Proposal C would place an annual ceiling on state government expenditures to 8.3 per cent of the combined state personal income. It goes before the voters in the form of a constitutional ammendment on the Nov. 2 ballot. About 340,000 signatures were collected in a statewide drive to put the measure on the ballot.

Friedman said, contrary to what educators have been saying, the proposal would have no harmful effects on education and would not result in massive tuition increases.

Opponents seem to be "spreading claims against the measure that are wholly false, said. Friedman said, because the 8.3 ceiling would be based on the personal income of the previous year or of the five preceding years, expenditures couldn't be reduced suddenly and drastically.

During economic slumps it is rare that personal income declines anyhow, he said; it st goes up at a slower rate. Friedman also said he did not buy critics' claims that Proposal C would reduce the government's ability to cope with a recession. It is more effective just to cut taxes, he said.

Opponents of the measure, however, claim the measure would constrain the legislature, lead to massive tuition hikes and increase property tax reliance.

Groups are taking a stand against the proposal because it "is in their own interest," he said. Educators, public servants, and civil employes are all state-paid, so they do not want to limit expenditures, he said. And groups like the League of Women Voters and the Assn. of University Women, who have gone out against the proposal, are groups that have traditionally tried to "throw money at problems and just make problems worse," he said.

Friedman said the proposal is a step to reverse a growing trend which has seen

Ford criticizes Carter; funding charges cleared

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Ford accused Democrat Jimmy Carter on Thursday night of "slandering the good name of the United States" in his challenge of Ford Administration foreign and defense policy during the second presidential debate.

Ford lashed out at Carter during a nationally broadcast news conference which he opened by declaring his pleasure that the special Watergate prosecutor had put to rest "once and for all" allegations that he misused campaign funds as a congressman

The President called for a shift in the focus of the campaign to the serious differences between him and Carter.

"Gov. Carter and I have profound differences of opinion," Ford said. "I hope in the 20 days remaining in this campaign we can talk seriously and honestly about the serious differences.

Responding to questions about his role in efforts to block an investigation of the Watergate breakin while he was minority leader of the House of Representatives, his acceptance of golfing vacations and his use of campaign funds for travel and clothing, ford said all such allegations had been thoroughly investigated and no wrongdoing

As for recent allegations by former White

Ford already has said he accepted a number of golfing trips from William Whyte, a longtime personal friend and lobbyist for U.S. Steel Corp. Many clinics reopen, Fords get vaccinated following death scare

By WIRE SERVICES

Swine flu clinics in several areas around the country reopened on Thursday, as President Ford and his family got their shots and federal health officials stressed again that there is no connection between the vaccine and deaths among elderly

Ford and his family were vaccinated at the White House, giving a boost to the troubled immunization program that bogged down after Tuesday's announcement that three elderly Pittsburgh residents died following inoculations at a local clinic.

At one point Wednesday, nine states had uspended their inoculation programs. By Thursday afternoon, clinics had been reopened or were prepared to reopen shortly in all but three states. Local and county suspensions also were eased.

Dr. Theodore Cooper, asst. secretary for health in the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare, repeated that the vaccine is safe. "All the test results so far and the evidence at hand do not indicated any connection between the vaccine and the reported deaths," said Cooper, a heart surgeon

Lake restoration project blocked

By NANCY JARVIS State News Staff Writer

Concerns about what impacts the restoration of Lake Lansing will have on surrounding wetlands have temporarily blocked the progress of the $1.6 million project. At one point, restoration project coordinators had hoped to begin the hydrolic dredging of the 535-acre lake this fall but now it looks like work will not begin until spring, said Gary Coopes, environmental specialist for the Dept. of Natural Resources (DNR). The project first began to slow down when biologists from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said they were not consulted in the planning. They further complained that no wetlands should receive dredged materials. "Now they have withdrawn from (project) review," Coopes said. "What future plans they have, I do not know."

Whatever their intentions were, it was enough to get suspicions rolling. Now, several environmental groups are scrutinizing the project, wondering where the estimated 11,035acre-feet of dredged material will go and what impact it will have.

The restoration project was in proposal stages for years. Finally, an $800,000 grant came from the Environmental Protection Agency and then local groups followed suit

Many believe that the dredging is badly needed because over the years, the lake has filled up with sediments and organic matter causing a decrease in depth and weedy murky conditions for swimmers, boaters and other recreational users.

The project would remove this organic matter and restore the lake to a depth of about 12 feet. But the pending question of where the dredged material will go looms over the entire project.

Several sites are currently under investigation by the DNR, a Washington group hired by Ingham County Drain Commissioner Richard Sode called Ecol Sciences and the public with the final decision coming from the Environmental Review Board. An environmental impact statement is also being composed. It is due next month.

Coopes said the deposit site will be in the lake's watershed. He said other areas, some in public parks, are also being considered.

As for the impact in the watershed, Coopes said, "Well, it depends on what you call a problem. There would be some turbidity which would interfere with recreation. He also said the lake level would drop about "four feet or so" because water wou' removed along with the organic matter.

USSR launches spacecraft, says Tass

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union launched a Soyuz spacecraft into orbit Thursday with two cosmonauts aboard, Tass reported.

Soyuz 23, launched three weeks after the successful return of another manned craft, was carrying pilot Vyacheslav Zudov and flight engineer Valery Rozhdestvensky, the official news agency said.

