Registrar forming task force

By MICHELE BURGEN
State News Staff Writer

A task force of students and administrators is being formulated to explore and recommend improvements in the current registration process.

The Student Advisory Council to the Registrar will include about 10 representatives from several campus organizations who will meet with Horace King, University registrar, and administrative and academic personnel.

The group will study ways of improving efficiency to facilitate smoother, faster registration for most students. Specifically, attention will be on records processing and fee payments, King said.

Student leaders will represent such organizations as the Council of Graduate Students, Interfraternity Council, ASMSU, Greek Students Assn., the State News, Student Council, Residence Halls Assn., Athletic Council and Intero-operative Council.

University delegates include, in addition to King, representatives from the business and finance office, members of the Assistant Dean's Group, financial aids, admissions and scholarships and other resource people on campus, King said.

Patrice Lin, undergraduate representative to the Academic Council Steering Committee, sent a letter to King in early September recommending changes in the registration process. Among her suggestions were staggered lunch hours to allow students to continue registration through the lunch hour and overall streamlining of registration steps.

King and Lin met in October and decided on the advisory group to review the enrollment process and consider changes.

Lin said some changes could be incorporated in time for winter term registration in December and January. King also indicated he thought meetings could begin as early as this week, even though not all student representatives have been chosen.

Lin complained of students finding sections on their enrollment cards that they cannot attend for one reason or another.

"People make selections based on professors that have been recommended to them or because of their work schedules," she said. "The computers don't know about these."

The result is that people end up having to drop sections and classes, thus losing money and creating more paper work for the University as well as creating long lines in the class card arena.

She also questioned the necessity of the numerous stations where checkers seemingly scrutinize the same registration cards over and over.

"There's got to be some way of eliminating the duplication of services," she said.

King said that 75 per cent of all students obtain the course schedule exactly as requested during pre-enrollment. Another 10 per cent get the courses they asked for with some computer section changes. About 15 per cent are left with incomplete schedules that need to be resolved in the class card arena.

"But we know that more than 15 per cent go through the arena," King said.

"There are a variety of reasons for this. Some people change their majors, so they need different classes. Others find they have failed a class and have to repeat it. Others get jobs, car pools — these are all reasons for changes."

King said several studies have been made on various registration systems used by other schools. Additionally, ways in which mechanization could be employed have also been studied. Some of these have been utilized while others were dismissed.

"Technology is changing all the time and we can be involved," King said. "The question is, how far can we mechanize? We are restricted in part by the size of the institution."

He said that while almost completely mechanized processes may work well with smaller institutions, a malfunction in one computer for as little as a half hour could throw the system into chaos for the thousands who register each day at MSU.

He did indicate that computerized drops and adds is a workable possibility, thereby eliminating some of the stops students must make to drop or add a class after registration. Computers could be programmed to remove or place students in alternate classes in much the same way they are programmed to make alternate section selections within each course.

King said about 500 persons, including about 100 students, are employed in the various stations to pass out registration cards, check schedules, collect fees, sort cards, direct students to the next step in registration and other functions.

Beginning with winter registration next month additional people will be hired to run more fee collection stations to eliminate congestion. Fee collections will encompass two gymnasiums instead of one, King said. In total, four gymnasiums will be used for registration instead of the usual three during winter, spring and summer enrollment.

'The pistol' complicates East Campus existence

By FRED NEWTON
State News Staff Writer

Meridian Twp. clerk Virginia White calls it "the pistol."

Students living there don't understand it. And campus ticket writers often curse it. "It" is that narrow legal corridor of Meridian Twp. that cuts into the east side of campus — affecting such things as where students vote and where they pay traffic tickets.

In that little corridor are an estimated 3,500-4,000 students living in East Akers and North Hubbard Halls and parts of South Hubbard, McDonell, Holmes and Owen halls.

They are not citizens of East Lansing but Meridian Twp. and are worth an estimated $100,000 yearly to the township in the form of federal and state appropriations based on population.

"Back in the '40s when the University was buying up land on the east side of campus, the city would annex it," said East Lansing City Manager John Patriarche. "Evidently the city never annexed that area."

Because the land is state owned, the area does not pay property taxes, nor does the University pay any special taxes to any community.

But the legal entity the land lies within gets money based on the number of people living there.

"Actually the township doesn't put anything into the area since it is serviced under MSU," said Ingham County Clerk John Whitmyer. "But the township gets the revenues."

Though public officials said there is no concern over annexing the area either way, Township Clerk White said, "Meridian would never give it up unless there was some super trade-off."

Any attempted annexation would have to go through a series of votes, including one by Meridian Twp. to give up the land. The city of East Lansing would also have to accept the area and the MSU Board of Trustees would have to give its approval.

One of the most common problems that comes up in the "pistol" area appears around election time. One student may live in one room in the same dormitory and be required to vote in Meridian Twp., while other students — possibly across the hall — vote in East Lansing.

If the student moves to a different part of the dorm, he must re-register in his new legal area — again even if it is just across the hall.

As far as fire and police protection go, there is an array of mutual East Lansing-MSU-Meridian Twp. agreements to have those services supplied.

In the Meridian section, fires are handled by the East Lansing-MSU fire station near south campus. Most police work is handled by the MSU Dept. of Public Safety (DPS).

A sort of unusual problem, however, has arisen with the DPS employees who issue parking and moving traffic tickets in the area.

According to DPS director Richard Bernitt, when the district court system was established to replace the justice of the peace system, it established the district court according to political boundaries.

What that means is that all tickets given in that "pistol" area must be issued through the 55th district court in Mason. Outside the area they are issued through the 54-B district court in East Lansing.

DPS workers must then be aware of what area they are giving the tickets in — and sometimes that means even within the same parking lot.

"We have little red marks on the concrete so our people know where the legal lines are at," Bernitt said.

The McDonell, Holmes and Akers Hall parking lots fall into this double legal area. "MSU could establish their own ticket violation bureau instead of using the district court ticket forms," Bernitt said. "It would also get the University more revenue."

Even if it can be done legally, University officials have not gotten around to looking at the idea, though Bernitt said it would be a lot more convenient.

Milton Baron, head of MSU Campus Parks and Planning, said he foresees no major problems.

"It makes little difference to the University whether that area is in East Lansing or Meridian," Baron said.

1976 plates on sale now

LANSING — (UPI) — Michigan's 1976 red, white and blue license plates go on sale today at the secretary of state's field offices around the state.

The plates, which carry the slogan "Happy 200th Birthday USA" can also be bought by mail.

Motorists who wish to pick up the Bicentennial plates at any of the secretary of state's 300 field offices will need a prepared mailed application, proof of insurance and the proper amount of money.

Motorists without prepared applications will have to fill out a new one at the office and present their motor vehicle title.

To obtain plates by mail, motorists must return the signed application with a check made out to the Dept. of State.

Mail sales, picking up each year, accounted for more than 800,000 of the more than 6.5 million license tabs sold last year.

LITTER LINES SIDELINES

Cleaners take on stadium

By JUDY PHILLIPS

The stadium stands tranquil and empty. Dull and lifeless without its massive crowds, it is unusually quiet.

Fall frost lies thick on its benches. Invisible fingers of the wind gently pick up long streams of paper and ripple them across the turf.

Discarded bottles act as prisms to catch the rays of the morning sun and reflect them in every direction.

The littered stadium is not completely deserted, however. About 20 people begin to assemble at a section entrance. An occasional laugh pierces the air as they rib each other.

These people belong to the Arnold Air Society, an honorary military group under the direction of Tom Kilborn, and to Angel Flight, a voluntary civilian group under the direction of Mary Wilhelm.

Directed by Tom Klein, the two groups clean the stadium every week as a fund-raising activity. Money raised from this project, approximately $350 per game, is used to sponsor special service activities such as blood drives and trips to convalescent and state homes.

In addition to special projects, they also organize "dining-outs" where the two groups get together and enjoy a special dinner.

Mary Kremski explains why she is a member of Angel Flight. "It's really enjoyable," she said with a smile. "I work and carry 17 credits but I still have time for this because I really enjoy it," she explained glancing around the stadium.

Wilhelm grinned as she ran her gloved finger across the frosted benches and said, "Well the upper decks don't look too bad, but there'll be no sittin' down today!"

"Let's get started," suggested Mike Wren. Underneath the stands in a heated room they grab pairs of gloves, angle brooms over shoulders and set out to opposite sides of the field.

Wren takes the leadership for one side of the field. His crew progresses one row at a time. The crisp morning air nips at them, reddening their faces. Rumbling in protests, the cans and bottles grate along the cement as they are pushed into the aisles.

