Courtney Evans, who headed the FBI investigative division in the 1960s, told the committee that Atty. Gen. Kennedy apsuspicions King was being influenced by alleged Communists.

But he said the assassination of President Kennedy fell within the 30-day period and that the attorney general may have been so preoccupied with his brother's death that he did not follow up. In any case, wiretaps continued on King until his assassination in April 1968.

DeLoach gave a first-hand account of the historic feud between Hoover and King. He said the dispute began with an interview King gave in 1962 in Albany, Ga., when he "made the statement that Southern-born, reared and educated FBI agents were not to be trusted" by civil rights

DeLoach said Hoover was bitter and resentful and considered King's remarks as casting a slur on the integrity of FBI agents. Later at a Washington news conference, Hoover called King a "notorious liar" and threw in a trash basket notes from DeLoach asking him urgently to retract the remark or put it off the record. A meeting between Hoover and King was later arranged which turned out to be so amicable that DeLoach described it as a "love feast." Nevertheless, the FBI continued to give King its special attention. At the Justice Dept., Atty. Gen. Edward

Talking computer facilitates communication

By CAROL KLOSE State News Staff Writer

Versatile is the word for MSU's talking computer. Going at various times by the names Alexander, Milton and Cactus Pete, the talking computer terminal has opened up an array of avenues for enhanced communication.

Under the direction of John Eulenberg, professor of linguistics and computer science, the student research team at MSU's artificial Language Lab have created a chatty machine that enables speechimpaired persons to communicate, and students to take classes in their homes from a source miles away. Now it is helping to create government jobs for blind persons.

The multi-faceted machine goes under the name of Alexander for general duties, but adopts the nomsdeplume of Cactus Pete for television study use and Milton when it aids the blind.

'Read' a file

Project Milton is a pilot for the U.S. Civil Service Commission that will adapt a Honeywell 66/80 computer in Macon, Ga. for use by blind employes.

"Many blind people are excellent typists," said Eulenberg. "They could key in the information to the computer but they would not be able to read the printout."

Here, the talking terminal comes in. Hooked up to a computer, the terminal receives electrical impulses which are converted to speech sounds and then relayed through a voice synthesizer. A blind employe would then be able to "read" all of the files stored in the computer by listening to the synthesizer.

Eulenberg and his staff first demonstrated the talking terminal to the commission inWashington, D.C. in February 1975.

The project is funded by a $7,500 grant from the Arkansas Enterprises for the Blind (AEB) in Little Rock which trains blind persons for government jobs. Additional funding of more than $25,000 is expected next year from the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare. First in country

"This is the first project in the country, probably in the world, that is officially funded to use a talking computer to aid the handicapped." Eulenberg said.

The computer in Georgia is being programmed long distance by the artificial language lab. Members of the research team phone up the computer which answers the call with a long buzz. The receiver is then placed on a teletype machine and as the researcher types the program it is transmitted over the phone to the computer. The computer then transmits the program back and it is printed out by the teletype so the researcher can determine if the computer is functioning properly. After the computer is programmed, the MSU team will help train blind civil service

Help for the speech-impaired The commission will test the system further after the demonstration project to determine the feasibility of using the system on a wide-scale basis.

Refinements continue

The team is constantly trying to refine the talking computer, which had to be programmed with several hundred rules of English to enable it to convert the typed-in words to speech. Jim Renuk, an MSU student with cerebral palsy, helps the lab in Steve Kludt, chief programmer for Project Milton, transmits a program to a computer in Georgia.

Eulenberg and the Artificial language Lab team have achieved many other notable accomplishments in developing the talking computer.

Recently Eulenberg demonstrated the computer at the Plymouth Center for Human Development. Vicki Caruso, a 17-year-old student at the center who has a speech impairment because of cerebral palsy, used the computer to communicate by voice for the first time in her life.

The demonstration was part of a pilot program that will allow students at the center to communicate through the computer. The program is sponsored by the U.S. Office of Education through Wayne its attempts to refine the system.

"We exist in the world only to communicate," J.J. Jackson, a consultant to the lab, said. "You may have all the thoughts in the world but if you can't communicate them, what good are they?"

The talking computer is also being tested to teach courses by cable television. Courses would be televised and the talking computer would serve as a type of proctor for the course. A student could phone the computer and receive instant feedback on the answers to tests and homework. Such a program is being planned for next term at MSU under the name Cactus Pete.

A program to teach firefighters in Rockford, Ill. new safety techniques is also on the drawing board. The course would be taught from MSU but the firefighters would be able to stay in their town and still protect the community.

No money from 'U'

Despite the fact that MSU has probably done more work with talking computers than any other University, the lab has not received any financial support from the University, Eulenberg said. "They haven't put one cent into extending our facilities for their own students," he

However, the Dept. of Computer Science has been very supportive in funding the lab's research, he said.

Since much of the equipment needed by the lab is expensive, they often make their own. Recently Eulenberg made a piece of equipment for $15 that would have cost

"Stevie Wonder has indicated he is interested in doing a benefit concert at MSU for the lab," Eulenberg said. Wonder has supported the lab in other ways, he said, such as flying lab team members to computer demonstrations around the country.

"Soon," the professor said, "We may be funded by 'Wonder bread.'

Spartan fight song mix-up no faux pas, prof claims

U-M political science professor Allen S. Whiting told the Associated Press Tuesday that the MSU Fight Song, played at President Ford's Peking reception, was no mistake on the part of the Chinese, but a subtle political statement.

"They were putting a little humor on the frosty reception," Whiting said. "The title of our song, 'The Victors,' is literally a salute to the dominant team."

Whiting contended that the Chinese were referring to the conciliatory stand the U.S. has taken in detente with the Soviet Union. The Chinese made a statement at the reception castigating the U.S. foreign policy because it raised the risk of war. They then alluded to the aggressive stance of the Paul Varg, MSU professor of history and a China expert, saw the events in a different light.

"Allen Whiting knows China as well as any man in America," Varg said. "But this time he may see a significance that is not there. I think it is no more than a minor error by the Chinese bureaucracy."

Dr. Kwan Wai So, MSU professor of history, said, "It is possible that they (the Chinese) may know the difference between the songs. We don't have enough information. I'm afraid Whiting's remarks were just a guess.'

Varg speculated that Whiting's remarks may have been tongue in cheek. "He shows remarkable intuition in the absence of adequate facts," Varg said in analysing Whiting's comments. He doubted Whiting would make such a remark seriously under those conditions.

Then he added with a laugh, "Better an anthem in Peking than a team in the Orange

Not since the days of Captain Kangaroo will so many MSU students be up at 8 a.m. to watch TV in front of their cereal bowls.

Geralso Rivera, reporter for ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" show, has completed his report about life on the MSU campus and it is ready to be shown. Rivera was on campus Nov. 14 and 15 filming the segment, to be shown this Friday and Monday between 8 and 8:30 a.m.

ABC stations carrying the program will be Channel 41 (station WUHQ in Battle Creek) and Channel 7 (WXYZ in Detroit). Channel 12 (WJRT of Flint), an ABC affiliate, will not carry the program.

