Inadequate parking space? Problem could be worse

By NANCY ROBERTS
State News Staff Writer

If you think the parking problem in East Lansing is bad now — just wait — things could get worse.

Two parking waivers, which some say could increase the parking crunch, are presently before the East Lansing Planning Commission. George and James Spanos are proposing a steak house and office space in a one-story building on the corner of Abbott Road and Albert Street, and must obtain waivers before they can build. Douglas Wade is proposing another restaurant in the southern portion of the old Post Office building on Abbott Road. A Secretary of State License Bureau is planned for the northern portion of the building.

The zoning regulations for this area require one parking space per four seats in a restaurant and two spaces for each 1,000 square feet of office space. The planning commission's staff surveyed all the parking areas within 500 feet of the proposed developments and found that the parking spaces were 90 per cent full 47.4 per cent of the time and over capacity 29.5 per cent of the time. They concluded that "there is sufficient parking space available" in the area.

The staff considered that the parking patterns would not be restricted only to the area surrounding the proposed establishments. If the entire parking system from Bailey Street to Valley Court and Grand River Avenue to Elizabeth Street is considered, then adequate space is available.

The intent of parking waivers is to discourage the development of individual parking area around each establishment. The Planning Dept. prefers to encourage municipal parking.

Gary Foltz, manager of Dooley's Restaurant, does not agree with the planning commission's staff report.

"The staff report is deficient in the analysis of the impact and demand on parking that these new establishments will bring," he said.

Foltz said the businesses will employ a number of people (probably seven to 10 employees in the restaurants) of whom about half will drive to work. And the License Bureau will attract drivers also.

"There was no consideration for the nature of the businesses," Foltz said.

James Muelendyke, chairman of the planning commission, said that East Lansing merchants are more concerned with the parking problems Dooley's creates. He added that Dooley's obtained a parking waiver before it was built.

"Every business in the last few years has been granted a waiver," he said. "We want parking to be in the larger areas rather than in black topped spaces around the buildings."

The planning commission staff presented its report to the planning commission Wednesday night. As of Wednesday, Muelendyke would not speculate on the commission decision.

"I would rather wait until after the discussion," he said. "I may hear arguments that will sway me one way or the other."

O'Connor filing gripe against DPS detectives

By IRA ELLIOT
State News Staff Writer

Doyle O'Connor, the Student Workers Union (SWU) organizer who was arrested Tuesday, said he and others will file a citizen's complaint with the MSU Dept. of Public Safety (DPS) against two detectives who allegedly entered his associates' dormitory rooms illegally.

O'Connor pled not guilty in East Lansing District Court Tuesday to charges of larceny, malicious destruction and assault and battery against MSU student and SWU opponent Phil Lang.

O'Connor said that during the investigation of the case, two DPS detectives entered the rooms of his friends and fellow SWU organizers without a warrant to look for him. Official charges have not yet been filed but O'Connor said they will be before the week is out.

In addition, the union leader alleged that one detective perjured himself in court Tuesday. The detective said he had not seen O'Connor and Tim Cain, who lives near O'Connor in Williams Hall, last week in the dormitory. But O'Connor claimed he had spoken with the detective. The union diehard also said he had asked one top official at DPS if O'Connor was the one the DPS was investigating.

"He (the DPS official) said that they didn't need me when I talked to him Monday, but Tuesday the judge was told I was hiding out," O'Connor said.

O'Connor said he may take his complaint against the two detectives outside the internal structure of DPS and he hoped that the detective who in court denied speaking with him is reprimanded by the judge.

The DPS detectives involved could not be reached late Wednesday for comment.

The incident for which O'Connor was arrested, and since let out on $400 bond, occurred April 7, the last day of the SWU authorization election. Another warrant may be validated by the court if more evidence is accumulated against a second suspect. Lang was apparently the object of (continued on page 10)

PSC power abuse denied

By CRIS PARKS

SING (UPI) — State Public Service Commissioner William Ralls has denied that he abused his powers in efforts to force a House committee probing the special House committee, which held the final report of its year-long study Tuesday, found the PSC fails to represent the interests of utility customers in rate proceedings and is too casual in accepting data and energy services supplied it by the utilities.

It recommended several pieces of legislation, including measures that would require greater efficiency by utilities and a stronger voice for consumers in the rate setting procedure.

Ralls admitted Tuesday that he used legitimate channels to sway individual committee members.

Rep. E. Dan Stevens, R-Atlanta, a member of the special committee, said Alpena Power Co. President Stephen Fletcher claimed he had been asked by Ralls to influence Stevens to kill a proposed PSC guideline restricting political activity by commissioners.

Rep. Howard Wolpe, D-Kalamazoo, chairman of the PSC study committee, said questions raised by Stevens should be dealt with by the state Ethics Commission.

If the Ethics Commission does not handle the question, Wolpe said, the special committee will. He also sent a letter to Fletcher, who was on vacation and unavailable for comment, asking him to tell the committee his side of the story.

Ralls said Tuesday he has had "no conversation with Mr. Fletcher about any matter before the committee and made no request to him concerning any matter before the committee."

Ralls, who testified before the committee against restricting the political activities of PSC members, admitted he also discussed his feelings privately with various committee members, but objected to call the action "lobbying."

Tenant ejection policy refined by senate bill

By RALPH FRAMMOLINO

Bill that defines illegal tenant ejection and will now wind its way through the Senate after being molded during the scenes negotiations of groups on companion bill, House Bill 4958, is just starting the slow process of negotiations between landlords and tenants. Both sides say that the second measure, which stipulates when a landlord enters a renter's apartment, will take some time to be passed to the Senate.

The ejection bill, House Bill 4957, introduced by Rep. Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, was passed by the House Tuesday and landlords asked Sunday the legislative body move it on to the measure allows a tenant who has been illegally ejected from his housing to sue a landlord for "actual damages" or $200.

Ejection is defined as a use of force, removal of locks, removal of the doors, or the use of "essential services" or the use of unpleasant odors or noise by the week to ask the House to move the measure is because the MLA wanted to send the measures over to the Senate as a package. The groups perceived Sunday that HB 4958 would take some time and decided to let HB 4957 loose.

"It looks very likely that we will totally rewrite the bill (HB 4958)," said Joe Tuchinsky, who is from PIRGIM and on the MTRC negotiating team. "It looks like we will start from scratch."

The measure requires that the landlord give written notice 24 hours before he enters the tenant's dwelling for an inspection or repair. It also allows the landlord to enter if an emergency arises. Tuchinsky said that as the law stands now, landlords entering tenants' dwellings "is simply trespassing."

Both groups say that they look forward to a permanent landlord tenant relationship coming from the negotiations that were instituted and presided over by Rep. William Ryan, D-Detroit.

"I hope that when we finish (HB) 4958 that some permanent mediation board would materialize," said MTRC coordinator Ann Dunlop. Dunlop also served with Tuchinsky on the MTRC negotiation team.

Gloria Fleming, president of the MLA, said that the two groups were getting along well.

"We're getting to know each other," Fleming said. "I think that we (MTRC and MLA) represent the good people on both sides."

STRIKE, LABOR DISPUTE IN THIRD WEEK

'Frisco city hall blocked by pickets

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Striking city craft workers and their supporters escalated picket lines Wednesday, throwing a cordon around city hall and shutting down ferry service between the city and suburban Sausalito.