Jackets come off as the afternoon sun warms the air. After three hours of sweeping and a 15-minute break they are back to work picking up everything. According to Kilborn, everything means "anything larger than a matchbox."

"Ever try to pick up a million of these things?" Wilhelm asks, pointing to a pop top. "When I'm at a game I just tell people to put 'em in their pockets. When you see confetti fly you just cringe," she added.

"If the end zones aren't full we can zip right through them," Clair Overly pointed out, yet the volume of litter seems overwhelming. As Veron P. Hill III explained, "There are about 13 miles of seats in here." Sometimes each row will fill up over five garbage cans with trash.

Kilborn is determined to get the job done. "Come on people, don't slow down now," he (continued on page 12)

Rail strike postponed again

WASHINGTON (AP) — A national strike deadline by four railroad shopcraft unions has been postponed again, this time until Dec. 4, federal officials said.

The federal mediators said the postponement was decided upon early Sunday, averting a strike that had been scheduled to begin on Tuesday.

In the meantime, President Ford will request his emergency board to interpret its earlier recommendations on the key issue of the railroad's subcontracting work rather than having it done in their own shops.

A settlement recommended by the presidential board was endorsed by both management and union negotiators, but it was interpreted differently by each side, so all parties agreed to seek clarification.

Record national debt limit set

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford has signed a bill raising the national debt limit to a record $595 billion. Without approval of the increase in the debt limit, the legal ceiling would have plunged to $400 billion Saturday, leaving the government unable to pay its bills.

The new ceiling is effective until March 15. It replaces a temporary $577 billion ceiling which was to expire at midnight.

Congress gave final approval to the ceiling increase on Thursday and Ford signed it this weekend.

Cities form alliance in defense

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Representatives of 33 cities have formed a national organization to combat psychological fallout they envision for municipal bonds if New York City defaults.

A seven-member board of directors was chosen for the new National Alliance of Financially Responsible Local Governments at the meeting in Wichita this weekend. The interim board was charged with refining requirements for membership and contacting potential members.

Those who responded to an invitation to study such an alliance agreed that cities who want to join must have balanced budgets, strict debt controls and uniform accounting procedures.

Machinery keeps Franco alive

MADRID (AP) — General Francisco Franco remained in very grave condition Sunday as Spanish newspapers debated whether it was humane to continue keeping him alive by artificial means.

His life was dependent on coagulants, a kidney machine, an artificial respirator and the combined efforts of 26 physicians.

Press commentators questioned the humanity of keeping the general alive since power has already been vested temporarily in his chosen successor, Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon, whose future as Spain's king is assured constitutionally.

Protesters fill Lisbon's square

LISBON (AP) — Thousands of Communist-led demonstrators filled Lisbon's biggest downtown square Sunday to call for the downfall of the government, but there was no sign of the coup attempt Socialist leaders had said was imminent.

The more than 30,000 people who overflowed the dockside Praca de Comercio chanted wildly for the return to power of pro-Communist Gen. Vasco Goncalves, replaced as premier two months ago.

"Vasco, Vasco, Vasco will return," the crowd chanted fervently.

The demonstrators sang the Portuguese national anthem and the "Internationale," the Communist hymn, before dispersing peacefully.

Regional languages legalized

MADRID (AP) — The government legalized regional languages in Spain Saturday, returning to about one-third of the nation's population a cultural heritage that had been banned for 36 years.

Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon, acting head of state, signed a decree giving Basques, Catalans, Galicians, Valencians and others the right to speak and write their native tongues without fear of prosecution for the first time since the Spanish Civil War ended in 1939.

The law was in the works before the 37-year-old prince took temporary power Oct. 30, but his signature on the decree was seen as marking a personal political victory and perhaps leading to an easing of tension with dissident Spanish ethnic groups, such as the Basques.

Israel objects to conference

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel has told the United States it objects to attending the Geneva Mideast peace conference if the Palestine Liberation Organization is invited to take part, it was announced Sunday.

Israel also insists that Syria renew the mandate of the UN buffer force on the Golan Heights before the peace conference is called into session, said a communique following a cabinet meeting.

The communique said Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin informed the cabinet of this position after the Soviet Union asked Washington to reconvene the conference with the participation of the PLO.

The Israeli statement stopped short of an outright refusal to attend the conference if the PLO is invited. Israeli officials say privately that the Palestinians could attend as members of the Jordanian delegation. Some observers here see a possibility of compromise if the guerrilla movement recognizes Israel and renounces the use of force.

Lawyers to review Ford list

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of a lawyer's committee screening possible Supreme Court nominees indicated Sunday the committee would confine itself to considering the names submitted by the Ford Administration.

"We would be very reluctant to add other names because it could compromise our efforts to evaluate the existing names," Warren Christopher of Los Angeles told reporters. Christopher heads the Federal Judiciary Committee of the American Bar Assn. reviewing possible nominees for the court vacancy left by the retirement of Justice William O. Douglas.

The chairman talked to newsmen during a lunch break as the committee began its deliberations here less than 90 hours after receiving a list of potential nominees from Atty. Gen. Edward Levi.

In submitting the list, Levi invited the ABA to come up with suggestions of its own.

Christopher said the committee hoped to make a preliminary report to the attorney general in the next day or two.

The chairman said the committee would not exclude a person because his principal background was in the political arena, but was looking primarily for "exceptional experience of a professional or legal character."

Christopher said the list submitted by Levi was "a good one which was responsibly drawn." He declined to say how many names were on it, identify any of them or say whether they included women.

The 12-member committee was joined by four former chairmen and a former member when they convened at the ABA's Washington office.

Ford hopes to announce a nominee before he leaves next week on a trip to China.

The retirement of Douglas, 77, who was suffering severe pain from a stroke, was announced Wednesday.

The Administration quickly disclosed that it would resume seeking the advice of the ABA committee. Former President Richard M. Nixon discontinued the practice in 1970 after adverse ratings which the committee gave to two of his nominees were leaked to the press.

The committee, which also screens nominees for lower federal courts, rates potential judicial appointees on the basis of legal competence, judicial temperament and integrity. The ABA says ideology is not considered.

Nominees are rated "not qualified," "qualified" or "highly acceptable."

The committee consists of a chairman plus a representative from each of the 11 federal judicial circuits.

Reportedly on the list submitted by Levi were: Asst. Senate Republican Leader Robert P. Griffin of Michigan; Rep. Charles E. Wiggins of California, the ranking Republican on the House Judiciary Committee; Solicitor General Robert H. Bork; Vincent McCusick, a Portland, Maine, attorney who is an editor of the American Bar Journal; Dallin Oaks, a former law school professor now president of Brigham Young University, and six federal appeals court judges.

Presidential Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford would necessarily be confined to a list in making his selection. He has said he will consider candidates including Carl H. Hills, secretary of Housing Urban Development, and North Carolina Supreme Court Justice Susie Sharp. Shirley Hufstader of Los Angeles, a judge of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of appeals, has also been mentioned.

Conservative predicted to join Supreme Court

By MICHELE BURGEN
State News Staff Writer

An MSU professor of political science predicts President Ford will nominate a conservative to fill the spot on the U.S. Supreme Court vacated by retiring Justice William O. Douglas.

Harold Spaeth, who has made successful computerized predictions of decisions of the high court in recent years, said that a conservative "would be the most rational decision for Ford to make."

He said that such an action would perpetuate the conservatism on the court, a trend that began during the Nixon years. He said two candidates might be Robert Bork, U.S. solicitor general, or Sen. Robert Griffin, R-Mich.

Justice Douglas stepped down from the high court last Wednesday because of ill health, ending more than 36 years of tenure. He served longer than any other man on the court.

Douglas, 77, suffered a stroke Dec. 31 and has been in and out of hospitals since then.

Speculation about the next justice includes such prospects as Carla Hills, secretary of Housing and Urban Development; Atty. General Edward Levi; Shirley Hufstader, a federal appeals court judge in Los Angeles; Secretary of Transportation William Coleman Jr.; and federal judge Cornelia Kennedy.

Spaeth said he doubts that a woman would be picked to fill the vacancy because likely female candidates are either liberals or moderates.

Michigan Supreme Court Justice Mary Coleman is the only woman who might come close to approximating Ford's conservatism, Spaeth said, but even she is less conservative than either Bork or Griffin.

As of Sunday afternoon the White House had given no word on Ford's likely nomination. The appointment will be subject to confirmation by Senate.

A conservative appointment would mean five of the justices with conservative sympathies on the high court. The others are two liberals and two moderates.

Economic summit sets new guidelines

RAMBOUILLET, France (AP) — President Ford and other leaders at the six-nation economic summit conference reached tentative agreement Sunday on new guidelines for world trade and currency exchange rates. The United States described the talks as "extraordinarily fruitful."

