WASHINGTON (AP) - Hundreds of thousands of Americans ring from suspected Communists to women's liberationists have in the targets of FBI investigations which turned up almost no mation of any value, top lawyers for the Senate intelligence mittee said Tuesday.

he lawyers also revealed new evidence of FBI attempts to edit the late civil rights leader Martin Luther King, and one which King reportedly considered a suggestion that he mit suicide.

They made public an anonymous letter which they said was sent King's wife 34 days before he was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize thas since been found in FBI files. King was awarded the prize on 1. 16, 1964.

The letter said: "King, there is only one thing left for you to do.

You know what it is. You have just 34 days in which to do it. . . You are done. There is not one way out for you."

Curtis R. Smothers, minority counsel for the committee, indicated the letter was accompanied by personal material embarrassing to King which Smothers presumed would be made public when King received the Nobel Prize.

Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., said he understood that King took the letter to be a suggestion that he commit suicide.

The FBI also attempted to locate a new "national Negro leader" who would fill the void if the FBI was successful in eliminating King as a leader of the civil rights movement, the lawyers said. A former FBI agent, meanwhile, told the House intelligence committee, that he once refused orders to obtain a handwriting sample of Rep. Andrew Young, D-Ga., because he believed the sample was sought for an operation to prevent Young's 1972 election. Young is black.

The agent, Arthur Murtagh said his supervisor at the Atlanta FBI bureau told him Washington headquarters had asked him to get samples of Young's handwriting. Murtagh told newsmen after his testimony he believes the FBI planned to use the handwriting to forge signatures on letters designed to cause dissension among black leaders in Atlanta.

At the Senate committee, chief counsel F.A.O. Schwarz III said the letter to King's wife "included materials the FBI had gathered illegally or improperly through taps and bugs and so forth."

Mondale said some of the bugs had been installed in King's hotel rooms

The FBI conducted "the most complete surveillance imaginable"

of King, including 16 electronic bugs and a number of telephone wiretaps, Smothers said.

The committee lawyers produced a 1963 FBI memo stating that the bureau's aim was "taking him (King) off his pedestal and reducing him completely in influence.'

The FBI also attempted to prevent a university which had awarded an honorary degree to the late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover from making a similar presentation to King, Smothers said. In addition, he said, it sought to prevent King from a meeting with the Pope and warned then-Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York against meeting with King.

The anonymous letter was found in the files of former FBI assistant director William Sullivan, but Sullivan has denied writing the letter and claims it was planted there, Schwarz said.

Last week at MSU, a documentary film -"The Last Grave at Dimbaza" - had its premiere showing in Michigan. There is nothing really extraordinary about that fact alone. But "Last Grave at Dimbaza" is a somewhat special film, since it is one of the few films, according to some, that depicts accurately the racial situation in South Africa; it had to be smuggled out of that country, and MSU has one of the very few copies of the film.

In this story, staff writer Ellen Sponseller attempts to tell what the film also tells, with aid from discussions with James Hooker, MSU professor of African History, and members of the Southern African Liberation Committee, a part of the East Lansing Peace Education Center.

Dusen said. Van Dusen said that a significant number of women have taken the necessary background courses in high school but simply have never considered the field. Women are not disadvantaged when they enter the field because they usually have had the background, he said.

Johannesburg prison in 1960, he fled from South African authorities in London, where he began working to alert the world to the conditions of his black fellow countrymen in South Africa.

Mahomo had been thrown in prison because he had helped organize a demonstration by black workers in Sharpville and Langa, two desperately poor, black areas on the edges of two of the biggest cities in South Africa, Johannesburg and Capetown.

The peaceful demonstration had collapsed to violence when South African police began firing randomly, killing many of the black workers. Mahomo and others were arrested and thrown into jail until they were lucky to escape or die.

In 1973, fugitive Mahomo crossed the border back into South Africa, bringing with him a team of English photographers and film equipment. In the next dangerous months, Mahomo posed as houseboy and carpenter, worker and miner, to obtain telltale footage of white opulence and black sub-existence in his country.

Cameras followed blacks in their "homelands," desolate windswept waste areas the whites have no use for; whites at "white only" restaurants, beaches, hotels and streetcars; black workers in the mines, in the schools, in the fields and all the manifestations of the strict South African "apartheid" policy, keeping blacks legally separate from all opportunities of white life in that country.

Film and crew were then smuggled back out of the country to England, where the film was edited and turned into a documentary, "Last Grave at Dimbaza."

Twenty copies of the film were made and one was shown at MSU last week. Mahomo may come to speak at MSU in late January. However, the film, and its implications, speak for themselves.

South Africa has a population of approximately 10 million, seven million of which are national organization has been increasing African. But the three million whites, most of British and Dutch descent, control the government and every facet of society.

Angola, the resource - rich African country which was given its independence Nov. 10 after 400 years of colonial rule by Portugal, is involved in a bloody civil war which is becoming increasingly international in scope and is tearing the country apart.

James Hooker, MSU professor of African history, said the conflict is an international dispute where Africa is once again being used as a pawn.

Three rival nationalist movements have caused an estimated 20,000 deaths in the last eight months. But it is the Soviet Union, China and the United States that are funnelling arms and funds into Angola.

"The Russians are going all out to put the Chinese down," Hooker said. "It is a lot more Chinese - Russian dispute than anything, with Africa being used once again."

Angola's leftist Popular Movement, MPLA, has been strongly supported by the Soviets. According to reports, Russian 120 mm rockets, artillery, mortars, armored cars, assault rifles and personal weapons are being flown in daily.

Opposing the MPLA are the Liberation Front, FNLA, backed by China, the United States and Zaire, and the Union for Total Independence, UNITA, supported by South Africa.

Hooker said the MPLA is receiving good press generally because its leader, Agos-

"Neto is what Europeans would call a 'man of culture'," Hooker said. "He appeals to journalists and intellectuals."

On the other hand, Hooker said the leader of the FNLA, Holden Roberto, was "the last person you could call an intellectual. Roberto is a man of the people."

Hooker said Roberto has more support from the Congo than the MPLA does.

Finally, Hooker said that UNITA was easily the weakest of the factions. He said UNITA's leader Jonas Savimbi used to be part of MPLA, but left for personal reasons and formed UNITA and a shaky coalition with the FNLA.

