Former All-American fullback at Ohio State University confirmed Wednesday night that Buckeye football players exchanged their season tickets for cash and may have used the money to purchase cars.

"I don't know," Henson stated, "That sort of thing goes on everywhere, including Ohio State University."

Henson, who played at OSU during the 1972-74 seasons, is the third former Buckeye to admit the exchange of OSU tickets for cash. Earlier, Tim Fox and Rick Middleton, two former OSU stars now in the NFL, revealed the practice had occurred during their careers at Columbus.

"Such an exchange is a violation of National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (NCAA) rules," Henson commented. "Well, yes and no. I don't really want to say. I never sold my tickets for cash. I have a large family and they always used them. But, I know that other guys did it goes on everywhere."

Henson declined to identify the other OSU players who had sold their tickets.

He added, "Some guys sold their tickets to businessmen in Columbus, but I never got into those people (the businessmen). You know, they'd take their six tickets, for example, and work something out with those people. How much they got I don't know." Fox, meanwhile, had earlier been quoted in a copyrighted article in the Oklahoma

Ex-OSU players say Buckeyes exchanged tickets for cash, cars

Journal as saying, "A lot of the players will trade a season book of tickets with a car dealer for a car."

Henson could not substantiate the charge that players were bartering their tickets for cars, but he did say, "Yeah, some players like Coryn Greene and Pete Johnson had a new car every year, but I don't know where they got the money from."

Fox had also been quoted as saying, "In fact, some of the assistant coaches there (at OSU) were doing that (selling tickets in exchange for a new car)."

Henson could not recall that happening while he was at OSU.

However, the State News has obtained an invoice from a Columbus car dealer which shows that in 1973 an assistant OSU football coach leased a new automobile for 12 months at no cost. Attempts to determine whether the coach had exchanged tickets for the car proved to be futile.

OSU ticket director Bob Ries emphasized, "We follow the rules to the letter. Each player is allotted so many tickets and then he designates who's to pick them up. The player himself never sees the tickets," he stated.

"Only the person chosen by the player," Ries continued, "is allowed to pick up the tickets. We have each person sign when they pick them up."

Ries also stated that the university keeps a record of all such transactions, but refused to allow the State News to examine them to determine if any car dealers in Columbus had obtained tickets earmarked for coaches or players.

"Yes, we keep a record. No, we wouldn't let you (the State News) see them. We couldn't let anyone see them unless orders came from above," Ries stated.

On Monday, OSU coach Woody Hayes did not deny the allegations brought by Fox and Middleton. "I've never in any way said we're perfect. We do everything we can to discourage it," Hayes said.

Last August, the State News published a series of alleged recruiting violations by OSU boosters and coaches. Both the NCAA and the Big Ten are currently conducting an inquiry into those allegations.

India passes amendment, executive power hiked

NEW DELHI (AP) — The Indian government on Thursday completed passage of a historic constitutional amendment strengthening the executive power of the Minister Indira Gandhi's government.

About a dozen opposition members stepped out in protest, the upper house voted to give the government the sweeping authority it had requested to rule this country of 610 million people.

The amendment will become law after receiving the anticipated endorsement of a majority of India's 22 state assemblies.

The provision of the amendment empowers the government to ban any activity organization it deems "anti-national."

The amendment also bars the courts from reviewing either the substance or procedure of constitutional amendments and requires a two-thirds majority to overturn any legislation. It empowers the Supreme Court to shift a case from one high court to another or to take jurisdiction

This was the scene at Wednesday night's public hearing on the East Lansing Planning Commission's use of CD funds. East Lansing residents who attended the meeting spoke in favor of a comprehensive housing rehabilitation program.

Citizens protest plans for use of HUD funds for trees, parks; want housing program created

By MICHAEL TANIMURA
State News Staff Writer

East Lansing citizens, speaking at the planning commission's public hearing Wednesday night, called for a comprehensive housing program to be established by the city.

Over 50 people attended the commission's hearing on federal Community Development (CD) fund appropriations. The Dept. of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) has allocated $602,000 for East Lansing to use in CD-approved projects.

The city staff's recommendations for use of CD funds were criticized by many of the citizens who spoke.

"It's wonderful to have trees, and it's wonderful to have parks, and I like parks," Terry Roorda, coordinator of the Tenants Resource Center, said, "but I see an awful lot of money being spent on things where it is very questionable that they will even benefit lower- and middle-income people."

The CD program was set up to develop viable urban communities, including decent housing, suitable living environments, and expanding economic opportunities, principally for lower and moderate income people.

"What I really think we need," Roorda said, "is a comprehensive housing program for East Lansing."

Short-term projects like city center development and park development occupy the bulk of the appropriations for CD funds, as submitted to the planning commission by the city staff.

"The city asked for money, was granted it and their eyes lit up like cash registers," Peter Coughlan, a student living in a co-op, said. "But I don't see any plans helping citizens."

Charles Ipear, coordinator for the Committee for Rent Control, said that priorities of the CD program — housing for low- and moderate-income people — must be reinforced.

"Some groups might consider legal action (asking HUD to enjoin the funds) if they are allocated along the city staff guidelines," Bill Beachler, East Lansing housing commissioner, said the bulk of the funds should be spent on housing.

"All staff reports indicate a serious housing problem," he said. "It's time we had a housing program, and time we saw results from that program."

"I can't understand why your commission and my commission and city council can't come up with a housing program."

East Lansing receives the money because of its population, overcrowding and extent of poverty of its residents, Adriane Berry, CD coordinator, said.

"Where is the overcrowding and extent of poverty, and where is the money going?" Murphy said.

Paula Johnson, planning commissioner, said that studies have shown that students are in a poverty situation by choice.

It is the elderly and the students that are the hard-pressed people in the community, he said. These are the people CD money should be used to help, Murphy said.

A few residents spoke in favor of the staff recommendations, calling the development of parks and the planting of trees.

William Main, chairperson of the Bailey Community Assn., said there is a communication problem with the city's CD program.

"What we need is a person to come to meetings so we can ask questions and get answers about the program," he said.

Associate Planner James vanRavensway said he was pleased with the citizen turnout, and hoped it was indicative of citizen concern about the city and its future.

Utah governor issues reprieve to halt execution

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Condemned murderer Gary Mark Gilmore's wish to be executed on schedule by a firing squad Monday has been blocked by a reprieve issued by Gov. Calvin Rampton to enable Utah's Board of Pardons to consider the case.

Gilmore's attorney, Dennis Boaz, said the action by the retiring governor was the "meddling of a lame duck governor, and I'm completely outraged."

The board's next scheduled meeting starts Wednesday, but chairperson George Latimer said the board's calendar might not have room for the Gilmore matter before Thursday.

Rampton cannot commute sentences or issue pardons, but can issue reprieves until the board can consider such matters.

Latimer said if the board decides the execution should proceed, it would be up to the trial judge, 4th District Court Judge Robert Bullock, to reschedule it.

Gilmore, who says he does not want to spend a lifetime in prison, appealed to the Utah Supreme Court personally Wednesday to let him die next Monday as originally sentenced. The court agreed and vacated its earlier stay of execution.

No one has been executed in the United States since Luis Jose Monge died in a Colorado gas chamber on June 2, 1967, for the murder of his pregnant wife and three of his 10 children. More than 400 men and women await possible execution on Death Row across the nation.

Gilmore, who would be 36 on Dec. 4, was convicted of first-degree murder for the shooting death of a motel clerk last summer during a robbery. He is also charged with the fatal shooting of a gas station attendant.

"I believe the death sentence is justifiable in appropriate cases," Rampton said in a letter to Latimer. "However, the duty of the Board of Pardons is to review the decision of the trial judge to determine whether or not the case in which the death penalty is imposed is appropriate for such punishment."

Rampton emphasized that he expressed no opinion on that matter. He said that though the Supreme Court had decided it has no jurisdiction to conduct a judicial review in the absence of a request by the convicted person, that does not apply to the board.

Gilmore

"Here, I feel that the state itself can be moving to institute a review, and as governor I am taking that action," Rampton said.

Michael L. Deamer, asst. Utah attorney general, said there will be no special session of the board before Monday, and the board will hold its regular meeting Wednesday with three-day notice.

Deamer said that though the reprieve would be against Gilmore's wishes, the governor "did this to exercise some caution and not rush into this so fast." Gilmore was convicted and sentenced last month.

"You can imagine how Gilmore will react to this," said Boaz. "He will react to this in disappointment and anger."

Boaz had said of Gilmore after the court's action Wednesday, "I honestly don't think he would have stayed around for any appeal. I think he would have seen to it that, you know, he took care of his own execution."

Rape victim suffers from feeling of guilt

The final story of a series on rape, focusing on cultural attitudes toward the crime.

By MARICE RICHTER
State News Staff Writer

In recent years has sustained a veritable barrage of information on rape: counseling, rape education, rape law, rape attitudes have all inculcated courts do not. "The saddest part about being raped is that the victim feels guilty and responsible, and not the rapist," a rape counselor said.

Lawmakers and prosecuting attorneys have made attempts to protect the victim from humiliation, but society has not yet caught on.

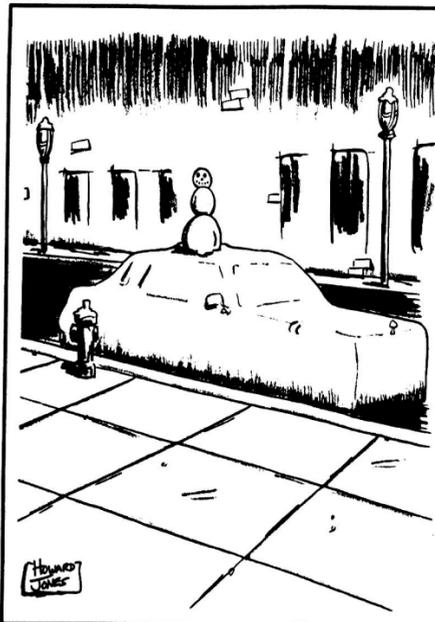

"In society nowadays, as it has been for a long time, there is a distinction between licit and illicit sex," a feminist theorist said.

"Rape is viewed as illicit sex, and it is her job to prevent it, with no exceptions made. If a rape occurs, then society says that she didn't do her job, and so she should take the blame," the theorist continued.

The theorist pointed out that, despite a supposed new sexual morality, sex is still taboo in society.

"Sex is like a forbidden temple that you can only enter through with the right rituals — a woman is the gatekeeper of the temple, and is responsible to keep every-

Snow, parked cars problem for crew

By DEBBIE WOLFE
State News Staff Writer

Though Michigan has been dubbed the "winter water wonderland," many MSU students and faculty each winter would rather call it hell.

The MSU campus has 20,241 parking spaces, 33 miles of roads and drives and about 98 miles of sidewalks and terraces which have to be maintained during the winter months. All of these total approximately 275 acres of area which has to be plowed, salted and sanded.