However, strong opposition developed to a proposal by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to transform the summit into a high-level group that will meet regularly to consider world economic problems.

A spokesman for the West German delegation said Chancellor Helmut Schmidt spoke against the Kissinger plan, though he did agree to occasional meetings as problems arise.

Notwithstanding this setback, however, the American delegation said "good progress was being made" and it appeared that President Ford and the leaders of Germany, Britain, Japan, France and Italy would cover the entire agenda Sunday with still a third meeting day remaining today.

Secretary of the Treasury William E. Simon and finance ministers of the five other nations met separately Sunday morning and agreed to issue a joint statement at the end of the meeting to be known as the "Rambouillet Manifesto."

The French-initiated summit was called to discuss monetary problems, inflation and the worldwide economic downturn, but the most that was expected to come out of it was a series of policy guidelines that individual nations could follow.

A German spokesman said the finance ministers, following up talks by the heads of government, tentatively agreed that their nations should smooth over sharp-up-and-down fluctuations in the value of their currencies.

ject to confirmation by Senate.

A conservative appointment would mean five of the justices with conservative sympathies on the high court. The others are two liberals and two moderates.

Congress will consider defense budget, tax cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense spending and tax cuts are on the congressional calendar this week, while efforts continue to find a way to help New York City with its financial problems.

The Senate hopes to complete action Tuesday on a bill appropriating $112.6 billion for defense for the 15-month period that began July 1.

The House expects to take up a measure that makes permanent some temporary tax reductions and creates new ones. The biggest benefit to individual taxpayers would be a $12.7 billion plan to make permanent the 1975 law's temporary hikes in minimum and maximum standard deductions.

Either the Senate or the House could call up legislation aimed at helping New York City avert bankruptcy by providing federal guarantees for the city's bonds.

Meanwhile, a conference committee of the House and Senate will work on the version of an energy bill.

ABC's Rivera comes to college to look at MSU student lifestyles

By KAT BROWN
Amid the cheering and yelling for the Spartan 11 at the MSU-Northwestern game Saturday, fans were also heard echoing cries of, "Hey, isn't that Geraldo Rivera down on the field?"

The answer was "yes" as Rivera, co-host of the morning network television news-talk show "Good Morning America," walked around the field with his crew interviewing students and fans and filming part of the game for a special on what college life is like for ABC-TV. "Campus life is pretty much the same as when I went to school," he said. "I went to several universities but I graduated from the University of Arizona in 1965."

Rivera said he originally wanted to do the show at a Big Ten school and he finally chose MSU because one of his staff members is a student here.

Wearing faded blue jeans and a dark brown leather jacket, Rivera's curly, medium-length hair blew in the hard wind as he enjoyed the game. As he sat on the wall of the field, several people approached him and introduced themselves while trying to get a glimpse of what the famous man is like. Rivera talked with them all as if he were back at school.

"I like football—especially pro football," he said. "But it's more interesting when you have a team to cheer for, like your hometown team."

Rivera and his crew arrived in East Lansing and spent the weekend at MSU interviewing students and faculty on a wide range of topics, including the political climate on campus, the idea of lifelong learning caused by the current job market and campus living alternatives.

He said that he went to several parties on campus, visiting Snyder-Phillips and Wilson Halls Friday night. He also made the rounds at the local bars, getting a taste of MSU's drinking crowd.

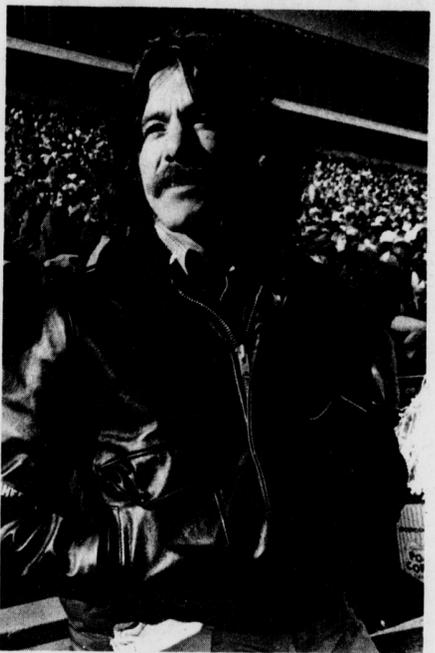

When asked what he wants to do with his life, Rivera said, "I would like to teach sometime." He added with a smile, "I want to win the Pulitzer Prize."

Rivera recently returned from Alaska where he was talking with oil workers. That will be one of the upcoming shows on "Good Morning America" along with the MSU special which will be aired in a couple of months.

Along with co-hosting "Good Morning America" three times a week, Rivera will resume his job as the moderator of "Good Night America," ABC-TV's late-night talk show, which will reappear in January.

Four newly-elected Lansing and East Lansing officials joined local United Farm Workers (UFW) regulars Saturday afternoon at Meijer's Thrifty Acres to picket for a boycott of nonunion grapes, lettuce and Gallo wine.
East Lansing Mayor George Griffiths (pictured, right) and councilman Larry Owen were accompanied by newly-elected Lansing city councilmembers Robert Hull and Richard Baker (pictured, left) at the march in the Meijer's parking lot, holding signs and chanting "If it doesn't have an eagle on it, don't buy it!" The eagle is a symbol of UFW produce.

The march was organized by local UFW members so city officials could demonstrate their support for the UFW cause.

Dating sponsor to remain on job

Ken Rosenbaum, the young man who successfully pioneered ASMSU's computer dating service, has decided to continue with the dating program despite what he termed "lack of cooperation from members of the ASMSU board."
Rosenbaum said he reconsidered his situation and decided that "just because Brian (ASMSU president) wants to play politics and political games doesn't mean the students have to lose out."

He was removed from his office in 332 Student Services Bldg. last Tuesday by ASMSU President Brian Raymond and ASMSU Comptroller Barb Paulus for reasons that are not yet clear.

"I promised this weekend was going to be a good time and I plan to live up to that promise," Rosenbaum said.

Rosenbaum is referring to the activities he has planned for computer daters this Thursday through Saturday. A host of activities have been scheduled at area bars at discount prices for computer daters. A midnight movie, "Harold and Maude," is also planned that weekend for 25 cents in 108B Wells.

Persons who signed up with the service are supposed to receive their matches in the mail Wednesday.

Rosenbaum said he will be working out of his home from now on.

Correction

In Friday's edition of the State News, Don Rosenberg was identified in the story concerning the trial of William Peltes vs. Tim Cain as co-counsel for the defense. Rosenberg was actually co-counsel for the complainant.

DPS tones down searches for Spinners performance

By MARTY SOMMERNESS
State News Staff Writer
Despite the failure of ASMSU representatives and Dept. of Safety (DPS) officials to come to a finalized agreement limiting concert search policies, campus police appeared to take a key approach to security Thursday evening at the Munn arena appearance of the Pointer Sisters and the Spinners.
DPS officers at the Ebony Productions - sponsored event, who near the entrances to the arena, spent most of their time lining the audience file past the crowded turnstiles.
Additional directions as to where to find certain seating areas, concession stands or restroom facilities had replaced the usual search and seizure procedures of recent pop concerts.
DPS came under fire after a State News investigation into its police search and seizure practices at the Jethro Tull concert in Jenison Fieldhouse Oct. 12. As a result of the investigation, legal authorities questioned the officer's "probable cause" for the searches and the legality of such actions.
Another consequence of the search and seizure controversy was threatened lawsuit against DPS by ASMSU and Pop Entertainment to stop the searches.
As a result of a meeting Oct. 16 between ASMSU representatives, MSU officials and members of the DPS, it was agreed that the campus police would put their search policy in writing and it would be examined by all parties.

As a precaution until the written policy was developed, ASMSU legal services had eight observers at the Oct. 22 Loggins and Messina concert in Jenison Field house watching the actions of the campus police.
At the Loggins and Messina concert, the DPS officers in attendance took a restrained approach to searches in comparison to the Jethro Tull concert.
Between the Loggins and Messina Concert and the Pointer Sisters and Spinners concert, the DPS put its concert search policy in writing and submitted it to the other parties involved for consideration.
ASMSU president Brian Raymond, who had earlier said he hoped the search policy differences could be ironed out before the Ebony sponsored concert, said last week that the proposed DPS policy had been returned to the campus policy with recommendations for changes by an ad hoc ASMSU committee.
"We deleted certain parts (of the written search policy) we thought were unconstitutional, while realizing the need for protecting the students at the concert," Raymond said, noting that a meeting between ASMSU representatives, DPS officials and MSU administrators will be held about the policy this week.

