SN staff walks out, protests selection

By CAROLE LEIGH HUTTON
State News Staff Writer

The majority of the State News editorial staff walked off the job Sunday afternoon in protest over the State News Board of Directors' appointment of a candidate the staff opposed to the position of editor-in-chief.

The editorial staff and the board of directors had unanimously supported current Managing Editor Steve Orr for the position but the board of directors chose current National Editor Mary Ann Chickshaw.

After announcement of the board's decision Sunday, the staff met and discussed not publishing a Monday paper. While two-thirds of the staff of 40 left in protest, the paper was published with a skeleton crew.

State News General Manager Gerald Coy said that a major factor in the decision against Orr was the fact that he will be working as an intern reporter for the Detroit Free Press this summer.

However, members of the board of directors maintained, when questioned Sunday, that Orr's summer internship was not the major factor in the board's decision.

Editor-in-chief candidates are interviewed by the staff, editors and directors in a joint session, after which the staff and editors vote separately on the candidate they prefer.

Each group then presents a written opinion explaining its choice to the board.

but the board of directors uses those opinions only as advisory opinions.

The State News Board of Directors is composed of four students, two MSU faculty members and two professional journalists. Each member serves a two year term.

John O'Donnell, MSU faculty member and member of the board of directors, said that the staff does not choose the editor and that its vote is more of a consultation than anything else.

"We weigh the staff and editorial opinions very heavily," O'Donnell said, "but the board is not a rubber stamp for those opinions. Editors do not serve at the pleasure of the staff; they serve at the pleasure of the board."

ASMSU President Brian Raymond, a critic of the State News in the past, echoed the sentiments of the staff. "I think it's pretty sad when the staff and editors make a selection and the board does something like this," Raymond said.

"The State News should be a student-oriented paper and the staff should select the editor-in-chief. The board of directors should have an extremely good reason for overruling them," he said.

Raymond said that fear of the State News becoming a nonstudent newspaper is what initiated many of the differences between the paper and ASMSU this year. "The State News shouldn't be an outside corporation," he said.

MSU President Clifton Wharton said that the independent corporation status of the State News was instituted because the paper and student body wanted autonomy from the University administration.

Wharton said the University has adopted a "hands-off policy" concerning control and management of the paper, but that the administration would definitely be looking into the situation if the students perceive it to be a problem.

Another MSU faculty member on the board, John Molloy, said that the staff vote did not move the board because "Orr's support was weak within the board. There were people who would not have supported him regardless of the internship."

Orr said that the board's action points out "the disregard of the board for the opinions of the staff." He said that though he is not sure why he was not chosen by the board, he suspects that the reasons were "above and beyond my not being here for the summer."

The board did not question Orr about his internship during the interview, but did call him Saturday evening and ask if he would give up the internship if elected. Orr said he would not.

Board members have declined to comment on what would happen if the appointed candidate did refuse acceptance of the Editor-in-Chief position, but Coy said that an entirely new selection process would be likely.

Background

Sunday's newsroom walkout comes after a year of strained relations between the State News editorial department and the State News Board of Directors over problems including alleged interference on the part of the general manager in newsroom operations, lack of money, minimizing attempts and changes in the bylaws of the nonprofit corporation.

Last May, the State News staff drew up a list of grievances against Gerald Coy, general manager of the State News Corporation.

The outcome of the grievance procedure was the bylaws of the State News changed to incorporate a clearer definition of the roles of the general manager and the editor-in-chief.

Staff members, though, charged that the new bylaws, approved by the board last month, give the general manager more power instead of limiting it.

Displeased with these new bylaws, staff members drew up a list of amendments which they wanted included in the bylaws. The amendments requested that the editor-in-chief and the advertising manager become ex-officio (nonvoting) members of the board and that the statement granting the general manager the right to fire or hire newsroom staff be removed from the bylaws. The board of directors voted down the amendments.

In addition to these problems, the State News editorial staff has also tussled with the board over monetary outlays to the department.

Over the past few months, members of the editorial staff have attempted to unionize in order to get employee wages raised. The staff tried to join the International Typographical Union (ITU), but was refused on the basis that the State News is a student newspaper, and would be more of a detriment than an asset to ITU.

The need to unionize, according to union advocates on the staff, stemmed from a need for a higher editorial budget which the board of directors was unwilling to grant.

Editor, ad manager selected by board

The State News Board of Directors selected two seniors Sunday to act as the newspaper's highest student administrative officers for the 1976-77 academic year.

Mary Ann Chickshaw, 1105A University Village, was chosen by the board to serve as editor-in-chief beginning May 1.

Daniel S. Gerow, 1010 Waters Edge Drive, was named advertising manager and will also take office May 1.

Chickshaw, a 21-year-old journalism senior from Livonia, Mich., has worked in the State News editorial department since 1974.

Gerow, a 22-year-old senior majoring in advertising, was recommended to the board by the student advertising staff. Gerow will receive his bachelor's degree in fall 1976. He has worked on the advertising staff since January 1975.

"I plan to strive to maintain the high standards that have been kept in the advertising department," Gerow said. He will supervise 17 student account executives in the department.

Gerow and Chickshaw were appointed by the State News Board of Directors, an

CAMPAIGNS IN FULL GEAR Democrats blitz Detroit

By RALPH FRAMMOLINO
State News Staff Writer

Three Democratic presidential hopefuls — Jimmy Carter, Morris Udall and George Wallace — blitzed Detroit Saturday to gear up their Michigan campaigns and speak at a Democratic fundraiser.

The three contestants for the Democratic nomination this summer were invited to a Michigan Democratic Jefferson-Jackson Fundraising dinner. All three held rallies or receptions in addition to the dinner.