South Africa is also supporting UNITA and finding itself in an ironic situation, Hooker said. He said South Africa was in Angola because of commercial interests and because of strong anti - communist sentiment.

But, Hooker said, South Africa finds itself on the same side as China in opposing the Soviet Union - backed MPLA and can only rationalize their position by believing that China poses no major threat and is only in the war to antagonize Russia.

Currently, the FNLA and UNITA, joined in an uneasy alliance of military expedience, hold the northwest and the south of Angola and are trying to crush the MPLA, which controls Luanda, the capital, central Angola and the diamond - rich northeast.

Rumsfeld confirmed by Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate confirmed President Ford's choice of Donald Rumsfeld as the nation's new secretary of defense by a vote of 95 to 2 Tuesday.

After the confirmation vote, the Senate by voice vote passed a resolution commending outgoing secretary James R. Schlesinger.

Considered shrewd and ambitious, the 43 - year - old Rumsfeld is expected to work more closely with the White House than the ousted Schlesinger. He has been mentioned as a possible vice presidential candidate next year, a prospect he declined to rule out during his confirmation hearing.

NASA employes went hunting

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional panel says a small number of National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) employes have accepted free weekends at a Maryland hunting lodge maintained by Rockwell International, prime contractor for the $6.4 billion space shuttle.

Sen. William Proxmire, D - Wis., vice chairman of the Joint Committee on Defense Production, said he has directed the committee staff to work with NASA to learn the full extent of any "unethical or illegal lobbying by Rockwell."

He said that only five NASA employes are known to have accepted Rockwell's offers, which have also included tickets to Washington Redskins football games and the use of hospitality suites.

Missle operations curtailed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Tuesday to put the missiles in the nation's only antiballistic missile system into mothballs.

By a 52-47 vote, the Senate approved a proposal by Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., that would leave only the system's elaborate radar equipment operational.

The House already has voted to abandon the $6-billion installation at Grand Forks, N.D., entirely.

A conference committee that will write the final version of the defense appropriation bill is expected to approve at least a sharp curtailment of the ABM system.

The FEC said in a final opinion, however, "that there is in the best intentioned plans a potential for coercion which is inherent in the employment relationship and which may be triggered by solicitation of employes by or on behalf of an employer."

The commission acted in response to a request from Sun Oil Corp., which sought to continue administering and paying the costs of organizing a political fund.

Two dissenting commissioners, Thomas Harris and Robert O. Tiernan, said a corporation should be permitted to use funds from its treasury only to solicit stockholders for contributions.

Long before creation of the commission, it had been illegal for corporations to tap their treasuries to make political contributions. Dozens of companies were taken to court by

> But Albert said a great deal would depend on the White House position.

"There is still some negotiating going on," Albert said.

He also said he thought possible for the House to prove an aid bill for New Y before the recess, but not Senate.

Athens' students demonstrate

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Tens of thousands of marchers brought Athens to a virtual standstill Monday. They were observing the second anniversary of a bloody student uprising that shook the foundations of the Greek dictatorship and led to the downfall of strongman George Papadopoulos.

The massive demonstration, organized by the national student union, represented the entire Greek political spectrum. Students by the thousands stayed away from public schools around Athens to participate in the march, which followed four days of student rallies across the nation.

Sahara march called success

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — King Hassan II announced Monday that Spain has agreed to hand over its Spanish Sahara territory to Morocco and Mauritania, bowing to his "March of Conquest" by thousands of unarmed Moroccans into the desert territory.

The king's declaration in a national television broadcast was his first official victory claim in the dispute over the Sahara, but government sources reported the agreement among Spain, Morocco and Mauritania had been reached last week.

The tripartite agreement negotiated in Madrid provides for the Sahara to be turned over to Morocco and Mauritania by Feb. 28, 1976.

Fighting causes border closing

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Thailand closed 80 miles of its northern frontier opposite the Laotian capital of Vientiane Tuesday following a heavy exchange of firing with Laotian forces across the Mekong River border between Thailand and Laos, a government spokesman said.

The government also moved four infantry companies, one marine unit, two tanks and a number of artillery pieces to reinforce its border patrols along the Mekong.

On Thai navy officer was killed, three navy men were wounded and a Thai gunboat was shot up in the fighting.

Prime Minister Kukrit Pramoj said Thailand would not retaliate forcefully because the two countries should maintain good relations.

Foreign Minister Chatichai Choonhavan said he would recall the Thai ambassador to Laos for consultations and might protest to the Laotian government.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Isabel Peron's problem plagued administration announced plans Monday to hold presidential elections next year instead of in 1977 as scheduled.

Officials did not set a date for the election but they said it would be held "in the last three months of 1976."

Elections had been scheduled for early 1977. Peron's term expires May 25 of that year.

MADRID (AP) - Gen. Francisco Franco, gravely ill for a month, suffered massive new internal bleeding and heart flutters Tuesday and sank into critical condition, his doctors reported. A high government source said Franco had also suffered brain damage.

Plans for a state funeral for the 82-year-old generalissimo were accelerated.

The general, wasted away by his 33-day illness and three major operations to remove stomach ulcers and stop the bleeding, apparently was too weak for further surgery. The doctors said the atest bleeding was being treated "medically."

cabinet of ASMSU, has added The judicial counselors are still another program to the students who have successfully completed a training program conducted by Legal Services and in so doing are able to represent students who have been charged with violating student regulations. Botsford said to qualify students do not need to be pre law majors nor do they require a certain grade point average. He said the student simply has to be articulate and willing to sacrifice the amount of time necessary to handle a case properly. The training programs are an ongoing project of Legal Services and are usually held every Monday evening in room 328 Student Services Bldg. Botsford said, however, that it is important that students realize that they are not attorneys and therefore cannot give legal advice.

Joe Mallia, co - director concurred. "We don't give legal advice but rather an educated opinion," Mallia said. "If a student needs legal advice we refer him to the attorney." An attorney, Ken Smith, is available to students every Wednesday from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. It presently costs students $3 for every 15 minutes to see the attorney. Costs will go up

50 cents beginning winter term. In addition to the judicial counselors Legal Services has a number of task forces. Among them:

•The Inter - University Correspondence force which communicates with legal services departments at other universities to exchange ideas and knowledge.

