mood in the suite as "great." "We're going to win," she added. Anderson said Carter asked him to draft a victory statement but had not asked for a loser's speech. In Michigan, Ford came from behind to capture the 21 electoral votes in his home state early Wednesday. With 57 per cent of the state tally in, Ford had a narrow one per cent lead over his Democratic opponent with 50 per cent to Carter's 49 per cent of the vote.

Michigan's heavy voter turnout had appeared to threaten Ford's chances of winning on his home turf, but it apparently worked in his favor in the diehard Republican districts outstate and a number of suburbs where ticket-splitting abounds.

Both Ford and Carter closed out their campaigns in Michigan Monday night hoping to win over the large chunk of voters classified in final pre-election polls as undecided

Ford, the first Michigan man ever to serve as President voted with his wife Betty Tuesday morning in his hometown of Grand Rapids and broke down in tears during the dedication of a wall of murals at Kent County Airport depicting the high points of his career.

Despite dismal election returns for Republican senate candidate Marvin Esch, optimism still prevailed in the early morning hours among the Ford supporters committee's headquarters in the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Dearborn.

"I know Ford is going to win," said Mary Leventis, a Ford supporter and student at large industrial states and California. Henry Ford College.

With elections still too close to call in New York and Texas, projections of a Ford victory in Michigan were enough to ignite spirited rounds of "Hail to the Victors' among Ford diehards who had no intentions of conceding defeat until the last vote was counted.

Gov. Milliken, flanked by defeated republican senate candidate Marvin Esch, said he was confident the president will win the

"I am encouraged by what I hear," Milliken said.

Peter B. Fletcher, committee chairman for the Michigan President Ford committee, also felt the election was "too close to call."

Fletcher blamed the republican's poor showing in Michigan on economic problems that plagued the state.

"The pocketbook is a major campaign issue," he said. "If the economy is in trouble the incumbent will suffer "

The victory was assured long before Riegle's victory speech. The latest polls showed Riegle ahead by a margin of 14 per cent and projections named him the victor at an extraordinarily early 9:30 p.m. - about the same time Jimmy Carter was leading Gerald Ford by 4 per cent.

Based on projections from the news media, they indicate we haven't done too badly tonight." Riegle quipped to a crowd of about 500 who would have laughed at just about anything said by a Democrat Tuesday night.

"People came to the polls to vote for jobs and health care for senior citizens," Riegle said. "They want to see the focus put on human problem solving.

"What we have proven is that it is possible to get together to make government work for people in the United States.'

Acknowledging the legacy of Phil Hart, Riegle said he intends to carry on Hart's "independence of mind" and his emphasis on "human values and priorities."

In a press conference held later, Riegle insisted that the coverage of his sexual episode had a reverse effect on the state's voters, who Riegle said wanted a campaign based on issues.

Riegle also reiterated his continual refusal to issue a public stand on Proposal A, the bottle ban, which he has said should help the state's voters and which won by a wide margin.

But he also said that his first piece of Robert Carr rejoices at victory celebration.

Taylor, however, continued to say he thought the vote would be won by a narrow margin under 1,000, similar to the tight race which occurred in 1974.

Asked about the 40 per cent student support that he predicted he would get during the campaign, Taylor said he did not know how students had voted but that 40 per cent figure was realistic. Voters in East Lansing's predominantly student wards overwhelmingly opted for Carr, according to figures released later in the evening.

The people at Carr's headquarters were celebrating as if victory was assured. One supporter said it was over early in the evening and he was answered with, "it was over before they voted."

Earlier, Carr repeatedly said he had not seen any figures.

"We figure somebody will tell us when it's over." Carr said.

Then he said his opponent was good at looking at the figures.

A Lansing Community College student who campaigned for Carr said he was scared because the vote would be closer than expected.

"I hope he wins; if he doesn't I'm going to move," he said. "And if Ford wins, I may even move out of the country."

Taylor workers awaiting the returns at the plush Long's Banquet Center were dismayed by the weak returns.

'We worked hard and sure it hurts to see him lose," said one disappointed woman who had worked Taylor phones. "But it's not over yet," she said, desperately clinging to a hope reflected by the 200 other Ingham County Republicans in the hall.

And so the tension continued - candidate and supporters nervously awaiting more returns.

Even though the midnight votes seemed to spell victory for Carr, Taylor still hung

Rent control narrowly defeated; opponent praises large turnout

The proposal to initiate rent control in East Lansing was narrowly defeated by city residents Tuesday.

With all 34 precincts reporting, it was 11,106 votes for rent control, and 12,697 against. In last year's election, a similar rent control amendment received 42 per cent of the vote. This year's election was a lot closer, Mike Yale, campaign coordinator of the Committee for Rent Control, said. In receiving 46.7 per cent of the vote, it shows that a lot more people were interested in rent control this year, he said.

"I don't think we'll try putting rent control on the ballot again," Yale said. "Most of our peo; don't have the energy to do it again."

It c. s show, however, that people realize there is a problem involving housing in East Lar is, he said.

Mary Luttrell, from the Committee Against Rent Control, said she felt the difference was in the large voter turnout.

"I think the difference was that students went out to vote for president," she said, "and then voted on the rent control issue. I think they realized that rent control would ultimately be bad for them, something we have been saying all along."

The issue of rent control was marked by a very emotional campaign, by both opponents and proponents of the amendment. Most people agreed that something should be done about the housing situation in East Lansing, but strongly disagreed on the point of whether this rent control amendment to the city charter was the answer.

In commenting on the defeat of rent control, interim City Manager Arthur Carney said, 'I'm glad of that.

'I don't think rent control would have been good for the city. I could see a long court hassle ahead if it would've won.

legislation would be some type of income maintenance for senior citizens, with attention on jobs as a close second on his list of priorities.

Republican contender Marvin Esch conceded the race at 11:33 p.m. though the Riegle victory was predicted by the local press at 9:30.

