S. Africa ousts U.S. amid spying charges

By The Associated Press
CAPE TOWN, South Africa — Prime Minister Pieter W. Botha charged Thursday that some U.S. Embassy personnel have snooped on sensitive areas of South Africa with a specially equipped "spy plane," and he ordered them to leave the country within a week.

The embassy said it would have no comment, but the State Department in Washington said three U.S. Air Force personnel assigned to the embassy were ordered out.

The prime minister identified the spy plane as the private aircraft of U.S. Ambassador William P. Edmondson. He did not announce the name of anyone charged with spying, nor did he say how many people were allegedly involved.

Botha said in a nationally televised announcement it was the kind of conduct South Africa "would expect from the Soviet Union" but not from the United States. He said he expects an official apology from the Carter administration.

A State Department spokesperson in Washington refused comment on the substance of the charges.

Stansfield Turner, head of the Central Intelligence Agency, when asked for comment, responded "No." He then added that it was against CIA policy to talk about intelligence operations.

The U.S. Embassy in Pretoria said the plane, a twin engine C-12A, was assigned to the embassy. A spokesperson said it is equipped with a camera and took aerial photographs, but he said he would not call the photography espionage.

State Department spokesperson Hodding

Carter said, "It is particularly unfortunate that the South African government chose to act as it did at a time when we are engaged with it in seeking solutions to the problems in Namibia (South-West Africa) and elsewhere in Southern Africa."

The State Department said those asked to leave South Africa are: Col. Alvin M. Crews, a defense attaché; Maj. Bernd McConnell, an assistant air attaché; and Master Sgt. Horace E. Wyatt Jr., crew chief of the plane. It said the plane was assigned to crews. No hometowns were given.

Botha, appearing unexpectedly on the country's 8 p.m. television news broadcast, accused the embassy of using Edmondson's airplane as a "spy plane" to take pictures of "very sensitive areas" of South African territory.

He gave no details of what was photographed.

Edmondson was summoned to the Foreign Ministry and was told the American diplomats involved must leave South Africa within a week, the prime minister said.

Botha described the affair as "disgraceful" and "a great violation of South African sovereignty."

"Photographs in our possession reveal that the embassy aircraft was engaged in a systematic program of photography of vast areas of South Africa, including some of our most sensitive installations," Botha said.

Edmondson was not immediately available for comment. A source close to the embassy said it has a small aircraft assigned to the defense attaché, Air Force Col. Alvin M. Crews.

The State Department official in Washington, who asked not to be identified, said he did not know exactly what areas of South Africa had been photographed by the plane, or whether they were considered classified by the South African government.

The aircraft reportedly was in Salisbury, Zimbabwe (Rhodesia), earlier this week, but the sources said they were not sure why. The United States does not recognize the Rhodesian government.

At a later news conference here, Botha said the "spy plane" incident would not necessarily mean severing diplomatic relations with the United States, but he expects an official apology.

Amin's retreat hailed amid Kampala looting

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — A frenzy of looting swept Kampala Thursday and thousands of joyous Ugandans rallied in a city square to cheer the fall of Idi Amin. Their new rulers called on all Ugandans to help hunt down the dictator "wherever he is."

Amin and his victorious enemies — Tanzanians and Ugandan rebels — continued to wage a radio war. From his broadcasting point in eastern Uganda, Amin insisted the country was still his, and the capital's new rulers said over Kampala radio, "Idi Amin has killed hundreds of our brothers and sisters."

"Amin has looted Uganda more than any other human being has done in the world," the radio said. "All Ugandans who love their motherland must from now on help find Idi Amin wherever he is. He deserves the gallows."

It accused Amin, whose eight-year rule was marked by military bragging, of being "afraid to say where he is," and gave his officers two hours to turn themselves in, with their weapons, "or they will be dealt with accordingly."

From his radio transmitter at Soroti, 200 miles northeast near the Kenyan border, Amin said, "We have got our soldiers controlling the country." His troops were reported streaming toward the Kenyan border in a chaotic rout, however, fleeing the Tanzanian forces and Ugandan rebels who captured Kampala late Tuesday.

As estimated 10,000 Kampalans — toting looted typewriters on their heads and sitting in stolen office chairs — filled a square in front of the Ugandan Parliament for five hours of denunciation of Amin and praise for Tanzania and the new provisional government announced Wednesday.

"We'd like to see another demonstration tomorrow with people marching back to government offices with the things they've taken," the information chief of the new anti-Amin administration, Robert Sebunya, appealed to the crowd.

In New York Thursday, Uganda's deputy ambassador to the United Nations, Idi Osman, peacefully handed over the country's U.N. mission to the new government at the request of Andrew Kayira, who has just been named Uganda's deputy minister of the interior.

Some residents of Jinja said the Ugandan leader was in that city, and he was believed to be transmitting his broadcasts through equipment at Soroti, 200 miles northeast of Kampala. Much of Uganda, including all of Amin's home territory in the north, was still beyond Tanzanian lines. The invaders did not mount an immediate military operation to hunt down Amin and any remaining loyal troops.

In the capital, residents said Tanzanian troops joined Kampalans in massive plundering that shifted Thursday from already stripped shops to residential areas and government offices.

Milliken, claiming his veto of a controversial union election bill constitutes an unfair labor practice.

The union-backed bill, which has twice passed the Democrat-dominated Legislature only to be vetoed by Milliken, names the Michigan Employment Relations Commission as the agency to conduct a state trooper union election — not the state Civil Service Commission.

The troopers, who won collective bargaining rights in last fall's election, often have been at odds with the commission.

But Milliken has argued the commission — not MERC — has jurisdiction over state employees.

Gordon Gots, Michigan State Police Troopers Associated president, charged Milliken's vetoes are an effort to deny troopers their bargaining rights.

"The association today legally represents on payroll deduction nearly 90 percent of the officers in the 2,000 member bargaining unit," Gots said.

"The association has also gathered signatures of 80 percent of the officers in the bargaining unit on legal show of interest cards."

Governor Milliken, by vetoing the bill, is playing games with the law with troopers, and the public which granted this benefit at the last election," the union said.

"Governor Milliken is in a conflict of interest by using his role as governor to veto his bill. He has assumed the constitutional role of employer... and therefore has a constitutional responsibility and obligation that comes with the employer under labor law.

"If the employer, as one of the parties to collective bargaining, is to dictate terms of collective bargaining, it would destroy the integrity and value of the entire process," the union said.

A spokesperson for the union said he expects the suit to be filed within a week, probably in the Michigan Court of Appeals.

The troopers association also has asked the Legislature to override Milliken's veto. It said a vote is expected in early May.

played like a movie director on wheels.

"I didn't know if we would win," Kelsner said, "but after the half I was pretty sure we would."

The Spartans led at the half, 22-21.

Toward the end of the game, the crowd of about 7,500 started cheering as Jamie "Shoes" Huffman lost his shoe while leaving the game.

In the last few minutes, young autograph seekers stormed the Spartan bench.

Though the game ended with the Globe Rollers trailing 43 to 35, the game produced no losers. About $15,000 was raised from ticket sales to fight multiple sclerosis, the handicapper of young adults.

Commission. The commission rejected the charges in 1970.

Hildebrand then tried to file a suit in state courts, but was refused.

In 1971, Hildebrand filed suit in federal court against the MSU Board of Trustees and five University officials, charging denial of the constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech and due process of law.

Those named in the suit were: former President Clifton R. Wharton Jr.; Vice President for Research and Graduate Studies, John Cantlon then University provost; former University College Dean Edward A. Carlin; Clinton A. Snyder, professor of social science; and Dunham.

Spartans roll into victory

By BRUCE BABIARZ and CHERYL FISH

The Spartans kept their winning streak alive, this time on wheels, by defeating the Lansing Globe Rollers, 43-35 Wednesday night at Jenison Fieldhouse in a benefit game for multiple sclerosis.

It was a close game right up to the final minutes, with both teams putting in an all-out effort. The experienced Rollers were faster and able to maneuver easily on the court, but the Spartans sat taller in their chairs and could pick off loose balls and rebounds.

Jim Vincent and Eric Gentile, director of the MSU Office of Programs for Handicappers, led the Rollers with 13 and 10 points respectively. Chet Hepworth and Guyton Morales each scored six points.

Gentile scored most of his baskets with one-armed shots from the outside.

Hepworth out-manuevered the Spartans with agile wheelchair moves to score three baskets and make several blocks on Spartan shooters.

The top scorer for the Spartans was Bob Chapman with 10 points. He was followed by Earvin Johnson with eight points, while Ron Charles and Greg Kelsner each scored six.

Globe Roller coach Charles Hallman said he felt his team played very well. "I'm very proud of them," he said. "Now we're No. 2 in the country."

All Spartans had a chance to play, as "coach" Darwin Payton, Spartan student manager, substituted players often, especially after Kelsner rolled his way into foul trouble, racking up four.

The Spartans were full of praise for the Globe Rollers.

"I think we controlled the boards better," Mike Longaker said, "but they really played hard and pressed us."

"It was a very serious game because we both wanted to win," said Mike Brkovich.

Most of the Spartans had their hands heavily taped for the game to prevent them from developing blisters.

After the game, Johnson looked at his taped hands and commented, "I'm feeling worn out, but I'll be fine at Dooley's," referring to the post-game party at the bar.

The "Magic Man" said the game was a lot of fun adding, "we were going for the win, but it was for a good cause."

The Spartans went into the game uncertain of what to expect from the Rollers. Most of the Spartans said they had never seen a wheelchair game before.

In a practice scrimmage Monday night, the Spartans had their first experience playing basketball in wheelchairs.

"We're going to play to win," Brkovich said at the time, "but I think we're going to get killed."

The Spartans had trouble handling the ball and the wheelchairs during the first half, but as the game rolled on, they adjusted to the chairs.

Johnson passed and controlled the game

FORMER MSU ASSOCIATE PROF APPEALS

Tenure still sought in legal battle

By MICHELE McELMURRY
State News Staff Writer

Despite 10 years of legal battles, John R. Hildebrand is still determined to continue fighting for his First and 14th amendments rights of freedom of speech and due process of law.

The former MSU associate professor of social science and Latin American studies who was refused tenure and discharged in 1969, will appear today in the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati, Ohio to argue his case concerning academic freedom.

Hildebrand, who was employed by the University from Sept. 1, 1967 to Sept. 1, 1969, has said he was denied tenure because he was elected by his colleagues to the department's Faculty Advisory Committee as a non-tenured faculty member.

Hildebrand also said he was discharged because he recommended departmental changes in a report on improving undergraduate education.