An estimated 200 municipal strikers and sympathizers set up picket lines at all entrances to city hall, jostling some city workers as they arrived for work. Three men were arrested after shoving incidents.

As the walkout by about 1,900 craft union workers entered its third week with no immediate end in sight, another labor dispute involving bus drivers stopped bridge maintenance and brought picket lines to ferry slips, cutting off service for about 550 commuters from the waterfront community of Sausalito.

That dispute, which began Monday, involves members of the Amalgamated Transit Union who are seeking higher wages from the Golden Gate Bridge Transit District. Their refusal to drive commuter buses across the bridge from Marin and Sonoma counties has led to a sharp increase in car pooling but no dramatic traffic tieups.

Garbage lunch illustrates food waste

SEATTLE (AP) — The food was garbage, with compliments to the chef.

About 200 people at Seattle University ate a lunch of three-day-old bread, vegetable soup and fruit salad—all prepared from ingredients normally consigned to garbage cans in grocery stores, hospitals and school cafeterias.

The unusual menu was part of last Thursday's "Food Day," organized by a coalition of groups to call attention to what they say is misuse of farmland and a waste of nutritious food.

A long display table featured unspoiled vegetables that were considered unsaleable by grocers because of slight discoloration or other signs of age.

"This represents only the food from 15 small grocery stores here," volunteer Bill Bernstein said. "When you think about how many huge supermarkets there are in this area, you can begin to imagine the amount of food tossed away each day."

University of Washington Prof. Roy Prosterman, featured speaker at the luncheon, said Seattle was wasting enough food each year to feed another city of similar size.

Prosterman, long a critic of food waste, said about 20 million persons die each year because they don't have enough food. He also predicted the world could be as much as 100 million tons short of its necessary food supply within 10 years.

Each American home has an average food loss of 10 per cent as a result of groceries thrown away, he added.

N, reporters win awards

State News and 12 staff members have won 17 journalism awards in three competitions this month. Delta Chi, the Society of Professional Journalists, has given the State News a Gold Medal award in individual newspaper competition for this region. Sponseller and Carolyn Fessler won awards in feature writing, while Edward R. Sponseller and Marty Sommerness won awards for news writing. Awards were presented during the society's Region 4 conference in Arlington, Va. The winners will compete in the national contest and those winners will be announced at the national convention to be held in Los Angeles in October. The 14th annual Michigan Collegiate Media Assn.'s Newspaper, Yearbook and Magazine Contest held April 10, the State News was given the best overall newspaper award. The daily division, MSU competed against Central Michigan University, Eastern Michigan University, Western Michigan University and the University of Detroit. Award winners included Sherman Garnett, who won first place for best feature column and third for best editorial. Edward L. Ronders placed second for sports story and third for best news story. In the cartoon division, Tom Ferguson won first place and Bill Bradsher placed second. Frank Fox and Jeff Merrell won first and second place, respectively, in the photo division. In sports competition, Ann Williamson won first for best sports story. Entries for the competition included staff personnel from the Detroit Free Press, Detroit News, the Ypsilanti Press and the Ann Arbor News, along with journalism professors from various colleges and universities. In addition, Steve Orr and former staff member June Delano won an unspecified award in the Detroit Press Club collegiate competition. Announcement of the specific prizes and placement of the winning entry will be made at an awards banquet in May.

Board to act on affiliation, name change

Monthly meeting of the MSU Board of Trustees will be held Friday at 9 a.m. in the Board Room of the Administration Building. The board is to be acted on by the trustees regarding a name change for the Dept. of Languages and the College of Health Sciences. The arrangement is a trade-off for a trade-off of campus space for students wishing to study in the country. The trustees will hold an informal public session Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Board Room of Kellogg Center. Officials in the admissions office of the three schools on campus will explain the procedures to the trustees. MSU President Brian Raymond will present what he sees as the need for a referendum on the State News $1 subscription price and State News staff members will be present for questions. Both will also address other State News matters.

COMPUTER WHIZ MAKES THE ODDS

Court decisions predicted

By SUZIE ROLLINS
State News Staff Writer
employs the man who can predict Supreme Court decisions even before they themselves can. John J. Spaeth, professor of political science, has been predicting Supreme Court decisions using computers for the last five years. Spaeth has had an accuracy rate of 90 percent in his previous individual court predictions. A computer whiz became interested in Spaeth when a friend, who was predicting Supreme Court decisions by computer, called Spaeth and asked if he could make the type of predictions involving Supreme Court decisions. After pondering the question for about a year he decided to give it a try.

on the basis of the Supreme Court justices' past voting behavior. He obtains his information on the high court's decisions from publications such as "Preview" and "The U.S. Law Week." The amount of time Spaeth spends evaluating his data depends on the nature of the upcoming decision. "If the justice has an identifiable track record it doesn't require more than reading time or expertise to expand in other areas. As a social scientist Spaeth feels it is vital to the field to predict human behavior. "If we're considering ourselves as scientists we have to predict human behavior," he said. He publishes his findings in a column called "The Supreme Court Computer," which appears in the Los Angeles Herald Examiner. He has also authored several books on computerized predictions. Spaeth does find one drawback in being a computer predictor. "No one will ever bet with me," he said.

the case and the summary of the arguments," he said. Spaeth predicts that at least five judges will vote to uphold the death penalty in the near future. The vote will either be 5-4 or 6-3, depending on how the newest justice, John Paul Stevens, votes, he said. He believes that Stevens' vote on the capital punishment issue will give clues as to the nature of the court's future decisions. Another of Spaeth's predictions is that there will be an unanimous vote in favor of employers being allowed to set up a mandatory retirement age. The specific case Spaeth believes the court will set down this ruling involves a state police officer who, under Massachusetts law, was compelled to retire at age 50. The state law is being challenged on the grounds of discrimination because of age. Spaeth's data is limited to the Supreme Court decisions because he does not have the U.S. Sen. Eugene McCarthy, an independent candidate for president, will make an independent challenge to the party system today at 2 p.m. in B108 Hall. McCarthy's appearance is being sponsored by the ASMSU Great Issues. McCarthy's candidacy in Michigan has led to a controversy focusing on the election laws. Michigan requires that candidates must carry state party endorsement in order to be included on the ballot. McCarthy is challenging that law in the District Court in Grand Rapids, for an injunction which would allow him to be listed as an independent.

