'U' to seek federal funds for construction projects

By SEAN HICKEY
State News Staff Writer
MSU will seek $14.3 million in federal emergency public works dollars to fund six University construction projects. Application for the funds from the Economic Development Administration (EDA) was approved by the MSU Board of Trustees in its monthly meeting Friday. The six projects were taken from the Joint Capital Outlay list, an itemization of projects and necessary funds that were not funded in the state's appropriation to the University this year. Included in MSU's requests was $5 million to begin work on anti-pollution precipitators for smokestacks at University Power Plant 65. If approved by the EDA, the project would still require an additional $7 million from the state. "We cannot afford not to apply at this time. These projects are of such an importance to the University that we feel we must try to get these federal dollars," Jack Breslin, University vice president said. Also included was $2.5 million for an addition to the Engineering Building, $5 million for a central campus energy control system and $1.85 million for the renovation of two campus buildings and one in the Upper Peninsula.

Board of trustees approves resolution against Proposal C

By CAROLE LEIGH HUTTON
State News Staff Writer
The MSU Board of Trustees unanimously passed a resolution urging the voters of Michigan to vote "no" on Proposal C on the Nov. 2 ballot at its formal meeting Friday. Proposal C would amend the Michigan Constitution to limit all state taxes and expenditures to 8.3 per cent of the combined personal income of Michigan. The University of Michigan Board of Regents passed a similar resolution, but by a 6-2 vote, Friday.

MSU awarded Sen. Hart an honorary degree in 1964 and gave him the Board of Trustees Distinguished Citizen Award in 1976 in recognition of his "outstanding service to the state and nation over the past 18 years." In other action taken by the board at the formal meeting, the Social Science and Humanities Teaching Institutes were discontinued. Both institutes were established in 1964 to assist the College of Education and improve teacher training programs in the two schools.

The federal public works program is designed to fund projects which will provide jobs and thus reduce unemployment. MSU would be competing with cities and institutions all over the state for the approximately $157 million made available to Michigan through the EDA. The projects must be under construction 90 days after approval and must be labor intensive. Individual projects have a federal ceiling of $5 million and cannot be less than $100,000. All of MSU's proposed projects have already received internal approval and were on the University capital outlay request list pending before the state legislature. Federal application for any project approved by the EDA shifts the source of funding from state to federal dollars. "This does not represent our total list of capital outlay requests. These are projects we have selected which we hope will be competitive for the federal funding," President Wharton said. Wharton said it was very unlikely that MSU would receive approval from the EDA for all six projects because of the extreme competition from other institutions from around the state.

MSU Trustee Don Stevens, D Bloomfield Hills, one of the trustees who introduced the resolution, said the proposal "would be devastating to the state of Michigan." "It would leave no alternative but for the state to force local units of government, not just universities but cities, communities and so forth, to further finance programs that are now financed partially by the state," Stevens said.

Stevens said Proposal C would put the state in a "straight jacket" and prohibit the growth necessary. Trustee Jack Stack, R Alma, coauthored the resolution with Stevens and urged its approval by the board.

"We must realize that all of the universities, community colleges, local governments, agencies, cities, towns and villages are going to be applying for funds, which is a very competitive process," Wharton said. The campus renovation projects would provide new windows, doors, interior finishes and air-conditioning systems for Cook and Chittenden halls. Cook Hall was constructed in 1889 and Chittenden Hall was built in 1900. Both projects would include fire protection and improved access for handicapped.

Stevens said Proposal C would put the state in a "straight jacket" and prohibit the growth necessary. Trustee Jack Stack, R Alma, coauthored the resolution with Stevens and urged its approval by the board. Prior to the meeting the trustees received a letter from Philip Korth, president of the MSU Faculty Associates, urging the board to oppose Proposal C formally.

Trustee John Bruff, D Fraser, expressed concern over this problem and stressed the need for the discontinuation of majors to be a board decision, not solely one made by the Administration of the University. The trustees also approved establishment of an affiliation agreement between the College of Education and St. Lawrence Hospital for teaching programs in therapeutic recreation.

Another $600,000 million was proposed for the renovation of the MSU Agricultural Experimentation Station facility at Chatham in the Upper Peninsula. The energy control system, if approved, would enable operators to control mechanical systems and equipment in major buildings on campus from one location. Breslin estimated that savings in labor would pay back the $5 million cost within six years.

Stevens said Proposal C would put the state in a "straight jacket" and prohibit the growth necessary. Trustee Jack Stack, R Alma, coauthored the resolution with Stevens and urged its approval by the board. Prior to the meeting the trustees received a letter from Philip Korth, president of the MSU Faculty Associates, urging the board to oppose Proposal C formally.

The trustees also approved establishment of an affiliation agreement between the College of Education and St. Lawrence Hospital for teaching programs in therapeutic recreation.

Trustee Stack, the lone dissenter on the vote, expressed concern with the deterioration of other affiliation agreements and with the lack of a residency program for students of psychiatry. The highlight of the morning, which turned out to be full of quips and puns, came when John Cantlon, vice president of research and graduate studies, attempted to explain research with mitochondria and brain metabolism taking place at the University.

FOREIGN LEADER TOLD HUA NEW CHAIRMAN Posters show hanging in effigy of Mao's widow, officials say

HONG KONG (AP) — Foreign officials coming out of China said Sunday they saw posters in Shanghai depicting the hanging in effigy of Mao Tse-tung's widow in several Chinese cities. The posters were understood to be signs of approval rather than an indication of the state of the four in the power struggle in China. Premier Hua Guofeng and his party arrived in Hong Kong on their way home in the wake of reports that the four radicals had been arrested. Crowds reportedly demonstrated against the arrested radical leaders in Shanghai, regarded as the center of the power struggle, and other Chinese cities. Hua's election to the top post of party chairman was first reported in wall posters in Peking on Oct. 9 and later confirmed to foreign reporters by a Chinese government spokesperson. However, the government has never made an official announcement of the choice of Hua to head the party. Peking has given no explanation for delaying announcement on the appointment. But there has been speculation it was being held up to permit Hua to consolidate his position following a reported coup attempt and assassination plot by party radicals led by Chiang Ching. Somare said that on his arrival in China on Oct. 11 Hua "informed me of his election and I congratulated him as chairman of China." Somare said the 57-year-old Hua gave no indication at their meeting whether he would relinquish his post as premier, which he has held since the ouster of Vice Premier Ten Hsiao-ping in April. Teng, a protégé of the late Premier Chou En-lai, had been considered the front runner for the premiership but his appointment was opposed by Chiang Ching and her supporters. There has been speculation that Chinese Vice Premier Li Hsien-nien, a financial expert who was given unexpected prominence during Somare's visit, may be named eventually to the premiership. Somare said he heard nothing about the arrests of Chiang Ching and her fellow radicals in Peking but that he saw a demonstration and hundreds of wall posters in Shanghai on Friday. A member of Somare's delegation said he asked his interpreter for an explanation of the posters and was told only, "I am embarrassed." He said the interpreter also asked him not to take pictures of the demonstration or wall posters. The three crossed-out figures shown with Chiang Ching reportedly represented party Vice Chairman Wang Hung-wen, 38, Vice Premier Chang Chun-chiao, 55, and Politburo member Yao Wen-yuan, 51. They were reported to have been the chief co-plotters with the widow. Meanwhile, China's official Hsinhua news agency said the Chinese army's Peking garrison has pledged to "strive to make new contributions in safeguarding the party Central Committee." It said the soldiers also vowed that, under the committee "headed by comrade Hua Kuo-feng," they would "unite as one and march in step to win new victories." The agency, monitored in Tokyo, repeated a phrase used many times in the past week, apparently in reference to the reported coup attempt of Chiang Ching. It said the soldiers "pledge to fight resolutely against anyone who betrays Marxism-Leninism-Mao Tse-tung thought and tampers with Chairman Mao's directives, and anyone who practices revisionism and splitsism and engages in conspiracies."