While some motorists battle blizzards and wade through mountains of snow in campus parking lots to drive, others prefer to wait until spring thaws to locate hopelessly lost or broken autos. In either case, headaches are created and this year the campus grounds department has an answer.

"We're looking for cooperation from students, faculty and staff in regards to the problem of sizable snow removal," Charles F. Kell, grounds supervisor, said. "The main problem our department has with plowing the parking lots is trying to get around cars which are parked in the center."

After the lots clear out for the day, it would help the crew if car owners would move their cars to the perimeters of the lots so they can plow as much of the area as possible, he said.

President named in Burundi

KINSHASHA, Zaire (AP) — Col. Jean-Baptiste Bagaza was appointed Wednesday as president of the small central African republic of Burundi, one of the world's poorest and most densely populated countries, the official Zaire Press Agency reported.

The formal appointment of Bagaza, 30, came 10 days after he led a bloodless coup against President Michel Micombero. He was chosen by a new 30-man military Supreme Revolutionary Council.

Bagaza, former deputy chief of staff of the Burundi armed forces, also will head the civilian executive council set up to carry out the revolutionary council's directives, the agency said.

Micombero was reported in custody of the new leaders, but it was not known what his fate would be.

Burundi, located in west central Africa between Zaire and Tanzania, has an area 10,759 square miles and a per capita income of about $80 a year.

FRB chairperson to cooperate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Board Chairperson Arthur Burns Thursday pledged to cooperate with President-elect Jimmy Carter, but said the board will not yield its responsibility to make "independent judgments" of economic events.

Burns said the board has eased slightly its money and interest rate policies in recent weeks, and would ease them further if the economy needs it. However, he said it would be a "ruinous policy" to take all restraint off the money supply.

Burns, whose term as chairperson continues until January 1978, testified before the Senate Banking Committee on the board's money growth targets for the next year.

Fighter plane brought to surface

WASHINGTON (AP) — An F14 fighter plane that toppled into the North Atlantic from an aircraft carrier deck nearly two months ago has been brought to the surface in a partial recovery operation, the Navy announced Thursday.

But the Navy, which failed in three earlier recovery attempts, said the $14 million plane will not be lifted to the deck of a West German salvage ship until it is towed to more sheltered waters in the Orkney Islands.

Officials expect the plane to be little more than junk when finally recovered. But they consider recovery important to keep the fighter's sensitive equipment out of Soviet hands.

The Navy recovered a highly classified Phoenix missile on Oct. 31 that had fallen from the aircraft.

Sources say GOP head may quit

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Mary Louise Smith intends to resign as chairperson of the Republican National Committee, highly placed sources said Thursday.

Smith, who has served on the national committee since 1964 and as GOP national chairperson for more than two years, will resign in the near future, though her decision will be made "reluctantly," the sources said.

The resignation could set off a major struggle for control of the party in the aftermath of President Ford's loss to Democrat Jimmy Carter in last week's election. Sources said Smith wanted to remain on as the party chief and begin the post-election process of rebuilding the GOP in time for the 1978 elections.

New 1040 tax form confusing

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you thought it was tough filling out your income tax form last year, wait until you see the new 1040.

The Internal Revenue Service released copies of the new tax form Thursday with a message from IRS Commissioner Donald C. Alexander that "completing your return this year could be more difficult."

The new 1040 has about half a dozen differences from the 1975 form with the major change requiring all taxpayers to turn to mathematical skills to compute taxable income. This one change alone has IRS preparing to look for more arithmetic mistakes by taxpayers than last year, according to an IRS spokesman.

Judge halts 'Red Squad' spying

CHICAGO (UPI) — A federal judge has ordered the Chicago Police Dept. to stop spying on lawyers who have sued police for spying on community groups.

Police say they have stopped spying on lawyers for the Alliance to End Repression, which has filed a suit over the activities of so-called "Red Squad," a police intelligence unit that gathers information on alleged subversive groups.

But U.S. District Court Judge Alfred Y. Kirkland Wednesday enjoined further spying on the legal team, saying there is evidence infiltration and spying is "likely to recur if an injunction is not granted."

UAW knocks offer by GM

DETROIT (UPI) — The United Auto Workers Thursday said the first economic offer General Motors has made in four months of contract negotiations contains "many shortfalls" and countered with new contract demands one week before a strike deadline for 390,000 workers.

The bargaining teams met for 45 minutes in a "main table" meeting headed by UAW Vice President Irving Bluestone and GM Vice President George Morris Jr.

The UAW will strike the world's largest auto company at 12:01 a.m. Nov. 19 unless there is an agreement to a three-year contract that matches contracts worked out at the Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp.

Gunmen mar Lebanese truce

BEIRUT, (AP) — Gunmen attempted to kill a prominent Christian politician in Beirut's Moslem sector Thursday, grazing his hip and marring a Syrian-imposed truce in the civil war.

Raymond Edde said he was returning to his downtown villa from lunch at a seaside hotel when a car with four men inside pulled up from behind and a submachine gun opened up.

"I was just getting out of the car when they opened fire. I hit the dirt and hunched under the car," he said. "As you can see, a bullet ripped through my sweater and another grazed my left hip."

Edde's bodyguard was hit twice in the head and taken to the American University Hospital for emergency treatment, Edde said.

Edde is leader of the National Bloc party and former presidential candidate. The 63-year-old Maronite Christian has remained in Moslem territory throughout the war.

Edde indirectly accused the Syrian occupation forces of being behind the attempt on his life, but said he had no proof.

"I am operating by deduction," he told reporters. "The Palestinians have nothing against me and the rightist Christian Phalangists don't come into this area."

Edde often has severely criticized Syria's intervention in Lebanon's civil war.

In Tel Aviv, well-informed Israeli sources said Israeli artillery is bombarding Palestinian guerrilla targets in southern Lebanon in a bid to block a possible resurgence of guerrilla actions on Israel's border. The bombardments are aimed at warning the Syrian army in Lebanon against moving south to the border zone, the sources said.

Rhodesian talks stalled on setting rule deadline

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Rhodesia settlement talks apparently remained deadlocked on the issue of setting a deadline for black majority rule after key black nationalist leaders on Thursday failed to accept a new compromise British proposal.

There were some indications, however, that the black leaders privately may be easing their rigid stance on a maximum 12-month period for the changeover to full black rule in Rhodesia.

Meanwhile, Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere has called on Britain to assume more direct responsibility for the Rhodesia changeover by naming Britons as interim ministers of defense and foreign affairs in the breakaway colony.

In an interview with The Associated Press in Dar Es Salaam, Nyerere cautioned that if Britain fails to assume its full burden in the Rhodesian transition government, "the British must bear the responsibility for the continuation of the war in Rhodesia."

In Geneva, Rhodesian guerrilla leader Robert Mugabe met for nearly three hours at the Palais des Nations with Ivor Richard, British chairperson of the conference, but told reporters "no progress was made."

Richard said he had "detailed and long discussions" with Mugabe and his "Patriotic Front" ally Joshua Nkomo. British diplomat said he had seen leaders of all four delegations and officials of white Rhodesian government separately again on Friday.

Other black leaders taking part in the Geneva talks include Methodist Bishop Abel Muzorewa, leader of the African National Council, and the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole.

World-renowned artist, inventor of mobile dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Alexander Calder, whose mobiles gave motion and a new dimension to American sculpture, died at dawn Thursday at a daughter's Greenwich Village home. He was 78.

Calder was at the height of his artistic prowess and was riding the crest of a worldwide were showering him with commissions, and a book, also called "Calder's Universe," had just been published.

Indicative of Calder's universality, he flew to Philadelphia — his home town — two weeks ago for ceremonies in his honor aboard a Braniff jet whose wild color scheme he had designed.

Calder thought the idea "great fun."

He also designed toys, jewelry, kitchen utensils, rugs, tapestries and fountains.

His first major public work was a fountain — of mercury cascading over welded strings of gunshot — which he designed to stand in front of his friend Picasso's "Guernica" at the Paris World's Fair of 1937.

He was "the first American modernist working in any medium to impose himself on the history of art as an artist of worldwide importance and to be universally recognized as such," said a spokesperson for the Museum of Modern Art which gave him his first major show back in 1943.

It is as inventor of the mobile — moving sculpture — that Calder is most well known, though he also achieved substantial fame from his "stabiles," stationary objects.

He was born in Lawnton, Pa., July 22, 1898, the son of American sculptor Alexander Sterling Calder and painter Nanette Calder. His grandfather, Alexander Milne Calder, was the sculptor of the huge statue of William Penn atop Philadelphia's City Hall.

His training as an engineer at the Stevens Institute of Technology in Hoboken, N.J., gave him the background for constructing his immense, moving works.

Thomas Hoving, director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, called Calder's work "inventive, joyful, yet powerful and at the same time imbued with an excellence of craftsmanship."

Handicapper enrollment rises; increases expected for future

By JUDY PUTNAM
State News Staff Writer

General enrollment is beginning to rise at MSU, the number of handicappers has increased and is expected to continue to do so.

In 1970, there were two or three wheelchair users on campus. Today there are 30 and more are expected to be in the building for winter term.

Because of federal regulations, admission officers cannot request information on handicappers. Consequently, there are no records on the enrollment of handicappers other than the information gathered by the Office of Programs for Handicapped (OPH). Students must identify themselves to the office.

Cliff Taylor, director of special programs at MSU, said that the increase in enrollment occurred because of "word of mouth" and because of an active recruiting effort.

At a point with accessibility that is being achieved, Taylor said, "I think the quality of what is being done at MSU is greater than most."

Taylor said because of increased accessibility and because of new funds for the visually handicapped, handicapper enrollment will increase.

"I think that we will attract more and more students," she said.

In 1974 the University received a state grant which it matched with $61,688 to make over $300,000 available for the removal of barriers on campus. While only 2 per cent of buildings on campus are totally accessible, there are between 40 and 50 per cent which have limited accessibility.

New equipment for visually handicapped students including talking calculators, was received this term. Currently MSU, which is the only university in Michigan besides Wayne State University which provides services to the blind, has about 40 students.

"Overall Michigan State is doing really well," Mike Ellis, OPH coordinator of services to the blind, said.

Ellis said that he expects an increase in enrollment of blind students in part due to the new equipment.

"The attitudes (to the handicapper) are much more positive than any other university in the country," Len Sawish said. Sawish is chairperson of Students for Total Integration through Greater Mobility and Accessibility (STIGMA).

While the University of Illinois has the best reputation for accessibility, Sawish said that MSU is "one of the better ones."

"Which isn't saying very much," he added.

MSU student Jeff Knoll also attributed an increased enrollment to attitudes.