Simpson announces resignation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, upset about White House delays in announcing either his reappointment or his successor, says he is resigning.

Richard O. Simpson told President Ford in a letter Tuesday that he is withdrawing from consideration for reappointment because of frustration over the delay in saying whether or not he will be named to a new term.

Simpson, appointed chairman when the commission was created in May 1973, said in a telephone interview that he would stay through December, but that he would need a "strong reason" to remain longer.

Vietnamese to discuss MIAs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House committee on missing persons in Southeast Asia will meet with diplomatic officials from North and South Vietnam in Paris on Saturday, its chairman said Wednesday.

"We believe this signifies a willingness of the North Vietnamese to begin a fruitful dialogue on the MIA (missing in action) matter in relation to other issues the North Vietnamese consider important to them," said Rep. G. V. Montgomery, D-Miss.

The House committee was established last September and given a year to complete the mission of gaining information on U.S. military and civilian personnel still listed as missing

AMA opposes Chicago walkout

HONOLULU (AP) - The American Medical Assn. sidestepped a strong statement against strikes by doctors but took a firm position against a recent walkout by residents and interns at Chicago's Cook County Hospital.

The action came during the House of Delegates meeting Tuesday at the annual AMA clinical convention.

A resolution proposed to the House of Delegates would have put the association on record as "vehemently opposed" to denial of hospital care because of labor discord. Residents and interns claimed the labor dispute in Chicago was primarily over patient care, not economic issues.

But the 250-member body approved a statement simply urging hospitals to make strong efforts to resolve labor disputes and avoid disruption of medical care.

Rail labor talks break down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Railway labor talks stalled Wednesday and leaders of four shopcraft unions warned of a nationwide strike at 6 a.m. today unless the industry was willing to negotiate a last-minute settlement.

The chief union negotiator, James Yost, said that unless the railroads "can somehow be induced to inject a note of realism and flexibility into their position, we are headed for the strike.'

The main issue in the dispute has been the outside contracting of maintenance and repair work on railroad equipment. The unions want stiffer restrictions on subcontracting, while the railroads contend that such demands encroach on management's rights.

Workers halt wildcat strike

TOKYO (UPI) — Government workers Wednesday called a halt to a wildcat strike that shut down rail transportation and disrupted mail and communication services for eight days.

The 860,000-member Council of Public Corporation Workers Union announced it planned to end the illegal walkout at midnight (10 a.m. EST) Thursday without achieving its goal — the right of government workers to

The union's capitulation followed Prime Minister Takeo Miki's refusal to yield to union demands and increasing public discontent over the walkout.

Thirteen hijack hostages flee

BEILEN, The Netherlands (AP) — Thirteen of 72 hostages aboard a hijacked train in northern Holland escaped from their Indonesian captors Tuesday and raced to safety, a Justice Ministry spokesman said.

He said the group made a sudden break from the rear coach of the train which was apparently unguarded at the time, and ran through the dark to police posts.

Police had initially reported there were 50 hostages, but later said there were 72, including seven small children. Earlier in the day, officials said the five gunmen opened fire on a would-be mediator and released a Chinese cook with new demands: an engineer for the train, food and drink, a bullhorn and medicine for an epileptic and a diabetic, officials said.

Bank target of holdup attempt

PARIS (AP) — Gunmen seized about 30 hostages in a bank near the Eiffel Tower after an attempted holdup Tuesday and demanded $900,000 ransom and a getaway car, police said.

A passer-by was wounded in the foot in a burst of gunfire as the bandits entered the Credit Lyonnais Bank on Avenue Bosquet. A number of gunshots were heard from inside the bank and the gunmen also fired on a police car. Three hostages were believed wounded.

Police sources confirmed that $950,000 had been delivered outside the bank and taken inside by the gangsters.

Laos drops neutral coalition

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) - A People's Congress in Communistled Laos has scrapped the 600-year-old monarchy, dissolved the coalition government and unanimously agreed to form a republic, the national radio announced Wednesday.

The actions of the congress consolidated Communist control over all Indochina. As the U.S.-backed regimes in Cambodia and Vietnam fell last spring, the Pathet Lao moved almost unopposed to oust the Americans from Laos and to seize control of the neutralist government.

A broadcast said the historic congress here received and accepted an abdication note from 68-year-old King Savang Vathana and a letter of resignation from the 74-year-old neutralist premier, Prince Souvanna Phouma.

The radio and the Ministry of Information said the congress, at a meeting Monday and Tuesday, unanimously abolished the coalition government and the Joint National Political Council, both of which included some rightists and neutralists.

The broadcast said the new official name of Laos would be the People's Democratic Republic of Laos.

The formal termination of the coalition government followed almost a week of well-drilled demonstrations staged by the Pathet Lao throughout the country, including two anti-monarchist protests in the royal capital of Luang Prabang, 150 miles to the

"In response to the wishes of all the people of the kingdom of Laos, the Neo Lao Hak Xat called for the meeting of the People's Congress on Dec. 1 and 2 to take that action," the broadcast said.

The Palestine guerilla command in Beirut also charged that Israeli air raids on Lebanon are condoned by the United States to counter Palestinian diplomatic victories at the United Nations.

"We ask world opinion and all international establishments to condemn this savage crime, which was agreed on by the American administration," said Majid Abu Sharar, information director of the PLO. "It was carried out with American planes, American bombs and pilots trained by the American military."

In Washington, a State Dept. spokesman said the United States deplores the continuing "cycle of violence and counterviolence" because it hinders efforts for permanent peace.

Lebanese police said more than 150 persons were wounded in addition to those killed in the attacks Tuesday on refugee camps and guerilla bases in northern and southern Lebanon. The PLO said more than half of the victims were women and children.

Israel repeated an earlier government statement that the planes had hit a number of bases belonging to "various terrorist organizations" and did not comment on Lebanese reports that they had hit civilian settlements.

Abu Sharar, in a news conference in Beirut, said the guerilla leadership held a major strategy meeting and agreed on "a new plan to escalate strikes inside Israel."

Since the beginning of the year, PLO leader Yasir Arafat has been calling 1975 the "year of escalation," but Abu Sharar said, "This is something new. You shall soon see the results of this new plan."

Guerillas in south Lebanon launched night-long rocket barrages at Israeli border settlements after the raid, claiming they inflicted "heavy damage and casualties." Israel said two villagers were slightly wounded in the rocket attacks. Meanwhile, the Le

In other action Tuesday the board voted to establish a student advisory council to the board of trustees. This group will meet with the board of trustees at least once a term to discuss issues relevant to the student body.

The council would be composed of the president of ASMSU, the president of the Council of Graduate Students and a representative of the Student Council.

The bill was originally introduced in 1971 but Raymond said the bill had been defeated before because ASMSU did not feel it was a worthwhile bill.

He said they feel now that it is at least a start and expressed hope to eventually expand the project.

Another bill was introduced to establish a commission to examine the possibility of firing or moving the ASMSU business manager and board secretary to another department within the University.

There has been a great deal of question as to whether the services of the two employes are worth the cost to the ASMSU Board. The bill stated that the salaries of the two women combined make up over $18,000, or a third of the ASMSU budget.