Simon forecasts Taylor victory

By EDSCHREIBER
State News Staff Writer
Breathing fire and brimstone, U.S. Treasury Secretary William Simon, in Lansing this week to attend Congressional campaign functions for Republican Cliff Taylor, hit hard at the Democratic-controlled Congress. Simon called it a free-wheeling, free-spending Congress that is seriously out of balance and "absolutely refuses to restrain itself in spending." Simon predicted that the 2-1 Congressional edge that Democrats currently enjoy is going to change on Nov. 2. "I myself believe the Republican party has an excellent chance of picking up 50 House seats this year and that would restore the balance," he said. The swing toward a heavily Democratic majority was a reaction to Watergate, Simon said, but was only a temporary flirtation. He forecasts a Taylor victory this year. "I knew Congressman Carr in Washington and I knew what he stood for in his votes. Cliff represents the moderate-conservative wing of the Republican party," he said. "Mr. Carr is so far to the left he's almost off the page. He voted to overturn every one of President Ford's vetoes which saved the American people 16 billion dollars. He (Carr) continually votes down military spending and all the wonderful things that keep America strong." "The people are fed up," he said. "They are beginning to realize that we can't spend our way to prosperity." Simon discounted suggestions that the United States economic experience could be compared to England, where the country is on the verge of serious economic collapse, but said if the United States continues down the same road it has for the past 10 years, "we most certainly would be there." His voice rising and taking a more serious tone, Simon emphatically stressed the problems he perceives to be facing America. "People don't hire or expand plant equipment with rampant inflation," Simon said. "We need to strengthen the private sector, not continue to overtax it, or overregulate it; that's the direction this country is heading in." America should learn from the British experience, he said. Leaders of Britain's labor government are now urging a strengthening of the private sector. "This is extraordinary when one thinks of a labor government speaking just as I'm speaking to you today." "Have we learned that we can't spend our way to prosperity? I should hope so, but Gov. Carter is still preaching a free lunch," he said. "Well, there is no such thing as a free lunch. The very people being promised this are the very ones that are going to be hurt by the results of these fuzzy-headed economic policies." Regarding the energy crisis, Simon urged the removal of price controls on natural gas and oil so private companies would have the incentive to advance exploration and technology. "If we removed the impediments from the private sector, there is absolutely no doubt in my mind that industry would provide us ultimately with much lower prices in energy," he said. "But no, what we'd rather do is fool the American people and tell them that we can control the price and still provide them with plenty." "My Lord, go around the world today. We've got gas at 60 cents a gallon in the United States. It's a $1.75 to $2.25 a gallon in every other country of the world. Compare per capita income, standard of living, compare anything about the United States to any one of these countries." "You know what our system is based on? It's pretty simple. Goods are going to be produced if they can be sold and provide an adequate return. "If they can't provide a profit they won't be sold no matter what the government says or does." "That's the essence and genius of the capitalist system that has provided this country with the greatest prosperity and the highest standard of living in the history of mankind." Simon defended the Ford Administration's policy when reminded that eight of the last 10 years — periods of high unemployment and inflation — were under a Republican administration. "If reporters would study economics and history they would realize that 40 of the last 44 years America was governed by a Democratic-controlled Congress," he countered. During the past several weeks campaign officials for Jimmy Carter have complained that members of the Ford Administration have remained on the government payroll while working full time for the election of President Ford and other Republican candidates. Simon was asked if he was presently being paid while meeting with Taylor in Lansing. "I would assume so, I don't work per deal," Simon laughed. "I've been in the federal government for four years and I can count the Sundays I've had off on one hand. Yes, I continue to be paid. My job in the United States government is chief economic spokesman, it is to go out and explain to the people the problems of the government and economy, and how we intend to solve them." "I spend a great deal of time doing that in the normal course of my secretaryship, in a non-election year. If the American people are not informed about what their government is trying to do for them, that's very serious."

Inoculations to continue; program to include public

The University's swine flu immunization program will resume today after its temporary halt. Immunization hours at the Clinical Center are from 7:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. The program will run through Thursday. The flu inoculations were suspended by the Michigan Dept. of Public Health on Wednesday when three elderly Michigan residents died. The inoculation program was originally limited to MSU students, staff, faculty and their dependents. Now, however, the program is open to the general public. The alphabetical schedule will also be abandoned. "Facilities in the MSU Clinical Center can easily accommodate expansion of the immunization program to include anyone who wants vaccination against swine flu," Dr. John D. Siddall, acting director of University Health Center, said. Siddall said both monovalent (A New Jersey or swine flu) vaccine and bivalent (A New Jersey and A Victoria) vaccine will be available. "It was established that the vaccine and the deaths were unassociated," Siddall said. "There will be no changes in the vaccine used or the basic format of the program." Shuttle buses will still run every 20 minutes at the Union, Library and Natural Resources Bldg. Siddall said that he had seen some decline in participation due to adverse publicity. Resumption of flu vaccination programs throughout the state was authorized Friday by Maurice Reizen, state director of public health.

Arab leaders discuss Lebanon

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Six Arab leaders met in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, on Sunday in an attempt to end the Lebanese war and settle other differences, the official Saudi news agency reported.

The summit, called by Saudi Arabia, brought together presidents Anwar Sadat of Egypt, Hafez Assad of Syria and Elias Sarkis of Lebanon, Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasir Arafat, Kuwait ruler Sheikh Sabah al-Salem al-Sabah and Saudi King Khalid.

The leaders arrived in Riyadh on Saturday, but the opening of the summit was put off until Sunday.

Kuwait's al-Sabah has been serving as mediator between Assad and Arafat on Lebanon, where Assad's 21,000-man, 800-tank force has been pushing back Arafat's Palestinians and their leftist Lebanese Moslem allies. Syria's siding with the Lebanese Christians against the Palestinian-leftist alliance has drawn strong criticism from several Arab regimes, especially Egypt.

Israeli sentenced, demoted

TEL AVIV, (AP) — An Israeli major has been sentenced to two years in prison and demoted to private in connection with the beating death of an Arab Communist leader on the occupied West Bank last April, military sources said Sunday.

It was the first reported conviction of an Israeli soldier stemming from the Israeli action against West Bank rioters. Eleven Arabs died in clashes with Israeli troops during the spring protests against Israeli control of the area.

The officer, who was not named, reportedly told his men to "take good care" of Ahmed Dahdoul and six other prisoners arrested during a riot at Salfit, north of Jerusalem. The soldier interpreted this as an order to beat them. Dahdoul, 45, died from the beating, the sources said.

Phillipine vehicle hits landmine

MANILA, The Philippines (AP) — A military vehicle carrying poll clerks and ballot boxes for the weekend referendum rolled over a landmine and was attacked by insurgents Sunday in the southern Philippines, military sources said. Six poll clerks and two guards were reported killed.

The sources said rebels opened fire on the armored personnel carrier after the explosion near Indanan on Jolo Island, 600 miles south of Manila. Jolo has been the center of Moslem resistance to government forces for four years.

Sunday's violence was the first reported during the two-day referendum on martial law. Voting ended Sunday, and early returns heavily favored President Ferdinand E. Marcos' proposals to strengthen his regime. It was the fourth such referendum since Marcos declared martial law four years ago.

Moore sorry she missed Ford

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Sara Jane Moore, serving a life sentence for trying to kill President Ford, says she still is dedicated to destroying the U.S. government and that her only regret in connection with her assassination attempt is that she missed.

The 46-year-old Moore's comments came in an interview with Mary Neiswender published in Sunday's editions of the Long Beach Independent Press-Telegram.

The copyrighted article quoted Moore as saying that the assassination attempt in front of a San Francisco hotel was long-planned.

Moore said that her plan to kill Ford was hindered by increased security surrounding the President after Lynette Fromme pointed a gun at him in Sacramento a month before Moore's attempt. Fromme is now serving a life sentence after being convicted on the same charge as Moore.

'Godfather' dies in New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Family, friends and curiosity-seekers gathered at a Brooklyn funeral parlor Saturday to pay last respects to Carlo Gambino, the so-called underworld "boss of bosses" whom many believe was the inspiration for "The Godfather."

A steady stream of trucks, including a moving van, arrived to deliver flowers at the Cusimano & Russo Funeral Home as dozens of federal, state and city law officials mingled in the throng. Cars were double-parked, and mobile television units crowded the normally quiet neighborhood as the rites for "Don Carlo" shaped up like an old-style gangland funeral.

Gambino, 74, died of natural causes on Friday at his $100,000 ranch house in Massapequa on Long Island. A stroke, suffered while family members and a doctor were present, was believed connected to a long series of heart ailments which have prevented Gambino's deportation to Italy since it was ordered in 1967.

Researchers disagree on PBB

LANSING (UPI) — The state health director says it is still safe for most women to breast-feed infants, but a University of Michigan researcher claims the state's findings that breast milk contains the chemical PBB justify a halt to all nursing.

Dr. Thomas Corbett, who has studied the effects of PBB on rodents, said breast feeding should cease for at least a year or two until more information is available on the long-term effects of PBB on humans.

Corbett said his research, conducted in 1974, showed PBB can cause birth defects and liver changes in rodents and made him "highly suspicious" that the chemical is potentially cancer-causing.

Gribbs links crime to Kavanagh

LANSING (UPI) — Wayne County Circuit Judge Roman S. Gribbs said Friday that the increase in crime in Michigan is directly linked to rulings handed down by state Supreme Court Chief Justice Thomas G. Kavanagh.

Gribbs, who is opposing Kavanagh for an eight-year term on the high court, said fewer criminals would be released on technicalities if he were elected to the bench.

Gribbs released analyses of several Supreme Court decisions he said indicated that Kavanagh and "other" justices "have released on court legislated legal technicalities those found guilty of crimes."

Soviet cosmonauts abort flight splash down in cold Asian lake

MOSCOW (AP) — Two Soviet cosmonauts who aborted their flight because of equipment failure splashed down in a frigid Central Asian lake in the Soviet Union's first landing of a spacecraft on water, Moscow television reported Sunday.