"I think attitudes of admission, the people who work through OPH and the publicity from STIGMA have contributed to the increase in numbers," he said. "We're going to see a constant increase."

The problems of handicappers on campus, the distant possibility of an MSU law school and the question of future tuition hikes were among the concerns voiced by Case Hall students who met with two MSU Trustees and the trustee-elect Wednesday night.

Trustee Warren Huff, D-Plymouth, Trustee Blanche Martin, D-East Lansing and Trustee-elect Michael Smydra, D-Lansing, dined with members of the Residence Halls Assn. (RHA) and later held a question and answer session with about 50 students in South Case Hall TV lounge.

All eight board members and Trustee-elect Smydra were invited to meet with students, but the other trustees had apparently run into schedule conflicts.

The open forum was the kick-off of a series entitled "Meet the University," sponsored by the Case Hall Advisory Staff and the Case Hall Student Government, according to South Case Hall head advisor Dave Byelich.

One of the most-debated questions was whether or not another tuition hike would be recommended in the near future by the trustees.

"Over and over again, we have wrestled with that decision," Trustee Huff, a 15-year veteran of the board, told the students.

"If we were to raise the tuition as high as that of our friends down the road in Ann Arbor, we would gain $6 million a year. But the board would never take that route."

"Do you think tuition would be raised this school year?" a student called out.

"Ask these guys," Trustee Huff said, laughing as he leaned back in his chair and indicating Trustee Martin and Trustee-elect Smydra. Huff will be retiring from the board in January.

"We have toyed with the idea of a $1 surcharge, but we certainly won't do it unless we have to," Martin said.

"Whenever the University gets in a financial bind, the students get stuck," Smydra commented. He received both his bachelor's and master's degrees in communications from MSU.

"I have already proposed that the entire university share the burden. If tuition is increased, we should cut administrators' salaries a bit as well," he concluded. Nods of approval from the students signified agreement with his statement.

"What is the purpose of the split tuition?" a woman asked, referring to the difference in get the books printed free of charge."

Information contained in the directory will be the same as last year's and will include the student's program, class level, phone number and address. In 1974, the MSU Committee on the Release of Confidential Information had decided that information on program, class level, marital status and so on would be deleted from that year's directory. It was argued that including such information was in violation of the Family Rights and Privacy Act, designed to make confidential student records more accessible to the University student, but closed to parents, employers or institutions. Guidelines for interpreting the federal law are unclear and, therefore, the coded information in the student directories is not specifically prohibited.

"The 1976-77 directory will look just like a regular phone book and will have a multicolor cover," Perrin said. "We are trying out a different type arrangement, too, for easier reading."

ASMSU payments could lead to audit

By GEORGIA HANSHEW
State News Staff Writer

Questions concerning ASMSU expenditures, including a $995 payment to the ASMSU attorney last spring, have prompted members to investigate the possibility of an audit of ASMSU's Business Office.

Michael Lenz, ASMSU president, and ASMSU Legal Services Cabinet said they feel that a financial audit is in order. They are questioning the legality of a substantial withdrawal from the Legal Services Defense Fund last spring without the cabinet's consent.

Conflicting opinions are held by current and former ASMSU members on how the defense fund, which is a line item of Legal Services' budget, can be spent.

J. Brian Raymond, former ASMSU president, and Jim Haischer, ASMSU comptroller, said the defense fund can be spent by the president, with the signature of the comptroller.

Lenz and the codirectors of Legal Services, Greg Hoyle and Bob Stark, said they feel the president should not have the authority to spend money from Legal Services' budget without first consulting Legal Services.

The conflict centers around a payment made last spring to Ken Smith, ASMSU attorney, for preparation of a lawsuit against the State News. Raymond said he authorized the $995 payment which came out of the defense fund.

The ASMSU president has the power to authorize budget expenditures from the budgets of ASMSU cabinets, Raymond said, since the code of operations states that "Cabinet Directors shall be responsible to the President."

The code of operations does not specify who has the authority to withdraw money from the budgets of cabinets.

"I don't think he's correct in asserting that he can spend the money whenever he wants," Hoyle said.

"Technically, I think he's wrong in terms of any type of fiscal responsibility and fairness," he said.

"On paper he may be right. It's his method of doing it that was not proper," he said.

Hoyle said he is trying to rewrite the sections of ASMSU's code which deal with financial matters.

"I'd like to revise it and make the comptroller's duties more specifically outlined," he said.

The defense fund, Stark said, is barely large enough to cover costs for one large court case or two minor cases in a year.

"The defense fund is used to pay attorney and court fees in precedence-setting cases on behalf of the students," he said.

Raymond withdrew $995 from the $1,469 defense fund to pay Smith.

"I really question his ability to do that without contacting Legal Services," Hoyle said.

Raymond said he informed the board of his intention to withdraw money from the fund, but since the decision was not subject to the board's approval, they did not vote on it. Haischer said the president has the power to spend the defense fund as he wishes, subject to his (Haischer's) signature.

Before signing for an expenditure, Haischer said, "I'd call up the board members and ask them about it."

Haischer explained that there are several line items in Legal Services' budget over which they have no control, and the defense fund is one of them. There are no written specifications concerning which items are under the control of the cabinets and which are under the president's control, he said.

He said his knowledge of the matter was passed on to him by the previous comptroller, Barb Paulus.

Legal Services and Lenz are investigating the cost of having an audit made of ASMSU's books.

"I think an audit's a good idea," Lenz said.

"I think it would be good to discern what is going on there to make sure that everything's tight," Hoyle said.

The average hourly rate for an independent audit by a certified public accountant (CPA) is about $20 or $25, said CPA Jim Ireland.

Lenz said he and Legal Services are checking into the possibility of a free audit by the University or the state.

NONNAMAKER REJECTS APPEAL

New election possible

A Thursday ruling by Vice President of Student Affairs Eldon Nonnamaker may pave the way for an entire new election for the College of Education seat on the ASMSU Board.

Nonnamaker rejected an appeal, brought to him by the Counterforce slate, on a Student Faculty Judiciary (SFJ) ruling that prohibited runners-up to be seated after the invalidation of a winner.

Kathy Wright, top vote-getter in the College of Education, was invalidated by the All University Elections Commission (AUUC) for filing a campaign expenditure sheet late and is still involved in appeal of that invalidation. Mary Cloud, second vote getter in that college, has been seated on the ASMSU board since Counterforce, the slate of which she was a member, was cleared by Nonnamaker of charges of campaign violations.

Though SFJ ruled that second-place candidates could not be seated on the board, Nonnamaker has allowed Cloud to remain seated until the issue is decided.

Jeff Greenwald, second vote getter in University College, is also currently seated on the board.

By rejecting the Counterforce appeal on that SFJ ruling, Nonnamaker has left open the possibility of appeal to the SFJ once more.

Kent Barry, former ASMSU board member and counsel for Wright, expressed confidence that this action could lead to a new election for the College of Education, in which Wright would most likely be a candidate.

"This has put the problem back on them (the second-place vote getters seated on the board)," Barry said, "which is where it should be."

One of the major factors surrounding the appeal on the original SFJ ruling was that the ruling did not result from any case brought before the judiciary, but was a decision the group decided to make.

In his rejection of the appeal, Nonnamaker addressed that problem, saying that while the SFJ does not have the authority to rule on the question, "I am troubled that the ruling did not derive from a hearing based on an actual complaint which had been filed with the judiciary."

Nonnamaker recommended that the case go back to the judiciary, where a decision can be made "on the merits of the case."

WILL NOT RAISE TUITION 'UNLESS WE HAVE TO'

Trustees respond to student questions

By ANNE E. STUART
State News Staff Writer

The problems of handicappers on campus, the distant possibility of an MSU law school and the question of future tuition hikes were among the concerns voiced by Case Hall students who met with two MSU Trustees and the trustee-elect Wednesday night.

Trustee Warren Huff, D-Plymouth, Trustee Blanche Martin, D-East Lansing and Trustee-elect Michael Smydra, D-Lansing, dined with members of the Residence Halls Assn. (RHA) and later held a question and answer session with about 50 students in South Case Hall TV lounge.

All eight board members and Trustee-elect Smydra were invited to meet with students, but the other trustees had apparently run into schedule conflicts.

The open forum was the kick-off of a series entitled "Meet the University," sponsored by the Case Hall Advisory Staff and the Case Hall Student Government, according to South Case Hall head advisor Dave Byelich.

One of the most-debated questions was whether or not another tuition hike would be recommended in the near future by the trustees.

"Over and over again, we have wrestled with that decision," Trustee Huff, a 15-year veteran of the board, told the students.

"If we were to raise the tuition as high as that of our friends down the road in Ann Arbor, we would gain $6 million a year. But the board would never take that route."

"Do you think tuition would be raised this school year?" a student called out.

"Ask these guys," Trustee Huff said, laughing as he leaned back in his chair and indicating Trustee Martin and Trustee-elect Smydra. Huff will be retiring from the board in January.

"We have toyed with the idea of a $1 surcharge, but we certainly won't do it unless we have to," Martin said.

"Whenever the University gets in a financial bind, the students get stuck," Smydra commented. He received both his bachelor's and master's degrees in communications from MSU.

"I have already proposed that the entire university share the burden. If tuition is increased, we should cut administrators' salaries a bit as well," he concluded. Nods of approval from the students signified agreement with his statement.

"What is the purpose of the split tuition?" a woman asked, referring to the difference in tuition charges between upper- and lower-division students.

"The price to educate a junior or senior is about four times more than we charge in tuition," Huff answered. "If we had to charge students what it costs to educate them, we'd price ourselves right out of business."

"Not everyone agrees on that," Martin pointed out. "I don't favor the split tuition because I think it prices poorer students out of certain areas."

"What about an MSU law school?" a student queried suddenly. Both the trustees and the audience smiled at the question.

"Don't hold your breath. Apply to some other schools," Smydra, a Lansing Cooley Law school student, advised.

"I'm a handicapped student," a male student said from the back of the room. "I can't get a parking space on campus. I keep getting a runaround from the police and the administration. They don't want handicappers on campus, I guess."

"You need an advocate. That's what we're here for," Huff said.

"Give one of us your name and address and we'll see if we can work it out."

After two more hours of questions about almost every imaginable campus issue, the audience began to drift away to homework or recreation and the three trustees took their leave.

"Come to our open sessions. We're the best board in Michigan and we need your ideas," Huff urged the students.

"Don't just forget all about us when we walk out the door," Smydra added.

"What's more important, don't you forget about us," a Case Hall resident replied.

MORE NUCLEAR FUEL USE SEEN

Energy shift predicted

EAST LANSING (UPI) — In less than five years, 22 per cent of the electricity used by Consumers Power Co. customers will be produced by nuclear energy, according to Consumers President John D. Selby.

Selby told an energy symposium Thursday that 12 per cent of the utility's electricity is currently produced from uranium.