In celebration of the long-awaited coming of spring, thousands of students are bringing their bicycles out of the moth-balls and are now pedaling their ways to the halls of higher learning. Most people find the transition from snowshoes to bicycle to be most enjoyable. Others, however, have found that bicycling often takes a turn for the worse and sometimes is downright difficult. Take, for example, the bicyclist who took a wrong turn at the Hagadorn Road bridge and ended up in the Red Cedar River. The MSU student was riding on the sidewalk behind Holmes Hall that merges northward into the sidewalk on the west side of Hagadorn Road about 11:30 p.m. Tuesday. As he approached the pedestrian side of the bridge over the Red Cedar River he apparently made a wrong turn and took a 15-foot drop into the river, campus police said. Two witnesses called the DPS and officers pulled the semi-conscious man out of the river and took him to Sparrow Hospital where he was treated for a neck sprain and a possible brain concussion. And then there are the two bicyclists who both took wrong turns and ended up in a head-on collision. The two students were traveling along the divided bike paths on the east side of Jensen Fieldhouse Tuesday morning. Police said each was on the proper side of the separate paths, one going east and one going west. Both bicyclists say that they saw pedestrians blocking their path so rather than hit the pedestrians they both cut to the grassy center that separates the paths. Unfortunately they did it at the same time, just as they were about to pass each other. Police say that both bicyclists complained of bruised shoulders. Other injuries were minor. And finally, there was the bicycle thief who managed to make a turn that resulted in his escape from the DPS officers who were chasing him. A member of the DPS special bicycle-theft-prevention team observed the man stealing a bicycle from a rack on the south side of Brody Hall at about 1:14 p.m. Wednesday and gave chase when the man started riding away. Other officers were called into the chase, but the man lost them when he went into the Story Olds used car parking lot. The abandoned bicycle, however, was returned to its owner. The suspect was described as a black male about 6 feet tall, and slender with light pants, a dark jacket and white tennis shoes. The man was also carrying a bag which had a large white stripe on it. Gospel giveaway hits MSU

By CAROL KLOSE
State News Staff Writer
It was an invasion. It was biblical. However, it was not the locusts of the Seven Plagues, but a swarm of Gideons who descended on campus Wednesday morning to distribute the New Testament to whomever would take it. They came in vans from all over the state with cartons full of Bibles. Over 160 of them set up stations and they seemed to be everywhere, some as close together as 15 feet. Though the organization is composed of business and professional men, many had the skills of a carnival barker. "Have you received your free copy of the New Testament?" an elderly man called, thrusting the small green volume at a passing student. "Ma'am, ma'am in the orange coat, how about a New Testament?" Their goal was to distribute 30,000 Bibles to MSU students in the five hours they were on campus. Distributing Bibles is probably the activity Gideons International is best known for. The organization began about 80 years ago when two businessmen sharing a motel room desired a Bible and could not find one. These two started the Gideon organization which has been distributing Bibles since then to hotels and motels as well as to students from the fifth grade through college. The Bibles are distributed free. Costs are covered by membership dues and church donations. Ernie Bateman stood in front of Berkey Hall, passing out Bibles in the hot sun. He called out to everyone who passed, even those walking down Grand River Avenue. His narrow purple tie fluttered in the breeze across the narrow lapels of his dark blue suit. "It is Christian work," he said. "You just want to do something for the Lord—that is just why." His voice had the sing-song rhythm of an evangelist. Students began flowing out of Berkey Hall as classes ended. Bateman held out the Bibles. A few students took one but most passed him by. "When do we get the Old Testament?" one student laughed as he passed. "Next week?" Bateman said most students were congenial and no one had been rude. "I thank the Lord for that," he said. Farther down the street, a Gideon from Ann Arbor had set up camp. He explained that he had become a Gideon after he was wounded in Vietnam and a Gideon Bible had helped him during his recovery. "There are over 50,000 in 105 countries," he said proudly. "We are now distributing Bibles at a rate of one million every 25 days or one every other second." The man, who is a car salesman when not pushing Bibles, said he noticed a difference between giving Bibles away here and in Ann Arbor. "In Ann Arbor, at the University of Michigan, we got refused more," he said as he handed a book to a student riding by on a bike. Evidence that they were successful was everywhere. The plastic-covered books shone in the sun as they sat on top of textbooks as students made their way across campus. One student, who had been taking the free testaments from every Gideon he passed, displayed a backpack filled with them. "They're everywhere," he said. "They're like flies." Pat Matice, a graduate student, carried one in the back pocket of his jeans. "I'm appreciative of the Bible," he said. "They're not pushing them on any one, just handing them out as you pass." Back in front of Berkey Hall, Bateman was still passing out Bibles. "Have you received your free New Testament?" he called. A student paused and asked, "Free?" "Yes, free, totally free." The student hesitated, then slowly reached for the Bible, standing as far away as possible. His eyes rolled with suspicion. Bateman handed him the Bible and reached into a box for another. "Free?" the student asked incredulously before walking away. Bateman began calling to more students. Suddenly he stopped. "You know, we have a hymn we sing, 'I Know It Will Be Worth It.'" The 69-year-old Gideon hummed the tune softly. "It will be worth it all," he said, his voice cracking slightly. "I know it will—just one glimpse of His dear face..." His voice faded and tears welled in his eyes. He turned away quickly. A student approached. "Have you received your copy of the New Testament?" he called softly.

State hopes to win solar facility

By ED LION
State News Staff Writer
In an attempt to win a fiercely competitive bid for the site of the national Solar Energy Research Institute (SERI), Gov. Milliken signed a bill into law Wednesday which appropriates $220,000 to fund an extensive study into the advantages of locating the facility in Michigan. Over 80 interests are currently bidding for the institute which will basically study the possibility of harnessing solar energy and converting it into commercial power sources. The attempt to land the facility in Michigan has received broad backing from practically every sector of the population. A coalition of universities, industrial concerns, legislators and independently funded research institutes have all pushed for the facility to be built in Michigan. They contend that such a prestigious national facility is long overdue for the state and that it would benefit the economy. Currently there are no federal scientific research centers in Michigan. The bill to appropriate funds for a study had been overwhelmingly approved by the state legislature and had been backed by the Michigan Energy and Resource Research Assn. (MERRA), an organization which promotes and organizes energy research. "It's an investment," said John Nellor, MSU representative to MERRA, in referring to the money allocated for the study. He said that building SERI in Michigan would create many more jobs — the facility will employ about 1,500 technicians, a large clerical staff and will generate many construction jobs — and further augment Michigan's already thriving scientific community. The Federal Energy Research and Development Assn. (ERDA) is conducting a bidding process in order to make the final site selection. Three weeks ago it formally issued the set of guidelines that it will use in determining where the facility will be built. Today in Washington D.C., the association is holding a conference to clarify these guidelines and answer any questions concerning the criteria which will be used in selection. All bid proposals are to be submitted to ERDA by June 15 when the long process of selection will actually begin. According to Henry Bohm, a Wayne State University professor who has been placed in charge of Michigan's attempt to win the site, it will take a tremendous effort to compile a study to convince ERDA that Michigan is the best place to locate the system. He said the study has to be an all-encompassing breakdown of why a Michigan site will be most advantageous. He said that educational, social, scientific and transportation factors will all come into play to determine the site. When asked where the SERI will be built if Michigan is selected as the host state he said that "the candidate location is not definite at this time." He did add, however, that because of transportation necessities, the institute will be located within easy access of Detroit's Metro Airport. He also said that "East Lansing is on the fringe" of this region. The SERI would be one of the most advanced facilities for studying the control of solar energy, Bohm said. He explained that the facility would study how to harness solar energy to regulate temperature and produce electricity. This would be done by using light, wind or heat to produce electricity, and a process called "biomass" to release energy stored-up in plants. Bohm said that he thinks Michigan stands a good chance to procure the facility, largely because of the extensive industrial and academic resources already present in the state. Among the other states vying for the facility are Florida, California, Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico, Massachusetts and a consortium of New England states. Radio focusing on State News

Thursday evening's 'Ellipsis' show on the MSN radio network and its affiliates will focus on the latest round of turmoil at the State News. Guests on the show will include State News General Manager Gerald H. Coy, Opinion Page Editor Bob Ouelton and former staffer Frank Fox. The show will be broadcast at 8 p.m.