Soyuz 23 Cmdr, Vyacheslav Zudov, 34, and flight engineer Valery Rozhdestvensky, 37, both first-time cosmonauts, were reported in good condition after their landing Saturday night, almost exactly 48 hours from the time they were shot into space.

But an account Sunday night by Vladimir Shatalov, a two-time cosmonaut himself and now a space official, indicated the landing was difficult and required "courage, heroism and will."

The flight of Soyuz 23 was cut short Friday night, following the launching Thursday night, when a failure in the spacecraft control system made a linkup with the Salyut 5 orbiting space laboratory impossible. The cosmonauts were to do scientific work aboard the space lab, probably over a period of weeks.

"The flight was a difficult, complicated one," Shatalov said on Moscow television. "At the beginning, all went as planned in the program."

Shatalov said the cosmonauts easily moved their spacecraft near the Salyut 5 for the rendezvous, but when the space ship's automatic approach system for linkup went into operation, "certain faults appeared, faults that did not permit the carrying out of the further process of automatic approach."

"The crew checked these faults, reported to earth, carried out a series of important observations that made clear the causes of the improper functioning of the automatic approach system and the crew was given the command to prepare for a landing."

Tass, the Soviet news agency, said the parachute landing occurred in a snowstorm on Lake Tengiz, 121 miles southwest of the city of Tselinograd in Kazakhstan.

"We must say that until this time, all Soyuz craft had come down on land," Shatalov said on television. "This is the first time a craft has fallen onto the surface of a lake. In these conditions the crew showed the same courage and will at the

Buenos Aires explosion kills one, injures three

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—An explosion at a naval arsenal Sunday killed a seaman and injured three others only hours after a bomb ripped through a military social club in the capital and injured some 50 persons.

An official navy communique said an investigation was ordered into what it referred to as an accident at the arsenal. Adm. Emilio Massera, Argentina's top naval officer, made a personal visit to the arsenal, located at Zarate, 48 miles north of Buenos Aires.

The army said some 50 persons received "injuries of various consideration" from the blast during a movie at the military club. A communique said the explosion proved "the complete disregard of subversive elements for human life, in a way shocking to those who have a true respect for human rights."

The Montoneros, a guerrilla band linked to the far left of Argentina's Peronist movement, telephoned offices of news agencies and claimed responsibility for the military club blast.

Sunday was the anniversary of Loyalty Day which marked the original rise to power in Argentina in 1945 of Juan D. Peron. He died in 1974 after returning from exile to serve a third term as president, and was succeeded by his widow Isabel, who had served as vice president.

The armed forces ousted Mrs. Peron last March 24.

The military club bomb rocked downtown Buenos Aires around midnight.

The blast brought smoke and flames from second story windows of part of the building and destroyed windows in several nearby buildings. On weekend nights, the area is jammed with automobiles of people dining late in the district.

Army troops roared up to the scene in trucks and cordoned off the area. Security agents in civilian clothes waved sub-machine guns at spectators huddled in the doorway of a nearby hotel to keep out of the rain and told them to go inside or leave the area.

Prisoners free 7 hostages

THUNDER BAY, Canada (AP) — Seven hostages, including a jail matron and a receptionist, who were held by four knife-wielding prisoners at the Thunder Bay District Jail were freed unharmed early Sunday, police said.

The hostages were freed after being held several hours when an assistant crown attorney talked to the prisoners and heard their grievances. However, police said no promises were made to the inmates.

The four prisoners grabbed the hostages after a Saturday evening church service and herded them into the jail office where they were handcuffed, police said.

Earlier reports had said a nun was among the hostages, but the two women held were later identified by police as a matron and a receptionist.

A spokesperson for the inmates, who spoke to reporters by telephone, said they wanted a guarantee of no reprisals for their actions and a public inquiry into the prison system. They also demanded speedier court trials.

A guard at the Ontario prison near the north shore of Lake Superior telephoned reporters that the prisoners threatened to kill them if demands were not met.

Most of the inmates in the jail, part of the Ontario provincial prison system, waiting trial or transfer where.

HALTOM CITY, Tex. (AP) — One Citizens Band operator lay in a hospital bed in poor condition Sunday, another was dead and police were searching for a third man in a fight that began with two CB operators arguing over the airwaves.

Howard Collins, whose CB nickname is "Dirty Bird," was reported in poor condition Sunday with gunshot wounds in the chest and abdomen in a Worth hospital.

Don Hilder, 36, of Worth, whose nickname "Blue Goose," died late night.

Collins, who was spending the time from a radio at his home, challenged Hilder a fight, and, according to police, Hilder accepted,

Who would sign up for a date match program? Everybody! All kinds of people are signing up. Entire men's and women's teams, entire fraternities and sororities, entire dorm floors, and students in town.

Why would someone sign up? Why not? You can do it for a lark or to meet new friends.

How many matches will I get? Between 3 and 15. If we can't find three, we'll give you your money back.

How will the computer match me? It will compare your responses with all others to determine your closest matches on the basis of interests, attitudes, and appearances and background. You decide which is most important.

Do I have to go out with any of my matches? No. You are under no obligation to date your matches. If you don't like their voice on the phone, you never have to meet them.

How much will they know about me? They will only have your first name (or nick name) and phone number. You will have their first name and number. Your matches only know what you tell them.

Will my answers be kept confidential? Yes!! We have taken every step to insure that data will be seen only by keypunchers and that no data will be sold or released to another group. All forms will be destroyed after their use.

Can I specify how tall my matches should be? Yes. You can indicate your preference for your match's height, age, race, religion, and drinking, smoking, and drug habits.

How much does it cost? $3.50 is charged to process applications and it's less in a group.

Group rates? If you mail your form in with 5 other friends, the cost is only $2.75 each.

When is the deadline? Friday, October 22. So don't delay in sending your forms in.

This is the seventh in a series of articles on the 10 candidates for the MSU Board of Trustees. We are realists. None of us are illusions of wind. We just want to educate you about the Republican candidates who are not doing so well.

In spite of his somewhat optimistic comments about the MSU Board of Trustees, Human Rights 1st Lt. Phil Bellamy, who is running in the November general election, said he was not a "foremost" candidate for the "30-year-old" graduate student body.

Like the other student body members who have said they would represent the student body, Bellamy said he would not be a "foremost" candidate for the position.

But he said that he is running for the position to give voters a choice. He said he would like to see the Board of Trustees represent the student body and in the interests of the student body.

Candidate to represent students

By ANNE E. STUART
State News Staff Writer

This is the seventh in a series of articles on the 10 candidates for the MSU Board of Trustees. We are realistic. None of us has any illusions of winning. We just want to educate the public that the Republicans and Democrats are not doing the job. In spite of his somewhat pessimistic comments about his chances for the MSU Board of Trustees, Human Rights Party candidate Phil Bellfy was smiling as he explained the explanation of his running in the coming general election.

"I am first and foremost a student," the 30-year-old public graduate student said. "I would like to see a lot of other student candidates who have said that they would represent the people more than any other group. I would have them as my first priority, and then the trustees, too."

Bellfy said that he is running to give voters a Democratic alternative to the Republican candidates who promote special interests and interests of corporations."

Education is the main thrust of the HRP, he said, and added that he was not running just to give the party leverage if he should be elected.

Bellfy said that open meetings for the board would be a must in all cases, with agendas published well in advance and lengthy sessions prior to all meetings so that students, faculty, staff and citizens could voice their concerns.

"Because I am running as a student for the students, I consider executive sessions an injustice. I would boycott closed meetings unless the issue directly affected the students," he said.

Taking care of the Metro Squad, the Lansing narcotics investigation team which has recently been making campus arrests, would be Bellfy's first priority in the board.

"Metro Squad should have no jurisdiction on campus," Bellfy said.

Other candidates are running on platforms which include the installation of a full-time gynecologist at the University Health Center, an issue which Bellfy said is symptomatic of a larger sociological problem.

"The lack of a gynecologist is an injustice to the women on this campus and I would like to see one hired, but I think we should address the question of why women are treated as second-class citizens in this country," he said, adding that he helped found a campus feminist group when at Lake Superior State College.

Sports should not be a major priority of the board, Bellfy said.

"Intercollegiate sports breed a city-state mentality that is abhorrent to me," he said.

He would prefer to see the money directed into service areas other than athletics, but said it wasn't likely since the

Rent control proposal deserves defeat

Once again, the voters of East Lansing will be asked to decide for or against rent control. In a sense, it's almost a rerun of last year, when a similar proposal was voted down.

But a close look at the proposed amendment to the city charter reveals so many glaring faults and obvious flaws that we don't feel we can support it, no matter how valid the principle or concept of rent control may be. There is more than a housing problem in East Lansing, there is actually a housing emergency. There is about a 1.9 per cent vacancy rate, and according to federal guidelines, a rate under 5 per cent is critical.

