There was no indication whether the call for a three day strike was related to the statement the moderate leaders issued. It blamed government policy for disturbances that started in Soweto in June and have claimed at least 252 lives in persistent rioting among blacks in the segregated towns near the country's urban centers.

The national security police chief, Gen. Mike Geldenhuys, said in Pretoria that the unrest had levelled off and that the strike call was part of a war of nerves.

"The instigators of the work boycott are trying to trigger off more trouble because they realize that things have almost returned to normal," he said.

she said. "Being a shirttail relative, I did not know what else to do. He turned it over to his counsel, who got the Federal Power Commission to make an investigation.

But she said FPC investigators told her only that there were erosion problems caused by the power company's hydroelectric plant on Lake Michigan and that the company was working to correct them.

Bloomer filed suit against the utility shortly after it opened its hydro plant in the Ludington area, where she used to operate a travel agency.

They have broken me...That is all," she said

William Wisner, an attorney for Consumers Power, said the firm considered the case very important.

"I was personally concerned that if we started buying homes falling into Lake Michigan, where is this going to go?" he said.

N. Korea critical of Ford's order for military action

By M.H. AHN

Associated Press Writer SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — North Korea charged on Sunday that President Ford, by ordering a show of military force in and around Korea after the deaths of two American officers, had moved the situation closer to the brink of war.

In Vail, Colo., where Ford is on vacation, Press Secretary Ron Nessen said North Korea had "expressed regret" that the officers were killed during a tree trimming incident in the Korean Demilitarized Zone last week.

Nessen said the regrets, which he declined to characterize as an apology, were offered during a meeting of the military truce commission in Panmunjom last week before a United Nations Command work team went into the demilitarized zone on Saturday and cut down the disputed tree. The 151-mile-long demilitarized zone between the two Koreas was reported quiet Sunday

North Korean broadcasts monitored in East Asia made no mention of the meeting and regrets reported by Nessen. Instead, Pyongyang denounced Ford for the tree felling and for the dispatch of American military might to Korea as provocative.

Word in Seoul was that a U.S. naval force, led by the giant aircraft carrier Midway, was due in Korean waters Sunday night.

American and North Korean forces have been on alert since the U.S. officers were killed Wednesday by ax-swinging North Korean guards in an argument over pruning the tree in the Panmunjom truce village. South Korean President Chung Hee Park's office announced Sunday the posthumous awarding of Korean medals to the two slain officers, Maj. Arthur Bonifas, 33, and 1st Lt. Mark T. Barrett, 25. A memorial service was held in a Seoul church in their honor

The body of Bonifas arrived Sunday in Highland Falls, N.Y. He is to be buried Tuesday at the nearby U.S. Military Academy at West Point. Barrett is to be buried in his home town of Columbia, S.C. The U.N. Command refused to divulge details of the tree-felling operation. Allied sources, however, reported that 26 helicopter gunships, several jet fighters and Guam based B52 bombers circled in the area and 300 U.S. and South Korean combat troops stood by outside the joint security area as a U.N. Command work party cut down the 40-foot Normandy poplar.

One North Korean broadcast Sunday said: "Ford the rascal made this decision after having a huddle with U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, the notorious troublemaker."

"This clearly shows once again that the Ford clique is working around the clock to find a pretext for the provocation of a war and employing every means to realize its sinister aggressive aim."

The broadcast said the Midway and its accompanying heavy escort force had "intruded into the sea east of our country" on Sunday and added that North Korean forces were "closely watching every move of the enemy

The U.S. Defense Dept. has stressed that the military moves, including earlier reinforcement of jet fighter units in South Korea, did not foreshadow military retalia tion but were aimed at discouraging North Korean military action

It was not clear when the North Koreans expressed regrets. Nessen said it happened in a meeting before the tree was felled, but South Korean sources here said there was an unusual secret meeting five hours after the tree was felled.

The sources said the North Koreans requested the meeting, and U.S. Adm. Mark Frudden met North Korean Maj. Gen. Han Ju-Kyong in Panmunjom at noon Saturday. The session lasted 13 minutes. the sources said.