Hildebrand was notified of his dismissal during the summer of 1968 in a letter from Douglas Dunham, then chairperson of the department of Social Science.

Hildebrand maintains he was denied his rights to due process when Dunham refused to provide him with written reasons for his dismissal and denied his request to present a defense.

After spending his last year at MSU going through various campus grievance procedures and the tenure commission, Hildebrand attempted to file a complaint with the Michigan Employment Relations

State News subscription refunds amount to $138

A total of $138 has been refunded within the past week in State News subscriptions for spring term. Tuesday was the last day to receive a refund.

About $95 of the amount has been turned over to People's Choice, a newspaper for minorities at MSU.

The subscription refund drive was the culmination of a Black Student Coalition march one week ago to protest inadequate State News coverage of minority issues and affairs.

Seventy-seven dollars was given in refunds last Friday, the day of the coalition's march. After the march, State News General Manager Gerald Coy donated $500 to People's Choice.

Somoza's troops blast stubborn guerrillas

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — National guard troops used air strikes and armored vehicles Thursday to try to blast stubborn Sandinista guerrillas from dug-in positions in the embattled town of Esteli.

Military sources, the Red Cross and the refugees said there were casualties, but none could provide exact figures of dead and wounded.

Witnesses said the heavily armed guerrillas of the Sandinista National Liberation Front were holding out behind stone barricades and in deep trenches. They said parts of Esteli were sown with booby traps.

The guard launched a fierce counter-attack Wednesday to try to dislodge the guerrillas, who seized the town Saturday. Esteli, a town of 35,000, is 90 miles north of Managua, the capital.

The national guard is President Anastasio Somoza's 10,000-person military and police force. The Sandinistas have been trying for a decade to oust him and end his authoritarian rule. Somoza was in Florida for an Easter Week vacation.

Revolutionary government executes eight

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Revolutionary firing squads shot eight more of the exiled shah's men before dawn Thursday and hours later a tribunal passed death and prison sentences on six police officers charged with torturing political prisoners, the state radio said.

The radio said another court Thursday levied a death sentence on Gen. Hashem Berenjian, former head of the Iranian air force counter-intelligence service.

The shootings brought to 109 the number of persons confirmed as executed since Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary government took power Feb. 12 and began secret Islamic trials that order the sentences carried out immediately, without appeal.

State radio reported Mahmoud Moini, former chief of the SAVAK in the holy city of Qom, was executed for "corruption to the core, fighting against clergymen and warring with God and his emissaries."

Cosmonauts forced to abandon mission

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet and a Bulgarian cosmonaut returned safely to Earth in an unusual night landing Thursday after aborting their attempted linkup with an orbiting space laboratory, Moscow radio reported.

The broadcast said the Soyuz 33 spacecraft, launched late Tuesday, deployed its parachutes normally and made a soft landing in the steppes in the targeted area of Kazakhstan, about 1,800 miles southeast of Moscow.

The Soviet news agency Tass said a malfunction in the "approach correction power unit" of the space capsule caused the last-moment cancellation of a docking with the Salyut 6 space station, where two other Soviets have been in orbit for six-and-a-half weeks.

The failure was the first in four intercosmos operations and dampened Thursday's celebrations here of the 18th anniversary of the first manned space flight — that of Russia's Yuri Gagarin.

Florida's courtrooms open to cameras

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The Florida Supreme Court opened the state's courtrooms to cameras and recording equipment on a permanent basis Thursday, thus giving electronic media and press photographers their broadest access to legal proceedings anywhere in the nation.

In a unanimous ruling, the court said cameras will be allowed in Florida courtrooms, effective May 1, as a general practice unless the presiding judge specifically finds that cameras and recording devices should be prohibited.

In such a case, the judge would have to meet a narrow test included by the justices in their opinion. The court declined Thursday, however, to outline specific cases in which a judge could close a proceeding to cameras.

In a related development, the Ohio Supreme Court on Thursday announced that it has amended the state's code of judicial conduct to allow broadcasting and photographing of courtroom proceedings. However, the Ohio amendments will be in effect for only one year, beginning June 1, after which the court will decide whether to permanently adopt, modify or rescind them.

Tests prove minute amounts of uranium melted

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — Lab tests show that at most an "insignificant" amount of uranium melted in the Three Mile Island nuclear plant's reactor core after a March 28 accident, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said Thursday.

"It indicated no fuel melting occurred. Or if it did, it was exceedingly small, and that's good news," said NRC spokesman James Hanchett after tests were run on samples drawn from the primary cooling system of the plant's crippled number two reactor. "The amounts of uranium are in the range of parts per billion. If you had significant fuel melting, you would expect to see uranium in parts per million," he added.

The tests on core damage were done at nuclear laboratories in Oak Ridge, Tenn., and Savannah River, S.C. If samples drawn from the reactor's primary cooling system showed uranium deposits, it would indicate severe contamination.

Erased cockpit tape remains mystery

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The pilot of a TWA jet that rolled over and fell five miles in the skies above Michigan last week said Thursday he didn't know how the tape on the plane's cockpit flight recorder was erased.

But Harvey Gibson, the pilot, said that had the tape not been erased, its contents would have "only made the crew look good."

Gibson was among witnesses Thursday as the National Transportation Safety Board held a public hearing on the incident.

He was at the controls of the TWA 727 trijet April 4 when the plane went into a 360-degree roll as it flew at 39,000 feet. The jet broke the sound barrier as it dove about 30,000 feet.

Gibson ordered the landing gear lowered, a maneuver that stabilized the plane and brought it under control. Aboard were seven crew members and 80 passengers on a flight from New York to Minneapolis.

Gibson said the erasure may have been automatic because the recording equipment recycles itself every 30 minutes. The TWA plane flew 45 minutes after the incident before making an emergency landing at Detroit.

ORDERS PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES

NRC warns 34 nuclear plants

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission told operators of 34 atomic power plants Thursday to be aware of the kinds of mistakes and breakdowns that plunged the Three Mile Island plant to the brink of disaster.

The NRC had already issued new orders, shortly after the March 28 accident near Harrisburg, Pa., to the operators of the nine new nuclear plants designed by Three Mile Island's builder, Babcock & Wilcox. The new directive went to 34 plants designed by Westinghouse Corp. and Combustion Engineering Corp.

The NRC made it clear for the first time that all 34 of these "pressurized water reactors" throughout the nation may be vulnerable to the same kinds of mishaps that damaged the nuclear core of Three Mile Island's Unit 2 and raised the danger of a meltdown, which could have released large amounts of radioactivity.

"Several aspects of the incident" apply to all of these pressurized water reactors, the commission said.

The NRC ordered the operators of the 34 plants to take steps to either avoid or learn how to cope with the kind of problems that plagued Three Mile Island.

At the Three Mile Island installation, the NRC found, valves in an auxiliary water circulation system were incorrectly left closed, preventing the system from cooling the reactor after the main circulation system failed.

The new directive told plant operators to study "the extreme seriousness and consequences" of that kind of mistake and to adopt procedures to make sure vital safety systems are restored to operation after testing and maintenance.

The NRC also told operators not to override automatic safety features before they understand fully whatever problem may be confronting them.

The commission had learned that at Three Mile Island, operators manually turned off an emergency cooling system when no other cooling system was working.

The operators were told to be alert to the previously discounted possibility that a gas bubble could form — one large enough to hamper the circulation of cooling water. And they were told to figure out in advance what steps to take to cope with such a situation.

Zambians claim refugee camp hit by Rhodesians

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (AP) — Rhodesian jets bombed a suspected guerrilla stronghold in Zambia, and officials denied Zambian claims Thursday that the attack hit a refugee camp, killing 136 persons and injuring 200, including women and children.

Rhodesian authorities said their planes hit a guerrilla camp Wednesday night and a refugee site located nearby was untouched.

They said the attack was part of a general mobilization to prevent guerrilla sabotage of next week's voting for Zimbabwe's first black-majority government.

The raid was the third officially reported crossborder attack this week, and the sixth into Zambia this month.

The Rhodesian military, confirming Wednesday night's raid on a Zambian target, said: "... Air attacks have been carried out on a large complex of ZIPRA terrorist camps known collectively as Shelinda, some 66 miles west of Solwezi in Zambia. Close to the terrorist camps is the Meheba refugee camp which was not affected."

ZIPRA is the military wing of the Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU). Rhodesia is the colonial name for Zimbabwe.

Zimbabwe's black guerrillas — estimated to number 11,500 in all — hope to disrupt the vote on majority rule next week.

The guerrillas oppose the election, saying whites will continue to dominate Zimbabwe because of constitutional provisions that give whites control of the military and judiciary and guarantee them 28 seats in the 100-seat Parliament, enough to block constitutional changes.

TORNADO DAMAGE $300 MILLION

Texas city disaster area

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — President Carter on Thursday declared this ravaged city a disaster area and city officials instituted a dusk-to-dawn curfew and a price-freeze in the aftermath of one of the most devastating tornadoes in the nation's history.

Meanwhile, rescuers searching the eight-mile long section damaged by the twister Tuesday night recovered the body of the 43rd victim Thursday. The dead man was identified as Arden J. Turner, 33, of Wichita Falls.

"Maybe I'm speaking from a standpoint of fear rather than knowledge, but we're going to be very fortunate if there were not 100 killed," said Mayor Kenneth Hill.

As many as 800 persons were injured, almost 700 of them in Wichita Falls.

"From what I've heard so far, this ranks in terms of damage only behind the tornadoes that hit Topeka in 1966, Lubbock in 1970, Omaha in 1975 and Xenia, Ohio, in 1975," said Kansas tornado specialist Joe Eagleman. "It's only the fifth tornado to cause more than $100 million in damage in history."

Gov. Bill Clements toured the city Wednesday and estimated damage up to $300 million.

Mall site rezoning to get council vote

By SUSAN TOMPOR
State News Staff Writer

A recommendation to rezone a major portion of the Dayton Hudson mall site from business to low-density residential will be presented to City Council Tuesday.

The Planning Commission approved recommending the initiation of an ordinance to rezone the property in a 4-3 vote at its Wednesday night meeting.

The recommendation was included in a list prepared by the planning staff which outlines Land Use Advisory Committee objectives that could be implemented immediately.

The property is cut by a proposed continuation of Swart Street from its origin at Abbott Road on the east through Coolidge Road on the west.

Land north of the proposed road would be zoned low-density multiple dwelling.

The zoning would allow the development of one-family, two-family and townhouse units. A maximum of eight units could be developed per acre.

Land south of the proposed road would be zoned as a business district. The zoning would permit general office, hotel or apartment development.