This is how it would work: a Rent Control Commission, elected every two years, would regulate all rental units built before Jan. 1, 1976. Every rental unit would have to be registered at a fee of four-tenths of one per cent of the yearly rent demanded. The penalty for not registering would be over $100 a day.

The job of the board would then be to set maximum monthly rents at "reasonable and just rates," to be determined by the board. If a landlord wished to petition to raise the rent, he would petition at the cost of $5 per unit, i.e. in a building with 200 units, it would cost $1,000 to petition for a rent increase.

The board can also strictly stipulate all reasons for raising rent: nondelinquent property taxes, actual and reasonable operating expenses, maintenance and utility expenses.

One of the most obvious problems with the proposal is the termination date of 1980, which is also one of the major changes from last year's proposal.

But either the designers of the proposal weren't looking beyond the ends of their noses, or they realized that to terminate rent control after three years would only cause rents to skyrocket in 1980.

Another glaring defect would be the connection with the national Consumers Price Index (CPI). Rent increases and decreases would be closely tied to the CPI, yet a nation-wide CPI is unlikely to be an accurate indicator of the East Lansing economy which is a specialized community.

The way the system is set up, when the CPI goes up, the landlords could petition for a rent increase. It wouldn't necessarily be granted, but a petition would be allowed. However, no matter how much the CPI has risen, the maximum rent increase would be 5 per cent.

Any rent control proposition should be tied to a local CPI, as is done in the state of New Jersey, not a national one.

Thirdly, the composition of the rent control board leaves a lot to be desired. And when it all comes down to it, the success of the proposition depends on the makeup of the board.

The designers of the proposal have stipulated that a board member making under $15,000 a year would be paid $5 per hour for the time he spends working on board business, up to a maximum limit of $8,500. But a board member making over $15,000 a year would get no compensation for time spent.

The payment stipulation also seems to stack the board in favor of tenants, which would be as unfair as stacking it in favor of the landlords.

Lastly, and probably most importantly, rent control is only a short-term solution. Even the proponents of the proposal admit that it is by no means the ideal solution, and should only be considered a temporary measure.

We think the ill effects of the proposed amendment would be too serious to outweigh its good points. So until there are changes made to compensate for these problems, we urge a "no" vote on the rent control amendment proposal on the November ballot.

Hart earned trust

Phil Hart will not be remembered for one particular act of legislation or another, for he left his mark in a number of areas: anti-trust, toxic substance control, human rights.

What Phil Hart will be remembered for is his approach, his concern for the quality of human life in this country. Hart worried about the loss of individual freedom and dignity, whether through racial discrimination or submerpanies. Hart had a vision of what the real issues are for America in the future. That is what made Hart not a partisan figure, but a figure representing all the people.

Hart, most of all, gave those seeking public office in the state of Michigan the proper image of what a public official should be: selfless, concerned with everyone's welfare and not a special interest's, compassionate, idealistic.

With the recent loss of faith in our public officials, it was comforting to know that Phil Hart was different. He earned our trust, and made those around him cognizant of the great responsibility each owes to the public good.

Perhaps that is why both Senate candidates seeking to replace Hart have raised his image as one which they aspire to. It is certainly why we should expect those who try to fill his place to live up to his name, and why Michigan will miss his compassion in the U.S. Senate.

You can't judge a man by his cover

Bump, bump, bump. This bus ride sure is lousy... and boring. Maybe I'll start a conversation. "Excuse me, my name is Jim and I'm a student." Silence. Boy, that guy across the aisle must be deaf. Maybe if someone sits next to me... I wish this bus wouldn't take so much time at these out-of-the-way stops, it's... here comes someone. Great! He's going to sit here. "Hi, my name is Jim and I'm a student." "So?" "Well, I thought with such a boring bus ride and all, a conversation might liven things up a bit." "Okay. Talk." "Well, do you vote in Michigan?" "Yes, I'm from Grand Rapids." "Great, what do you think of the proposals?" "Which one?" "Mmmmm, how about proposal B? That would be a good one to discuss because most of the attention has been given to proposals A, C and D." "Proposal B?" "Yes, I think it should have been done back in 1972 to be consistent with the age of majority, don't you?" "I haven't really given it much thought. You know with classes and football practice and all I've been pretty busy." "Busy? Aren't you concerned with taking a stand and defending your position?" "I have a stand." "Good. What is it?" "Getting good grades and making every tackle for my team."

"But what about the issues?" "I'll get to them later when I have more concrete information. Right now there are more important things to think about." "This guy looks like he could be the center for the Lions. I should have guessed he wasn't the intellectual type." "I'm taking a light load this term so I can do some research and then I plan to... by the way, I don't think I caught your name." "Jerry." "Mine's Jim and I'm a..." "You said that already." "Oh, excuse me. Well, to get back to the original issue..." "Excuse me, but this is my stop coming up. I'd like to finish this conversation but I have to get to class." "Ah, wait. Just one last question, if you don't mind my asking." "No. Go ahead." "What are you going into?" "Well, law school looks good right now and maybe later, politics." "Law school? Politics?" "Yes, and maybe someday I'll sit in the White House. Catch you later." "That guy sure has some big dreams. Too bad he'll never make it. I feel sorry for people like that. I really do." "Bump, bump, bump." "This ride seems to get longer every day and after all the years I've been at this, my diploma doesn't seem to be getting any closer." "Maybe I'll get off this overstuffed handwagon and pick up something to eat at the corner store." "I haven't had any peanuts lately, and it seems as though I just got a craving for them."

LETTERS To the Editor

Bad taste
While I thought the article in the Oct. 12 paper about women bouncers was a somewhat human interest story, I was misled by the adjoining cartoon. It's tiring to continue to see sexist cartoons in a "supposed" open-minded student paper. (Do try a little harder.) Where "Campus Clatter" left off, this one picks up. Not missing, the cartoon is out of accord with the article (which stresses women as better bouncers in bars because they calm men down by talking them out of fights). The cartoon shows a man in a bar saying to another man, about a woman as a bouncer, "You're right Fred, women definitely make better bouncers." There is definitely no need for sketches (of articles) of this kind in the State News. You may gain a few ignorant sexist subscribers, but remember, half the student body is women.
Mary Kay Rathke

The executed terrorist's picture of Sept. 28, contrary to what some may say, was an outstanding photo of international reality. Please do not stop printing such quality photos in the narrow interest of "good taste."
John Rice
278 S. Wonders Hall

Losing teams
Do you have nothing better to write about than teams that lose? We have a fine women's cross country team that has won easily two weeks in a row without anything but late recognition from your paper. In contrast, the men's team had a whole article dedicated to how well they lost this weekend. I think these girls deserve some appreciation for their hard work and excellent performances.

Linda Gretkiewicz
Laura Silveri
521 Fee Apartments

Poor 'toon
I feel strongly compelled to reply to the Oct. 12 comic accompanying the article entitled "Job quite tough, bouncers reveal." I feel that there is no excuse for women in a supposedly academic environment to be subject to such blatant sexism.
I am personally disgusted and offended. I fail to understand your arrogance. How can you afford to insult 50 per cent of your readers? The State News in the past has been relatively nonsexist, I hope that this comic is not an indication of things to come.
Dawn M. Mills and seven others

Picture right
Shockingly offensive? To who? You? You must mean yourself because it certainly wasn't offensive to me. They should have shown the picture. I'm glad they did. Since words seem to fail to open some people's ears maybe pictures can open their eyes and the rest will follow suit. We need to know what's going on around the world and I don't mean some two-bit article that you have to read between the lines. I'm sure that picture made perfectly clear what's happening in our world and sometimes pictures like that are needed to enable people to grasp the bare truth in all its proportions. In so many cases people can sympathize, idealize but they can't realize a damn thing. They can't really feel the urgency of a situation. They aren't given the facts and they don't search for them. Some cop this attitude: "Oh, that's terrible what's happening to 'those people.'" Or: "They should really stop that 'over there.'" It's not 'over there!' It's right here! It's at home! It's everywhere! It affects all of us and we need to deal with it by at least taking that first step of realizing it's presence. We don't realize! You thought it was shockingly offensive? I rest my case.

ROXANNE BROWN
Black MSU students must seek 'U' offices

"Politics is the name of the game. Everything is done politically. We can't know what is being planned unless we are in on those discussions."
"We have to learn not only to vote, but how to get into the political clubhouse."
These are the urging, straightforward words of two black delegates, Hazel Dukes, D-New York, and Berna Plummer, R-Oregon.

Black MSU students as well must begin to seek offices and appointments within the University in order to secure proper representation and to make sure our needs are known and being taken into serious consideration.

Relying on someone already within the student political order is not sufficient. In order to grasp the mechanical system of this University and to be a part of the decision-making body, one must seek position within MSU's policy-making entities.

Many black students are unaware of the major governing bodies that control the political and economic powers here at MSU. It is time that black students, underclassmen especially, begin to understand and get involved in student government at dormitory level, within your college and at University level.