The candidates agreed that the number one issue in the 1976 presidential campaign would be the economy. Wallace knocked the porous welfare system and expressed disgust that America is second in military power to Russia. He emphasized his fitness for the nation's highest office despite his confinement to a wheelchair and said he would win the state's primary on May 18.

Carter spoke briefly of national health insurance and tax reform, but dwelt on positive aspects of the country. Udall promised more jobs for the country if he were elected in November and called for a more equitable tax structure.

All three of the Democrats said that this year's party convention in New York would be open. Political observers have been forecasting a deadlocked convention, giving Minnesota Sen. Hubert Humphrey a chance to emerge with the nomination.

The Alabama governor arrived first on Saturday and stayed at a Ramada Inn near Detroit Metropolitan Airport before moving on to the feast. He held a press conference and two rallies before his evening engagements at the dinner.

"Every position I used to take, people are now taking," Wallace told his supporters and the press. "They're drawing my water. They're drinking from my well."

"I said things to you that you hoped and prayed someone would say to you," he continued.

Wallace spoke of his fitness to serve as president. "You say, 'You're in a wheelchair, you're not strong,'" he said. "Well, I've got a strong voice."

The Southern governor used that voice to decry the federal "pointy heads" who used "percentages and quotas" to meddle with people's lives.

"If you leave people alone, and have equality of opportunity and equality of education, then everything will work out," Wallace said.

He knocked the current welfare system and the number two rating of American military strength. Wallace spoke twice to roughly 5,000 supporters each time in a hot hotel room. His speech was often punctuated with "amen" and "all right" from the crowd.

Former Georgia Governor Jimmy Carter stopped at Detroit United Auto Workers (UAW) Local 174 — the home local of former UAW president Walter Reuther — before going to the dinner. The crowd waited for Carter by sipping Bicentennial Staff Beer and listening to an out-of-tune band play "Happy Days are Here Again." When the word spread that Carter was about to enter, the crowd surged forward toward the podium and chanted, "We want Jimmy." Secret Service men held off the candidate's appearance until the crowd moved back.

Once on the podium, Carter said he was the first of his family in 210 years to graduate from high school and that he knew what it was to work for a living. He dwelt on the positive aspects of the country.

"We still live in the greatest country on earth," Carter said. "We've got the best system of government in the world." He described it as "immaculate" and "clean" and said he would seek a system of "love and compassion" if he were elected.

"I don't claim to know all the answers," Carter said. "I'm learning from people like you. There are people in this room who are as intelligent or more intelligent to manage. I want to express my personal thanks to you for not running for president."

He also said that it would be "a political miracle if the Democratic Convention were deadlocked." He looked forward to a nomination on the first or second ballot.

Carter was accompanied to the Local by Detroit Mayor Coleman Young, who had just last week endorsed the Georgian Democrat. Also with Carter was UAW President Leonard Woodcock. Woodcock, who was on record for supporting Humphrey, said his appearance was not necessarily an endorsement for Carter. Last week, the UAW executive council voted not to endorse any present Democratic candidate.

Udall did not speak until after the dinner when Wallace and Carter had left for their respective homes. Bad mouthing the Republican Administration, he spoke of the need for more employment and equalizing the tax structure.

"My program is jobs — J-O-B-S — and not the kind of b.s. we've been getting from Gerald Ford and Richard Nixon," Udall said. "I'm not talking about socialism. I'm talking about good old-fashioned Theodore Roosevelt Americanism."

The dinner was also attended by Michigan politicians, including East Lansing's Bob Carr. The fundraising event drew 2,500 people who paid $75 a couple to eat stripped sirloin. The Michigan Democratic Party raked in over $100,000 by the night's end.

Lebanese cease-fire extended

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Leftist Moslem leaders agreed Sunday night to extend the shaky cease-fire until the end of April to give more time for a political settlement in Lebanon's year-long civil war.

Overall Moslem chieftain Kamal Jumblatt made the announcement as mortar and grenade explosions thundered over Beirut's downtown hotel district and sporadic clashes flared elsewhere in the country. Police said 56 persons were killed and 25 persons kidnapped throughout the day.

Jumblatt earlier complained that two more Syrian battalions had entered Lebanon's mountainous border region, bringing the total Syrian commitment here to 5,000 - 6,000 troops. Previous estimates have put the number at about 2,000.

The troops are believed to be trying to prevent arms from reaching the warring factions as Syrian President Hafez Assad pressures for a settlement of the year-old civil war that has killed 15,000 persons.

Jumblatt said he has demanded an explanation for "excessive Syrian military presence" in Lebanon from special U.S. peacemaking envoy L. Dean Brown. After long warning against Syrian military intervention, Washington has tacitly backed Damascus' limited military moves so far.

Jumblatt called for a "freeze" in Syrian, French and American mediation at least until parliament elects a replacement for President Suleiman Franjeh. The Syrian-imposed truce was to have ended at noon Monday.

In a 15-minute emergency session under heavy security Saturday, 81 members of the nation's parliament passed by acclamation a constitutional amendment permitting replacement of Franjeh.

The 65-year-old Maronite Christian clan chief has given no indication whether he will sign the amendment into law or step down if parliament moves on to elect a new man.

There is still no guarantee that the nation's parliamentarians can agree on who the new president will be. Their action only made it possible to elect a new president before Franjeh's term expires Sept. 23.

A scuffle broke out between Moslem and Christian soldiers at the door of the temporary assembly, and snipers were active in the area. Christian members of parliament had refused to hold the meeting in the parliament building in the downtown area recently captured by Moslems, so the gathering was held in a mansion on the border between Christian and Moslem sectors of Beirut.

