The rule change was sought by the Reagan forces. They felt that a fight on this rule had the greatest chance of drawing the sympathy of many Ford and uncommitted delegates momentum and further erode Ford support by forcing him into a possible blunder over the vice presidency on the morning of the balloting for president. But they failed. The psychological climate for the Reagan rules challenge was initiated much earlier when Reagan chose Schweiker as his running mate

Though the vote in the northeast tonight, proved that the Schweiker choice did not accomplish its appointed task, Reagan backers had hoped that it rasied the issue of the vice presidential choice in a favorable way in the minds of delegates.

But the speeches tonight reflected that no one in the Ford camp was fooled.

Dorann Gunderson, a delegate from Wisconsin, spoke against the amendment. "This amendment is for one time, one place and one candidate only -- not for posterity." Carla Coray, a delegate from Hawaii called the amendment "a last minute political movement."

Michigan Senator Robert Griffin, in an effort to appease Reagan's supporters, said, "This amendment would deny the Republican party the possibility of a Ford Reagan ticket

The Reagan response was typified by pleas for openness and as one delegate said, "Let us get this secret out in the open."

The Reagan amendment would have freed any delegate from the public or private commitments to a candidate if he or she did not file the name of a running mate before 9 a.m. on the day of the presidential balloting

Ford forces realized that a defeat here would be a bitter and potentially disasterous pill to swallow. They fought hard, but there was no indication during the speeches balloting that the end result would be anything but close. The convention itself was tense

On both sides, there were many unknowns but with Pennsylvania remaining solidly Ford and Mississippi doing the same, the evening-long battle between Ford and Reagan sign carriers ended with an arena that was all Ford. The 1180 votes Ford received shows him well above the necessary number needed for the nomination and even the erosion of certain uncommitted delegates will not damper the President's quest for his party's nomination damage in southwestern Mindanao, the worst-hit area, amounted to about $67 million. Official sources said privately that final tallies would probably be much higher.

As the Republican nomination fight between Ronald Reagan and President Ford nears, there is still doubt and apprehension for some delegates and supporters-inside and outside the Kansas City convention hall.

The first, stronger tremor struck shortly after midnight Tuesday and shook about two-thirds of the Philippine land mass. A National Geophysical Observatory spokes-man said it lasted about 30 seconds and reached a magnitude of 7.8 on the Richter scale. U.S. seismologists said they recorded it at a magnitude of 8.0.

Its epicenter was about 750 miles south of Manila in the Celebes Sea, between Mindanao and Indonesia's Celebes Island. The tremor roiled the Celebes Sea and Moro Gulf and sent tidal waves up to 24 feet tall rolling toward Mindanao's 500-mile southern coastline. When they hit, the waves reached inland as far as 100 yards, smashing scores of flimsy, stilt houses and dragging many back out to sea.

refuses to block oil lease sales

NEW YORK (AP) - The federal govern ment's first oil lease sale for the Atlantic Ocean opened Tuesday, more than eight hours late, after U.S. Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall refused to block the sale

The sale was delayed from 10 a.m. to after 6 p.m. while attorneys for New York State and environmentalists argued against it before Marshall in Washington.

The environmentalists sought a detailed study of the effects of the drilling off the Mid-Atlantic coast from Long Island, N.Y., to Virginia.

As the arguments went on, hundreds of oil company executives milled about a hotel ballroom in New York, waiting for the sale to begin "The higgest cost in these delays is to the public," Exxon Corp. spokesperson J.R. Jackson said of the wait.

In this ruling, Justice Marshall said only that the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals had acted properly Monday in deciding to lift a lower court's ban on the sale. He said he would issue a written opinion later. Last week, U.S. District Judge Jack Weinstein barred the sale, saying environmental interests should have been consulted more fully. The appeals court then overturned his decision. The Supreme Court is in recess, but Marshall has jurisdiction over the 2nd Circuit Court District. Marshall said he will issue a written opinion later.

Republican anthem: end big government

By BOB OURLIAN State News Staff Writer

KANSAS CITY - The Republicans at Kansas City have begun the campaign season with the premise that the present size of and the behavior of government cannot solve the problems of the country and that a continuation of government as it has been going will ruin the economy and ultimately the country.

They launch attacks on big government and bureaucracy and point out time and again that the Democratic platform will serve only to advance like a cancer, the growth of government.