The American-led U.N. Command refused to comment on the meeting. Some Korean experts on Communist affairs interpreted the meeting as an indication that North Korea might be backing away from a confrontation with the United States, possibly in the face of massive American military pressure.

Such private meetings between Ameri-cans and North Koreans could become a diplomatic issue between Washington and Seoul.

The semiofficial Korean Broadcasting System quoted national assembly sources as saying some Korean lawmakers have expressed fear that private talks might lead to another round of direct Washington-Pyongyang talks without Seoul's participation over issues concerning Korea.

South Koreans took the same view in 1968 when Americans and North Koreans held private talks in Panmunjom to negotiate terms for the release of the 82 crewmen of the U.S. spy ship Pueblo.

UCFA, said Wharton must accept the committee's nomination of Larrowe and forward his name to the trustees for approval.

"It would have to be a strange interpretation of the document (the Interim Faculty Grievance Procedure) for the president not to accept the committee's recommendation." Henderson said. "and I don't think he's going to do that. He can't choose another candidate without consulting the committee."

Henderson said the committee was asked if University administrators had been consulted in the selection of Larrowe by the UCFA, at the meeting with Wharton and Boger.

"Our committee did not feel it was our purpose or prerogative to discuss this with any administrator," Henderson said. "We know the president's office has been discussing this with various administrators Presumably, that's what Wharton's doing (now).

Wharton was unavailable for comment. Henderson said there is a "difference in style" between Larrowe and University administrators, but he added that the FGO post is a low priority to the administration and the faculty grievance office has been left vacant for a while twice before.

"Before Bruce Miller came in there was a period of almost two and a half months without an FGO," Henderson said.

Henderson added that first wave of faculty complaints come in with promotions and salary recommendations and the board of trustees will not take any action on faculty until Sept. 24.

The four-year-old plant, owned jointly by Consumers and Detroit Edison, consists of six large turbine generators and a 27 billion gallon man-made lake.

Water is pumped up from Lake Michigan to the man-made lake during periods of low demand for power. During periods of greater power demand, the water released and rushes over the turbines at 33 million gallons a minute.

She claimed she had more than $100,000 invested in her home and a gift shop located about 50 feet from the waterline. Seepage developed from the plant, she said, and she was forced to vacate her home in 1972 when the shoreline eroded.

She said a Consumers Power executive told her that her home might be unsafe because of the erosion. She said the executive, whom she did not name, later admitted making those statements but denied that the utility was to blame.

The court ruled against her in her suit and the utility then filed a countersuit to collect court costs from Bloomer.

She said she had no money left and had to deed part of her property to the utility.

for registration of voters

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Democratic National Committee was set to kick off on Sunday in Los Angeles its nationwide voter registration, aiming to register 1.8 million new voters by the November election.

On hand to speak at the opening ceremonies in downtown Los Angeles was Rep. Andrew Young, D.Ga., chairperson of the drive and a key black figure in Jimmy Carter's presidential campaign.

A Democratic National Committee statement issued Saturday said the voter registration drive will concentrate on personal, door to door efforts to contact unregistered voters

Assisting the door-to-door activity will be a nationwide media campaign using posters, flyers and "public service announcements," the release said. Groups to receive "special attention" in the voter drive are the black and

Spanish speaking communities — where there are large numbers of unregistered voters and where most new voters likely would opt for the Democratic ticket.

Serving as national director for the drive is Joseph W. Aragon, a California lawyer who formerly headed the DNC's division of Spanish speaking affairs.

The Democrats have formed a 15-person task force, cochaired by Sen. Wendell Ford of Kentucky and Rep. Yvonne Burke of California, to serve as an advisory panel for the voter registration effort.

Irish Demonstrate for peace in Belfast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) -Thousands of Protestants and Roman Catholics — two-thirds of them women defied the threats of the Irish Republican Army to demonstrate Saturday for peace in Northern Ireland.