•The Traffic and Parking Task Force is currently investigating the possibility of the University instituting its own traffic bureau

They also hope to develop plans for a more responsive ticket appeals procedure and to develop ways to stop the drain of money from the campus through the issuance of tickets by East Lansing.

•The Preventative Law Task Force sees its main purpose as providing information to students so they know how to avoid legal hassles before they happen and how to deal with them when they occur. In addition Legal Services is planning an investigation into the services provided by Olin Health Center, the University Alcohol policy, the Residence Hall Assn. damage policy and towing practices on and off campus.

They are also planning to institute a Pre - Paid Legal Expense Program. Under this plan, which is being sponsored by the State Bar of Michigan. students would pay a small fee on a per term basis and in return they would be able to obtain the services of virtually any lawyer in Michigan. Mallia said they have a lot of good ideas and an extremely confident staff but one problem stands in their way - lack of adequate funding.

"None of these programs are going to be fully effective unless we get more funding," Mallia said.

The Music People

Botsford said, however, that they are doing the best they can with what they have. "We're doing a tremendous job on a shoestring budget,' Botsford said.

Mallia said it is because of their financial crisis and the crisis facing ASMSU in general that the Legal Services Dept. is strongly advocating passage of the student tax referendum.

If passed undergraduates would be taxed one dollar instead of the 50 cents they are presently taxed for ASMSU services.

were centered primarily around a provision which requires mining companies to pay a one and one-half cent fee to the state for every ton of mined sand.

The fee is designed to raise approximately $65,000 to pay for the administration of the law. If the Dept. of Natural Resources found that the law could be administered with less money, the fee would be lower-

Supporters of the amendment argued that the nature of state administrations is such that the full one and one-half cent will be used despite the true cost of administration.

After the failure of that amendment, another was offered which would have lowered the fee to one cent. It won a 51 to 50 majority but was defeated because the necessary 56 votes - a majority of the full House - were not made in support of the amendment.

"I have some reason for hope that it will get out of that committee," said Dennis Cawthorne, R-Manistee, the main sponsor of the bill.

The bill, a substitute for House Bill 4038, is the result of a year of work with environmentalists and sand miners to come up with a compromise acceptable to both. It also has the support of Gov. Milliken.

Help, and with it, self-help

While New York City rests on the brink of default, bellows can be heard from every corner, from the diehard city - hater crying for its demise to the sympathetic Park Avenue dweller demanding federal dollars.

When the facts are considered in proportion — as they rarely are both brands of bellowing are seen as simplistic.

Unquestionably, a large part of New York's financial trouble was self - inflicted. The plight of the city can be attributed in many cases to fiscal mismanagement, unreasonable extravagance and a weak - kneed approach to labor unions' demands.

Financial chicanery, unlimited spending on frills such as free colleges and a municipal radio station and run - away pension plans have caused the disaster.

The federal government cannot simply step in and pick up the tab of a city that went so far as to place four garbage men on every truck when only two were necessary without challenging the city's budgeting.

Such costly mistakes in dealing with labor forces are numerous in New York history. But the price for this mismanagement is high and the country cannot be expected to bear the entire burden. However, there are many aspects of the Big Apple's financial crunch that are clearly a result of factors beyond the city's control.

Being the commercial center that it is, New York is traditionally a gateway into the country and consequently carries a greater welfare burden than any other area.

High city taxes, increasing affluence and Federal policies encouraging suburbanization have brought about an exodus of the affluent from the city to the suburbs, leaving the lower income population to maintain the tax burden of a large and needy municipality. The effect on city revenue is not healthy.

VIEWPOINT: PLACEMENT

CIA shouldn't recruit

By WAYNE BIGELOW

Within the past few years we have been bonbarded with a multitude of disclosures concerning the activities of the Central Intelligence Agency. The most "credible" information we have received originated from the Rockefeller Commission; a group whose objectivity was tainted by a conflict of interests.

The committee consisted of three people who have established relationships with the CIA, six who occupied high government posts during the 1960s, and four members who are linked together in Rockefeller's multinational business, political and charitable enterprises. Yet, this "white wash" commission still exposed some frightening facts. As reported in the New York Times:

The CIA conducted a vast network of unlawful and uncontrolled domestic operations which resulted in the creation of files on at least 300,000 individuals and organizations. Operation CHAOS was a seven year plan in which 13,000 dossiers were compiled on American citizens. Another 57,000 people were listed and filed as "possible continuing intelligence interests. "The Huston Plan - a White House project implemented in 1970 - consisted of unauthorized and illegal burglaries and wiretappings to subvert anti-war and student activites.

Further tactics included the using of sophisticated equipment which can open, copy and reseal mail. The CIA, with the explicit consent of the Postmaster General, encroached on the private contents of 4,000,000 letters a year. Utilizing ITT's massive computer and technical system, the CIA and NSA have extensively monitored the telephone and telegraph communications of American citizens. In addition, the CIA has been involved in surveillance, 'bugging,' and burglaries of American political parties - culminating in the Watergate 'burglary' and subsequent coverup

Obviously the CIA has acted without regard for the constitutional rights of Americans. Yet the CIA was formed during the Truman administration as a foreign "information-gathering" agency. The National Security Act of 1947 explicitly states that the CIA shall engage in "no police, subpoena, or law enforcement powers of internal security functions." Violation of this charter is constitutional grounds to discontinue its existence (a function of Congress).

Yet the Rockefeller commission stressed that these violations were the result of the "poor judgment of high officials" and they never addressed the legitimacy of the CIA itself. We can only suggest that the development of this embryonic police-state is necessitated by the dynamics of our political-economic system; the perpetuation of this system's control warrants such CIA actions. These violations will continue at home and abroad as long as the present institutional structure exists.

Thus far we have neglected to discuss the major thrust of CIA activity: the subversion of Third World countries through the overthrow of liberal or left-wing governments, the assassination of political leaders and funding of right-wing organizations. We have attempted to focus instead on those actions of the CIA which most directly threaten us as students and American citizens (while recognizing that this is only the 'tip of the iceberg').