Whichever candidate is nominated tonight and no matter how the rules and the platform read, it is this issue - the scope of government - that will be utilized to put the Democrats, particularly still somewhat nebulous Jimmy Carter, on the defensive this fall.

Virtually every speaker who has addressed the delegates thus far, has repeated the Republican theme as if it were an anthem. Government is too big, spending is too high, regulations and encroachments on individual liberties too great, free enterprise imperiled.

"For 40 of the last 44 years," said John Connally Tuesday night, "it has been the Democratic party through its total control in the Congress which has built the federal bureaucracy ever larger and larger and directed the agents of that bureaucracy to penetrate deeper and deeper into the conduct of all this nation's private affairs and our personal lives."

Convention speakers are calling social programs and policies such as Lyndon Johnson's "Great Society" dead ideas; ideas that despite a federal budget that has grown from $4 billion to $400 billion in 40 years have never panned out. And the front line of their offensive this fall will be loaded with the powder of small, efficient government along with individual self-reliance.

"America has had its fling with those Roman candles," said Howard Baker, "the exaggerated promise, the false expectation, the cruel deception that preyed most viciously on those who were most vulnerable: the young, the black, the poor, the jobless, those with little to cling to but their hopes.

"In New York last month, we saw the old Roman candles set off again. More promises. More impossible dreams. More gift certificates in disguise.

Republicans at Kansas City have drawn a firm, thick line on the ledger of government size. They have presented their contention - that government is far beyond the point of diminishing returns - in critical terms and blunt phrases. They have pointedly denigrated the Congress, Democratic pres idents and most everybody else who has been party to the proliferation of government

Yet, they have only brushed the welfare states' genesis - Franklin Roosevelt, Even Republicans and Republican economists in the past few years have acknowledged that the defenders of FDR's programatic additions to the U.S. economy have prevented the depressed economy from becoming a full-blown depression economy.

None the less, the central ideologists of the Republican party must realize to criticize the man who gave a thumb-sucking America Fireside Chats is to say there is no Santa Claus.

The Republicans have claimed at this convention that they have deep grassroots support for their position on government. They have alluded to a "common sense prevalent throughout the nation that there too much taxation, too many laws, and not enough personal liberties.

Fiscally responsible government is not a stand new to the Republicans. They raised it with FDR, they raised it with LBJ, and they are raising it with Jimmy Carter.

just as if the University were a commercial institution responding to a complaint

Jager said the staff of the Air Pollution Control Division does not recommend that MSU be required to burn natural gas in the power plant, as was previously recommended. A switch from coal to natural gas would cost the University an additional $2.5 million, said Roger Wilkinson, vice president for business and finance.

'That's about $2 more per credit hour.' Wilkinson said.

Instead, Jager said, MSU will be asked to install a precipitator in the smokestack, which would cost the University between $10 and $12 million.

Natural gas instead of coal is not considered an option for the University power plant because the supply of gas many not be available in the future.

"Natural gas for boilers in the state of Michigan is doomed," James C. Woodruff of the gas division of the Public Service Commission told the MAPCC. "The supply of natural gas cannot meet the demand; for boiler use the end is near. Michigan State University cannot count on getting a continuous supply of gas." "It is not the (MAPCC) staff's desire that MSU burn natural gas," Jager said. "The facility can burn coal, but within the law of the land.

Carr refused to sign a consent agreement for MSU to install an emissions-control precipitator because the University has not vet funded it. The administration has been appealing to the state legislature for the additional dollars required for the precipitator.

"The governor is personally handling the money," Carr said. "We're optimistic; we think we'll get it."

A date has not yet been set for the formal hearing, at which official testimony will be heard.

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Vietnam offered a hand of friendship to the United States on Tuesday at the summit conference of nonaligned nations after North Korea and Panama assailed the American presence in their two corners of the world.

Party seeks to bar Moonies

BONN (AP) — The opposition Christian Democrats have obtained an injunction to bar followers of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon from campaigning for the party, a CDU spokesperson said Tuesday.

Members of the Federation for World Peace and Unification, an offshoot of the anti-Communist Korean evangelist's Unification Church, have been distributing CDU campaign literature without authorization for several months, the spokes-

The injunction, obtained from a state court in Bonn, prevents the Moon followers from using the logograms CDU and CSU, symbols of the Christian Democrats, on leaflets and other campaign literature.