The rally in Belfast's Ormeau Park on the banks of the Lagan River went off without incident and the IRA was conspicuous in its absence.

Police estimated the crowd at 15 000 but independent observers put the number at more than 20,000.

Mairead Corrigan, 23-year-old aunt of three children killed Aug. 10 when caught in a shootout between troops and terrorists, appealed to "the people of the world" to organize similar rallies for "peace in Northern Ireland."

In a short address, she noted that women outnumber men at the demonstration two to one and said it was time the women got their menfolk behind the "peace people" campaign to end the violence that has claimed more than 1,600 lives over the past seven years in this British province.

To show Protestants and Catholics alike wanted an end to violence, Betty Williams, 32-year-old Catholic housewife who launched the campaign after the killing of the three young children, announced that a third rally will be held next Saturday in the Shankill Road, the heartland of Protestantism here. BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) Former military strongman Praphas Charusathien might speed his departure from Thailand following bloody clashes over his presence in the country that left two students dead and nearly 40 others injured, government minister Surin Masdit said Sunday.

Praphas, the power behind the military government that collapsed during a bloody stu-dent uprising in October 1973, slipped into Thailand from exile Taiwan a week ago. His presence caused a crisis for the DETROIT (UPI) — The number two man in the city's beleaguered police department has taken a sudden indefinite sick leave, reportedly as a prelude to his firing after 26 years on the force.

Deputy Chief Frank Blount was in his office briefly Friday and then left without commenting on his future. But police administrators said Blount, 51, may never return to his job.

Federal sources quoted by the Detroit News said Blount was a target in a narcotics payoff investigation by the Justice Dept.

Those same sources reportedly were angered by Chief Philip G. Tannian's removal of Blount, saying the action may have jeopardized the "tremendously sensitive" federal investigation.

LeBlanc said that the CHR program is a test case and if enough people look into it, it could be expanded. In addition, he said it could show that the white rural population also needs this type of program. Expansion of the program may cause it to lose some of its ethnic orginality, but LeBlanc feels this would probably not happen.

All minor parties belong on ballot

The recent ruling by a three judge panel appointed by the U.S. District Court to allow 143 minor party candidates on the November ballot just this year despite a new law aimed at keeping them off is a small step in the right direction.

However, the court ruled that the law requiring minor parties to earn a spot on the general election ballot by gaining three-tenths of one per cent of the primary votes is constitutional.

This means minor parties in the future will have an additional by state officials as one way to obstacle to overcome in order to avoid using paper ballots, which win an elected position in the state are more expensive and take of Michigan.

Though the U.S. District Court panel ruled that the law had been passed too late to affect the upcoming November general election, it said the law should govern the ballot in future years.

Minor parties such as the Libertarian Party, U.S. Labor Party, Socialist Labor Party, the Communist Labor Party and the Socialist Workers Party were denied due process of the law by the poor timing of the passage of this law, the court ruled.

This law was partly supported longer to count.

As the one dissenting judge said, there must be a better way to avoid an overcrowded ballot, especially since, thus far, there has been no evidence to support the theory that a primary election gauges the community support of a minor party better than the former practice of gathering signatures on a petition.

Under this new law, a minor party is forced to finance a primary and general election campaign. The minor parties must fight against each other to grab one of the limited places on the general election ballot.

With the two party system failing as the Republican party slowly dies, it makes more sense to give people as many choices as possible for each office as there are willing candidates.

It should be enough that a candidate shows he or she has the support of a community by collecting signatures. The candidate should not have to finance a campaign for the primary.

With the latest decision of several minor parties - to appeal the court's decision - the courts have another chance to rule this law unconstitutional and force state officials to find a better, faster, cheaper way of counting election results without keeping candidates off the list

Kansas City — Many things which happen here remind me of the impermanency of the political realm

It has long been an adage that political men and political issues flame onto the stage and then fizzle off it again. Some leave a permanent mark, some do not. But all die. There are many images of this here: Like John Sears, the Reagan campaign manager, slumped into a booth at Nichol's all night diner after the defeat on rule 16-C. He had been called the architect of one of the most brilliant campaigns waged in recent memory; now he sat alone, without recognition by those around him. "I guess," he said, "that we'll just have to get up tomorrow and count our votes." But the votes weren't there and he knew it.

