Research team State News I to sample blood for PBB traces

State News Staff Writer

Four members of the PBB research team from the Environmental Sciences Laboratory at Mt. Sinai Hospital will return to Michigan Monday to take blood samples

Dr. Henry Anderson, a member of the New York research team, said he and three other team members will go to various farms to draw blood from patients, and possibly livestock. Anderson said no examinations would be performed.

The team needs the blood samples to continue research into the possible immunological damage caused by PBB. Anderson said this was the main area of research

"We want to characterize the situation a little better," Anderson said Thursday.

He also said the team eventually plans to further research possible neurological dis-orders; however, the blood samples drawn next week would not be used for this the research team announced preliminary findings in a report to state officials. In that report, Selikoff cited neurological, immuno logical, musculo-skeletal, liver and skin problems found in the people studied.

The visit next week is a follow-up of the research team's previous examination of 1,029 farmers last November at Kent Community Hospital in Grand Rapids. This study revealed several health problems.

Selikoff recommended accelerating research efforts as well as reducing Michigan's allowable PBB levels to the lowest

Anderson said the team arriving next week will seek to draw blood from a cross-section of the group, hopefully obtaining blood with both low and high levels of

Two of the group members will return to New York Monday evening with the samples taken that day, Anderson said, because they must be examined in New York immediately. The remaining two will take additional samples Wednesday.

Anderson said the trip would be called off if the weather was not favorable. He said the team had planned to take the samples on a previous trip but time ran short.

A copy of the 400 signatures on a petition objecting to the quality of instruction given in Math 108 last fall term was turned over to the Mathematics Department on Thursday by ASMSU's Legal Services Cabinet.

Scott Schreiber, cabinet member, sent a copy of the petitions to Joseph Adney, chairperson of the department. Schreiber has been handling the Math 108 controversy for Legal Services. Schreiber said he did not think giving the petition to Adney was a betrayal of the students' trust.

Adney said he has not yet decided what he will do with the petitions but added that he will look at them and examine the statements of protest the students ex-

The governor was referring to Crim's opening speech to the House in which the rumored gubernatorial candidate lashed out at Milliken's programs.

Ending weeks of speculation, Milliken announced that he will not call for a tax increase in his 1977-78 budget requests.

The governor said the highest priority in the state this year was an expanded economy and more jobs. "Our state is on the rebound from its Milliken said he would push for a constitutional amendment to change the present system of electing the board members by popular vote.

Dabney, though declining to say specifically what the actions would involve, said, "I'm confident of one thing: Gary Gilmore is going nowhere on (Monday). Gilmore, who would be the first person Acting FDA Commissioner Sherwin Gardner announced the new tests in testimony to a Senate committee headed by Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis. Nelson has criticized FDA for allowing some chemical food additives to remain on the market after scientists have linked them to cancer and other diseases.

Gardner said all preservatives, colors, flavors and substances that may get into food from packaging will undergo scientific reevaluation beginning in March. "Science is dynamic and a food additive judged safe by the science of 1970 may very well be suspect by the science of 1977," he said.

LANSING (UPI) -- Legislation designed to enhance the effectiveness of Michigan's pioneering generic drug substitution act has been signed into law by Gov. William G. Milliken.

The new law will allow pharmacists to dispense lower-priced but chemically equivalent generic drugs without a request from the customer.

Under the old law, pharmacists could not fill a prescription with a generic drug unless the customer asked — a requirement that lawmakers said made the act unworkable.

Power Plant 65 utilizes two smokestacks, one of which removes 99 per cent of the releasing gases and therefore meets the required clean air standards. According to Simon, the smokestack causing all the trouble is used only to supplement the cleaner unit which provides 60 per cent of the energy used by the University.

Simon said the savings were made through an intensive management program which focused on cutting energy use on the weekends and after hours in the academic buildings. The program involved clock timers, ventilation fans and a complete analysis of heating, ventilation and air condition systems for buildings on campus.