'Squeaky' turns court into circus

U.S. District Court Judge Thomas MacBride has the awesome task of presiding over the trial of Lynette Fromme, accused of attempting to assassinate the president. His job has presently been reduced from that of a serious man of law to ringmaster of a circus. Twice already he has been forced to eject Ms. Fromme from the courtroom for her disturbances. While he tries to keep order in the court she insists on behaving like little more than a hyperactive, disobedient child. He has asked her to promise not to disturb her own trial and she has refused. He has properly provided a closed circuit television for her so that she may watch the trial in a room adjacent to her courthouse cell. She has refused this, too.

In the light of the evidence, many may view the trial itself as a farfarcical, but necessary, proceeding. We may laugh at Ms. Fromme's disruptions and at the red cloth which veils her eyes.

Aside from the fact that Ms. Fromme's behavior is an obvious indication of her maturity — or lack of it — her actions reflect on the validity of her defense, the reputed Manson "cause." She is, in short, her own worst enemy.

It is Judge MacBride's responsibility to save her from herself. And, more importantly, to uphold the respectability of his court and of the law. He, and others like him, deserve our patience and respect.

Rise in jobless rate no cause for alarm

Though unemployment has risen by a surprising .3 per cent this month, upon reflection we have no real cause to panic.

This particular increase in unemployment is due entirely to an increase in the labor force participation. Simply put, more people — particularly women — are looking for jobs than were job hunting last month.

This .3 per cent increase, then, is not due to less employment. In fact, employment remained steady over the month.

The present rise has come as a surprise; neither the Administration nor outsiders expected it. It was unexpected because this quarter showed the greatest increase in national product in the last 20 years; such increases are usually strong and real signs of economic recovery.

Furthermore, this recession is unlike any other since World War II. Usually people become discouraged during a recession and are driven away from the labor market. At the end of the recession those people who left the labor market return.

But this time few workers withdrew from the job market. Thus, it is odd that so many are presently joining the hunt for jobs.

Moreover, less publicized but possibly more significant statistics, such as the declines in both long term (over 27 weeks) unemployment and in the average duration of unemployment for individuals, indicate that the recovery has not been reversed.

The economy is in sad shape, as anyone afflicted with the still high inflation rate or the recession-level unemployment can testify.

There is, however, no reason to become more alarmed as a result of the superficially disheartening October statistics.

There is, nevertheless, a possible long term difficulty which is hinted by the October results. It seems that the recent trend toward a higher proportion of the population wanting work is accelerating. With more people hunting for jobs, it will be increasingly difficult to hold unemployment rates down.

Obviously, more investment in job-producing activities is needed — not simply as an anti-recession move, but as a long-term policy. Unfortunately, the United States has the lowest rate of investment in the industrial world.

Economic policymakers must look beyond countercyclical monetary and fiscal policy to longer range incentives for greater investment and employment. If they do not, we will face chronic unemployment far in excess of the natural rate of 4 or 4.5 per cent.

Not reacting to the long range implications in labor force behavior or overreacting to the phony one-month rise in the measured unemployment rate: these represent the Scylla and Charybdis of current economic planning.

"I PUT ALL THE PIECES TOGETHER AND THEY FITTED EXCELLENTLY!"

Justice depends on

President Ford in coming days will perform one of the most significant duties required of any president: that of selecting a Supreme Court justice.

Given the proximity this particular selection has to election time, the president's choice is an even more noteworthy one.

The object is to search for the most qualified individual for the post recently vacated by William O. Douglas. Such an individual must be sensitive not only to the components of the American democratic system, but also the spirit of civil rights it is rooted in.

In doing so, Mr. Ford must be seating somebody on the virtue of pacifying the electorate or sing party bosses.

The appointment of a woman to the court would indicate that the issue of equality is indeed more than mere verbiage, such a choice must still be made on the basis of being the best person for the job and not on the basis of being a woman.

As one of the indicators of a able and insightful president, Ford's choice shall determine only his quality as a president, also his integrity as a man.

Editorials are the opinions of the State News. Viewpoints, columns and letters are personal opinions.

One of the more bizarre, visible consequences of Gerald Ford's Sabbath putsch has been the rehabilitation of William E. Colby, the still-director of the CIA.

Colby's sacking on a Sunday made him a martyr in some circles. His acceptance of reinstatement the following Wednesday gave him points for sainthood.

At CIA headquarters, his cautious confidences to two congressional investigating committees had caused fanatics to regard him as a traitor. But last Wednesday, when he appeared at an awards ceremony at Langley, Colby received a standing ovation of five minutes — surely the first in a long career of frosty, spooky professionalism.

The next day, Chairman Otis Pike of the House Select Intelligence Committee, who has been quizzing Colby for months, to limited avail, felt obliged to answer White House whispers that Colby was a flap-lip who had to be fitted with cement shoes for the good of the agency.

He gave Colby a character recommendation of sorts, one of several that have come Colby's way in recent days.

"If you are asked precisely the right question, you will give an honest answer," Pike told Colby. "You do not lead us to those areas which would help us to know what the right question was to ask. You do not make it easy for us to ask the right question. . . . You have done a very responsible job for your agency at a time when your agency had a great problem." The applause at Langley would seem delayed endorsement of the Colby approach.

Colby is now hearing huzzahs

Whatever he had in mind when he put the black mark beside Colby's name, Gerald Ford, a "fly-now-pay-later" type executive, obviously did not intend to make him a sentimental figure.

Exactly what he expected to accomplish — beyond inviting Congress to accuse him of coverup — is as mysterious as anything ever done by Colby's agency. Congress plainly did not figure in his calculations. Neither his counsel Philip Buchen, nor congressional liaison John Marsh, who are monitoring the investigations for the White House, were consulted, before the star witness was relieved of his portfolio.

Colby was, in any case, slated for "elimination," as the agency puts it, in a reformed and reorganized CIA.

His firing does not fit in with Ford's notorious solicitude for the agency. The CIA has weathered the worst.

Said one Democratic congressman, "Congress was not about to abolish the agency, not even the concept of covert operations."

This has led to conjecture that if the agency is out of danger, two favored Ford officials, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and former CIA Director Richard Helms, are not. The theory, which is not without gangland flavor, is that Helms knows a lot about Kissinger and that Colby, who knows a lot about them both, was better off the scene.

Colby won Helms' enmity by taking the minimal step of submitting to the Justice Dept. the record of Helms' contradictory statements about outrageous secret activities undertaken during his tenure. Justice has not acted. Helms is still ambassador to Iran.

Another, less sinister, more global theory is also advanced. It was done for the benefit of the Russians and the Chinese. Once hard-liner James Schlesinger was dumped to appease Moscow in preparation for SALT II. Colby had to go, so he could be replaced by George Bush, our man in Peking, who is one of Ford's guys.

Supposedly, the Chinese would be soothed by the presence of Bush, one of Ford's guys, in the secret agency, knowing, it is said, he would give the proper slant to his analysis of incoming intelligence.

The naming of Bush has sent the demoralized spooks into new furies. He is a pleasant man, whose life has been devoted to the practice of partisan Republican politics. The fact that the President offered him as a vice-presidential prospect makes it even more galling.

"Why didn't he name Agnew?" growled one infuriated Langleyite. "He's also been vice president."

The simplest explanation of the shakeup was that Gerald Ford was lining things up for a repetition of Richard Nixon's triumphant 1972 campaign talk with one arm around Mao and the other around Brezhnev. He wasn't even that good of Colby when he set about arranging Colby cannot be entirely dismayed. He is a hard-eyed professional, who has blinched nothing in line of duty, he doubtless expected to hear huzzahs. He has given Ford to thank for that.

LETTERS To the Editor

Should we moralize physics?

Is that slender computer nude on a stool still hanging herself in the Physics office? Is someone complaining about colored prints of clothless girls pasted on the enclosed walls of a professor's office? Now that physics has been "legalized" and "rated X," who will "moralize" physics?

Peppermint secretaries who do not smile confine themselves with the others in the old, dark halls; bumper stickers are emblazoned on the drably colored walls of the office; and finally, "The Kiss" haunts passersby. Who will rescue these wanderers? Will the geologist lithify them with his sediment of goodness? Might the chemist vaporize their knobby mass of oldness?

Physics has long been a favorite criticism of people who say it is for "eggheads" who are cold and inhuman, always designing rockets and bombs that will leave the air smelly from incinerated human substance. Today the physics dept. at MSU has an opportunity and obligation to free itself from the misconception by people. The pioneering pursuit of logic found in physics must be matched by ethics that house that logic.