The Land Use Advisory report states that the proposed business zoning should also permit the inclusion of sit-down restaurants. Such an inclusion would require a modification of the zoning regulation, city planner Robert Owen said.

East Lansing is required to rezone the property by an agreement it made before the election with Dayton Hudson and Citizens for a Livable Community.

The agreement states that with a "no" vote, Dayton Hudson Properties would not build a mall at the proposed site and City Council would rezone the land from B-2 Business to some other appropriate use.

The mall, which was to have been built at Lake Lansing Road and U.S. 127, was defeated by a vote of 12,178 to 10,685 last November.

Owen said that though there is no time limit regarding the implementation of a new zoning standard, the city faces a "myriad of challenges — legally" the longer it postpones rezoning.

Because the property is zoned B-2 Owen said, the property cannot be developed for other than what is allowed by the business zoning.

But because the city is required to rezone the property, he said, no business may develop on the land.

Dayton Hudson is thus denied all of its property rights until rezoning is completed, Owen said.

"The longer the city waits, the more risk it runs of being taken to court."

Lawrence Kestenbaum, a planning commissioner who approved the recommendation, said the action taken by the commission shows a "good-faith effort on rezoning" but does not close out any other zoning uses.

Commissioners are open toward other zoning recommendations, he said, and can use the present recommendation as a meter to gauge public opinion.

"It's basically zoned nothing right now," he said. "It's better to have it zoned something than zoned nothing."

Edward Church, a planning commissioner opposed to the recommendation, said the action is "slightly premature" because it does not offer consideration to the reports of the Commercial Advisory Committee and the Housing Advisory Committee.

Although the rezoning can be deferred after City Council submits an ordinance to the Planning Commission for approval, Church said, the commission's action may have to be revised at a later date.

how they voted

Here's how MSU-area lawmakers voted on legislation this week. The legislators are Reps. David Hollister, a Lansing Democrat from the 57th District; Debbie Stabenow, a Lansing Democrat from the 58th District; H. Lynn Jondahl, an East Lansing Democrat from the 59th District; and Sen. William Sederburg, an East Lansing Republican from the 24th District.

House of Representatives

House Bill 4116 — a bill to regulate the sale of motor vehicle registration lists. The bill provides that lists can be sold only if the information is needed to notify vehicle owners of defects or recalls or for statistical or research purposes. Hollister, yes; Stabenow, yes; Jondahl, yes. Passed 84 to 10.

House Bill 4119 — a bill to provide assistance to employee-owned corporations. The Michigan Department of Labor would aid employees faced with loss of work due to the closing of a business operation. Hollister, yes; Stabenow, yes; Jondahl, yes. Passed 93 to 1.

House Bill 4199 — a bill removing the restrictions on obtaining absentee ballots. Opponents of the bill claim the measure will increase costs of elections to local units of government. Hollister, yes; Stabenow, yes; Jondahl, yes. Passed 62 to 42.

House Bill 4216 — a bill to increase membership on the state Domestic Violence Prevention and Treatment Board from five members to seven. The move is to gain minority representation on the board. Hollister, yes; Stabenow, yes; Jondahl, yes. Passed 100 to 1.

House Bill 4252 — increases state Housing Authority funding for building new homes by offering loans in distressed areas without regard to applicants' income. Hollister, yes; Stabenow, yes; Jondahl, yes. Passed 84 to 16.

RHA HOLDS REFERENDUM

Nestle boycott possible

The Residence Halls Association will hold a referendum to survey student opinion on whether management should accept products from the Nestle Corp.

The bill was approved Wednesday night after a presentation from INFAC — Infant Formula Action Coalition — a group organizing the Nestle boycott.

The boycott protests the corporation's sale of expensive infant formula in developing countries. When the formula is diluted the infants develop diarrhea, malnutrition and dehydration. Residence hall management will consider the referendum results in its decision on whether to buy Nestle products. An RHA committee was set up to organize the survey.

Another committee was also approved to investigate possible alternatives to the current alcohol policy.

Paul Oliaro, from Residence Hall Programming Office, said after the letter of clarification by Eldon Nonnamaker, vice president for student affairs, most students seemed to comply with the policy and were willing to work with it.

"What we're trying to do is react to behavior as we have before and present a policy that is clear to students and clear to staff," said Oliaro. "We're not going to have people going door-to-door to check I.D. cards."

In other business: President Chris Hoffman announced Steve Wachsburg from ASMSU Legislative Affairs would like RHA members to help petition a drive to put the drinking age issue on the 1980 ballot.

a bill allowing $8,000 in RHA movie funds to be transferred to the spring concert account was approved;

Executive Assistant Audrey Slavin announced RHA Week, May 13 through 19, will include a foot race, canoe races, a tug of war and movies;

Vice President Carol Purdy announced a DPS officer will discuss recent towing problems at the next RHA meeting, April 18; and it was announced the Rreport committee needs a new member and Radio Board needs a chairperson.

Barrel's bathroom sink reportedly off the wall

A washbasin in the men's restroom at the Peanut Barrel was mysteriously ripped off the wall late Wednesday night.

East Lansing police said they have a male suspect, but he claims he only punched the restroom wall with his fist.

An employee of the Peanut Barrel, 521 E. Grand River Ave., said he heard a noise in the restroom and called police after he found the damaged sink and water running on the wall. Damage has not been estimated as yet, police said.

Police are investigating.

Planners to suggest parking lot restriping include smaller spaces

By SUSAN TOMPOR
State News Staff Writer

East Lansing should begin to restripe parking lots to include sized-down spaces for small cars, the Planning Commission decided Wednesday.

Reviewing a series of Transportation Advisory Committee recommendations outlined by planning staff as ones of immediate importance, the commission voted to recommend that the city not wait for the new Comprehensive Plan before taking action.

Implementation of the recommendation began Thursday as the Engineering Department began surveying the numbers of small cars that occupy city parking lots, said Gordon Melvin, group manager of the Engineering Department.

Melvin said the survey should be complete by the middle of next week. Actual restriping could begin by late May, he said.

"Past surveys have shown that about 30 percent of all cars in city parking lots are small cars," said Bradford Pryce, group manager of the Department of Planning, Housing and Community Development.

Pryce said no statistics are available to indicate the number of spaces that would be created by the program.

Commission members said sized-down spaces could be located in prime spots in the lot to encourage the use of small cars.

The special spaces would be available only in nonmetered lots, Pryce said. An attendant could monitor the lot to determine that the proper cars are located in the spaces.

GOP charges called 'old story'

By KIM CRAWFORD
State News Staff Writer

Republican leadership sharply criticized the state Legislature for a "virtually nonexistent track record" and saddled the blame on the Democratic majority Thursday.

And Democrats shrugged off the accusations as "the same old story."

The Republican attack came at a Thursday afternoon press conference held by Rep. William Bryant, House minority leader, and Sen. Robert Vanderlaan, Senate minority leader.

The two accused Democratic leadership of stalling action on implementation of the Headlee tax limitation amendment, supplemental appropriations and workers compensation reform.

"This legislative session is three-and-a-half months old and I'm afraid it's acting its age," Bryant said.

"One only needs to look at the piles of bills introduced, acted upon and passed to see the inaction by this Legislature," he said, showing reporters a stack of 467 bills which have been introduced in the House and another pile of the 60 that were passed.

Vanderlaan said the Legislature has gone 14 weeks into the year "without anything of substance" being accomplished.

Bryant was also critical of House inaction on appropriations bills.

"Now I hear rumblings we may be headed for late July or even August budget session," he said. "There is no excuse for that kind of delay."

The two Republicans mentioned the possibility of introducing measures to place deadlines on the Legislature to "get the job done."

But House Majority Leader Joe Forbes, an Oak Park Democrat, cast aside GOP accusations.

"We'll be responsible, take our time and get things done," he said. "I'm beginning to wonder if they'll support anything."

Forbes said educating 25 freshman Democrats and recounting close election results at the request of Republicans partially explains slow legislative action.

"The Headlee Amendment is not as easy to implement as Bryant would have it to be," Forbes said. "Its definitions are unclear, and they need to be made clear."

"It has been slow, but no slower than it was two years ago."

Bob Reinshuttle, legislative assistant to Senate Majority Leader William Faust, also brushed aside the Republican barbs.

"These types of comments are leveled by the Republicans every year. In a month, major legislation will come out."

Profit tax won't prevent inflation

When Jimmy Carter announced his energy policy last week, nobody seemed too surprised. Critics had predicted weeks ago what Carter would say, and they had begun presenting their arguments against decontrol of domestic crude oil prices. But it didn't matter: Carter went on TV and presented a plan doomed to failure.

The decontrol of prices has been attacked by many critics. The more cynical ones oppose decontrol because the oil companies favor it. The more empirically minded critics point instead to the inflationary pressures decontrol would present through higher prices.

They are also quick to point out the supply and demand factors associated with price rises of past months: demand has not significantly lessened, and surprise "shortages" still emerge despite promises from producers that they will step up exploration when they receive higher prices.

These arguments didn't faze Carter, although they did bring Congressional concern into focus. Carter felt he didn't have to listen to economic gobbledegook; the power to decontrol prices is solely in the hands of the President — under present law.

Carter has already made his move, but he put the pressure on Congress to make his plan look good to the American people by passing an excess profits tax to take away part of the profits oil companies will receive from higher fuel prices.

Members of Congress have already expressed concern about the ability of their colleagues to defeat the strong oil lobby and pass the bill to take away corporate dollars, dollars that otherwise could find their ways into the campaign funds of the "proper" candidates.

There would be no political winners under the Carter plan, and if he had it his way, the only potential bad-guys would be Congress, the ones who had a chance to make the Carter plan "work" but refused to do so.

Even if Congress passes the excess profits tax to cover windfall profits, the Carter plan will still hurt consumers and help oil companies. The tax would not take away all windfall profits, just part of them, and will leave a chunk of money for the oil companies with the assumption they will re-invest those dollars into domestic exploration, instead of diversification projects like hotels and department stores.

Any law prohibiting investment into otherwise legal ventures will certainly face a legal challenge or a compromise the Carter administration is becoming known for. So, just as the Teamsters were able to convince the White House to stretch its inflation guidelines to allow a 30 percent contract increase in wages and benefits over three years, Exxon will be able to convince the pro-corporate Department of Energy to stretch its definition of acceptable profits.

An alternate strategy, one that bypasses Carter's refusal to look out for the people's interests, is emerging in Congress. The power of the president to decontrol oil prices is one granted by law. Congress can change the law, and take away the power from presidents who abuse it. Control of oil prices must remain.