The board also approved a $5,531 allocation to Legal Services, completing the passage of ASMSU's budget for 1976.

The board also voted against denying the CIA the right to recruit on campus. The policy committee recommended failure of the bill because they felt students should have the opportunity to be interviewed by the CIA if they chose to do so.

ATTEMPT TO HALT EPA LAWSUITS DERAILED

"Upper Penninsula legislators supported the bill and so did environmentalists," Cawthorne added.

Cawthorne and opponents to the Senate bill said that the House version strikes at the heart of the issue of delay in court - which the companies claim cause them to loose

Cawthorne's amendment would require courts to give priority to litigation started under the Michigan Environmental Protection Act of 1970 (MEPA), allowing organizations and individuals to seek injunctions to stop industry from implementing projects that may have effects on the environment. Currently, certain bonding suits, child custody disputes, public utilities litigation and worker's compensation cases can be moved to the top of a court's docket also. Sen. Joseph Mack, D-Iron Mountain, sponsored the Senate version of the bill which would free mining companies from any lawsuits 30 days after the company received a permit to operate. He refused to comment on the House version until he studied it further.

Mack's original bill, introduced last Spring, initially exempted only mining industries. It was reported out of the Senate in June and defeated by the House in August. Rep. Jack Gingrass, D-Iron Mountain, revived House consideration of the Senate Bill in October and it was further amended to allow all industries exemptions, but extending the time limit for suits to 60 days after the issuance of an environmental Environmentalists who opposed the Senate version of the Mack bill claimed that by taking away the power of the individual or an organization to challenge a company's plans in defense of the environment would subvert the intention of the MEPA. The MEPA's constitutionality was upheld in Michigan Supreme Court earlier in 1975.

The Cawthorne amendment was passed after other amendments and a substitute bill was ready for action but not presented. Now, the Senate will consider the House

Rep. Dominic Jacobetti, D-Negaunee, was one of the strongest supporters of Mack's Senate bill in the House, conferring with mining interests in trying to push it through. He said in debate Wednesday on the House floor that his original intentions and efforts were not "to defeat the purpose of the environmental act.'

"We wanted to streamline the permit and legislative process," he said.

Couple to talk on Vietnam trip

Ever wondered what has been going or in Saigon since Vietnam fell last spring? Sophie and Paul Quinn-Judge, members of an American Friends Service Committee team, have recently returned from Saigon and will be telling of their experiences today. The Quinn-Judges will hold a press conference at 10:00 a.m. Thursday and give a "Vietnam Update" at 7:30 tonight. Both meetings will be held in the U Ministries for Higher Eucation lounge located at 1118 S. Harrison Road.

Detailed course descriptions question on today's Academic Council program

The Academic Council, meeting today for the last time this term, will attempt once again to solve the problem of providing students with more detailed course descriptions.

The Committee on Academic Policy (CAP) will propose that the council "vigorously affirm that the University is under obligation to provide substantially more detailed course information for curriculum planning," but it will recommend that the course information be supplied through the provost's office and the departments rather than individual instructors.

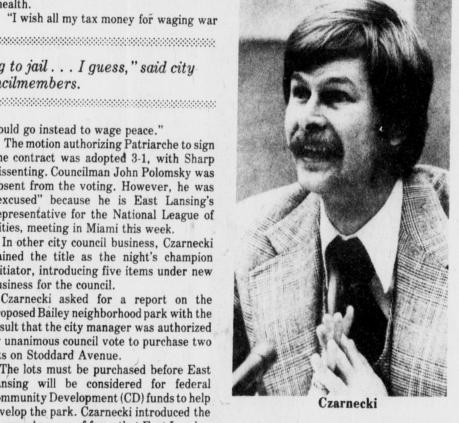

Controversy arose in the council when the CAP originally proposed that instructors be held responsible for better course descriptions in time for pre-enrollment by a change in the written Code of Teaching Responsibility. Many instructors spoke against putting the burden on them, saying that it would require excessive pre-planning, often impossible because of late assignments, to teach courses. But students and some faculty members argued in favor of the proposal.

Finally, at last month's Academic Council meeting, Erwin Bettinghaus, chairman of the Communication Dept., suggested that the Code of Teaching Responsibility be sent back to the CAP -and back it went.

The CAP came to rather quick agreement on the current proposal, Paul Varg, CAP chairman, said.

Beatrice Lin, undergraduate member of the council steering committee, said she has not heard student opposition to the new resolution. Apparently Student Council members are glad to be getting better course descriptions, whether through the instructors or through the departments and the provost.

"It's a little weak because it doesn't specify that we'll have the course descriptions by pre-enrollment," Lin said, stating her only complaint.

Vacation business

The state consumer protection bill, as many are not fond of recalling, has been around the legislature longer then many legislators.

Bantered back and forth, voted down by one house, then the other, the bill was sprung Wednesday from the House Appropriations Committee and will come up for debate - once more - on the House floor.

The legislation would specify fraudulent business practices to be outlawed in Michigan. After several years in veritable limbo, it is about time for it to be passed.

The state budget is also pending in state government while MSU students are on break. It is now up to Gov. Milliken to issue a new executive order for budget cuts. Unfortunate though such a need is, Milliken must not procrastinate, since the smooth operation of countless schools and social agencies is dependent upon knowing how much money they will have to spend.

Other action pending:

•The bottle bill, HB 4296, which was buried in the Appropriations Committee two weeks ago. The bottle bill would go far toward eliminating ecologically harmful litter and easing up on our natural resources;

•HB 4057, which would allow right turns at red lights after stops, is due to be signed into law by Gov. Milliken;

•A bill that would grant unemployment benefits for student workers. A much needed bill, it passed the House and is in the Senate. However, before passing, it must be strengthened by including student workers under the age of 22:

•A land use bill, HB 4234, which would initiate a program to protect irreplaceable agricultural and natural areas from over-zealous developers:

•A bill which would eliminate jail penalties for possession or distribution of less than two ounces of marijuana.

These are items that need some active constituent prodding through legislative channels during Christmas vacation vacation that shouldn't turn into isolation.

Useful, not necessary

There once was a time when you could tell a math or accounting major by the sharpened pencil tucked behind his ear. Now, the best sign is a pocket calculator dangling from a belt loop.

It is not a difficult thing to comprehend. The mini-computers speed up calculation, reduce error and free a student to concentrate on the reasoning of the problem. without getting bogged down in the calculations.

However, faith in the electronic marvels may have gone too far. The National Advisory Committee on Mathematical Education, concerned with the decline of computational skills among the young, has recommended that students as young as the eighth grade be given the machines to help develop these skills.

Electronic calculators have their place, and that place is to aid students already familiar with the basic skills. The introduction of calculators at so young an age would only further erode the already declining mathematical capabilities of students.

Students at MSU have shown the value of the calculators as a convenience. We should take care to insure that they never become valuable as a necessity.

Inscrutables

"American diplomats know him for what he is," concluded a dispatch from Geneva to Henry Luce's LIFE magazine, June 28, 1954, "a ruthless intriguer, a conscienceless liar, a saber - toothed political assassin." Who's this monster? - Why, to be sure, Chou En - lai, the man President Ford is visiting this week in China.