Simon expects the saving to continue in the future with a computer-controlled system to be installed in the major buildings on campus which will regulate energy use by adjusting the building's systems to changes in the weather, acamic schedules and building use.

An initial program in Wells Hall demonstrated that intensive energy control can cut consumption by as much as 40 per cent, but such a program is too expensive without the control of a central computer.

Simon estimated the cost of such a program would be $2.5 million to implement in the major buildings throughout the campus, but could be recovered in fuel savings in five years. The project is currently on the University Capital Outlay List awaiting state appropriations, as is the

While at MSU, Greer supported faculty unionization because it would provide a way for the faculty to speak with a stronger voice to the administration and the legislature, not for salary reasons.

Kelley's recent brief presents nothing new, Zolton Ferency says

By JANET R. OLSEN State News Staff Writer

Zolton Ferency, MSU associate professor of criminal justice, said Thursday that the arguments presented in a brief filed last Friday in 2nd District Court of Appeals by Atty. Gen. Frank J. Kelley's office in response to a suit Ferency filed in July, regarding overcrowding in Michigan prisons, were nothing new.

The suit was filed by Ferency on behalf of the Human Rights party (HRP), when Ferency was still a member of the party. He has since rejoined the Democratic party.

Ferency said the main issue presented in this brief is whether or not HRP has the standing to bring forward such a suit — an argument, he said, that was used in the original The major point is that the attorney general believes that only prisoners have the kind of direct personal interest in the operation of the prison system to give standing to bring such a suit forward." he said. general's office, states that HRP lacks the standing to maintain the cause of action

In its conclusion, the brief stated that HRP should seek any other type of relief other than that provided by the Administrative Procedures Act in its attempt to commence a civil lawsuit in the state or federal courts.

"However, it is doubtful that even then the Human Rights party could establish itself as a proper party plaintiff with standing to sue," the brief said. "The Human Rights party has failed to evidence how it has been aggrieved or which of its rights, if any (have been) impaired. For this reason alone, it should not be permitted to prevail."

The position of the attorney general's office is whether, by virtue of various state statutes, the Human Rights party is a proper party to bring the suit forth." Derdarian said

"Basically the argument is that HRP cannot show that it has been injured," he said. "There is no connection between HRP and the complaint that they are making. They are raising someone else's rights."

The other argument presented by the attorney general's office is that the circuit court is without jurisdiction to grant the relief sought by HRP.

In August the Ingham County Circuit Court denied HRP's motion seeking declaratory relief in Michigan prisons. However, the court said if the ruling was not appealed, it would take further action, including a view and inspection of all prison facilities. "Everyone in Michigan should take an interest," he said. "A poorly managed, overcrowded prison system is a source of danger to everyone

The housing capacity of the Michigan prison system is 10,239. According to figures released Jan. 6, 11,638 prisoners are residing inside state institutions. This figure does not include 792 prisoners who are housed in Community Base Resident Home/Correction Centers, nor does it include prisoners who had been transferred to the new Riverside Correctional Facility in Ionia earlier this week.

Ferency said that the overcrowding situation is "a powder keg that's likely to explode at especially, he added, since the enactment of the law establishing mandatory sentences for possession of guns.

Last year, the Michigan legislature approved legislation imposing mandatory two-year prison terms for any persons who carry a gun when they commit or attempt to commit a felony. Second and third-time offenders are subject to five and 10-year terms respectively. The new law went into effect Jan. 1.

Ferency said that an estimated 2,000 prisoners would be added to the Michigan prison system within one year because of the law.

In January 1976, State Corrections Director Perry Johnson told a house committee that the new law would inflate the prison population by some 4,800 inmates a year.
"Prison officials have also been scrounging around looking for space in county jails," Ferency said. "This is an indication of how desperate the situation really is."

The opening of the Riverside Correctional Facility last Monday will aid the overcrowding

Will ethics code hold?

The people are demanding it and children; Jimmy Carter is apparently going to give it to them — an ethics code that provides a strong moralistic tone.