Preserve 'red' files

Our legislature committed a regrettable error nearly 26 years ago during the McCarthy era of "Red scares" and fears of Communist infiltration.

The mistake was made when the legislature passed a law allowing for the organization of special investigative units within the state police. They were given the authority to investigate suspected political subversives and keep files on them in cooperation with local law enforcement agencies.

The seeds for potential abuse of civil and political rights were sown at that time. Now, 26 years later, we recognize ever so graphically the damage that has been done.

Files kept on some 50,000 citizens within Michigan indicates the extent of this abuse and the excess to which state law can go in debasing the very rights it is intended to preserve.

The decisions handed down in two circuit court cases in the state involving this intelligence-gathering unit of the state police, called the Red Squad, have ordered that the files be made accessible to citizens who suspect that their political activities may have been monitored by this agency.

Both decisions also declared the 1950 statute to be unconstitutional and one judge ordered the files to be eventually destroyed.

But fortunately the files have not been destroyed as yet, due to the current investigation into the matter by the state legislature, which requested that the files be preserved until their investigation is completed.

The legislature now has the opportunity to take corrective action and to make amends for a grave mistake it made long ago.

We believe it to be only fitting that the legislature, which opened this chapter of abusive state excesses, be also the one to take the final step in bringing it to a conclusion.

The Civil Rights Committee, which is now holding hearings on the past activities of the Red Squad, needs the time and necessary evidence — the files — to determine just what has taken place and how to enact preventive legislation for the future.

Only by preserving the files and allowing the legislature the necessary time to investigate what has happened in the past can this case be brought to a final and decisive conclusion; a conclusion that will leave no questions unanswered.

State tax scale is too flat

Gov. Milliken and the legislature are once again with the game of taxing Michigan's workers may with another income tax hike the second in two years.

Last spring, Gov. Milliken able to get the legislature to institute his 18 per cent income hike. Many were captivated by the stipulation favoring it on the stipulation would be brought down from 10 per cent to 4.4 per cent in 1976. Well, it's this time and the tax rate has not reduced.

The government was flirting with the idea of regressive taxation again — in the nuisance taxes. This, though, has been dropped.

But the brief talk about regressive taxes focuses on what is the essential question, and a thorn in the side of Michigan budgetary recuperation: how to have a flat rate income tax.

A progressive tax scale much sense in itself, and bring in more money for the business of government.

Dems hungry for Humphrey

Mary McGroarty

WASHINGTON — Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., and Rep. Bob Bergland, D-Minn., are sending out a letter this week with what may be the season's most needless advice: Keep Hubert Humphrey in mind.

It will go to thousands of Democrats, party officials from governors to precinct captains, to past and potential convention delegates. The regulars have already registered their overwhelming preference for the reluctant candidate.

They have strange bedfellows. Implacable liberals who screamed themselves hoarse for participatory politics are dreaming of a brokered convention. Anti-Vietnam activists who in 1968 called Humphrey a spineless hack beg for a smoke-filled room from which he will emerge.

Humphrey understands all this and, while vowing he is not a candidate in the primaries, keeps the fires stoked by timely appearances in primary states. He went to New York and wowed the Democratic Mayors' Conference. He showed up in Pittsburgh at the AFL-CIO state convention and the hall resounded with cries of "We need Humphrey." He'll be back in Pennsylvania, for a date made back in last November, on April 26, the day before the primary vote there.

Says Sen. Walter Mondale, who with Minnesota's Gov. Wendell Anderson is co-chairman of a soon-to-be-announced "Draft Humphrey" committee: "If he were on the ballot, Humphrey would win Pennsylvania by 103 percent."

The calls that flood Humphrey's office after every primary never stopped coming last week, because, after Jimmy Carter won Wisconsin and came in fourth in New York, he stepped on his necktie. Humphreyites were elated.

Carter, having sewed up the black vote with his sweet talk, suddenly sent a deafening message to his anti-black constituency. He spoke of "ethnic purity" in the neighborhoods. The uproar was enormous, but Humphrey people watched only one man, Rep. Andrew Young, D-Ga., Carter's most illustrious black sponsor.

Young, who has credentials with everyone, castigated his candidate publicly for his tone-deafness to nazi rhetoric, but he did not split. If he had, Carter's constituency of blacks and white liberals who want a winner might have scattered. Carter recanted immediately, which defused matters somewhat.

The chances are that when the smoke clears Carter will emerge with his grin still gleaming. He won't be the same, but he may be more or less in place — the greatest threat to Humphrey, whom blacks still love but are weary of waiting for.

In Pennsylvania, the hope is a three-way tie, which will produce another delay.

The pressure on Humphrey to file for New Jersey's June 8 primary — the deadline falls two days after the Pennsylvania primary — is intense. He will not. All offices are voted on in New Jersey and the state, organized and pro-labor, is expected to produce a big turnout which would be Humphrey's for the asking. His fans wanted to follow the lead of New York's Erie County chairman, Joseph Crangle. He fielded a slate of 16 delegates in three upstate districts. They pledged themselves to Humphrey, broadcast their loyalty through a low-budget campaign of leaflets, radio and newspaper advertising, and won.

But Rep. Peter Rodino, dean of New Jersey's congressional delegates, declined to front for Humphrey. He is the leader of a 10-man uncommitted slate, which is really pro-Humphrey. He vetoed the Crangle formula. Without a clear sign from Humphrey, he will not permit any covert activity in his behalf.

Humphrey, who is enjoying the novelty of being chased for the first time in his political life, will not budge. His followers complain that it is underhanded and undemocratic to seek the nomination without admitting it or entering at least one or two late primaries (he will be entered willy-nilly in Oregon, Idaho or Nebraska). But he promised the other candidates a long time ago he would give them a clear field.

Publicly, Humphrey says he does not need to run in the primaries because they are to introduce the candidate to the voters — which in his case is clearly not necessary — and to show vote-getting ability, which he says he has proved. This last is arguable, since he was defeated for his party's nomination twice and lost the general election to Richard Nixon in 1968 — partly because the liberals who are now crying for him couldn't forgive his support of the war.

But they've forgiven him all that as Jimmy Carter steals near, and they've forgotten he's a loser and squash their doubts about his health. The hunger for Humphrey knows no bounds or reason.

Washington Star

I like Gov. Carter for much the same reasons others like him, and accordingly I pledge not to observe him at the stump. I find it almost impossible to enhance one's appreciation of a man engaged in asking people to vote for him. Take Carter.

He was appearing before a trade union in Milwaukee and the mood was surly. Why? Because, as governor, Jimmy Carter had defended right-to-work laws. Now understand exactly what this meant. It meant that the governor of Georgia took the position that the people of Georgia should reserve to themselves the right to decide whether a union shop should be compulsory. The idea that Washington should decide this in behalf of the people of Georgia is an affront not only to the 10th Amendment, but to the whole federal system. However, to have backed, however formalistically, 14B is on the order of having defaced an icon. It is a sin of the spirit. So, smiling at his interrogator, now we hear Jimmy Carter saying:

"That was when I was governor of Georgia. Now I think that the repeal of 14B means a great deal to a great many people. And if Congress sends me up a bill repealing 14B, I'll sign it." There were cheers. A little half-hearted, because he was a man who once had disbelieved. Now,

William F. Buckley

What they are doing to Carter they propose to send to the presidency.