At Geneva in 1954 the Chinese emissary badly wanted accord. Harold Wilson of England found him "entirely friendly and warm in all his dealings with us." But to the so-called U.S. "China Lobby" he was a moral leper, just what Life Magazine called him, "a political thug and professional

They met, of course, Chou En-lai and our man, John Foster Dulles, the two foreign ministers in the conference hall in Geneva. Chou advanced, holding out his hand. Dulles recoiled, put his behind his back. "I cannot," he muttered and stalked out.

So now Mr. Ford visits Peking (and a very good thing, too) but is it any wonder that the Chinese think it is we, not they, who are "enigmatic?"

Richard Nixon spent years attacking communism and blaming Democrats for "losing China." In 1952 he declared "China wouldn't have gone Communist if the Truman Administration had had backbone." Every Republican platform from 1948 through 1968 said no compromise with China. "We are opposed to the recognition of Red China," said Barry Goldwater in 1964. And then a few months after his 1968 election, Nixon reversed positions and thereafter visited the place even calling it by its right name, "The People's Republic of What will curious Chinese think of the perplexing Americans in the Ford visit? Will we be cold or hot — or tepid? First we were warm, at the turn of the century when we used Boxer indemnity money to encourage them, build schools and send students here. We were smug and complacent. In that patronizing era, Sen. Kenneth Wherry uttered his great phrase to a cheering audience, "With God's help, we will lift Shanghai up and up, ever up, until it is just like Kansas City.

Then the ungrateful Chinese threw out our man Chiang Kai - shek and installed their man, Mao Tse - tung. What presumption. The transition in U.S. thought was violent: "smiling, dutiful, loyal Chinese had almost overnight become yellow hordes, mindless functional Communist ants, a shocking new reincarnation," said David Halberstam. "Old China hands" in the U.S. diplomatic service pleaded for understanding of the new regime; if we didn't help, China would turn to Russia; they were disgraced. Gen. Vinegar Joe Stilwell, assigned to Chiang's staff, called him "a peanut dictator;" he was replaced. We sent perhaps $3 billion dollars worth of supplies to Chiang; it was lost. Our new ambassador, breezily overconfident Pat Hurley, quarreled with all his staff and resigned with a sensational public charge: "a considerable section of our State Dept. is endeavoring to support communism generally, as well as specifically in China." That brought McCar-

As Barbara Tuchman wrote in her book, "Innate fear and hate of communism reasserted itself in America. On that dark yeast, grudge, ambition and vindictiveness could feed, and demagogues grow fat. Hurley opened the journey to the tawdry reign of terror soon to be imposed with such astonishing ease by Sen. Joe McCarthy. The time of hysterics had arrived.'

No doubt students of the United States in Red China are trying to appraise the new revelations of CIA and FBI activity, as President Ford arrives. Is the "time of hysterics" over in America, they ask? There was this plot to assassinate Lummuba with poisons, the cooperation with criminals to upset Allende in Chile, the plans to use a contaminated diving suit against Fidel Castro. You can imagine the serious minded Chinese in some alcove of the Peking foreign office wrestling with the nuances of these affairs, trying to understand the mental processes of devious and inscrutable Occidentals who proposed to use poisoned cigars, toxic tooth brushes, depilatories and exploding seashells against enemies. "Have a cigaret?" asks a visiting American journalist. "No, I think not," says the polite Chinaman through the interpre-

John Service in 1944-45 seemed the right man at the right place: a 35 year old foreign service officer, born in China of missionary parents, fluent in Chinese, who suddenly, by accident became a semiofficial link with Chou and Mao in the Yenan caves. They poured out endless appeals for postwar Sino - American economic cooperation. He passed the word on to Washington, which wouldn't

There was one more chance. "If China goes Communist, so what?" asked George Kennan, chief of the Policy Planning Staff of the State Dept. Truman was half convinced in 1947 - 49, and tried to extricate himself from the Chinese civil war. But Congress, McCarthy and the China Lobby were too much.

On wolves

Ms. Sirk.

Your letter supporting the upcoming wolf kill proves only one thing. That the "legend" surrounding the "big bad Wolf" is alive and thriving, in your home state of Alaska. For your information and mental well being, there has never been a single documented case of a healthy (nonrabid) wolf attacking a human being in North America.

And you criticize Mr. Doyle for butting his nose into "your" affairs. Fortunately, many people's environmental concerns are not restricted to within state boundaries. For if you are the typical Alaskan citizen, I am well assured that Alaska, the last remaining wilderness of OUR nation, is heading for certain destruction.

I would like to be able to thank the people at Pop Entertainment through this paper. I will be graduating this term and I am leaving behind a number of good friends in the organization. I would especially like to thank Bird, Bonnie, Jeff Montgomery, the very competent Jeff Frumkin, the late, great Paul Stanley and Hugh Surrat, and all of those who have worked for me on the stage crew. I would also like to solicit student support for Pop Entertainment. It is a great organization, despite the peculiar way it functions. There is a possibility of a spring concert in the stadium, but only with your active support. To those who want very much to join the organization, keep strokin'.

Empty rhetoric

The letter written by Basil Esmail in support of the recent UN resolution classifying Zionism, the national liberation movement of the Jewish people, as "racism" relies on historical distortion and empty rhetoric to support its point of view.

Its assertion regarding the events of 1947 1948 ignores the very significant fact that the United Nations originally partitioned Palestine into a Jewish state and an Arab state, with the latter never becoming a reality basically because of the violent refusal of most "Palestinians" and neighboring Arab countries to accept partition.

Its assertion that Zionists "should have stayed in Europe and fought the racists and anti - Semites there" must offend any serious student of the World War II era; the gallant stand of the Warsaw ghetto fighters and the final toll of approximately six million Jews murdered by the Nazis respectively, attest to the determination of Jews to resist and the impossibility of their effectively doing so.

The UN resolution condemning Zionism was an outrageously hypocritical act. It was spurred by a group of totalitarian, racist dictatorships whose purpose is - by relying on the opportunistic and amoral Soviet Union for armaments and by using their oil as a tool of blackmail - to keep the one socialist democracy in their midst under constant siege and eventually to destroy it.

Only a reaffirmation by the United States of continuing moral, political and military support for Israel can assure that they will

Losing elms

As a former city and state "forester," I enjoyed your article regarding the plight of MSU-area American elms.

Having worked with the Detroit Dept. of Parks and Recreation in the late '60s I recall a yearly toll of some 10,000 elms removed from neighborhoods there.

Now as a resident of Marquette, 400 miles north of MSU, I wish to assure you and your readers that the disease may be slowed by "colder temperatures" - but it still is taking its toll.

Many areas of our Upper Peninsula have lost thousands of elms, with many more victims waiting.

It is, of course, possible our American elm is going to join the American chestnut! James A. Schultz Extension 4-H youth agent Marquette, Mich.

Drunk, indeed!

It seems that even in this day and age, responsible journalists are a rare species. I refer to your article on pages 7 and 14 of the State News issue of Wednesday, November 26. This article described the tournament and revels which were held over the weekend by the Society for Creative Anachronism.