The decontrol won't work, the excess profits tax is inadequate, and the Carter reasoning cannot be broken by facts. The energy policy must become a political standoff between the executive and legislative branches to prevent further price gouging from gaining government approval.

A thankless job

The Tanzanian forces of President Julius Nyerere, who were responsible for the recent "liberation" of the Ugandan people from the despotic rule of Idi Amin, have been denied the congratulatory pat-on-the-back they so richly deserve. And though it is an unfortunate irony, it is readily understandable.

Since President Nyerere came to power, he has been an outspoken critic of the United States' foreign policy in Africa. And though Idi Amin was also an outspoken critic of the United States, his brand was on the opposite end of the spectrum as Nyerere's. Where Amin would make bombastic accusations which inevitably grabbed international headlines and further proved his mental instability, Nyerere took the route of carefully chosen words, empirical economic evidence and low-key persuasion. Amin could be dealt with. Nyerere could not.

Nyerere has usually been labeled pro-Marxist by Western press. What this means is that Nyerere strongly believes Tanzania's means of production should be owned by Tanzania, as opposed to foreign ownership, with a guaranteed cut of the wealth. Tanzania selfishly believes Tanzanians should get what is theirs, not just a royalty. And beyond merely believing in this idealistic vision, Nyerere has enacted such policies — much to the chagrin of the United States and Western multinational corporations. Nyerere stands as an island on the continent of Africa.

Perhaps it is his background in the study of philosophy, or perhaps he is genuinely beyond personal avarice, but he has not succumbed to the enticement of vast personal wealth that is so characteristic of Third World leaders. And because of that, he is the most dangerous of threats to the "American Way."

To hear world reaction to Amin's previous atrocities, one would think that whoever was responsible for his demise would be heralded the world over — such has not yet been the case. But if the Western world cannot let bygones be bygones with regard to Nyerere's past criticisms, at least Nyerere can. One of his first statements after the fall of Uganda's capital was to implore the United States government to do all it can in the future reformation of Uganda.

LASH LARROWE

Should Magic go pro?

I'm heading out on the Libe, my arms loaded with books, this flunky stops me at the door.

"You're Lash Larrowe, aren't you?" she asks. "The head of the Library gave us orders not to let you out of here with any books until you pay the $17.20 in late fines you owe us."

"I'm appealing that $17.20," I say, "and Dr. Chapin said I can take out any book I need for the course I'm teaching."

"In that case, OK," she backs down. "From what your students tell me about your course, Lash, you'd need a wheelbarrow to carry all the books you'd need to bring that course of yours up to date."

"What do they know?" I bark. "I say when you've got a set of good notes you've been using for 20 years, you don't throw 'em out just because they're getting a little yellow around the edges, some Johnny come lately says you're behind the times."

"Anyway, Lash," she says, "I'm glad I ran into you, you being a well-known economist and all. I wanted to ask you: what do you think about the possibility Magic might be leaving the 'U' to go into the pros?"

"I'm for it," I answers.

"I'm surprised to hear you say that," she says. "I should think you of all people would appreciate the financial value a college education would have to him. What if he leaves school now and gets hurt?" He won't have a professional career ahead of him, and he won't have an education, either."

"He graduated from high school, didn't he?" I demands.

"What's that got to do with it?" she wonders.

"Recent studies have shown that the lifetime earnings of college graduates aren't that much higher than high school grads," I explains. "If Magic drops out now, he'll make up the difference in a week, the bread the pros'll lay on him. Even if he does get hurt after a few months, he'll be way ahead, money-wise."

"I didn't know that," she says. "But wouldn't it be unfair of Magic to desert the 'U' and all his fans? Especially those basketball boosters who took out those full-page ads urging him to stay? We can be No. 1 again next year, you know, if he's on our team. You know yourself, Lash, how the Legislature loves MSU when we win."

"Magic's already done more than his share for Moo," I says curly. "If the boys who ramrod this spread worked half as hard for the 'U' as he has, we wouldn't be in the financial crunch we're in. You ever think of that?"

"What about Magic's dream he'd someday play in the Olympics?" she asks. "That goes out the window if he turns pro, won't it?"

"Sure," I says. "But he's found out the teams he'd be playing against in the Olympics, like the Russkys, are really professionals. When you get right down to it, I figure if he's gonna play against pros, he might as well get paid for it, the way the other superstars do."

"I hadn't thought of it that way," she says, "but then I'm not into sports the way you are, Lash. I do know this much, though, if Magic isn't here to draw the crowds, your pal Big Ed and his buddies in Lansing won't be able to build that sports arena they've been promoting, will they?"

"That's a plus for Magic splitting for the pros," I answers. "If they don't build the sports arena, our students won't have to go off campus to see the team play, get ripped off to pay for the arena when they buy their tickets for the games."

"Gee, Lash," she entuses, "I'm impressed with your masterful analysis of what Magic should do. It's like I always tell my friends, You want get the answer to a complicated problem, go to an expert, right?"

"Before I can say I couldn't agree more, this guy bumps into me, my books go flying all over the floor."

"I see now why you're in favor of Magic leaving, Lash!" she sneers as she helps me pick 'em up. "Look at these titles: 'The ABCs of the Hardship Clause'; 'I Made a Cool Million as Dr. J's Agent'; 'You, Too, Can Make It Big Representing Professional Athletes!'"

"You're gonna be Magic's agent!" she screams. "He does the work, you move in like a sleazy parasite and pick up easy bucks!"

"He and I have talked about it," I admits, "but you've got me wrong if you think I'm interested in making money out of him. If I were, I sure wouldn't be satisfied with the lousy 30 percent we agreed on."

"I only agreed to represent Magic to make sure he gets every last dime he's entitled to."

VIEWPOINT: IRAN AND PAKISTAN

Khomeini's unholy alliance

By MALEK MOHAMMAD TOWGHI

Khomeini celebrated his first Iranian New Year day in power by killing more than 1,000 Kurds, including women and children. He used the same guns the shah had purchased to suppress those who do not conform to Khomeini's religious, ethnic and political creed. Khomeini's government shamelessly used a section of the shah's infamous Immortal Guards to answer the Kurdish demand for equal treatment of non-dominant and oppressed ethnic and religious groups.

While our sign of God — ayatollah — who has replaced 'God's chosen one' — Khoda Yagan — (Shah's official title) was rejoicing over the establishment of a 'government of God,' his guns were blazing at the Turkomans. Three hundred and fifty Turkomans were gunned down by Khomeini's holy warriors in one day.

Communications between Iranian Baluchistan and the rest of the world were cut by the Khomeini government during the two weeks prior to the farce they called a referendum. Foreign media personnel trying to enter Baluchistan were turned back. The films of TV crews which had managed to reach the Turkoman region were confiscated. There are reports that Khomeini's 'Islamic republic' is receiving military reinforcement from its fanatic Pakistani counterpart. Their purpose is to keep the Baluchi people divided as a nation and separated between two countries. It is ironic that the self-styled anti-imperialists are massacring those who do not believe in the sanctity of boundaries drawn by the British colonialists.

Khomeini's government has accelerated its collaboration with Pakistan against the non-sectarian secular government of Afghanistan. Internally, through media and whispering campaign, the traditional Persian Shiite chauvinism, racism and fanaticism are being encouraged and strengthened against all other groups. The enlightened liberal and progressive elements within the Persian Shiite community who disagree with Khomeini's orthodox chauvinism are being harassed and marked as traitors and heathens — their literature confiscated.

The fanatic religious ideologues of Maudouidi's Islamic Party (Pakistan) are in close contact with the Khomeinists of Iran. The members of this party have joined Gen. Zia's illegitimate military cabinet from a back-door. The Maudouidists of Pakistan who were instrumental in sending Bhutto, the former Liberal prime minister, to the gallows, openly propagate their disbelief in the democratic system. The job-hunters and administrative mercenaries of this obscure and fanatic Pakistani group have already infiltrated the oil-producing Arab countries. This group played an inhuman role in getting Mujib of Bangladesh butehered — along with his wife and children. Their role in obtaining asylum for Mujib's killers in another Muslim country was not less alarming.

The dark and armed forces of Khomeini, reinforced by their Pakistani counterparts are on the march in various directions. It is now obvious that they aim at imposing a Medieval exploitative system along with its fanatic elements on a beautiful, but unfortunate country — Iran. The establishment of Khomeini's 'Government of God' (obviously Shiite Persian speaking) has created a permanent source of harassment, humiliation, and discrimination against all other non-regional ethnic, religious and enlightened political sections. The constitution of the country, prepared by one-track fanatic minds is on its way. Following the 'unique' Khomeinist type of referendum it will apparently be imposed in a similar atmosphere of harassment and religious fanaticism after a similar 99.99 percent victory.

There is historical, rational, and logical evidence for our concern about the fact that the non-dominant regional nationalities such as the Kurds, Baluchs, Turkomans, Arabs, and Azaris — along with non-Muslim minorities — will suffer from Khomeinism more than others. The process of intimidation and annihilation has already started. Please help in order to stop or, at least, expose the process.

As a Baluch citizen of Iran, I would be glad to contact individuals groups interested in forming finding forums for the cause of federal secular democracy in general — and for the cause of oppressed nationalities and religious ethnic groups in Iran, Pakistan and Iraq in particular.

Towghi is a Ph.D. candidate in history majoring in international relations.

Vets must move on with society

I'm getting very tired of reading and hearing about how hard the veterans of the Vietnam War have it. More and more we hear about how they are the victims and how they bear the guilt, accusations and reactions against the role the United States took in Vietnam.

No doubt that some are victims, but I wonder if they are as prevalent as the media would have us believe.

I am a Vietnam veteran. Nine months of my life were spent there. I don't feel as particularly piteous as some would have me feel. I don't blame anyone lacking I show now on my "Vietnam experiences." If I fail at something, I don't give some mystic excuse like, "well, ya-know man, like I was in Nam." I have coped, I suspect most other vets have too.

You could go on and on about how tough it has been for some to adjust. For me, the hardest adjustment has been to be 26 years old, in a class full of 20-year-olds, a slight out-of-touch feeling. I think that's a typical reaction to any such age difference, and not really attributable to my time in Vietnam.

The point is I'm sure there are those who have had adjustment problems in the area of jobs and relationships. What I resent is someone using mentally and physically handicapped veterans to continue a national guilt complex.

But, a national guilt complex can only cause interference with our responsible position in the world. I know Vietnam was a mistake. I can name nine men on my ship alone who died from that mistake. But, I don't think that as a veteran, I was left holding the bag. Vietnam was far from the personal trauma some would want me to profess. I have picked up and moved on, wiser for my experience, and ready for tomorrow. I suggest those who want to learn, must also move on.