Demonstrations and events happen quickly here. Out of nowhere, hundreds come marching for ERA, against ERA, for Jesus, for a third party, against and for Ford. It goes on and on, a microcosm of the changing fortunes of political life. The lifestyle here reinforces the impermanency on you. An event you rushed to cover as though the very fate of the Republic depended on its appearing in print becomes forgotten as the deadline passes. There is nothing worse than old news:

But it is not only the political men and women who live and die, nor are their issues the only thing which emerge then submerge onto then into the pages of history: it is the institutions, the nations themselves, which these things revolve around which die as well. Many speeches here have spoken of this. Sen. Goldwater reminded us that liberty has a price and that if we continue to allow government to do everything for us we will soon be unable to do anything for ourselves. He spoke of this year as a time of decision.

The New York Times chided Goldwater by saying that, fortunately, such decisions and crises occur every four years and only at party conventions. But the Times is wrong.

Eventually, Goldwater will be right.

The idea that the Republic will survive is only an axiom as long as we work to make it one. There was much in the convention that made mountains out of molehills, but that is not a erious as our own wish to make molehills out of mountains.

It was the thought of this impermanency, not merely in events, but in the very structure they revolve around, which led me to seek out a spot of permanence. I found it in the Chinese section of the Nelson Art Gallery and took the comfort which only a 5,000 yeards picture can exude. Regimes die: princes come and go; the art remains. But it was this same impermanence, so prevalent here, that brought these objects to

Kansas City, objects which could be destroyed or moved to another civilization along with the relics of our own.

This is the central problem facing modern men and women: securing a sense of the permanent when everything about is changes, grows and dies. Many of the things which used to solve this problem are gone, rejected, disbelieved. They have been exiled as though we had the power of life and death over everything within the world.

Perhaps we have sunk our own roots deep into the turmoil of impermanence itself. It very easy here, despite the convention rhetoric, to do so and thus become fooled im believing that this is the best way to pick a president, or that no one in this country w suffer if we accept a certain ideology, or, worst of all, that all this activity is evidenced immortality

But in the silence of the Nelson gallery, sits a golden Buddha from Southern China. It's 800 years old. Did it sit within a mountain temple surrounded by holy men? Was it the showpiece of a thriving merchant city? Now it sits in Kansas City with the smilling knowledge which mocks at our attempts to control - here or anywhere else - the fated

Carole Lick

During the last two months our attention has been focused on the national political scene in observing the process of selecting presidents. This process should only make us more aware that we have some candidates with whom we should be concerned.

Here at Michigan State our entire University community should not only be aware but, he greatly concerned about the people who sit and run the University as members of the Board of Trustees. Soon, now, the political parties will be meeting to select those candidates.

I'd like to take this opportunity to ask members of our University community to take a serious look at Carole Lick. Carole Lick, not only is a graduate of Michigan State University, but she has kept a strong affiliation with the institution as a member of the President's Club, the Alumni Club. and as a Michigan State University honorary coach

Carole Lick is a public school teacher who holds a Master's Degree and who is still engaging in graduate study. In otherwords, she is dedicated to the field of education. It is also important that we remember that we have only one woman represented on the Board of Trustees and it is obviously time to think about broadening that representation. I do not intend to go through all of Carole's qualifications. I would conclude my letter by suggesting that everybody concerned with the growth, the development, and the operation of Michigan State University take the opportunity to become acquainted with Carole Lick and examine carefully her qualifications as a member of the Board of Trustees.

I think you would agree with me, she deserves the support and the nomination by the Democratic Party.

Handicapper?