Some people call Carter's code merely a good job of windowdressing. The term seems to be an appropriate one.

To prevent any conflict of interest after he becomes President, Carter has placed his peanut business in a trust fund. But this move is not as commendable as one may think. Carter will still collect the profits - amounting to an annual revenue of $1 million though not until after he has left office.

In the code, Carter is requiring his 2,200 top-level appointees to: •Disclose all assets, liabilities criticism of his program by calling their demands "not feasible." This is strange talk from a man who came out in support of the Humphrey-Hawkins Full Employment Bill during his campaign for the presidency. We can only assume that such talk was mere election-year rhetoric and that Carter now finds it politically opportune to go back on his word to the very groups that elected him and need his help the most.

Failure to provide jobs for all those who want to work will mean a long-term increase in the budget deficit and a further blackening of the American spirit. Carter appears to be falling into the same conservative mentality that gripped the Ford Administration, much to the detriment of the national economy.

Morality requires total amnests

Gerald Ford has six days left as President to act on the request of Phil Hart's widow and grant universal unconditional amnesty to all Vietnam-era draft evaders, deserters and veterans with less than honorable discharges. with this urgent priority will then program. Such a philosophy make a collective symbolic incoming President has promised to pardon all draft evaders and consider the plight of deserters and others on a case-by-case basis. This plan does not go far enough.

Carter's position is a compromise between two extremes those who favor total amnesty and those who are opposed to leniency of any kind. The issue of amnesty has far-reaching moral implications that we believe are inimical to the expedience of political compromise.

Vietnam was an unjust war. It was never declared and was therefore illegal. Secretary of State-designate Cyrus Vance has admitted our involvement was a mistake. Under the circumstances, a strong case can be made that it was unconstitutional to forcibly commandeer young men to fight a war whose basis in constitutional law was nonexistent.

Out of grasp

At the start of another MSU term, I am confronted, as is a good portion of the MSU student body, with a monetary drought after registering for classes. Due to the fact that I am a self-supporting individual, I am faced with an even greater challenge in making financial ends meet.

Living costs and academic costs with a minimal salary make for a tightly budgeted lifestyle and a lot of doing without. I can deal with such a situation. The crisis begins when I or any number of self-supporting students cannot afford living and going to school even with extremely wise budgeting habits.

Financial aid may be one solution in helping the self-supporting student who desires higher education. However, I have found this financial aid virtually unattainable because I did not meet the financial aid office's three tightly-enforced qualifications. In order to be considered an

Poor class

The first half of Marketing 317 covers the same material as Statistics 316, the prerequisite for 317. It appears that either the business school is unaware of the content of the prerequisite to their class, or they feel that the quality of instruction in 316 is extremely poor and thus must be compensated for in 317. If the first is the case, the 317 instructors need only walk down the street to Wells Hall, enter the building and take the stairs to the fourth floor. Once on the floor they need only go to the chairperson's office to find out what is being done in Statistics 316.

On the other hand, if the 317's extensive review of 316 is a direct result of extremely poor instruction in Statistics 316, this is grounds for firing the past and present chairperson of the Statistics Department and should be done.

The content of the 317 course is also open to question. On page 5.7 of the second revised edition of the text by Frank Bacon it is asserted that the expected value of the sample standard deviation is the population standard deviation. This is in general false. On page 10.6 Bacon asserts that the F test should be used to check equality of variances before doing "two sample problems." While one can do things in this manner you can't tell what is the alpha level of the combined procedures - step six on 10.6 is wrong!

One parting word. The tables in Bacon's book, K.1-K.7, contain no indication of their original sources. Did Bacon compute all of those tables? Did he use copyrighted material without proper acknowledgement? Name withheld by request

GROVER WASHINGTON JR.: A Secret Place-(Kudu-32-S1)

Not all commercial jazz is bad, as many critics would have you believe. They will dismiss it as diluted jazz that has been tampered with by the evils of rock. Instead, mainstream jazz is exciting and very listenable. Grover Washington Jr. is a fine example of this genre.