You see, to believe that the federal government should specify a union shop throughout the United States requires the subordination of libertarian and federalist impulses to the interests of a single social unit — the trade union. Nobody who is prepared to subordinate all other interests to any one interest should be elected president. Not even the interest of peace. Let alone the interest of labor unions or business corporations.

A failure to see this is a failure to understand what it is that makes for a good president. But it is precisely this desire to force the candidate to humiliate himself veto if Congress passes that which Closed shops aren't, in my opinion, constitutional. So if the people, by their will through Congress, outlawing the state's authority to right-to-work legislation, I won't be the way that that legislation's become.

But that will not do. The voters the equivalent of what in religious they call "internal assent." The candidate required not merely to say that but that particular measure, but to believe in that particular measure.

The same conservative savagery Henry Kissinger over appear back home before their constituencies — and deplore any actions on the sale of wheat to Russia only thing they are not permitted to do.

"I disapprove of selling wheat to Russia. I cannot risk alienating the voters farmers in my home state."

In New York City there isn't much freedom to criticize any law as there is in the Knesset. Certainly a politician hoping to achieve office.

A senator from an oil state, passionately believes in wage controls, must make the speech explaining the difference. He uses the ghostwriter Senators McGovern and McGovern used when they distinguished between cutting down state expenditure elsewhere than in Dakota and Massachusetts.

Poor Jimmy Carter. He is saying "Look how well qualified I am to be president. Is there a better town?"

LETTERS To the Editor

Yes I am sure when years pass I will look back and say "MSU, ah the good ole days." And thanks to badge number 707 I knew the true meaning of that phrase, because people remember what's good but tend to forget the bad. Hmmm, what was it that provoked me to writing this letter anyway? Welcome back.

Deviance

Attention all students, faculty and administrators of MSU, the general populace of East Lansing and the world!

I don't know when I have ever been so thoroughly disgusted or infuriated with a movie in my life, but after seeing "Taxi Driver" this past weekend, I definitely am!

How anyone could call Robert DeNiro's performance "brilliant" I will never know, but whoever did must have been an awfully sadist, because the entire film was based upon violence, brutality and obscenities.

I'm not exactly sure why we didn't walk out before we did. Could it be because we figured the thing would have a decent plot and worthwhile message for posterity? That definitely was our original hope.

Amazingly enough, like many other box office "hits," "Taxi Driver" again proved to be merely a money-making device conceived by some desperate scriptwriter and producer.

I can't help wondering what our society is coming to when people will come out in droves to see a movie with so much social deviance all crammed into less than two hours. Not only is this type of media falling far short of glorifying God, it is also completely destroying any hint of a respectable and free America that a small number of colonists so proudly proclaimed 200 years ago this July.

Come on people, wake up! As long as we pay our local theaters to bring such trash into town they'll continue to do so! Save your money or do something really constructive with it! That's the only way anything will ever be changed.

Save CATA

This morning, after reading the Towne Courier, I was disturbed to read of the proposed Meridian Township budget cuts.

On the top of the list was CATA (Capital Area Transit Authority). As a member of this community for five years, I would hate to lose this service. Unable to afford a car, I have often used the CATA bus system.

Having worked with older people, I also realize the freedom which CATA has given our fellow citizens who can no longer drive.

Saving our air is also a strong value I have. We must support mass transit. CATA has recently expanded its routes, employed some of the friendliest bus drivers and is testing out a new hand-capped-equipped bus.

I urge students, faculty and staff to write to the Township Superintendent, Meridian Township to save CATA. We must stick together when as a community and look out for our fellowman.

'Leftists'

Approximately 10 per cent of the population, which this University represents, is left-handed.

Little does the right-handed know of the southpaw's plight.

Being one of the "leftist" minority forced to use desks which result in a cramped, smudged papers and a general awkward position. There is a definite need for the distribution of left-handed desks.

I am tired of leading the right-handed their families. However, in order to document this concern, an unlimited amount of study and research must be accomplished.

Research for genealogy often begins with, if available, the questioning of the older people in one's family. It is through the memories of these people that valuable, and certainly very basic, facts can be found.

"I often wish that I had spent more time accumulating information when I was younger," said Donald J. Dezeuw, MSU professor of botany and plant pathology.

Dezeuw, who up until last month was president of the Mid-Michigan Genealogical Society, has been interested in the subject for about five years.

"Your elders at least offer clues even if through such things as family stories," he said. "They can often more easily point to something that can be found in established records."

Many of these records can be found in the Michigan State Library, 935 E. Michigan Ave., which contains one of the two largest genealogical collections in the state. The other is the Burton Collection in the Detroit Public Library. Both house many valuable references for novices and veterans interested in the study of family history.

"Our genealogy collection is very heavily used," said Mary Jane Trout, a research and reference librarian specializing in genealogy.

Trout noted that one of the main sources offered in the library is genealogy that is already compiled.

"This part of the collection is better than it used to be," she said. "People seem to be much more careful in documenting their sources."

The library also contains for genealogical use maps, atlases, city directories and vital records. There are about 200 genealogical and historical periodicals, along with census, land and military records. Also housed among the towering rows of potential genealogical gold mines are county and local histories, including many new ones being written for the Bicentennial, Trout said.

However, in order to tackle or even begin such a monumental task as compiling one's family history, a prospective genealogist must be serious, because genealogy, though most often called a hobby by name, is a very serious and time-consuming practice. It requires a person's curiosity, patience and time. Contrary to what many people believe, genealogy is not something one pursues "for a little while."

"When I first became interested in genealogy, I thought it would take about a year, but it almost became an obsession," Dezeuw said.

"There is a risk in the study of one's genealogy," he continued. "It is possible that you might get hooked on it."

The "genealogy-addicts" of the Mid-Michigan Genealogical Society, which was formed as a nonprofit corporation in 1966, list as their foremost objective the preserving and making available for genealogical research the records of ancestry.

The society, which meets the fourth Wednesday of every month in the basement of the People's Church, 200 W. Grand River Ave., attempts to encourage and assist the study of family history and to cooperate with other societies and libraries in expanding genealogical holdings.

About 12 people were members of the society when it was first formed, but membership has grown rapidly since then.

"Currently there are about 100 to 120 people of all ages and occupations in the society," Dezeuw said. "It is a good way of mixing professions — all the members are on a common and harmonious ground."

One of the main things the society and all people serious about the study of genealogy advocate is the service aspect of the hobby.

"We have an appreciation that we are making use of records that someone else took the time to make, and we feel a moral obligation to continue this practice for others," he said.

Dawn Morgan, an MSU office supervisor in the Dept. of Resource Development, agreed.

"Anything that can be done to promote genealogy should be. The more people who are interested, the better it is for all those involved," she said. "The information I have compiled might be just as helpful for other people, just as the resources I used were helpful to me."

Morgan has also been interested in genealogy for about five years.