He said nuclear energy has made a significant contribution to fulfilling energy demands, noting that citizens in 10 states now receive 25 per cent or more of their power from nuclear generating facilities.

The leading nuclear state is Connecticut, he said, which gets about half its electricity from nuclear plants. In nearby states, 30 per cent of the electricity in Illinois and 29 per cent of Wisconsin's power are produced by nuclear energy.

An obvious reason for the growing use of uranium is economics, Selby said. He said that, during the first half of 1976, nuclear power continued its record as the lowest cost producer of electricity, except for water power.

Selby said a survey of electrical generation showed the actual cost of producing a kilowatt hour of electricity from nuclear power in the first six months of this year averaged 1.5 cents, compared with 3.6 cents for kilowatt hours produced by oil, 1.8 cents for coal and 2.3 cents for oil and coal combined.

"I believe that the evidence is in," he said. "Nuclear is very much a part of our present, not to mention our future."

What they do when they think no one's looking . . . Vermont Royster, former editor of the Wall Street Journal was giving a talk in the Kellogg Center Auditorium Thursday night. His speech — on American politics — had nothing to do with the humorous incident, but a politician (supposedly a former politician) was, in fact involved.

Before Royster's speech, a State News reporter was strolling through the Kellogg Center Parking lot when a very large yellow Buick Limited, license number PDR-268, tooted into the lot and, seeing no other spaces available, pulled into a space designated for handicappers. A group of people leaped out of the car laughing and talking and among them — with at best a dubious claim to being a handicapper, was none other than . . . Cliff Taylor.

Great Issues program still failing MSU

For many years, the budget of ASMSU's Great Issues languished far behind other areas. Two years ago, it operated on a budget of a little over $2,100.

Feeling that figure ridiculously low, the State News checked into speaker programs in other universities and found them better run, better financed and — not surprisingly — producing better results.

In 1976, the Great Issues budget was increased to $7,000, yet the results have not grown in proportion to the budget.

Part of the reason for this failure centers around the "bread and circuses" attitude of those who actually choose the speakers.

Last year, Great Issues brought us an editor from National Lampoon, a report on Cousteau's Calypso, and the man who gave us "Hearts and Minds." These programs had popularity, to be sure, but they steer the only source of finances for major speakers in a dangerous direction: toward another form of entertainment.

This failure has not been insufferable only because departments and agencies brought men and women of substance to campus last year, most notably Jorge Luis Borges.

Also, Great Issues provided us with a valuable panel forum on the Student Workers Union and rent control.

But it should never be forgotten that outside speakers of a high caliber augment a university in a very special way which simple entertainment does not. A special intellectual concern which transends academic interest accompanies the appearance of a Supreme Court justice, a major political figure, a writer.

His or her ideas are spread to all areas of the campus where they are debated, criticized, discussed. The atmosphere is one, not of forced feeding of technical disciplines, but of genuine intellectual concern.

Perhaps the failure of our Great Issues program reflects, in a microcosm, our growing failure to be one university, our failure to be a community. Many do not know that Great Issues exists; many do not care. More tragically, many are simply disconcerted with anything beyond their academic specialty.

Such are organizational problems which MSU's Great Issues faces which other programs elsewhere do not face; there are financial problems which we face that others do not; but most importantly, Great Issues faces a problem which no other good program faces: a lack of understanding in all concerned of what a speaker program should do for the university community.

Until this problem disappears, there can be no improvement for Great Issues.

SAT essay to document trend

The recent decision by the Educational Testing Service to add an essay component to the SAT must be seen in light of the seven-year downward trend of SAT scores at all levels.

While the new component is a good thing, it is a good thing only because it will be a better indicator of a student's writing ability.

However, the improvement in detecting student verbal failure does not get to the causes of the problem and therefore should be seen in no other light than a sad but necessary measure suited to today's students.

While it is certainly a complex task to assign causes to the failure — everything from TV to cultural chauvinism has been blamed — those of us at a university should not shrink from asserting the importance of language in its written and spoken form.

The failure of our secondary schools is apparent, and there is little doubt that certain pressures within our society also lend themselves to discouraging students away from grasping the essentials of written and spoken English.

The University, confronted with this situation, must assent to it and shirk its responsibility, or it must counteract it by asserting its traditional role of turning out men and women, not merely who can read and write, but who can think as well.

The decline in language skills threatens this function. The need for remedial programs, regardless of whether credit is granted; the need for the encouragement of high standards of language competency; and the need for a nationwide strategy at all educational levels to combat declining skills all come to light in the same sad but necessary fashion.

The SAT essay component can merely document further an already alarming tendency; what we do with this information in a large part determines how well or poorly our educational system will be in the years to come.

LETTERS To the Editor

Blunder

Chalk up another blunder to the insanity of the editorial staff of the State News.

After reading the Nov. 8 editorial, "Senseless traditions," I was shocked, angered and infuriated at the lack of perception of the staff of this paper. No longer do you see fraternity pledges degraded on this campus. The main reason is that MSU fraternities do not haze anymore.

After the decline of the Greek system in the 1960s, it became necessary to change some "senseless traditions." At the top of the list were the initiation rites referred to as hazing. Through the work of many concerned Greeks, an alternative form of initiation — one that better prepares a pledge for membership — has been devised.

We consider the inference in your article regarding an increase in danger to the college student because of the resurgence of fraternities and sororities at MSU defamatory, and can result from only one source: ignorance. Instead of praising MSU's Greeks for being progressive, you condemn all Greeks, when it is only a handful of people that are blind to the implications of hazing.

The MSU Greeks do more for this community than any other single entity at this university and it is about time the State News woke up. We do not condone what has gone on in the past, nor can we condone what happened in New York. However, by the same token we cannot ignore the lack of insight of the State News.

Fraternities celebrated their Bicentennial anniversary this year. If they are so reactionary, why have they survived for 200 years? My answer is that they have continued to change when the need was there. As the attitudes of students change, so will fraternities.

We can only hope the State News will finally recognize these changes.

The editorial in question contained no implication whatever which could possibly be construed as critical of MSU's Greeks. The claim that the editorial is defamatory is an inference — totally within the perception of the writers of this letter — which requires a rather active imagination and a robust insecurity. Reiterating what the editorial actually said, "At MSU, the ROTC initiation is tame and mild, consisting of classes and academic level activities." — Ed.

Accuracy

In the Nov. 8 editorial, "Senseless traditions," the general accuracy of the stated facts is commendable. The tragedy within the Pershing Rifles is indeed reminiscent of the barbaric initiation practices of the past. We propose, however, that it highlights an activity which has been outlawed by Greek systems on both the local and national levels.

All national fraternity assemblies at some point have taken a stand against hazing; most have constitutionally banned it, and will discipline any chapter proven to be in violation: charter suspension is possible. The bylaws of The Michigan State University Interfraternity Council Constitution declare its strong stance against hazing in Article IV.

The same energy which prompted the college student of the late 1960s to re-evaluate his/her stand on moral issues, and strive to reconstruct those of society, let to the implementation of rules, which were meant to reduce and finally exclude hazing practices throughout the national Greek systems.

The resurgence of fraternities and sororities seems to indicate an overall decline in the practice of physical and mental degradation: the basic components of hazing.

Just as the ROTC program here at MSU is realistic in its ideas regarding initiation, so are the fraternities and sororities. This reflects the integrity of MSU students in general.

We are happy that the State News shares our views on the importance of the hazing issue.

Reclassify vans

It's that time of year again when van owners must register their vehicles; yet many "windowless" owners continue to pay commercial license plate rates. You can reclassify most of these vans as either a station wagon or a mobile home. A station wagon must contain a fixed seat and windows on both sides (no size limit) to the rear of the driver's cab area. While a mobile home must include a bed (sleeping bag, stove (Coleman) and a refrigerator (ice box). I chose to reclassify my Chevy van as a station wagon. This involves three steps.

First, a police officer must inspect your van to see if it complies to the desired classification. He signs a form obtainable at the secretary of state's office. Next, you lighten your vehicle (remove the spare, empty the gas tank, etc.) and let someone weigh it: I chose Cheney Concrete Co. And finally, armed with your inspection sheet and weigh slip, you apply for a new title at the secretary of state's office. Reclassification cut my license plate fee from about $40 to $20. Good luck.

Savings

To those of you who may be concerned about the higher costs of processing, shipping and handling of returnable bottles, you could have saved a huge amount of money by not waging a multimillion dollar campaign against the throwaway.

Bottles

As a distant observer of the bottle bill campaign, it was good to see how one local food store refused to get involved with the Committee Against Forced Deposits and remained adamant in its support of Proposal A: Campus Corners.

It isn't very often that a business will put the environment or anything else above want for profit.

It would be nice if the store would make a habit of such concern and activism by not selling Gallo wine and South Africa beer.

VIEWPOINT: ADVERTISING

Racist, colonialist or imperialistic

By EDWARD P. KARLINSKI JR.
The State News printed a viewpoint Nov. 8 by Alberto Ysunza-Ogazon which dealt critically with an ad insert for "El Toro" tequila. While I empathize with his indignation over the general tone of the ad, I am unable to abide the unwarranted and often ludicrous assertions on which he bases his indignation.

Ysunza-Ogazon bases his opinion on three major assertions: that the ad is racist, that the ad is colonialist and that the advertisers involved are imperialists.

To be racist, the ad would have to have been designed to advocate the belief that one race is inherently superior to another. Though the ad obviously portrays false and insulting caricatures of Mexicans, its purpose is quite clearly to sell tequila and not to advocate such a belief.

Were the ad colonialist, it would have to have advocated the control by one power over a dependent area or people. "El Toro"

First clothing, now books

Oh, it was ridiculous, so stupid!

Putting the tags on every little piece of clothing. One hardly had time to serve the customers.

There were these white slabs of plastic and we had to pin them on every top and bottom, every shirt, every sweater. Occasionally I would forget to unpin the "crime detection" device after making a sale, or I wouldn't see it hiding there in the croch area of those Levi's.

I suppose the same thing will be happening at the Library when someone doesn't remember to desensitize the "Tattle-tape" on the books. Fireworks, sirens, "security guards . . ."

It would happen to the perfect people. You know, the mother with kids that have to go to the potty or it would happen to some very distinguished dude who just bought a suit and some ties and shirts, a regular credit-card customer.