In 1971, Washington joined the band led by organist Johnny Smith and firmly established himself as a premier soprano/ tenor sax player. Feeling confined in the band, Washington departed to pursue a solo career. In the past five years he has created music that has received lukewarm reviews, despite the music's fine phrasings.

"A Secret Place" is Washington's sixth effort for the Kudu label, a part of the Motown conglomeration, and is a weak successor to his last two albums: "Feels so Good," and "Mister Magic." Gone are the lush arrangements by Bob James, the sound making these so accessible. In the new album there is nothing to replace it.

There are some bright spots on "A Secret Place." Eric Gale is featured on guitar and his playing is outstanding. Washington's sax is good on all four selections, with "Dolphin Dance" as the more memorable cut. Unfortunately, Grover Washington Jr. is becoming too predictable.

A FAMILIAR PIPEDREAM

It's a comfortable piece of entertainment. Ross and Meyer (who adapted his novel for the screen) have attempted to find a pleasing confluence of the styles of the detailed Sir Arthur Conan Doyle stories and the straightfacedly frivolous Basil Rathbone Nigel Bruce pictures made by Fox and Universal in the '30s and '40s.

They don't quite succeed - the tone of Conan Doyle's prose has never been satisfactorily translated onto film — but they have established an intimacy. The picture is familiar in the pipedream manner of an old movie you might feel sure you've seen, and enjoyed, previously. Certainly, the performances contribute mightily to this impression. This is real chamber acting; an ensemble of legitimate actors using the mastery of their craft to project the stylish, intelligent characterizations that used to be the hallmark of film acting.

ARKIN EXCELS

Meyer's story (or, as he would have it, his freshly rediscovered John D. Watson manuscript) chronicles the efforts of faithful Dr. Watson (superbly played by Robert Duvall) to free his friend Holmes from the debilitating terrors of cocaine addition. Holmes (played differently, but authoritatively by Nicol Williamson) has been transformed by frequent injections of the drug - a seven per-cent solution - into a babbling obsessive, holding a paranoic fixation upon a fussy, aged mathematics teacher, a Prof. Moriarty (Laurence Olivier). Watson collaborates with Holmes' ever-mysterious brother, Mycroft (Charles Gray) to lure Holmes from mother England to Vienna, where a controversial physician named Sigmund Freud (Alan Arkin) has had some success in treating addicts.

Arkin's performance is wonderful: he readily embodies Meyer's conception of the man. He easily slips into a German-tinged dialect, and radiates assured intelligence and wit. One can instinctively feel that Sherlock Holmes is in good hands.

NIGHTMARISH DELIRIUM

Holmes' cure is agonizingly effected. Herbert Ross is not very subtle in his visual illustration of his withdrawal, but William son expressively conveys some of the certain nightmarish delirium. Then Holmes, Watson and Freud are suddenly drawn into a mysterious case of abduction and international intrigue, centrally involving the plight of a beautiful actress (Vanessa Redgrave, in a welcome return to the screen). Aficionados of the novel will discover the narrative simplified somewhat, and the ending altered in several surprising

Opera: first encounter greeted enthusiastically

By PETER J. VACCARO

Last Tuesday evening witnessed a rather intriguing marriage of interests on the MSU campus. The Delta Gamma sorority and the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity together hosted a recital of arias and duets from "Don Giovanni" — partly in preparation for this weekend's Opera Guild production of the Mozart opera, partly out of the excitement of discovering what is for many a "new" form of entertainment.

The recital at the Delta Gamma house was one of a series of similar programs presented by the Opera Guild of Greater Lansing to student groups in the MSU community. The purpose of the program is to educate new audiences in their first encounters with opera, as well as to provide a genuinely entertaining event. The program has been an overwhelming success.