In the first name, my name is Hadlock, not Hadley, as you so carefully printed. In the second, I have been grossly misquoted. Your account reads: "...mentioned that a revel would follow the tournament and people would get roaring drunk." I did indeed mention that a revel would follow the tournament; however, the bit about people getting roaring drunk is

In three years I have never been at a revel where anyone got even slightly tipsy. Since most of our events are held either in local church halls or on the University campus, alcohol is strictly prohibited at SCA functions in most cases. In addition, the members of the local group simply do not GET roaring drunk.

This piece of blatant irresponsibility has done my honor, my character and my reputation irreparable damage, and I think the reporter who wrote the piece owes me and the Society a public apology; which, however, cannot possible unsay that which has already been said, and cannot undo the harm. I hope that your writers will be more careful in the future when purporting to "quote" someone. Most of us do not appreciate being misquoted. Roaring drunk, indeed! Will you dare to print this, I wonder?

In stating that Palestinians denied access to their homes (vacated their own free will 25 years ago). Esmail ignores the fact that these refug will not return until the state of Israel, its people, are abolished.

Israel has no policy excluding Arabs its borders. Arabs are not unju persecuted in Israel. Israel issues threats, and has never demanded "right" to take over Arab lands. And ye and the UN have the audacity to claim the idea of a Jewish State is the sam racism.

Mr. Esmail also suggests that J should have stayed in Europe and for anti-semitism there, instead of "oppress the Palestinians. This is a ludic position to take; the six million Jews did stay in Europe were mercile exterminated by Hitler. And saying the Jews oppress the Palestinians saying that you oppress someone if demand to take over your home and refuse.

olegislators vote on a bill supported of the electorate — but opposed by the most powerful lobbyists in Lansing? They sidestep the issue by referring it to an unfriendly committee - this time, Appropriations - "without recommendation." This says to their colleagues: "We want this issue off our backs. We're under irresistable pressure to kill it, but there's too much public support to do it openly." That way, they can tell their constituents, "We're in favor of the bill. After all, we voted it out of committee."

Of course, the lobbyists understand what is really going on and are perfectly content to have the bill killed any way that is Perhaps what is most disturbing about the committee's action is that many members completely ignored the findings of an exhaustive six - month study by the Michigan Public Service Commission.

Because the 430 - page, statistics - packed report reads like an overly literal translation of a German treatise, it is not likely to replace "The Joy of Sex" on the best - seller lists. However, the study does provide the most comprehensive and objective analysis of container legislation that has ever been done in Michigan. The report carefully documents the energy, employment, consumer and environmental impacts the Bottles Bill would have on Michigan.

The analysis concludes that the Michigan

Bottles Bill would save a minimum of 4.2 trillion BTUs, or enough energy to heat 28,000 homes. This magnitude of energy conservation would be especially welcome at a time when shortages have sent Michigan utility bills skyrocketing.

Moreover, a complete switch to returnable bottles would save 104,000 tons of glass and 96,000 tons of steel and aluminum. This is a crucial consideration, since depletion of raw materials, particularly metals, has become a serious world

Because a deposit system rewards people for not littering, state and local governments would save more than $4 million annually on cleanup costs, the report says. The current unnecessary use of tax revenues for litter pickup makes even less sense now that budget squeezes have curtailed vital public services.

Most happily of all in these days of unemployment, the PSC study also projects a net gain of 4,000 to 8,000 new jcbs in Michigan if the Bottles Bill is enacted.

And because returnables cost less, the report concludes that consumers would save $17 to $48 million on their grocery bills. How is it possible to employ thousands more people and still sell beer and soft drinks at a lower price? The substantial resource savings of a returnable system more than outweigh its increased labor costs. With so many unemployed workers in the state, the switch to a labor - intensive returnable system makes especially good sense in Michigan.

Richard Helmbrecht, the director of the Commerce Dept., of which the Public Service Commission is a division, helped those who wanted to ignore the facts. On the very morning of the committee's meeting, too late for careful examination, he released a "bill analysis" in which he attacked the findings published of his own department and opposed the Bottles Bill. His analysis ignored or obscured major points of the study, but it did its job. At least one key supporter of the bill, Rep. James F. Smith (R - Grand Blanc) indicated after the meeting that Helmbrecht's analysis was a key factor in his last minute change of vote. Since the motion to bury the bill in the Appropriations Committee passed by only one vote, Smith's temporary change of heart

A Christmas gift to uplift spirits

I have been accused of being some sort of about wine, eros and the serenity of the maverick. My columns have been odd sort of pieces for a newspaper, and this will be no exception. I guess I don't fall into the mold too easily. One of my professors has accused me of using his paper assignments to preach my social philosophy-probably true. (I apologize.)

Last Wednesday evening, before Thanksgiving, I found myself in Owosso. It was snowing that gentle kind of snow that turns the whole world into a cathedral. My thoughts turned to the uncoming holiday and the Christmas season. What sort of gifts do I have to give all of you? I have been musing on this question for some time and this column is my only answer.

Christmas always drives me to write about the future, to think more about the problems which face us. The season, and the mood which surrounds it, seems to lend itself to the pen. I would rather write poems, but the times we live in demand more than that. I am a little envious of the ancient bards and their muses, free simply to celebrate their existence with poems

green mountains

No, I don't have that kind of freedom. I am faced with sober thoughts! Six countries have the bomb. The individual is threatened with submersion in large cities, governments and universities. We shout and can't be heard for all the shouting. We turn away, unable to reflect on these things for long, without feeling powerless.

This powerlessness seems to lie at the root of our dreams, at their very conception. We dream of a simple life away from thought—even at MSU, supposedly a center of education, we shy away from thinking. We dream of losing ourselves in drink or another's arms. We dream of rejecting the whole world and living in the mountains.

Yet these dreams are false. Problems do not evaporate when ignored, but fester and grow. Our duties to others do not disappear simply because we ignore them. Love was not meant as a crutch for those too weak. And the mountains? I don't believe they were created for people to hide among, to peek out from behind when all seems safe.

My gift to you is simple: don't cage your life in such simple dreams. My pessimism about the world is blackest only when I see people who have abandoned their role in it, and never stop to think what this might mean to themselves, those around them or generations yet to come.

It is the wisest sort of lesson from an old, old source, that to achieve the greatest of personal blessings, one must also give something to others. Dreams which permit escape violate this maxim, and threaten even the little private glee their selfishness

Yet, I fear that my words are strange in this context, and that their meaning is somehow out of place. Still, Christmas is my special holiday and, Christian or not, you must indulge me in my practice of dispensing gifts. I can think of nothing closer to my heart than my friends, nor anything more elevating than the solitude of last Wednesday's snow. And somehow, there is nothing more uplifting to the spirit than words from one who believes in the future after having stared it straight in the adulthood in society when, as adults, they can expect to be systematically rejected for employment, denied civil rights (especially in Michigan) and excluded from "public" transportation and buildings, as well as socially ostracized.

If one takes a closer look, one realizes that people like Mr. Bristor can not afford to have handicappers develop a positive self-image. Haven't you ever wondered why the upper echelon of the "charitable' organization are almost exclusively T.A.B.s, when the largest statistical minority in this country is handicappers? No need to wonder.