In a tearful statement, Esch first thanked family and staff. "I would rather lose a cause that was right than win one that wasn't," he said.

"Come on back, Marv!" a supporter yelled, interrupting the Congressman.

Esch paused, seemingly to swallow tears, and continued with his congratulatory wire to Riegle. "I trust you will live up to the trust people have placed in you tonight," Esch read. "I hope you will represent Michigan in a proud way."

Returning to his statement, Esch said, "In my public and private life I have always tried to make my constituents proud. And now the people have elected me to serve as a private citizen. I will serve with the same honor as I have served in public office for my family, my God and my country.

After his statement Esch refused to talk further with reporters and moved among the crowd to greet well-wishers.

Carlos Sosa, head of MSU students for Esch, said he was bitter over the defeat.

"We worked hard and tried hard, but what can I say?" Sosa asked rhetorically. don't think the better man won. Esch should have been in that Senate seat."

Though Esch smiled to the numerous cameras, members of his family were seen in tears throughout the night.

A three-piece band tried to liven the crowd by playing both the U-M and MSU fight songs, but the group of 1,000 seemed to reflect the sadness of the Esch family.

The center held a low-key tone as Bunka and 6th district U.S. representative candidate Cliff Taylor waited out the results.

Halfway through the evening, Bunka said he was unaware of the vote count in the race. But he showed a good deal of optimism and thought he had beat Jondahl. "We had a good healthy campaign," he said. "We tackled the

'B' WALLOPED AT POLLS Proposal A passes; E.L. vote favorable

As of 12:30 Wednesday morning, it appeared that Proposal A was the only state proposal approved by Michigan voters. Proposal C was losing by a narrow margin, while Proposals B and D were losing almost 2 to 1.

Proposal A, probably the most publicized at least one year. of the state proposals, will prohibit the use of nonreturnable bottles and cans for soft drinks and beer. It will also require refundable cash deposits for soft drink and beer containers and will provide penalties for violation of the law.

Proposal D was defeated by 27,204 votes or almost 71 per cent, a margin of over 2 to 1. The figures were from 82 per cent of Lansing precincts. Proposal C would have limited all state taxes and spending to 8.3 per cent of the combined personal income of Michigan. The proposal stipulated that any excess revenue be refunded to individual taxpayers and prohibited the adoption or expansion of local programs without full state funding.

The proposal permitted the 8.3 per cent limitation to be exceeded only if the governor declared a specific emergency approved by a 2/3 vote of the legislature. It also prohibited local governments from increasing existing taxes without voter approval.

Proposal D would have eliminated the Michigan Constitutional ban on a graduated income tax. The proposal would have established a two-step graduated tax that, at least for a year, would reduce payments

The proposal would have lowered taxes for low- and middle-income groups and increased taxes for the higher brackets for Speaking to reporters last night, Gov. Milliken said of the proposal results, "I am very pleased at the way they are going." He supported Proposal A and opposed the other three proposals.

Donald Bunka, losing contender of the 59th district congressional race, said that he hoped Proposal C would pass.

"It would not discourage the flight of businesses. It would also make a good climate for the private sector of businesses. Backers of Proposal A say it will reduce litter and conserve energy and dwindling natural resources. They also say it will eventually produce 8,119 additional jobs, boost payrolls by $36 million and save additional millions in litter cleanup costs.

Opponents of the proposal ran a vigorous campaign against the bottle bill, contending that it will cause stockpiles of dirty cans and bottles in homes and grocery stores, boost beer and soft-drink prices and cost highpaid manufacturing jobs.

"It's obvious that Judge James L. Ryan. The leader in the 30th District Circuit Court was Ray C. Hotchkiss.

Hotchkiss is going to win - he's got the number one position.

"I thought it was a very fair and open race," he added.

In the race for the Court of Appeals Fitzgerald had captured 15,134 votes to William R. Beasley's 13,373 votes.

Ingham County precinct totals indicated that Beasley captured 52 per cent of the vote to defeat opponent Fitzgerald in that area.

In the Jackson area, as of 2 a.m. today, the race was even. Beasley won in Leewenaw and Adrian counties. A spokesperson for Beasley said the candidate was not faring well in Macomb County and he indicated that there was not enough information to predict a clear winner in the race.

For the office of Judge of the Probate Court, Drake won 22,293 votes with Kenneth A. Birch taking only 7,907 votes.

"I guess I don't have much to comment on when it comes to if we won or lost," Birch said. "But as far as the campaign is concerned. I think the people that worked fo me did a fine job."

"My loss may have been due to the fact that the incumbent designation was on the ballot and also the incumbent outspent me three to one," he added.

Drake could not be reached for comment.

Trustees may follow state trend

he traditionally-partisan state race for MSU Board of Trustees was still redictable early today, but it appeared t the two vacant seats on the board ald be filled by Democrats.

With 4 per cent of the state returns orting at 1 a.m. incumbent Trustee nche Martin, D-East Lansing, was ling with 29 per cent of the vote. the race for the other seat, Democratic didate Michael Smydra, D-Lansing, held arrow lead over the two Republican llengers, Paul V. Gadola, R-Flint and Smith, R-Addison. mydra had garnered 26 per cent of the

From the Sheraton Motor Inn in Flint, Gadola complained that educational races should not run on fall ballots "because they get lost in the senate and presidential races."

He added that "It is not an advantage for a Republican trustee candidate to run under a Republican Senate candidate that is doing so badly."

But Gadola declined to make a formal statement concerning his own candidacy. "Obviously, with the small amount of votes, it is completely impossible to tell who is going to win," he said.