Dormitory representation is the Dormitory Council, which takes care of the major concerns of dormitory residents, budget allocation, space-use policies and parties. Each floor of the dormitory selects a representative, usually during the second week of fall term. Officers are elected spring term of the following year.

RHA is one of the most powerful organizations on campus. RHA's major concerns are: overcrowded dormitory conditions, establishing rules and regulations that govern dormitory residents and providing entertainment, such as campus movies.

ASMSU is the most powerful student governing body on campus. It is concerned with evaluations and recommendation of all University policy, the welfare and rights of students and the coordination of organizations.

The undergraduate student government of MSU consists of a 15-member governing body called the student board. ASMSU elections are held during spring term registration.

There are more University councils, committees and organizations that I'm sure each of us is aware of, but now those of us who have something worthwhile to contribute have to step forward to help strengthen blacks' place within each of the University's governmental structures.

If we are dissatisfied with decisions that are made affecting the black student body, it's time to change them. Complaining about the system and believing there is nothing one can do to change it is a defeatist attitude.

As this election year draws to a close and we watch candidates campaigning harder than ever while the final weeks before Nov. 2 run out, I'm sure we've been able to grasp the importance of political power, if nothing else.

Trying to make our way into the political arena on a national or statewide level is nearly impossible for us as students, now. But, it is not impossible, with black student body backing, to gain needed political representation right here at MSU.

Eat Your Heart Out

By Jim Hightower
Vintage, New York
$1.85 355 pp.

By JOE KNIPPENBERG

It seems like most people think of food only in terms of the sensual pleasure it might offer them when they eat it. I think we're fortunate that Jim Hightower, former director of the Agribusiness Accountability Project and author of "Eat Your Heart Out," isn't one of these people. In this book Hightower guides the reader through the food processing maze from farmer to consumer. He paints a very chilling and not so even handed portrait of the food processing industry in that he highlights what he sees as the negative aspects of the American food industry. Yet, in the absence of any credible defense from the food industry, the publication of "Eat Your Heart Out" in paperback form and the NBC special "What Is This Thing Called Food?" were the two most important, enlightening, and frightening food related events of the past summer.

Since the meteoric food price increases in 1973, some people have become very conscious of how much the food they're eating costs. They've wondered whether the prices they paid in the supermarket were justified by production costs and by acceptable profit margins. Any inquiry addressed to the food industry on this issue brought the reply that profit margins were higher than average, and little else, except for a deluge of public relations literature. Without much honest industry contribution to the discourse, Congressional investigations of the farmer consumer price spread have uncovered little earthshaking news. Whatever efforts that were made to look at the food processing industry were fragmented and of little use.

Enter Jim Hightower with his attempt to put together for us what pieces of the puzzle that were available. His attempt shows us that there are indeed many spalling bits of information about our food that we wished weren't really true.

Take, for example, the potato. In 1974, the price per pound for a 20-pound bag of potatoes was about 10 cents. Frozen French fries cost about 35 cents a pound. Potato chips cost about $1.10 a pound. However, the crowning glory is the "Pringle's" potato chip. As Hightower says: "Rather than slicing and frying potatoes, like other potato chip manufacturers, [Procter and Gamble] peels the potatoes, cooks them, mashes them and removes the water from them. Using this dehydrated mash, the company then adds water to them, adds a good dose of chemicals . . . adds sugar and Vitamin C, sprinkles in some salt and pours the whole mess into molds that are shaped precisely as hyperbolic parabolas. They're not finished yet. The concoction moves in its molds along a conveyor belt through hot oil, which solidifies the stuff into what P&G advertises as 'perfectly shaped chips.'" For this wonder of food technology, you pay around 50 per cent more than for regular chips.

If you're not satisfied with this example, look at the breakfast cereal industry. Robert Lewis, National Secretary of the National Farmers Union, recently complained to a House subcommittee that while farmers were receiving under $3 per bushel of wheat, Quaker Oats was charging around $110 per bushel for puffed wheat — essentially wheat and air. Lewis' point was not that profits on puffed wheat were excessive but that 1) we don't know what the profits are and 2) there must be a more efficient and cost-effective way to feed people.

"Eat Your Heart Out" is a stab — albeit heavy handed and one-sided — in that direction. Hightower tends to be very harsh with the food industry; the problem is that we don't know whether or not his harshness is justified. Perhaps his attack will incite food processors to be less close-mouthed about their business. If they have nothing to hide, they have nothing to lose from being forthright and honest with consumers.

The difficulty and pain of being Armenian

Passage to Ararat

By Michael Arlen
Ballantine, New York
$1.75, 216 pp.

By BOBOURLIAN

Mount Ararat: the probable cradle of Noah's ark and the spiritual nucleus of the Armenian soul and nation.

The Armenians are an ancient race, having their beginnings 5,000 years ago and existing at present as a relic mist settled throughout the modern world.

The story of the Armenians is a tragic one. Fate and practicality played the silence of these gentle people between tribes and nations of warriors and plunderers — the Turks among the most prominent.

In the last quarter of the 19th century and up through WWI, there was a concerted effort on the part of Turkey to settle the "Armenian Question" once and for all by eliminating the race.

Exterminations, deportations, mass slaughter — all sanctioned by the officials of the Turkish government — ensued. Public policy approvingly backed collective murder and the policymakers insured that the descriptions which reached the civilized world were distortions — at best drenched with confusion so that the internal holocaust could go on without interruption. The toll: 1.5 million dead, the survivors cast as unwanted dust to the wind to settle where the currents of the world would allow, or to die as the times would mandate.

Michael Arlen's Passage to Ararat is a piece of literary art in the most holistic sense of the word. What he writes is not purely art in the abstract, for it is an intensely personal journey involving a myriad of life's dimensions.

Arlen recognizes, as do many, that the destruction visited upon the Armenians by the Turks has cut a profound and unhealing wound on the sociology of the Armenian people. For some reason which is unique to the Armenians, the hurt and the anger toward the Turks has yet to subside.

He observes that the Jews have dealt remarkably well with the specter of the Six Million, yet the bitterness of the Armenian toward the Turk lives with, coats, and in large part, determines the American psyche.

Arlen is the son of another writer by the same name. His father wrote romantic novels during the 1920s. "The Green Hat" is among his most famous, reputed to have led to the suicide of Stalin's wife.

His father, who changed his name from Kouyoumjian, always hid his Armenian background, as if ashamed or embarrassed by it. Arlen always thought, Arlen grew up a conventional English boy, and a conventional American young man. He never really knew what his ethnicity meant or represented. But he had heard the stories of the massacres, and knew somewhat of the sadness and despair of the Armenians.

But he was not able to grasp or understand the nature of the Armenians, since he didn't know himself what it was to actually be one.

This, then, is precisely what Arlen's journey is all about. He seeks to find out what happened to the Armenians, he searches to discover what the Armenians are thinking and feeling, he travels to learn what it is to be an Armenian, and to find out whether he is.

In an authentic sense, Arlen's journey is an existential one — he shares with us his search for a culture, his role in that culture and its effect upon him. It is deeply personal, and far from being a book limited to Armenians, it has universal value for all critically thinking individuals in search of self.

Arlen's book has been hailed as a masterful blend of history and experience. It is in fact more. The history Arlen imparts — a wondrous job given the passions and cynicism which have come to be involved — is woven into the book piece by piece, conveyed to us as he discovered it in his journey and placed order of relevance to the development of his feelings, his thought, his idea of being Armenian.

He dwells in considerable detail on his father, a cool, detached man toward whom his feelings were ambivalent. He never understood what it was his father was fleeing, what it was that was copiously covered up, what it was from which his father had tried to free him. It was only near the end of his journey that he discovered the inner burning that his father — like himself and other Armenians he had grown so close to — contained.

He deals extensively with his guide Sarkis, a seeming stranger who, not simply representing the figure of an official guide, probed into the mind and soul of Arlen. Sarkis embodies in the book the spirit of the Armenian — proud, capable, strong but cursed with what Arlen terms "craziness," the festering wound, the scar tissue transmitted seemingly genetically from the suffering generations to the modern.

Arlen takes with him and makes use of each and every tool available on his journey: the present, the past, his feelings and emotions, his acquaintances, his analytical abilities and above all — his self honesty; he employs psychology, sociology, religion, politics, philosophy — on and on in a desperate groping which tells us that, for him, knowing and finding out was a matter of inexplicable urgency.

Reading Passage to Ararat, we are the recipients of what seems to be a genuine communicates the moment's intensity.

But I knew that this time it was different, and as I stood there I knew it would always afterward be different (as it has been). For the hand I felt . . . was the hand of a man which I had briefly held in my own one afternoon in New York, the hand of my father dying . . . And I had not known how to grip him back. But here his hand was again. I felt that I held it in mine. I felt that somehow I had brought him here — to this place. I didn't know what else I felt or knew, but I wept, large tears streaming down my face.