The T.A.B.s who get their 'respectable' titles and often financial considerations from these "charitable" organizations can do so only so long as handicappers are suppressed and forced to maintain second and third class citizenship roles.

It is hard to imagine that handicappers will have ample opportunity to develop positive self-images when the very organizations who purport to "help" us do so by continuing to stress how "tragic" it is to be a handicapper and by continuing to discriminate against handicappers in their own

Keep in mind that the NAACP is not headed by whites, nor is NOW headed by males. The real challenge for handicappers is to fight the tactics of such "charitable" organizations and individuals who have

Panovs' Michigan premiere

Valery and Galina Panov are now free to dance. Since leaving the Soviet Union, they have signed a contract with the American Ballet Theatre and will tour the nation as bright reminders of the strength of the human spirit.

The Panovs join an impressive roster of ballet stars, dancers like Mikhail Baryshnikov, Natalia Makarova, Gelsey Kirkland and America's own glory, Cynthia Gregory.

American Ballet Theatre is a fairly young company in comparison with the older companies of Europe. They have attempted to bolster their youth by presenting a glittering cachet of stars — all of whom seem to have defected from The Leningrad Kirov Ballet. Critics have commented on this fact, but despite their comments, Ballet Theatre continues to draw sizable crowds to its box office. Now Valery and Galina Panov have been added to an already impressive roster.

Appearing with the Panovs are the Ballet Repertory Company, the junior group of the Ballet Theatre. The Panovs provided an interesting look at their skill last week at the Detroit Masonic Temple. It must be said, however, that despite the rave notices about them, their performances provided mixed reactions.

The Panov's first appearance on stage was in the Grand Pas de Deux (Act II) of "Giselle." "Giselle" is the consummate challenge to the classical dancer. Its reputation, difficult choreography and intricate, integral mime work all combine to make it a considerable challenge.

Unfortunately, the Panovs gave a rather weak treatment of the piece. Valery seemed strained and somewhat mechanical in his dancing, and Galina, while moving beautifully with her head and arms, was not as expert with her feet. They did not provide the strength needed for "Giselle." Despite its heavy romanticism, it is still a work that requires a considerable amount of power.

Technically all the steps were there but the dancing seemed to be perfunctory, which lended a lackluster air to the piece. The audience reacted joyfully, but its reaction seemed to have been based on the heroic reputation of the Panovs themselves, plus the fact that they were seeing them dance the famed "Giselle."

In their next piece, entitled "Lady and the Hooligan," the performance level was considerably higher. Choreographed by Valery Panov to the music of Dmitri Shostakovich, it was billed on the program as "a Russian ballet satire which shows the conflict between capitalism and socialism in Russia in the 1920s." It was a bright and amusing piece that was danced with a sweeping swiftness and vivid technical mastery.

The music of Shostakovich was especially memorable because it set the mood of social change so clearly. The struggle between the old and the new was dramatically shown with characteristic Russian soul-searching.

The Panovs ended the evening with Valery's restaging of Maurius Petipa's "Harlequinade." It was here that the pair showed their expertise, Valery with his soaring jumps and sharp, well-executed tour en l'airs, Galina with a series of six ronds de jambes en l'air. She also executed ten beautiful pique pirouttes, all sharp as steel, with a jewel-like fire and flair. Galina's brilliant technical skill overwhelmed the audience and the reaction was thunderous applause and gleeful shouts of "bravo."

At times Valery tended to overdo it a bit with his bounding leaps and turns, but the audience loved every minute of it. Indeed, most of the people who come to see the Panovs come to see the gravity-defying balances and soaring, dramatic leaps.

The Ballet Repertory Company, under the direction of Richard Englund, was formed to give big-troupe advantages to young dancers. Unfortunately, their youth proved to be against them. This was clearly shown in the Bournonville Divertissement.

August Bournonville was a Danish choreographer of the 19th century. His works are known for their spirited and joyful qualities. The charm of Bournonville is in his delightfully effervescent delicacy. His best-known work is "La Sylphide," which is not to be confused with Fokine's "Les Sylphides

The Divertissement featured excerpts from "Napoli," including the Tarantella, the pas de deux from "Flower Festival in Genzano" and the trio from "Abdullah." The work was clearly above the level of the young dancers. It was embarrassing to watch them count out their pirouette preparations and to see them falter once the step was accomplished. The technique of spotting (where the dancer keeps his eye on a fixed point to avoid dizziness) should be down pat before a dancer attempts the classical range. In addition, the dancers seemed to lack energy. They appeared quite tired at times. The result was somewhat sloppy for a company performing under the auspices of the American Ballet Theatre.

They fared better in the "Hanson Piano Quartet" which was choreographed by Kevin Hagien. It was a lovely modern ballet with a lot of bravura and depth. The dancers were more successful since the piece did not put a strain on their limitations.

The repertory company did their best in "Crazy Quilt," choreographed by Englund to music by Aaron Copland. It was a powerful piece that exuded Americana. There was also a tender lyricism to the work.

In this piece, the company was delightfully at its best. Its timing had improved and all the intricate patterns were handled with ease. It proved that the repertory company can dance when the work is carefully attuned to the abilities of its members.

All facts considered, the Ballet Repertory Company and the Panvos gave an entertaining evening of dance.

ob Seger or Peter Frampton have ever faced audience ms, Tuesday's concert at the MSU Auditorium was probably st form of therapy either performer could ask for. n a rock and roll star almost gets a standing ovation before n touches his instrument, it stands to reason that he is nted with an unusally enthusiastic audience. Tuesday night, Frampton, for one, had to ask the audience to calm down so could begin. Bob Seger, on the other hand, had no such and his show never suffered a moment.

ween rounds of mutual praise between Frampton and his ice, the British guitarist demonstrated a versatility in mance that one might judge to be quite unusual, considering ton's Humble Pie origins. Beginning with an acoustic guitar ch really is the only way to fit an acoustic set in a rock and mat — Frampton sang "All I Want To Be" and managed to in a brief instrumental from "Frampton," his latest album. after, the rest of the Frampton band emerged onstage. No billed as "Frampton's Camel," the quartet included ton, Bob Mayo on keyboards and guitar, Sidney Sheldon on nd Andy Newmark on drums. Only Newmark's presence, ton made quite clear to the audience, made their ance possible, as regular drummer John Siomos was ently ill. Newmark, of course, is a drummer of no small currently one-half of the Willie Weeks/Andy Newmark section that seems to be appearing on every top-knotch ing session made within 50 miles of Los Angeles.

apton, after four albums and three years of touring behind finally getting the loose ends of his act together. The pacing songs, which was always one of his sorest spots, is more lanced and less monotonous than it once was. And, of his guitar playing hasn't changed in the least — it always and still is, superlative. His newest gimmick, a "voice-box," ich, for all intents and purposes, his mouth is turned into a ah pedal, is cute, though he seems to be using it far too

In all, Frampton's performance was highly enjoyable and just slightly predictable. His only problem is the certain level of homogeneity one begins to notice in his music after prolonged listening — due very much to his tendency to compose most of his songs in the same key. Perhaps the addition of another singer/songwriter/instrumentalist — as in Steve Marriott might make Frampton's talent shine a little more clearly.