It was so funny when the buzzer alarm would go off. Suddenly the titanic security guard would shake from his daze or his flirt with one of the beautiful women employees and he would, in sheer panic, chase after

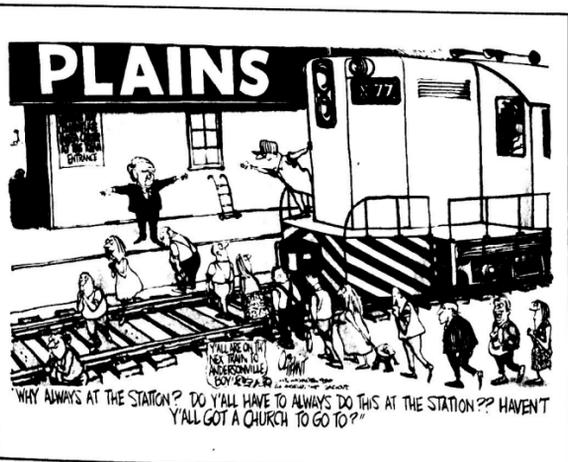

Mrs. Lotsokids who didn't even have a crazy thing because she's screaming of the kids to shut up and "wait till I'm home for dinner."

"I'm sorry, ma'am, I'll have to check sack."

And when someone wanted to rip they did it quickly and really busting. Just walk in, take the clothes and hardly ever got caught. See, the folks are there to watch us work because every good store owner knows are the ones actually ripping his line.

So who wins from this "crime detection and prevention" racket? Why, Mr. Security himself, who "trains" anyone can walk and wear glasses at the same time and who pays them $1.80 an hour. And of course, Mr. Buzzo, who's very expensive, yet super-fragile flakes that have to be snapped and off garments with pliers half the "That's who."

So the next time you are shopping of us clothing sales folks a big favor on having Mr. Titanic check to see the store clerk does not steal the beautiful Buzzo tag from your garment. You all, are paying a pretty price for it.

Aspirations high for professional jobs

This is the last of a series of articles on employment and its effect on the quality of American life.

By SUE STEWARD
State News Staff Writer
After sinking almost $3,000 a year for years into an education, I certainly expect to have to push a broom after graduation.
College education no longer exempts a student from the unemployment lines, and the fear of unemployment faces many MSU students.
I've focused my education on management and its aspects, so why should I have to go to work as a laborer? a senior in personnel management asked.
Report released earlier this week at a conference of the National Assessment of Educational Progress attempted to give some insights into the reasons why large numbers of college graduates are dissatisfied with their education and are discouraged by job prospects.

The report shows that 44 per cent of the country's high school students aspire to professional jobs, despite the fact that only 14 per cent of the national employment slots are classified as "professional" by the Dept. of Labor.

This aspiration for "professional" jobs does not decrease among college students. "I'm in the school of urban planning and the only types of jobs which I am considering after graduation would all have to be labeled as professional," one concerned student said. "Urban planning positions just don't exist on unprofessional levels."

The College of Business, which offers degrees almost totally on a "professional" level, this year became the largest degree-granting college at MSU, said James F. Rainey, asst. dean of academic programs for the College of Business.

"Our enrollments have been rising due to a renewed interest in career opportunities," Rainey said. "We find that students now are entering programs with career goals in mind. Students have heard from Placement Services and through the media that business courses and business degrees are going to help them find jobs."

"The demand from students for placement presentations and information is just snowballing," John Shingleton, director of Placement Services, said.

"In our presentations, we try to prepare students for their expectations," he said. "We want to try to help them cope with the job market and maximize their own potential."

Shingleton said that perhaps some students' expectations may be too high.

"But that should not be a major concern," he said. "If they get in an organization and prove that they have the needed abilities they will be identified and will move up in the organization."

Shingleton said part of the problem facing graduates in the job market is increase in the number of college graduates in the past 10 years.

"In 1965, there were slightly more than 500,000 students who graduated with bachelor's degrees, while in 1975 there were close to 1,000,000 graduates," he said.

"Society simply doesn't generate enough jobs to keep in step with the output of the universities," he said. "This problem is going to be with us for a number of years, and certainly for at least the next decade."

Shingleton pointed out that the major concern for graduates is underemployment, rather than actual unemployment.

"Last year, three months after graduation, only 10 per cent of all college graduates were unemployed, while 20 per cent faced underemployment," he said.

Students who have not factored work experience into their education are often faced with the underemployment dilemma, Shingleton said.

"Students need to realize that it may take several years for them to phase into a job on the level at which they think they should be," he said.

The release of the report by the National Assessment of Educational Progress is at a time of debate at the conference over the value of a college degree. The findings at the conference are expected to figure in future discussions regarding the disillusionment suffered by students who prepare for jobs that do not exist or for jobs for which their talents are ill-suited.

Many of the more than 6,000 educators attending the conference believe that stronger career education programs are important if students are to have a better understanding of the labor market and do a better job of assessing their own job potential.

Career education, a concept that began to attract attention in 1971, involves providing high school students with job information and experience through classroom studies and observation and participation in the world of work.

U.S. views Chile, Brazil 2 ways, author says

Sanders

By JOYCE LASKOWSKI
State News Staff Writer

The U.S. government has taken two views with regard to authoritarian regimes in Chile and Brazil, according to an American Universities Field Staff member. Thomas G. Sanders, author of "Catholic Innovation in a Changing Latin America," explained these views at a foreign affairs forum Wednesday.

The first viewpoint, associated with the U.S. State Dept., is an attempt to express the opinion that the regimes conflict with U.S. "morals." The United States has made it clear it does not approve of the regimes in Chile and Brazil, Sanders said.

The second view is representative of Congress, he said. Economic sanctions, such as the reduction of aid to Chile, have been attempted to persuade the authoritarian system to change.

DREAMSPEAKER

..... ACCURATE SOUND
AT A MODEST PRICE

... And the THIEL MODEL 1 Loudspeaker outclasses the competition in each of the major loudspeaker performance parameters. . . At a price most can afford.

- 1) EFFICIENCY
- 2) POWER HANDLING CAPABILITY
- 3) COMPACT SIZE
- 4) FREQUENCY RESPONSE & CLARITY

Although there are many interrelated factors that determine how a speaker sounds, a discussion of some of the 01's most critical performance characteristics will demonstrate its exceptional value.

The Thiel Model 01 bookshelf speaker system reflects a contemporary approach to the challenge of superior speaker system design. Its use of electronics reduces the cost of achieving high quality sound reproduction.

NATURAL REPRODUCTION The 01 is free of coloration. Coloration results from a speaker over or under emphasizing particular parts of the musical spectrum, producing its own characteristic 'sound.' While such exaggerations may be initially impressive, they mask the subtleties of the of the music and become irritating in time.

The 01 has exceptionally uniform response at all frequencies resulting in an accurate and properly balanced sound, free of coloration.

IN THE THIEL EQUALIZED SYSTEM the use of an electronic element (equalizer) frees the speaker-enclosure element from the efficiency/size constraint. The equalizer is used to balance the response before the power amplifier stage, eliminating the restriction on mid-band efficiency. Efficiency can be made higher in the mid-frequency band where it is valuable, even while allowing for a reduction in the enclosure size. Flat frequency response is thus achieved without the necessity of the acoustical element of the system being uniformly efficient throughout the system's response range.

THE FREQUENCY RESPONSE is exceptionally flat and Smooth (± 2dB) over the entire listening range from 30 Hz to 18,000 Hz. Furthermore, its deviation from ideal in the range from 35 to 1000 Hz, which includes the most critical mid-range, is undetectable (± 1dB).

TONE BURSTS are one of the best indicators of transient response, the ability of the speaker to instantaneously respond to rapidly changing musical waveforms. Note how similar these responses are to the input waveform demonstrating very little blurring of the signal.

RHA supports residents

By MICHAEL SAVEL
State News Staff Writer

The Residence Halls Assn. (RHA) assembly unanimously passed a motion Wednesday to support the efforts of South Complex residents to keep the old Wilson Hall library a study area instead of converting it into offices for the Office of Special Programs.

The Wilson Hall library was closed last term because of budget cuts and has since been used as a study area by South Complex residents.

The University is discussing plans to convert the study area into new space for the Office of Special Programs.

"Converting it into offices has been discussed, but I am not sure if they are going to go through with it," said David Diesing, asst. director of space utilization. "The area lends itself to be an office since it is in a centrally located student area."

John Allen, president of Wilson Hall Council, said the students' needs have not been taken into consideration by the University.

"The students of Wilson have not been considered as far as taking over that space," Allen said. "We have a petition drive going and we now have the support of RHA and the office of Student Affairs."

Allen said turning the library into offices defeats the concept of the dormitories being a complete living-learning experience.

"Dorms are supposed to be a living-learning experience and having offices does not benefit the students," he said. "It is the only good area in the complex to study and many students use it."

"I am sure that if the students are concerned, then their input would be welcome and their needs definitely taken into consideration," he said.

Florence Harris, asst. director of the Office of Special Programs, said a centralized office area would make the office more effective.

"A University committee reviewed our needs last December and they determined that having offices all over campus was not very effective," she said.

The Office of Special Programs offers assistance to all students with academic and economic needs. They have a tutoring service, workshops and run the Office of Programs for Handicappers housed in the MSU Library. The office has space in the Union, the Administration Building, the Library and Holden Hall.

Several students in Wilson Hall said the study room works as an advantage for all South Complex residents and that it is the only quiet place in the complex to study.

"It is usually very quiet and I use it all the time," said Karen VonRusten, 474 W. Wilson Hall. "They have already taken the books out, so they can at least leave us a place to study."

Another student said the library area is filled to capacity on most nights.

"I would feel really bad if they made it into offices," said Dori Douglas, 435 E. Wilson Hall. "There are always people in there and sometimes it is hard to find a seat."

The RHA assembly also passed a motion to continue to sponsor the annual spring concert after a long session of debate. ASMSU Pop Entertainment said they could produce the concert more efficiently and professionally, but since the concert committee has been working on the project for several weeks they will continue to sponsor it.

FOOD FOR

At La Villa

(FORMERLY PIZZA VILLA)

*"La Casa E' Piccola
Ma L'ospitalita
E' Grande"*

OUR HOUSE IS SMALL BUT OUR HOSPITALITY IS GREAT.

Italian proverb

You'll find everything Italy's noted for, from congeniality to red checkered table cloths, at La Villa, 2167 E. Grand River, Okemos (formerly Pizza Villa). The atmosphere is warm and cozy, with candle lit booths and tables. Instead of the usual restaurant paneled walls, you will be surrounded by hand painted murals of actual scenes from Venice. Take a closer look at the amazing detail and authenticity.

La Villa is continuously working on new entrees, however, the current menu would surely please any Italian connoisseur. Most recipes hail from an Italian family restaurant in Grand Rapids, also many faithful customers pass on their recipes. Put a little spice in your life! Favorites at La Villa are manicotti, a cheese or meat filled pasta, lasagna, veal parmigian, the anti-pasto salad, a tasty, colorful "meal in itself," and of course, pizzas, with fourteen items available. The sauces covering these delicious dishes are all homemade, dinners are well proportioned at moderate prices.