Leading in the race for Probate Court was Robert L. Drake, and ahead in the race for 2nd District Court of Appeals was E. Thomas Fitzgerald. Normally, the seats in the Michigan Supreme Court Race, which is technically a nonpartisan race, are for eight-year terms. However, the winning candidates in this year's race will serve for eight, six and two year terms because of a death and a resignation among the justices. For the Supreme Court 8 year term, with 144 precincts reporting and 2 per cent of the votes tallied, Kavanagh led his opponent with 65 per cent of the vote. Roman S. Gribbs was next in line with 23 per cent; Joseph P. Swallow followed with 12 per cent and Wilson S. Hurd and James E. Wells had no votes counted for zero per cent.

Kavanagh and Gribbs could not be reached for comment.

For the term ending Jan. 1, 1983, Lindemer captured 40 per cent of the vote to take the lead. Blair Moody, Jr. had 39 per cent, and Zolton Ferency got 21 per cent with 2 per cent of the vote counted.

Ferency said that the tallied figures indicated that Moody would capture all the votes in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties.

"The solid vote Moody is getting in the southeastern Michigan area is due to the organizational backing that he received from organized labor," Ferency said.

Lindemer and Moody could not be reached for comment. Ryan took a 63 per cent lead in the race for the two-year seat for Supreme Court Justice against his opponent Charles Kaufman. Ryan offered no comment on the race, and Kaufman could not be reached for comment.

In the race for the two Circuit Court seats In East Lansing, Martin and Smydra at midnight Tuesday, with 63 precincts in the county reported. Hotchkiss led his opponents Thomas E. Woods and Michael G. Harrison with 18,834 votes. Harrison had 13,881 votes and Woods captured 11,460. The Circuit Court handles many different kinds of cases ranging from criminal arraignments and sentences and divorce to suits that involve more than $10,000 and felony criminal cases.

Gadola in a near tie with 23 and 21 per cent, respectively. Smith had finished with about 20 per cent of the Lansing vote. Smydra could not be reached for comment. Gadola, however, said that he felt the race could go either way.

Martin was leading with 20 per cent of the vote and Smydra had gained 20 per cent. These were the only results available as of 2 a.m. today.

appears that an overwhelming Democratic majority will again be seated on the than County Board of Commissioners according to early election results.

- the 21 commission races, 16 were swept by Democratic candidates, and only six e won by Republicans.
- the six districts affected mostly by student votes. Democratic candidates carried districts, and only the ninth district elected a Republican commissioner.
- As of 12:30 a.m. Wednesday the commission races in predominantly student ricts stood as follows:
- Sixth district, Democrat Jackie McKeon led Republican Thomas Klunzinger with er cent of the vote.
- Seventh district, Democrat Sherry Finkbeiner led Republican Charles L. Green 55 per cent of the vote.
- Eighth district: Mark Grebner, Democratic candidate led Republican candidate en Barrett, and Human Rights Party candidate with 47 per cent.
- inth district: Republican William Sederburg led Democrat Charles Massoglia 57 per cent.
- Tenth district: Jess Sobel, Democratic candidate led Alicia Wiley, Republican didate and Aubrey Marron, Human Rights Party candidate with 52 per cent of the e.

Nineteenth district: Democrat Patrick Ryan led Republican William Long with 69 cent of the vote.

of these six student districts, MSU will have two student commissioners seated on round to the tenth county board: Mark Grebner in the eighth district and Jess Sobel in the tenth

The two student winners claimed that simple hard work was the determining factor that pulled the race in their favor.

In the case of Democrat Mark Grebner the hard work was done more in campaigning for the other candidates. "I did most of my campaign work for other candidates, and did very little for myself," he said.

"It (working for others) was a decision I made to put my time in where it would be most useful. I was expecting to win."

Jess Sobel said, "There are a couple of reasons why I won, the base Democratic vote is higher than the Republican or Human Rights Party, and I worked real hard."

The other four winners believed that their pursuance of a strenuous door to door campaign was the main reason for winning.

"I'm elated," Jackie McKeon said upon hearing the news at her home. "We're gonna have a county commissioner that'll really do something."

William Sederberg, the only Republican to win in the major student-voter districts, said he was "quite pleased with the results, even though he thought the race "would be much closer Sherrie Finkbeiner said that canvassing door-to-door and being accessible had led to her win.

"I promised to be accessible and send out a newsletter to my constituents if elected," she said.

Pat Ryan believed that his race was not only a victory of personalities, but of campaign styles

"The secret of my success is just to do the job and you're bound to win," he said.

Students support Ford, Democrats in key races

Gerald R. Ford defeated Jimmy Carter in 12 out of the 15 student voting precincts. Ford showed a substantial leading margin in the precincts he claimed. For the open U.S. Senate seat, students favored Democrat Donald Riegle over Republican Marvin Esch by nearly a two to one margin.

Bob Carr, Democratic candidate for 6th district Congressional representative, overwhelmingly defeated his Republican opponent Cliff Taylor in every student precinct.

Student support helped put H. Lynn Jondahl back into his 59th district state representative office. In the overall East Lansing tally, Jondahl received 63 per cent of votes cast compared to Republican challenger Donald Bunka's 34 per cent.

In the student precincts the voters helped assure the victories of Thomas G. Kavanagh, Zolton Ferency and Lawrence B. Lindemer for supreme court justice Proposal A, the "bottle bill," was vigorously approved in all student precincts - in some by a margin of over five to one.

In every student precinct, voters approved Proposal B.

Proposal C was defeated by a substantial margin in all student precincts. Student sentiment on Proposal D was fairly equally divided.

The rent control charter amendment suffered an extremely close defeat, since every student precinct supported rent control, but the proposal was defeated by a margin of 53 per cent to 47 per cent for all of East Lansing. Homeowner precincts counted heavily in the demise of rent control this year.

Minority enrollment inexcusable

If MSU's .4 per cent decrease in minority enrollment were to follow a national trend, it might be considered excusable. But nationally, college enrollment for minorities of United States citizenship increased by 11,7 per cent. This abhorrent discrepancy is inexcusable.

pinion

It seems clear that the University and its administrators in charge of affirmative action programs are not doing their job. The focus of affirmative action at MSU is employment rather than student enrollment. But even in this capacity the University has been sorely negligent. It is a disservice to MSU — and the country as a whole - that recruitment for minority enrollment is lacking. Not preparing minorities educationally prevents them from obtaining the jobs that the focus of MSU's affirmative action plan is aimed at.

higher learning, must be respon-

- not just the white majority.

