BP presented a list of eight demands News Editor-in-Chief John Tinghe meeting, which was attended by 100 students. In discussing the is, each side was given a chance to viewpoint.

of the demands asked was that "the responsible be severely reprimand-their irresponsible, discriminatory one group member challenged.

"How many lives do you think were threatened when you used that picture?" Another demand asked for a "formal written apology on one of the front pages from the entire State News staff to the entire University community. Tingwall answered that if the State News is being fair in its reporting of events that take place on campus as he claimed it is, no apology was necessary.

He agreed with a third demand calling for a complete financial disclosure of revenues and expenditures of the State News.

"We're asking for that, too," Tingwall said. "We have been pressuring the (State News) Board of Directors for that for a long time.

The CSFBP asked that the complete ownership and control of the paper, including its assets and directorship positions, be returned to the student body.

Tingwall replied that since the editorial positions of the State News are presently filled by students, he feels the paper is already functioning the best way possible. The fifth demand by the student group asked for the creation of a community relations committee to deal with areas of concern facing minorities, and that the chairman of this committee be made an ex-officio member of the State News Board of Directors.

The editor-in-chief said that he would be in favor of this demand, and added that he was attempting to get himself and the advertising manager made ex-officio members of the board.

Retorted one member of the group, "You don't represent me," and another added that the State News staff is not necessarily representative of all students. He said that they would prefer a student directly representing CSFBP be seated on the board as an ex-officio member.

Another demand made by the group was the implementation and enforcement of an affirmative action program to place minority and women reporters on the State News staff

"We don't practice any discrimination," Tingwall said. "If students display an interest in being on the staff, we usually take that into account when we hire for the next term." He explained that although the State News hires one or two black students each term, most move on to work for black publications or larger papers. He said he was all in favor of having more minorities on the staff.

Currently there are no black staff writers or reporters at the paper.

The CSFBP asked for an increase in student-faculty related articles, viewpoints and letters. It also asked for less priority for nationally syndicated columns as opposed to student-related stories.

Opinion Page Editor Mike McConnell agreed that too much space was devoted to national columns. He said he urged students to write viewpoints and letters, and added that he would use as many as he could. Said one member of the group, "Minority coverage by the State News is practically obsolete.

The protest began about 3 p.m. when a group of about 200 students, most of them black, marched in an orderly fashion to the Student Services Building where the State News offices are located.

The students made their way from Bessey Hall behind a banner reading, "State News must stop Racist Reporting -Concerned Students for a Better Press.

They shouted slogans of "Stop racist reporting" and "We want a better press" as they marched through the building to the third floor corridor outside the paper's offices.

They then proceeded to hear a statement read by Art Webb of the Office of Black Affairs attacking both the University administration and the State News for no recognizing the problems of the black students at MSU.

The group then met with the State News editors until 5 p.m. It is not known what CSFBP's future plans are.

Primary results show Ford, Carter winners

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) - There were only two winners in New Hampshire's presidential primary, but you couldn't tell it by listening to the losers.

Jimmy Carter, who finished first in Democratic balloting, was beaming with a boyish grin Tuesday night, talking of winning the Democratic presidential nomination on the first ballot next July.

Democrats who trailed the former Geor gia governer were at the same time declaring that their showings, no matter how dismal, had served to advance their causes.

Ford and Ronald Reagan ran a tight race on the Republican side, with the lead switching several times.

Ford said Wednesday that the springboard of his narrow New Hampshire presidential primary victory means he can eliminate Ronald Reagan's Republican challenge "if we win a couple more, and I think we will."

But Reagan insisted that his close finish was a victory, too. "No one has ever done this to an incumbent," he said as he left Concord, N.H., to resume his campaign for the March 16 presidential primary in Illinois

It was Ford 51 per cent, Reagan 49 per cent, in the first of the presidential primary elections Tuesday. It took all night to settle the issue. Ford and Reagan meet next in Florida, on March 9.

For complete unofficial totals, see box. New Hampshire Democrats completed the conversion of former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter from longshot to front-runchoosing him over four rival ner contenders in their primary. Carter, who got 30 per cent of the vote, said he would win the Democratic presidential nomination on the first ballot.

Carter said his performance in New Hampshire and the support he got at Democratic caucuses in Maine, Iowa and Oklahoma showed that being a Southerner is not a liability.

While Ford talked of locking up the Republican nomination with a few more primary victories over Reagan, the prospect after New Hampshire's narrow verdict

Republican Primary Ford 54.824 51% Reagan 53,507 49% Democratic Primary Carter 22.895 30% Udall 18,594 24% Bavh 12,557 16% Harris 8,824 11% Shriver 6,649 9% 6% 1% 1% Humphrey 4.347 Wallace 1,109 Jackson 1.091 McCormack 1% 1,001 0% Kennedy 221 1% 0% Reagan 1.001 Ford 437 was for a long struggle over the GOP nomination.

Unless Republican opinion elsewhere is markedly different, the balance at the ballot box is a close one, and neither man appears likely to have an early shot at knocking the other from the race.

Reagan and his allies have been trying from the start to make a case for running second, on grounds that even coming close to an incumbent is a big political achievement. But Ford holds his office by appointment and succession, not by elec tion. And Reagan doesn't hesitate to point out, when it serves his purposes, that he has electoral experience rivaling Ford's, having won two terms as governor of California by landslide margins.

Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford will win next Tuesday in Massachusetts, where Reagan's name is on the ballot but he has no campaign organization; in Vermont, where Ford is unopposed, and on the following Tuesday in Florida. That is the next one that really counts.