VIEWPOINT: ZIONISM

UN action correct

The governments of the United States and Western Europe (excluding Portugal) were appalled at the latest UN resolutions granting the Palestinians the right to return home and the one equating Zionism as racist. These governments are even speaking about withdrawing from the UN body.

Actually what is happening presently in the United Nations is it is correcting grave crimes it committed in the past. Today more independent and sovereign nations are represented in the world body than ever before, whereas in the early years of its existence the UN was controlled by the big Western powers who could care less about Third World people. In fact, most of the Third World was controlled and exploited by these Western Powers.

Britain was colonizing one-sixth of the world at one time. France was busy murdering Algerians and Indochinese to retain its empire. The "democratic" government of our country was even denying black people their humanitarian rights mentioned in the Declaration of Independence.

This was the mentality the West was in when they passed in 1948 a resolution creating and recognizing Israel — a state that would represent Western interests in the area. They could care less about the one million Palestinians they displaced and made homeless. In 1948 the Palestinians and their supporters were not represented in the UN — they were still colonies.

If Zionism were not racist, then why does it deny the Palestinians the right to return to their homes in Haifa, Jaffa and elsewhere in Palestine while a Russian or American Jew has that right?

The claim by the Zionists that the latest UN resolution was anti-Semitic is unjustified because the Palestinians are Semites. If the Zionists were revolted and truly cared about the welfare of Jewish people, they should have stayed in Europe and fought the racists and Semites there. Instead, they chose to oppress another people, the Palestinians.

I have one last word for the representatives of our government in the UN. Nations, Mr. D. Pat Moynihan, as well as the representatives of the other Western governments in the UN. If your governments are truly concerned about why do they retain fraternal relations with the white-racist regimes in South Africa and Rhodesia, the sister colonial state of Israel?

Pleased with MSU until today

I am a transfer student who has been extremely pleased with MSU until a recent happening.

A group of friends who enjoy ice skating went over to the old ice arena recently. We were greeted at the door by a young lady who told us that the admission was $1. After paying the $1 we found that it was 50 cents with an MSU ID. The sign stating that skating was 50 cents with an MSU ID was not in full view.

Even after showing our ID's we did not get our 50 cents back. This was a drag, especially if you do laundry on Monday or enjoy eating a Sunday evening meal. We were also told that skate sharpening takes three to four minutes. By the time the skates were sharpened, 15 minutes of precious ice time had elapsed. Even a 10-year-old boy I talked to had to wait a dollar for an hour and a half of skating. At least 15 minutes of this time is taken to resurface the ice.

Is this fair? I hardly think so. It's just bad that an event like this had to happen. I will go on to say that everyone's good time skating and only a few people's no broken bones.

Disney's Darlene recalls Mouse Club life

Darlene Gillespie

By JEROME MCGUIRE
State News Staff Writer

"I feel like a recycled beer can," once and probably forever mouseketeer Darlene Gillespie said Saturday night at MSU about her role lecturing across the country about Walt Disney, the 50s and the Mouseketeer Club.

Like most recycling efforts on campus lately, Darlene's appearance drew talk but little action. Only 30 people paid $2 to see old mouseketeer clips of Annette Funicello's "bumpy sweater." But the 30 who showed up impressed Darlene with their knowledge of the old

TV show, "The Mickey Mouse Club."

"What happened Monday?" asked Darlene. When the correct answer was called back from the audience Darlene seemed genuinely surprised. "Boy you're a sharp group."

Darlene, who is now a child-raising surgical nurse in Los Angeles, was friendly with the crowd and succeeded in entertaining them. Despite the small crowd, she displayed just the right amount of nerves to propel her show.

In a pre-talk interview she kept looking out at the screen to see how much time was left

"There was one producer assigned to check if your sweater kept bouncing after your dance was over. Who ever heard of a Mouseketeer with boobs? After Annette blossomed and the fan mail stayed so high it was all right to have boobs. People would write in 'I like the one with the bumpy sweater.'" in the film clip while she answered questions. She strode out onto the stage and talked in an animated manner which was a cross between seasoned performer and a mother.

"People always ask me what

On the other side of the Mouse phenomenon, Darlene gushed with praise for Walt Disney, whom she likened to Leonardo da Vinci in terms of artistic impact.

"God gave him something special that he gave back to the public. He would go out on a limb when nobody else would."

She said that Disneyland and the Mouseketeer show were financed through a $40 million loan that was paid off in one year through Disneyland receipts.

Darlene had scores of anecdotes from the show but the most vivid memory she had was of fellow Mouseketeer Dickey throwing up in an elevator.

Darlene was hired for the show out of a tap dancing school that her mother had sent her to in order "to work off her excess energy." Disney studios had asked for auditions from all the Los Angeles dancing schools. Darlene was pulled aside after her tap dance and sang Disney's hit song, "Davy Crockett." That did it—she was a mouseketeer.

One of her tutors on the set later convinced her that show business was not the end in itself in her life and eventually Darlene enrolled in nursing at UCLA.

After a Tom Snyder special Mouseketeer talk show, enough interest was generated for a tour and even a new proposed Mouseketeer show. She said her husband encouraged the effort.

"The new show will be better. Sesame Street and the shows today offer the kids something more than just entertainment. I mean, my think my show is cute when Sesame Street is on."

Well, look out, big bird! A new mouse is on the Mickey Mouse is micky no more. And no, Annette wasn't there ("She's the kids and eating lasagne"). Darlene was and she was entertaining and interesting

Journalism professor calls for more blacks in media

By CASSANDRA SPATLING
State News Staff Writer

Samuel Adams, associate professor of journalism at the University of Kansas, said Friday more black students have to consider careers in journalism in order to put an end to the exclusion of blacks by the media and make the media more responsive to the needs and concerns of the black community.

Adams, speaking at the MSU Union, said that the media has not done a "damn thing" to include blacks and in so doing has reduced blacks to a "level of nothingness."

Blacks comprise 11 per cent of the population in the United States but there are only 1.9 per cent blacks involved in the print media, Adams claimed.

He made two suggestions to black students that he said would change the relationship of blacks with the media. He said more black students have to consider careers in journalism and black people have to learn to manipulate the press.

"The media is a neutral animal controlled by the elite for the elite and until we do something to change that, you and I will be in serious trouble," Adams said.

Adams met with black students as part of a nationwide project sponsored by the Gannett Newspaper Foundation and the Assn. of Education in Journalism.

He blamed the lack of black participation in the media on several factors. Among them:

- Many black students in high school are "counseled away" from journalism.
- Many students are not aware of the diversified employment opportunities open to students with a journalism background.

• Many black students themselves do not make a great enough effort to gain experience in journalism while in college.

Adams was particularly critical of the latter explanation. He said in his travels to colleges across the country he has found campus dailies are "as lily-white as anything you will find."

But he said what bothers him most about this is that many blacks do not even apply for positions on the campus papers. He said they use the rationale that they can not deal with "those racist editors on the campus dailies."

"Well if you can't make it with those boys how are you going to make it with those men out there?" he asked.

Adams said when students go to apply for jobs in the media the employers will want to know one thing and one thing only. "They are all going to say 'Show me something.' That's the only basis they can use," Adams said.

Adams said blacks who are considering careers in electronic media also need to develop disciplined writing skills.

"I only wish more blacks who sought to go into the electronic media field would realize that simply learning how to rap is not enough," Adams said.

Adams also said there is a (continued on page 12)

Ebony concert one of pure entertainment

MARTY SOMMERNESS
State News Reviewer

The Pointer Sisters' theatrical use of the entire stage, their appropriate use (not overuse) of props, their smiling demeanor, their flashy costumes and their musical versatility won rave ovations from the audience.

From a swinging "I've Got a Guy (Girl) in Kalamazoo," through a Carmen Miranda-like "Chatanooga Choo-Choo" to a bopping "Flat Foot Floogie," Ruth, Anita and Bonnie Pointer and their four-man back-up band entertained with a musical flexibility that all true talent possesses.

Their tribute to "the fabulous Duke Ellington" with "I Ain't Got Nothing But the Blues," "I Got It Bad and That Ain't Good" and "Mood Indigo" did not win applause because it was a tear-jerker. It succeeded because, musically, it worked.

Even their jazzy styling of "Steam Heat" proved popular, not because of nostalgia for nostalgia's sake, but because the song, as performed by the women, worked. It was entertaining.

The sisters ended their part of the concert with "Yes We Can Can" which segued into a steamy, often polyphonic, crowd-stomping "How Long (Betcha Got a Chick on the Side)." The crowd loved them, so they came back to sing Charlie Parker's "Salt Peanuts" as their encore.

Bird would have been proud: they were real troupers.

Then came the Spinners.

The Spinners, entertainers to the hilt, disappointed no one. They had class.