The Tass report said the cosmonauts will attempt to board the orbiting Salyut 5 research station, which housed its first two-man crew for 48 days last summer.

Sovuz 23 blasted off from Baikonur space center in central Kazakhstan some 1,500 miles southeast of Moscow at 1:40 p.m. EDT, Tass said. It was a nighttime launch there.

Both cosmonauts are making their first space flight. Pilot Zudov, 34, and Rozhdestvensky, 37, are lieutenant colonels in the Soviet air force, Tass said.

Kallinger also got a three-year sentence for robbery and several other offenses. That term will run concurrently with the life sentence, the judge said.

Judge called 'sick' by Harris

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — William Harris called a judge "sick" when he was denied permission Wednesday to address the court after his arraignment with his wife on charges of kidnaping Patricia Hearst was delayed.

The Harrises were scheduled to pleas on a 13-count Alameda County grand jury indictment charging them with the Feb. 4, 1974, abduction of Hearst, the former college coed who is now serving seven years in prison for bank robbery.

However, the Harrises, appearing in court separately, said through their attorneys they were not prepared to enter pleas until they were represented by counsel of their own choice.

"You're sick, you're sick," Harris snapped when Judge Alan A. Lindsay refused to allow him to address the court.

Milliken signs insurance bill

Milliken called the measure "the strongest and most complete insurance consumer protection law in the nation — aggressively in rooting out unfair and deceptive practices in the marketing and sale of all kinds of insurance."

"Perhaps most importantly, the new act provides for realistic enforcement procedures and for fines sufficient to deter unacceptable insurance market conduct," he said.

Syrians advance on Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Thousands of armor-led Syrian troops smashed through Palestinian lines and advanced on Beirut and the southern port of Sidon on Thursday, intent on dealing a final blow to the Palestinian-leftist alliance and ending the Lebanese civil war.

Syrian military sources said their forces drove guerilla fighters from their mountain stronghold of Bhamdoun, 12 miles east of Beirut, and turned their tank and artillery attack on Aley, two miles to the west along the crucial Damascus-

Beirut highway.

Palestinian spokespersons refused to concede the loss of Bhamdoun, but guerillas and their leftist allies were seen retreating toward Aley.

Court stops FDA ban on controversial drug

DENVER (AP) - The 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Wednesday that the U.S. Food and Drug Administration had insufficient information about the controversial cancer drug Laetrile to bar its use

The court ordered the case sent back to U.S. District Court in Western Oklahoma and told the FDA"to develop a record supportive of the agency's determination.'

It said the FDA's record on the drug is "grossly inade-quate" and it said the proceedings should give Laetrile proponents an opportunity to express their views. The court also continued an

Oklahoma court's order allowing Glen L. Rutherford to use the drug without FDA inter-The appeals court rejected arguments that the lower court acted improperly because its decision was not made by a three-judge panel.

Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare sought review of the district court judgment, which temporarily halted the department and the FDA from preventing Rutherford from getting a six-month supply of the drug for his own use. In the course of the order, the trial court ruled that Laetrile was not toxic and found that if properly administered it would offer "relief from cancer disease to the satisfaction of many who are privileged to use the same.'

The court also ruled that the FDA was required under the law to approve or disapprove Laetrile as a cancer treatment and that it had neglected its duty in this regard.

The judge also held the new drug application requirements contained in the Food and Drug Act violated constitutional du process in that the prescribed expensive procedures could not be carried out by persons in Rutherford's position

Federal attorneys argued that the FDA has no duty to approve a new drug unless a so-called new drug application was submitted to it.

Prepared to speak on and answer pointed questions on issues affecting the academic community, candidates for the MSU Board of Trustees, the 59th district of the Michigan House of Representatives and the 6th district of the U.S. House of Representatives spoke before MSU faculty members Wednesday night at the University Club.

However, many candidates digressed from these issues before the poor turnout of about 30 people. The program, "Candidates Night" was sponsored by the American Assn. of University Professors (AAUP). All candidates for these offices had been invited to speak for 10 minutes before the Paul Weisenfeld, radio news commenta tor, moderated the program.

MSU Board of Trustee candidates pre-sent at the program were Human Rights party (HRP) candidates Eva Kipper and Phil Bellfy, Republican candidates Nick Smith and Paul Gadola and Democrats Michael Smydra and incumbent Blanche Martin. Issues discussed in the 10-minute presentations of these candidates included the Ingham County Metro Narcotics Squad, the affirmative action program, rising tuition costs and the responsibilities of MSU Board of Trustees members.

Kipper, formerly a staff member at the Lansing Star, said that the board needs more input from the poeple.

We have to open up the decision making cesses to students, faculty and citizens of the country," Kipper, the only woman running for a seat on the board, said.

Bellfy, an MSU graduate student in the Dept. of Sociology, agreed that students need a voice in the education decisions that affect their lives. He said that electing a student to the board would be one method of achieving this.

Smith, a Hillsdale County dairy farmer, said the financial status of MSU needs to be looked into in three areas - the equity of funding, the level of appropriations and the Gadola, a Flint attorney, said that there are glaring needs at MSU centered around the financial situation.