Franjeh, a headline right-wing clan chief, has become a critical symbol in the year-long battle which has wrecked Lebanon's lively free economy and left 15,000 dead.

Franjeh, backed until now by right-wing leaders of well-armed Christian private armies, refused to resign even after he was shelled out of his Beirut palace. He set up temporary headquarters in a mountain village.

Alaska against gulf lease sale

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — More than a million acres of Gulf of Alaska waters and ocean floor go on the auction block Tuesday in what many experts predict will be the largest offshore lease sale in U.S. history.

Interior Secretary Thomas Kleppe has estimated that up to $1 billion may be offered by the 70 major oil and gas companies which have signed up to bid for more than 180 tracts involved.

The state of Alaska has objected to the Gulf of Alaska sale, and officials said Friday they would file a motion with the U.S. District Court of Appeals in Washington on Monday to delay it.

Tuesday, U.S. District Court Judge Joseph C. Waddy rejected a state bid for a two- or three- year moratorium on the sale. The state argued that the sale should be postponed because of environmental considerations.

Senate rejects vet proposal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Friday rejected a proposal to add $800 million for veterans to next year's federal budget.

The vote was 53 to 21 against the increase, proposed by Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif. It was opposed by the combined Democratic and Republican leadership of the Senate.

They viewed it as a test case of whether the Senate will add more spending to a proposed $412.2 billion 1977 federal budget, already $17 billion higher than President Ford proposed.

Ford to veto inspection bill

EL PASO, Tex. (AP) — President Ford said Saturday he definitely will veto a bill in Congress limiting grain inspection at U.S. ports to federal employees and state inspectors approved by the Agriculture Dept.

The bill, already passed by the House, would end the use of inspectors employed by private firms to certify for foreign buyers how much grain they are getting in shipments they buy and how good it is.

It was developed following disclosures of corruption among some graders, weighers and samplers of grain at the nation's major ports.

Almost 100 inspection-related men and several grain companies have been indicted since federal grand juries started disclosing corruption in 1974.

There have been more than 50 convictions on such charges as bribery, misgrading and short weighing.

The Ford Administration has said it "strongly prefers" its own approach of expanding the number of supervisors and imposing new conflict-of-interest regulations.

Cuba says U.S. inspired attack

MIAMI (AP) — Cuban officials say a machine-gun attack on two Cuban fishing boats which killed one man was inspired by "threats against Cuba by the highest authorities in the United States government."

The charges were contained in a letter of protest Radio Havana said was sent to the United States through the Czech embassy. It said the attack had "all the characteristics of similar actions perpetrated before from the territory of the United States by counter-revolutionary bands determined to take revenge on simple working Cubans."

Four uninjured survivors and a dead companion were brought to Miami Thursday by a Norwegian freighter which picked them up. Three other men were reportedly wounded in the shooting.

The men said their boat and a sister craft were fired on and sunk Tuesday night by a mysterious vessel. They told American officials they lost sight of the other Cuban boat shortly after the attack.

Japan obtains Lockheed info

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Japanese prosecutors are getting information from the Justice Dept. about $12 million in payments and bribes made by Lockheed Aircraft Corp. in Japan, it was announced Friday.

The Department's announcement came after the March 23 agreement signed by the United States and Japan to exchange information in their investigations of payments Lockheed made to influence sales of its aircraft in Japan.

Meanwhile, the commission probing Dutch Prince Bernhard's alleged role in the Lockheed bribes scandal says its work is being hindered by the delay in receiving documents held by U.S. authorities.

The Dutch are conducting an investigation into allegations that Prince Bernhard accepted $1.1 million from Lockheed to promote aircraft sales in The Netherlands.

Peron faces corruption charges

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Deposed President Isabel Peron will be charged with corruption, official sources said Saturday. The sources also said about 3,000 former Argentine officials and labor leaders are under detention pending investigation of "administrative irregularities."

They said military authorities are uncovering proof of widespread corruption during the Peronist government and that the number of detained persons could increase in coming days.

Peron, 45, has been held in a mountain chalet in southern Argentina since the bloodless military coup on March 24.

Italy's Communists demand role

ROME (AP) — Communist party leader Enrico Berlinguer told an estimated 30,000 flag-waving, cheering followers at a rally Saturday that Italy's economic and political crises were intolerable and demanded a governing role with Premier Aldo Moro's Christian Democrats to help avert early elections.

At the same time, 10,000 young men and women, including 100 uniformed Italian soldiers masked with red handkerchiefs, shouted and screamed along Rome's streets.

500,000 soldiers and spectators in Mukden in Liaoning province staged a tremendous rally and parade Friday to express resolute support for the Chinese Communist Party central committee's two resolutions and angrily denounced the crimes of Teng Hsiao-ping.

Senate makes decisions on '77 budget priorities

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate has decided to try to save $2 billion on Social Security, health and welfare programs next year and use the money to combat unemployment.

It also rejected a proposal to add $800 million for veterans to next year's budget.

Those were the first major decisions on national priorities reached by the Senate Friday as it debated the 1977 federal budget.

The Senate Budget Committee had recommended seeking $2 billion in savings next year in Social Security, welfare, Medicare and Medicaid.

At the same time, it proposed spending an extra $1 billion to continue two temporary unemployment compensation programs, which President Ford planned to let expire next year, and another $1 billion in aid to provide jobs in state and local governments.

The Senate accepted those priorities by voting 40-26 to reject a proposal by Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., that would have exactly reversed them. Long wanted to restore the $2 billion for Social Security, health and welfare and delete the $2 billion for unemployment compensation and jobs.