Toward the end of his journey, Arlen truly change in a serious man. The first time Arlen travels to the monument to the victims of the Turks in Soviet Armenia, he was unable to feel, even though Sarkis implored that he evoke the emotion which "a good Armenian" should feel.

Sarkis said: "To be an Armenian is to have this intolerable weight of sadness on one's soul. That is what one of our Armenian poets said. Is it not true?"

"Think of the Armenians who died," said Sarkis, almost in a whisper. "Think of what it is to be an Armenian."

For a moment, we looked at one another. I could find no meaning in his glance or mine. I thought, I have come this far — so close — but I seem unable to go further, to make the connection.

But later in the journey, Arlen has made the connection. They return to the monument, and his writing, though not heavy, understands what it is "to be Armenian." The Turks, unlike the Germans in WWII, had never accepted the guilt of the massacres. Hundreds of thousands had been shot, clubbed, hanged and slaughtered; hundreds of thousands dispersed around the world. But the Turks — and even to this day — have never issued an apology, never made reparations, never so much as acknowledged that the horrors had actually taken place.

Thus the Armenians, Arlen finds, are left with nobody to forgive, nobody's apology to accept, no admission of guilt, but a lingering trauma that had no vent, no escape and no route of resolution. It remains still, pent up inside and transferred from generation to generation.

For that was the curse of genocide: death took the victims, but over the survivors settled a mark, a "fallout," of having been hated unto death.

TOP OFF YOUR BACHELOR OF SCIENCE DEGREE WITH A COMMISSION IN THE COAST GUARD.

It's time you put your hard work to good use. In the Coast Guard. We're looking for engineers — electronic, chemical, electrical, civil and mechanical. We've got the work that takes their know-how. And we know how to make that work mean more than just any job.

There are no bit parts in the role of a Coast Guard engineer. Once you've finished officer's candidate school — 18 weeks in Yorktown, Virginia — we give you all the job you can handle. With advanced equipment and technology. And plenty of responsibility.

Our job is getting bigger. We're still saving lives (by the thousands every year). But we're also charged with protecting our maritime environment. Regulating the new 200 mile fishery conservation zone. Intercepting narcotics traffic. And monitoring vessel traffic in major ports across the country.

It's all good work that takes good men and women to do it. And what you get for what you give is substantial. A starting salary of over $10,000 that can increase by over 40% in your first three years with normal promotion and seniority raises. Free medical and dental care. A housing allowance. Tuition assistance for off duty education. Thirty days vacation a year. And a generous retirement.

A career as a Coast Guard officer is one way you can top off your B.S. degree and get ahead. If you've got a mind to accept a commission, we've engineered a good future for you. For more details, see your college placement office for an appointment with our recruiter when he visits your campus.

Our representative will be here Oct. 22.

Fraternity presents posthumous award

Sally Zwarensteyn, wife of the late MSU professor Hendrik Zwarensteyn, accepted an award in his behalf Saturday night. A plaque was given to Zwarensteyn at the Alpha Kappa Psi Professional Business Fraternity's homecoming dinner. The award was presented to Zwarensteyn in appreciation of her husband's outstanding service to the fraternity. Hendrik Zwarensteyn was a member of Alpha Kappa Psi, and in 1969, was awarded the "Faculty of the Year" award from the fraternity. Zwarensteyn, professor of business law, was killed in an automobile accident last August. In memory of the late professor, MSU and the Rotary Club have jointly established a scholarship in his name. The Zwarensteyn Rotary MSU Scholarship will be awarded to pre-law students in the College of Business.

Carter's speech gets cool review

DETROIT (UPI) — Jimmy Carter's 16-point plan for tackling crime drew a cool response from business leaders in the city with the highest per capita rate of violent crime in the nation. Carter's half-hour speech to the Economic Club of Detroit Friday was rarely interrupted by applause, though he paused at several points as if to invite it. The crowd, estimated at 2,500, gave the former Georgia governor brief, polite applause at the end of his talk. "Nospecifics," rumbled one man in a three-piece pinstriped suit. "Too vague."

After the speech and a meeting with a small group of Democrats, Carter left for Kansas City, Kan.

Carter's speech on crime, delivered at the downtown convention center that was the site of a major teenage gang disruption Aug. 15, was billed as a major policy statement. He lashed out at Nixon-Ford administration crime programs, saying they have wasted billions of dollars.

Carter said crime control is not a question of politics, race or economics, but "a question of leadership."

have a right to make policy decisions that are going to affect their lives," he said in summary.

United Way campaign kicks off campus drive

The Capital Area United Way Fund Drive begins its 1977 campus campaign today, hoping to reach a goal of $221,227. The pitch is no longer the hard-sell campaign, according to organizers. Each University employ will receive an information brochure, a pledge card and a return envelope. This way the decision of how much to give — if at all — is entirely a personal matter.

Last year's campus mail campaign brought in $191,000 of the anticipated goal of $208,000. Four thousand of the 9,000 persons contacted in the mail responded.

"The real hope and ability to meet a goal is in broad participation, rather than large individual gifts," said Richard Bernitt, DPS director and United Way chairperson.

Students are not being solicited, because of unsuccessful attempts in the past, Bernitt said. He believes campus campaigning organized by the students would provide a successful student drive.

The United Fund Drive began in Detroit around the time of WWII, when all worthwhile charities banded together in a nucleus effort to solicit contributions. MSU has been involved in the drive for over 26 years.

The Capital Area United Way Campaign runs through Nov. 4. Bernitt says he hopes University employes will respond to the mailing within two to three weeks.

Candidate concerned for poor

Margaret Wright, the Michigan Human Rights party HRP candidate for president, apologized for the absence of campaign buttons and a brass band breaking into "Happy include abolishing the CIA, halting nuclear arms buildup and "cutting out" the Pentagon. "We have enough materials to kill people four times over, and we think once is enough," she said.

However, Wright said the primary party issue is full employment and she added that increased revenue for job opportunities would be garnered from closing tax loopholes.

Community control of health care was cited by Wright as lacking under the Republican and Democratic parties.

Wright said that as a mother of three children, she favors abortion as a "woman's right to control of her body."

Wright, who calls herself an optimist and says she "refuses to wear the plastic smile of a candidate," lists her qualifications for the presidency as having been discriminated against for being poor, black and a woman.

"I know a great deal about the United States, especially the sad part. I know the seamier side of life," she said of her work experience as a welder and riveter for Lockheed Aircraft Co.

A native of Pontiac, Wright said she accepted the nomination of the People's party because she "has always been an activist."

The People's party, a coalition of socialist/populist political parties across the country, is on the Michigan ballot as the HRP. The HRP needs one per cent of the Michigan vote to remain on the ballot.

Wright describes the ticket of herself and Dr. Benjamin

Spock, the vice-presidential candidate, as a "socialist, feminist, democratic ticket."

Spartans tumbled 14-10 Rogers accepts blame

By TOM SHANAHAN
State News Sports Writer

An interception, a penalty and a pass that fell three inches short of a first down were all deadly to MSU's chances of picking up its second victory as Minnesota took a 14-10 win.

But MSU coach Darryl Rogers says he will take all the blame in the Spartans' fourth loss as MSU slipped to 1-4 overall and 0-3 in the Big Ten.

"I'm very, very disappointed in myself and let's just leave it at that," Rogers said.

Looking more disappointed than after any other game, Rogers explained the reason for his apparent frustration.

"I can't stand to lose. I hate it and it doesn't make any difference who we lose to. I really felt we could beat Minnesota so I have to take the blame," he said.

MSU started off the homecoming game showing a lot of enthusiasm and took a 3-0 lead on Hans Nielsen's 29-yard field goal with less than a minute to go in the first quarter.

Minnesota rallied twice in the second quarter within two and a half minutes to get all 14 of its points. The first score came after quarterback Tony Dungy completed a pass for 49 yards. Jim Perkins then scored two plays later from the two.

After the kick off, MSU quarterback Ed Smith passed on the first play and Minnesota linebacker Steve Stewart reached up and intercepted the low pass at the MSU 27.

After being stood up by one hit, the muscular Perkins still was able to step into the end zone for his second touchdown on the sixth play of the go ahead and winning drive.

MSU didn't come back with a touchdown until the fourth quarter, when tackle Melvin Land forced the scrambling Dungy fumble the ball. MSU's Larry Savage fell on the ball at Minnesota 40.

Fullback Jim Early, who came in after Levi Jackson had broken his knee, then carried the ball four times in the five plays. Early broke up the middle for a 16-yard score and ended up with 138 yards rushing on 26 tries.

The Spartans, now trailing 14-10 with 12 minutes remaining, depend on the defense to get the ball back. It did twice, but offense wasn't able to come up with the big play.

MSU had two chances to score that were foiled. The Spartans drove to Minnesota's 37 on one drive in the fourth quarter, were stopped when Smith was sacked for a 10 yard loss on the drive.