"MSU faculty salaries rank tenth in the Big 10," Gadola said. "The faculty is highly rated, but when their fringe benefits rank 25 per cent below other state employes, there's something wrong."

Smydra, a Thomas M. Cooley Law School student, said, "The MSU Administration has the lousiest reputation of any in the Big 10 schools, yet they are the highest paid." He said that students, who have a vested financial interest in MSU, lack a voice in

It seems that a spunky young man, dressing himself in some sort of military uniform and hat, has been standing in the hallway of the second floor of a Cedar Village Building and screaming loudly.

Residents, confused and curious, have opened their doors the past few nights only to be saluted by the intruder.

One night two ambitious apartment dwellers chased the vocal visitor but ended up with only his hat and a handful of brown hair.

He was wearing a wig. With the price of a movie these days, maybe they shouldn't complain.

Ronders, who estimated the politico's pace at about 70 to 75 m.p.h., finally caught up with Dierezinski in the parking lot of the Ramada Inn on South Pennsylvania Avenue.

After inquiring if he was indeed a state senator, and getting an affirmative reply, Ronders then queried Dierezinski as to whether he made a habit of traveling at excessive speeds to get to, perhaps, a cocktail party.

The Muskegon Democrat reassured the inquisitive reporter that: he was indeed late for a dinner party, that he didn't realize he was going that fast and that he didn't have any points on his driving record.

Spock on ballot

I would like to take this time to bring your attention to a serious omission in Monday's story on the Human Rights party candidate for vice president, Dr. Benjamin Spock. Donna Bakun failed to report that . Spock was on the ballot in Michigan on the Human Rights party ticket. Even though it is true that Dr. Spock is the People's party candidate for vice president. the People's party is a coalition of state and local parties across the country. It is not enough to only mention the name of the national People's party.

For example, the Wright/Spock ticket is on the ballot in California as the Peace & Freedom party, in Washington State as the Bicentennial Reality party and, of course, in Michigan as the Human Rights party

It is very important that the people of Michigan be informed of the correct name of the party of the Wright/Spock ticket. In Michigan it is the candidate who appears on the head of a party ticket who determines whether or not that party remains on the ballot. This year Margaret Wright, the Human Rights party candidate for president, must receive 1 per cent of the vote or the Human Rights party will lose its ballot statu... It will make no difference if any HRP candidate should receive 30 per the vote, the HRP will not appear on My spine has not crawled and I have always returned. My suggestion to Mr. Rideour, the writer of the letter, is to take another demonstration ride - this time on a full-sized adult bike, rather than a child's bicycle, and ride it down the right-hand side of the road. You should feel more secure.

What really makes my spine quiver is the thought of a semi truck coming towards me in the same lane that I'm riding in.

Fair rent — better than rent control

"Rent control" has become a staple phrase in the vocabulary of almost ever East Lansingite recently, what with the chance to make up our minds about it on the ballot in November. Punch the "yes" hole, or punch the "no" hole. (That's the only

But wait a minute. Did anybody ever stop to think that maybe there was another way? Heaven forbid that I bring this up so close to election time, but there will be serious consequences if the amendment to the East Lansing constitution passed providing for rent control. Yet, there is without question an emergency housing situation re that badly needs a solution, that should not be allowed to exist any longer. Rent control, as it has been tried in other cities, doesn't have too hot of a track record. Boston is phasing out its rent control; Paris, France, tried it and ditched it: and the experience New York City had with rent control has scared the pants off of other cities that are searching for the best way to stop rent gouging. Though it isn't fair to blame it totally on rent control, New York ran into a terrific abandonment problem (landlords abandoning their buildings) after the passage of rent control. To be even fair, rent control admittedly has worked in several New Jersey cities.

Now, the rent control proposition in East Lansing sounds pretty good at first. Then, a few raised eyebrows here and there. Then, winces and voices piping up, "Hev, wait a minute..." It sounds pretty crummy

So may I propose an alternative to rent control? It's called a fair rent commission, and it started out in Stamford, Conn., ir 1969, so it has had a good seven years trial time. Six other cities in Connecticut now have the fair rent system, including Hartford and Danbury, and the city of Chicago currently has the Stamford model under consideration. Cities in Arizona and California have also been asking about it. "It's amazing how the word (about the fair rent idea) has been spreading over the last six months," Diane Crouse, execut director of the Fair Rent Commis Stamford, told me.

The basic difference between rent contant and fair rent commissions is this: control sets rigid limits for each particle category of housing above which a land cannot charge. A fair rent commis handles cases on an individual basis either a tenant or a landlord has grievance, that particular rent increase be argued, rather than all cases i category.

This is the attraction the fair rent i has for Chicago, according to Aldern Dick Simpson, 44th Ward. "Rent con has to set standards for all sections of city, across the board," he said. "The rent idea has a good deal of flexibility."

But having flexibility does not mean commission would be milquetoast. Rath the Stamford model has real teeth behin Violations of the commission's decisions fined up to $100 per day by the corporate counsel for the city of Stamford. And commission is tied into the court system appeals can be made a court of appeals

Interestingly enough, no tenants Stamford have appealed decisions since Fair Rent Commission started in 1969, though some landlords have filed apper none have actually been granted, Cro

The pro-rent control people themse concede that rent control is not an solution, and should only be temps which is why the 1980 termination date tacked onto this year's proposal. than trying out an idea that is intended the very outset as a short-term solution which incidentally would cause a rent disaster if the city decides to pull it in — aim instead for a solution that is not more fair, but cheaper (Stamford's Rent Commission budget was just $29,000). It makes more sense.