Ford comfortably won overwhelming rontrol of the state's 21-member delegation to the Republican National Convention. With some races still in doubt, and likely to remain so until the official canvass, delegates supporting the President for nomination had 17 seats, Reagan four. (continued on page 7)

Commission grants funds to anti-abortion candidate

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Federal Election Commission (FEC) certified anti-abortion presidential candidate Ellen Mc Cormack for government matching campaign funds Wednesday. The vote was 4 to 1, with FEC vice-chair-man Neil Staebler, an Ann Arbor Democrat, voting no on grounds that the commission could not tell whether private contributions were for McCormack's presidential race or the anti-abortion movement.

She was certified for an initial $100,000 and can now, at least theoretically, submit requests for additional sums to match, dollar-for-dollar private contributions of $250 or less.

Whether she or any other candidate will actually be able to collect any matching funds after Sunday depends on whether Congress reconstitutes the FEC in line with a Supreme Court decision last month.

At issue in the McCormack situation was whether some of her solicitation materials sufficiently identified her as a presidential candidate.

Staebler said her name and the office sought should have been part of the title of her principal campaign unit, the Pro-Life Action Committee.

He recommended that candidate commit tees be encouraged or required to include the candidate's name and office sought, and noted that independent candidate Eugene McCarthy had changed his committee's title to include the candidate's name. President Ford received the most matching funds Wednesday, $279,660. That made him the second candidate to pass $1 million in government money, but his $1.03 million is less than half the $2.19 million received by Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace. Other certifications Wednesday were: Sen. Birch Bayh, $51,614; Ronald Reagan, $153,358; Gov. Milton J. Shapp, $7,366 and Rep. Morris K. Udall, $37,153.

Post given to Scranton

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Ford announced Wednesday the appointment of former Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton to be U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

Ford, who personally made the announce ment, said Scranton has a "big job to do" in defending the United States "against unfair attacks" in the world organization.

Scranton, 58, will succeed outgoing UN Ambassador Daniel P. Moynihan who was expected to attend the ceremonial announcement in the Oval Office but had to bow out in order to chair a UN Security reporters, "Let me say how pleased I am that my longtime friend Bill Scranton is going to be the next ambassador to the United Nations.

"He is a personal friend and a friend in many, many other ways," he added. He said Secretary of State Henry Kissinger had been trying to get Scranton to take a diplomatic job for the past seven vears.

It was learned that Scranton's appointment, expected to be announced last week, was held up so that Kissinger could be on hand for the announcement.

Kissinger returned last night from a six-day trip to Latin America and reported to Ford this morning.

UFW scores victory in court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a victory for migrant American farmworkers, the Supreme Court Wednesday upheld a California law barring employers from knowingly hiring illegal aliens

However, the Supreme Court left the law open to further challenge, sending the case back to the 2nd District California Court of Appeals.

Justice William J. Brennan Jr. wrote that the California law is within the state's power to regulate relations between an employer and employe. He said the law is not an unconstitutional attempt by the state to regulate immigration — a power left to the federal government.

The decision was a victory for Cesar Chuvez and the United Farmworkers Union, which sought to enforce the law against hiring illegal aliens who generally are willing to work for less than union-scale wages and who provide a plentiful supply of workers to compete with union members.

House passes federal debt hike

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House passed and sent Wednesday to the Senate a bill that could hike the federal debt limit by $32 billion and make the Treasury pay a minimum 4 per cent annual interest on savings bonds.

By a 212-189 vote, the House accepted its Ways and Means Committee's recommendation that the national debt ceiling be raised to a record $627 billion through June 30.

Before passing the legislation, the House by voice vote adopted an amendment that would require the Treasury to pay at least 4 per cent annual interest to Series E saving bond buyers holding them at least two months before redemption.

Currently, no interest is paid on bonds redeemed within six months of purchase.

Sequential pill marketing halted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three major drug companies have stopped marketing sequential oral contraceptives because of new evidence that they may be harmful to women, the Food and Drug Administration said Wednesday

The birth control pills being withdrawn from the market are Oracon made by Mead-Johnson and Co., Ortho-Novum SO the Pharmaceuticals and Norguans by Syntex Lop atories.

The sequential pills are used by an estimated 5 to 10 per C+ of the 10 million American women who take oral icer

The FDA soud the three companies, at the agency's request agreed to cease production, marketing and distribution of the sequential tablets.

Supplies on the market (less than a two-month supply) will not be recalled an FDA spokesman said, because women currently taking sequential oral contraceptives are being advised to continue taking them through their present menstrual cycle while they ask their doctors for an alternative contraceptive product.

Lockheed hit by two lawsuits

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A lawsuit demanding an investigation into payment of bribes to foreign officials by Lockheed Aircraft Corp. has been filed on behalf of the firm's stockholders.

Lockheed recently came under the scrutiny of congressional investigators for its admitted practice of bribing foreign officials to promote aircraft sales. Since then, several foreign governments have joined the probe.

The class action suit was filed Tuesday. It demands an investigation into details of the bribery scandal not yet known, asks for a court order prohibiting such payoffs in the future and seeks to have the defendants repay to the company all money spent on the payoffs as well as punitive damages

And in Rome, seven Italian air force widows whose husbands died in Lockheed's crash-prone Starfighter jets are suing the American aircraft company for $3.5 million.

Senate OKs fast time bill for 1976-77

WASHINGTON (AP) -The Senate approved a bill Wednesday providing seven months of Daylight Saving Time this year and next. However, because of inaction in the House, it is doubtful the nation will observe more than the current six months of DST or fast time this year. By a 48-45 vote, the Senate approved an amendment by Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., settling on DST from mid-March through mid-October this year and next. Should this become law, most Americans would set their clocks forward one hour on March 14 and turn back the hands one hour on Oct. 10. The time bill then was approved 70 to 28 and sent to the House. By accepting Dole's seven-month plan, the Senate rejected the proposal by the Commerce Committee that Daylight Saving Time be observed from the first Sunday in March through the second Sunday in November this year and next Unless some sort of time bill clears both houses of Congress soon, the nation will go back to the old pattern of six months' DST and six months' standard time each year.