Dinner just wouldn't be Italian without a little "vino" to go along with it. At La Villa, the wine list is large, and the price is right. All bottled wines are imported Italian wines, and a fine California wine is the house wine. Perhaps you would prefer one of the house drinks, made with amaretto, an Italian liqueur. Try a Sicilian Sunrise, Green Goddess, Roman Chariot or an Italian Tower. One of the expert bartenders at La Villa will also prepare one of your favorite cocktails.

In the lounge you will find handmade stained glass decorations, and the 12 ft. Italian marble slab covering the bar is a genuine antique. You'll enjoy their pitcher and pizza specialties available on Monday and Tuesday nights. La Villa lounge has "Good Time" hours from 4-7 and with their special prices you couldn't help but have a good time.

For a welcome change, La Villa dining, La Villa lounge, they bring Italian elegance to town. Treat yourself to a little bit of Italy tonight.

WANTS ACCOUNTING OF MISSING MEN US to block Vietnam UN try

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States apparently is preparing to block Vietnam's application for membership in the United Nations for the first time in 15 months.

The Security Council has scheduled another debate Friday on the application from the communist country. A vote is expected by the middle of next week, but Washington signaled it still intends to keep Vietnam out of the world organization.

Some diplomats said the veto might be averted if the U.S. and Vietnam talks opening Friday produce quick progress on what the Americans consider the central issue, the U.S.

demand for a full accounting of some 800 Americans missing in action in the Vietnam war. But these sources said there was little chance of that happening.

The 14 other Security Council members spoke in favor of the Vietnamese application at Wednesday's meeting. The assembly cannot admit a new member without a recommendation from the council, and a big-power veto would block that recommendation.

In July 1975, after the Communist victory in Indochina, North and South Vietnam applied separately for U.N. membership. The United States vetoed both applications twice, using the excuse that the council had refused to take up South Korea's membership application. The second veto followed a General Assembly appeal for reconsideration.

Vietnam after its unification filed a new application on Aug. 10. The council postponed consideration of it until after the U.S. presidential election because Ambassador William Scranton said President Ford instructed him to use the veto again. This time the complaint was the so-called MIA issue, the failure of Hanoi to supply the information on the men missing in action.

President-elect Jimmy Carter said at the time that he agreed with Ford's decision.

Edison studying electric rates

By NANCY JARVIS
State News Staff Writer
Consumers may soon be charged for electricity by the time of day they use it rather than nondiscriminately, if current studies end favorably.

Detroit Edison is presently conducting a six-month-long study with 30 customers, charging them lesser rates for non-peak hour electric use and more for peak hour use. Generally, peak hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. with variations depending on the season.

This time of day pricing system has been used by Consumers Power Co. for the past 40 years for large industrial and commercial customers. Last April, in accordance with a rate order from the Michigan Public Service Commission (PSC), the system was expanded to include all commercial and industrial users.

A larger study, conducted by the PSC, which the Edison study is a part of, has revealed a favorable attitude from industries toward the time of day system. Basically, the survey reports, industries do not object to peak load pricing as long as the rates are based on costs. However, the companies do oppose the infliction of penalties on peak time periods.

Robert Wischmeyer, spokesperson for Consumers Power, said the Edison survey is an attempt to determine public sentiment toward peak hour rates.

"The surveys are related to whether residential customers can respond," he said. "We want to find out the practicality."

Wischmeyer said they will have a better idea of public acceptance in March when the survey is complete. But for now, the information is limited. He also said electric bills would be considerably lower when homeowners take advantage of the peak hours. However, he added that this requires a change of habits and all people may not be willing to oblige.

The new system, besides saving money for consumers, will help reduce electricity loads during the day.

Paul Gardner, spokesperson from the Lansing Consumers Power office, said the company has special plans for blackout and brownout situations. On Thursday, he said the company had to reduce service to all state facilities, cutting out all unnecessary uses to avoid an overload.

"We're in a bad situation," he said. Thus, the new system would spread out electricity use throughout a 24-hour period rather than having heavy use during prime hours.

Gardner said seemingly insignificant consumer activities can be detected in electricity metering. For example, he said the company can tell when deer season begins and when hunters leave in the morning. The first day, he said, the demand for electricity is great from 4 to 5 a.m., the second day from 5 to 6 a.m. and the third day, as hunters tire, the demand time is back to normal.

"We can see how people influence the line," Gardner said.

Regimes viewed two ways, author says

The Chilean regime, however, has announced it no longer has an interest in receiving U.S. aid, Sanders said.

"Liberal democracy, which is what we have in the United States, is not a system which is loved internationally," Sanders said. Other nations have been critical of the United States because of its participation in forms of repression, he added.

Sanders pointed to the "butcher of Vietnam" as an example of repression.

Chile and Brazil have become international symbols of repression, he said. They have received much publicity even though other countries are under authoritarian regimes, he added.

Violations of human rights occur in many other nations in the world, Sanders said, but Chile and Brazil go much further than most.

People are arrested and interrogated, Sanders said, often without charge. The torture of political prisoners in both countries often receives extensive publicity.

The repression takes other forms as well, he said. Restrictions on various types of expression, such as newspapers and other publications, are practiced in both countries, he added.

Chile is more restrictive than Brazil in this aspect, Sanders said.

Populism, a political movement based on urban masses, is restricted in both Chile and Brazil. The Brazilian regime is opposed to populism because it is viewed as a form of demagoguery, Sanders said.

The political rights of those suspected of association with Marxism in these countries are canceled, Sanders explained.

Brazil has attempted to retain a kind of linkage with its constitution.

"Here we have an authoritarian regime that wants to preserve at least some of the trappings of democracy," Sanders said.

Brazil, he said, has a functioning congress and indirect presidential elections in addition to its constitution. The president is elected by the congress.

There is a "relatively high degree of freedom of expression" in Brazil, Sanders said.

Chile, in contrast, has a much more restricted system, he added. Criticisms of foreign or educational policy are not allowed there, he said.

Chile, however, does tolerate some forms of group activity. Labor union leaders are allowed to make public statements.

Both Chile and Brazil have security groups which carry out regime restraints. Sanders described the Brazilian security apparatus as a "multiheaded monster." Often the repression is executed independently, since every citizen is expected to maintain security.

Security in Chile is executed by an organization called the DINA, which began in December 1973. This group, Sanders said, reports only to the president.

IN ELECTRONICS, SIMPLICITY IS THE ULTIMATE SOPHISTICATION.

INTRODUCING THE BEOMASTER 1900 RECEIVER

ONLY AT HI FI BUYS™ AND THE DISC SHOP

All major functions of the 1900 receiver are controlled by touch-sensitive electronic switches: the sculpted depressions aligned along the top panel. They are volume, input selection, selection of up to five user pre-set FM stations, and standby. These controls function electronically, completely eliminating mechanical linkages which can wear out or become misaligned (estimated to cause approximately 80% of service problems).

Also found under the aluminum lid are the controls for adjusting bass, treble, and balance between your speakers. These controls are smooth sliding potentiometers. Easily viewed, illuminated indicators are used to show visually the extent to which the controls have been moved from their neutral position.

When any of the electronic controls are touched, a lighted indicator immediately appears directly above. You always know the operational status of the 1900, even from across the room.

Composer to give recital

Ivan Drenikov, award-winning Bulgarian pianist and composer, will give a piano recital tonight at 8:15 in the Music Building Auditorium. Drenikov won the first prize and golden medal for composition in 1964, and in 1966 won the first prize in the F.P. Negila International Piano Competition. When Russian composer Aram Khachaturian heard Drenikov's compositions, he offered him a space in his composition classes any time, but Drenikov felt that, "It was more important to dedicate my full time to performing."

Tonight's program will consist of Vassil Kazandjiev's "Triomphe des Chloches," Gerard Shurmann's "Contrasts," Franz Schubert's "Sonata in A major Op. 120" and Sergei Prokofiev's "Sonata No. 6, in A major Op. 82."

'Horror Show:' chic decadence

By BYRON BAKER
State News Reviewer

"The Rocky Horror Picture Show" is a contemporary transsexual rock musical parody of some of the horror and science fiction movies of the '30s, '40s and '50s. Based on the musical play "The Rocky Horror Show" (book, music and lyrics by Richard O'Brien), the film is a loosely structured collection of genre characters and situations (the mad doctor, et. al) turned inside out, with the chic decadence of the '70s and a certain sexual kinkiness thrown in.

Janet (Susan Sarandon, last seen in "The Great Waldo Pepper") and Brad (Barry Bostwick) — two upstanding innocents — are engaged. One dark, rainy night, on a lonely road, Brad's car stalls. The couple walk unsuspectingly to a convenient nearby castle to use the telephone.

The castle is operated by one Doctor Frank N. Furter (Tim Curry) a scientist, self-described as "a transvestite from transsexual Transylvania." Dr. Furter, involved in the surrection of his latest creation, Rocky (portrayed, in blond, muscular fashion by Peter Hinwood), is fascinated and attracted by the neophyte couple.

As previously noted, "The Rocky Horror Picture Show" originated as a theatrical piece, and doubtless, the intimacy of the theater brought closer audience involvement with the thin plot and its characters. On film, the plot must serve as a framework for the picture, and its lack of structure and sense of direction hurt, since there is not an effective continuity which may have been saved by musical numbers.

There is a frenetic, manic energy here, but it isn't used very well. Jim Sharman, who directed (and coscripted, with original author O'Brien) hasn't found a really appropriate style to translate the ideas and situations from their theatrical setting into film. His inability to intelligibly advance the narrative, and the uneven performances of many members of the supporting cast is due, in part, to the differing natures of theater and film.

Nonetheless, Curry is excellent, portraying the bizarre doctor with style, vigor and an innate understanding of the strange, elaborate dynamics of the role. Bostwick wittily becomes the very essence of the staunch, stale male adolescent archetype. Susan Sarandon, large-eyed and vulnerable, is appealing as Janet.

The Twentieth Century-Fox release is being shown tonight and Saturday in B-102 Wells Hall at 7, 8:45 and 10 p.m., and midnight, by Beal Films. Admission is $1.50.

Mime troupe set to perform Bicentennial-motivated show

Still revolutionary after SDS, the '68 Democratic convention and Kent State University, the San Francisco Mime Troupe returns to MSU tonight at 8 in the Union Ballroom.

Their full-length show "False Promises/Nos Enganaron" will be featured in the presentation, sponsored by ASMSU Great Issues and the Lansing Star. The Bicentennial motivated them to produce this work about the Spanish-American War, Southern lynch laws and the philosophy of "backward peoples."

The troupe switched from racially integrated in 1965-66 to all-white in 1970 and is now a black, white and Chicano group. The multiracial culture of the United States was the philosophy for the switch, as was the group's recognition of racism in America. Tickets are available at the Union Ticket Office for $2.50.

Two final wins vital to MSU

By TOM SHANAHAN
State News Sports Writer

Two final wins, beginning Saturday, are vital to the MSU football program's next few seasons.