Lip Service

I wish to comment on the cartoon that accompanied your article on bouncers which appeared in the Oct. 12 issue. Your pictoria interpretation of the comment that "women make better bouncers" was not only erroneous but was depersonalizing and degrading to women. Representing females in terms of their anatomy reflects both a simple-mindedness and a gross unaware ness of women as people. I find it most unfortunate that there exists a dichotomy between the "lip service" that you give to issues involving discrimination and tactics that you employ in your journalism.

This sad attempt at humor (?) at the expense of women puts you on the same level as an individual such as Earl Butz with the exception that he was forced to face his ignorance by resigning...and you merely continued to print yours.

Let it not be said that the State News represent the students of this campus. Hopefully most people of MSU have grown beyond gross stereotypes and sexual slurs, and your paper merely represents some subpopulation that remains afflicted with a rectal-cranial inversion. Phyllis M. Mellon

Small point

A small point: In two articles on Oct. 6, one on Gov. McCall's visit to promote the bottle bill proposal, the other on charges and countercharges in the Carr-Taylor race, the word "refute" is used when one side replied to another's charges:

. officials from the anti-bottle bill lobby refuted these statistics . . ." "Taylor people immediately refuted the charges.'
My dictionary tells me that when yo "refute" something, you "prove (it) to be false or erroneous," which usually takes a little more than saying it ain't so. I hope you'll recognize denials and disagreements, and stay away from refutations. It's hard to find real refutations these days. A small point . . . but one with some meaning.

Schmidt and Bodansky turn to power as the only source well

Statistics released in March 1976 by the Atomic Industrial Forum (AIF), a research group, show that the use of nuclear reactors, up to now, represents 1,000 years of reactor experience worldwide with a perfect public

The report also states that in 1975, 9 per cent of all electricity in the United States was provided by nuclear power plants, representing a savings of about $2 billion.

Nuclear energy, say the authors, is by far the cheapest energy source. The AIF collected data on generation costs from utility companies throughout the nation. Their results show that nuclear power costs 1.23 cents per kilowatt hour, coal ranks second at 1.75 cents and oil is a whopping 3.34 cents per kilowatt hour.

Heating only difference

George Hooley, spokesperson for the Westinghouse Corp., which supplies many U.S. plants with reactor components and steam generators, maintains nuclear power is not much different from coal or oil. He said that in all three power sources, some type of heat unit is used to boil water and produce

"The only difference is the way you heat the water," he said. Nuclear fission can take place in either a light water reactor or a breeder reactor. Light water reactors are so termed because a flow of water is used to keep the reaction area cool. Breeder reactors acquire their name from the fact that they actually breed fuel from the elements they consume.

Because breeder reactors produce energy that can be reused, they are considered better than light water reactors in nuclear

But breeder reactors are not commercially used in the United States at this time however one in France, called Phoenix, is presently supplying energy to the area surrounding the plant.

In the United States, 59 light water reactors are currently in operation. These reactors use uranium atoms which consist of U-235 and U-238 nuclei. Of these two types of nuclei, only U-235 will readily burn in a chain reaction.

U-238 however, is a much needed part of the natural uranium because it absorbs stray neutrons and produces plutonium 239, an element not found in nature.

The plutonium is valuable because it can be used in breeder reactors. When more plutonium is produced than U-235 is consumed, the process is called "breeding."

Radioactive solid wastes are stored in these barrels in a small building at the corner of Jolly and Collins Roads. The containers are steel cans within sealed steel cans.

Since light water reactors use only U-235, there is still U-238 remaining after the U-235 is depleted. The U-238 must be stored for future reprocessing and use in breeder

Leakage, storage problems This is where the problems of storage and possible leakage, sabatoge or theft enter into the nuclear power controversy. Those who oppose nuclear power say that we are endangering ourselves as well as future generations by storing such radioactive substances. They argue that in the event of leakage, or in case of sabatoge, war, earthquake or another externally induced accident, the radioactivity could escape and work its way into the environment.

Further, one problem in storage is the long period of time the waste remains "active." Each radioactive element dies out and is no longer harmful after a specified period of time. The duration of radioactive potency is measured by its half-life, or the time it takes for one half of the element to decay. The half-life of plutonium-239 is 24,000 years.

As of now, there is not a canister available that will shield the nuclear wastes for such an extensive period of time.

Schmidt and Bodansky contend that the only natural way the offensive elements could enter the environment is through contact with water which would disperse the radioactivity and contaminate the area. They believe that the use of steel canisters to encase the elements and proper placement in manmade mausoleums or under ground cavities would sufficiently protect them from leakage. Underground mines are currently thought to be the best storage alternative because salt deposits are among the most stable geographic formations and the most free of under-

Salt storage alternative

Michigan has vast amounts of these underground salt beds and because of this, ERDA is considering seven sites in the state for nuclear waste disposal.

Residents around these sites and throughout the state in general have expressed fear and disapproval over EDRA's interest.

Gov. Milliken responded to this by requesting veto power over any development of disposal sites.