As Americans and as MSU students, each of us should feel outrage and indignation at the Placement Bureau's allowing the CIA to .come here this Wednesday and Thursday as "just another employer." We believe it is the responsibility of us as MSU students to denounce this and to demand that the Placement Bureau withdraw this and/or subsequent invitations to the CIA. We seriously wonder if the Placement Bureau might not just as well invite another organization that the CIA has used from time to time, a group whose activities in blackmail and assassination parallel those of the CIA: the Mafia. We, for our part, would see no difference.

the General Assembly on the Zionist question for a number of reasons, principal among which is that the two sides don't trust one another, and there is some reason for this distrust. Our people, for instance, don't have any reason to believe that the General Assembly of the United Nations has ever shown any true regard for racism unless it is white racism exercised against blacks. Uganda's treatment of its Indian population, or the treatment by Chinese of Tibetans, or by Russians of Jews and Christians, have never been objects of moral concern in the General Assembly.

It isn't easy to sort out the argument in

On the other hand, the Arab states have quite accurately insisted that the concern for Israel in the United States is in considerable part owing to political influence, and that American concern for displaced Palestinians, although we put up a lot of money for them, is not a central concern of our foreign policy.

In this atmosphere, anti - Semitism has flourished. The vote the other day did not come as a surprise to me, having written in a book two years ago, after exposing myself to a season's rhetoric in the General Assembly as a U.S. delegate, that "the General Assembly of the United Nations has become the world center of organized anti - Semitism." That is because the distinctions were being abused. In the explosion of November 10, the General Assembly voted a Resolution which, in the context of the situation, can be called anti -Semitic.

Now I do not believe that Dr. Abadallah al - Sayegh of Kuwait is an anti - Semite, though he voted for the resolution. His point is this, that the Zionist movement is entirely separate from Judaism, that indeed even today, although most American Jews support Israel, only a minority consider themselves Zionist. On the other hand, he says, leading Zionists claim that Zionism is coextensive with Judaism. Sayegh is prepared to say that Zionism's policies in Israel, which grant preemptive rights to Jews coming into Israel, at the expense of Palestinians ejected from Israel, is a "racist" policy.

He errs, in my judgment, by failing to take account of the historical circumstances of the foundation of a Jewish State. There has been no resolution offered condemning the Japanese as racist, yet in Japan the rules of exclusion are far stricter than in Israel. In Japan, only Japanese may become citizens.

On the other hand, I find Ambassador Moynihan's fireworks a little overheated this time, exhilarated though I am by his tendency to candor and by his genuine idealism. The vote in the United Nations that found racism in Zionism, however deplorable, was not the equivalent, in the excessive phrase of Mr. Moynihan, of granting symbolic amnesty to the Nazi murderers of six million Jewish people. The General Assembly, awful as it is, has not backed a policy of exterminating Zionists. What shines through it all is that we continue to be hoisted by our own petard. The fact of the matter is that we stand to suffer the indignities of the General Assembly of the United Nations only because we notice them. Years ago there was an organization around called the National Students Association, which used to meet somewhere every year and give out great resolutions at the expense of the United States, causing great pain to American students who were out of sympathy with these resolutions but who seemed powerless to express their dissent. Then, one day, the NSA went to far during the crazy years. And — suddenly -nobody began to notice. The New York Times stopped covering their conventions. For all I know they are meeting somewhere at this moment, passing a resolution calling for giving Manhattan back to the Indians.

The General Assembly is entitled to an American ambassador of the quality of Mr. Moynihan to present the American position. But please, never ever again should our ambassador cast his vote. To cast his vote suggests that we submit in some undefined way to the authority of the General Assembly. Its moral authority has no mandate. It is unvalidated constitutionally or historically. It is better ignored; and, like the NSA, it will then go away, and the delegates can talk to themselves, and so on jumping through the hoops of the Communist superpowers.

An unoriginal slogan for the Bicentennial

My colleague Jack Anderson has been running a slogan contest for the Bicentennial. He is offering all sorts of prizes to the person who will come up with the words that will describe this country the best.

I was thinking of entering the contest, but I knew I couldn't win because people would think it was a put - up job. Since I hate to see my slogan go to waste I have decided to use my own column to publicize

I believe the slogan that describes this country the best is "The check is in the

"I believe the slogan that describes this country the best is 'The check is in the mail.' "

My reason for selecting it as the best one is that it is easy to remember, it fits on automobile bumper stickers and millions of Americans have been using it for years.

I must admit the slogan isn't original with me. I first heard my father use it 40 years ago. In fact, every time the phone rang at our house he would say it to the caller on the other end.

One time I asked him after a call from the electric company if the check was really in the mail and he said, "Don't ask such dumb questions. If the check was in the mail you wouldn't be eating meatballs and spaghetti tonight."

My father must have told other people about it because in no time at all I kept hearing the phrase being repeated wherever I went.

Most companies would blow their minds when they were told by a customer that "the check was in the mail." But there was little they could do about it.

Then one day a comptroller of a large corporation got a brainstorm. Why couldn't his company tell another company the same thing? In that way his company could slow up payments on its bills and use the money itself. He tried it and improved the cash position of his company by 100%.

Pretty soon everyone doing business was assuring everyone else that "the check was in the mail," and it took weeks, even months before anyone was paid.

The practice might have been stopped except that the people teiling the tale got help from an unexpected source - the U.S. Post Office.

As time went on postal service got so bad in the country that no one could tell if the person who said the check was in the mail was lying or not. Today it's impossible for anyone to know if the debtor is telling an untruth or if the check is really lost somewhere in a mailbag between St. Louis, Mo., and Butte, Mont.

This has encouraged almost everyone in the country to blame the mails for the lack of payment of a bill.

For a long time only individuals and private enterprise used the ploy. But recently the government has gotten into the act. Now, whether you're waiting for a Social Security check or payment for a highway contract, there is someone in Washington who will tell you in a friendly voice that "the check is in the mail." It wouldn't be so bad if it was a real person, but most government departments are now using taped recordings.

A recent Gallup Poll showed that more people in the United States say "The check is in the mail" than "Have a nice day."

It has become so much a part of our culture that it should become the national slogan replacing "In God We Trust." The American people have discovered that putting their trust in God is no assurance that anyone is going to get paid.