I paid my money; I want my space

We keep reading articles in The State News about the students' problems with parking at Case Hall. Students know that when they enroll at the University there are certain parking restrictions, yet they still chose MSU for their education. So why do they choose now to break these rules? I have worked at the University for 11 years and have had to pay for my parking all those years. There is nothing more maddening than to come back to work at noon and not be able to find a parking space because of student-non-faculty stickered-cars. Parking is a privilege on this campus and if that privilege is abused, the abuser should be reeked with. I'm for having all faculty-staff parking areas gated. That way I'd be guaranteed my paid parking space and non-paying people would not be able to abuse my rights!

Old sayings don't die, just get old

As a black student who has been associated with MSU since 1971, I fully agree and support the Black Student Coalition. The State News has always underreported minority events. I'm glad students are aiming at the large amount of money The State News receives.

It never fails to amaze me how the editorial board can attack inadequate affirmative action programs, loudly condemn South African racism but can't relate to 2,000 blacks right under its own nose. A survey should be taken to see what are the expectations of all MSU students have of their newspaper. It's obvious that needs aren't being met. Oh well, you know the saying; either read today's State News or yesterday's Free Press, it's the same.

Towing could be unconstitutional

Those individuals protesting the present parking/towing policy might re-direct part of their energies toward investigation of a New Orleans Federal Court ruling this past summer. To my best recollection, that particular court ruled that towing cars for parking violations without a personal hearing is unconstitutional unless: 1) the vehicles obstruct emergency services, or 2) the vehicles endanger pedestrian or other traffic.

Somalian land problems outlined

By JENNIFER DIXON
State News Staff Writer

Somalia, traditionally a nomadic pastoral country outlining the Horn of Africa, is trying to maintain its pastoral economy after suffering a severe drought from 1971 to 1974, a professor of African Studies at California State University at Chico said Thursday.

After the drought, when grazing became almost impossible, the Somali government instituted cooperative grazing and initiated small-scale agriculture and fishing industries, Charles Gesheker said.

Border problems and conflicts between colonial powers occupying the territory at the end of the 19th century were the cause of ecological problems in the area that culminated with the drought, Gesheker said. He has been to Somalia twice in the past three years.

Gesheker said the eastern Horn of Africa is 80 to 85 percent nomadic pastoral land and has been for centuries. The nomads have given their animals priority over the condition of the land, which has helped cause the environmental deterioration in Somalia.

"The alteration of grazing patterns due to colonialization led to ecological degradation and left wide areas open to drought," Gesheker said.

He explained Somali nomads traditionally grazed their animals on the northern tip of the Horn during the dry season and moved south later in the year. The pattern allowed the rangelands to regenerate during the rainy season.

However, in the late 19th century, the boundaries shifted and nomads were not allowed to migrate south into Ethiopia which restricted them to the outskirts of the Horn.

"The new boundaries obstructed migration and the nomads grazed their animals in areas that should have regenerated," Gesheker said.

"When the rains failed in 1971 to 1974 it was horrible," he explained. "The Ethiopian response was that people always die in these areas, but the Somalia response was one of putting together a massive resettlement project."

A cooperative grazing scheme was organized with guards and fences to ensure the land has a chance to regenerate, he said.

Gesheker said signs of environmental degradation were observable in the 1940s, but it took the drought to bring action.

Somalia was divided by British colonial powers in the east, French powers in the north and Italian powers in the south before 1940. These divisions later led to geographical separation and made unification difficult.

However, after World War II economic prosperity flourished in the northern part of the territory and more and more Somalis had Land Rovers and motorized vehicles which they used for visiting each other across previously untraversable tracks of land.

Political consciousness spread because the Somalis were meeting and discussing the land problem.

The country became independent in 1960.

Michiganders mobilizing to help MUCC 'Operation Cleansweep'

By SANDY HOLT
State News Staff Writer

Thousands of Michigan residents will start cleaning up roadside litter across the state Saturday as part of the Michigan United Conservation Club's "Operation Cleansweep."

Cheryl Bartz, project manager of the MUCC program, said "several thousand" groups will participate in the month-long litter cleanup.

MUCC, a statewide coalition of conservation, environmental and sports groups, has been planning since July 1978 to clean roadsides of throwaway bottles and cans.

The group sponsored the petition drive to bring the "bottle bill," which passed with 63 percent of the vote, to Michigan voters in 1976.

"This cleanup is the perfect opportunity for those who supported the bottle bill to pitch in, so we can see immediate results from the bottle bill," said Thomas L. Washington, MUCC executive director.

Bartz said the federal Environmental Protection Agency estimated cans and bottles make up 20 to 40 percent of litter by item count and 60 to 80 percent of the litter by volume.

She said the MUCC's 425 affiliated clubs and other groups such as Girl Scouts, Scouting USA, Michigan 4-H Youth Programs, and UAW Conservation Department will collect litter in designated areas during the month.

About 100 area coordinators will work with volunteer groups in each area, providing litter bags and transportation of the litter.

Bartz said county road commissions, the Department of Natural Resources, the National Guard and some city departments will haul the trash once it is collected by the groups.

She said scuba diving groups including members of MUCC's scuba committee and the Michigan Skin Diving Council will clean litter from river and stream bottoms.

"People don't like litter," Bartz said, citing the main reason for so much participation. "Many people worked to get the bottle bill and they want to see the fruits of their efforts to get the bill passed."

Tim Eder, an MSU student who works at MSU Environmental Information Services, is coordinating the East Lansing area effort.

Ken Silvernail of the Environmental Information Services, where the local program is being coordinated, said Girl Scout, Scouting USA members and brownie troops have already signed to help.

Persons or groups wishing to participate in the month-long program may contact MSU's Environmental Information Services.

WILL CONSIDER SPECIAL NEEDS

Transpo referral begun

A transportation referral service has been initiated in Lansing to serve the needs of handicappers and the elderly in the tri-county area.

The organization, Transportation Clearinghouse, "takes in calls from people who have a special kind of transportation need," said Diane Warren, assistant transportation coordinator.

"We are a referral service for disadvantaged people, such as the elderly, the mentally or physically handicapped and low-income persons," she said.

Funded by a grant from Comprehensive Employment Training Act, the clearinghouse takes in calls and refers the people to separate agencies who provide the transportation.

Warren said the calls are referred to independent agencies which provide the actual transportation, depending on the requirements of the clients.

Some of the community service agencies include the Department of Social Services, Volunteer Action Core and the CATA Spec-Tran.

Warren said the clearinghouse has two lines open five days a week, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"We serve anyone anywhere in the tri-county area," Warren said.

The transportation clearinghouse is located in the Center of Handicapper Affairs, 1026 E. Michigan Ave. in Lansing. People desiring transportation should call 485-4503.

Warren said the clearinghouse would soon be publishing a directory to help both agencies and individuals find transportation.

Woman shot in forearm

A Lansing woman was shot in the left forearm while leaning on her third-floor window sill late Wednesday night.

Pamela E. Williams, 18, 525 Seymour Ave., is in good condition in St. Lawrence Hospital. Lansing police said it is not known if the shooting was intentional and police are investigating.

What to do with Tofu

Tofu, or "soybean cheese," is a nutritious food with a mild flavor and a texture similar to that of soft cheese. It has been widely used in the Orient for centuries and is a most versatile food; here are some ways to use it.

Pan-fried tofu is delicious by itself with a sprinkle of soy sauce and lemon juice; or, tofu can be stir-fried along with vegetables, in omelets, in fried rice or fried noodles.

Tofu can be deepfried and cooked in stews; or mashed up and mixed with your favorite salad dressing for added texture and flavor.

Michigan art at Kresge

By ROSANNE SINGER
State News Reviewer

In a continuing effort to highlight contemporary Michigan artists, the Kresge Art Gallery and the MSU Department of Art have organized the sixth Michigan Biennial Art Exhibit.

Now on display in the Kresge Gallery are the works of nine Michigan artists involved in a variety of media, from weaving to sculpture to painting. The exhibit is spaciouly organized in the central Kresge gallery and a smaller room off the main area.

The metal works of Paul Mergen occupy two display cases at the entrance to the main gallery. Predominantly copper pieces, they include canisters, vases, ladles, pendants and a wall medallion. Mergen, who has taught metal-smithing at Western Michigan University since 1965, exhibited at the 4th International Exhibition of Contemporary Body Art in Toulouse, France in 1973 and at the Museum of Contemporary Crafts in New

Kate Jackson departs from 'Angels' show

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Actress Kate Jackson lost her halo today in a showdown with the producers of the highly rated Charlie's Angels television series, which gave birth to the term "jiggle show."

Jackson, a peppery, independent-minded actress who prefers to be known for her talent rather than her physical endowments, will not return to the ABC-TV series next year, according to Charlie's Angels producers.

In a prepared statement, producers Aaron Spelling and Leonard Goldberg announced:

"Kate is leaving the show, which has been renewed for next season. Our position was taken for the good of the show and her good as well. She will be leaving and we will bring in a new angel for next season.

"We wish her good luck for the future. We are happy to let her out of the series."

According to the trade paper Daily Variety, Jackson's departure will resolve the friction within the show.

Jackson, 29, who married actor Andrew Stevens, 23, last August, has not taken great pains to hide her dissatisfaction with the show for the past two years. But she was not available for comment following the producers' announcement.

She objected to many of the scripts and the obvious sexual overtones of the show which had the "Angels" jiggling around in form-revealing wardrobes and in beach scenes whenever possible.

York in 1975.

Several serigraphs (a color print made by the silk screen process and printed by the artist) and gouache paintings by Norman Stewart appear in the exhibit. Stewart, who received his master of fine arts from Cranbrook, has been guest artist there this past year. Since 1970 Stewart has exhibited in the Brooklyn Museum's 21st National Invitational Print Exhibition and the 25th National Exhibition of Prints of the Smithsonian Institution, among other national and regional exhibitions.

Two groups of photographs by Phil Davis of Ann Arbor appear in the Kresge exhibit.

The first are portrait photographs in the photogravure, platinum and color-gum-bichromate techniques. They are not really displayed to advantage, organized in nearly a straight line which only emphasizes the fact that all the faces are expressionless and give little hint of the subjects' personalities. Davis' second group consists of scenes taken in Maine and Portugal and is characterized by brilliant, rich colors. Two stunning examples are "Blue-Green Landscape" from Portugal and a Maine shot, "McMichael's Barn."