On Sept. 20, an ERDA administrator assured Gov. Milliken by letter that he would indeed have full veto power. Since then, Michigan legislators have expressed concern about how binding this power may

The governor, however, feels secure that ERDA will not do any further planning until it has approval from the state, according to the governor's assistant press secretary.

Even if disposal sites are properly established, there is still the problem of theft or sabatoge while the wastes are being transported from the power plant to the disposal site to await future reprocessing.

But spokespersons from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) say they have "very specific regulations on the packaging of nuclear wastes," and that these regulations vary with the type of material to be transported. They also said they continually upgrade their regulations, adding licensing restrictions to enforce their requirements when they feel it is necessary.

A policy statement currently being drafted by the state Dept. of Natural Resources, says the "theft and accidentresponse guidelines have not been adequately addressed nor enforced to date by e regulatory commission and the Dept. of Transportation." The NRC would like to see better enforcement.

Because breeder reactors are not presently in use, the shipment of plutonium is rare. However, in the future, the need for specific regulations and security guards is boung to become acute

Atomic trash disposed of

By STEVE SZILAGYI State News Staff Writer

When visiting the Cyclotron Lab, the Engineering Building, the Chemistry Building or some of the other laboratory areas at MSU, beware: don't throw garbage in cans with a bright purple and yellow symbol on the lid, right next to the words: "Caution -Radioactive Materials

These "atomic trash" containers are the responsibility of the Radiation Safety Office, a branch of the Dept. of Public Safety, whose job is - among other things the proper disposal of radioactive waste at MSU.

"What we have is a fairly common method of disposal here at MSU," says Warren Malchman, University radiation safety officer. "And the volume of (possibly radioactive) material is getting greater every year.'

volume handled by the office is substantial. Over 3,000 cubic feet of solid and 3,750 gallons of liquid radioactive waste from the University were disposed of last

This includes radioisotopes and the containers, glassware, plastic gloves and paper products used in their handling. Liquids containing radioactive "tracer materials, and even the carcasses of contaminated experimental animals are all thrown out by the dozens of departments that use radioactive matter experiments.

However, the purpose of the Radiation Safety Office is not to ultimately dispose of the waste, but to contain it safely until it can be hauled away by a federally approved

The waste is picked up from around campus by individuals from Malchman's office - the regular Physical Plant staff is not allowed to dispose of any of the material - and transported in University-owned vans to a small building on the corner of Jolly and Collins roads.

The facility, which is just a few yards off the road, looks no more unusual than any of the livestock buildings on that end of campus, except for the familiar radiation symbol and warning on the door. It is locked and secured when not supervised and has an elaborate fire and security alarm system that alerts the DPS should a fire start or someone try to break in.

The building is the home of all radioactive garbage until it is picked up in 55 gallon Dept. of Transportation approved contain ers and shipped off by a private radiation handling firm to a Federal burial site in Sheffield, Ill. It is then buried in leak-proof steel or concrete vaults.

The Transportation Dept's containers are a necessity because of strict laws concerning transportation of radioactive (continued to page 14)

HAPPY BIRTHDAY!! emíľs

Emil's menu tells the history of a family serving the Lansing area for 54 years and this week they're celebrating their birthday. Emil's East in the 200 block of Michigan Ave. is a fine Italian restaurant full of that friendly Italian atmosphere.

Emil DeMarco opened a fruit stand on the location 54 years ago. It went from a fruit stand to a soda fountain until after Prohibition when Emil obtained one of the first bar Emil's atmosphere is perfect for a cozy dinner of Lasagne. which they claim has the best sauce in town. Another favorite at Emil's is Canelloni, rolled Italian pastry filled with meat, smothered with mozzarella cheese and covered with Emil's spaghetti squce.

Even though Emil's is a genuine Italian restaurant, they offer items for the vegetarian, including Futtucini, Manicotta or Italian Sea Shells. The menu at Emil's is rounded out nicely, they also offer seafood and American house specialties. Everyone should be happy eating at Emil's.

Every evening Emil's offers a dinner special but this week they've gone all out. You can get any one of these specials day or night all week long. Spaghetti and meatballs — $1.50, Canelloni meat filled — $2.75, Manicotta cheese filled — $2.65, Fact Mali sandwich — $1.50, Italian Sea Shells — $2.75, Lasagna — $3.15, Rigatoni — $1.75, Maștaccoli — $1.75, Meatball sandwich — $1.25, their famous Bean soup .50. At Emil's they know how to celebrate a birthday

Emil's happy hour is a great deal, birthday or not, 3-6 Monday thru Friday.

Emil's hours, 7:00 a.m.-2:00 a.m., Sunday 2:00 p.m.-10:00 p.m. Spend an evening with this Italian family, they're gracious hosts, with half a century of service behind them.

One of the neglected emphases of our religious heritage is the necessity of radical honesty! The latter involves a frank acknowledgement of the doubts and dilemmas people are facing and an openness to those critical of Christianity or the church. Doubt comprises the element of "in spite of" which is part of the affirmative life and faith of the Christian. This is not a faith which is purchased at the price of one's intellectual integrity. We are called to enter sympathetically into the moral and intellectual struggles of modern folk as they seek enduring meaning by which to live - enter not as dogmatists, but with the conviction and openness that the love of Christ inspires.