The Christian Democrats, the largest party in West Germany, are trying to win the chancellorship back from the Social Democrats in the Oct. 3 general election.

special House committee and the director of the Dept. of Licensing and Regulation agree that it is time for an overhaul of the department, including deregulation of some professions.

Committee Chairperson Gary Owen, D-Ypsilanti, Monday released the findings of a year-long study of the department and Director Beverly Clark, who attended the morning news conference, said she and the lawmakers agree for the most part on what must be done.

The report, which was drafted by the committee staff and has yet to be presented to the full committee, is sharply critical of the department which is responsible for the regulation of a wide range of 34 professions including doctors, barbers, marriage counselors and foresters.

One of the major recommendations of the staff report was establishment of another committee to study the deregulation question as well as recodification of the existing laws which the study found to be incon-

Owen named the massage profession as a prime candidate for deregulation.

Committee member DeForrest Strang, R-Sturgis, said in some professions "it has become a status symbol to be licensed.

"Status symbols are always restrictive and in being restrictive, they're more expensive to the consumer," he said.

Owen said all regulatory laws should be automatically evaluated every four to six years

Clark said her department is currently analyzing bills in the legislature to deregulate a number of professions including forestry, community planning and land-scape architecture.

The staff report also calls for a reevaluation of licensing standards and tests to be certain they are valid.

The department's system for handling consumer complaints is "inflexible, lethar gic and mired in conflicts of purpose, interest and objective," according to the report, which calls for consolidation of all complaint related activities into one office.

The report also calls for:

•Granting the department more power in relation to its licensing boards, and placing more public representatives on those boards

•Placing investigators under the authority of the State Police to prevent duplication •Strengthening of reexamination and continuing education requirements.

Medical Services Plan- step in right direction, at least

The University has recently completed a new Medical Services Plan that will channel the money made by medical faculty for patient treatment back into the University, instead of to the individual.

The plan is a good start and its intentions are even more admirable.

But there are many factors to consider when evaluating a plan that calls for a percentage of the total patient care income to be turned back into the University program.

The fact is that MSU needs that money to support the several times delayed Clinical Sciences Building that is finally near completion.

The plan also calls for a percentage of the income to go to those faculty participating. This money will be in addition to base salary but will not count as the 16 hours per month that MSU faculty are permitted to do outside work for

In this way, the deal offers incentive to the faculty members and hopefully combats somewhat the effect of the small wage increase for the coming year. But despite reluctance on the part of University officials to discuss the matter, it is hoped that consultation. MSU's College the Medical Services Plan will not have another effect.

MSU, like most large universities, has explicit guidelines for faculty outside work for pay. MSU also has its number of violations more in some colleges and departments than in others.

The medical school faculty. because of their professions, are in a prime position for charges with this sort of violation, as are economics professors accused of

Spaeth study

I can only blink in disbelief that a presumed scholar, Professor Harold Spaeth, would conduct and publish a "study" such as his recent one on Rep. Carr's voting record (State News, August 11). His research design and execution are so grossly defective that one can hardly begin to enumerate the errors and mischief involved. The primary error, of course, lies in his complex legislation with voters' expressions of opinion on single-issue generalities. Such an attempt is unsound on its face, and the outcomes of Spaeth's correlations are therefore completely invalid. The only valid way of comparing voters' views with Carr's votes is to ask voters, given all the relevant facts, how they would have voted on a specific measure before the Congress. Spaeth, of course, failed to do this in his paid for report. The misleading results are by no means a reflection on Rep. Carr, but rather upon the research competence of Prof. Spaeth.

Faculty raise

In response to Professor John P. Henderson's viewpoint (State News, August 11, 1976), an 8.5% raise for nine months is not "about 34" of an 11% raise for 12 months. Rather, it is 58% of the 11% raise for 12 months. Further, one must consider the long term impact on one's salary. The smaller base reduces the magnitude of all subsequent raises - forever!

Edmund Muskie, Lincolnesque, six-footfour, capable of producing a glare that would intimidate Mount Rushmore, stands on the floor of the Senate trying to control his passion. He has reached his boiling point; he has had it - right up to here. He has jarred others, too. Several senators shout for recognition. "Will the senator yield for a request," cries Gaylord Nelson (D-Wis.)