Jay Holland of Oak Park is a disconcerting sculptor whose figures of terra cotta, bronze or lumite cement appear dismembered or in some way disconnected. One beautiful piece is "Rigoletto" done in bronze. Holland, a graduate of the Society of Arts and Crafts and the Cranbrook Academy of Art, has been teaching at the Center for Creative Studies since 1964.

Ivy Sky Rutzky of Detroit works with such materials as corn kernels, paint chips, lichen, small photographs, flower petals and leaves. Fashioning them on coarsely cut poster board, she has manufactured works entitled "Autumn Offering," for example.

Because of their simplicity and the fact that the pieces appear on white board on a white background, Rutzky's art is rarely more than mildly interesting. Since 1973 she has exhibited at the Willis and Feigenson-Rosenstein galleries in Detroit and in the Works in Progress exhibition at the Detroit Institute of Arts.

Sybil Oshinsky, M.F.A., is a Detroit watercolorist whose large portraits of women are on display. Having received her degree from Wayne State University, Oshinsky has exhibited at the Suzanne Hilberry Gallery in Birmingham and in the Michigan Watercolor Society annual exhibitions.

The ceramics of Gregory Jaris of Grand Rapids appear in the Kresge exhibit and consist of bowls of varying sizes colored in earthtones of brown and gray. A graduate of MSU, where he received both his bachelor and master of fine arts degrees, Jaris has taught at Grand Valley State College since 1974.

Abigail Hadley of Mount Pleasant paints large, colorful, almost photographic canvases of blossoms, leaves and petals on water. She makes extensive use of rich shades of blue and green. Having received her BFA from the Rhode Island School of Design and her MFA from the University of Washington, Hadley has exhibited her works throughout Michigan and from the Midwest to the East Coast.

In the center of the main gallery is a massive weaving by Urban Jupena of Pinekey rendered in gray, brown, purple and rust tones. Jupena now teaches at WSU after previous assignments at the Center for Creative Studies, Rochester Institute of Technology and the Naples Mill School of Arts and Crafts.

The Biennial Exhibit continues through April 29 at the Kresge Art Gallery. Gallery hours are Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesday from 7 to 9 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday from 1 to 4 p.m.

Mariah bringing Goodman

Mariah Coffeehouse will present Steve Goodman for two shows at 8 and 10:30 p.m. Monday in Erickson Kiva. Opening both shows will be Terry Lee Hale and Becca Sarow, who appear frequently at Hobbie's and Lizard's.

Steve Goodman has become an annual Mariah favorite over the past several years, and his performances always prove to be one of the organization's seasonal highlights. It is impossible to categorize the Chicago-based singer-songwriter's style, since he blends folk with "roots" music, country and Chicago blues, "goldie oldie" rock 'n roll and a zany humor.

Compositions like "Chicken Cordon Blues" made him a perfect opening act on Steve Martin's most recent tour. Goodman often comes across as an energetic leprechaun, and he never fails to delight his audience.

Kris Kristofferson "discovered" Goodman singing in Chicago's Old Town in 1971, and he helped sign the young "unknown" to a record label. He recorded his first LP — Steve Goodman — that same year. In 1972, Arlo Guthrie recorded Goodman's "City Of New Orleans," and the song became a national hit. Goodman was soon acknowledged as the spearhead of Chicago's folk music movement.

In 1975, Goodman signed with Elektra Asylum records, and Jessie's Jig And Other Favorites was released that spring. He has released three other LPs on the label — Words We Can Dance To, Say It In Private, and High And Outside.

Steve Goodman's songs have been recorded by many artists, including John Denver, Johnny Cash and Joan Baez. David Allen Coe had a big country hit with Goodman's "You Never Even Call Me By My Name" during the summer of 1975. In addition, Goodman has co-written numerous songs with Chicago folk favorite, John Prine.

Tickets for both shows are $5.50 in advance and $6 at the door. Advance tickets are available at the Union Box Office, Elderly Instruments, Castellani's Markets, both Recordlands and Boogie Records in Mt. Pleasant.

JOHN NEILSON

Only rock 'n roll — or is it?

As Kim Shanahan pointed out in his recent column ("The rebirth of activism," April 11), there does seem to be a new surge of concern over the abuses of authority in this country. And yes, Kim, basketball and DPS strong-arm tactics may have served as a catalyst in East Lansing. But one thing Shanahan has overlooked is the activism that is springing up in other areas like, for example, rock 'n roll music.

Rock 'n roll is no stranger to activism. During the late '60s, when campus concern over the War, the Bomb, Civil Rights etc. was at its peak, rock music was an integral part of the anti-establishment movement. Rock music had things to say, and America's youth was listening. If nothing else, rock was political music because your parents hated it — to align yourself with rock music was to take that first vital stab at authority.

Unfortunately, when the public mood cooled in the early '70s and apathy became the rule on our campuses, rock music also went through some changes. The bands that had once been rebels and leaders now became and Establishment rock — regardless of whatever prompted them to pick up guitars in the beginning, they were now in it for the money. When bands like the Jefferson Airplane/Starship became superstars, their music became just a job.

Some of the bands that were born in the '70s understood this, and they did their best to carry on in the best middle-finger-to-the-world fashion. While big-budget no-content blandness threatened to take over the rock world, bands like the New York Dolls, David Bowie, Roxy Music and early Alice Cooper did their best to shake up the masses with a little outrage and irreverence.

By this time, however, rock music was a multi-billion dollar industry and, as always, Big Business breeds banality. As the American public gradually became more conservative, record companies started signing slick rock acts that wouldn't alienate anybody, and radio stations followed suit with playlists that gradually excluded all but the most commercial bands.

While there were always a number of rock acts that realized that there was more to rock music than stardom and money, it wasn't until the advent of punk and new wave rock that the situation as a whole began to change. When the Sex Pistols and their followers turned their back on the musical Establishment, it was a step equal in importance to dormitory residents uniting against the abuses of authority by the DPS and its towing arm. Both groups were fed up, and decided that the only way to see action was to take things into their own hands.

Punk rock burned out in its own nihilism and fury, but the new wave of rock that it spawned promises far-reaching changes in the music we listen to. Elvis Costello, The Clash, The Police, Talking Heads, Joe Jackson — and yes, even DEVO — are kicking some life back into our music and, hopefully, into us.

The best thing about the new wave, however, is that rock music is once again a dialogue among peers rather than superstar-to-fan patronization. Rock music is talking to us again, and if what it says isn't pretty, it's because the times aren't, either.

Rock radio, in its present incarnation as an advertising medium that fears any sort of controversy, has not exactly embraced new wave music. However, some of the music's anti-establishment sentiment must have rubbed off on its listeners, because in Detroit, at least, they have organized to protest bland radio programming.

Free Radio Now is a group that has formed in the past few months to actively protest what they see as insulting and patronizing radio fare. The group staged a protest on March 24 outside of station WABX, and despite the inclement weather about 80 people staffed the picket line. Last Saturday their target was WWWW, and the other Motor City stations will no doubt get their turn. In addition to protest rallies, Free Radio Now is organizing a letter-writing campaign against the stations.

Some people may not see this as much, and will claim that these rock fans are only fighting for their own self interests. Activism in rock can also take on larger issues, however, as America's Rock Against Racism movement is proving.

Rock Against Racism was formed in England during the summer of 1976, at a time when the country's unemployment was reaching new highs and the economy new lows. Britain's conservative elements — including a growing neo-Nazi party called the Nation front — attempted to blame the recession on non-white foreigners, claiming that these minorities were taking up the available jobs.

A new wave of assaults — verbal and physical — followed, aimed at blacks, Pakistanis and, in time, gays and women, too.

Members of the rock "establishment" were not entirely innocent of this type of racist mentality. In fact, it was after a drunken Eric Clapton attacked "foreigners" in a statement made at one of his concerts that RAR was formed to combat this ignorance.

Since its inception, RAR has organized 56 chapters throughout England, 400 concerts and benefits, and three major rock carnivals (which were, incidentally, that country's largest anti-fascist rallies since the '30s. In addition to political speakers, these carnivals featured top-name new-wave and reggae acts — new wave and reggae being the most politically conscious forms of white and black music. Elvis Costello, Graham Parker & the Rumour, the Tom Robinson Band, The Clash and a number of English reggae acts contributed to these events, while the mixed audience bore signs with slogans such as "Pogo on a Nazi!"

After the Nazi marches last summer in Chicago and Skokie, Ill., movements began to organize an American wing of RAR. To date, chapters have been established in Columbus and Dayton, Houston, Chicago, and New York City — and starting a local chapter is as easy as writing RAR a letter. Musical events are also currently scheduled for May 6 in NYC's Washington Square Park and June 9 in Chicago's Lincoln Park — in the Nazi's backyard, so to speak.

Movements like Free Radio and Rock Against Racism need people if they're to be effective — people like you. If you're willing to lend some support, or just want some more information, contact them by mail or phone:

JACKSON FOLKS ENJOY PANTREE DINING

excerpts from an article by Denise B. Cavins, Food Editor for the Jackson Citizen Patriot

EAST LANSING—With the American flag flying atop its pole beside the front steps, the building looks just as it did when I used to mail packages there as a Michigan State University student. But inside, what a delightful change.

The community's former post office reopened in October of 1976 as the Pantree, a restaurant specializing in quiches, crapes, a living decor of various greenery and pleasant, efficient service.

It is a one-of-a-kind eatery (although expansion is being considered) owned by brothers-in-law Paul Kacer and James Wade. Both have had restaurant experience in the Lansing area. Kacer is former owner of an International House of Pancakes and co-owner of The Brewery and was an associate in The Stables. Wade is a former assistant manager of the Grate Steak.

Mary Jane Cookingham, the only non-family member of the corporation as treasurer and assistant secretary, also is a working manager there. She explained that the only interior evidences of the post office which remain are the skylight, the boxes which cover one wall behind the cash register, the vault in the non-smoking room which was the postmaster's private office, and the main vault, out of the public eye, which has been turned into a china cabinet.

The decor was coordinated by Kacer and Wade. They scoured the continent for the tin ceiling from New York, the ceiling fans and a magnificent cappuccino machine from California, handmade Mexican tiles which are incorporated in the tables and booths, and a predominating ficus tree from Florida.

Atmosphere accounted for, how's the food? It ranges from adequate to great, depending on what is ordered. But newcomers don't have to play a guessing game. The management helps by printing a tiny Pantree symbol, a frying pan with tree limbs drawn inside it, beside its specialties.

I selected veal Lorraine, breaded veal smothered with rich mushroom and sour cream sauce, at a very reasonable $4.95 for all that food. It was more than I could eat, and richer and heavier than I needed. I let the menu description lead me astray from my intent of having a light lunch. I also found it a little too salty for my taste, probably my fault for not selecting a Pantree item.