The MSU audience, at any rate, gave Frampton a huge ovation, for which he was obviously gratified.

The build-up of enthusiasm generated by Frampton lingered through the intermission to Bob Seger's set, which was a total success in every way. Seger and his Silver Bullet Band have, for the first time in two years, organized a perfectly structured show which displays Seger consistently at his finest. The Silver Bullet Band — guitarist Drew Abbott, bassist Chris Campbell, drummer Charlie Martin, saxaphonist Tony Cartmell and keyboard man Robin Robbins - was uniformly excellent throughout the whole of Tuesday's performance. It was obvious that the band had been well-rehearsed - something of a change from Seger's past bands - and, at all times, Seger carried the show with extreme class. The songs performed were plentiful and included many of Seger's best, such as "Ramblin' Gamblin' Man," "Get Out Of Denver," "Looking Back," "Back in '72," "Heavy Music," "Beautiful Loser," the final "Katmandu" and the encore of "Lucifer." One new song performed by Seger, "Turn the Page," in which he sat in on electric piano, was a stunning work from the man, displaying a maturity that befits Seger's work quite well.

Drew Abbott's performance, along with Seger's, was commendable for it's sheer economy. Abbott plays a loud and precise rock and roll guitar, and of all the band, his performance clearly was the most prominent. Drummer Charlie Martin, aside from some very solid drumming, managed some excellent duet singing with Seger.

Seger's entire performance proved that he is doing the best work he has done in ages, and that finally, with "Beautiful Loser," Finally, Czarnecki asked to be nominated as a member of the Capital Area Comprehensive Health Programs Association (CACHPA). Sharp moved to nominate him and the motion was supported unanimously.

The council also voted to send a deputy registrar to the early and regular registrations at MSU in December and January to register students as East Lansing voters.

Just before the meeting closed, McGinty reported that the council was not in danger of being arrested. The council was informed last summer by Roger Zeilstra, an attorney from the Federal Communications Commision (FCC), that council members could be arrested if they did not adopt the proper amendments to ordinances regulating cable television in East Lansing.

The latest letter, while saying the present East Lansing ordinance was not in line with federal regulations, did not threaten the imprisonment of council members.

"That means you won't be going to jail . . . I guess." McGinty said.

Levi Jackson: toughness unbounded

By PEGGY GOSSETT

State News Sports Writer What can you say about a 20-year-old fullback who won't ever die on the one-yardline even with nagging rib-aches? And who gallopped 1,063 yards in 230 carries this season to become the third ballcarrier in Spartan history to break the 1,000 yard mark for the season's rushing?

"I still could have done better," Levi Jackson, MSU's 201-pound fullback who was voted Most Valuable Player last week by his teammates.

"Some games I carried the ball 29 times, and some games only 17 or 18. If I consistently carried at 29 or so per game I would have gained more yard-

However, Jackson explained that he had been used as a blocking back more than he expected this season. Blocking is as big a duty for a running back as carrying the ball but that does detract from the potential yardage, he said.

"We've been running Baggett out of the side more, and that requires blocking from me and (tailback Rich) Baes. I have elaborated.

Jackson blocks for whomever is the other back in MSU's most often Baes. And during Tyrone Wilson's 76-yard run at Notre Dame, Jackson was right in there, bouncing linesmen out of Wilson's path.

Jackson also lost prime running time in 1974 when he was forced to sit out the Illinois game with cracked ribs and an injured ankle. It was the only game he sat out at MSU since his debut on the turf against the rain-drenched U-M Wolverines in 1972 when Jackson was a freshman.

Though he played nearly the entire season this year with bruised ribs and a mid-season hip pointer, no one in the line-up would catch Jackson with an under-the-breath complaint or a meager grimace on his knit-browed face.

"He's been in pain almost all season," said offensive field coach Bill Davis. "But he's an old linebacker; he knows how to play with pain."

Jackson played middle linebacker at Detroit Kettering High School where he also doubled as tailback. MSU recruited him to settle permanently as a running back, though he was originally reto block for them, too," Jackson cruited both as an offensive and defensive player.

The pain was so great at times that Jackson could not I-formation offensive line-up, practice until Thursday some weeks, though he did not miss a minute of playing time because of the aggravating injuries, Davis said. As for the pulsating pain, Jackson just sat back and rationalized. "Man, it's part of the game. It don't bother me." "You gotta take the bumps and bruises. You take more of them as running back than at any other position because you've got 11 guys who want to erty," he said. Jackson was hot property back in high school, too, when he was recruited by the football kingdoms of UCLA, USC, OSU, and U-M. So why did he pick the plot of Spartan land along the banks of the Red Cedar?

jump on you. You're hot prop-

"I always knew I would come here. I wanted to stay in state and knew I didn't like U-M. The campus just doesn't turn me on. If I was going to do anything great in football - and I hoped I would - I wanted to do it in state and so I'm here."

And he's done it - done something great. Levi Jackson has become a striding success story, eliciting gasps of "Christ, can that man run" from opponents, seeing his "action" photographs plastered about sports magazines and posters, and, most importantly, gaining respect from his fellow teammates and coaches.

"He's come a long way in three years - accepted a lot of leadership and gained a lot of maturity," Davis said. "He's a tough man," a teammate commented. Tough, yet not too tough. Levi's quiet, serious side may not always pop up between his catapulting between the practice field and post-game gigs, but it's there, in his dead-settled aspirations for city planning as a career and his strong desire to help out his family.

Jackson is majoring in urban development and planning and hopes to tackle city planning after his football stint.

He does not know when that stint will end, however, as he is looking to the pros for a possible career after MSU.

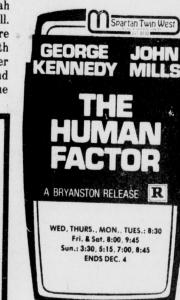

"The pros would be cool but I wouldn't want to make a real long career of it," Jackson said. "High school football was just for fun, getting all that rah-rah stuff from your friends and all. Then college football got more and more demanding with about 30 hours of practice per week. And with schoolwork and all, that's a hell of a lot of time to put in. Football became more of a lifestyle and less of a pastime." "In the pros football is a way of life; you breathe it, man. It's much more complex and, well, there's other things I want to do with my life, too.

"But, by damn, you can't beat the money," Jackson said. Pros or no pros, Jackson will be eating up the yardlines again next year in his final MSII season at starting fullback. "I'll be back with 2,000 yards rushing. You just wait," Levi Jackson said.

Gymnasts open with championships

By ANN WILLIAMSON State News Sports Writer Move over, hockey. Winter-get ready to don the leotards for some more back twists and somersaults.

But the MSU women's gymnastics team isn't quite prepared for this weekend's season premiere - the Big Ten Championships at Indiana University in Bloomington. Not that they haven't been doing their homework every afternoon at Jenison. It's just that to open the season early, especially with the Big Ten Championships, is quite a mouthful to digest in the first test of the year.