"It does not make too much sense to me for us to recommend cutbacks in our permanent programs for needy persons in order to allow room for the extension of temporary programs which may be neither necessary nor appropriate," Long said.

Budget Committee members including the chairman, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, argued that Congress must act to hold down rapidly rising costs of social welfare programs. They said the savings could come from economies, not reductions in services and the amounts provided in the committee's proposed budget still are more than President Ford proposed.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., urged the $800 million increase for veterans' programs.

Unit OKs proposal to prevent scandals

WASHINGTON (AP) — After 14 months of deliberation, a Senate committee approved Friday a sweeping legislative proposal designed to help prevent future Watergate scandals.

In reporting the measure to the Senate, Chairman Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., said it is aimed at assuring the accountability of all high federal officials regardless in which branch of government they serve.

The principal sections of the bill set a division of government crimes in the Justice Dept., provide for creating a temporary special prosecutor

Gasoline prices expected to rise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Prices of gasoline and other fuels are expected to climb a penny a gallon between now and next February as a result of new rules on domestic oil prices approved Friday by the Federal Energy Administration.

The rules revision allows producers to charge higher prices for crude oil and to pass the increase along to consumers. An FEA spokesman said it was designed to stimulate future domestic oil production and to help oil companies cope with inflation.

Under the new rules, the average $7.66 per barrel domestic oil price set by last year's Energy Policy and Conservation Act will be raised gradually at an annual rate of 6.8 per cent to cope with inflation and another 3 per cent to give producers an added incentive. The increase is retroactive to March 1.

An FEA spokesman said the result will be to raise the average price of domestic crude oil to about $8.41 by next February. That increase can, in turn, boost the consumer cost of refined petroleum products if oil companies choose to pass it along.

Domestic oil prices are set under a two-tier system with "old oil" pegged at a price of $5.25 per barrel and oil from marginally producing stripper wells or "new oil" from wells drilled since 1972 set at $11.28 per barrel. The average of oil produced under each tier gives the $7.66 composite price.

An FEA spokesman said the new increases would be applied to give the maximum incentive to producing new oil.

Prices will be re-examined at six-month intervals during the 40-month period of controls established by last year's law, the spokesman said. He said the agency predicts old oil prices will go up 91 cents over the 40-month period, while new oil prices go up $2.67.

FEA Administrator Frank G. Zarb told the National Energy Resources Organization in Washington the only way the United States can cope with the international oil cartel is to develop more of its own resources.

Flight granted to hijacker trio

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Philippines Airlines sent a long-range DC8 to Bangkok on Sunday and promised to fly three hijackers and two of their hostages to Libya after the gunmen pulled the pins on two grenades.

Philippine Ambassador Manuel T. Yan said his government had "guaranteed" to Thailand that the DC8 would take off Sunday night with the hijackers, but airport authorities later said it probably would not take off until this morning.

The gunmen, who claim to be Moslem members of the Moro Liberation Front active in the Philippines, hijacked a twin-engine BAC111 Wednesday over the southern Philippines. The hijacked plane, with 12 hostages and the gunmen still aboard, was parked about 800 yards from the airport terminal when the DC8 landed.

Yan said the hijackers had agreed to release 10 of their 12 hostages, surrender all but one of their weapons and transfer to the DC8 for the trip to the Mideast.

After commandeering the BAC111, the gunmen first ordered it to Manila where they exchanged the 72 passengers for PAL employees. They took off Friday for the Mideast, but landed in Bangkok to refuel the short-range jet.

Airline officials here said the hijacking had lasted longer than any other in air history. A 1973 hijacking of a Japan Airlines plane that was finally blown up in Dubai lasted four days.

Both Libya and Egypt were earlier reported to have refused sanctuary to the hijackers, but officials and diplomats involved in the negotiations said Sunday that Libya had agreed to accept them.

PIRGIM sponsors series

By JOYCE E. RANDOLPH

Sex discrimination, housing, freedom of information and nuclear development will be a few of the selected topics of a discussion series sponsored by the Public Interest Research Group in Michigan (PIRGIM) at MSU residence halls during the next two weeks.

PIRGIM is engaged in research and lobbying for public interest issues and is funded by contributions from state university students collected during registration. A full-time professional staff works at the PIRGIM headquarters in Lansing, with branch offices at the universities staffed by professionals and volunteers.

Joseph Tuchinsky, PIRGIM executive director, will speak in "Lobbying and Consumer Issues" at 7:30 tonight in the east lower lounge of Shaw Hall. He has been involved in social issues for many years and, in 1968, founded and became director of the Midwest Committee for Draft Counseling. He is co-author of "Guide to the Draft," a standard handbook on the Selective Service system and available alternatives. Tuchinsky also participated in the design and installation of the first permanent unit-pricing system in an American supermarket.

Housing and tenants' rights will be discussed by Bernie Schaefer, chairperson of the MSU PIRGIM office, Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Brody Multipurpose Room A. Schaefer is a housing counselor at the Tenants' Resource Center and a member of the East Lansing Committee for Rent Control. He is preparing a guide to rental housing as a PIRGIM project. The housing guide and bills in the Michigan legislature dealing with tenants' rights will be discussed during the session.

The Honors College Women's Forum will give a presentation on "Women and Survival in East Lansing" at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Landon Hall east formal lounge. Harry Wright, Lansing district director of the Michigan Dept. of Civil Rights, will follow that presentation with a review of what constitutes sex discrimination and of legal complaint procedures.