In 1974, the Office of Institutional Research surveyed the percentages of minorities at several schools and came up with surprising results. The University of Michigan, with an enrollment of about 10,000 students less than MSU, showed a minority student population of over 400 more than MŠU.

It has been argued that this difference could be attributed to minority student scholarships offered by the University of Michigan, while MSU offers no such scholarships. It is important that the possibility of such scholarships to MSU minority students be investigated.

But then we are faced with the structural problems of the whole affirmative action program.

To begin with, the program is not firmly set up. Since its implementation in 1970, policies have MSU, as a public institution of remained the same. Year after year, the pressure for commitsible to all the citizens of Michigan ment has decreased. It has not been followed up or enforced adequately. Aside from the cries of minorities, there has been no high authority at MSU - which is where the power to act must come from - who has actively pushed this program.

Whenever administrators are questioned about affirmative action, they get defensive. What follows this action are weak explanations, passing the buck, no discussion or letters to the editor in defense of continued "commitment." In other words, no answers at all.

It is necessary that a sincere effort be made to improve this situation, rather than the apathetic and haphazard way in which the present affirmative action program is dealt with.

Major motivation: China's survival

The meteoric rise of Hua Koufeng to the chairmanship of the Chinese Communist party, a feat no one expected so soon after the death of Chairman Mao, tells us more about the amazing ability of Hua than it does about the future of Chinese-American relations.

Though the victory of Hua has been interpreted as a victory of the moderate wing, and hence a victory for those who favor closer ties between the United States and China, this is only true within the context of the current international situation.

This is the first of a series of

The conditions which have led China away from the Soviet Union also push it closer to America. The threat of Soviet military superiority contributes to favorable moves toward America.

But it should not be forgotten that the major motivation of these actions is China's survival, not hatred of the Soviet Union or a new-found affection for the United States.

Both the "moderates" and the "leftists" are makers of the Chinese Revolution; both are now in a disagreement over both foreign and domestic policy. This gives the United States a chance, but does not guarantee that this opportunity is forever written in the stars. Our policy in this situation must be to ensure the nonproliferation of nuclear weapons, while at the same time taking steps to insure the stabilization of the border between Russia and China. We must not allow a natural

I realize that inside us all there is a certain desire to be well known, to have people recognize us on the street and perhaps ask for an autograph.

Sometimes I see baseball players signing autographs and I wonder how nice it would be if I were in their shoes. This is pride, of course, but at least I can admit it. But I do have a problem. While I'm not famous by anyone's standards, my name is a little too close to someone else's who is approaching notoriety.

"You don't have to kid me," the person answered. I lashed out at her (any references to

What can you tell me about the new high-fiber breads?

They are standard breads to which fiber, a nondigestible part of many foods, has been added. The total significance of fiber in your diet is not yet known; however, unless you have a medical problem that requires you to limit your intake of fiber, most nutritionists would agree that some fiber in the diet is beneficial. Also, because the fiber is nondigestible, the high fiber breads have fewer calories per ounce than the standard breads. Thus, if bread contributes significantly to your daily energy intake, switching to high-fiber breads would decrease the number of calories that you get every day from bread.

Help! I'm getting fat on all the starchy dorm food!

Calories from any source will pile on the pounds, if eaten in excess, and starch foods are often not the culprit. Three ounces (1/2 cup) of mashed potatoes or spaghetti contain a modest 80-90 calories but a generous helping of butter or gravy can easily double the calorie content. You need most of the calories you're getting to lead the busy life of a college student. But it takes only one unneeded coke

I've been introduced to many people, but too often I get a disheartening response. "Are you The Phil Frank?" the person says, assuming I have a knack for doodling. "No," I assure the person, "my name is Frame, like a picture frame, and we're not related."

You wouldn't believe how many times this has happened.

The State News held an open house early this term, and since I'm the free-lance editor I was introduced to a crowd of a couple hundred staff hopefuls.

Halfway through the question and answer period, one girl raised her hand.

'Are you The Phil Frank?" "No, my name is Frame," I replied.

"Yes, Frank," she pursued, "why did you give up cartoons and start writing?

"My name is FRAME, F-R-A-M-E!"

"Oh," she said, finally understanding, "You just spell it differently.

This misassociation even pervades the free-lance people I work with. Two notes recently appeared on my desk, one address ed to "Frank, ..." and the other, "Mr. Frank,

The coup-de-grace happened just the other day. I was in class and my name had been called every day for the seating chart. Three weeks into the term and another person comes up to me.

letters but have eternal life." Graham

I read Joy, Hoffman's letter about the "intricacies" of the Graham crusade with interest, but I resented her presenting her biased opinions as facts. I am curious as to where she got the information. How did she know that Graham's "lust" sermons are his most popular? What made her believe that the people who attend these sermons are feeling "the thrill of titillation"?

I found her attempt at equating the Christian experience with sex rather humorous. She might as well equate sex with sticking one's tongue in a light socket, since they are both intense experiences.

I did agree with her on one point, however. Sexual and religous fervor are intimate relatives. Contrary to public opinion, sex was not meant to be excluded from the Christian experience. According to the Bible, sex is sacred and can only be fully expressed and appreciated in the confines of a loving marriage. This is very different from the one-night stand or brief affair which is commonly associated with lustful sex

One last point. I know Joy missed the main point of Graham's message, which is always that "God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whoever believes in Him should not perish,

Unfair

This letter is in response to a letter written Oct. 29 by Mark Becker, criticizing Suzie Rollins' column entitled "Model house of study?"