The move expanding ob-servances of DST was begun in late 1979 during the height of the rergy crunch. Some studies the cate longer hours of daylight when most persons are up and about can result in an energy saving.

But opponents of DST argued that changing back the clock has saved little if any energy and has endangered school children and inconvenienced farmers.

Grossman was in East Lansing Tuesday to help commemorate National Amnesty Week, and is touring Michigan in a drive to gain support for universal and unconditional amnesty for war resisters. Grossman has been exiled in Toronto, Canada, working with other exiles on the amnesty movement. For four years he worked in Malaysia as a Peace Corps volunteer. It was his experiences Malaysia that convinced him that war is morally wrong. He refused induction into the military and was then indicted before Judge Julius Hoffman in Chicago. Before his trial, Grossman left for Toronto and began resist future wars that the U.S. government may choose to become involved in." Grossman said that over one million draft and military resisters need amnesty. He said that, of that number, 637,000 young men received less than honorable discharges for their participation in war resistance activi-ties. Less than honorable is the term the government uses in classifying the exiled

"When a man is discharged as less than honorable, he is virtually unemployable for the rest of his life," Grossman said. "He cannot vote, he receives no G.I. benefits nor can he join a union or work for the civil service.

According to Grossman, 75,000 men are living in hiding. Fifty thousand are here in the United States and 25,000 are exiled in Canada.

He added that at one time, over 200,000 men were exiled in Canada but many were forced to return because they could not gain legal status or find employment.

Grossman said that, on the average, 11 per cent of the men who were drafted and served belonged to the "poorer" class, while the remaining 89 per cent who were drafted evaded service through legal means.

He said that the 89 per cent were the "legal" draft dodgers. They were either in and out of school in attempts to avoid the draft or they obtained "real or fake" medical excuses.

According to Grossman, even the men who received honorable discharges did not escape some sort of labeling.

"Even the honorably discharged have a code on their personal records," he said. "This code tells things like whether or not the person is a bedwetter or is psychologically unstable. And these records are open to employers.

The code Grossman spoke about consists of five letters. Each letter position repre-

Grossman said that the military was supposed to discontinue the code but all it was change it from six letters to five.

Grossman said that this week represents the strongest amnesty activity that has taken place in the five year amnesty movement, and will include a hearing to inform legislators on the amnesty movement.

The hearing will include 20 panelists. Sen. Phillip Hart, 10 members of Congress and law school professors will sit on the panel. Grossman will represent the exiles.

"I hope to convince the legislators of the failure of Ford's clemency program and emphasize the need for universal and unconditional amnesty," Grossman said,

There is presently no legislation underway for universal and unconditional amnesty, and Grossman said even if there was, Ford would probably veto it.

Businessmen to speak on economic actualities

By JONI CIPRIANO State News Staff Writer

Every business is not a "Lockheed." This is what Craig Halverson from the Michigan State Chamber of Commerce and local businessmen are trying to get across to East Lansing high school students.

A Youth-Business Dialog is being held today at the University Club, 3435 Forest Road in Lansing, in an attempt to point out the realities of the business world to approximately 100 high school students. "Unfortunately, surveys indicate that the average American high school student has little, if any, understanding of the economic realities which must be faced after graduation," Halverson said. "Most students think of a president of a corporation as a conniving, sneaky guy whose main purpose s to swindle the public in his greedy efforts to make as much money as possible.

Actually, most local businesses make about 10 per cent profit, Halverson said, and this is not the huge amount most people think businessmen reel in.

"We're trying to point out the realities of the economic world to students," Halverson said. "After all, a vast majority of these people are going to be involved in the business world in one way or another as a livelihood and general knowledge of basic business concepts is sorely lacking in most high school educations."

Such concepts as productivity, inflation and profit are mysteries or stereotyped ns, he said today is totally inadequate and. as a result of this, many graduating students thoroughly distrust the business world because they don't understand it.

The business dialogs, which will run from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., will attempt to present the students with hard facts and will also

Carter also said that in unofficial preliminary tests, some MSU professors have indicated death may be possible from prolonged electrical shocks. "It was their opinion it could cause

Campus chatter rings up phenomenal telephone bill

If you think your phone bill is headache every month, how would you like to dish out about $236,000 to Ma Bell?

That is the average figure MSU pays for its phone service each month, according to Lowell E. Levi, MSU controller.

Levi said that service, directory advertising, toll charges, local calling, Tel-Pak lines and hooking up the phones made up last year's total bill of $2.8 million.

In comparison, the University of Michigan reported a bill of $3.6 million, while Ohio State University's was $3.5 million

The hookup charge was $67,000, of which $40,000 was billed in October. Levi said this was because married housing and dorm phones made up most of that portion of the yearly bill. On-campus students' basic phone rates of $5.95 are also included in MSU's bill. which is paid out of dorm fees.

According to Levi there are presently 19,740 phones on campus. About 11,000 of these are in the dorms and married housing.

About half of last year's phone bill was paid out of MSU's general fund while the rest came from gifts, grants, student fees, dorm fees, research and the separate departments.

James Bury, manager of the Lansing area Bell Telephone Co., said that the students' long distance charges are separate from the MSU bill. During the summer the students' bills decrease immensely. The biggest increase in revenue is a couple of weeks prior to term breaks when students begin making plans for their vacations and before registration when they need to call their parents for money to pay their fees.

Bury said there are two full time com munications consultants who are responsible for MSU's account alone.

For those of you who still think your phone bill is big, be glad you don't live in another part of the country. Bury said the Lansing area rates are lower than any others in th Bell system.

