whether she has tools, garage space, a place to shower and sleep, or just coffee and conversation.

"A woman riding into a strange town can be totally at the mercy of some drunk townie if her bike breaks down," Colon said. "With this directory she can get support from a sister who could tell here where to find a reliable mechanic or a good place to eat and crash.

"Owning a bike is not a requirement for being listed in the directory," she added. "A willingness to extend hospitality and advice is."

No single males will be allowed to join the ranks of the di directory because of what Colon called "inevitable hassles" fact that "they have their own clubs."

Colon has high hopes of eradicating the insecurities may women feel about long - distance touring. In all the 13,000 has racked up on her spotless machine she has yet to en another lone female cyclist. Her eyes light up when talk turn fears and joys of being on the road.

"The only times I was really scared was when it came time with the natural elements like dogs and tornados," so "Weapons? Sure, I carried a jacknife and my mouth, which best weapon of all. I made acquaintances whenever possifellow travelers and town cops, who make really good for Fully aware of the fact that she was an "oddity," Colons she received a far more positive response from women who than men. She described the resentful leers shot at her for men who were trapped behind windshield or gas pumps.

"I have the bike they can't afford because they have a how I'm not in the kitchen, I'm on the road," Colon said. Shep roll a cigarette and grew uncharacteristically somber. "I wanted to tell them, 'Look, I'm not stealing anything in It's okay. It's just that I've freed myself.'

"I guess I want men to see what a woman can do and the they can be comfortable being tender and sensitive," Colon also want women to see what a woman can do, but if the riding a motorcycle 200 miles a day is harder than raising³ they're dead wrong."

Colon's 18 - year - old son — who hitchhiked with her to Columbia and back in 1972 — calls her his "alleged moth encouraged her to buy the bike a year ago.

"My 40th birthday was approaching and the change something exciting presented itself to me, so I bought the Tr I'd been a passenger for too long and I didn't like it becaused control over my life. I'd rather inflict my own pain," she

After surprising some friends with her new bike by smash their front porch, she learned "never to relax until you'ver engine turned off."

One other piece of advice the lady rider had for sister bievelash glue is indispensable for temporarily holding an enfilter in place.