On fourth and 14 of the same drive, MSU punted and caught Gophers with 12 men on the field, which would have been good for a 15-yard penalty. But a penalty for tackling the Minnesota receiver when he had signaled for a fair catch nullified any possibilities.

Later at the Gopher 40, with three minutes to go, a third pass from Smith to Mike Cobb fell incomplete. Smith then threw a swing pass to Rich Baes, who was knocked out of bounds gaining 5 yards and 9 inches of the six yards MSU needed.

The Gopher defense then gathered around the referee to his placement of the ball and were jubilant when it learned he held MSU and preserved Minnesota's fifth win.

For the day MSU had 254 yards rushing on 51 attempts and 138 yards passing on Smith's 11-19 performance — a flip-flop from last week's U-M game.

MSU tailback Rich Baes bursts up the middle of the Minnesota line in Saturday's game. The senior Baes and fullback Jim Early led an MSU rushing attack that had one of its most effective days of the year despite the 14-10 loss.

Student spirit high

'U' commemorates homecoming; many take part in events

By MICHAEL SAVEL
State News Staff Writer

The only niche in the return of MSU's homecoming celebration was the disappointing performance of the football team Saturday.

"Homecoming was a raging success," said Janet Begrow, chairperson of the homecoming committee. "The response and enthusiasm was much more than any of us anticipated."

Spartan fans Thursday night proved that tradition and spirit are not dead at MSU.

A crowd of about 8,000 fans yelled and screamed for the team at a bonfire and rally, despite the cold temperatures and high winds.

The University Administration demonstrated its support by cancelling the board of trustees' meeting Thursday night to attend the rally.

President Wharton announced the winners of the homecoming king and queen contest.

Laurie Scatterday from Asher Student Foundation and John McAuliff from Birefield Apartments were the winners.

"This is the most outstanding display of student spirit and good organization of an effort of support and enthusiasm I've seen around all my years at MSU," said MSU Trustee Pat Carrigan, D-Farmington Hills. "And that goes back quite a few years."

ABC television was at the bonfire to film an upcoming documentary on the homecoming festivities and University in general.

"WXYZ is here because they believe in MSU and they are going to put a film together about a great student body, a great university and a great athletic program," Wharton said.

Five groups braved heckling from the noisy crowd as they demonstrated their spirit by yelling out cheers and performing dance routines to the theme of beat the Gophers during the "Yell Like Hell" contest.

The "Yaymakers" from Yakeley Hall won a Spartan toilet seat for their first-place performance even though the crowd clearly preferred the routine of Delta Chi Fraternity.

Homecoming festivities continued Friday night with a sold-out performance by Bob Seger and "Heart" in Munn Ice Arena. During the long delay in between acts, the homecoming king and queen were introduced to the restless crowd before a rousing roar of boos and heckles.

A wealth of spirit was demonstrated Saturday morning before the football game.

A noisy crowd of about 1,000 people had free coffee and donuts and cheered the team on during a pre-game pep rally on the Landon Hall field.

Ten fraternities and sororities displayed their floats Saturday morning, and a huge model of a gopher built by Phi Homecoming king and queen Laurie Scatterday and Timothy McAuliff.

State News Dole Atkins

Gamma Delta with the saying "Gopher broke" on it won first place.

Second place went to Theta Chi Fraternity and Kappa Delta Sorority for their model of a huge slot machine with footballs and the Spartan insignia in place of the lemons and dollar signs.

The final display of spirit, the window painting contest, was won by the first floor of West Holden Hall.

There were a total of 20 entries, with Campbell Hall taking second and the third floor of North Case Hall taking third.

The festivities climaxed with a block party on M.A.C. Avenue Saturday night.

The crowd of 2,000 protected itself from the cold by sipping booze from flasks as they rocked and rolled to the band "Gabriel."

State News/Robert Kozloff

First prize for the homecoming floats went to fraternity Phi Gamma Delta and sorority Kappa Alpha Theta for their broken-up gopher with fractured arm, leg and tooth. The float took a full day of working and partying to build but effort payed off as float judges, including Mrs. Clifton Wharton, gave it top honors in competition.

College of Education studying Michigan employment policies

By SUZIE ROLLINS
State News Staff Writer

A thorough investigation has been launched by MSU's College of Education to examine employment policies and training services in Michigan.

The study, which started four weeks ago, is called the "Education-Employment Policy Project" and is comprised of an eight-member team of specialists in higher education, vocational education, manpower management, political science, labor and industrial relations and urban planning. A broad spectrum of educators and policymakers from throughout the state will also assist as consultants.

The goals of the project are to determine how many corporations in both the private and public sectors offer training programs; to find out what services are duplicated, or where there is a lack of coordination or sharing of data; to see which groups do not offer programs that should be offered under the law; and, finally, to identify a more effective system for providing employment and training services to the people who need them, R. Lynn Kelley, project coordinator, said.

"Since the 1960s a whole host of manpower programs spurred up in the country," Kelley said. "We have to first establish how many there are."

The team has divided its efforts and are contacting people directly in their respective fields. They are using previous articles in the newspapers, library resources and word-of-mouth communication to aid them in their study.

"We'll talk to anyone who will talk to us," Kelley said.

Some of the typical public agencies that will be studied are the state Dept. of Education, state institutions of higher education, vocational schools, the Dept. of Labor and the Dept. of Civil Service. Virtually all state agencies that have any employment programs will be studied, Kelley added.

Labor unions and corporation training programs in the private sector will also be delved into.

The project is funded under a $200,000 per year grant from the Bureau of Employment and Training of the Michigan Dept. of Labor. The project is expected to run for two years.

Based on the group's findings, it will identify one or more model systems which could provide better coordination of interagency activity and better service for those persons involved.

The final phase of the project will involve pilot testing of the model systems, which will be carried out in several urban school districts.

According to C. Robert Muth, executive director of the project, "The Education-Employment Policy Project is the first of its kind in Michigan in which both employment service agencies and all training agencies are being analyzed in relationship to each other."

McCarthy laments communication loss

WASHINGTON (AP) — "I can't get my views to the American public," independent presidential candidate Ed McCarthy said on a nationally televised show Sunday.

McCarthy said on ABC's "Issues and Answers" program that this lack of communication was the reason he demanded TV time equal to that given other candidates including President Ford and Democratic challenger Jimmy Carter.

"I'm not getting media attention because my program is positive," said the former Democratic senator from Minnesota who is on the Nov. 2 ballot in about 30 states.

McCarthy, who unsuccessfully sought the Democratic presidential nomination in 1968, said a poll done for a campaign organization showed him with about 12 percent of the November vote.

"I don't know which is the better man," McCarthy said of Ford and Carter. "I don't know what Carter is for."

MORE THAN JUST FOOTBALL

Saturday game exciting

By CATHY CHOWN
State News Sports Writer

It was a near perfect football game Saturday at Spartan Stadium. The Spartans were full of excitement for the upcoming event and 56,166 fans and students were expected to attend the day of football and all the trimmings. Despite MSU's 14-10 loss to Minnesota, spectators saw an exciting game and were entertained at the same time. The Spartan marching band's spirit was in full force, as the band added to the fun. A group of ex-band members from around the country, with MSU from as far away as California, added their own touch to the halftime and game shows. The oldest Spartan band member went back to 1915 to 1918. Part of the band's tradition every week is a race between MSU flag and the opponent's flag at the end of the quarter. For this game, Minnesota flag was mobbed by a pack of Boy Scouts, which crowd enjoyed. In addition to the band's fine performance, small groups of the band circled the field and serenaded the crowd. Coach Darryl Rogers said he likes the band, and said that the band is a "very important part of the program." The team enjoys the color and excitement that the band adds. A new addition to the Spartan spirit this year is the card section, the likes of which haven't been seen for years. In its second performance of the year, the group showed off its picture-making abilities, and added much-welcomed loud cheering. Homecoming itself was rejuvenated this year and the king and queen fit in well with the day's activities. The fans themselves seemed up for the game, yelling the "Go Green, go White" cheer louder than usual. The student crowd on the east side of the stadium began swaying in unison as the band played the Faygo pop theme song. They did not seem to mind the cold, but what is a good football game anyway without a little chill in the air? An announcement in the press box at the opening of the game said that according to NCAA rules, the press box is not a cheering section. Violators will be removed. For the first time this year, there was cheering and yelling in the press box. Even the security police got caught up in the excitement and cheered. The sports editor of the Minnesota student newspaper, sitting in the press box, said he could not believe everything that was going on at the game. He said, "We have nothing like this at our home games." The football teams on the field put on a good show, too, and considering both teams wanted to win, it was a close game, accounting for most of the excitement in the stands. Minnesota put on a good passing game, while MSU ran the ball well, a switch from previous MSU games this season.

The excitement at Spartan home games never seems to run out and there are still three more home games left this season.