"The meet is being held early this year because many of the teams in the Big Ten had schedule conflicts on the original date," Coach Barbara McKenzie explained. "It's going to be hard to say how tough the competition will be since this is the first meet for most of the schools."

But the Spartans are entering the championships with several things on their side. They won the Big Ten contest last year; in fact, they took the honors in the State of Michigan Collegiate Championships as well, and ended the season with a strong 12-1 record. In addition to winning the meet last year, the Spartans are also fortunate in retaining virtually all'of last year's squad members, with the exception of graduates Diane Chapela, Sandra Campbell and Denise Anthony, along with freshman Terri Haelein and sophomore

WHO'S TO BLESS AND WHO'S TO BLAME

Thursday's Thoughts (or even though you didn't ask I'm gonna tell you anyway).

Denny Stolz and his staff are entering the most crucial phase of their respective careers. No, it's not the Wolves in Ann Arbor or the Woody Hayes Horde from Columbus providing the opposition. This time it's the truth.

That's right. The honest, direct, unblemished truth.

To explain: Stolz is beginning his fourth season at the Spartan helm. The total sum of both his and his staff's recruiting efforts will be the barometer of future success. Stolz has had time to build his

Although respectable, the Stolz-led Spartans lack the depth to be Big Ten champions. Michigan played over injuries this past season and Ohio State replaced, quite successfully, seven defensive starters from the 1974 edition.

Injuries decimated the Spartans this season and Stolz didn't have the "Blue Chip" players to turn to. That's no knock against the efforts of such performers as Tim Ruff, Bill Broadway, Regis McQuaide et al, who stepped in and did an admirable job.

But now Stolz must complete molding his team. With just a few more premier athletes and less injuries MSU will once again be a legitimate contender.

But, the question lingers. With the veil of secrecy emanating from the athletic department concerning the NCAA investigation, how will Stolz and his staff effectively recruit?

When a high school prospect receives a visit from Denny and listens to the sales pitch, one of his first questions will be, "What about the investigation, coach?" And, if he doesn't ask, then he lacks the intelligence to play for the Detroit Wheels! So, what does Denny tell the kids? The stale, "No comment,

No, the truth is really the only way. If they can't be told the truth now, what about the future? And, if Stolz tells the kid the truth while the public is shut out from this information, where will

MSU's credibility stand? Clifton Wharton should lift the asinine "no comment" rule. It's time to get to the facts. That's the only way the speculation will Contrastingly, Minnesota is undergoing the same trauma in basketball but has maintained a more open approach.

If Clifton really wanted to enhance MSU's already tarnished public image, he would push the NCAA for an answer. If the powers that be at this University don't get off their duffs, then they should be the ones to explain losing seasons when the already near-disgusted Spartan boosters reach the brink. But, more importantly, it will give Stolz and his staff the Andrea Schwartz.

For the most part, however, the real strengths of the team have returned. Senior Kathy Kincer, who placed 11th in the nation on the uneven parallel bars, has been selected to serve as team captain, in addition to making her contributions as one of the five Spartan allarounders.

Four new additions to this year's squad are freshmen Lisa Buttrill, specializing in floor exercise, balance beam and vaulting and all-arounders Cynthia Garbus, Connie Kitazumi and Sara Skillman.

With Garbus, Kitazumi and Skillman comprising three of the five team all-arounders, the Spartans' real strength and depth is a hugh question mark dependent upon these new team members.

"There's going to be a lot of weight resting on our freshmen to determine just how strong we'll be this year," McKenzie said. "But I feel they've got the maturity and ability to fill in the gap left by Diane Chapela's leaving last year."

Eight Spartans will represent MSU at Indiana this weekend, including Kincer, Skillman, Garbus and Maxine Ceccato in all-around, Pat Murphy on the vault, balance beam. and floor exercise. Ann Weaver on the uneven parallel bars and vault and Susan Bissonnette and Buttrill on the beam and

"The team is really looking very good for so early in the season," McKenzie said. "I've got high expectations that they'll turn in a good performance this weekend - they've got a job to do and I'm optimistic that they'll give it their best. I realize that our league competition has really picked up in recent years, so it ought to be a good meet, with a lot of that good competition coming from the University of

New low price. HP-21 Scientific. $100.00".

The HP-21 makes short work of the technical calculations even so-called "non-technical" courses require today. It performs all arithmetic, log and trig calculations automatically. It's also the only calculator at its price that offers full display formatting: you can choose between fixed decimal and scientific notation.

If you need a calculator that cloes more than simple arithmetic, this is it + especially at its new, just-in-time-for Christmas price.

New. HP-22 Business Management, $165.00*.

The HP-22 takes the starch out of the calculations you face in business courses today, in management tomorrow. You can solve most time-value-of-money problems in seconds. You can breeze through business math calculations (logs, roots, %s, etc.). And, most important, you can use the HP-22's statistical functions to build existing data into more reliable forecasts. No other calculator at any price offers you a comparable combination of financial, math and stat capabilities.

New. HP-25 Scientific Programmable, $195.00*.

Our HP-25 does everything our HP-21 can do-and much, much more. It's programmable, which means it can solve automatically the countless repetitive problems every science and engineering student faces. With an HP-25, you enter the keystrokes necessary to solve a repetitive problem only once. Thereafter, you just enter the variables and press the Run/Stop key for an almost instant answer accurate to 10 digits. You gain time, precision, flexibility.

All three offer you HP's efficient RPN logic system that cuts keystrokes and scratch pads. All three are easy to use (e.g., the HP-25 requires no prior programming

State board passes guidelines

LANSING (UPI) - The State Board of Education approved a massive set of guidelines Tuesday night aimed at wiping out sex discrimination in Michigan schools.

State Board President Marilyn Jean Kelley called them the most comprehensive set of sex discrimination guidelines adopted by any State Board of Education in the United States."

"I am especially proud that they have received board approval during the final month of International Women's Year," guidelines play a major role in helping insure that female students at all levels of Michigan education - from kindergarten through graduate school - will be able to achieve their full human potential unemcumber-ed by sexual bias." Except for Barbara Dumouchelle, who abstained, all board members voted in favor of the document.

The guidelines set a path for local schools to follow in eliminating sexual stereotypes that channel boys and girls into specific courses, extracurricular activities and careers.

They were formulated for the board by a special 27-member task force which it named 25 months ago.

The task force's work was marred by frequent arguments between feminist members and those who said the liberal traditional family structure to disintegrate and lead to a "godless society."

Feminist members on the task force found Michigan schools fraught with sex bias that suppressed the girls' aspirations while putting boys under undue pressure to excell. The 69 guidelines approved by the state board included a recommendation that all school systems undertake a study to determine how and where sexism exists.

In addition, the guidelines urged schools to seek out non-sexist textbooks and learning materials and to provide equal access and funding for boys' and girls' sports.

A major recommendation of the document was that schools revamp their counseling and career education programs.

Itelevision screens have a phospher coating, SONY behind every Trinitron screen is a pattern of tical phospher stripes; unlike a dot pattern, stripes have less space between them. So on color beams hit more phospher, and the ult is greater color saturation; greater clarity, oness and intensity. The unique Sony

ered Trinitron Color System is very napos 4 great stores