Disruptive pitcher defends actions

By MARK BARTELD

State News Sports Writer Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Mike Marshall, who was arrested Tuesday afternoon on a misdemeanor charge of disrupting campus activities in the turf arena of the Men's I.M. Building, apparently undertook the activity with the intent of challenging intramural officials' decision to revoke their advanced reservation system.

Marshall, who had disrupted the game of several tennis players by drawing a baseball net across the tennis playing area, defended his action with the contention that special arrangements had been made in the past which allowed him to use the batting

According to Harris F. Beeman, director of intramural sports, special arrangements had indeed been made for Marshall to use the batting cage under the advanced reservation system, but only from 10 to 12 p.m. on Wednesdays and Fridays. Marshall's action Tuesday, was in compliance with neither the designated day nor hour.

Beeman also made it clear that as of Feb. 20 the special reservation system was to be discontinued due to the increasing number of students using the facility and that he had informed Marshall four days earlier of this new policy.

Three years ago when Marshall was student teaching in the HPR Dept., intramural officials adopted this special arrangement of batting cage hours specifically at Marshall's request.

Since that time, however, demand for the facility has increased considerably, Beeman said, and officials were forced to revoke

Marshall's privileges under the advanced reservation system

Beeman also said that on Tuesday he was in the process of writing Marshall a letter denying him the use of the facility because of an incident of a similar nature which occurred at the beginning of winter term.

Marshall, who works on his graduate degree during winter term, claimed that the University had broken the promise it made him three years ago to reconcile the clash between tennis and baseball practice in the building.

Marshall also stated that he had given $400 to the University specifically for that purpose, but the money had been used for something else.

But Beeman's account was again quite different

According to him, Marshall's donation was given to the general baseball account and used to pay for a $1,500 net in the middle of the arena because Marshall's suggestion to use the money for changing position of the baseball nets was the physically impossible to perform.

"There was a difference of opinion between Litwhiler (the MSU varsity baseball coach) and Marshall as to what should be done about the situation in the turf arena," Beeman said. "The revision that Mr. Marshall wants is not what Litwhiler wants," he added.

Marshall was released just after his arrest Tuesday on $100 interim bond and his arraignment will be held sometime this week. The misdemeanor with which he was charged carries a maximum penalty of 90 days in jail and a $100 fine.

Foreign languages:

a welcome return

The recent trend among graduate and undergraduate liberal arts programs has been to deemphasize - if not eliminate altogether - the previously essential foreign language requirement.

It was felt that foreign languages were not as relevant to students, and that enrollment in liberal arts courses and majors had fallen because of the stringent requirements, to which foreign languages were pointed to as the most odious.

However, the difficulty in this is that the liberal arts began to lose their character. History courses centered on the recent; philosophy courses centered on contemporary issues. In the effort to sell the relevancy of the liberal arts, many found that the heart and soul had been lost.

Recent indications, though, suggest that the traditional approach is making a comeback. The latest proof of this is the proposed reinstatement of the History Dept.'s foreign language requirement for all of its majors.

Such a requirement would be fulfilled by either a two year competency in a foreign language, or a similar competency in today's methodological "languages" of computer science, statistics and economics.

The low state of MSU's liberal arts demands more of these shots-in-the-arm.

Such actions unfortunately run the risk of cutting participation in the program. Many will oppose the proposal by arguing that the language requirement will scare off potential history majors.

It is indeed unfortunate that a trade-off between popularity and high standards exists, but it is a healthy indication of the academic credibility of the History Dept. that it is willing to face the reprobation of those students who are searching for an easy way out.

Primary indicator

Whatever else the Tuesday New Hampshire primary represented, it was, as one television news commentator observed, one of those rare times when a citizen could get in a car and drive for no more than 30 minutes and talk to the candidate of his or her choice, except, of course, the President himself. The New Hampshire primary, as is well known, has traditionally been one of the most critical in the country. In six previous primaries there, no candidate who has not won it ever landed in the White House.

But the emergence of write-in candidates and the uncertainty of the issues which will dominate this year's presidential election may change that.

Ellen McCormack, for instance, a write-in candidate, received one per cent of the vote - and she is campaigning on the sole issue of anti-abortionism

In all, nearly 10 per cent of the New Hampshire ote went to write-in candidates.

Thus it must be recognized that the climate surrounding politics is one which now is quite volatile.

So, there was truth to Ronald Reagan's statement: "One primary does not a summer make."

We have followed with great interest the events affecting Michigan State University for a great many years. Over those years we have enjoyed with great pride the outstanding record of achievement.

We are also not unmindful or unaware of some recent events that have taken place which, to some extent, have brought discredit to the University.

It has occurred to us that during these trying times positive support is the most important contribution that we can make. Michigan State University Alumni Club of Mid - Michigan would like to

SWU did it

The Student Workers Union has really done it this time! Today, we found SWU membership cards in our mailboxes. Thinking we might have missed the vote on whether or not the students wanted a union, we called the SWU off in the Student Services Building and them when it was. The reply to our question was vote had been taken. 1':--+

Then we asked why union cards had bee distributed, we were told that the union was s good as established and that distributing the cards now would save time.

This whole idea seems slightly off-center. The organizers behind the SWU seem to have taken the vote into their own hands and decided the outcome. Not only does this appear to be unethical, it also appears to be wrong. All of the student workers we've spoken to, along with ourselves, plan to vote against the union.

Also, in a year filled with budget problems, why did the SWU organizers have the cards printed before the vote? If the union is defeated how will they explain the expense?

There is one last thing. The membership cards came with an envelope to put one's dues in, along with the instructions to send dues to the SWU office. In other these words, the organizers are soliciting money for a union that does not yet exist!

We think this unethical behavior is only a hint of things to come. We urge all student workers to vote against the proposed union. Jeff Kirsch B112 Bryan

The S-1 Bill, which is presently in the Judiciary Committee of Congress, represents one of the greatest assaults on civil liberties ever written.