I want no prizes for my slogan. But if we adopt it officially I hope my father will get the credit in our history books as being the first American ever to use it. Little did he know in those dark days of the Deprèssion that someday his words would be on the lips of every man, woman and college student in this country.

Millions of years ago, a cave-person had reason to go into a cave used as a public restroom. There was no one else around and the caveperson had nothing better to do, so it scribbled a little message on the wall-and graffiti was created.

And ever since that first graffito (singular for graffiti), people have been expressing themselves on almost any available surface through the short staccato messages known as graffiti.

Graffiti is a form of communication. It is one way for an individual to express himself anonymously to a huge, unfeeling public.

"I just had the last class I'll ever take at MSU, what a great feeling," or "Am I the only virgin on campus?"

Whatever the statement, graffiti is free to the public and therefore is open to public comment.

Such as "Jesus Saves" and later scrawled underneath it, "and Esposito scores on the rebound.'

Graffiti comes in a variety of types. It may be political, like one graffito on a bathroom wall. "Republicans, you can't shit here, your asshole in in D.C." Or it may ask a question like, "What are schools for?" And it can be the answer to a question, "To teach us how to find our way out of the fly bottle!"

Graffiti might be a statement nothing better to do. of frustration, "I'm lonely," or social comment, "Who needs a man, MSU screws you daily."

Sometimes graffiti is sexually oriented, "The 4 F's, find 'em, feel 'em, fuck 'em, forget 'em" and sometimes it is graphically obscene.

And sometimes it is humorous like this one in Morrill Hall. "To Do is To Be-Socrates, To Be is To Do-Sartre, Doo be do be doo-Sinatra."

Sometimes it is a combination or has no classification. "God grades on a curve," "Schizophrenics are never fiti has been around for a long obscenities and sexual themes time. The most ancient forms in graffiti.

There was no answer.

Still another graffito in the women's bathroom gave detailed instructions on where to go for an abortion, who to see and what it felt like.

Thorne said that the reason for this difference may be because females are more selfdisclosing than males.

She said that it would be interesting to write a graffito asking for some kind of advice in a men's restroom and a women's and see what kinds of answer you got from each.

But what ever the differences are between graffiti written by men and by women, both sexes seems to have something to say about graffiti. And what do the people who

Just about the time you read this a baby orn out there somewhere on this spinning the will be the four billionth human being earth. We've been moving to this trestrial record - maker since the begining of time and the experts assembled at Bucharest World Population Confer-Tes," they said, "just about a year from wand the world will reach a new epoch -

Population Matters. Their anxiety is due to a simple calculation. Little Khadi (let's call him Khadi) the 4 - B Human, was born on the pavement on a mean street in Calcutta in a world that increases population 200,000 every 24 hours; that's a city the size of Grand Rapids, Mich. Whatever the 1974 Bucharest Conference did it didn't stop population growth; calculations are that there are 73 million more people on earth today than when it met; an increase equivalent to a whether it will fall fast enough. tor Philander Claxton calls "the most new East and West Germany in one year.

Since man first evolved it took him to the opening of the 19th century to reach the first billion. The next billion took a century; the third about 35 years and now, with Khadi's help, we have gone over the top for the fourth billion in 15 years. Touchdown Khadi! By 2000 AD there may be 7 billion (short of nuclear war or, possibly, famine.) It's not easy to designate Khadi as the 4 B Baby because almost at the instant of his birth James Cavendish Smith was born in a fashionable lying - in hospital in Connecticut, in accordance with the statistic that the earth now adds a couple of people a second. Their paths will be different. James Cavendish has about four times the life expectancy of Khadi, and when he grows up he will use the equivalent of about a ton of grain a year while Khadi, if he is lucky, will probably get a pound of grain a day or just sufficient to prevent kwashiorkor. James Cavendish won't actually eat a ton of grain direct, of course. He will get it indirectly in the form of meat, milk, eggs and relaxing after - dinner drinks. The disparity in life style comes from a variety of causes, one of them that the United States has population growth rate of only 0.9 per cent while India's is a frightening 2.4 per cent. Population growth rate is falling in both countries as it is in most of the world; the quesiton is

For the first time at any major international conference this disparity of growth rate, and what it means, was faced at Bucharest a year ago. A subject that couldn't officially be discussed in the past was successfully brought into the open and made respectable. As recently as 1959 President Eisenhower primly rejected the idea of U.S. support for birth - control programs abroad. Now we contribute millions, and high time, too. Population is out - running food.

Look at these statistics from Washington demographer Lester Brown: the U.S. used to pay farmers not to grow crops on 50 million acres of land to keep prices up; now the acreage is all in use and an expanding world population is eating it up . . .

The global fish catch is down for the fourth year: believe it or not, the oceans seem to be over - harvested. The Soviets are up - grading their eating habits with rising income and are buying U.S. Canadian grain to fatten cattle to get more meat just like capitalists. And, finally, whereas the world used to have grain reserves adequate to meet global consumption for 105 days (1962), it is now scraping the barrel at only 31 days, making weather the variable factor in the lottery against famine.

There's no shortage of food today, of course, provided you have the money to buy it. There's food in the poorest countries; Khadi's mother could buy meat if she could pay for it. The trouble is that there's a 'hunger highway" that spans the world around the Equator, parts of Saheli in Africa, parts of Central America, Ethiopia, Tanzania, India, Pakistan, Bangladesh. They're the countries with the bloated bellies and big birth rates. Russia has money and can afford to buy grain from the United States, the world's bread basket (the U.S. dominates the international food trade even more than OPEC does petroleum). This sends up the price of grain for the hungry countries. It's too bad for them. One always has difficulty in remembering that they are hungry human beings and not an abstraction called world hunger. According to the Food and Agriculture Organization there are nearly half a billion people living on Hunger Highway that are malnourished or face starvation.