In this degenerate age of "accomodate" and people going to visit their "neighbor's," and in the land of items that appear "real good," I must object to the State News introduction of yet another atrocity to the language

When I was a youth a handicapper was a man employed at a race track to assess the extra weight to be carried by each thoroughbred. Lo and behold, that individual has now been reborn in the pages of the State News as a person with a physical incapacity.

I suggest that instead of continuing this butchery, a term like "the handicapped" or "handicapped people" be used once again. Let us not insult these people of the King's Let us not moute and English an, further. Daniel S. Hamermesh

Prof. Zwarensteyn

I was shocked and saddened to read about the death of Professor Hendrik Zwarensteyn. I took his BIO 440 class last summer and sought his advice in applying to law schools.

He was an educator in the true sense of the word and was always available to his students for help in classwork or just for a friendly chat. He encouraged his students to perform to the best of their abilities and never to be satisfied with less.

Last week I wrote him a note thanking him for his assistance in launching my law school career. I don't know if he ever received it. His presence will be sorely missed by the MSU community and by those of us who he has helped.

An old Nixon operatives list still used by the S.S. listed United Press International, one of Susan's forums, as a "Marxist terrorist left wing front group." Susan, who says she is knowledgeable about the press industry, said the S.S. probably got the UPI confused with Associated Press.

Political aspirations of the President's middle son, Jack, meanwhile, remain unclear. Analysts have not determined whether Jack wants to be president of the U.S., like his father or of the world.

Jack praised his father yet again at the convention, saying the president always allowed the family to think and act as they pleased, regardless of whatever effect it may have on the president's own career. Jack is expected next week to publicly disclose his membership in the Trotskyite Fourth International. Shortly before the Tuesday night rules fight on the convention floor, reputation detroying rumors began to fly. An as yet unfamous Washington secretary wearing a T-shirt reading "I can type, too," told a reporter in an elevator that the PFC paid her to type, too, tond a reporter in an elevator that the 1 o pair of the have sexual relations with Sen. Helms, Texas Gov. John Connally, John Sears and 23 members of the Mississippi delegation.

"I'm lonely and I was always an orphan," she sobbed.

Doubt still shrouds the President's selection of Bob Dole of Kansas for his vice president. Dole is described as a political Captain Hook.

Introducing him, Ford said, "Bob Dole is a good friend, Bob Dole is a good guy and Bob Dole is bland. Thank you."

According to widely circulating reports, the president called the Dole hotel suite a few hours before the announcement. Dole's daughter answered the phone. "Hello?"

"Hello. Is Senator Dole in?"

"Who is this?"

"This is President Ford."

Pause. "Aw, cut it out, Charlie, ya big turd." The president tried to explain, but Dole's daughter hung up on the hall taking a crap at the time," Dole said. The audience laughed and Dole, who prides himself on his sense of humor, repeated the joke. The delegates laughed again.

Press investigators are still trying to determine where the voice that always introduces Ford comes from. The announcer, who is reportedly paid $50,000 a year to say "Ladies and gentlemen, the President of the United States," does not seem to assume human form.

form. The crisp, authoritarian-like voice permeates the entire premises, without any apparent use of amplification equipment. The tone and volume of the voice, measured by modern electronic devices, is the same at all times.

Yet, there appears to be no body connected to it. White House security disclaims any knowledge, saying Ford set it up himself. Ron Nessen, meanwhile, said Ford knows nothing about it, since it was set up by White House security.

Burned-out journalists from student and underground press stationed themselves at every point in the arena Thursday night. but failed to see where the voice came from. Reports say the announcer is a 122-year-old satyr from Poughkeepsie, N.Y., who renders the same announcement each night to Betty Ford before Jerry enters their bedroom.

Time changes one's opinion

Time to think can sometimes change one's opinion Or, that time can help substantiate one's thoughts regarding a certain subject.

Time has worked on this mind and yet I still can't decide how to categorize Wayne "Do-Nothing" Duke.

It's been three weeks since Buckeye coach Woody Hayes attempted to put a stranglehold on my Adam's Apple. During those three weeks a lot of thought processes have filtered through this mind. Many of them concerning "Do Nothing" Duke.