Sometimes billed as simply a revision of the criminal code, this bill contains sections which would make virtually every protest or union strike illegal. Participants in these struggles could be jailed. The bill, which has been in the writing for about ten years, was revised by Nixon's Attorneys — General Kleindienst and Mitchell — to be in harmony with their law-and-order-for-everyone-else phil osophy.

Some of the worst provisions of the bill are : (1) A riot is defined as 10 people who constitute a danger to property (whether they do anything or not). This would make many union strikes, plus the whole anti-war and civil rights movements illegal.

however, the protestors had selected a less renowned target, or if such attacks were to come common, there can be little doubt that freedom of speech in academia would have become limited. What is wrong with academia? It seems that academic freedom is difficult, maybe impossible, to protect over long periods of time. Only twenty years ago, communist sympathizers were hounded by anti-communists. Now, unpopular ideas at the othe end of the spectrum are being threatened with expulsion. Is there something fundamentally wrong with universities that they so easily abandon their principles in the face of policital pressure?

Perhaps yes. Indeed: probably yes. But I think that the difficulty lies deeper than the foibles of academia, but lies in a contradic tion in the notion of academic freedom itself.

logically favor the exclusion of the opposite, that is, absolutely false, position.

The opinion that academic freedom should be absolute is compatible, therefore, only with the view that all matters are of opinion - that there can be no knowledge.

Academic freedom doesn't mean the At the very least, the doctrine of absolute academic freedom holds that knowledge about goodness, beauty, desirability or any other "values" is impossible. Perhaps it is impossible. But if so, the entire grounding for liberal education is undermined. Liberal education cannot avoid making "value" judgements.

What would a course in art or humanities be if it didn't provide some standards for distinguishing beauty from ugliness, or greatness from mediocrity? What would a pre-med course of study be if it failed to distinguish between health and illness? Or pre-law if it failed to provide a standard for judging between justice and injustice?

Liberal education does not properly claim to provide the final answers to the question of value standards. It must, however, take things are relative to whim and fancy. It is precisely this attitude which absolute academic freedom cannot tolerate, for it precludes the possibility of knowledge about these things.

I can propose no solution to this dilemma. In fact, I believe that no solution is possible. The University cannot absolutize both principles of academic freedom and liberal education. Presumably, it must moderate both.

This is not to suggest that Marxists' or sexists' rights should be curtailed. Not at all. Nor that the effort to revive liberal education should be ended. In fact, as a practical matter, the University is lacking in its support of each.

Nevertheless, an understanding of the theoretical conflict between the two principles may serve to show the limits and

Reverse discrimination paranoia misdirected

By DEBBI BARNES

The recent appearance of a "pseudo" KKK group on campus has raised a great deal of furor among students. Unfortunately, the most important point of this action has been obscured in arguments about the racism of the KKK (and anyone emulating them) and the attitude of the State News. What has been largely ignored is the whole question of affirmative action for minority tudents.

Minorities have a long history of being discriminated against, both in employment and education. Even in Lansing (hardly considered a center of overt racism), a federal court recently ruled that the elementary schools had been consciously segregated and the black students sent to those of the lowest quality. There is white is simply untrue. Recent statistics gathered by qualified contemporary social scientists have shown that the impact of affirmative action programs has been very slight - on BOTH blacks and whites.

The apparent negative effects on whites is actually almost totally accounted for by a five-year-long economic crisis. No (black or white) is getting jobs comparable to their education and/or training. It would seem easier for many people to blame blacks for their own inability to get jobs, but this would be pathetically misguided.

The fact is that — as college students — we have traditionally been a privileged elite in many ways. One of these privileges has been virtually guaranteed employment upon graduation. However, many social and political forces have converged to remove this guarantee, throwing students into the uncertainty that everyone else has AL-WAYS faced.

boob. As the political affairs editor of channel 23, WKAR, the 30-year-old Skubick is known to Michigan television viewers as the dapper and witty host of "Off the Record," a news analysis program. "Commercial broadcasting, by its definition, has to be quick and dirty," Skubick said. "Commercial broadcasting obviously leaves a lot to be desired."

Since commercial broadcast ing reporters may not have the depth, staff, facilities, training and time to do investigativ reporting, the field is left open to Skubick who claims to be the only broadcast journalist in Michigan assigned full-time to cover governmental news.

"We are offering an alterna tive," Skubick said. "It's amazing the number of people who watch the thing ("Off the Record"). It generates a lot of comment and controversy."

The half-hour program is broadcast Fridays at 7 p.m. and Saturdays at 4:30 p.m. The first half of the show is a roundtable discussion between Skubick and a rotating panel of journalits about current Michigan events. The second half of the program is a no-holds-barred yet informal question and answer segment between the reporters and a guest public official.

"The guest is there to be grilled. If a reporter has hit a nerve with the guy, he has the latitude to follow up," Skubick said. "Guests know they're not going to get treated with kid gloves, they're going to get beat up.'

In spite of the rigorous treatment the reporters give officials, Skubick has no problem finding guests for the program. Skubick said this is because if a guest can successfully parry the thrusts of the panel, the guest appeals to the television audience Whether questioning Gov. William Milliken, Georgia State Sen. Julian Bond or a lesserknown public functionary, Sku views his work philosophically. "The whole interchange with politicans is somewhat of a game," he said. "If he's done something noteworthy, the politician is more than happy to tell you about it. On the other hand, if there's something he doesn't want known, the politician won't volunteer to tell you about it. That's where the game of dragging the information out of them becomes interesting.

In spite of the fact Skubick's office is nothing more than a cluttered, oversized broom closet in the quonset hut that serves as the studio for WKAR, the broadcaster likes his job. "I love it." he said. "I do not consider it work. It's something different every day." Skubick, whose work by his own admission covers the whole gamut of politics, takes his daily tasks with a grain of salt. Plastered on his office wall next to a poster of Richard Nixon sitting on a toilet is a bumpersticker that proclaims: "Fight pollution, gag a politician.