I believe Becker was unfair to Rollins in saying that she assumes that girls have to wear clothes that look bad in order to feel good

A year ago, I had the pleasure of having Rollins in a class. I know, since I saw her three times a week, that she is not an advocate of old shirts and torn jeans, but rather just the opposite. I never once saw her dressed sloppily or in an outfit that didn't match from head to toe.

Though I never really got to know her, I think she was trying to share a few laughs (as she said in her column) about women and their clothes in the 1970s. She is not the only one who has written about the designer's initial syndrome. (Art Buchwald did this summer), she just focused it on the MSU campus.

Rollins should not have been criticized for being humorous since I believe she was attempting to get other MSU coeds to smile at themselves and relate to her.

As the presidential campaign nears its climactic finale and campaign efforts near materialization for victory or defeat, it becomes increasingly clear to me that whoever wins the presidential election had better lose the political facade and deal with the hard-core problems of this country. At this point. it is either make it or break it the country, that is.

I mean, I am really not impressed by what campaigner smiles the best or who throws the hardest punches in the presidential debates or who tours the most American cities shaking hands in shirt sleeves. Frankly, both Carter and Ford have been quite unimpressive to say the least. Both have chosen not to take a firm and decisive stand on campaign issues. Instead, both have chosen to wait until the other has made a head-first dive into a rhetorical political blunder and then relish the opponent's imprudence. Just what kind of initiative is this for the next president of the United States?

This campaign, in reiteration, has been the most unimpressive show of political leadership I have ever witnessed. Just where is the self-conviction?

Despite the much to be desired presidential choices available, I shall vote on Nov. 2 for the candidate I feel can best handle the job. It really doesn't matter whether I vote Democratic or Republican more so than the fact that I vote for whatever man I feel can best pull the American economy out of its disgraceful constraints. To me, this is the foremost concern.

However, whoever is elected president had better not become too enmeshed in the political jargon inherent in campaigning and e sight of the priority issues, namely inflation and its attendant, unemployment.

The next president can ill afford to neglect the problems of America's ailing cities when dealing in military defense. He can ill afford to deal primarily with foreign policy at the risk of neglecting desper needed booster injections into the and private sector. The parallel be simply that the next president must play his cards to optimum winning What affects the American people and cannot be overshadowed by ind indulgences such as military exper

Assistance sought in nuclear dispute

State officials announced Tuesday that they have sought help from the U.S. Energy and Research Development Agency to determine whether 350 canisters dumped by the Army into Lake Superior betweeen 1959 and 1962 contained radioactive nuclear wastes.

The Dept. of Natural Resources, with the approval of Gov. Milliken, sought ERDA help in a letter to Richard Seamans, agency director, dated Oct. 27. State officials said the department had not yet received a response and a spokesperson from ERDA in Washington said he had no information on the request yet.

The DNR made the request because "we felt it was the feds' responsibility," DNR official James Truchan said. The DNR began investigating the matter after a citizen asked if the department was aware of rumors of the dumping, he said.

According to a DNR statement on its investigation, a retired tugboat captain for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers involved with the dumping said he had been told the canisters contained radioactive wastes. Bu Col. Forest Gay, a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers spokesperson, told the DNR that the materials dumped in the lake were metals under research, at the time to be used for fragmentation bombs, and not radioactive materials. He reportedly said the Army would not object if the cans are salvaged and analyzed.

The 350 cans were dumped during four excursions in 60 to 300 feet of water at the mouth of the Knife and Lester rivers of Duluth, Minn., the DNR statement said. Previous attempts by Minnesota officials to shed light on the matter had not answered whether nuclear materials were in the containers, the DNR said.

In 1968, according to Truchan, a fisherman had one of the barrels caught in his nets, but he was unable to get the barrel aboard his boat. The DNR request to ERDA said: "We would appreciate your agency's assistance in investigations to determine if nuclear wastes were contained in the barrels dumped off Lake Superior."

What we want to do is clear this matter up once and for all," Truchan said. "Right now the ball is in the federal court."

Truchan said the government should do everything it can - including salvaging and analyzing the contents of the canisters - to clear up the mystery.

On the brighter side of the polls, the workers overwhelmingly praised the students "for being such sweet kids and a pleasure to work with."

"They are such a marvelous bunch of young people," said Stella Trautz from precinct 14 in McDonel Hall. "I get all choked up inside and in them I know there is hope for this world."

Many of the poll workers are elderly, retired women who have been tending the polls for as many as 25 years. Some do it to get out of the house, some for the money and others because they feel it is their civic duty.

"I have worked here about six years and I feel a sense of community duty which keeps me coming back here," said Mrs. Thomas Krieg, chairperson of precinct 13 in Wilson Hall. "My only complaint is that students are running off with my pencils."

Ward directed and acted in the play "River Niger," the 1973 winner of the Tony Award. He is also the artistic director of the Negro Ensemble Co. (NEC), which is a black theater troupe from New York City.

Calling the rise of black theater "the most significant development in American theater" in recent years, Ward said that the future of black theater - and all theater - depends on subsidies from government and private institutions.

"There is a problem of lack of money and insufficient subsidies of state governments involved in cultural projects," he said. "It is a danger for all major theaters - cultural institutions have to be subsidized."

Ward said that he demands governmental money, saying that it is money "that we all provide

VETOES AMENDMENT DISALLOWING CREDIT Council debates remedial topic

By GEORGIA HANSHEW State News Staff Writer

Debate continued at Tuesday's Academic Council meeting about ether students should receive credit for remedial course The council has been discussing the granting of credit for medial courses since recommendations on remedial courses were eased by the council committee on academic policy in June. The original recommendation stated that credits earned in the t course in a remedial series of courses would not be counted ward graduation, but credits earned in subsequent courses of series would be.

Ward said that the NEC has created an atmosphere for black theater which has made commercial black theater possible. Several black plays, he said, are now appearing on Broadway.