Just two weeks ago I related to the Big Ten Commissioner that I would be glad to turn over my evidence to his office regarding the allegations printed in this publication about recruiting violations at OSU. Now, I'm not so sure that I even want to talk with "Do Nothing." I'm beginning to think it would be a waste of time and effort.

Consider "Do-Nothing's" actions or lack of same, in the past several years.

When Woody punched a photographer in Pasadena. Duke did not invoke the rule covering misconduct by Big Ten coaches. When Woody took a poke and connected, at a student here in East Lansing in 1974, again. Wayne looked the other

Finally, three weeks ago in the Windy City Haves tried to choke me and hit Bob Page of WJR up side the noggin. When I talked to "Do Nothing" about the latest incident he commented that he felt it didn't warrant any action by him. Fine, Wayne, but you made that remark following the violent display by Woody. But, about 15 minutes later you also told me that you hadn't seen the incident.

If you didn't see the incident, then tell me, "Do-Nothing," how could you say I was goading Hayes with my questions' How can you justify putting your arm around of Woody following the altercation and apologizing for the "horrendous questions" Page and I asked him? How can you say it doesn't warrant a simple look see even by the Big Ten when you weren't even in the room when it happened?

Personally, Wayne, I think you lack the intestinal fortitude to go one on one with Woody. If not, why have you grossly overlooked the conference rule regarding misconduct by coaches and officials after Woody's earlier outbursts? Forget his trying to choke me. Just give me one good reason why you backed down from at least chastising Hayes?

Another thing, "Do Nothing," last winter you claimed that I misquoted you in a story. You sent me a letter to that effect. My rationale was that I asked you a question: "Are bribes a concern in Big Ten investigations?" You answered "Yes they are." Well, the word bribe was inferred in your answer and I used it. It's the same as asking "How's the weather?" and the answer is "It's fine." "It" represents the word weather. Come on Wayne, you're a journalism major.

After your letter to me concerning the quote received no attention, you then told me that you complained to President Wharton

What the hell do you want, Wayne censorship?

So, with a track record like yours Wayne, I'm somewhat skeptical about turning over my evidence to you or your staff. I have a feeling that you'll give it nothing but a cursory look and shrug it off

Rather, I think I just might give my evidence to the NCAA, who has a track record nearly as bad as yours. Then, you can find out what's going on from them.

By FDWARD L. RONDERS State News Sports Editor Perhaps one local sports caster best summed it up Saturday when he reflected, "I've never seen a Michigan

"This should be left up to a committee and not to the women themselves," she said. "Renee is a very impressive player. She has the independent body movement of a man but she has the lack of stamina of a woman. I don't think she could beat Chris Evert or any of the top players."

Beene, former collegiate women's doubles champion, agreed, but said she had mixed emotions about whether Richards should be admitted into women's tournaments.

"It would set a precedent," she said. "It isn't that she is too good for the women but that other male players might see in it a chance to undergo a similar operation and make a lot of money.

Beene said she was beaten more on her own errors than on Richards' play.

"Starting the match. I was ure I would win," she said. "But then I got so nervous I threw the match away. I still think I can beat her. Chris, Yvonne Goolagong, Virginia Wade and the others would have no trouble with her."

Beene was so nervous she served 11 double faults in the match, made countless errors and got only six points in the first set.

Richards, on the other hand, used her superior height and reach to good advantage, served hard in the early stages of the match and displayed a changed his opinion regarding Hayes. (In Chicago Rogers said that he had met Hayes once and seen Columbus once and "didn't like either one.") Evaluating his own squad, the MSU coach stated the weaknesses as being the kicking game and kickoff returns while he complimented the running attack of last year and the defensive rush.

'The defensive rush was good last year. But, we lost some people who made it good," Rogers said referring to Greg haum who was drafted by the Dallas Cowboys.