What do we do about the situation? One thing is to raise more food. And the best place to raise it is right in the developing nations themselves. Much of their land is fertile and already under cultivation and manpower is the cheapest on earth; the trouble is that the agricultural and social systems are often medieval. With irrigation, pesticides, new technology and more world in days to come.

energy they could double or triple yields but they can't do it while the loin - cloth farmer is a slave to the money lender or while the government spends its scarce capital on bombers or in introducing steel mills instead of land reform. The World Bank has seen the light; it is making its loans specifically with food production in mind, particularly to aid the small farmer. That's where U.S. foreign aid should go, too; not into guns and planes with which we are supposed to be helping developing countries.

The other thing, of course, is to get control of population. The Rome Food Conference last year adopted a resolution "to support . . . rational population policies insuring to couples the right to determine the number and spacing of births." It took a lot of diplomacy to work out the formula and it passed almost unanimously.

World population pressure is surprisingly close to the United States. The U.S. increase is only 0.9 per cent; Mexico is an astounding 3.2 per cent; at that rate in 20 years its 55 million will double. Where will they go? Through the porous U.S. border, perhaps; a new Immigration Service study guesses there are 5 million illegal Marians here now. Problems of this sort face the

She said the early measures of 1940 and 1941, which required Jews to wear identifying "Star of David" scarves and forced Jewish merchants to identify themselves, were an effort by the Nazis to drive a wedge between the Jewish community and the rest of the people, the first attempt at isolating them.

"The Nazis had human nature gauged very well," Daman said. "They realized the atmosphere of Eastern Europe was much more anti-Semitic than in the West and there would be less chance of an outcry by the public as a result of the measures."

Daman became personally involved in the plight of Belgium's Jewish population in 1942, following a German decree disallowing Jewish children to attend school with anyone other than Jews. It was at this time that she detective fiction - the unpredictableness of violent crime and death - by subjecting crime to the reins of logic. It genre And these murders can crimes are motivated by greed posits a rational universe that be solved by logical deductive is comprehensible by logical reasoning. These logical and gain and can be dealt with by the rational human mind.

Sherlock Holmes brought order out of his gas-lit London shrouded in the fog of change and unreason. His elegant observation kept him from cocaine and reassured readers as to the preeminence of reason in a Kafkaesque time. The realities of the Irish question, the Boer War, the rise of the unions and marxism, and the decline of the Empire weighed upon turn-of-the-century Englishmen. Sherlock Holmes reduced these problems to proportion.

Ellery Queen began his career in 1928 when two New York cousins, Manfred B. Lee and Fredrick Dannay, began writing the triumphs of mystery author and amateur sleuth, Ellery Queen. Although Queen's print detections continued until the '60s, Ellery proved less adaptable to film than his elegant contemporaries like Nick Charles and limited to two forgettable Republic epics of 1935-36 and a Columbia series which started in 1940, starring Ralph Bellamy, with Margaret Lindsay as Nikki and Charlie Grapewin as Ellery's father, Inspector Queen. After four films, William Gargan replaced Bellamy and Columbia made three more films before terminating Ellery's movie career.

Universal's new "Ellery Queen" is the detective's second or third incarnation on television. The last try was a feeble effort starring George Nader. Ellery seemed hopelessly effete and ineffective.

Levinson and Link created a successful ratiocinative detective in "Columbo," the rumpled wizard, who brought order to the disordered deaths among the very rich and stylish. After this coup, they set themselves to adapting the elegant crimes solved by Queen to television.

Peter S. Fischer and Michael Rhodes act as line producers for the series, while Levinson and Link executive produce. Jim Hutton interprets Ellery as a wise child who is helpless at life and hopelessly brilliant at detection. The gambit works in that Ellery emerges as an eccentric, but not asexual, character. David Wayne brings his classic, patented exasperation to the role of Ellery's father. Inspector Queen. And a classy flock of guest stars light up this production.

The series still shows distinct weakness in plot structure and dialogue. The writing should be slick and witty. So far it is merely pretentious most of the time. The plots are difficult to unravel, but unfortunately that usually stems from the fact that the clues were not fairly laid down. And one could care less whether or not Ellery steps out of character to challenge the audience to solve the mystery.

Universal has invested time, energy and some money into recreating the milieu of '50s Manhatten. Not the real '50s, but the '50s filtered through the looking glass of B-movies and back-lot reality. It is a '50s from "Singin' in the Rain," invested with the style of '30s sophisticated detective films, rather than the hard-boiled detective films of the late '40s and early '50s

Many Quicksilver fans have always been eager to admit a strong disliking for Valenti's character and music, it seems, and not without reason. Valenti's presence in the band from his rejoining on "Just For Love" through "What About Me," "Quicksilver," and "Comin' Thru" - drew a close to the marvelous improvisational period of the band and gave Quicksilver a newer, song oriented style, dominated very much by Valenti's uniquely

The primary Senate amendment would also allow motorchild is taught to use a gun.

Children take shooting lessons in school. And all white young men must serve in the military.

Of late, the government has been working on a new project. African men are required to leave the remote Bandustans to work, so they live in crowded barracks with other men near their jobs. The government will not let their wives and children live with them, calling their families "superfluous baggage." The men may return to the Bandustan only one month out of the year. The ratio of women to men is eight to one on the

The South African "apartheid" policy is not widely spoken of among other countries of the world. The United States. France, Japan, Germany, Holland and Britain all value the tremendous resources of South Africa, rich in diamonds, copper, gold, uranium and oil.

Almost every major international American corporation has business interests in South Africa. All three major automobile companies have plants there as well as major mining and oil companies. Texaco and Gulf Oil, and companies such as Johnson and Johnson, Honeywell, Kodak and Coca Cola are all in South Africa. According to recent statistics, American corporations have invested about $1 billion in that country.

South African blacks offer much cheaper labor because of the "apartheid" laws. According to the Job Reservation laws, the most skilled jobs can be held only by whites, and no black can supervise a white. In 1969 the average African income was only eight per cent of a white's average income.

Yet, South Africa wishes to appear liberal in foreign relations while maintaining the status quo at home. The prime minister stresses that South Africa is not racist, but is merely recognizing "cultural" differences between the whites and Africans.

South Africa also needs the other African countries to depend on it. It wants to have good relations with countries with important interests and revenues in South Africa.

Recently it has accepted a black ambassador from Malawei, because it wants good relations with that country. But it has sent troops and aid to war-ridden Angola to fight a Soviet-supported faction there.