Besides hosting "Off the Record," Skubick has also put together a television series examining state government, the operation of television and radio news organizations and election programs

Having studied radio and television broadcasting at MSU, Skubick obtained his broadcasting at bachelor of arts degree in 1967. Various media jobs - a four-month stint in the U.S. Army Reseve Band and a year as a reporter for WILX, channel 10- all occupied Skubick's time before he joined WKAR in 1971 In 1972, he earned his master of arts degree in television and radio news from MSU.

Although he said he would eventually like to work on a network news organization, the television personality described his career attitude as laissez-faire. "Some guys are pushy about their careers," Skubick said.

'I'm not.' Broadcasting is not the only activity that fills Skubick's time. Every Saturday in the fall, the 76,000 people in Spartan Stadium hear Skubick as the announcer for the MSU Spartan Marching Band, Affectionately called "Skubie" by the 250 members of the band. Skubick himself is an alumnus of the group. When all is said and done, however, Skubick thinks of himself as a newsman first and foremost.

"I consider myself to be a journalist first and an employe of the University second. To do otherwise would be contrary to ethics," he said.

"Be it good or bad, television has to be entertaining," Skubick concluded.

If the television program is hosted by a bearded journalist from the staff of WKAR by the name of Tim Skubick, viewers can rest assured the show will be informative, entertaining and spiced with incisiveness and originality.

have conveniently invented a new artistic medium. But this new medium is not photography. Rather, it is a cheap, gimmicky form of entertain ment that acts as a parasite on the photograph.

Examples of this latest phoniness in photography are two works on exhibit by William Larson. The first one, entitled "By Air," is a montage of a black-and-white photograph of a child holding a model airplane, an old-time photograph of airplanes, a postage stamp and a red zipper - all glued together in a nonsensical con meration and erroneously and the fragile technical detail employed make the photograph intriguing. Hopefully, Larson will stick to this type of photography and leave the bone-bug glue-job to cut-andpaste art classes.

Carl Toth's works also look like products of the cut-andpaste classroom. He takes several photographs of a scene at various camera angles, but from a stationary spot, and then pastes certain pieces together. The final result is not a square- or rectangle-shaped photograph, but an entirely new form. When viewing the "photograph," the tendency is to get caught up in the new form and not the photograph. After one has figured out Toth's gimmick, the actual photograph, or the quality of it, omes irrelevant.

Jacqueline Livingston's gimmick is to add a strip of cut-out colored pictures to the already existing black and white photo graph. For example, in "Swan Border Was Added," a colored drawing of swans was added on to a black-and-white photograph of a child looking at flamingos. The result is the ruination of a fairly decent photograph by the cheapening effect of the colored drawing.

Still another photographer, Edward Nellis in his "New Mexico #1," ruined an excellent photograph of a rock and arch formation by adding a map of New Mexico along the side of the photograph.

With the exception of the hotographs by Steve Fitch, Charles Gatewood and Will Hiroshi Odi, the rest of the exhibited photographs are boring, unimaginative or technically deficient.

The exhibit, which was organized by Andrea Rubenstein, a University of Michigan museum intern at the Kalamazoo Institute of Arts, will run through March 14.

THE HIGHLAND APPLIANCE SOUND SHOPS; EVERYTHING YOU NEVER EXPECTED FROM AN APPLIANCE STORE!

Does Competition Beat Highland's Audio Prices?

Hardly even. They try, but in the long run you'll find that you'll do fatter at Highland. Why? Because other dealers find its too costly to keep pace with High land's high-volume buying power. Our suppliers tell us that our chain of 15 stories in Michigan and Ohio (2 more opening this year) purchase far more audio components than their other dealers. Because our enormous purchasing enables us to bay at great savings just about everything we sell is at incredible models.

But even so, a competitor will occasionally advertise an item below our price - but you still don't get hurt if you purchased the same item at Highland. You get our famous 30 day low procequeers and the which states that if you see the same item anywhere in the area for less within 30 days of purchase, we'll refund the difference, plos 10% of the difference. Seeds sown for 'State-Fruithood' argumen

By CAROLYN FESSLER State News Staff Writer There is a battle fermenting in the state House over the selection of an official state fruit, and if the two diametrical-

Even organizations devoted to the betterment of the quality of entertainment on campus are not exempt from the widespread financial problems of the day. The Union Activities Board and Student Entertainment (UAB/SE), a student-run organization which says it is responsible for 60 per cent of entertainment brought to the MSU campus, is operating solely on grants from three organizations, Janet Begrow, president of UAB/SE, said.

These organizations are the National Endowments for the Arts, the Michgan Council of the Arts and the Student Media Appropriations Board.

Last term the UAB/SE attempted to gather enough student signatures for a referendum at registration on whether or not to charge every student a 50-cent tax for UAB/SE activities. The drive failed when the required number of half the student body failed to sign the petitions.

MSU is the only university in Michigan that does not charge its students an activity fee. Begrow said. If this was included in the tuition rates, entertainment committees would not have any financial problems, she said.

The organization, which has about 156 volunteer student members, channels approxi-$70,000 per year mately through the office. "If we are not subsidized by years ago, when it was the student government on campus. It was located in the Union Building, which was then the center of campus and activity. The Student Entertainment title was added last year when entertainment became the main function of the organization. Integral in all of the depart ments of UAB/SE is the opportunity for the students workers to learn how to run the equipment, book programs, publicize the event and present it to the students. "It's really a worthwhile thing for the students to get into," Begrow said. "For example, I'm an advertising major, and when I started here, I was in the appropriate depart-the apple blossom for state flower - why not take the fruit of that blossom for the state fruit?