"I am going to sit down," snarls Muskie, trying not to gnash his teeth. "I am tired of wasting my voice."

He sits down.

What has the ruckus in the Senate this Thursday evening to do with the mysterious warning of Treasury Secretary Simon to the Republican platform committee at Kansas City last week? "A tax revolt," he declares, "will one day occur." He gives a little shudder, "a taxpayer uprising," he repeats, "might be forthcoming."

A tax revolt? Americans pay their taxes meekly, don't they? Though Americans don't know it they are the only big nation that operates a voluntary compliance system of income tax collection. It rests on trust: on trust that taxes are fair and on trust that others will pay them if you do. Suppose that that trust should be broken? "If there were widespread abuses of the system we could not possibly police them," warns Secretary Simon.

It is on the fairness of the current tax bill, "the Tax Reform Act of 1976" and its relationship to the budget process, that has caused Muskie to explode. He serves notice that the measure on which he and others have made plans for two years is a fraud; that he is going to vote against it, the whole kit and caboodle, save for the continuing tax cut provisions which are the vehicle for the effort. And in the vote that followed he all but succeeded: the vote was 48 to 42; a shift of four votes would have sent the measure back to the Finance Committee under Russell Long that created it.

The gigantic bill (1500 pages) got very little attention as debate progressed. It was dull. The majority added loopholes instead of taking them out. Every reporter knows that taxes are not sexy. "Senators stand up here and talk for hours," complained the volatile John Pastore (D-RI) "and I pick up the newspapers back home and there is not a line about what was said!" (Laughter). Exactly. The day after Muskie's revolt The New York Times unlike The Wall Street Journal, didn't cover taxes.

Republican Senator Weicker of Connecticut in disgust offered an amendment to strip "reform" from the bill's ironic title -"a fiscal fiasco," he called it. The reform drive made unexpected bedfellows. Edward Kennedy organized a valiant coalition to shame the Senate and save the bill (his exact knowledge of details surprised many critics and friends alike the more so as he was finally disassociated from the 1976 presidential race.) Stray conservatives came in. Far right James Buckley, NY., held his aristocratic nose and called it "a breakdown of the legislative process."

Muskie's fight was to protect the new Congressional budget process which got caught in the tax fight. The Founding Fathers originally gave Congress the power of the purse to protect the country against future Nixons. But Congress yielded its power to the White House. Now it is trying to get it back again by making responsible annual projections of taxes and expenditures. Muskie is chairman of the new Senate budget process. The tall, irascible Polish-Yankee rose time and again to tell the Senate lugubriously, just how much its latest lobbied amendment would cost. Like the Raven he croaked, "Nevermore.

"I simply cannot, as chairman of the Budget committee," he declared at one point to Sen. Roth (R-NJ, who gets a 100 per cent approval rating from the National Association of Businessmen), "just silently let this process continue." Senators were voting revenues away for loopholes, he said, "that they would never support if the same amount were involved in direct additions to the Budget." A supposed $2 billion in new revenue derived by plugging loopholes was down to "$150 millio he reported.

Why was this bad, asked the surprised Roth; "The amendment I have sponsored will have no effect on the revenue in fiscal vear 1977!"

It almost made Muskie jump off the floor. "No impact in fiscal 1977!" he exclaimed. 'Why this foot-in-the-door approach would cost almost $12 billion five years after the end of FY 1977, and the Senator says that is of no consequence - no consequence from a budgetary point of view."

Reformers came back to the same enigma again and again; how could conservatives who looked with horror at a budget unbalanced by direct spending, Kennedy demanded, approve "tax expenditures" (ie. loopholes) that cost the Treasury billions? The great antagonist of Kennedy-Muskie and the reformers in the tax drama is genial, crafty Russell Long, Huey Long's son, friend of the oil industry, the powerful satrap of the Senate Finance Committee Wilbur Mills of the Senate. He is a wheeler-dealer of the old school who can't adjust to the new budget system. Probably the funniest thing in the long tax struggle was the shock of outsiders in discovering that Senator Long lets committee members quietly insert narrow, "special-interest" loophole amendments into tax bills to aid specific constituents (often campaign contributors). These are so tailored that they fit only that one beneficiary; it is done without bothering to keep a written record of the committee discussion. It would make Mayor Daley chuckle.