In the opinion of some, the whites of South Africa are digging their own grave.

Some cry revolution, citing occurrences like Mahomo's, where peaceful means of change have not worked. They say blacks and whites will never cooperate, that white racist feelings will be harder to overcome than racist laws.

Others see a more subtle, but just as powerful change occurring. By not allowing blacks to be trained for specialized jobs, the country is faced with a shortening supply of labor. They are gradually being forced to train blacks and therefore increasing their dependence on black labor.

James Hooker, MSU professor of African history, sees this increase in black skilled labor as the signal for change, rather than a bloody revolution. "Inevitably, there will be a black victory," he said. "It (white dominated South Africa) is not going to last forever.'

Okay, Peggy Gossett, you've forced me to do it.

I've always told ol' Joe Kirby that someday I would write the Great American Sports Column (sort of like the Great American Novel, only shorter) and, well Peggy, you've forced me to do it.

There ya are, Peggy, ranting and raving, ballyhooing, this-ing and that-ing and just generally raising a fuss about how God-awful wonderful the game of football is and what good-natured and deserving fellows football players and coaches are. And not just once - twice. On Oct. 28 AND Nov. 11.

It's enough to make a decent fella want to cry, or read Joe Falls or something terrible like that.

Now, there are several things in both of your columns that make me feel that way. I will elaborate.

First, some tidbits from the Oct. 28 dandy.

"It's (football) one thing in this fragmented society that draws people together, that entices old friends into town for the weekend ... " So do funerals Peggy.

"Compared to life, LIFE in capital letters, football is a delight." Compared to life, in capital letters or not, anything is a delight putting on a clean pair of socks, blowing your nose or sitting. But - ah, yes - there are yet more reasons why one should titter in delight every time the word "football" is uttered. "Football is also the classic bad-guy, good-guy battle without the guns and ammo, where everyone is clearly rooting for one side, drawn together against the common enemy. It's the epitome of cops and robbers, of pigs and freaks, of cowboys and Indians. It's every fan 10 years old again, rolling in the tall weeds of his favorite field waiting to pounce on the robber/freak/Indian."

Yes! Yes! Pounce on that man who is not wearing green and white. Murder the dirtyslobsonuvabitch.

Oh, but wait. On Nov. 11, Peggy, you state that the fans shouldn't be booing and hissing the MSU players because they do not win enough.

"A true Spartan fan would stick up for every fragmented Spartan body out there, instead of debasing them with delirious, defamatory denunciations." All the while they are deliriously debasing the opposing team, right Peggy? Like a good cop pouncing on a bad robber.

Why is it that a fan is merely taking part in the "epitome of cops and robbers" when he dirtyslobsonuvabitches the opposing team, but is an "obnoxious, team castrating" fan when he dirtyslobsonuvabitches his own team? I don't really see the difference. Both pastimes, frankly, are rather enjoyable.

And "team castrating." Really, Peggy. You just cannot tell me that because of a few people using a few nasty words, there are now 88 eunuchs playing football for MSU.

And you cannot honestly tell me that those 88 players are totally ignorant of, isolated from, or shocked by what is commonly known as "locker-room language." I'm also sure all the coaches use "pretty please" during practice sessions. Those poor sensitive souls, exposed to all those heartless fans and their nasty mouths. What scares me the most, though, Peggy, are the endings of both of your columns. On Oct. 28 you say "football has more than its place in society. It has a throne." And on Nov. 11 you give us this; "I say if you can't uphold MSU in its downhill slide, turn in in $12 package your MSU stadium blankets for the scarlet and grey or the maize and blue. OSU and U-M are always looking for more obnoxious, team castrating fans."

Stabley looks back at 'The Spartans

By EDWARD L. RONDERS State News Staff Writer Combining personal reflections and diligent research, Fred Stabley has produced an informative and enlightening work on the history of MSU football.

Stabley, sports information director at MSU the past 27 years, utilizes a command of diction with his professional insight to present MSU football fans, both young and old, with "The Spartans - Michigan State Football." Dissecting the Spartan football tradition into five eras, Stabley covers a vast area of gridiron lore ranging from the the fledgling Spartans. implementation of the sport to the current rebuilding process now underway.

Spiced with references to the various time elements surrounding the eras, the author begins the journey through Spartan history by tracing the beginning of the game on campus.

Included in the beginning recount is the first game Michi-Agriculture College gan played; a 10-0 conquest of Lansing High School in 1896.

The author also presents an inside touch by relating several "human" incidents regarding

One such occurrence is brought forth by Stabley, "At half time of a football game on Old College Field the home team retired to a small enclosure under the grandstand. "President Jonathan Snyder on this occasion paid a visit to his student athletes, possibly to say a few words of encouragement toward greater efforts in the second half. He found the squad members sitting in a circle and passing around a bottle of a popular powerful drink of the day-Duffy's Malt Liquor.

"Pep talk forgotten, the prexy beat a hasty retreat and apparently did his best to forget what he had seen."

Stabley is careful to note throughout this section, as well as throughout the entire book, the various individual performers for the Aggies in their formative years.

Stabley moves on to relate yet another interesting sidelight to the football tradition of MSU.

"Somehow or other, the Michigan State Police got a tip that the gangsters (members of Detroit's infamous Purple Gang) were coming and immediately suspected they would hold up the gate," Stabley writes quoting Lyman Frimodig's recount.

"The gang members arrived in two big black limousines. School officials still were not sure they were there merely as fans. Meantime, the Purple Gang members comported themselves well at the game. But they shook up the citizenry word." afterwards by drawing their gats and taking a few practice shots at the ducks on the Red Cedar River ... "

The author then takes the reader through the war years and into the advent of the Biggie Munn era.

Stabley's work gives due recognition to the man who put Spartan football on the national map. Again, he gives just credit to a multitude of performers under Munn, while maintaining that personal touch.

A typical example of the author's writing versatility revolves around MSU's first visit to the Rose Bowl in 1954.

He explains, "Long before the opening whistle sounded on New Year's Day, Michigan State had scored a notable public relations victory which was important to itself, the Big Ten and the entire Rose Bowl promotion. Ever since the start of the Big Ten pact in 1947 there had been seriously strained relations, particularly with the press."