'U' sidewalk system continually updated

By NUNZIO LUPO

MSU's sidewalk system can be considered a labyrinth compared to the boarded path along Grand River Avenue that was the only walk when the University opened in 1857

It seems that wherever MSU students create a path, the Campus Park and Planning Dept. puts in a sidewalk, but according to Director Milton Baron, things are not as they seem. When a building is in the planning stages, he explained, the department "evaluates reducts building is in the planning stages of the students, faculty and staff are taken pedestrian traffic so that most of the needs of the students, faculty and staff are taken

However, this planning does not always foresee the whims of students and therefore, "there is always remedial planning that needs to be done," he said.

The result of the "remedial planning" is a "continual updating (of the sidewalk system) as dollars permit and as needs are perceived," Baron said. The department is allocated $50,000 each year for landscape improvements.

Baron said that $24,000 of that amount has been allocated for repairs of old walks and installation of new small sections. He said the $24,000 is the largest amount the department has budgeted in many years for this purpose, and that $18,600 is already spent

 $0_{ne}\,e_{xample}$ of "remedial" work is a sidewalk connection behind Shaw Hall. There are two sidewalks behind Shaw Hall, one near the dormitory and another nearer to the Red Cedar River, and a section of concrete connecting the two was installed this summer after students had worn a dirt path in the grass between them. Baron said the small strip of concrete cost the University approximately $600. Another example of remedial work is the walk across the open field bounded by Wilson. Chesnut and Stadium roads, from Shaw Lane to Holden Hall. Students wore a path in the grass and eventually got a sidewalk, which Baron called the "missing link" between the residence hall and the main sidewalk system.

MSU students should not, however, assume that anywhere a path is worn, a sidewalk is put in, he said. Pedestrian traffic is solved for most of the people most of the time without sacrificing the beauty of campus, according to Baron.

"We don't want an all-concrete campus," he said.

Other contributing factors which inhibit the growth of the MSU sidewalk network are the fact that it costs approximately eight dollars to $10 for an eight foot piece of concrete, and the fact that the Grounds and Maintenance Dept. must have enough funds to keep the walks salted and plowed in the winter. Baron said some of the best remedial planning that his department has done includes the widening of the sidewalks behind Erickson and Wells halls. The entire walk was widened six inches to a foot this summer and the area in front of Farm Lane was widened considerably as well.

mission should have its bounds defined." Wright said. It did not seem fair, she said that she had to appeal to the same body (the AUEC) that had disqualified her in the first place. "The (elections) code is garbage," Lenz said. "It lists a lot of things you're not allowed to do, but no penalties for doing them," he said. His own case is an example of the problems which can arise from this, he said.

Lenz and several other candidates on the Counterforce slate in the spring election were invalidated by the AUEC in May for violating a University ordinance prohibiting the post-ing of signs on University property other than campus billboards. After a series of hearings, the SFJ ruled in July that, according to the elections code. the AUEC does not have the power to invalidate a candidate for violations other than exceeding campaign expenditure limits and/or failure to file expense reports.

So even though the University ordinance is listed in the elections code, the code does not provide for its enforcement.

Though "Taxi Driver" was Herrmann's last score, "Obsession" is the last to be released. Throughout the score, Herrmann employs many interesting techniques, including the frequent use of an organ and a chorus, which create a frescolike atmosphere.

Thematically, Herrmann's score develops into two basic lines. One theme, which is a waltz and is reminiscent of Herrmann's score for the film "The Snows of Kilamanjaro," can be heard in the opening cuts of the album, and is later manifest in the ending cuts of the score.

One consistent aggravation in this score is Herrmann's use of the "Bernard Herrmann motive," a four-note progression which can be heard from beginning to end in the harp. Herrmann used this motive more and more frequently in his last film-music compositions.

A basic problem in evaluating Herrmann's work lies in the unevenness of its quality. It is because some of his scores were so good this scores for "Pyscho" and "Vertigo" were probably the best movie music ver written) that a score like "Obsession" seems somewhat second rate.

Nevertheless, this is a highly interesting album, recommended for all Herrmann fans. Herrmann's use of tonal color is always interesting, and abounds in this album.

Meeting to study housing

By MIKE MACKSOOD State News Staff Writer

MSU will host a conference this week to examine the use of public and private resources to develop housing and employ ment opportunities for Michigan's needy.

"Resources such as land which may be available from state and federal agencies for building nonprofit housing will be discussed," said Julia Holly of the Bureau of Community Services at the Michigan Dept. of Labor.

The conference, which will be held at Kellogg Center on Thursday and Friday, will focus mainly on organizing construc-

Holly said jobs such as working on construction and maintenance of the houses could be generated by this type of project.

'Chemical raping' of mental patients results in dispute

By SUSAN STERN Pacific News Service

NAPA, CA. - When 30-year old Bay Area carpenter Donald Stein refused to take his medications at California's state mental hospital at Napa, a team of psychiatric technicians followed him to his bed, cornered him and forcibly injected him with a needle.

Despite evidence that psychoactive drugs cause brain damage in a significant number of users, the nurses at Napa, where Stein was formerly a patient, round up the patients and pass out the drugs four times a day. Those like Stein who refuse to take them are then forced to Mental patients' rights groups across the country call that "chemical rape;" mental health authorities call it chemotherapy. Both agree that psychoactive drugs have become the standard treatment for more than six million Americans now involved in the mental health system.In California, for example, 90 per cent of state mental hospital patients are on drugs, according to state hospitals director Don Z. Miller.

California recently joined a handful of states with laws restricting involuntary treatment by electroshock and lobotomy - but no state allows involuntarily committed patients the right to refuse psychoactive drugs.

Donald Stein is going to court to try to change that. This fall, the case of Stein vs. Linn joins another in Massachusetts as the first lawsuits challenging the right of psychiatry and the state to violate the civil rights of persons labeled "insane.