Freedom of information legislation in Michigan will be the topic at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at 137 Abers Hall. Edward Petrini, PIRGIM legal director in Lansing, will discuss citizens' rights to access to state and local government records. The freedom of information act, House Bill 6085, is being debated in the Civil Rights Committee in the House of Representatives.

The proposed law would list the kinds of records likely to be requested and would require them to be available on request, as well as clarify and narrow the categories of records exempt from public disclosure. Guidelines for copying charges of records would be established, as well as time limits for response to citizen requests for information.

Agencies denying access to information would have to explain their legal reasoning for the denials in writing. Better procedures for administrative review and quick court appeals for access to information cases would also be provided for.

Richard Conlin, director of PIRGIM's energy policy activities, will discuss "Nuclear Development and Environmental Issues" at 7:30 p.m. April 20 in 335 Case Hall. Specific topics will include "Lifetime" utility rates in Michigan and the Safe Energy Initiative.

In a recent decision by the Michigan Public Service Commission in a Detroit Edison rate-increase case, "Lifetime" rates were adopted for residential energy consumers, as well as peak-load time-of-day pricing for industrial and commercial users. The "Lifetime" rates were proposed in an intervention by PIRGIM.

"Lifetime" rates will provide the amount of electric energy necessary to operate a household at a relatively inexpensive base price. Additional amounts of use will bring about higher prices to discourage excessive use of electrical devices. Peak load pricing would charge premium prices at peak times of power consumption and discounts at off-peak times.

The poor and elderly, who are usually low users of electricity, would be protected from high price increases, and the cost of building more utility plants would be borne by those using the most electric energy.

The Safe Energy Initiative would set three conditions which would have to be met before future nuclear power plants could be built in Michigan. The plants would have to provide adequate coverage by disaster insurance, that all safety devices were tested and functioning and the provision of a safe way to dispose of and store nuclear waste as long as it presents a health hazard. The state legislature would then have to vote that the conditions had been satisfactorily met.

All the talks are free.

Rainfall in observatory?

EAST LANSING (UPI) — Astronomers at MSU can't use their new observatory to watch the stars. They can watch it rain inside the dome or watch the telescope's 24-inch mirror fog up, but star gazing is out.

Hailed at its conception as a pioneer design for observatories, the University's new $1 million facility just doesn't work. Officials say the problem is a confusing air conditioning system and a balky computer. "It's terribly frustrating," said Dr. Albert Linnell, head of the MSU astronomy and astrophysics department. "But we can't get back the time we lost."

The problem centers on the divergent functions of the white domed facility's $150,000 air conditioning system. It must cool the observatory in winter and warm it in summer to keep inside temperatures consistent with those outside. Theoretically it prevents the telescope from fogging up when the roof door is opened.

But located in the same area are offices that need traditional temperature control and the computer room that requires its own specific atmosphere. "It's almost three systems all working against each other," said Bill Brown of Detroit, a mechanical contractor whose company installed the system. "It may be impossible for it to ever work."

According to students, the confused atmosphere in the dome at times literally has produced a rain shower under the dome.

Linnell disputed that charge, but he conceded water does collect and run down the walls, and water spots frequently mar the surface of the telescope's mirror.

'Dirty Dozen' list soiled

WASHINGTON—House Minority Leader John J. Rhodes is fuming mad because he was listed by a group called "Environmental Action" as one of the "Dirty Dozen" congressmen who have consistently voted against environmental bills. He also got a very low rating by the "National Council of Senior Citizens."

Rhodes was so angered he released a letter signed by 77 congressmen (mostly Republicans) calling on the Fair Campaign Practices Committee to "expose" what they called "the most flagrantly unfair and perverse of all campaign practices...the publication of ratings of public interest groups based upon votes of narrowly selected bills...."

Rhodes is, of course, right. There should be an investigation of any organization that monitors the voting record of congressmen. A congressman's vote is a private matter between him and his wife, and should not be revealed by any public interest group whose sole purpose is to defeat him in an upcoming election.

Anyone who lives in Washington is aware that Congress knows what is good for the people and, if they vote against environmental issues or senior citizens, they are doing it only because it is for the best interests of the country. You don't have to take my word for it—ask any congressman or senator and he will tell you the same thing.

Rhodes said the House Republican Research Committee is reviewing rating practices of special interest groups and may recommend legislation to restrict them.

This is the best way to deal with the matter. If Congress cares about its integrity, it must pass a law to prevent organizations in this country from publicizing the voting records of its representatives.

I think the bill should impose stiff criminal penalties, as well as large fines, on any group of citizens who disclose, verbally or in print, the vote of any elected official of the legislative branch of government.

The should be held in contempt of Congress and lose all voting privileges for five years.

Not only should the people who revealed the vote be punished, but those who print it in pamphlets, newspapers or magazines must suffer the grave consequences of violating "congressional security."

I suggest that anyone accepting a list of the "Dirty Dozen" or a similar list be sentenced to read the Congressional Record from the first page to the last for one year.

If Congress does not want to pass a special bill it could include the penalties in the S-1 Bill, which is now being debated in Congress. S-1 is a 750-page revision of the Criminal Code, which passes harsh penalties for anyone in the government releasing confidential and top secret papers to an unauthorized source.

These measures may sound tough, but there is a serious credibility gap in the country now and people are very suspicious of their politicians. One of the reasons for this is that we are being told how they vote.

Any fair person can understand House Minority Leader Rhodes' indignation that his vote, which is the most personal thing a congressman has, would be exposed by environmentalists and senior citizens who are working for his defeat in the upcoming elections.