My husband did better with his steak 'n' quiche combination priced at a still inexpensive $6.95. His 6-ounce steak could be teamed with any of the seven quiche choices on the menu. He chose the mushroom and Swiss cheese offering. "The steak is good, but the quiche is better," he soon announced.

On that cold, snowy night, we both decided the hot soup of the day, turkey noodle, sounded better than the cold gazpacho, "served in an iced crock," as the menu promised. We should have noted the Pantree symbol. It marked only the gazpacho. Ours was a bit watery, with large chunks of turkey roll and too few noodles for our taste. It was highly enough seasoned that it was not bad, just not up to the par of the rest of the meal.

The salad wasn't anything fancy, mostly lettuce with a few shreds of red cabbage and some split cherry tomatoes for color, but the house dressing recommended by our waiter was a tasty ranch style.

When our meals appeared, they looked like the color pictures in the nutrition class in high school. Besides the expected broccoli to add color to my baked potato and bland-colored veal, my plate sported a cherry tomato on a pick and lemon slices.

We decided to splurge on coffee by trying the cappuccino, marked with the Pantree symbol of excellence, at 75 cents a cup, instead of the unmarked PanTree special blend at only 40 cents. Our waiter told us the latter was just regular coffee, anyway. The cappuccino, topped with whipped cream, was a definite treat.

Other items on the menu which the Pantree recommends are its quiches, including a new dessert quiche of cream cheese and pineapple which hasn't even gotten into print yet, eggs Lorraine, a Copenhagen omelette, its omelette deluxe, the burger deluxe, the ranch salad, a cold vegetable buffet with a Pantree dip, filet of fish, Stroganoff and mushroom and Swiss cheese crepes, apple and cinnamon pancakes and french toast.

The most expensive dinners are $6.95, with quiches and crepes ranging from $1.95 for spinach quiche with choice of soup or salad to $3.50 for a seafood crepe with cod and scallops, including soup or salad.

MasterCharge and Visa cards are accepted, and dress ranges from jeans to evening gowns. Wine and beer are available from 11 a.m. to midnight.

KING LEADS ATTACK

MSU sweeps Lakers

By DAVE JANSSEN
State News Sports Writer
MSU's women's softball team proved Thursday that it has pitching as well as hitting, as Nancy Lyons and Wendy Greenwood led the Spartans to a 2-1, 3-2 doubleheader sweep over Grand Valley State Colleges.

The victories for MSU boosted its overall record to 7-6 and northern mark to 3-2.

Lyons had little trouble disposing of the Lakers in the opening contest. Scattering only three hits, the Spartan hurler gave up a single run in the second inning before settling down to retire the side in order in the third. After allowing GVSC its final base hit and a walk in the fourth, Lyons came on to retire the last 11 Lakers that she faced.

The rest of the Spartans gave their pitcher plenty of support in the field, playing errorless softball led by Michel Van Howe at third base. Van Howe sparkled, handling all six of her chances perfectly.

Pacing the hitting attack for MSU were Nancy "Izzy" Forester and Carmen King. Forester collected two of the seven Spartan hits and one of two RBIs while King blasted a line shot home run up the power alley in right field for the other Spartan RBI.

The second game did not go as smoothly for the Spartans as they were forced to quell a seventh inning Laker outburst to hang on to an even closer one-run margin.

With MSU clinging to a 3-1 margin, GVSC started to hit the ball hard for the first time all day. After giving up her lone walk of the game, two of seven hits and one of two Laker runs, Greenwood snuffed the Grand Valley rally by getting power hitting Faith Heikkila to pop out, preserving the twin victory for the Spartans.

MSU's fielding was visibly weaker in the nightcap, allowing the Lakers to jump out into a 1-0 first-inning lead. However, the Spartan offense did a good cover-up job, pushing across three runs on only four hits, to make possible the final outcome.

King lined out two safeties in the game, including a home run almost identical to the one she hit in the first game. Dree Look and Carol Hutchins each chipped in with a single.

Coach Dianne Ulibarri, pleased with the overall performance and especially the pitching of the Spartans, said she hoped her team could play equally well in its tournament this weekend.

MSU left soon after its Thursday games for Normal, Ill., where it will compete in the Redbird Tournament at Illinois State University today and Saturday.

The next home action for the Spartans will be against University of Detroit on Monday.

HOPE TO CONTINUE WINNING STREAK

Netters face Iowa and Minnesota

The MSU men's tennis team will try to continue its two-game winning streak as the Spartans travel to Iowa and Minnesota this weekend.

Last week the netters had two road victories, over Purdue and Illinois. "Iowa and Minnesota are tough teams, both of them beat us last year," said coach Stan Drobac, who missed last weekend's meets because of illness. He will be with the team this time, though.

There are a few changes in the Spartan lineup. Mike Stone will not be making the trip, and Steve Heitzner will go in his place. Heitzner will be playing in the No. 6 singles position, and Jeff Wickman will move up to No. 5.

Senior captain Steve Klemm's brother, freshman Mike Klemm, will be playing in the No. 3 doubles match with Scott King. Drobac said the team would probably be playing outside at Iowa, but would definitely be inside in Minneapolis.

The Gophers are coming off two big wins over Ohio State University and University of Indiana. But before playing the Spartans, they must face University of Michigan today. The Wolverines are probably the best team in the Big Ten. "They'll be fired up to beat us after they get bombed by Michigan," Drobac said.

But Drobac has been pleased with his team's progress, especially with the freshmen. In addition, sophomore Matt Sandler has moved from the No. 6 singles player to the No. 2 spot.

The pressure to perform well is still on Steve Klemm, since he is the team's No. 1 singles player and only senior. "Steve has been playing well," Drobac said.

The coach said he still is not feeling 100 percent, but wants to see the team play its matches and be there no matter what happens.

Golfers travel for Kepler Invitational

By JEFF MINAHAN
State News Sports Writer
If the weather cooperates — something nobody can be sure of these days — the MSU men's golf team will seek to upend host Ohio State University in this weekend's Kepler Intercollegiate Golf Tournament in Columbus, Ohio.

The Spartans are coming off a third-place finish in last weekend's Illinois Intercollegiate, and coach Bruce Fossum believes he may have one of his best teams ever.

"I feel we are going down with a strong team," he said. "We have a chance to win it. We'll have to play as well as we can play, but our players are capable."

The Spartans will be taking five golfers to the 54-hole tournament, four of whom will count in the scoring.

Team leader Tom Mase, who was forced to sit out last weekend's tournament with the flu, will be back in the lineup in the Kepler.

Fossum said that the return of Mase will strengthen his team even more.

Rounding out the team will be Eric Gersonde, who took fourth place last week to lead the Spartans, Hill Herriek, Steve Lubbers and Rick Grover, who was last year's team leader.

Grover won the fifth and final spot for the tournament in a playoff Wednesday afternoon. Fossum said the fact that last year's best golfer is now in the fifth spot is an indication of his team's strength.

Spartans lose first league game to Kenyon

By JEFF MINAHAN
State News Sports Writer

One good beginning came to a quick end Wednesday as the best start over for the MSU lacrosse team was abruptly halted by the Kenyon Lords, 13-8 in Gambier, Ohio.

It was the first loss for the Spartans since their spring trip to Tampa, Fla., dropping their season record to 4-1, but more importantly evening their league record at 1-1.

"It was not one of our better played games," coach Nevin Kanner said. "We took it on the chin. We didn't play our game."

Both Kanner and coach Boku Hendrickson agreed that the Spartans never did get into their game. Kanner cited a combination of factors, while

Included in the field of 22 teams are eight from the Big Ten Conference, in addition to one extra squad from host OSU.

The Buckeyes will once again be the team to beat coming off their win in the Illinois tournament last weekend. OSU has won this tourney every year since 1974.

The Buckeyes will be without their ace John Cook, who will be competing at the Masters Tournament in Augusta, Ga., but even without him Fossum says OSU will be strong.

However, Fossum added that last weekend's results were encouraging and showed him his team's capabilities.

"Our kids have a step more confidence," he said. "We know we can play with them (OSU). The one thing we don't have now is consistency. We're capable of playing well every day, but not on a consistent basis."

Earvin "Magic" Johnson alluded to his future plans at Dooley's Wednesday night, where Spartan fans crowded for a post-game party celebrating the victory over the Lansing Globe Rollers.

"I don't know what I'm going to do," Johnson said. "But three or four million dollars for two years is a lot of money to pass up — and I'm broke now," he said. "But I'll still buy you all a drink tonight."

Magic said he hopes Spartan fans will stand behind him whether he stays at MSU or applies for the hardship case and plays for the National Basketball Association.

"We got the No. 1 cheerleaders, the No. 1 basketball team, the No. 1 band, we got the No. 1 football team, the No. 1 school in the country," Johnson told the cheering crowd. "And we got the No. 1 women."

Johnson also made a recruiting plug for MSU sports before introducing Terry Donnelly as the most valuable player of the NCAA championship game against Indiana State University.

"If an athlete doesn't come here, he's in trouble. He won't know what he missed — we're No. 1," Johnson said, pointing his finger in the air as the crowd and Spartan band blasted into a chorus of the MSU fight song.

Senior Gregory Kelsner said that the "fans" should just wish Johnson "all the luck in the world." Kelsner also told the fans that the Spartans are going to be "No. 1 next year."

Donnelly thanked everyone for coming to the celebration and to the benefit game for multiple sclerosis before proposing a toast with a drink in hand.

"I would like to make a toast, so get your drinks up," Donnelly said while raising his glass. "To the No. 1 school in the nation!"

Spartan Rick Kaye told The State News that he expects Johnson to sign with a professional team.

"He has never said anything to us about what he's going to do," Kaye said. "If I were him I'd go pro — I think he will."

Johnson has until May 11 to apply for the hardship draft.

The Spartans were driven to Dooley's in Lincoln and Cadillac limousines after their 43-35 win over the Lansing Globe Rollers in Jenison Fieldhouse. Proceeds from the wheelchair game will go toward fighting multiple sclerosis.

"We are really lucky to have a classy team like the Spartans unselfishly play a benefit game like this," said Rick Young, organizer of the game in cooperation with area Jaycees.

Hitters start Big Ten action

By JERRY BRAUDE
State News Sports Writer

After a 4-12 spring trip, MSU's baseball team has won three straight games.

And now the Spartans hope this momentum will carry to this weekend when they open Big Ten play hosting University of Minnesota Saturday and University of Wisconsin Sunday at Kobs Field. Both double-headers begin at 1 p.m.

"The team is feeling better," coach Dan Litwhiler said about MSU's streak after the spring trip. "Now, they know they can win."