Meanwhile, California mental patients' rights groups are taking their case to state health officials and legislators and running into solid opposition. After Network Against Psychiatric Assault (NAPA), a "I'd choose the drugs. You can do psychodrama, Gestalt or San Francisco-based patients' rights group, sat in at California Gov. Drugs enable the hospitals to comply with county and state pressure to discharge patients quickly. In California, for instance, where county governments now pay 10 per cent of the patients' hospital bills, counties have been pressuring the hospitals to discharge patients in close to three weeks.

One result of such pressure is even more reliance on drugs, according to Carrie Monthei, a psychiatric technician who has worked at Napa since 1964.

Before the push to get patients back into the communities, Monthei says, state hospitals had the time and staff to prepare for patients' release through psychotherapy. But "we don't have any programs any more," Monthei said. "Now all we do is take the patients from the counties, medicate them until they calm down and shove them out again." Though most California counties have day treatment centers where recreational, occupational and other therapies are practiced, no county has sufficient funds to provide staff to get patients off drugs and coach them through psychotic episode. As a result, many patients - 60 to 70 per cent, according to Eng - stop taking drugs on their own.

Unlike patients in the state hospitals or local psychiatric wards, outpatients can legally refuse their medications. But they face coercion nonetheless. "If they don't cooperate they'll end up in the hospital, enjoyed yourselves at the football game last week. But please refrain from passing me up again this Saturday. I was the one in the orange ski jacket, with a hot dog in one hand and mustard and ketchup in the other. I also had a suede wine flask over my shoulder. Do you remember me? Probably not. You passed up so many other women, Boy Scouts and Cheerleaders at the game, I can't expect that I might be remembered. There was another girl that you might remember. She had on a red coat, and got passed up three times in 10 minutes. Not that she enjoyed it or anything. Actually it is a pretty horrifying thing to get passed

BULLOO

Hey guys in section 1 - I hope you up. It feels like you are floating up an escalator, only about 10 feet above the crowd. Add that to the distance that you are above the football field, and it feels like you are flying — only there is always the fear that you will hit an air pocket and crash, especially when it is halftime and a lot of fans aren't in their seats. As to the myth that women like to get passed up, I say nonsense to that. Sure I was laughing as I was getting fingerprinted on my behind, but it was only because I was hysterical at the moment.

I didn't fight and scream and kick, because I didn't want to be dropped. I've seen too many girls get dropped right on their heads. Last year I recall someone get carried out of the stadium on a stretcher after being dumped in the aisle. And then there is the story that hit the papers about a girl who got passed right out of the top of a stadium in Indiana. Naturally the drop killed her.

Until this past weekend, I had thought that the passing fad had faded. But something got into the boys at that game and they were passing up everything in sight. Now if you really think about it, picking up an unsuspecting girl, tossing her around and scaring her to death is pretty silly. But think of how stupid it is to start passing Boy Scouts. I can kinda understand how guys might get a kick out of passing a girl - but a Boy Scout?

Besides being silly, people-passing is dangerous. I was one of the lucky ones who didn't get dropped at all, but the number of girls who get dropped at least slightly is a large one.

What I really don't understand is that the guys who passed me up were very quiet and nice during the first half. How was I to know that they would be the ones to send me up? They must have caught the fever. Well here is a message to the women of MSU. Unite! Don't let yourself get passed up. Kick and bite if you do, but put an end to this ridiculous pastime of Spartan males.

Two Republican incumbents and three Democratic challengers carried strong leads in five of six Ingham County races

With 58 per cent of the Ingham County vote totals in at 1 a.m. Wednesday, incumbent Republican Sheriff Kenneth L. Preadmore carried the race with 34,262 votes to Libertarian Martis John Goodwin's 10,415. Complete East Lansing totals indicated Preadmore led

Daley provides history lesson

CHICAGO (AP) - Mayor Richard J. Daley introduced Jimmy Carter to Chicago's Democrats Monday and gave the party gathering his own special kind of history lesson. Sode has expanded the drain commissioner's responsibilities to include solid waste recycling and the Lake Lansing cleanup projects, as well as the maintenance of the county's drains.

With all East Lansing totals in, Brewer captured 11,788 votes, or 55.34 per cent of the vote, over Whitmyer's 7,708 votes, or 36.18 per cent of the vote.

The six-man expedition will live in a 16-foot long and 20-foot wide hut right on the shelf. Temperatures at the site should range from 15 to 25 degrees. Bennett said it would be much warmer there than it would seem because the antarctic summer brings 24 hours of day light and the site of the study is near sea level. At the same time the nearby South Pole averages 20 degrees below zero since it is 10,000 feet above sea level.

Rape rates cause alarm

detective division said one of the possible reasons for an increase in rape reports was that last year the DPS believed there was one individual "responsible for several rapes." Another factor cited was the implementation of Senate Bill 1207, Michigan's new rape law, which went into effect April 1, 1975. The law has made more women willing to report rape than before. Badgley said.

The bill protects the rape victim by outlining legal pro-cedures for rape cases and forbidding use of the victim's sexual history unless related to the suspect.

The crime of rape was also redefined to include other acts besides sexual penetration. Badgley said this caused more criminal actions to be termed 'rape" last year, where before they would have been reported under a different and lesser classification.

Badgley outlined a number of precautions women on campus can take to prevent rape. There are no across-the-board situations where rape is most likely to occur, except possibly "in dark places where girls are usually alone," Badgley said, adding that rape occurs inside buildings as much as outside.

The warnings instruct women to avoid walking or studying alone at night and to stay in open and well-lighted places when being alone is unavoidable

Areas to avoid at night, according to Badgley, are in and around Sanford Natural Area and behind buildings and the pathways leading from the F Lot parking area to Holden Hall, where he said a number of attempted rapes have occurred in the past, due to high, concealing shrubbery. Rather than walk, Badgley said a bus pass or a bicycle is a safer and faster means of transportation. He said if a woman has to study alone she should "go where there are at least people in earshot."