I usually don't like to take sides, but I hate to see anyone, Republican or Democrat, put on a list called the "Dirty Dozen." It makes you lose faith in the First Amendment and the whole principle of "the public's right to know."

Congress deserves brunt of Reagan's speech on Kissinger

Ronald Reagan's challenge to Ford in his television broadcast is here and there criticized (for instance, by White House spokesmen) as being "completely familiar; nothing new." That's true of course, even as it is true that somebody who complains for the 100th time that termites are eating into the foundations of his house has not said something new in 100 public declarations, a commentary that has nothing to do with the progress of the termites—who are clearly at work in Washington, which is their headquarters, undermining the lovely mansion bequeathed to us by the Founding Fathers.

Reagan's domestic points are difficult to challenge. In fact Ford has made peace with the statist—perhaps he has no alternative. It is however not a commentary on Reagan's capacity for repetition, but on the public's capacity for acclimating itself to statist presumption, that Reagan needs to remind us that a) inflation continues; b) the unbalanced budget continues; c) the bureaucracy swells; d) the little engineers in Washington continue to dictate to us in the accents which, had they been used by King George III, would have precipitated the revolution a decade earlier.

In respect of foreign policy, Gov. Reagan is correct in remarking the great reversals of the past few years. He is, however, far too kind to Congress in his distribution of the blame.

It is a historical truism that the name of the principal figure in any historical period is given to the events of that period, never mind the force or forces primarily responsible for the significant historical developments.

Henry Kissinger is conveniently accepted, as Dean Acheson was conveniently accepted as the principal architect of the fall of China a generation ago, as the principal sponsor of the defeats we have suffered at the hands of the Communists. Kissinger has never denied that the greatest risk in the rhetoric of detente is the undermining of the popular will to resist. He has, however, assumed that the popular will to survive would be sufficient to instruct Congress in grave matters involving the national security. When Gov. Reagan assigns the blame to President Ford and Henry Kissinger for the loss of Angola, the accusation requires analysis.

Isn't it true that Kissinger, and Ford, warned of the necessity to resist the Soviet Union and Cuba in Angola? Isn't it also true that it was Kissinger and Ford who asked for massive aid to South Vietnam when the hordes came thundering down from the north? Isn't it true that Ford and Kissinger asked repeatedly for protection for the Central Intelligence Agency against such publicity as would neutralize their effectiveness?

It was Congress that said No on Vietnam. Congress that said No on Angola. Congress that has substantially neutralized the CIA. Reagan would be on sounder ground if he criticized Ford for failing to rouse the public to instruct the Congress on the necessity to resist. Ford, addressing Congress on the eve of the loss of South Vietnam, in a speech which will live in the annals of futurity, roused neither the Congress, nor the American people, nor, for that matter, the grasshoppers. When Ford said that his Administration would not permit the Soviet Union to "fish in troubled waters," what he meant was that he hoped the Soviet Union would not fish in troubled waters, but of course that is what the Soviet Union does best, and continues to do; and does so in considerable part because Congress does not act when action might help—in Angola, for instance.

When Kissinger spent a thousand hours with Congressmen and Senators in executive session, describing the tactical, strategic, psychological consequences of a loss in Angola, the American public was unaware of the pressure being put on Congress. But when Congress was asked to vote the necessary funds, Congress said: No. That is Reagan's issue. Why did Congress say No?

Was it because Congress, as representative of the American people, believes that the people do not understand the implications of the Angolan challenge? Or that they do not care? If so, then the fault is at least partly that of a President who is ineffective in causing them to understand. And if the President and his secretary of state cannot bring the people to understand why it is necessary to exert ourselves in order to survive, then Reagan must labor to make us understand.

VIEWPOINT: KAREN ANN QUINLAN

'Personhood' determines life

By MICHAEL MACKSOOD

Karen Ann Quinlan is in the news again. On March 31 the Supreme Court of the state of New Jersey decided unanimously to make Karen the ward of her father.

The decision, of course, means far more than the courts appointing Quinlan the legal guardian to speak for his daughter in this predicament.

The decision demonstrates the court's willingness to make it legal for doctors to "pull the plug" and let Karen's body die.

Many people around the country feel this decision is wrong. They equate the pulling of the plug with the murder of Karen.

Others feel the decision is right because a life such as Karen's is not worth living.

Still another camp of people, mostly medical doctors and moralists, feel the decision is right because the "person" Karen died when she became a prisoner of the irreversible coma.

These people believe the "personhood," that hard-to-describe and very important part of Karen, is defunct. All that remains, they believe, is the biological organism that once contained the alive "person" Karen.

The doctors and philosophers who feel this way believe continued biological functioning of Karen's body is nothing more than a show of power. A display proclaiming what modern technology can do.

It is this third view of Karen I wish to explore.

In this age of modern technology the definition of death has become blurred. In the old days a person was dead if his heart or breathing stopped. Not so today. Machines can continue these functions indefinitely.

Because of this difference, states across the country are beginning to use "brain death" as the criterion for death in these difficult cases.

To determine if there has been total brain death, many hospitals rely on the criteria set by a committee at Harvard Medical School.

These criteria are: total unresponsiveness and unresponsiveness to externally applied stimuli, even intensely painful stimuli; no spontaneous movements or breathing; no reflexes and a flat electroencephalogram.

These criteria are conscientious and sound but they are of little value in the case of Karen Ann Quinlan. She does not meet all the requirements for total brain death.

Doctors, however, agree that Karen has no awareness, no consciousness, no sense of reason, no ability to calculate. Further, her condition is irreversible.

The "person" Karen has died. All that remains is a living body crippled and decaying. The "personhood," that part of Karen which sets human apart from animals, has died.