Whether singing "One of a Kind Love Affair," "Could It Be I'm Falling in Love," "Games People Play," "Sadie" or any of their other popular songs, the Spinners entertained, communicated with and moved the audience.

The Spinners furthered their reputation as entertainers when they impersonated Elvis Presley, the Inkspots, Tom Jones and Louis Armstrong in

Mott flops without Ian Hunter

By DAVE DIMARTINO
State News Reviewer

A de-Hooped Mott performed at the Silver Dollar Saloon Thursday night, giving ample proof that some musicians don't know how to let a good band die gracefully.

"Mott," by any standards, does not equal "Mott the Hoople," and one need not be a math whiz to see where the difference lies.

The original Mott the Hoople, inconsistent as they were, always were interesting in their changes. As a rock-and-roll band, the group left a remarkable legacy of albums — their first, "Mad Shadows," then "Wildlife," the very underrated "Brain Capers" and finally, "All The Young Dudes" — and each of those albums clearly documented at least one or two important changes in the attitude of the band.

With organist Verden Allen's departure, Mott the Hoople became less a rock-and-roll band and more Ian Hunter's own vehicle for self-expression. Feeling confined, guitarist Mick Ralphs split to form Bad Company — which was the final blow to the group — and Hunter recruited Luther Grosvenor (or "Ariel Bender") from Spooky Tooth to be Ralphs' replacement.

With the album "The Hoople," and the final plodding "Mott Live," the band should have ceased to exist. As it was, Grosvenor, not fitting in with the band, was replaced for at least a month by Bowie stylist Mick Ronson. At the same time, Hunter, not liking the attitudes of his old mates, called it a day, and left to form a partnership with his new friend Ronson.

Here's where Mott, the present band, comes in. Hunter released a solo album, with much help from Ronson, and the rest of Mott had to go about by themselves and look for replacements.

Replacements were what played at the Silver Dollar Thursday night. Replacing Hunter and Ronson were vocalist Nigel Benjamin and guitarist Ray Major — and neither one, obviously, could fulfill those traditions. Along with them played the three remaining members of the original Mott, bassist Overend Watts, drummer Dale (Buffin) Griffin, and pianist Morgan Fisher — whose "original" status is slightly questionable, having joined the band at the time of the album "The Hoople."

Retaining the name Mott is at least partially forgivable, one must admit, if only for bassist Watts' presence. Watts wrote "Born Late '58" and almost all of the band's new album, "Drive On."

Yes, Mott could be forgiven if, in fact, their entire performance consisted of "Born Late '58" and the whole of the new Mott album. But, as it is only too obvious, they would also be immeasurably dull if that were strictly the case.

Watts' tunes are barely memorable, and always, it seems, predictable. Realizing this, or at least acknowledging it, the band performed, among other selections Thursday night, "All the Young Dudes," "Sweet Jane," "Rock and Roll Queen," "All the Way From Memphis," "Whizz Kid" and "Violence."

By playing such familiar songs, Mott might have planned to simply entertain the audience, and in that they had few problems. But they simultaneously left themselves open for direct comparison with earlier formations of the band, and therefore, by necessity, suffered. Guitarist Ray Major is certainly no Ariel Bender, but his strength and simplicity in style is at least vaguely aligned with predecessor Ralphs' guitar work. While no great shakes, Major was at least competent — and certainly not brazenly bad. Which, unfortunately, was very much the case with vocalist

Nigel Benjamin. A very young fellow, the singer's awkwardness on the stage was alarmingly visible. His gestures — picking up a mike stand or playing occasional rhythm guitar at the edge of the stage, for example — came at the wrong time and in the wrong way.

Chicago jazz group impressive

By DAVE STERN
State News Reviewer

It has been noted recently in these pages that phonograph records do not employ the use of animation. Neither do they exploit the sense of smell or delve into theatrics — two excellent reasons why the Art Ensemble of Chicago, who performed in Wonders kiva Friday and Saturday nights, must be experienced live.

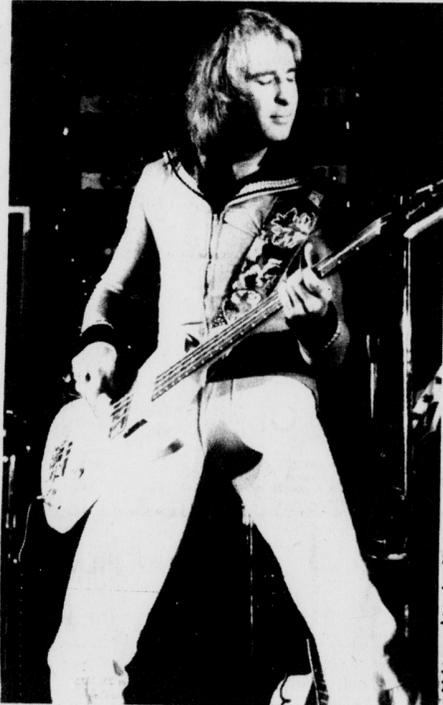

The incredible music of the Art Ensemble is certainly the main focus of their concerts and, of course, the reason that people go to see them. But the Art Ensemble goes beyond just the music and approaches the performance as an organic, artistic whole.

First assailed through the sense of smell, the audience experienced a continuous shifting between musk, sandalwood and jasmine — or jazzmen — scents. A subdued sense of theatrics also accompanied the entire proceedings. From a firecracker thrown into the kiva, timed to explode on the beat to an amazing freeze which injected total silence into the performance, the theatrics were always firmly integrated into the music and never became distracting in any way.

The printed word is inadequate for dealing with the music of Roscoe Mitchell, woodwinds and percussion; Joseph Jarman, woodwinds and percussion; Lester Bowie, trumpets; Don Moye, drums and percussion, and Malachi Favors, bass and percussion. It is very rare for a musician, in any form of music, to be able to take his music and its ramifications to the farthest logical extent. While no one, including the Art Ensemble, does this consistently, these five musicians reach that magical point more often in a year than most musicians do in a lifetime.

Roscoe Mitchell showed once again that he has a mastery of the sounds emanating from his horn matched by no other contemporary sax player and a mastery of silence surpassing even that. Jarman, often overshadowed by Mitchell, played some fine high energy tenor sax. He also hinted that he may soon be making some important statements on bass clarinet, a notoriously hard instrument, which no jazz musician, other than the late Eric Dolphy, has ever played a single note of significance. Lester Bowie, while sometimes repetitive, has a resourcefulness on trumpet which marks him as a singular musician. While remaining in the background, Moye directed not only the pulse but the textures of this music of musics.

Cyclists planning American tours

Though bicyclists have seen their season for this year, chains are being oiled in preparation for the 1976 inauguration of the Trans-America bicycle Trail.

Appropriately enough, the organization sponsoring the summer cross-country tours is called Bikecentennial, and they have devoted three years of research into the selection of backroads that can be easily traversed by bicycle, and also capture the essence of rural America.

The trail stretches from Oregon to Virginia, spanning 25 national forests and crossing approximately 12 distinct geographical districts. Participants have options in the planning of their trips as to whether they want to sleep in the open or under shelter and how far they are capable of riding in a day.

"Anyone can handle the trip," Don Ayers, an avid cyclist said. Ayers is planning a six-month tour next year and hopes to be a leader for one of the Bikecentennial tours. Since not everyone will have six months to spend pedaling from coast to coast, trip options are highly flexible, with 13 regional trips planned and daily departure schedules running either east or west from the starting point. The shorter trips can last from the 12 to 45 days and "sag wagons" — a vehicle that accompanies the riders in case they need assistance, will be available on some of the tours.

Distances, riding speeds and accommodations will determine the total cost of a tour, but Ayers said that the cost of bicycling with the Bikecentennial group would run an average of $7-$12 dollars a day, with payment in full due no later than 30 days before the departure date.

"With such a large bicycling population on campus, we feel this is an excellent opportunity to do some long distance bike touring at an easy pace," Ayers said.

Bikers who are interested in planning a Bikecentennial tour and want to obtain applications should contact Ayers or other members of the Community Bicycle Cooperative, 211 Evergreen Ave., East Lansing.

Top phones go to Santa Claus

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is lending $1 million to help Santa Claus call on better telephone service. More precisely, the Agriculture Dept. is lending the money to improve the telephone system in Santa Claus, Ind., and neighboring Christmas Lake, Ind.

Electrification Administration. The loan went to the Perry-Spencer Rural Telephone Cooperative, Tell City, Ind., to help "replace an older, multi-party system" now in use and to serve additional customers in the Santa Claus area.

An REA spokesman was asked if the festive loan spirit also is being extended to Christmas, Fla., and Christmas Cove, Maine. He said the agency has no prospective borrowers in those communities.