"The employer must know what his costs are going to be.' Bunka, who is the president of a small wood products company, said. "As long as he has the prospect of an unstable tax system, he is going to hire fewer and fewer people.'

Bunka added that if the legislature stabilized the state tax structure, Michigan grad-uates would be able to look to firms in this state for jobs that offer a future, since fewer and fewer companies would be moving out of the state.

Bunka said he is concerned about the possible misunderstanding or misrepresentation of Proposal D. In a statement released Wednesday, he said Proposal D is a move to repeal the state constitutional prohibition on a graduated income tax. The goal of the proposal is to insure that all citizens pay the same percentage of their incomes in state and local taxes. According to the proposal, the first $20,000 of income would be taxed at 3.9 per cent; whatever income is over $20,000 would be taxed at 9 per cent.

In his statement, Bunka pointed out that the proposed rates would be put into effect only until Jan. 1, 1978. After this, he said, the legislature is again free to tax on a basis it sees as "fit."

"A question we must ask ourselves is, has the current legislature shown fiscal responsibility in the past, enough to trust them with an open-ended tax structure that leaves it up to their whims to re-establish the tax rate at any level they desire?" Bunka said. Bunka also questioned why the state should increase income tax to finance irresponsible and undesirable expenditures, while the unemployable people of Michigan stand without jobs in a job-reducing economic climate. Bunka said there are many prime differences between his views and those of opponent "Jondahl believes in larger

The specifications of the HK2000 offer measurable evidence of its quality. But performance specifications are only one influence on sound quality. Just as in all Harman Kardon amplifiers and receivers, the wide-band design characteristic of the HK2000 produces sound quality that transcends its impressive specifications.

It utilizes narrow-gap, hard-faced, permalloy metal heads (the only heads used in professional studio tape machines) for extended frequency response and low distortion. Low frequency response is so linear that the HK2000 required the incorporation of a subsonic filter control that can be used to remove signals issued by warped discs.

Rotstein said that in a matter of months a general collapse of the national monetary system will come about. "Our party's plan would call for the immediate creation of a date Michael Stein. Bunka said he would like to see MSU's appropriations in the House changed. "We've got to get this out of the hands of the three-man committee and put into the hands of the board.

There should be a working relationship between the legislator at the Capitol and the University."

Stein pointed out that anything he said had to be taken in a global context.

"I am not in favor of government-funded education," said, adding that he would like to see a privately financed education system. Stein said he would very much like to reduce the power of the government and return it to the people; in this sense, he considered himself "something of an Ananarchist.'

Jondahl said the state is stuck with the predicament of trying to patch the budget together. He said that those who are concerned about the University must take on responsibility along with the community and the state.

"It would be a waste of time to get a reaction about a lot of programs in the University from the legislature," he said "These are internal battles and must be fought out within the University.

Wicked 'Women' saunter in style

By PETER J. VACCARO State News Reviewer

"The Women" is a wicked play — a bristling, biting, claws-bared romp of a play and very, very funny. Clare Boothe Luce's script, one of those fashionably naughty things that persist in teasing audiences with the not-so-good life, is clever and quick. The Okemos Barn Theatre's current mounting, under the direction of Ian Schmidt, is equally clever and quick.

It is terribly tempting to ask how and why the production succeeds. Given the roughhewn stage of the Barn Theatre, real elegance is tough to manage. But the production is elegant. At the play's heart is the jaded sophistication of the horsy set, yet the production avoids the easy bitchiness of camp. In its place is that thing seen so rarely in community theatre. It is called style.

And how does style happen? It takes a company that can handle the language of wit, that can make character exaggerations serve the play more than the actor, that can understand what is human, and turn it into real laughter and real tears. The company of "The Women"

At the center of the company are actresses Margaret Ingraham as Mary Marilyn Steeg-stra as Sylvia, Eve Davidson as Edith and Gae McAlpin as Peggy, their characters women whose lives are as nastily and viciously entangled at the bridge table as in the bedroom. Each is a first-rate actress, each is sensitive to the demands of comedy, each has charm and grace, each has dignity even with her hair down. And each shows that quality that most distinguishes honest talent on the stage - the capability for ensemble performance.

And ensemble acting is indeed important to "The Women." This is a company of forty rather than four, and the forty performances are solid. Leanor Reizen is stunning as the much-married Countess de Lage, her presence the sort that makes an audience want to block every exit to prolong the sheer joy of watching her. Kinetic sculptures featured

A three-in-one art exhibition will unfold in the Kresge Art Gallery with a combination of kinetic sculptures by constructivist George Rickey, a display of documents from the heroic age of Swiss history, and an array of silk-screen prints by James Crawford based on news magazine photographs of Watergate.

The show will begin on Sunday with a public reception from 2 p.m. until 4 p.m. and will continue through November 14.

Rickey's sculptures, show's focal point, are mobile.
They closely follow the theory of "constructivism" which at tempts to humanize the mechanical aspects of objects and finds simple solutions to complicated processes.

Rickey is one of the world's renowned kinetic sculptors with commissioned works in Berlin, Munich, Hamburg, Japan, Detroit and New York. He is a writer and lecturer on constructivism.