Much of the credit for this success belongs to Herbert Josephs, Robert Fiore and Jean Nicholas, professors in the Romance Languages Department. Josephs commentary on musical selections, casual, pleasant and entertaining in itself, served as a sound discussion of the opera's historical and cultural context. More than this, it offered evidence that opera is absolutely accessible, regardless of an audience's age, background, tastes or native language.

The performances by sopranos Susan Davis and Candy Goetz Grier, baritone Lee Snook, and accompanists Anita Wagman and Laurie Harkema were in every way charming. All have been invaluable to the success of the opera guild's program, and their audiences love them.

The audiences themselves deserve recognition — students who are meeting opera head-on, with great enthusiasm. Their questions to performers in discussions following recitals have been intelligent and sincere: their appreciation has been greatly apparent.

During the past week, over 800 students have participated in the opera guild program. Recitals have been heard in Case, Bessey, Eustace and Owen Graduate halls and the Delta Gamma House. Sponsoring groups have been as varied as James Madison College, social science and humanities classes, the Honors College, Delta Gamma and Phi Gamma Delta.

As a result, the opera guild has been encouraged to repeat the program in conjunction with next year's production of Puccini's "La Boheme." Josephs will as well be repeating his Evening College class, instituted last fall, The Pleasures of Opera.

If the response at the Delta Gamma house last Tuesday is any indication, the opera guild is becoming a well-liked organization indeed. And as for questions such as "Who is opera for?" . . . it seems such questions really need not be asked.

Expert gives views on Africa

The only way majority rule will come to all of South Africa is through a military confrontation between the white minority and the black majority. a noted Africa expert told MSU students Wednesday.

Absolom Vilikazi, a professor of anthropology and international relations at American University in Washington, D.C., also said he believed the current white regime "would never be willing to relinquish power" and abandon apartheid, segregation of races in South Africa.

"One of the key questions is where the blacks will get arms," Vilikazi said. "Passive resistance has not worked suc cessfully against the whites."

Vilikazi said peaceful resis tance to the whites dates back to Mahatma Gandhi's efforts in the last century, "but only small concessions are ever won passively.

Vilikazi gave two scenarios for a military uprising against the 4 million whites who rule over the 18 million blacks and the few million other minorities

He said "a dynamic leader-ship" could establish an active resistance of sabotage and guerilla warfare under the current situation; or the blacks could agree to the independence of the nine homelands that the whites have set aside to restrict them to only 13 per cent of South Africa's land.

Then, he said, the black enclaves could unite "in some type of confederation" and use their independence to secure arms and liberate the entire

Life in South Africa for the blacks and minorities is one of subjugation to the whites. Vilikazi said. He said blacks are only allowed the worst jobs, must live in black townships and in rural tribal homelands, and must carry passes to get into white areas. "A change must eventually occur," he said.

Friday, January 14, 1977 the grate steak WARM

With temperatures dropping below zero, what could be more inviting than a steaming hot, hearty dinner at the Grate Steak, located at 246 East Saginaw at Abbott Rd.

The Grate Steak has added two exciting dishes to its dinner menu. Sink your teeth into their new Queen Filet Mignon, a charbroiled tenderloin served with a savory, sauteed, burgundy onion sauce.

Their second delicious menu addition is Beef Normandy, a broiled petite filet adorned with crabmeat and covered with a light normandy

The Grate Steak's new items are tempting but only the beginning. I'd like to recommend some of their other house specialties. Try their Scallops de Joghne, fresh scallops baked in herb and garlic butter, served on a steaming bed of rice. Or their Chicken Cordon Bleu, boneless breast of chicken stuffed with ham and cheese and baked to tenderness and served with a creamy supreme sauce. How about a juicy Kansas City 13 oz. charbroiled strip sirloin, served on the bone? In addition, each dinner is accompanied with Win Schuler's famous bar cheese and bread sticks, a steaming mug of the soup of the day, a journey to the unique garden greenery salad bar, homemade rolls, and a choice of baked potato or vegetables.

Performing in the dining room on Monday nights, after 7:30 is a string quartet from MSU's music department. A perfect addition to a fine meal.