The "person" Karen is not even sentient. She is no more aware of the world around her than a rock would be, though the biological functions of the body continue with the aid of machines.

Those who say the court's decision is wrong are guilty of role worship. These people are willing to let all individuals involved suffer in order to obey the rule, "thou shalt not kill."

This is a very useful rule in most cases. In Karen's case, though, following the rule serves no reasonable purpose.

Those who say the court's decision is right because Karen's life is not worth living are making a big value judgement. Deciding what kinds of lives are worth living is not something I would like to do.

Those who feel the court's decision is right because it gives doctors the right to determine if the "person" has died are choosing the best rationale. Doctors have the skill and equipment necessary to do this.

The courts decision gives the family the choice of whether to keep the body alive or not, a choice they should have.

There are, of course, problems with the death of the person view. For example, "persons" like Karen are already dead, yet kill the body? The body could be used for many useful purposes. It could be used for experimentation or to harvest blood and organs.

If you feel even suggesting this is cold and cold, that is evidence of this view's fault.

We as a society don't necessarily respect persons: rather we seem to respect bodies. In most cases respecting human bodies entails respect for persons but, as Karen's case demonstrates, not in all cases.

While respect for the "person" is most important and respect for bodies is secondary, I'm not sure if our body-conscious society could handle this.

I mean, just look at the great expense and care spent on the bodies of the dead in funerals.

Michael Macksood is a senior majoring in biology.

Letter policy

The Opinion Page welcomes all letters. Readers should follow a few rules to make that as many letters as possible appear in print.

All letters should be typed on 65-line and triple-spaced. Letters must be signed, and include local address, student faculty or staff standing—if any—and phone number.

Letters should be 25 lines or less and be edited for conciseness to fit more letters on the page.

No unsigned letters will be accepted. Names are withheld from publication for good cause.

Will Mike Marshall ever grow up? Or Frank Beeman really go off.

MSU's celebrated, one and only Cy Young-award-winning pitcher Mike Marshall can't seem to get to first base in justifying his war with the intramural department. In his tirade against Beeman, MSU and the resident "jerks" on campus, Marshall has conveniently forgotten a few things regarding his use of the turf arena in the Men's IM Building.

First, on Feb. 22, Marshall allegedly abused and intimidated a tennis player when that participant apparently objected to Marshall's wanting to pull out the batting cage, thus obstructing the tennis court.

Frank Beeman, IM bossman, sent Marshall a letter notifying him of a complaint by the abused party and banned the Dodger hurler from using the facility until Marshall discussed the matter with him.

Mike replied that he wouldn't meet with Beeman until he received a copy of the complaint. He said he considered his banishment from the turf arena to be a violation of basic fair play and due process.

Well, Beeman went to his bullpen and replied that, as a graduate student, Mike has access to a grievance procedure to insure due process through the University Graduate Judiciary Committee.

When last heard from, Mike was still in the on-deck circle contemplating whether or not to insert a pinch hitter. In the meantime, he's been using a designated signee to reserve time each day so that he might practice in the turf arena.

But, let's not stop with Mike. Frank Beeman is just as big a culprit in this mess.

Back in 1973, when Mike was a relatively obscure reliever with the Montreal Expos, Harris honored Mike's request for special workout privileges in the IM Building. To this day he's sorry for that move.

Marshall is the only MSU student to ask special permission to use the facilities individually. Groups have asked for the same thing, but never another individual.

Well, as Mike's career passed the seventh-inning stretch and his salary began to exceed his earned run average, the turf arena came into greater demand due to the growth of tennis.

Mike couldn't understand this and he wanted to loosen his muscle while oblivious of what other people wanted. In essence, everybody else is damned. Right, Mike?

Mike will be granted one point. There's no rule which says he can be banned from the IM Building. But, for the past dozen years or so, if anyone broke house rules he was banned and granted a meeting with Beeman to discuss the issue. Nobody else cried in the locker room like our Mike. But, again, perhaps the others respected people's rights and understood sportsmanship.

One other thing. Mike has put words into the mouth of Los Angeles Dodger's owner Walter O'Malley. Just last week, Mike proclaimed that O'Malley knew of the situation and sympathized with him. He also stated that O'Malley "considered these people a bunch of jerks."

Is that so, Mike?

Seems that when the State News called the Dodgers front office Tuesday, the reaction concerning that statement was astonishment.

One spokesman said, "Mr. O'Malley would never say anything like that about anybody. He's not that type of person."

Subsequently, Dodgers Publicity Director Steve Brenner called the State News and related O'Malley's sentiments. Brenner commented, "Mr. O'Malley has not talked Mike since this mess began and he has called anybody at Michigan State a jerk."

So, Mike, keep it up.

Maybe, just maybe, Mike Marshall will study out his option here at MSU and go to another university, any university.

In the meantime, I wouldn't put it past Mike to protest an umpire's decision this summer. You know, something like "Whaddya mean, that's a ball. Whaddya trying to do, violate basic fair play?"

To which, if the umpire has any savvy at all, he'll retort, "Grow up, Marshall."

Rudeness: 'fair play' to Mikey

Veterinary artifacts form display

By NAN STIEG

A veterinarian from the 18th century would have certainly been amazed by some of the exhibits at MSU's VetaVisit 1976 held Saturday.

The 13th annual open house at MSU's Veterinary Clinic was sponsored by the College of Veterinary Medicine and organized and executed by veterinary medicine from 1776 to the present.

Surgical instruments, catalogs and medicines of other years were among the artifacts donated by the MSU Museum and private individuals for the event. The viewer could compare prices of instruments and surgical procedures used by veterinarians then and now.