As far as the sponsor of the cherry bill is concerned McCullough's apples can all stay in cold storage. Rep. Connie Binsfeld, R-Maple City, is having a bill drafted that would establish state fruithood for the cherry. "I think serious consideration should be given to the Michigan cherry if we're going to adopt a state fruit," she said. "The cherry industry has become an international business for Michigan. And of course the annual Cherry Festival (held every July in Traverse City) is a tremendous tourist attraction.'

It was so big a tourist attraction that President Ford attended last summer's festivities, Binsfeld noted.

McCullough throws a pie in the face of this territorialism.

a comfortable victory that makes him the front runner among Democratic candidates. There are nine all told. Carters new mantle is one that can have drawbacks. But it is a giant step forward for the former governor who came to New Hampshire as a nobody more than a year ago and left with first prize. "I remember when we

was a preface, to be overtaken within days by the decisions of other voters, in bigger states. Reagan had an apt phrase for it: "One primary does not a summer make."

It will take 31 to do that, in almost weekly competition that won't end until June 8.

Reagan and his managers had tried hard to convince political opinion makers that running reasonably close to Ford was all that should be expected of them. But offstage, Reagan men clearly thought they had the lead and might win outright.

"I feel what's happened tonight is a victory," Reagan said after midnight, with the Repub-lican verdict still in doubt.

"Hogwash," countered Rep. James Cleveland, the Ford campaign chairman. "A victory is a victory, particularly for an incumbent who is making tough decisions...against a guy who can come out of the west and make promises every day of the week." There was another phase in the primary and Ford was winning that decisively. With the vote count nearing completion, delegates backing him for the nomination led for 19 of the 21 seats New Hampshire will have at the Republican National Convention. The Reagan ploy had been to try to hold Ford to the standard expected of elected presidents. That's what did in Lyndon B. Johnson eight years ago, when he won the New Hampshire primary but was rated a loser because he only had a seven

point margin But Ford is not an elected

President. He holds office by appointment and succession. The New Hampshire primary was his first electoral test outside the Grand Rapids con gressional district that 13 times elected him to the House.

And Reagan, actually, has been on both sides of the argument, saying on one hand that he shouldn't be expected to beat an incumbent, and on the other that he has the back ground to prove he can win elections.

For what it's worth, there also is a bit of history on Ford's side now. There have been six previous presidential preference primaries here, and in that time, no candidate who did not win in New Hampshie has made it to the White House.

Across the ballot, Udall, the second-place Democratic finish was sounding a victory-insachusetts, where Reagan has defeat theme not unlike Reagan's. He said he has not mounted a campaign effort though his name is automatical emerged "as the leader of the progressive center candidates in New Hampshire," by which he means everybody except Carter.

Frisbee-unknown sport at MSU

By JOHN SINGLER

Frisbee, anyone? "We have probably the best team in Michigan. We could have one of the best teams in the country. It just seems a shame that right now the whole world is oblivious to us," said Eric Simon, founder and captain of the MSU Frisbee Club. Simon started the club last fall with people from Wilson Hall and it has grown to a fully registered club sport, with almost 20 players on the roster.

The MSU Frisbee Club opened with an overtime victory over Kalamazoo College, considered to be the best club in Michigan. That team has been playing the game four years. The MSU club was not even two weeks old. This feat would be comparable to one of the NFL expansion teams beating the Steelers in their first game next fall.

The MSU club was paced by world class master Roger Banghart, who can throw the frisbee 100 yards at an initial velocity of about 100 mph — almost as fast as one of Nolan Ryan's fastballs.

Simon, a freshman from Maplewood, N.J., played on America's top prep team last year at Columbia High School, where three men invented the game in 1969. Frisbee is a regional sport, concentrated in the East, the Mideast and California. At Rut-gers University, Ultimate Frisbee is a varsity sport and Kalamazoo offers it as a class in the HPR department. "A lot of people don't know how the game is played. You just don't throw a frisbee around," said club member Ferdinand Pisacane. The playing field is 60 yards long and 40 yards wide and end zolles are 30 yards deep. Each team puts seven play ers on the field at one time. The sport can be co-ed, with the only requirement being that women, like men, can play well enough to make the team. The game begins with a pull-off, equivalent to the kickoff at the start of a football game. The team pulling off has a player throw a frisbee down the field, either lofting it so a teammate can run under it or lofting it deeper, into the opponent's end zone, hoping for a catch by a teammate for a score. Players use a competition frisbee that is larger in circumference and heavier than the conventional frisbee. It is ad-vanced by passes. A player cannot move when he has the frisbee. As in basketball, the player can pivot on one foot but has to pass the frisbee before he can move. Whenever the frisbee is dropped, possession changes to the other team. The teams play two 24-minute halfs and if the game is tied at the end of regulation time they play five-minute overtime periods until a winner is determined. The overtimes are not sudden death, being played the full five - minutes regardless of how many points are scored

With the stunning victory over Kalamazoo, MSU is now considered one of the top teams in Michigan.

"When we played Grand Valley State, we scored more goals than any college team in Michigan ever scored. It's the highest score I've ever heard of in college frisbee," Simon said.

The MSU club has completed about 60 per cent of its passes this season and has a 4-1 record, the loss coming in a rematch at Kalamazoo. One of the most interesting and essential aspects of the game is the "honor system." Under it, there are no referees. It is run much like a pick-up basketball game on any concrete court. The man who is fouled calls the fouls. "Frisbee is new enough so that the people who are interested in it want to promote it, so very rarely will they take advantage of it (the honor system)," said Simon

The only problem with the honor system is that in the late stages of a tight game a player will obviously call a foul if it is necessary for his team to pull the game out. It is hard for the players to be objective in game situations where winning and losing may be on the line.