The Grate Steak is also famous for their delicious luncheons. For the light eater, their outstanding salad bar, referred to as the Garden Greenery. For those interested in seafood there is the Grate Steak Catch of the Day. An excellent daily choice of fresh seafood, in a portion sure to satisfy the heartiest appetite. New on their lunch menu is the Seafood Olde Warf Inn, a piping hot blend of crabmeat and shrimp served open face on rye bread and topped with melted Swiss cheese.

The Grate Steak also offers a special sandwich of the day consisting of thin slices of the choicest meats piled high and served with either their soup du jour or the garden greenery.

To end a delectable meal, treat yourself to dessert at the Grate Steak Sink your teeth into a piece of creamy carmel ice cream pie made with scoops of carmel and french vanilla ice cream and topped with hot carmel and walnuts (as delicious as the name suggests). Another favorite you won't want to pass up is their peppermint ribbon pie, a blanket of peppermint ice cream on a bed of chocolate wafers, topped with meringue and hot fudge.

Seven nights a week after 9:30 in the Goldsmith lounge you can listen to layed back light folk music. A different performer appears in the

For afternoon relaxation, there is the Goldsmith lounge inside the Grate Steak Happy Hour, Monday through Friday, with reduced rates from 4-7 p.m. The lounge is now open nightly until 2 a.m. including Sunday

The team strategy also consisted of each member selecting a computer problem, depending on the one each thought most suitable for the earliest completion of the problem. Beer said the strategy was a definite team effort.

to discontinue the program in December 1975 because the cost per student credit hour was much higher at Monteith than for other Wayne State liberal arts programs. As in JMC, students now in the program will be able to complete their degrees.

"Our program represented less than one per cent of the total university budget, and some administrators felt that the money could be divided between other university departments. However, I haven't been able to see where more money has been appropriated for other departments, except perhaps in the form of smaller cuts," said Kay Hartley, former Monteith academic service officer of budget and personnel.

Monteith faculty members are being relocated at "appropriate positions" within the university.

Enrollment decline has apparently not been due to educational quality, but to a shift in emphasis from liberal arts to business and

"There has been a surge of emphasis on job placement and arts." said Rep. Jackie Vaughn III, D-Detroit, chairperson of the House Committee on Colleges and Universities.

General education colleges within state universities began to develop during the late '50s and early '60s. Peak enrollments were reached between 1965 and 1970.

JMC never reached its enrollment limit of 1,200, but Monteith actually rejected applications one year because the program was filled to capacity with 1,000 students, Hartley said.

Throughout the last decade, the colleges have generated controversy with their experimental programing. JMC attracted public attention with the institution of a pass-no credit grading system in 1971 and for encouraging student involvement in the governance process before recent revision of university bylaws, which now permit such participation.

Grand Valley's TJC was questioned in a report by the auditor general in 1972 for allowing credit to be given for projects such as studying backpacking, making Indian flutes, keeping silent for 28 days, painting portraits of comic book heroes and wool-spinning.

DEED THROAT

ROTT is shattering records across America. It has become the most widely seen adult film in cinema history. Words are simply inadequate to convey the incredible eroticism of the film. DEEP THROAT is astrandingly explicit: it goes beyond anything previously made. DEEP THROAT is rapidly becoming the standard to which all other adult films will be compared. DEEP THROAT cannot be described - it must be experienced. Anything you have seen before is merely preparation for the experience of DEEP THROAT.

Deep Throat is still benned in New York. It's the film that was found obscene in Detroit and was responsible for the padiocking of five thereins. Deep Throat has been busted and acquitted more then any other film in history. The Beel Film Group is showing Deep Throat, shout, not one

Dan Backus, head engineer at National Cable, said in his letter to the commission that the company must wait for the ground to thaw before construction of an underground cable can begin.

The rest of the city has above-ground cables, but the city requires that all utilities go underground in the three-block area called the Alle; developed as a beautification project for the business district

The letter from Backus refers only to construction of a cable in the 100 and 200 blocks.