"When my son was in junior high, he had an assignment to do a family tree, and that is how I got interested in the subject," she said.

When she first started, Morgan didn't know about any of the forms that are used in the study of genealogy, so she made up her own.

Morgan said there are different reasons that motivate people to study genealogy.

"There are individuals who search their ancestry for ulterior motives, but these people aren't really interested," she said.

"You sometimes hear of people searching into their ancestry looking for royalty," she continued. "These people are not serious if this is their motive — even if they are connected with royalty, they had nothing to do with it and it's nothing to be impressed about."

Trout cited a few more common reasons why people enjoy seeking out their ancestral pasts.

"People used to study their genealogy because they wanted the information necessary to join a patriotic society or because of the prestige involved," she said, "but we don't see this so much anymore."

"Sometimes they have an interest in history. This is especially strong in the Bicentennial year. Often it is a pride in a person's ethnic group."

"But most often, I think, it is just curiosity — just people asking 'from whence did I come?'" she said.

This final reason seems to explain why Dezeuw became interested in the subject.

"When my wife inherited some genealogical material and pursued it, I became interested," he said. "All four of my grandparents were born in the Netherlands and the records there are very good. I have gone back to the late 1500s in one line with the help of a family member in the Netherlands, and I think that is about as far back as I can go with that line."

Dezeuw said American records were late in developing and it is often hard to find records in this country.

"From the 1800s when my ancestors came to this country to the present, it is not so easy to find the records necessary to document a family line," he said.

"Public records are not very useful for me. I've used immigration records for the Dutch and boat passenger records which are located in the National Archives in Washington, D.C.," he continued. "These passenger records are from the late 1800s and a large number of these were not always well-made and complete."

Another member of the society, Ilse Bauknecht, has also had her share of studying European ancestry.

"My records are very European," she said. "Out of 15 generations for one given line, all but two are European."

Bauknecht, who began her genealogical research about five years ago, did so for two reasons.

"I wanted to make a small family tree for a very old grandmother to show how her family had grown," she said. "Also, when I started, I had a lot of extra time and I needed something to do that wasn't too exhaustive — a hobby where I could use my head."

Like Morgan, Bauknecht was not a member of the society when she started doing research.

"I joined the society about six months after I got interested because I needed more help

Stickmen still winless after U-M game

The MSU lacrosse team has had problems getting the ball in the net thus far this season as the Spartans are still looking for a win. MSU lost to U-M 8-4 on Tuesday but coach Fred Hartman was pleased with his team's performance. He said the Wolverines won because of the exceptional play of their goalie.

Who's got the ball?

Club Sports

Ann Fuller received a scholarship for excellence in judo and academics last weekend when the MSU Judo Club journeyed to Indianapolis, Ind., for the National Collegiate Judo Tournament.

Fuller took first place in the 142-pound-and-under weight division. Teammates Nancy Woods and Loretta Pulley also placed in the championship competition, each capturing a third place. Woods competed in the 110-pound-and-under category, while Pulley was in the 154-pound-and-under weight class.

The MSU Crew Club will row against the University of Nebraska and Notre Dame in South Bend, Ind., Saturday. Both the men's and women's crews will be competing.

The men's varsity squad started off the season by defeating the University of Alabama at Huntsville on March 28 following a week of training in Huntsville over spring break.

The first home race will take place on April 24 against Wayne State at Grand River Park in Lansing.

The MSU women's rugby club fought Ohio State to a 4-4 draw this weekend. The game was tied at the end of regulation time with one try apiece and neither team could punch home a score in the overtime.

The MSU sailing club took first place in a three-team team sailing race at Purdue Saturday.

The Spartans took first with a 6-2 record while Wisconsin was second at 5-3 and Purdue finished with a 4-2 record.

After the normal five races, the Badgers tied with MSU for first, sending the race into a best-of-three sail-off which the Spartans won.

The team, consisting of John Walton, Barb Hollerbach, John Wilson, Connie Forster, Dave Burton and Karen Powlison, will next sail at Ohio State this weekend in the Ohio State Regatta.

Grid assistants named

By MIKE JENKINS
State News Sports Writer

Spartan head football coach Darryl Rogers, "the new kid on the block," has started to rebuild his shaky house, importing three "bricks" from California for the foundation.

Moving with Joe Kearney quickness, Rogers named three new assistant football coaches Wednesday all from his former staff at San Jose State. Rogers has asked MSU Athletic Director Kearney to recommend the coaches to President Wharton for approval by the University's board of trustees at its meeting Friday.

The three coaches include Bob Padillo, a seven-year veteran assistant to Rogers at San Jose and Fresno State who would be new defensive coordinator; Mary Braden, named to the San Jose State coaching staff just eight weeks ago after positions at Southern Methodist and Iowa State, slated to become offensive coordinator; and Leon Burtnett, also of Roger's staff, who has coached at Washington State, Wyoming, Colorado State and Montana State, who would be linebacker coach.

Defensive staff members Sherman Lewis and Dan Underwood, Spartan cocaptains in 1963 and MSU staff veterans, are to be retained as defensive backfield coach and defensive end coach, respectively. Defensive coordinator Ed Youngs will not be retained.

"It's a matter of my wanting as defensive coordinator a man who has been with me for seven years and shares the same defensive philosophy that I have," Rogers said.

No other decisions regarding the hiring or retention of the remainder of the coaching staff have been made. However, there is speculation in San Jose that secondary coach Jim Colbert who came to Fresno and then San Jose State with Rogers, may be in the running for the secondary position. Colbert went on to coach for the Portland Thunder of the World Football League, handled the secondary chores for Bart Starr and the Green Bay Packers last season and was recently let go by the Packers.

It isn't often that you'll see a coach jubilant over a loss. It's even rarer to see a coach happy when the opponent has doubled his team's score. But Fred Hartman was both of these following the Spartans' 8-4 loss to the U-M lacrosse team Tuesday.

MSU fell behind the Wolverines 5-0 at halftime, then, at one point in the second half, came from behind to tighten the game at 6-4.

"We really played a lacrosse game," said a happy Hartman. "This was the first time this season that we lost a game for lacrosse reasons and not due to some goof-up on our part. In fact, the only reason we lost was that we were beaten by a goalie."

Gary Bucci was in goal for U-M and scored an amazing 28 saves in the course of 60 minutes of play. According to Hartman, any total of saves over 20 is usually considered phenomenal.

Bucci not only frustrated the Spartans as a whole, but stood as a brick wall against one team member in particular. Doug Peterson, sophomore midfielder, fired 15 shots at Bucci, but only one found its way into the net.

"Doug was taking darn good shots, too," Hartman continued. "Almost every one was inside 15 yards. Any other goalie on any other day would have given up at least six goals. But not this guy."

"Usually if a goalie can stop a low shot," Hartman continued, "he'll have trouble stopping a high one. But Bucci stopped everything we threw at him. I've never seen a goalie play the way he did."

The offensive spark plug for the Spartans Tuesday was Mike Waite, another sophomore midfielder, who picked up a three-goal hat-trick, his first ever for MSU.

"We played exceptionally well," Hartman said. "We moved the ball well from defense to midfield. We threw the ball. We caught the darned thing. Our defense was super. We played a darn good ball game. But one thing we have to do now is to come down off of our cloud and get ready for Kenyon on Saturday."