When the Kansas City convention is over. Congress will return here to take up the tax bill again August 23. The House has passed one version, the Senate another. The House version is better. The two must be reconciled and the bargaining process is an antique, behind-the-scenes hassle. Undoubtedly the GOP nominee will denounce the Democratic tax - and with reason. Next April 15 when you pay your taxes you will be told again the total "tax-expenditures" (loopholes, shelters, exemptions) amount to $100 billion. By and large these favor the affluent in a nation where over a fourth of all personal wealth is owned by one per cent of the population. (This isn't Moscow propaganda; it's your Internal Revenue Service speaking.)

Will there ever be a tax "revolt" as Simon fears? Probably yes, if there isn't tax reform, but Congress can't do it; you must have a hard driving president willing to buck special interests. Jimmy Carter talks tough. Is he?

A stem tip cutting is a means of propagating plants. The new shoot at the end of the stem is the tip and must be included when taking the cutting. Take your cutting 4 to 6 leaves below the tip and remove the two lower leaves from your cut segment. The removal of the lower leaves causes the roots to form where the leaves were, so including the bottom nodes is essential.

Is rooting in water a good practice?

Cuttings need three things to insure

Soil is ideal because of the air pocket between the dirt, however if rooted in soil the cutting should be kept moist at all times Rooting in water is as effective but the water should be changed every few days to maintain a high enough oxygen level. Rooting cuttings is a game of percentages. You will rarely get 100% of all your cuttings so you should try to root more than one shoot at a time. Your chances for success are better than the lottery, but not much.

Michigan Republican party chairperson Bill McLaughlin calls a play on the convention floor

Rockefeller chastizes Ford critics

By SHERMAN GARNETT State News Staff Writer

KANSAS CITY - Lashing out at critics of President Ford and echoing Republican sentiment against the Democratic platform, Vice President Nelson Rockefeller spoke before the convention here Monday night.

The Vice President attemp-ted to color Ford's critics as unappreciative of his efforts and unaware of his successes. Rockefeller said, "I am also concerned that Americans do not understand or appreciate the contributions of President Ford and his administration to this nation and the world." But Rockefeller aimed most of his speech at the Democrats, solidly supporting the majority of the convention's feeling that the Democrats want to spend too much and interfere in the life of the individual too often. Apparently responding to

Carter's remark that the President had been unable to restore the public's faith in government after Watergate, Rockefeller said, "Jerry Ford took the Presidency in the worst Constitutional crisis since the Consti-tutional crisis since the Civil War. By calm, deliberate and open actions — and by sheer gut — he kept this nation from being torn apart at the seams." Rockefeller also responded to the criticism that the Ford

Ford, Reagan softening rhetoric

By SHERMAN GARNETT State News Staff Writer

KANSAS CITY - It is evident from the development of the platform committee and from the recent campaign speeches of both Ford and Reagan that the candidates are softening their rhetoric against each other and concentrating on Jimmy Carter.

Both sides apparently feel that the nomination will be a worthless prize to either candidate unless the GOP can e merge from Kansas City in some semblance of unity.

The official speeches of Monday night's session reflected this philosophy with only Vice President Rockefeller's speech directly and forcefully praising the Ford Administration and castigating its critics.

But other events and reactions have raised the question of whether unity between the Ford and Reagan camps can and Mississippi all are undergoever by achieved.

An East Lansing cable TV newsperson is camping with the Yippies in Kansas City this week while producing a documentary about the Republican National Convention.

The documentary, filmed by volunteer Cable 11 News reporter Ed Weiss, will be aired in September over the East Lansing Public Access Channel of the National Cable Company. Weiss left East Lansing Saturday armed with a borrowed video camera and a two-person technical crew - his wife, Janice Messer, and their 14-year-old friend, Joe Wetmore.

But campsites were still open in the area where the Yippie groups were congregating, so the group decided to stay there. Weiss is footing all expenses for the trip and production, said Randy Van Dalsen, co-ordinator of Cable Channel 11. But other Channel 11 volunteers will be "passing the hat" to help Weiss out. A report from Kansas City has been phoned in live during the station's 5:30 p.m. newscast nightly since Monday, with Weiss describing the scene in Kansas City. Monday night's five-minute report was phoned in from the Crown Center Hotel, which houses President Ford and the Michigan delegation. The report included a camper citing some Yippie philosophy and quotes from the chairperson of the Ingham County delegation.