"There has been no request (for cable service) from the 300 block," Backus said Thursday. The commission received a petition from 71 public access channel (Channel 11) users, requesting $5,300 for equipent to correct transmission problems. The request was denied because the commission said it should be up to the cable company's parent firm, United Cable Television Corp., to foot the bill for the new equipment. In other action:

• The commission discussed possible interconnection with Lansing's cable system. No definite plans have been made, but Lansing's cable company has indicated interest in receiving the MSU channels, cable commission secretary Mary Padilla said. • A $404 funding request from Padilla for equipment for the city channel was approved.

National Cable's billing policy provides for a series of notices to be sent to customers delinquent in payment before cutting off service.

Squabbles arise over improvements

By MICHAEL ROUSE

State News Staff Writer
After a public hearing and hours of haggling at Wednesday night's East Lansing Planning Commission meeting, the status of projects for next year's Capital Improvements Program (CIP) is still far from settled.

A list of projects proposed by the planning department totals to $522,000 under the city budget's General Fund for 1977-78 and $200,450 from the Major Street Fund.

At the top of the General Fund list is a bond issue to go before voters in November, for a new fire station north of Saginaw Street to replace the present one on Abbott Road.

The planning commission will make its recommendation of projects — listed by priority — to the City Council as part of the preparation of next year's budget.

However, widely ranging requests from about a dozen citizens at the public hearing and lengthy squabbles among the commissioners brought the meeting to an impasse after 11 p.m. Lee Dorfman, of 444 Evergreen St., asked that a pedestrian bridge be built across Grand River Avenue at Bogue Street. "In addition to the problems with traffic, the pedestrian situation has been overlooked," Dorfman said. "With a large number of students crossing in the area, there is a severe

the cost vs. value of a pedestrian crossway.
"I've been dodging cars there for years," said Dudley, an MSU

ONE OF THE BEST ADVENTURE MOVIES

OF THE YEAR.

Plans for the proposed fire station were criticized by MSU junior Lawrence Kestenbaum, who said a 1970 study used by the fire department to determine the site of a new station has been discredited.

"I do not want to see it delayed in any way." Kestenbaum said. "But there is a problem in where it will be put."

He said the plan to locate the station north of Saginaw Street indicates that the city "desires more fire protection per person in the north area.

"The southern portion of the service area (where the central business district lies) strikes me as having a greater need of fire protection," Kestenbaum said.

Bob Muhlbach, a member of the East Lansing Cable Commission, answered questions concerning the $58,550 to be spent on cable television equipment for the East Lansing Library. He said the equipment has a life expectancy of about seven years, and that competent personnel to run the equipment had not been included in the price tag. Antoinette Pollock, representing the recreation commission, asked that renovations to the Alton Street pump house, which is expected to be vacated by October, be appropriated in the coming budget instead of the 1978-79 program year as now

The pump house space is to be used by the Old People's Program for office space, the preparation of a newsletter, counseling

Bill Main, a member of the Bailey Community Association, brought up the unsettled alternatives to purchasing new rescue ambulances with the CIP funds.

The planning department recommended the city purchase one rescue truck this year to replace the present one that is at the end of its three-year life expectancy, and another one next year to offset the increased ambulance calls. MSU stopped its rescue service last year.

The University ceased this service because of budget cuts, which resulted in an increase in the number of runs by the city's truck by about 35 per cent.

"Isn't that the natural way things go between MSU and East Lansing?" Dudley said.

Main said the city residents "may be buying our way out of a paramedic program with Ingham County" -- referring to a possible countywide emergency service that has been discussed for over a year.

After the public hearing portion of the meeting, Senior Planner Bob Owen said the second rescue truck may be conditional on the structure of the new fire station, if approved.

The city is unable to purchase large rescue trucks or a new aerial fire truck because of the low ceiling and overhead doors of the present fire station.

Regarding the location of a new station. Planning Director Scott Radway said the station would be within three miles of any place in the city wherever it could be built.