SPARTANS DOWN, 14-6 AT HALF

MSU skins 'Cats, 47-14

By LARRY MORGAN
State News Sports Writer

The Spartans, stuttering and sputtering defensively in the first half, regained their composure in the second to send the Northwestern Wildcats back to the shores of Lake Michigan with their tails tucked between their legs.

The 47-14 turnaround victory didn't do anything for MSU bowl hopes, which disappeared as early as Big Ten title aspirations. But it was a nice last fling for the seniors who played their final home game.

MSU is now 3-4 in the conference and 6-4 overall. The Spartans' offense gained 522 yards in the game, 401 rushing, and set a team record with 26 first downs rushing. Surprisingly, MSU did not turn the ball over once, even though the Spartans fumbled twice.

MSU's battered defense could not counter the Wildcats' strong running attack in the first half, and consequently,

Northwestern held a 14-6 lead as the teams headed for the locker rooms.

The Spartans got one touchdown on their second drive — after missing an earlier field goal attempt — by Ted Bell. But a bobbled snap from center ruined the point after attempt. Bell, who has been on the sidelines most of the season, will also spend the remaining game there, as he sprained his ankle on his touchdown run.

Though the statistics were nearly even at half time, MSU was down 14-6 and did not look like the 20-point favorite it was supposed to be. But, as they say, a football game lasts four quarters, and MSU packed a lot of it into the final two.

MSU had the ball seven times in the second half. Six times it scored, and the seventh was for the last five seconds of the game. Four of the six touchdowns were also 80-yard drives, an abrupt, unexplainable turnaround from the seasonal Spartan performance.

Time after time, the defense shut down Northwestern drives allowing the MSU offense to keep the ball and control the game.

Freshman split end Eugene Byrd scored the Spartans' first touchdown of the second half taking a pass from Charlie Baggett and, after bouncing off one tackler, completed the 59-yard play for six points. A two-point conversion attempt failed and Northwestern still held a 14-12 lead.

But MSU had begun to take control and from then on, things went downhill for the Wildcats. On the Spartans' next five possessions, they scored on 80, 79, 45, 80 and 19 yard drives.

Rich Baes climaxed MSU's second drive with the go-ahead touchdown, scoring from the two-yard line. After Hans Nielsen converted, the Spartans led 19-14 and the rout was on.

Baggett, who rushed for 120 yards in the game, zinged his second touchdown pass to freshman flanker Kirk Gibson for 39 yards.

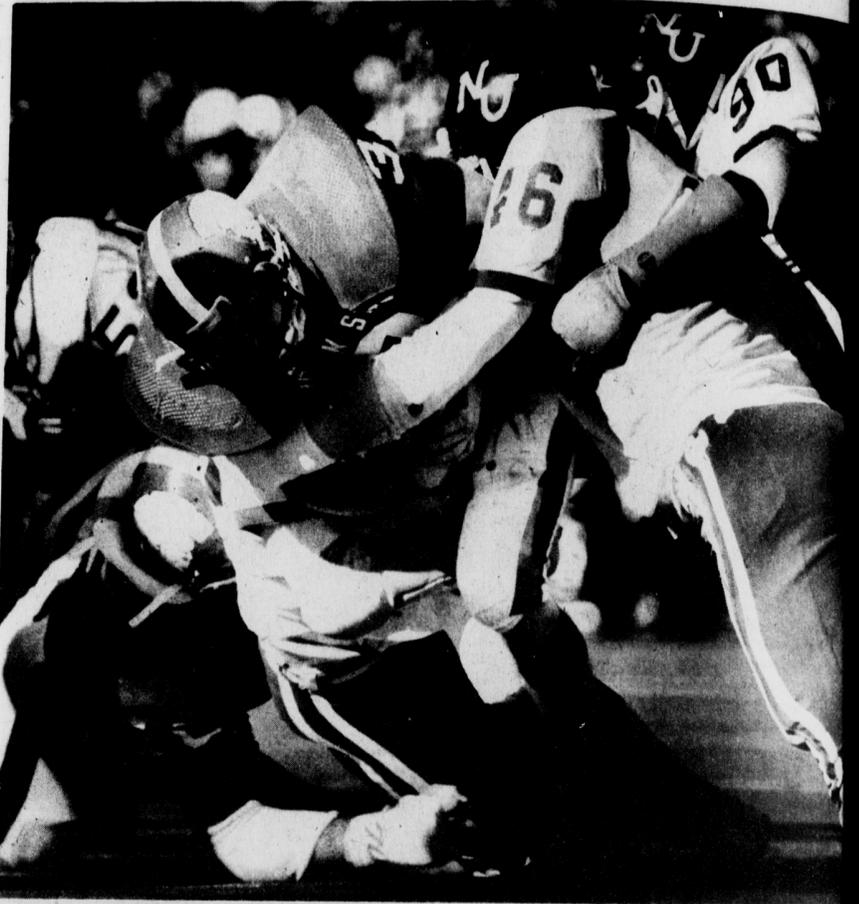

Baes got his second touchdown on a four-yard run. Marshall Lawson then replaced Baggett and directed two scores — the first a one-yarder by Leon Williams and another by Jim Early from 10 yards out — to put a lid on the game.

"Our defense didn't realize just how good a pair of backs Northwestern had," Coach Denny Stolz said after the game. "They ran well for two reasons, most of our guys had never played before, and they ran away from Larry Bethea (left tackle) to Greg Schaum's side."

Schaum sprained his ankle in practice earlier in the week and joined the "Crutch Corps" for the game.

Baggett, who received the game ball, instead gave it to left guard Greg Croxton and left tackle Greg Brewster in appreciation of the blocking work they did. But even he could not explain the change of pace by MSU.

"I can't explain it," Baggett said of the four 80-yard drives. "We've been doing it all year (without scoring) and we just told ourselves at halftime that it was our last home game and we got to do it."

Running back Rich Baes rushed for 81 yards and two touchdowns in the Spartans 47-14 rout of the Northwestern Wildcats. MSU set a team record Saturday by garnering 26 first downs by rushing.

Spartans earn split with Tech

By EDWARD L. RONDERS
State News Sports Writer

MSU's hockey team reversed strategy Saturday night and in the process gained a split in its weekend series against Michigan Tech at Houghton.

After dropping a 5-1 verdict Friday night to the Huskies, the Spartans took a 4-2 decision Saturday night to maintain their grip on first place in the Western Collegiate Hockey Assn. (WCHA).

A combination of factors determined the Spartans fate in the opening game as their four game WCHA winning skein skidded to a halt.

The Huskies combined tenacious checking and superb goaltending to garner the win. "We played a listless game," Spartan coach Amo Bessone lamented.

"Tech carried the game to us. They forechecked, backchecked and generally outplayed us," he continued. "Plus, their goalie (Bruce Horsch) played a super, super game."

Tech opened the scoring with Dave Joelson notching the first score at 7:57 of the first period. MSU's vaunted powerplay put the Spartans back in the game when center Tom Ross took a pass from Steve Colp and Pat Betterly and beat Horsch at 12:09 mark.

The Huskies went ahead for good, however, when Chris Ferguson tallied for Tech at 16:20.

The second period was scoreless with both Dave Versical in the Spartan nets and Horsch in the crease for Tech being called upon to make several saves on the spectacular side.

The Huskies salted away the contest with three scores in the final stanza. "The game should controlling the game if they were going to win," Bessone explained.

The Spartans took the opening faceoff and pinned Tech in their defensive zone for the initial six minutes of the game.

MSU finally dented the net when Jim Johnson beat Horsch at 9:41. Kevin Coughlin and Dave Kelly drew assists on Johnson's goal.

Tech fell behind 2-0 when Daryl Rice scored from Ron Heaslip at 4:08. The defending NCAA champs stormed back to tie the game with George Lyle and Louis Drzenovich doing the honors. But the Spartan power play came to the rescue with Steve Colp notching his third game-winning goal in the last four contests at 17:11 of the middle period. Rice and Ross assisted on the winning goal with the latter extending his consecutive game scoring streak to 73.

Colp added another score at 9:09 of the third period to extend the final margin to 4-2.

"Both games were good, hard-hitting contests," Bessone said upon the Spartans' return from the north country. "Any time you can gain a split at Tech you have to be satisfied. We missed a lot of opportunities to score, but to the team's credit they came back and beat a very good team Saturday night," he continued.

"Dave Kelly and Pat Betterly played extremely well for us. And Tim McDonald did an outstanding job on defense," Bessone added.

The Spartans will need all the plaudits they can muster for next weekend's home series against defending WCHA champion Minnesota.