"There are no penalties. If vou are hit while you're throw ing the frisbee, you get the throw over. If you're making a catch and someone knocks your hand away, you get the frisbee where you would have made the catch," Pisacane said.

However, if a foul occurs in the end zone, the frishee comes outside the end zone, much as the ruling goes on pass interfer ence in the end zone in professional football

Regional tournament competition will be held April 10 at Kalamazoo, with the top three teams from that competition advancing to the national tournament in Amherst, Mass., on April 24. The regional will host teams from Michigan, Ohio, Indiana and Pennsylvania.

"The straw that broke the camel's back was when the people from the All American Frisbee Conference voted on where the regional championship would be and MSU and Kalamazoo came out tied for first place. Then it was pointed out that support for the pro-gram at MSU was so minimal that it would have to be held at Kalamazoo," said Simon

When the club plays an away game they pay their own way, with a little help from their friends

Trips to Allendale and Kala mazoo can be patched together easily enough, but the club will be hard-pressed to show their stuff at the nationals in Amherst if some outside assistance is not found.

The future of the sport at MSU?

"The basic thing is that it is fun to play," Simon said. "As captain, I never tell anyone to come to practice...I ask them to come. We're really informal. I've never turned down anyone from joining the team."

McKeachie at AAUs

By ANN WILLIAMSON

State News Sports Writer The women's indoor track season is over for the Spartans, but not for Karen McKeachie.

McKeachie was the only Spartan to qualify for the AAU Indoor Track Nationals this Friday in New York City's Madison Square Garden.

The senior Spartan runner qualified for the Nationals in the Western Michigan Invitational Feb. 14 with a time of 10:58.08 in the two mile - just under the required time of 11 minutes

"The day I qualified at Western Michigan I had already run one and one-half miles so I was tired to start out with," McKeachie said. "It'll be scary going into the Nationals just having barely qualified, but since I'll be running fresh that day, I think I should do better."

McKeachie runs every season for the Spartans - cross country in the fall, indoor track in the winter and outdor track in the spring. In the Michigan AAU meet with the cross-country team last fall, she finished second with a time of 16:49 in the three-mile

McKeachie also qualified for the AAU Indoor Track Nationals last year, finshing tenth with a time of 11:14, but coach Ye Jackson feels she should improve on the performance Friday. "I think Karen has a good opportunity to make a strong showing at the Nationals." Jackson said. "It's difficult to say exact how she's going to do but she's running better than she was last year and I that she's capable of finishing in the top six."

Melodious computer may perform for lab

By KAT BROWN State News Staff Writer

Everyone has heard of a one-man band before. right? Well, imagine hearing a full symphony played on one instrument by one performer. That is what students may soon hear coming out of the Audiology and Speech Sciences Lab on a PDP 11/40 computer. David L. Wessel, associate professor of psychology, has been experimenting with computer music, an idea that first arose about 15 years ago at Bell Telephone Laboratories Wessel said that one of the goals of the lab is to perform experiments on the computer that would enable people to know more about how the auditory system works. "It turns out that the technology that underlies these kinds of research interests is the same technology that underlies the use of computers in making musical sounds," he said.

Wessel said that much of this research that eventually benefits our understanding of hearing is the result of musical concern.

Stanford University is leading the way in computer music in the country with a computer worth almost $1 million. According to Wessel, Stanford's computer has several hundred times the processing capacity of the PDP 11/40.

About four years ago. Wessel got the idea of working on computer music and two years ago he and some students were able to actually produce sounds on MSU's CDC 6500 computer in the Computer Center.

Prior to receiving their own $45,000 computer in mid-September, the lab used the CDC 6500 every morning at 4 a.m., the only time open to them. Since then, Wessel and his students have been spending their time getting to know this computer to find out what its possibilities are.

Troy L. Pierce, a programmer on the project. said that the computer can create virtually any sound you want it to.

"On a normal instrument you tune for the pitch. but here the pitch is controlled so tightly you don't have to worry about it," he said. "You just have to control what the sound sounds like - such as harmonic content.'

Pierce said the sound is represented as a string of numbers that are stored on discs. There are 25,000 numbers for each second of sound the computer can produce.

It took one programmer 10 minutes to produce a 6-second piece on the computer. But this is seen as just a beginning of what is possible with the nputer. It can make sounds that other instruments cannot. The placement of the sounds can also be controlled.

Wessel said that the Grateful Dead and other bands have used computers in their music. In the future Wessel's group will be able to work in real time when research is completed on a machine that would eliminate the time lag between the programming and the production of actual sounds

He said that it will take a while before the computer is an acceptable consumer product

Parents deal with child abuse

By CARYN HECHLER Several nights a week, groups of parents meet in downtown Lansing to discuss the events of their past week. The group represents a mixture of age, sex and income levels. They are all members of Parents Anonymous (P.A.), a self-help group which deals with the problems of child abuse and neglect.

"Parents come to P.A. because they are unhappy with the way things are going with their family," explains sponsor Marilyn O'Neil. "They love their children but sometimes they lose their cool and later feel guilty about it." Parents Anonymous, which began in Michigan in 1972.

deals with parent-child problems. P.A. is made up of parents who help each other understand and cope with the day to-day problems of being a parent through discussion sessions The main objective of P A is to get parents to look at their problems in a different perspective and to find more positive ways of interacting with their children.

The weekly sessions give the parents an opportunity to vent feelings of unhappiness and anger which often result in abusive behavior.

"At the meetings, parents discover that these problems are not uniquely their own." O'Neil said. "Perhaps for the first time they find that others understand some of the prob-

"Many times the parents discover that the fault does not lie with the children's behavior but actually their own perception of a situation which has been distorted by internal and external pressures," Bill Brooks, another sponsor, said.

A parent who is always experiencing negative interactions with others may have a hard time viewing their own child's behavior as anything but negative, he explained.