The Diebold Schilling Chronicles, named after the chronicler who wrote them, are a volume of 16th century reproductions manuscripts portraying the

Leadership changes hands at CBS, Taylor ousted, Paley leaves post

By KATHY ESSELMAN State News Reviewer

CBS ousted Arthur R. Taylor as its president Wednesday and appointed John D. Backe, 41year old head of the CBS publishing division, to succeed him.

Simultaneously, William S. Paley, chairperson of CBS, Inc. and its head since its creation in 1928, told the board of directors he would relinquish his responsibilities as chief executive at the shareholders' meeting in April, while indefinitely retaining his role as chairperson.

The joint announcements ironically occurred at a board meeting at which CBS reported its 24th consecutive record quarter for revenues.

CBS reported Wednesday that third-quarter earnings rose to a record $40.8 million. Revenue in the period increased to $529.9 million from $460.8 million. However, the cost per share on the New York Stock Exchange fell $1.75 per share and a block of 100,000 shares was sold, following news of Taylor's firing.

Phil Shirk, sales manager at WJIM-TV, responded to Paley's decision "with mixed emotions." He described Paley as a "cornerstone to the industry and to the network for many vears; a very powerful man who will be missed."

However, Shirk added that he "expects that the progres sive atmosphere at CBS will continue and that the network will stay tuned to public

Tom Baldwin, professor of telecommunications, described Paley's decision as "the end of an era, those fifty years of dominance of the broadcasting field, not just the CBS network. guard constitutes a change on paper or a true reorganization showed Paley most innovative in the programing area."

Baldwin speculated that "Pa-ley will probably maintain significant control until he dies. Baldwin said he does believe that in the wake of Paley's decision "CBS will probably make radical program changes in respect to ABC's domination of the ratings."

"This is bound to bring some dramatic types, like Silverman. They have to get someone with Industry sources quoted in the Wall Street Journal and the New York Times agree that the reason for Taylor's dismissal stems from Paley's aversion to having Taylor succeed him as head of CBS. Persons close to Paley cited Taylor's "lack of flair" in broadcasting functions beyond sales and profits.

Paley's decision to step down as chief executive officer could profoundly affect the style of the network. He built the network, and his personal fortune, from a straggling net-work of 16 stations, which he acquired just three days before his 27th birthday on Sept. 25, 1928. He changed the name of the network to the Columbia Broadcasting System and per-sonally directed its growth and

William O. Douglas Retired Supreme Court Justice

After three weeks of heated debate concerning the choice of the musical "Godspell" for the East Lansing High School

November production, East Lansing Superintendent of Schools W. Robert Docking announced to the school board Monday night that the play would indeed be produced and as written.

Concerned citizens have alleged that the musical violates a separation of church and state and that it contains comments of an anti-Semitic nature.

Docking told the school board and concerned citizens who were present at the meeting that he had carefully reviewed both the "Godspell" script and music. He said he had also read about a dozen reviews of the play and that in his judgment play was not anti-Semitic.

At one point in the controversy, however, a statement had been made to the effect that those remarks in question would be removed from the work. In other words, the play would have been censored be fore it ever reached the ears of the listening public.

In investigating the possibility of censorship of the musical, I was assured most vehemently by Robert Winter, director of instruction; Gerald Kusler, principal of East Lansing High School; and Kate Veihl, drama teacher in charge of the production, that no censorship will occur in the production.

Censorship of the musical. osen on artistic factors, would have been in clear violation of the First Amendment, which states, for those of you who may have forgotten: "Congress shall make

An estimated one million Americans suffer from glaucoma, a incurable eye disease that ranks as one of the leading causes of blindness in the United States. While the government hails the new treatment as promising, it will not allow its medical use by practicing physicians.

National Director of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML) News, Keith Stroup, said though Randall's headway is a good step in letting other glaucoma victims partake in such treatment, it does not help the thousands of other ople who need immediate treatment.

"NIDA is getting paid for its research measures on the treatment's effectiveness," Stroup said. "Instead of having to go through filling out a petition for research through the NIDA and then waiting two years for action, they would be able to obtain the use of marijuana legally through their individual doctor."

Randall is an exception in his need for marijuana treatment because his vision does not improve with the use of traditional glaucoma drugs.

The government would have to initiate regulations for such a procedure or be regarded by law as a common pusher, said Stroup. "We are not promoting the use of marijuana for fun purposes in the guise of a medical need," he said. "If we had that motive in mind, we would openly make such a demand.

Will your next Congressman serve you, or the special interests? You be the judge.

Are you interested in how the candidates for Congress in our District are financing their campaigns, or whether the candidates are getting big contributions from the powerful interest groups? You should, because the people who pay the campaign bills are often the people a Congressman listens to in office. And if those bills are paid by special interest groups from outside the area, the chances are good that the views of the people here at home will not get top priority.

Here are some questions and answers about campaign finances of the two candidates for Congress in the Sixth District. Read them over and decide for yourself who'll best serve you in Congress.

- 1. Who has provided the funds for the two candidates' campaigns?
- 2. Have the candidates tried to limit what they take from interest groups?
- 3. Have the candidates revealed the names of all their contributors?
- 4. Is it possible for any secret contributions to be made to the candidates?

The present Congressman

According to Common Cause, the present Congressman received nearly half his money from special interest groups in the last election. The same is true again this year. And, in total, he has received over $90,000 from these groups.

NO

Since 1974, the present Congressman has received over $33,000 from one interest group alone.