Explaining that West Coast writers had been banned from Big Ten practice sessions previous to the game, Stabley continues, "This was State's first year in the Big Ten, and the feeling generated by an incident seven years ago meant nothing to them. Biggie Munn promised to hold daily press flair and distinction due interviews at the Huntington successful chapter of MSU Sheraton...And, he kept his ball. "The Spartans" offers old-time football buffs and Moving on, Stabley brings comers alike a knowledge

KOREAN OLYMPIC COACH TO INSTRUCT MSU Judo club sponsors clinic

Putting both of those together - and I will because each came from your typewriter - gives football an incredible amount of significance and that is very dangerous.

It puts people who are not sis-boom-bah, give-'em-hell fans grovelling among the scum of the earth. And even below that are those scoundrels who just happen not to like football that much and don't give up much of their attention, or money, for The Game.

But worst of all are those blockhead, imbecilic, slobbering fools who refuse to kneel before the ruler of all sports, The Spirit of the Great Game of Football - the winning attitude.

To compete, Peggy, is to participate in an event which gives a reward at its completion. And that includes indirect competition, like watching a football game. But by your standards, Peggy, who gets a reward? The winner? Only if they cheer the proper way. And then only if they cheer for the proper sport.

You've just eliminated most of the human race, Peggy.

To me, the people who gain something from competition are those who concentrate on their own performance - win or lose and can benefit from knowing themselves and their limits and attributes a little more intimately and can also have a bit of fun at the same time.

Now Peggy, I realize that those "clowns" who rip into Denny Stolz's coaching ability couldn't "coach the cleats of any Big Ten school," as you say. Hell, hardly anybody has the ability to become a successful Big Ten coach. Look at all the trouble Stolz is having. But Peggy, you shouldn't boot them out of the human race. Hopefully, someday those clowns will benefit from their competitive experience as a football fan, realize they don't like the game and take up ping-pong and live happily ever after. And that, folks, is the Great American Sports Column.

Adviser's competency questioned after hassle in ticket sales line

By MARTY SOMMERNESS

State News Staff Writer Due to a controversy stemming from the handling of a ticket sales line dispute Monday for the Dec. 2 Bob Seger -Peter Frampton concert, four MSU students have questioned the competency of Pop Entertainment adviser Jeff Frumkin to handle his job.

The students, John Hasenau, John Dickson, Paul Hebeler and John Wood, were angered by the way Frumkin dealt with two women whom the four students said cut into the waiting line for tickets to the event.

The four students said they and some friends arrived at the Union Sunday at about 9 p.m. and nine people were already in front of them, waiting to buy tickets for the all seats re- tunity to go to where the end of served MSU Auditorium con- the line was at the time the cert.

in line in front of them had started a list of names of the order in which people got into busy, would not talk to the men the line, to avoid later problems.

When the Union was closed go on sale if anything hapfor the evening about 50 people pened, the men said Frumkin remained and slept outside overnight waiting to get tickets women alone and come talk to for the Pop Entertainment Frumkin at his office at some sponsored event.

At about 5:30 a.m. Monday, the four men said the Union kin's refusal to take the women janitors opened the doors and out of line, said they shoved the ticket line moved inside. their way in front of the

Once inside, the men, who said they were nine through 15 in the line, found two women in front of them who had not been in line before and were not on the list. When told about the list and asked to got to the end of the line, the four men said the two women refused to move. When Pop Entertainment security personnel arrived at about 6:30 a.m., the four men said the security officers stated that no action could be taken about the women until Frumkin arrived. When Frumkin arrived at about 7 a.m., the men said they informed him of the situation, after which Frumkin took one of the women aside and talked to her. The men said Frumkin had offered the women the opporwomen cut into line and then be The people who were waiting escorted to the ticket window, but the women refused.

Frumkin, saying he was too though, they said. Threatening to not allow any of the tickets to told them to leave the two time when he was not busy. The men, angered by Frumwomen, who were then subsequently shoved further down the line past approximately 20 people. The men, who eventually bought their tickets, said they went to talk to Frumkin later in the day about his actions. Frumkin, the men said, noting that his action was based on three years experience in working with campus entertainment, threatened to recommend that ticket sales not be announced in advance to avoid any future conflicts. "I'd rather see him (Frumkin) changed instead of the policy." Paul Hebeler said. "I would be happy to do his job." "We think instead of that

(not announcing ticket sales) they should change the leadership," John Wood said. "We don't have any complaints about the seats, there were no hassles with the crowd. We're complaining about the management. We're complaining about his incompetency."

The men were angered that Frumkin did not take any action, except threaten them and wave his finger at them, they said. "The hassle didn't start until Jeff came in," John Dickson said. "How the hell would that (going to talk to Frumkin later in the day) help us there at the Union?"

"The main thing we're complaining about is him," John Hasenau said. "It shouldn't have happened in the first place.'

"The guys have a bitch, a pretty decent bitch," said Frumkin, noting that, "There wasn't a hell of a lot we could do. Whose word do we take?" Since the tickets were about to go on sale, the Union lobby area was crowded with people and the ticket line stretched to the second floor, Frumkin said he felt he had to "defuse the situation" as quickly as possi-

"My mind was on getting the line moving, the tickets sold and the people out of there so I did what I felt was the best thing at the time." he said. Since neither Frumkin nor the Pop Entertainment security personnel saw the alleged cutting in line incident, Frumkin said that while he did not condone the women's actions there was little he could do.

"I would be upset too," said Frumkin. "When you're dealing with people, nothing's perfect. Pop Entertainment does not set out to burn people."

The Seger - Frampton ticket dispute is not the first such controversy to haunt Pop Entertainment.

Last year, Frumkin said. there were disputes over tickets for the Chicago and Frank Zappa concerts - ticket sales that were announced in advance. Because of the disputes, Pop Entertainment then shifted to a policy of not announcing ticket sales until the day the tickets went on sale.

"Pop Entertainment decided after Loggins and Messina, (Across from Berkey) when to some extent not enough excitement was generated, to announce ticket sales in advance," Frumkin said.

Since Pop Entertainment has to generate all of its own revenues, Frumkin said if implemented, the cost of adding security personnel would increase the price of tickets about 50 cents apiece.