A series of problems only temporarily discouraged Weiss, Van Dalsen said.

Attempts to obtain a press pass failed, and phone calls were made to the Ingham County Republican Party Headquarters, a representative's office in Washington, D.C. and a security person in Kansas City. Press credentials were needed to get Weiss into the convention.

Weiss eventually did get into the convention, but so far has not been able to actually get onto the floor, Van Dalsen said. "He's not as optimistic as he was at first, but he's still trying," he said.

Momentary panic set in when it looked as though a technical problem with the camera in Kansas City would delay filming. Advice was sought from CBS camerapersons, but Van Dalsen was able to give Weiss telephone instructions to correct the problem. able to give weiss telephone instructions to correct the problem. Weiss shot some footage of a rock concert Sunday night and commented on the phone to Van Dalsen that "the Yippies were a lot more exciting than what's going on at the convention so far." BOSTON (AP) - Far from acting as a defense against breast cancer, regular dosages of the hormone estrogen may increase the risk of the disease, a medical survey concluded.

The study of 1,891 women who took the drug to ease the pains of menopause for an average of 12 years was re-ported in the issue of the New England Journal of Medicine to be published Thursday.

The study's findings "clearly indicated that menopausal estrogen use does not protect against breast cancer" and said there was "a definite possibility" the drug may cause the disease.

Estrogen, the report pointed out, is the fifth most commonly prescribed drug in the country and is taken by 5 million to 6 million middle-age women in menopause — "the change of Another 10 million take the drug in the form of birth control pills.

The study was carried out by doctors from the Harvard School of Public Health, the National Cancer Institute and the University of Louisville, Ky., School of Medicine.

The study found that the incidence of breast cancer in the observed women, who averaged 49 years of age, was 30 per cent greater than could be expected but termed this figure "of borderline statistical significance" because of the small number of women ininvolved detected in American women this year and 33,000 others will die of the disease. The researchers said they found no reliable correlation between the risk of breast cancer and the length of time the drug had been taken. Women not taking estrogens were just as likely to develop breast cancer as women who had taken it for up to 10 years after the women had been begun taking the drug.

But 15 years after beginning use of the drug, the chance of breast cancer was twice nor-mal, no matter how long the drug had been taken in that period.

Ten years after beginning estrogens, two conditions as-sociated with lower risk of breast cancer - having had children and having had an ovary removed - were no longer associated with lower risk

For women followed for more than 10 years, large doses were found to be associated with an almost tripled risk of breast cancer, and an other-than-daily schedule of taking the drug

SANDALS, TENNIS SHOES POPULAR

By RAY ALLSTON

Fashion experts across the nation. happy toes are wriggling for joy because the pointed shoe is out and the comfortable shoe is in. And according to most MSU students, their feet are glad to be in comfortable shoes.

Tennis shoes and sandals rank as the most popular foot-wear among MSU students during the summer. But comfort, not a brand name, students said, is the most important factor in buying a shoe. "I wear whatever feels comfortable," Karen Swan said. "Usually tennis shoes in the summer and boots in the winter.

Sandals, whose appeal seems to be in what they lack leather - are a big favorite during hot summer days. "Sandals are cooler and more comfortable," Paul Phoebus said. "I've had this pair for three years.' Most shoe stores in East Lansing say sandals are their biggest sellers because of their low price and ease of wear. The supposed advantages of sandals don't please everyone.

"The leather straps," Robert Levine said, "give my heels blisters. And I don't like that. I usually wear boots because I ride my motorcycle a lot."

"People still call them tennis shoes," said Temple, "but really they're athletic footwear. And a lot of athletic footwear is being sold."

Fashion pretty much dictates what type of shoes people will wear, Temple said, and she sees the athletic footwear surge as a trend. Peer influence, she said, has probably also added to their popularity but they still sell more sandals at the Bootery. Temple agreed that shoes are becoming more unisex, which means more women will be male-dominated entering markets like athletic footwear. "Running in Keds is not good enough for the women anymore," said Mary Vincent, an Athlete's Shop employe.

Women are becoming more sports-minded and they want to prove it by wearing a better shoe.