Field hockey team wins 3 and crown

MSU's women's field hockey team, now 5-2, played poorly in a regular season game with Western Michigan University Thursday, but came back on the weekend to play some of its best hockey of the year and capture the Indiana University Invitational title. MSU won all three of its games in the round robin tourney at Indiana. They stopped OSU 3-1, Purdue 2-0 and host Indiana 2-1 in the final game.

Indiana. Her second goal, scored with five minutes left, was the clincher in the 2-1 game. Lyon ended up with six goals for the weekend. After the weekend Ulibarri was obviously pleased with the team's play and commented that they are playing much better hockey than they did earlier in the year. The team's next game is at Eastern Michigan University Tuesday.

White icers beat Green 4-2

MSU started the long weekend off sluggishly as coach Diane Ulibarri said the team did not play its game in the 2-1 loss to Western. But, starting with the tournament's opening game, Ulibarri was praising her team for playing its type of game. MSU topped OSU in the opener by scoring all three of its goals in the first half. Nancy Lyon scored twice and Patty Lawson added the third goal.

It was like watching a good western on the late, late movie. The men in white ran into problems early in the show, but finished as heroes of the Green and White hockey game with a 4-2 victory over a diehard Green squad. The Green squad made up mostly of freshmen and newcomers, jumped out front 2-0 with a first period goal by Bill Hourigan and an early second period tally by Darryl DiPace. Dennis Austin finally scored for the veteran White squad at 2:15 in the second period before his teammates exploded in the final stanza with three goals. Paul Lubanski, center Dave Kelly and Mike Slack scored those goals that gave the White squad its third period victory.

"The first half we played brilliant and played as a team," Ulibarri said. "We played the best since I've been here," she added. In the second round, MSU recorded a shutout with a 2-0 win over Purdue. Lyon continued her hot streak over the weekend by picking up both goals, one in the first half and one in the second. Lyon again scored both goals in the final game against Indiana won its second consecutive soccer "Big Ten Classic" this weekend, but left East Lansing with its fifth place final ranking and top spot in Midwest slightly tarnished. The Hoosiers ran up against a couple of inspired teams as held off OSU 4-2 in the championship game Sunday afternoon by Wisconsin 2-1 in first round Saturday. The consolation game MSU came out of a three-game losing streak by topping Wisconsin 4-1. The Spartans lost to Indiana in the opening round 3-1. Ulibarri without leading scorer Angelo DiBernardo and midfielder Charlie Faykus, were both injured, Indiana led little of the finesse needed to its national and final rankings.

The next game for MSU is an away clash with Spring Arbor College Wednesday.

They got into more than we expected," said Indiana head coach Jerry Yeagley. "We came in confident." A lot of credit goes to Ohio State and Wisconsin. They brought it to us."

Hoosiers grabbed a lead in the championship when Dave Shelton and Glenn scored at 8:10 and of the first half.

MSU shortened the lead with a goal by Valade Janakievski at 10:10 to rejuvenate the Buckeye despite a 2-1 halftime lead.

Michael Freitag stretched Hoosier margin to two goals when he scored at 21:48 of the second half, but Javier Casanova brought OSU right back scoring just 29 seconds after a free kick rebounded off the Indiana goalie.

Hoosiers raised their record to 8-0-1, but failed to make the final. The winning goal against MSU was scored when a fullback misplayed a pass from his teammate, and rolled into the Wisconsin goal.

MSU got back on the right side in its consolation game over Wisconsin, as Tom Rom came out of the locker room and his team's scoring by tallying all four goals. Spartans had only scored once in the previous three games.

Spartans' season record stands at 4-3-1. OSU is 4-2-1 and Wisconsin 5-4-2.

State News/Maggie Walker
In what started out as a promising morning ended in bitter defeat for Spartan harrier Herb Lindsay (564), who lost his final home meet when U-M's Greg Meyer nipped him at the finish. It was Lindsay's first loss on the MSU course in three seasons of running. The U-M squad went on to defeat the Spartans, 27-30, but MSU managed a 25-32 win over Minnesota in the tri-meet Saturday.

Redskins trample Lions, 20-7

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Washington's Redskins, booted last week in defeat, came up with key interceptions by Pat Fischer and Joe Lavender and added five quarterback sacks Sunday as the Redskins defeated the Detroit Lions 20-7. The interceptions by Fischer and Lavender led to a field goal and a touchdown after a first half scoreless tie. In addition, Joe Theismann, subbing for sore-armed Bill Kilmer, passed for a touchdown as the Redskins raised their record to 4-2 after two straight losses. Fischer, a 36-year-old and Lavender led to a field goal and a touchdown after a first half scoreless tie. In addition, Joe Theismann, subbing for sore-armed Bill Kilmer, passed for a touchdown as the Redskins raised their record to 4-2 after two straight losses. Fischer, a 36-year-old veteran of the "Over the Hill Gang" which allowed 33 points in each of the two defeats, picked off a Greg Landry pass on the Detroit 34 in the third period and Mark Moseley kicked a 42-yard field goal for the first points of the game. On Washington's next possession, Theismann guided the Redskins 76 yards to a touchdown, hitting Grant for a 40-yard gain and then again from the eight for the score. Lavender's interception late in the third quarter came after the kickoff on the Lion 22. On the first play of the final period,

Mike Thomas ripped over for a three-yard score. Moseley later added a 45-yard field goal before Detroit averted a shut-out with 51 seconds left on a 56-yard TD pass from Joe Reed to Ray Jarvis.

Meanwhile, Washington's front four, which had only one sack in its last three games, dropped Landry and Reed five times for a net loss of 57 yards.

The men's intramural Turkey Trot is scheduled for Wednesday on Old College Field at 4:30 p.m. All interested teams or individual runners can still sign up for the 1.5-mile race at 215 Men's IM Bldg.

The fall term handball doubles tournament will begin at 7 p.m. Thursday at the Men's IM Building. All doubles teams who sign up for the single elimination tournament should report to the reservation desk for court assignments.

Seeger, 'Heart' energize audience

By JUDY PHILLIPS
State News Reviewer

Bob Seger and "Heart" wired their audience with currents of rock and roll Friday, pumping sparks of energy into even the furthest reaches of Munn Ice Arena.

"Heart" opened the sold-out show with a song off its current album, "Dreamboat Annie." Dressed in a black satin dress, lead vocalist Ann Wilson delivered rapid runs on her flute, almost sounding like a female Ian Anderson.

Lead guitarist Nancy Wilson's 11-year guitar background became apparent in the clear classical tones of "Heart's" next song, "Dreamboat Annie," the title cut of the group's current album. The group followed with "Magazine," the title cut of its new album, due for release on Valentine's Day.

"Magazine" is a heavier album. When we did 'Dreamboat Annie,' our band wasn't really together. Now we have the band together and we're stronger," Ann explained.

"Heart" seemed pretty to gether Friday night, though, and it couldn't have asked for a better audience.

Revvng up the audience, "Heart" generated momentum with "Magic Man" which carried into a dynamic version of their final song, "Crazy on You." Nancy provided the fast-driving beat on acoustic guitar as Ann's silky voice became more powerful, punching out the emotion-filled lyrics.

"Heart" exploded with a rhythmic energy during the encore, a charged version of Led Zeppelin's "Rock and Roll." In the audience someone held up a sign saying "Heart We're Crazy on You."

"It got pretty crazy in the end. It was neat having the excitement," Nancy said after the concert. "We took the sign to hang in our manager's office."

"It's been very hard since the throat," Ann added. "But my voice functions a lot better when we're on the road because it loosens up."

Backstage sound and light men hustled around with last-minute preparations for Bob Seeger.

All grins, Seeger bounded up the stage stairs, ready to greet the anxious crowd of 5,000 people.

There seems to be a magic quality about Seeger, at least to Michigan audiences, which acts as an invisible force, pulling his audience members up, clapping and involving them in his show. And his night at Munn was no different.

On his first song, "Nutbush City Limit," Seeger had the audience members up, clapping and singing, making them a vital part of the concert.

Seeger basically followed the format of "Live Bullet," running through "Back in '72," "Travelin' Man," "Beautiful Loser," "Katmandu," "Turn the Page" and "Heavy Music." He had the entire audience singing "Ramblin' Gambler Man."

For an hour and a half, Seeger's husky voice combined with the hard driving beat of Charlie Martin's drumming and smooth leads which rolled off Drew Abbott's guitar to produce the Detroit sound of rock and roll Seeger is known for.

Seeger also did two cuts off his new album, "Nightmoves," which will be released this Wednesday. The title cut is a slow ballad, Seeger style and the other was a Seeger rendition of Chuck Berry's "Marilou."

Wearing MSU jackets, Seeger and the band came back for three encores, each one building momentum for Seeger's final song, "Get Out of Denver." The tempo of the song seemed to pull people out of their seats into the aisles, dancing, clapping and singing. With Alto Reed, saxophonist, on top of the speaker towers and Seeger kicking out the lyrics on stage, they shook the very foundations of the ice arena.