Policy to oppose increased plutonium USE

By NANCY H. JARVIS State News Staff Writer

Any increased use of plutonium enriched fuels in Michigan nuclear power plants is opposed in a nuclear energy statement which, policy passed, will become Dept. of Natural Resource (DNR) policy

The statement, still in draft form, is being composed by the Natural Resource Commission  nuclear power and supports nuclear bomb, the need for and opposes various facets of the highly controversial energy

The use of plutonium in nuclear power plants draws concern from the NRC because of plutonium's high toxicity, long decay period (250,000 years to reach a harmless state) and the possibility of theft when the plutonium is transported between reactor sites. reprocessing plants and disposal sites. Since plutonium can used to construct a crude plutonium. This security is great. The already used (spent) fuel from nuclear reactors is usually transported along highways of by railroad in large casks that contain highly radioactive fuel rods and cooling water. Despite the fact that no accidents during shipment of spent fuels have occurred, the NRC is still concerned about this facet of the power question since there are currently no federal controls over the transportation of concern is understandable when considers that one twentyeighth millionth of an ounce of plutonium, if inhaled, can kill a person within hours by massive fibrosis of the lungs.

Until the federally-run Nuclear Regulatory Commission provides information on the plutonium cycle and safe shipping procedures are enforced, the NRC will continue to oppose any increased use of plutonium in Michigan.

But this policy and the others contained in the statement, are not yet official. The statement was first presented in July, however it was not accepted because of "inaccuracies and cited by inconsistencies" Detroit Edison and Consumers

Power. "The companies did not feel the commission should adapt a policy statement in this area," said Jim Truchan, the DNR official who is working with the power companies.

Truchan said the companies criticized the statement "point by point" for its environmental bias. He said he then reworked the statement after a July 30 meeting with the companies and "considered their requests to every extent that I could." The new draft was scheduled for presentation at the August NCR meeting last week but was postponed until the Sepmeeting because tember Truchan, presents the statement, was not able to stay throughout the meeting. This draft, Truchan said, contains no more technical inaccuracies for the power companies. "They still have some basic philosophical gripes," he added. They do not feel the commission should adapt such a statement. The policy statement further addresses the problem of transporting both spent and renro ressed radioactive materials by developing and supporting legislation for safeguards in this area. Even though the reprocessing of spent fuels is not done commercially at this time the DNR still feels the Nuclear Regulatory Commission has not adequately considered or en-

French find recent robberies amusing

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH PARIS (AP) - A front page cartoon in the daily Figaro showed a masked gangster, his head sticking out of an open sewer manhole, politely asking a little old lady the way to the nearest bank.

The reference was to two recent multimillion-dollar bank robberies that most Frenchmen - including some police -- find amusing and a little admirable. In both incidents, one in Nice and one in Paris, the thieves

Associated Press Writer KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) -The Republican convention emerged as a showdown for those crusading for and against the women's movement.

The skirmishes included the party's continued endorsement of the Equal Rights Amendment, abortion rights, mechanisms to enable women and minorities to increase their ranks at future conventions and the sheer visibility of women at the convention itself.

In the disputes, feminists claimed victory - not for making any great gains but for holding the line on the issue most vital to them, continued support for the ERA. Phyllis Schlafly, leader of the anti-ERA movement, condemned party's decision to continue supporting the constitutional

NOTICE...

The Physical Plant Division will be performing their annual flushing and The Physical Plant Division will be performing their annual flushing and testing of fire hydrants starting September 1 and ending September 14. During this period a discoloration of the water supply throughout the campus will occur. We ask your indulgence for this slight inconvenience. The water itself is perfectly safe for human consump-tion, as well as other uses. The discoloration is caused by iron tion, as well as other uses. The ascoloration is caused by their particles from the deep rock wells that settle out in the underground distribution system. This annual flushing of hydrants prevents a building up of these particles and insures that the fire hydrants are in proper operating condition.

The water from our deep well system is safe for human consumption in its natural condition. To guard against contamination from outside sources, chemicals are added at the reservoir. This operation is maintained on a daily basis. Also, weekly samples are taken at various campus locations and checked by the Department of Microbiology and Public