Women should also be careful about who they accept rides with and let into their rooms, Badgley said. He described where women were cases picked up hitchhiking or had taken rides from bars with strangers and had been raped by the driver.

"I'd like to see 'window peekers' (a small hole in doors) put in every door on campus so women can see who's knocking at their door before they let them in. A chain on the door would help some," Badgley added.

In addition to Badgley's precautionary measures, the Sex Crime Unit of the Detroit Police Dept. issued a report of other receives funds

ANN ARBOR (UPI) - A pledge of $1.5 million from the Kresge Foundation has boosted the capital campaign of the University of Michigan Law School over the half-way mark. With the funds from the Troy-based foundation, law school officials said Tuesday the campaign now has brought in a total of $5.9 million in committed funds out of a total campaign goal of $10 million. About $4.9 million of these funds, including the Kresge grant, will go for the construction of a proposed $8 million addition to the U-M law library.

safety tips for preventing rapes. The five-page report includes such simple tips as telling a woman who lives alone to list only her last name in phone directories and on mail boxes and to keep house and automobile doors locked at all times. When a woman is driving alone, the report said, she should not pick up hitchhickers. The report advised checking the interior of the car before entering, staying inside during automobile failures in secluded areas and driving to an inhabited public place if followed. If followed by a car while walking, a woman should go in the opposite direction of the car, forcing the driver to turn around to continue following, the report says. If followed by another walker, a woman should cross the street and not be afraid to run.

The report also lists tips that parents should give their children and methods of self-defense for victims of rape.

A free copy of the report can be obtained by sending a selfaddressed, stamped envelope to Lt. Isaiah McKinnon, Sex Crime Unit, Detroit Police Dept., 1300 Beaubien, Detroit, 48226. Badgley said victims must "play it by ear" during an attack, depending on the situation and the victim's capabilities of fighting back. Screaming or fighting back might scare off an attacker in some cases, he said, but "in some instances it might make him mad enough to kill." Fighting back can be effective only if through with it. Badgley said if a woman does decide to fight, she should use everything available as a weapon to hit the man in sensitive areas such as the groin, eyes, throat, bridge of nose and temples. Badgley said the DPS often has plainclothes officers on foot patrol to prevent rape, "but there are not enough officers to be everywhere at the right place and time on this large a campus.

Avoiding sexism difficult S

By JUDY PUTNAM State News Staff Writer

If one tries to write or speak in a nonsexist manner, he or she may find himself or herself creating a collage of awkward knots

On the other hand, many feminists point out that the underlying sexism in our society manifests itself in such words as "mankind," "chairman" and especially the word "he," used to include everyone. (For example, if one does not find this article of interest, he will turn the page).

While alternatives have been suggested (how about a neuter term, "ne" or "s/he" which reads as "she?") a quick survey of several English professors and instructors shows a variety of opinions on the acceptance of alternatives to "he" used generically.

Arthur Sherbo, professor of English, gave a succinct answer:

"I'm old-fashioned," he said. "'He' is understood as a generic term. There is no need to change it."

James L. Hill, associate professor, said he felt that "he" used generically is not sexist. based on conventional grammatical gender, not biologskipped the greeting. ical gender.

Nancy Johnson, an assistant "You have to learn the professor who teaches applied words gramlinguistics in the English Dept., matically," Hill said, and comdescribed herself in a "transition" stage. She said that when pared it to other languages where masculine and feminine writing a textbook over a year forms of words do not signify ago, she used "he" generically but began to think that "maybe In contrast, Howard Anderthis does bother some people." "Although pronouns may have an effect on children, it is more important now to try to change the books, television and movies which show men as strong, intelligent and making decisions. Women are always victims or servants or little girls," she said.

Peter Vaccaro, teaching assistant in English composition said that masculine pronouns do not have a "devastating effect" on children and that the disagreement over "he-his him" as generic terms results because people do not understand it as a convention of the language.

Vaccaro said that if the sentence cannot be restructured, he uses the term "he or while speaking. she "It does reflect a traditional way of viewing our society from a male viewpoint," said Judith Beck, instructor in the English Language Center, "I think as a lot of us develop new attitudes, the language is not flexible enough to express it."

Only time will tell. The change from "chairman" to "chairperson," from "mankind" to "personkind," from "he" to some form of "us," will have to be recorded in the annals of history (herstory?).

Michigan Bell attacked; claimed discriminatory

By SUE STEWARD

State News Staff Writer The phone book, which is just about as standard in a house hold as a lavatory, is being attacked under charges that it discriminates against women.

Bell Telephone has a longstanding policy which allots one listing free of charge per number in the directory. This has meant, in most instances, that phone numbers are listed in the husband's name, which leaves wives with a loss of identity, women have charged.

Women in New York. Vermont, Idaho and Washington have filed formal complaints with public service commissions in their states alleging that the policy cuts women of from important channels of communication.

A Lansing representative for Michigan Bell said company policy cannot accommodate a double listing in the directory such as "Smith, John - Mary, Michigan Bell does offer to list more than one name per number at an additional cost to the customer of 40 cents per month. The company stresses that it does not require a couple to list in the husband's name. "The phone is generally

The Michigan Public Service Commission (PSC) has received only an informal complaint so far, but Robert Nelson, asst. director of the Michigan PSC. said someone probably will file a formal complaint over the issue. The informal complaint was brought before the PSC earlier this year by the wife of a Sault Ste. Marie resident. At that time the PSC asked Michigan Bell to look into the question, Robert Otstot, PSC communications manager, said.

The PSC asked Michigan Bell how much it would cost to put the names of both husband and wife in the listing.

The phone company esti-mated double-name listings would cost $1,709,000 initially in clerical costs and $240,000 annually in printing costs. The company said these additional costs would have to be borne by all subscribers, including those who would not be using the service.

Directory assistance costs would also rise, the company said. If someone called to find the number of Mary Smith the operator would have to look through all the male Smith listings to find her name listed after John's.