Kenyon is undefeated thus far on the season, yet Hartman doesn't see much of a disadvantage as the Spartans go against the team Saturday at 2 p.m. on the secret practice field south of Spartan Stadium.

"We are younger," Kenyon said. "But the fact is that younger than most teams you also has an experienced attack man and a very good midfielder. I feel, though, we run and pass around as well as we do U-M, then I'd say we're of there with a victory."

The game will return to Midwest Lacrosse Assn. play for the Spartans now 0-5 on the regular season. MSU also stands without league contests.

"I'd say the only problem we have right now," Hartman said, "is rather low goal production. But my offense is going to see what we can do to

I.M. Notes

Monday is the deadline for fraternity team tennis sign-up. The tournament will be of a single-elimination-type competition with players in two out of the three events needing to win two of their three sets in order for the entire team to advance.

Each team is expected to contribute three cans of tennis with the losers receiving the used can. Play, which begins Wednesday, will be akin to that of World Team Tennis, where a game consists of four points and there is no advantage system. Each set goes to six games each, there will be a nine-point tiebreaker. Each person will serve for two points in succession.

Outdoor tennis reservations will be taken beginning Monday 10 a.m. for Monday and Tuesday as well as Saturday and Sunday. The regular reservation schedule will go into effect on Tuesday with reservations for Mondays being taken starting at 10 a.m. on Sundays; Tuesday through Friday reservations being taken day before the courts are to be used; and Saturday and Sunday reservations being taken beginning 8 a.m. on Mondays. Reservations coincide with building hours: Monday, 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; and Sunday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Moslem hijackers give up release hostages in Libya

BENGHAZI, Libya (AP) - Three Filipino Moslem hijackers released their 12 hostages and gave themselves up to Libyan authorities Wednesday after threatening to blow up a commandeered Philippine Airlines jet and all aboard.

An official of the airline - PAL - said the threat had won the hijackers a promise of Libyan asylum, but Libya's Arab Revolutionary News Agency said the government of Moammar Khadafy denied granting them asylum.

In Manila, PAL President Benigno Toda Jr. insisted the gunmen had no explosives. "They were bluffing," he said, explaining he had a direct, open line to Benghazi airport.

However, Philippine military sources said the gunmen were believed to have had a bag filled with grenades.

Toda said no ransom was paid, but airline employees and Philippine military sources claimed that one of the hostages, airline executive vice president Rafael Igoa, had been carrying $300,000 in ransom money.

The Philippine gunmen took over a PAL twin-engine jet last Wednesday over the southern Philippines and ordered it to Manila. There they exchanged the 67 passengers for a dozen PAL employees.

They then flew to Bangkok and PAL sent over the longer-range DC8 while airline and government officials tried to find a country to accept the hijackers. When the DC8 reached Bangkok most of the earlier employe hostages were released in exchange for the new crew.

Before reaching Benghazi, the plane also landed at Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia and Karachi, Pakistan.

As soon as the gunmen disembarked in Benghazi, the DC8 aircraft flew to Rome to free the hostages, all of whom were expected to be released before the plane left Rome before continuing on to Manila.

The Arab Revolutionary News Agency said the young hijackers were questioned by Libyan authorities after surrendering, turning in their arms to city officials.

Interest grows in genealogy

than I was getting from books," she said. "I went to society meetings for about six months before it even got so I could figure out what was going on, but I stuck with it and got deeper into research."

"The people in the society had the knowledge about the resources that I needed," she continued. "At least one other person in the society has run into any problem that you might encounter yourself."

Bauknecht said she got an abundance of information from a certified genealogist in Germany in 1971.

"He also put me in touch with a German woman with the same great-grandfather as me and she wrote back and with more information," she said. "We have been corresponding regularly since then."

One of the outcomes of Bauknecht's interest and study in the genealogical field has been a family newsletter which she sends to members of the family in the United States and Germany about once every six months.

"In my newsletter, I include births, deaths and marriages," she said. "I also try to include personality sketches or life histories of people from the family who are living or dead. Whenever the sketch is about someone in Germany, the sketch is sent out in both English and German."

Bauknecht has also published an eight-generation family graph which came out in 1972.

"There are copies of the graph at the Michigan State genealogical collection and in a library in Germany," she said. "Now if someone with my last name needs information on his family line, my chart might be of some help to his research attempts."

From the sound of Bauknecht's accomplishments, it appears that her research might at least be near the end. "On the contrary," Bauknecht said. "There is always more research to be done."

Morgan agreed. "It is a lifetime hobby," she said. "It is not just a hobby for right now. You simply can't say there is no further you can go."

Every time you go back a generation, your ancestors double, Morgan said. Ten generations result in about 500 ancestors. The oldest family member she knows of makes her an 11th generation. The number of direct ancestors from this is phenomenal.

Morgan warned that the unfortunate part of genealogical research and sources is the absence of primary sources, documents such as old church record that give absolute proof of ancestry when a genealogical line is documented.

"I may pick up a publication and see supposed facts listed and find out that they are only secondary sources," she said. "In order to have a well documented and proven genealogical line, primary sources must be used."

Trout said she wished the library had more primary sources available for the public.

"Our library is full of secondary sources," she said. "We also have a lot of unpublished materials - the workings and manuscripts of genealogists - which are housed in vaults and in the manuscript collection."

Morgan said she thinks that a better facility should be used to house Michigan's vast genealogical collection.

"Our heritage is kept in rented building. State Library simply because we cannot find the funds for a good library of decent size," she said.

Besides using the library, Morgan said local genealogists also haunt county clerks, probate courts and other record keepers.

Dezeew and Bauknecht, Morgan's family history allowed to make much more use of records.

"My ancestors came to Michigan in 1834, and I can go back within a three-country and do a lot of research," said.

Morgan has also made the genealogical collection the Mormon church.

"Genealogy is a required of the Mormon faith," she explained. "They have largest collection of genealogy on microfilm in the world. It is all kept in a huge vault protect it far into the future. The society has also been great help to Morgan."

"In the society, we all have an index of our ancestors," said.

"We make out an index with information on each ancestor we have come across in research," she continued. "Far there are over 6,000 names in the index of the society. I have found that I am related to a minimum of three people within the society."

Currently, the staff at Michigan State Library handling a Centennial Certificate Project which prescribes very strong local and state interest in genealogy.

"Anyone can undertake a project," Trout said. "If you prove by primary source you had an ancestor living in Michigan in 1876, you receive Centennial Certificate status."

It is evident through prolonged and deepened generations of the future will be the ones to benefit the the one or two-man assault because of his picketing against the union outside Bessey Hall on April 7.

A pretrial hearing for O'Connor alone is scheduled for Aug. 24.

The Michigan Employment Relations Commission (MERC) dealt SWU yet another blow Wednesday by dismissing an unfair labor practice charge filed against the University 15 months ago.

SWU had charged that MSU had unlawfully threatened economic reprisals by suggesting that increased costs to students would result if student employees joined the union.

A MERC administrative law judge had earlier dismissed the charges, but SWU appealed the decision to the three-man commission. The commission this week upheld the earlier decision by a 2-1 vote and said that the charges were without merit.