The Spartans want to go out with a bang and appear as attractive as possible to this year's high school seniors. MSU faces the problem of being short on returning players and being permitted by the NCAA to recruit 25 freshmen each of the normal 30.

"It's going to be bad for the Spartans in five years," MSU coach

Darryl Rogers said. "We only have 19 freshmen this year and only 25 next year so we're automatically 15 short of every one else," he continued.

"We lose 17 seniors and we only have 62 players so we can't catch up," he said. "But people we recruit will play — so it can be a positive thing," Rogers pointed out as the only advantage of being short on bodies.

MSU will only have 45 veterans when spring drills begin, magnifying the need for a productive recruiting campaign. Completing the five-game win streak with wins over Northwestern and Iowa will help the Spartans since a two-year probation stigma still exists.

"Young men want to play at schools that win," Rogers said. "Anytime you have an attractive program it enhances recruiting. I think Michigan State has an attractive program — it plays in a good conference, a good stadium and has a nice campus."

But the Spartans aren't taking Northwestern lightly, despite its 0-9 mark. The Wildcats are 0-6 in the conference, while MSU has a chance to get over .500, since the Spartans stand 4-4-1 overall and 3-3 in the Big Ten.

"Last week was the only football game they have not played well," Rogers said, referring to the 38-10 Minnesota loss. "We think we'll be extremely tested against Northwestern. They're not getting blown out — they'll be so much better this week than last that we have to be prepared to play them Saturday. When we play them is the only time that counts, no matter how many times they've lost."

"We think we are going to play against the best quarterback we have seen this year," he said of Randy Dean. "I don't care what his statistics say, he is big, strong, and an effective quarterback."

The 6-foot-3, 196-pound Dean is third in the Big Ten in total offense, averaging 154 yards a game.

MSU's Ed Smith is second in total offense on the basis of passing only, compared to Mike Carroll of Wisconsin, who leads in total offense by adding his rushing and passing averages.

Smith leads the Big Ten in passing with a .546 completion. Smith set an MSU record for most touchdown passes in a season with 12 when flanker Kirk Gibson took a 25-yard strike between two defenders into the end zone against Indiana University. He also set MSU season records in most attempts and yards gained passing with 207 and 1,447 respectively.

Gibson and split end Eugene Byrd have hauled in Smith's passes to rank second and fourth in Big Ten receiving. Gibson has 23 catches for 397 yards and four touchdowns. Byrd has 17 grabs for 299 yards and two touchdowns.

As a team MSU has moved up to second in total offense, ahead of OSU, with a 398 average. U-M is first with 449.7 and OSU third with 373.5.

A statistic MSU needs to continue improving on is its 10th-place status of allowing 282.2 yards in a game rushing. MSU is third in passing defense and seventh in total defense.

Saturday's game in Evanston, Ill., is expected a mere 16,000 fans for the 2 p.m. EST kick-off.

I.M. Notes

The deadline for entries in the women's intramural individual swim meet is noon Nov. 17, with competition scheduled to begin Nov. 18 at 6:30 p.m.

Trophies will be awarded to the winners of the 25-yard freestyle, 100-yard medley relay, 25-yard breast stroke, 25-yard butterfly, 100-yard medley relay, 25-yard backstroke, 50-yard freestyle and 100-yard freestyle relay.

Records that were set in last year's individual swim meet were Becky Plummer's effort of 11.9 seconds in the 25-yard freestyle and 13 seconds in the 25-yard butterfly and Cheryl Solomon's time of 11.2 in the 25-yard breaststroke.

Plummer, Chris Swendiman, Beradine Kenny and Carol Schauer also set a pair of records in the 100-yard medley with the time of 57.9 and in 100-yard freestyle relay with a 50.9 time.

Intramural corec swimming will be held today from 1 p.m. until 5:50 in the Women's IM Building pool and corec volleyball is also scheduled today from noon until 6 p.m. in gym 127 of the Women's IM Building.

ICERS FACE MINNESOTA DEFENSE Power play goals tough

By JIM DUFRESNE
State News Sports Writer

The biggest myth in hockey is that Gordie Howe was between the first and second periods and was skating the third, but rather that the power play is a sure goal for the team with the man advantage.

But to the players on the ice and the coaches on the bench it can be one of the most difficult offensive plays of the game.

"It is harder to score with a man advantage," said MSU coach Amo Bessone, "Because the other team has its best defensive players out there on the ice."

And the Spartan icers will be up against one of the best defenses in the Western Collegiate Hockey Assn. this weekend when they travel to Minnesota for a two-game series.

"All the pressure is on the offense," said defenseman Pat Betterly, "Because the defense just has to get the puck and shoot it down the ice."

The object behind the power play is to cautiously move the puck forward, try to isolate one player near the goal, hit him with a pass and hope he can score before the defense and the goalie can recover.

Organization is the key to an effective power play. There is no need for a great rush, instead an attacking team should wait to set up a player with the best shot.

"The fans get upset when one of our players takes the puck behind our net, but that's what we want to set up a play," said Bessone. "If we get two or three good shots on a power play then the players are doing their job."

Last season the Spartan coach juggled the lines and used Tom Ross and Pat Betterly at the points for most power plays and Steve Colp, Daryl Rice and John Sturges on the inside. The results were impressive. This group of skaters scored 72 of the team's 74 power play goals as Bessone's squad finished with a .327 conversion rate.

This season the Spartans are again taking advantage of the penalties as they have scored 12 power play goals out of 45 opportunities for a .269 conversion rate.

But this winter it has been a team effort.

"We have been using the Kelly line (Dave Kelly, Jeff Addley and Kevin Coughlin) a lot on the power play," the Spartan coach said. "But we also have been using the other lines to see what they can do."

After six games into the season, the freshman line of Paul Klasinski, Jim Cunningham and Russ Welch has scored the most goals during a penalty, accounting for half of the team's power play goals, with Cunningham scoring four of them.

Spartan Slapshots — The MSU-Minnesota hockey series will be broadcast by WKAR radio, 90.5 on the FM dial, starting at 8:25 p.m. for both Friday and Saturday's games.

The junior varsity hockey team captured both of its games last weekend against Hillsdale College, winning 7-4 on Friday and coming back on Sunday to defeat them again 10-5.

The pair of victories boosted the Spartan's record to 5-0 this season under coach Alex Terpay and extended their winning streak to 20 in a row.

Tournament is next for volleyball team

The women's volleyball team hopes to add to its list of standing season accomplishments this weekend, as they will be Marquette, for the State of Michigan Assn. of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (SMAIAW) championships.

Two weekends ago, the squad repeated its Big Ten championship and Saturday its members hope for a repeat of last year's SMAIAW championship.

Coach Annelies Knoppers said the MSU will be seeded in the 11 position, while Central Michigan University will be second. Spartans have beaten the Chippewas twice this season, 15-9, 15-4 and 15-6, 15-12.

MSU will be placed in a large school division, consisting of 10 schools. A small college division of seven schools will also be in the tournament.

The Spartans will begin the competition in one of three pools in the large college division. U-M and Western Michigan University are the other two teams in MSU's pool. The top two teams from each pool will advance to quarterfinal action on Saturday.

Last year, MSU beat Grand Valley State College 15-4, 15-1 to the tournament.

MSU downed Calvin College and U-M earlier this week, in the team's final home match of the season, to up its record to 28-6. MSU does well this weekend, it will advance to the Midwest W meet next weekend at Illinois Chicago Circle.

the Plexi-Glass shielding think with an extra skater a squad will release an unmerciful attack from the blue line and swarm the goalie with close range slapshots until a goal is scored.

Runners competing in NCCA District

The 1976 cross country season isn't even over yet and already coach Jim Gibbard is thinking of next year.

"Having the whole team going to the NCCA districts is good for our runners," the Spartan harrier coach said. "Of the guys who are going to the meet we have five returning next year while we'll lose only two. This is going to be good experience for the ones who are coming back."

But it is the two seniors, Herb Lindsay and Stan Mavis, who have the most to gain at the 32-team meet at Illinois. In the final district meet of their college career, Lindsay will be trying for his first victory over Craig Virgin of Illinois and Mavis will be trying to qualify for his first NCCA Championship meet.

"Herb has to run his best this weekend," the Spartan coach said, "to beat Virgin on his own home course and with all those fans cheering for him."

Among the teams which will be running on the flat Illinois course will be U-M, Wisconsin, Minnesota and host Illinois from the Big Ten and Eastern Michigan University, Western Michigan University, Ball State University and Bowling Green University from the Mid-American Conference.

Gibbard will be taking Jeff Pullen, Paul Morrison, Mike Solis, Keith Moore and Tom Ellspermann as well as Lindsay and Mavis to the weekend meet.

MSU runners enjoying good season

By CATHY CHOWN
State News Sports Writer

Pittman hit the jackpot this season. As each of women's cross country this fall, he has come across two top runners — both three more years of eligibility.

Senior Cynthia Wadsworth and sophomore Kay Richards added to last year's third-place national championship team member and have fit right into the squad's top-notch mold.

Although Richards ran on the women's track team last spring, she is fairly new to cross country. Already she has placed seventh in the Big Ten and, according to coach Pittman, she has been the top runner in several meets this season. But her highlight this season on Oct. 23 when she became the state of Michigan AAU champion.

"She really has excellent potential. I'd say she could be one of our top runners we've ever had here," Pittman said.

Wadsworth, who was second in the Big Ten this year, and Cathie Toomey of Minnesota, who was the 880-yard runner in the Big Ten champion in track and field last year, were talked about Wadsworth, saying, "She ran just super in the Big Ten meet. We were happily surprised. She is a tremendous talent to MSU running."

Wadsworth, from Farmington, Conn., was a three-time state school cross country champ before coming to MSU. She finished that Connecticut has a very good high school cross country program, but that MSU has a much better program than most colleges and universities.

Pittman described Wadsworth as "very personable and easy to work with." She says she likes running. "You have to, or you wouldn't do it." Wadsworth said that team members run up to 70 miles a week at the beginning of the season, but work down to 50 miles a week towards the end of the year, concentrating more on speed running.

Richards said that cross country is her favorite season, as compared to track. "In cross country, you all step on the starting line together and you all finish hurting."

She said, however, that she sometimes has a problem with getting uptight before big meets. "The bigger the meet, the more nervous I get. Sometimes I'll blow a meet if I'm too uptight," she said.

But Richards enjoys running for the Spartans. This season, the team has had several close runners, and there is a lot of depth on the team. "It's interesting. I could run a super race and still come in sixth," Richards said.

The Assn. of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women meet will be held in Madison, Wis., Saturday and Pittman ranks the MSU squad with the top five teams nationally. Iowa State University and Pennsylvania State University are expected to be strong along with Wisconsin and the University of California at Northside.