NO

The present Congressman has refused to publicly file the names of all his contributors.

YES

The present Congressman voted in 1976 to allow big corporations and unions to be exempt from having to disclose many of the expenditures they make on behalf of Congressional candidates. He has also refused to agree to a code of campaign ethics which would have required him to disclose any such contributions made on his behalf.

Cliff Taylor

CLIFF TAYLOR has received nearly 80% of his contributions from private citizens who have given personal individual contributions. Cliff has gotten less than 12% of his funds from organized interest groups. In all, over 1800 separate individual contributions have been made to Cliff's campaigns.

Even before a recent law limited the amount which groups could give to candidates, CLIFF TAYLOR was concerned about accepting excessive contributions. That's why, in 1974, he set a self-imposed limit of $2000 on the amount of money he would take from any one group in that campaign. And Cliff maintained that limit until the Congress itself acted to set a limit on how much a candidate could obtain from one group.

YES

CLIFF TAYLOR has revealed the names of every contributor to his campaigns.

Unlike the present Congressman, CLIFF TAYLOR has agreed to disclose any expenditures made on his behalf by corporations or unions. He has also pledged to seek enactment of legislation making of such disclosure mandatory.

A recent independent study conducted by Professor Harold Spaeth of the MSU Political Science Department revealed that, on the major issues, the present Congressman was voting the opposite of the way most people here in the District wanted him to vote. Yet he has gotten high ratings on his voting from the same interest groups that have helped finance his campaigns. (The AFL-CIO, for example, gave him an approval rating of 91.3% and $12,000)

CLIFF TAYLOR, on the other hand, will owe his election to the voters here in the Sixth District, because it is here that he receives his broad base of support. That's why, once he's elected, his only special interest will be you.

Cliff Taylor: His Only Special Interest Is You.

Fitzsimmons, who became union president as Hoffa's handpicked successor after Hoffa was sent to federal prison in the 1960s for jury tampering and mail fraud, has not been ordered to appear before the grand jury in person, the newspaper said.

After Hoffa got out of prison, he and Fitzsimmons became bitter rivals. In a biography published after his disappearnce, Hoffa accused Fitzsimmons of "selling out to the mobsters."

Another newcomer, which will move in beside the existing "Victorian Sportsman" display, will feature a rich variety of duck decoys on loan from a private collector.

A third new display, planned for later this year, is an especially interesting catch because of its rarity. While in the field this summer, MSU paleontologist J. Allen Holman found the remains of a 14-million-year-old tortoise, including its head and threequarters of its limbs.

Along with its new exhibits, the Museum has a problem to face this year. It is one of the buildings on campus that has been condemned as a fire hazard, due to its lack of enclosed stairways, proper fire escapes and sprinklers.

Agents arrest parolee charged with abduction

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) - A paroled murderer who wrote the best-selling book "A Reasonable Doubt" while on death row in New Jersey was arrested by FBI agents here Wednesday.

Agents with a tip from a "confidential source" arrested Edgar Herbert Smith Jr. at a downtown hotel on charges of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution. He was wanted in San Diego on charges stemming from the kidnaping and stabbing of a Southern California woman earlier this month, said agent Bill Jansen.

Smith, 42, was taken into custody without incident. "He was sound asleep and the agents had to wake him up," Jansen said. Less than three hours later, Smith was arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Joseph L. Ward, who ordered the man held on $500,000 sh-only bond. Ward said Smith's return to San Diego will depend on extradition proceedings which must be started in California. Smith was accused of abducting Lefteriya

Ozbun, 33, from a Chula Vista, Calif., parking lot Oct. 1. He allegedly stabbed the woman, but she managed to roll out of the car on a freeway off-ramp, a kitchen knife with a six-inch blade protruding from her abdomen

Parents must give up seven juvenile children

DES MOINES Iowa (AP) -The seven juvenile children of Charles and Darlene Alsager, reunited with their parents by a federal court last year after a six-vear battle, must be surrendered again.

Polk County Judge Ray Hanrahan said in his ruling, home is in a filthy, unsanitary condition most of the time."

He said Cathy, 10 months old, was "neglected and ignored when she was in need of being fed or changed.'

The ruling expands on temporary order issued Sept. 9 by another judge that removed the four youngest children — Michael, 11, Albert, 8, Sally, 4, and Cathy - from the home until a hearing could be held to determine if the other children needed the aid of the court. Hanrahan held closed hear ings earlier this month. His ruling Tuesday said Wanda, 15, John, 14, and Charles Jr., 13, needed such help. An eighth child, George, 17, is married and not part of the litigation.

The judge's action, however did not terminate parenta rights. Lawyers in the case said the judge will review the case next April 30, and a lawyer for the Alsagers said they may appeal.

Betty slips up during speech

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) -Betty Ford, attempting to clear up any confusion about her husband's remarks on Eastern Europe, got mixed up herself when she referred to the Democratic presidential candidate as "President Carter" and Talking with reporters during a Pulaski Day parade on Sunday, the First Lady spoke of "the indominatable free spirit of those countries over there," adding, "I don't think President Carter really knows what that is about.

She immediately demoted her husband's opponent by saying "Sen. Carter's running mate Sen. Mondale voted against Free Voice, the voice of Europe" in what apparently was a reference to Radio Free Europe.