The Gophers invade Munn

Arena Friday and Saturday nights for a two-game series. Minnesota is currently tied for third place in the league, with a 3-1 record, four points behind the pace-setting Spartans.

"They're tough. They're hard and they're fast," Bessone claimed. "We'll definitely have to carry the play to Minnesota like we did against Tech Saturday night if we are to stand a chance."

Two Spartan harriers qualify for national run

By JIM DUFRESNE

For Herb Lindsay and Jeff Pullen the 1975 cross country season has dwindled down to the final race. After next Monday the pair will have their afternoons free, their weekends off and a chance to look into their other neglected interests.

But for one more week the two Spartan runners will continue their two-a-day practices and work even harder in their effort to obtain the dream of every college runner: an All-American finish in next week's NCAA National Meet.

Both of Coach Jim Gibbard's runners qualified for that distinct honor last Saturday at the district tournament where they placed in the top 20 enabling them to extend their season one more week.

Lindsay finished second behind his old Big Ten rival Craig Virgin of Illinois with the time of 30:06 for the six-mile race while Pullen who was clocked at 30:47, ended the morning in 14th.

"Herb stayed with Virgin until about the three mile mark where he fell off the pace," Gibbard said of Lindsay's second race against the Illinois harrier.

"One of these times though," he continued, "Herb is going to get his race together and beat Virgin."

That could be next Monday when Lindsay will run into Virgin once again and a host of other internationally known runners at the NCAA tournament which will feature a field of over 350 athletes.

Gibbard acknowledged that the competition was going to be steep, but nevertheless has set the goals for Pullen and Lindsay to finishing in the top 25 runners and making All-American honors.

"I'm hoping both of them can place that high," Gibbard said. "They will have one advantage when they run, in that the course where the nationals is being held is similar to ours. Both are very hilly."

With such a large number of entries, the strategy will be different for the MSU harriers, than what they use for most tournaments.

The pair will have to concentrate on staying in the front fourth of the pack and by the three mile mark they have to be in the top 25. Gibbard predicted, if they are to finish as All-Americans, "You can't fall behind in a race like this," Gibbard said. "Or else it takes too long and too much energy to work yourself back up to the front."

For Pullen it will be his first time running in the nationals and undoubtedly it will be the highlight of his short college career.

"It will be different and a new experience for me," said the sophomore runner. "With this tournament, you're moving into big time."

Tankers win season opener; overpower WMU Broncos

The MSU women's swim team got its season off on the right foot Thursday, defeating Western Michigan, 77-53, in home action at the Women's Intramural Building.

The Broncos never posed much of a problem to the Spartans, as MSU grabbed first place in 10 of the 13 events.

MSU's 200 meter medley relay team of Diane Joy, Barb Butts, Maureen Crimmins and Kim McEachin won their race with a time of 2:10. Butts later went on to win the 50 meter backstroke with a time of 34.6.

Vicki Riebieling's time of 4:06.6 was good enough to take the 200 meter freestyle event, while teammates Sue Tilden and McEachin followed with first and second place finishes in the 200 meter individual medley.

Kathy Kolon won the 100 meter butterfly with a time of 1:05.1, with teammate Karen Waite taking second place. Dawn Jacobs and Bobbi Fiedler finished first and second in the 100 meter backstroke. Becky Hasting and Mary Jo Malefte took first and second in the 500 meter freestyle and Marilyn Mendendorp's time of 1:17.4 was the best in the 100 meter breaststroke, followed by teammate Vick LeFever.

MSU won both diving events, with Terri Tederington taking first on the one meter board with 159.55 and Betsy Jenkins winning on the three meter board.

Spikers whip Grand Valley to claim state championship

By ANN WILLIAMSON
State News Sports Writer

Last year the MSU women's volleyball team was seeded number one in the State Championships but wound up second to Calvin College.

This year the Spartans were again seeded number one and finished number one in the State Championships held last Friday and Saturday at Grand Valley State in Grand Rapids.

Host Grand Valley finished second in the championships, with Eastern Michigan and Central Michigan taking third and fourth.

"It was kind of nice to see the predictions come true," coach Annelies Knoppers said. "We played consistently well throughout the whole tournament, especially in the semi-finals and finals, where we only gave up an average of less than four points in each game."

"We didn't lose any games, we never had to play a third game against any team. We won the championships on our own skill, not on our opponents' errors."

The competition began with round-robin play on Friday, with the Spartans taking their pool with a 15-1, 15-10 win over U-M and a 15-8, 15-3 clobbering over defending state champions, Calvin College.

The Spartans' early success moved them right into the semi-finals competition, where they ran over the Eastern Michigan Hurons, 15-1, 15-6. When the finals competition finally arrived between MSU and Grand Valley, there was no doubt that the Spartans had come to win it all, as Grand Valley bowed to MSU, 15-4, 15-1.

Added to their previous 29-1 record for all the games played this season, the weekend wins lift the Spartans to a 33-1 mark.

Although Central Michigan had been predicted to pose the biggest problem for the Spartans, the Chippawas never did meet those expectations.

"We never even got to play Central because Grand Valley beat them in the round-robin competition," Knoppers said. "Against Grand Valley we just played consistently good of offense and they never did anything. Usually Grand Valley will rise to the occasion, but they just toned down and we kept on going."

Winning the state championship now qualified the Spartans to advance to the Midwest Assn. of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (MAIAW) Regionals this weekend.

There will be a basketball free throw contest held Nov. 24 from 7 to 9 p.m. in Jenison Fieldhouse. Entry deadline is noon Nov. 24.

JOE KIRBY Junk mail and telephone calls

Every now and then I meet a person who, upon discovering I am the sports editor of this morning daily, is very impressed with my lofty title and thinks that I lead some sort of glamorous and exciting life.

Well, folks, I hate to disappoint you but it isn't always good times and laughs. A lot of people ask me, "What's it like being sports editor?" My typical reply is, "Well, it's better than being dead."

Sometimes it's a lot better than being dead and at other times it's pretty close. True, there are some advantages to the job. You get into all the football games free of charge and even get to sit in the press box where you get a great view of the game.

But that's not always what it's cracked up to be. Take last Saturday for instance, when the temperature in the press box was about 35 degrees. It was terrible. We reporters had to keep stomping our feet and blowing on our hands to avoid getting frostbite.

At least down in the stands the sun was shining and people could jump up and down to keep warm. In the press box, jumping up and down is frowned upon (as are cheering and drinking wine).

Another of the sorrows of being sports editor is the telephone calls you receive. People are always calling and asking if I can print this or that in the paper.

Now when the Karate or Judo Club calls, you say, "Yes, course we can put it in. Anything you want. Happy to oblige you. You don't want to cross them because they might decide to come and tear your legs off or put your nose where your ear used to be."

You also get a lot of people calling in asking for scores. It usually happens when I am very busy and have other things on my mind. Some goon will call and say, "Hey, do you have a score for the game between Mars Hill College and Mankato State?"

"So who cares," I say. "Do I look like a scoreboard? I've got better things to do than walking around reciting scores. But if you really must know, call the State Journal and bother them."

In addition to telephone calls, the sports editor also receives a lot of mail. Most of these letters are less than complimentary and suggest that the editor try writing a cooking column and forget about writing sports.

Nobody ever forms fan clubs for sports editors — lynch mobs maybe, but fan clubs, never. Also, sports editors don't have any groupies or anything like that, unlike athletes who are rumored to have a number of female fans who worship their bodies.

Occasionally you do get some good junk mail that offers you a freebie but you know that the only reason they are offering you something for free is because they expect some free publicity return.

Recently I received a letter from the Traverse City Chamber of Commerce which began, "Hi! On Behalf of the Traverse City Area Chamber of Commerce Winter Activities Council, I would like to extend an invitation to you and your wife. . ."

My wife? Don't they realize that I'm just a youngster who has trouble enough getting a date for Friday night, let alone trying to get a wife on short notice?

So there you have it, an inside look at the daily trials and tribulations of an unaverage college sports editor. It's almost enough to break your heart, isn't it? Oh well, love is a rose. . .

A 50th birthday is a special event, especially for a building. The University kicked off week-long celebration for the Union Building Friday morning, complete with cake and band. President Wharton greeted students and staff at the cutting of the 50-shaped birthday cake. Members of the Spartan Marching Band entertained with the fight song and other toe-tapping melodies. The free birthday cake was only one of many events that will take place during the Union's golden anniversary week. Union Manager Michael Dmochowski said the celebration will include daily 50 cent specials in the grill, old movies and refreshments throughout the week. "We wanted to do something light," he explained. "I think everyone will enjoy this week." SN photo/Daniel Sh...