The decision read, in part, "An employer may tell his employees what he reasonably believes will be the likely economic consequences of unionization that are outside his control."

'Frisco strike

"Traffic has moved very well the past three days," said a bridge spokesman. "Some people are saying it is moving better than it normally does."

The City Hall demonstration was the largest deployment of pickets since the municipal strike began on March 31. The latest city offer - spreading planned pay cuts over three years instead of one - was rejected Tuesday by union leaders.

Police at City Hall formed a gantlet between pickets to allow employees to enter the building, but there were numerous pushing incidents in spite of the precautions. Charges against the three men, who were not immediately identified, included inciting to riot, battery against a police officer and simply battery, police said.

State seeks solar facility

contending that they are best suited for the facility because of the large quantities and high intensities of sunlight they receive. Bohm said that the sunlight differences between the states will not rule out Michigan, pointing to the fact that Michigan receives about 60 per cent as much sunlight as the southernmost state in the nation.

Under the proposed guidelines, ERDA plans to pick the site for the facility by December and open it for operations by January of 1977.

Abbie Hoffman remodels face

changes image

NEW YORK (AP) - Abbie Hoffman, the aging Yippie, jumped bail two years ago and fled drug charges which he has partially unveiled the face he is using in his underground life.

Hoffman, now 38, posed photographs for the May issue of Playboy magazine with a bandana covering his face and eyes.

"Now I have a nice, rosy nose, rosy Anglo cheeks," said Hoffman. "In my new life, I don't know I'm Jewish."

Hoffman, who has been known to put people "on" time to time, said he also had to dye his hair as blond could get it, learned Hoffman change his walk and his pounds.

Playboy said Hoffman was a defendant in the 7-trial, now uses several aliases but the woman with whom lives calls him "Brian," who interviewed Hoffman, he recognized him by tongue, "a wondrous brane, wet, flat and craggy recognize that tongue where."

Hoffman and three others charged with selling worth of cocaine to a New State undercover agent in summer of 1973.

Gobblers raid MSU for 'Turkey' contest

Ken Westlake, president of Alpha Phi Omega Fraternity, made Sparty the "Top Turkey," all in fun, of course. Westlake's assistant is Steve Case.

MSU students have found that turkeys do not stick to the barnyards. Now the gobblers are invading campus.

Voting for MSU's "Top Turkey" began Monday and will continue through Friday, according to Ken Westlake, president of Alpha Phi Omega, the sponsor of the contest.

"On Monday, President Wharton got off to an early lead and finished sixth at the end of the day," he said.

At the end of voting Tuesday, Westlake said they had raised about $120 from the penny-a-piece votes. All money collected will be given to the burn ward at Sparrow Hospital.

Voting booths are set up in most dorms during dinner and at the MSU Union from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. On Friday the last chance to vote for your favorite turkey will be at the Alle-Ey bar from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m.

A $100 gift certificate to Recordland will be given to the top turkey and $50 worth of free pizza from Mr. Mike's will be awarded to the living unit which sponsors the top vote-getters on-campus and off-campus.

Westlake said the first two days have been slow though he expects to reach the groups $1,500 goal.

MSU's CDC 6500 computer, Denny Stolz, ASMSU, the State News and several political figures have been some of the more unusual nominees this year. As of Tuesday, Westlake said the three top turkeys are: Scott Barns from Hubbard Hall; Tim Course from Case Hall; and Marv Wieland from Holmes Hall.

FORMER MSU PROMOTER HITS DETROIT Paul Stanley: his success story

By JEROME MCGUIRE
State News Reviewer

There are many ways to get to the wonderful world of Detroit, the Midwestern Mecca called the Motor City, the green campus of MSU. The easy way is to drive down I-96.

Paul Stanley took the hard way. Stanley is usually associated with his company, Paul Stanley Productions. The business of Paul Stanley Production is business—the music business. Paul Stanley Productions produces concerts.

Stanley began his concerts giving experience as the student director of MSU Pop Entertainment from 1973 until the middle of 1975.

"Pop Entertainment has certainly changed," Stanley said. "I tried to get something for everybody; they seem to go in more for hard rock now."

Stanley has booked such diverse acts as Chicago, the Mothers of Invention, the Beach Boys, Jefferson Starship and the rock musical opera, "Hair."

He is now trying, with growing success, to crack the tough Detroit rock 'n' roll promotion market. The rough and tumble nature of rock 'n' roll business is a legendary jungle and Detroit is the legendary rock 'n' roll jungle.

Hard work towards being ultra-professional is how Stanley credits his Detroit success.

His current "home" concert arena is the Royal Oak Theater. The situation, in Royal Oak, is what Stanley calls "no hassle." He said there is plenty of parking, acoustics are excellent and the shows are scheduled for 8 and 11 p.m.

The Royal Oak time set-ups may help avoid the late night hassles inherent in the East Lansing Campus Music Theatre, a recent project of Stanley's that, at least for the present, has been curtailed.

Stanley plans to bring most of the acts he hires in Detroit into the East Lansing area in a back-to-back concert format. He said many acts are now desiring to perform in smaller, less frenzied concert halls.

Some of the acts Stanley has brought to the Royal Oak Theater include Maria Muldaur, George Carlin and Martin Mull.

In addition to the back-to-back concert idea, Stanley also plans to bring some "surprises" to Lansing. Even though he has not yet revealed the Lansing concert places for his productions, he has hinted that he is working on booking some exceptionally good entertainment.

"I'm breaking a lot of smaller up-and-coming acts," he said. "I'm bringing Hall and Oates in May, for example."

Whatever Stanley's plans are, one thing is certain: with the roar of the crowd and the smell of the greasepaint, the show must go on.

That is the current state of affairs for Paul Stanley and the continuing saga of a local boy making good in the dog-eat-dog business of rock 'n' roll. You will hear more from Stanley in the future.

If his plans work out, so will most of the people in the Midwest. The shortest distance between two points is a straight line, but "shortest" does not necessarily mean "easiest."

Paul Stanley's road trip was not the easiest of journeys. At one end of the line is East Lansing and MSU, while at the other end of the line is Detroit.

Beyond that line are many rigors and rewards promoters' profession.

Are the milestones millstones, gallstones or ney stones? Only Stanley knows for sure. However, road really does go on.

Senate approves bill to outlaw paralyzing electric sting guns

By JAMES V. HIGGINS
LANSING (UPI) —

The electric sting gun, intended to stun with a powerful electric shock but considered deadly by some, will be outlawed in Michigan under legislation on its way to Gov. Milliken's desk.

A bill approved on a 30-0 vote Tuesday by the Senate will completely ban the gun except in state police experiments.

Sponsors of the bill said the weapon — known as the Taser — is falling increasingly into the hands of criminals.

It has been described, in fact, as the ideal weapon for crime, allowing intimidation without fear of a homicide conviction.

The sting gun sells for about $200, looks like a flashlight and contains small, barbed cartridges connected to a power source with 18-foot wires. When fired into a person, the dart gives off a 50,000-volt shock that produces temporary paralysis.

"Criminals have been using these weapons," Sen. Derezinski, D-Muskegon, said. "It's still a possibly weapon and that's why we want to bring it under control."

He said a Taser shot could be fatal to someone with trouble or other health problems.