Pittman expects a field of about 45 teams and close to 400 competitors. "I'm looking for a good performance from the team. It will probably take all seven members of the squad to do well," Pittman said.

Society makes rape victim feel guilt thing out unless it has gone through the proper rituals."

"If something gets in that shouldn't, then it is inexcusable because it is her job to keep it out," the theorist said.

The theorist used the "forbidden temple" story to illustrate the sexual values society has set and those values have made rape victims feel they should take the blame for being raped.

A professor in the MSU Psychology Dept. said part of the guilt felt by rape victims lies in sex role training.

"Just being an attractive woman is to invite rape," the professor said. "I have to hide all aspects of sexual attractiveness to be safe from rape."

Society creates a double standard in sex role training, the professor said.

"If a woman dresses in an attractive, flirtatious manner, then 'she gets what she deserves.' However, this doesn't apply to men — men are in a choice position — they can choose what they want, while women really have no choice," the professor said.

Guilt feelings are also conjured by society's ever-present cult of virginity, the professor added.

"It is believed that once a woman has sex, she is spoiled," the professor said. This attitude toward the sacredness of virginity often causes the parents of rape victims to feel their daughters have been ruined for life, and this is projected on the victims, making them feel even more guilty, according to the professor.

"In a marital situation, the views still exist that a wife is the sexual property of her husband, and the rapist invaded his property. The husband would feel angered, not because of empathy for the one he loves, but because someone has challenged his exclusive right to the sexual property," the professor said.

Another part of the problem, according to this professor, is in society's myth of the male sexual drive.

"He is overwhelmed, and he can't help himself," the professor said. "Because you're a woman, you arouse the man, and so only one thing can happen. Then the woman's to blame because he couldn't help himself, and he had to relieve himself through intercourse."

"People are confusing the myth of sex with aggression. Rape has to do with aggression, rather than seeking sexual pleasure."

All these factors affect the rape victim. Society creates its own value judgments, regardless of whether they are myth or reality. If society says the victim is guilty, she feels guilty.

ATTENTION M.S.U. WOMEN
CLOSE THOSE BOOKS AND OPEN YOUR EYES.

What you should do is go out and have some fun. See "MISTY BEETHOVEN," the M.S.U. sex movie hit now playing on campus every night but Sunday.

MISTY BEETHOVEN has been pulling smiles on people's faces in the dark. Misty moves fast, she is delightfully wild and she photographed beautifully. Everything about the film is sexy, fun and sophisticated. Nothing like the sleazy films of yesteryear. This movie even has an interesting plot (surprise), the men are appealing and the music is even good. Lots of women are coming to check Misty out so you won't feel out of place at all. The movie is deliciously provocative and the atmosphere is fine. So don't be reluctant to see one of 'those' movies. You'll be pleasantly surprised!

ASMSU reps seek to improve communication with constituents

By GEORGIA HANSEW
State News Staff Writer

In an effort to open channels of communication with the students they represent, ASMSU Student Board members are starting a new policy of holding office hours.

Students can now go see their college representatives during their scheduled office hours to make sure their opinions are known, to air their gripes or just to meet the person who is supposed to represent their interests in MSU student government.

In a session of self-analysis at last week's ASMSU Student Board meeting, members agreed that more contact between representatives and their constituencies was needed.

"Ninety per cent of the students don't know who their representatives are," said Kent Barry, former Interfraternity Council representative.

"People are saying, 'I don't know what my constituency wants,'" said Clarence Greene, Council of Black Affairs representative. "If you don't know, go out and find out," he told fellow board members.

"I am an elected officer," Tim Hagle, communication arts and sciences representative, said, "and if they (his constituents) have a concern, maybe I can help them in some way through ASMSU."

"I am hoping that if some people in my college have a gripe about the way I'm handling myself at ASMSU," said Don Breckle, James Madison and College of Social Science representative, "I'm going to be someplace where they can find me."

Scheduled office hours, said Terry Borg, Residence Hall Assn. representative, give him an opportunity to see and talk to people with whom he would otherwise not have contact.

He commended the student board for setting up office hours, saying, "In the past, I've never seen as active and concerned a student board. This is a very unique student board on ASMSU this year."

Hagle said that he has not gotten enough feedback from the students in his college in the past, but added, "I hope that people will start coming in."

Office hours are as follows:

•Tim Beard, College of Business; 1 to 3 p.m. Tuesday (or by appointment).
•Scott Belanger, College of Agriculture and Natural Resources; 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Monday and Wednesday.

•Don Breckle, James Madison and College of Social Science; 2 to 4 p.m. Thursday (or by appointment).

•Mary Cloud, College of Education; 11:00 a.m. to 1 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday.

•Krista Shellie, College of Human Ecology; 10 a.m. to noon Monday (or by appointment).

•Alisa Sparkia, College of Arts and Letters; 1 to 3 p.m. Monday (or by appointment).

Members listed above will be available in 335 Student Services Bldg.

•Stuart Carter, InterCooper-ative Council; by appointment only, B-311 Student Services Bldg.

•Terry Borg, Residence Hall Assn.; 1 to 4 p.m. Monday and 2 to 4 p.m. Wednesday (or by appointment), 323 Student Services Bldg.

•Tim Hagle, College of Communication Arts and Sciences; 12:30 to 2 p.m. Friday, fifth floor lounge, South Kedzie Hall.

•Jeff Kazanow, Labor Relations; 1 to 3 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday and 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Wednesday, 330 Student Services Bldg.

How To Decide How Much To Spend For A Stereo System.

Before you go out and buy a music system, Tech Hifi would like you to know what you can realistically expect to get in return for your hard-earned money.

What you can expect between $200 and $400.

If you want good sound, you should plan to spend at least $200 for a complete component system consisting of a stereo receiver, two loudspeakers, a turntable, and a magnetic cartridge. Below $200, complete systems (and especially all-in-one compacts and consoles) often present too many compromises to be considered true high fidelity systems. In addition, the kind of components you find at Tech Hifi are made with more integrity - and this is reflected in the manufacturers warranties, as well as our own.

Typical of this price range, this system with a Technics SA-5060 stereo receiver, Studio Design 26 loudspeakers and a fully-equipped BSR 2260BX automatic turntable will smoothly reproduce all audible frequencies except the really deep bass ones (where little music is actually present anyway). The unusually high efficiency of the two-way Studio Design 26 loudspeakers and a powerful direct-coupled OCL amplifier section in the Technics receiver mean that this system will play louder than many others in this price range... with less distortion.

Studio Design Technics $259

Generally speaking, component systems in the $200 to $400 price range will do a good job of reproducing all musical material except the lowest octave of audible sounds. Volume capability in these systems will be more than adequate for small-to-medium sized room and perfectly acceptable in larger rooms if you don't usually listen to loud music.

What you can expect between $400 and $600.

Between $400 and $500 you can really begin to custom design your own music system. By matching efficient loudspeakers with a moderately powered receiver you'll end up with a system that will play loudly, but might not deliver the deepest Designed for people who go for really deep, accurate, bass response, this $499 system with renowned Large Advent Loudspeakers, a Cambridge Audio 2500 stereo receiver, and a Philips GA 427 turntable with an Audiotechnica 90E cartridge will also please volume fanatics. That's because the Cambridge Audio 2500 offers more power than any other receiver in its price category. Another nice feature is belt drive in the Philips turntable, so rumble doesn't get mixed in with the good deep bass response of the Advent Speakers (rumble is created when vibrations from a turntable's motor aren't properly isolated from the tonearm).

audible notes. Or, you can combine less efficient loudspeakers with a more powerful receiver and come up with a system that will reproduce all the notes you can hear but with some sacrifice in ultimate volume capability

Above $500, it's possible to get a system with really deep bass response and the ability to play loudly without distortion. You can also expect a turntable/cartridge combination that will flawlessly reproduce the music on your records with minimal wear. (In comparison, less expensive systems are likely to be a little harder on your records and may introduce some distortion).

What you can expect above $600.

Above $600, the most audible improvements are an increased sense of spaciousness in the music and even Above $600, you can expect an increased sense of spaciousness and even greater volume capability. This $859 system with optimally-vented Ohm C2 loudspeakers, a Nikko 7075 stereo receiver and a Philips GA212 with an Audiotechnica 100E cartridge delivers that, and more! The unique scientific design of the Ohm C2's means that they provide dead-flat response all the way down to 27Hz with considerably less distortion than conventionally-designed speakers. The Nikko receiver features a superb tuner section and unusually sophisticated protection circuitry. The elegant Philips GA212 employs an electronically-regulated DC servo motor and an ultra-precise belt drive system for flawless reproduction of your records.

NIKKO audio-technica Ohm Philips $859 greater volume capabilities. Often, systems in this price category offer considerably more control facilities and such niceties as power output and multipath meters that appeal to people who like to see what the equipment is doing as well as hear it.

At somewhere around $1500, you can enter the realm of separate amplifiers and tuners. The story here is even greater output levels, reduced distortion, and more control flexibility.

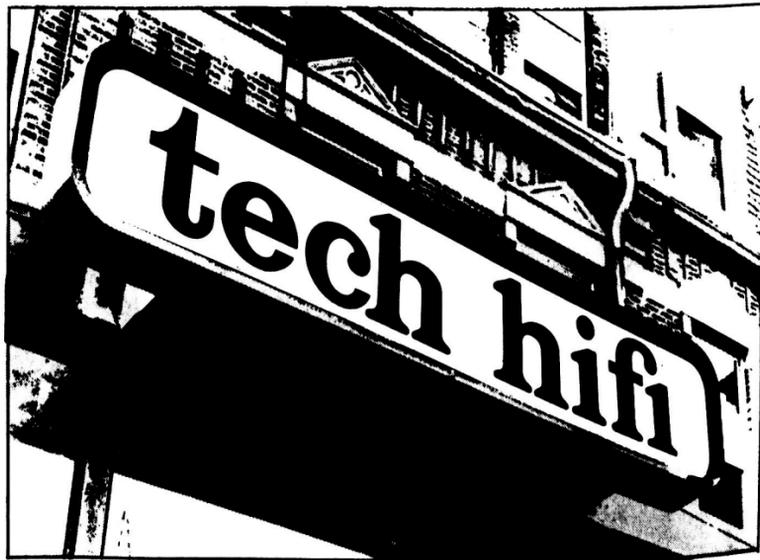

Why Tech Hifi Can Give You The Best Value In Every Price Range.

Of all the places you can buy hifi, only Tech Hifi has the combined buying power of fifty-four stereo stores. We get a better deal on just about everything we buy, which means you get a better deal when you buy from us (we actually guarantee you the lowest price in writing).

And whether you plan to spend $200 or $2000, our selection improves your chances of getting the system that's right for you. (We also guarantee your complete satisfaction in writing).