For example, a farm visit by a veterinarian in 1940 cost 50 cents. Now it would cost around $10 but with the added benefit of more advanced procedures. Another display included the diary of a veterinarian who practiced around 1926.

Spectators could also view a video-taped debate among three vet school students, in which one posed as a modern-day graduate of MSU's veterinary program while the other two posed as a Revolutionary War period veterinarian and his client. During examination of the client's cow, the two posing veterinarians laughed at each other's clothes and methods of practice. The two finally left in a huff after arguing over the diagnosis of the animal; the 1776 veterinarian telling the modern one, "You must be daft!"

One of the favorite exhibits for viewers of all ages seemed to be the cow with the window (fistula) in her side. Many visitors seemed to be concerned for the welfare of the animal, who has had the fistula for seven years, and leads a virtually normal existence. The opening into her first stomach enables students to observe and to take samples from her.

Incubation and hatching of chicks, health care, first aid and emergency care for pets also seemed to be crowd pleasers. The more than 5,000 people who attended learned about plants toxic to their pets as well as the veterinarian's role in public health. Some animal diseases can be transmitted to humans, such as rabies, tuberculosis and salmonella, which is a type of fever contracted from turtles and some other reptiles.

Research done by the College of Veterinary Medicine which benefits humans was also highlighted. The heart-lung bypass machine, which was part of the display on small and large animal surgery, is used mainly for heart surgery research done in conjunction with Ingham County Medical Center. The college is also one of two in the country to do canine open-heart surgery on a clinical basis and accepts two to four client cases per term.

Among the other exhibits was a live dressage show for horse enthusiasts, laws and health problems related to owning wild animals and new trends in zoo animal care.

The approximately 150 vet students who participated in the event along with the Student Wives Auxiliary and the Pre-Vet Club appeared enthusiastic about the event.

"I think everybody basically enjoys it," said Charles Clifford, a second-year MSU vet student.

Health officials to study PBB

LANSING (UPI) — State and federal health officials have begun a new, far reaching study of the human health effects of PBB contamination that will concentrate on 4,000 persons who came in contact with the toxic chemical.

Gov. Milliken announced that state officials have signed a $395,129 contract for the study with the federal Center for Disease Control, the National Cancer Institute and the Food and Drug Administration. The study will involve direct interviews with persons who lived on farms where livestock suffered PBB contamination, and will include those who had direct contact with the farms most heavily contaminated.

In addition, Milliken said the state Dept. of Public Health has asked the legislature to appropriate $117,000 for a testing program aimed at determining the level of PBB exposure in the statewide population.

"The department has begun to implement the study and I am hopeful that as it progresses, we will be able to obtain more definitive answers to this very complex problem," Milliken said.

A general executive order from President Ford had temporarily delayed the study, Milliken said. Ford's order, intended to restrict the questioning of citizens by federal agencies, would have limited the state to half-hour interviews with persons affected by PBB.

Milliken said, however, he sought and received an exemption from the order "in view of the extreme concern over the PBB problem in Michigan and the need to move as expeditiously as possible."

Following an accidental mixture of livestock feed with the flame-retardant chemical PBB in 1973, farmers have claimed the effects of the chemical continue to appear in their herds and are a threat to human health.

The precise health effects of small amounts of PBB contamination are not definitively known, though state and federal health officials consider animals with a PBB level of less than .3 parts per million safe for human consumption.

Milliken said the new study will be financed with a $336,964 federal grant and a state contribution of $58,165 in in-kind services.

Weekend Action

MSU women tracksters won five out of the 12 events in the Ohio State Invitational track meet Saturday, but still had to settle for an overall second-place finish behind Wisconsin.

Wisconsin ended the day with 159 points to the Spartans' 153.

Anita Lee won both the high jump and the long jump for MSU while Elaine Carr took the 400-meter hurdles. Karen McKeachie captured the three-mile run and the Spartan mile relay team took its event.

The men's tennis team suffered two setbacks over the weekend as, first, the Hawkeyes of Iowa narrowly defeated the Spartans 5-4 on Friday; then Minnesota came into East Lansing on Saturday to hand MSU a 6-3 loss.

Rick Gudelsky won the only singles match the Spartans could capture on Saturday, then teamed with Rick Callow to win their match.

Women golfers took first place in a four-team tournament Saturday.

The Spartans beat second-place Purdue by six shots in the Purdue Invitational. Other schools competing were Illinois State and Central Michigan.

Joan Garety tied for medalist honors with Purdue's Bonnie Boyer. Both golfers shot 77 on the West Lafayette, Ind. course.

In Champaign, Ill., the MSU men golfers captured third-place in the 36-hole Illinois Intercollegiate golf tournament.

Western Michigan took first place in the tourney with a total of 768. They were followed by Northern Illinois with 778 and the Spartans with 780.

MSU was led by Joe Marx who put together scores of 78 and 74 for a total of 152. Other Spartan scores were Gary Domagalski with 153, Mark Weston with 154, Mark Brooks with 160, Scott Broadwell with 161 and Paul Kruzel with 165.

Rock, Bach & Blues. It all sounds real on the on the Mode R.

Many speakers will sound real to you with only one type of music. The Fried Model R accurately reproduces any musical input. Rock. Classical. Anything.

The Mode R is a monitor quality speaker which may be safely played at high levels and still maintain impressive dynamic range and resolution. Bass and treble are not distorted, with special accuracy.

Using innovative and durable polyurethane resins for component diaphragms, Fried avoids the tonal coloration of paper cones.

Come by and listen to what reality is all about. The Fried Model R.