The Athlete's Shop, Vincent said, sells about 170 pairs of athletic and tennis shoes a week. She also said the shop couldn't have survived five years ago because boots were the biggest thing on campus then. people, like Ben Some Porritt, are more practical-minded than sports-minded. "I wear tennis shoes because they're the only shoes that will fit in the foot braces on my bike," Porritt said. "Anyway, they're handy." Aside from athletic wear. Roots, a Canadian-made, "negative heel" shoe, is fast rising in popularity as both a comforta-ble and therapeutic shoe. "Neg-

the first on offshore oil lease sales to reach the high court. Previous efforts to block lease sales off Louisiana, California and in the Gulf of Alaska all failed

Earlier in the day, the oil companies had submitted sealed hids thought to run into hundreds of millions of dollars for the right to search for oil in an 876,750 acre area • 45 to 90 miles off New York's Long Island, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia.

The Interior Dept. estimates the area holds a potential 400 million to 1.4 billion barrels of oil, but no one will know for sure until drilling starts.

spread worship for the man who shook his head for the fate of American capitalism; FDR thought during the depression that there was no hope for free enterprise after what free enterprise had done to America.

And the man who reached for the rope to toll the bell for capitalism may ultimately be the Republicans' true opponent in this election. Republicans assail the appeal of the Democrats. Special interests and pockets of sup-port, they say, are all the Democrats attract, while they represent the majority. The majority of America is middle America — working class and middle class — and it is in fact from them that has

It is actually surprising to analysts of a class-orienta tion how many of the working class - $10,000 to $15,000 are endorsing Ronald Reagan. But it is middle America which has without question developed a gnawing distaste for big government expenditures. Oddly enough, however, Republicans haven't recognized, while they play on these feelings, that Watergate was the political power tool which bored out whatever distrust and dislike of government was offered by Republicans in already present. The nation's shock over dle

Injury cuts Rowekamp for 1976 season

By EDWARD L. RONDERS State News Sports Writer

If new MSU football coach Darryl Rogers believes in the "good news... bad news" axiom then he's due for some good news fast. The Spartan staff and grid squad was dealt yet another severe blow Monday when linebacker Kim Rowekamp was ruled out for the 1976 campaign.

Rowekamp injured his left knee in a game against Illinois last season and underwent surgery. Despite conditioning exercises, Rogers decided that Rowekamp's knee was not strong enough to withstand the rigors of playing so soon.

"I came to East Lansing Monday," Rowekamp noted Tuesday from his Kalamazoo home. "I checked with the surgeon who operated on my knee and he told me it was only at about 70 per ent. He also told me that it would take more time to get back to full strength. Maybe a couple of more months. But by then it would be too late for this year," Rowekamp added.

Rowekamp's loss is a severe blow to the Spartan defensive unit which must enter the opening contest against OSU without several other starters. Joining Rowekamp on the sidelines for the clash with the Buckeyes will be defensive back Ted Bell, end Larry Bethea, middle guard Melvin Land and outside linebacker Jim Epolito, all of whom were ruled ineligible following earlier NCAA sanctions against the Spartans.

In addition, All-Big Ten outside linebacker Otto Smith and linebacker Tom Graves are also recovering from surgery last season.

The 6-foot-2, 253-pound Rowekamp's loss was a severe blow to MSU's hopes of a good start. Rowekamp had been chosen for one pre-season All-American team before fall drills even commenced. Though playing only seven games last season before his injury, Rowekamp, a senior, was sixth in tackles on the squad and paced the Spartans with three interceptions. He started the year at middle guard but was moved to linebacker following an injury to Pat McClowry. "This is the first time in eight years I haven't played football," a discouraged Rowekamp commented. "I've worked out every day so that I could get the knee back in shape. But, the doctors and coach Rogers are doing what's best," he stated.

Though the injury will allow Rowekamp to return an Though the injury will allow Kowekamp to return in still does not relish the thought of watching the action sideline this season. "I was really looking forward to put final year with my class, then graduating and go professional ball," he said.

Another idea before the council would increase the price of season tickets from $1 to $2 for each game and from $2 to $3 for individual game purchases. "Nothing is definite yet," Beardsley commented. "But we feel in any event our first obligation is to the students, faculty and staff."

During the first two years the Spartans have played in Munn Arena, students were allowed to purchase tickets for every home contest. Under the proposal, the students could buy a ticket for either a Friday or Saturday game of a certain