Not only has MSU won three straight up north to increase its record to 7-12, but all three victories have been shutouts pitched by Brian Wolcott, Mark Pomorski and Jim Cotter.

"They're pitching like I thought they could," Litwhiler said.

The Spartans will need this strong pitching to continue, though, since Sunday's opponent, U-W, also has an impressive pitching staff.

Badgers' Steve Marsden was the team's outstanding pitcher last year with a 6-2 record and 2.24 earned run average, while Ken Mulry was the team's top rookie with a 4-2 mark and 2.04 ERA.

Coach Tom Meyer's club also has a veteran squad of 17 returnees that won its last seven conference games to finish third last season in the Big Ten with a 10-6 mark.

U-W finished 4-8 on its spring trip and then the Badgers won their only two contests since coming north over U-W La Crosse 8-4, 10-3.

Saturday's opponent, Minnesota, has a record of 9-8. The Big Ten champions of two years ago have been 5-2 since returning north.

The Gophers dropped to fifth place last season in the Big Ten with a 5-5 and 25-17 overall mark.

Currently, their leading hitter is rightfielder Larry Grahek with a .475 mark.

The Spartans will have Wolcott and Pomorski pitch against Minnesota and Cotter and Jay Strother, who was scheduled to pitch the nightcap game against Aquinas College Wednesday which was rained out, will pitch against U-W.

Third baseman Al Dankovich is currently leading MSU in hitting with a .385 average while shortstop Rodger Bastien is second with a .357 mark.

Ken Robinson leads the Spartans in runs batted in with 10.

Men open at tough meet

By JERRY BRAUDE
State News Sports Writer

The Dogwood Relays will be hosting approximately 40 schools, featuring NCAA indoor champs Villanova along with powerhouses Tennessee and Alabama.

All of the other Southeast Conference schools will compete, while the Midwest representatives will be Eastern Michigan and Ohio State Universities, University of Michigan and University of Indiana.

"Besides the competition, the kids will also be running on a fast track," Bibbs said.

Yet, the MSU tracksters won't have much outdoor practice behind them because of the weather conditions so far this term.

"But when we got outside this week, the good weather seemed to motivate them a lot," Bibbs said. "When we were practicing indoors, we had to work more on quantity at a slower pace than quality."

In the meet, where no team points will be recorded, MSU

Laxers lose to Kenyon

Hendrickson was more specific.

"The mud cut down on our mobility," Hendrickson said, referring to the field which was rendered completely muddy due to weather. "Our game is running out the other team. We are very well conditioned and like to run."

Kanner agreed that the mud completely hampered the MSU running game, and added that the absence of scorer Mark Piavis hurt the team. Piavis was forced to sit out the game with a high temperature.

Although both coaches played it down, another major factor was the fact that both of them, along with two offensive starters, did not arrive at the game until the end of the first quarter due to car trouble. At that time the Spartans were down 6-3.

"We're not using it as an excuse," Kanner said.

"We lost, and we can't justify it," Hendrickson added. "But under the conditions, I thought we played well."

The Spartans were led by senior Joe Politowicz, who scored four goals and one assist. Kevin Willits, in an off game, notched one goal and one assist.

Rick Dobreff, Bill Lecos and Shawn Grady each had one goal, while Greg Brinkman recorded one assist.

"It opened a lot of people's eyes," Kanner said about the loss. "We realize it won't be easy to win these games, and that if we let down we're going to get beat."

The Spartans must now regroup and prepare for Saturday's game against Wooster College in Wooster, Ohio. It will be the third league game for MSU.

Both coaches agree that the fighting Scots are a strong team. Hendrickson explained the factor he hopes the Spartans will have in their favor.

"We hope they will be surprised," he said. "They saw us in the Suncoast Tournament down in Tampa getting beat by 15 goals by some teams. If we play our game, we can surprise them and will beat them."

The Spartans will return home to play Albion College in a non-league game Monday at 3:30 p.m. on Old College Field.

Minority engineers told to use their skills to help Third World

By CARRIE A. THORN
State News Staff Writer

Engineers, especially minorities in engineering, must use their skills to house, nurture and develop a hungry world, the president of Olive-Harvey College, Chicago, Ill. said Wednesday.

Eugene T. Speller, the only black engineering graduate in the MSU class of 1955, spoke to a group of students, faculty, parents and professionals at the Third Annual Minorities in Engineering award banquet.

"It is your responsibility, because of who you are and who you think you are, to lead the way to the solutions," Speller said.

"And this doesn't mean only feeding the people. It means providing them with adequate education, medical facilities, communication and transportation systems," he said. "It also means promoting an international perspective of mankind's activities."

By bettering conditions for all people, the effects of racism will be lessened, Speller said.

Several changes have been made in the College of Engineering since he left MSU, he pointed out.

"The fact that MSU will finance black students in engineering is very encouraging. We have done some positive things," he said.

Speller said he has noticed a very marked change in the attitudes of minority students coming into predominantly white colleges and universities.

"I was conditioned, by my parents and by society, to overlook the problems," he explained. "In retrospect, I guess I had problems. At least, they tell me I did."

"Black students in my generation were committed to conforming to traditional society to the fullest extent possible. Today, students are coming in demanding to be accepted as they are."

"This creates a whole new set of problems," he said. Black colleges, on the other hand, have always responded to the needs of minority students, Speller added.

Speaking with obvious pride — Olive-Harvey College is 92 percent black — he said even though black colleges have lost significant portions of their Southern students to Northern universities, they are still graduating 69 percent of the black bachelor's degrees in the country.

Speller himself attended a Southern all-black college for one term before transferring to MSU.

"When I got here, MSU was not prepared to deal with a little black boy who didn't know the difference between a credit hour and a cotton boll," he said. "Obviously, they are doing better now."

In conclusion, Speller admonished the audience, "Exist for a cause. Things do not have to be as they are. Work with your fellow human beings and fellow professionals to make the world as it should be."

Coming Ice Age 'too soon to tell'

By MICHAEL STUART
Spring seems longer in coming with each year that passes, but this year, with blizzards and ice storms, it seemed warm weather would never arrive.

Some theorists even predict the coming of a new Ice Age.

"It's really too soon to tell if it (cold weather) is a trend," said Jay Harman, MSU's weather and climate specialist and associate professor of geography. "Short term weather events rarely indicate long-term trends."

Inferences of past climates indicate that over the previous 150,000 years, mean global temperature has fluctuated both up and down in 10,000-year cycles.

The climate is currently at the peak of one such cycle. Present temperatures, accepted as "normal," may be an optimum which can only last a short while longer.

Some theorists state climate can be changed by a variety of factors, including eccentricities in the Earth's orbit, changes in its axis of rotation, sunspot activity and atmospheric variations, Harman said.

The formation of glaciers would be favored if these factors worked in a way which would moderate mean global temperatures, he explained.

Fortunately, Harman added, while Earth's nearly circular orbit favors glaciation, the 23-degree tilt of the axis of rotation hinders glacial development. So large a tilt has seldom occurred in Earth's known history.

"Burning of fossil fuel over the past few centuries may also act counter to trends toward glaciation," Harman said.

The rise in atmospheric carbon dioxide may increase the "greenhouse effect" so temperatures rise, he added.

Analyses show carbon dioxide levels have risen 13 percent since 1850. Projections estimate that by the year 2000, the amount will be up to 32 percent, which could lead to a mean temperature rise of 1 degree Celsius.

Glaciers last retreated from Michigan about 12,000 years ago. A 4-to-6 degree Celsius drop in mean global temperature could bring them back again.

CUMBERLAND, R.I. (UPI) — A student walkout was averted Thursday by a stern warning at Cumberland High School, where "emotionally drained" Paul Guilbert waited to learn if he will be allowed to bring a male date to his junior prom.

Cumberland High officials have refused to sell prom tickets to Guilbert, 17, an avowed homosexual. The School Committee, after initially refusing his request for an appeal, later agreed to hear it.

"A formal hearing on the merits of the student's request will be granted," School Committee Chairperson William J. O'Coin said Thursday. He said the committee first wants an outline of the legal issues in the precedent-setting case.

Mountaineering #6.

LORE & LEGEND

Mountaineering is an oral tradition. Over the years, it has been passed down from teacher to pupil, father to son, package store owner to customer. As a result, a folklore — a mythology, if you will — has formed around the mountains of Busch. You, being a student of mountaineering, no doubt wish to acquaint yourself with these truths and half-truths, these stories both accurate and apocryphal. A wise decision. And, as luck would have it, this ad is just the ticket.

One of mountaineering's earliest legends is Bennington Baxter-Bennington. Adventurer, international bon vivant and inventor of the phrase "your check is in the mail," it was he who perfected the finer points of expedition financing. While other mountaineers resorted to such bizarre extremes as gainful employment, Bennington subsidized assaults on the Busch mountaintop with creative economics. An amalgam of paper schemes, franchised dreams, dummy corporations and corporate dummies kept him in clover for nigh on 20 fiscal years. Asked at the culmination of his career to reflect upon the secret of success, Bennington revealed his first rule: "Keep all your assets liquid"

Another frequent subject of mountaineering lore is the wildlife. Numerous tales abound, but perhaps the most famous story is that of the 1973 Muncie Mathematics Convention. All 75 prodigies, whiz kids and befuddled geniuses initiated an after hours expedition. It began harmlessly enough. But soon, the Busch mountaineers reached the Mobius Strip, a racy nightclub catering to highbrow hijinks. Before the evening was over, several of them were bending the slide rules. Others were smoking big cigars and telling every woman in sight they were agents with an eye for figures, claiming,

"I can make you a mathematical model, baby! Talk about your wildlife!"

But when looking for sheer courage, W. Dexter Poole must rank in lore among the top mountaineers. Fond of saying "The road to truth goes through bad neighborhoods," Poole enjoyed skirting with danger and approached mountaineering as a test of survival skills. In his most famous challenge, Poole, equipped only with 30 waterproof matches and a major credit card, parachuted into a remote area known as Cleveland. He was up to the task. Within 24 hours, Poole was basking under the hot sun of Antibes, downing the smooth, cold, refreshing mountains of Busch Beer.

A credit to his colleagues and a colleague on credit.

What becomes a legend most? That is (one) a matter of subjective judgment and (two) in a constant state of flux. Keep in mind legends are created every day. So when you flex your mountaineering muscles, be true to the tradition. At best, you'll be part of history. At least, you'll be a near-myth.

Mountaineering is the science and art of drinking Busch. The term originates due to the snowy, icy peaks sported by the label outside and perpetuates due to the cold, naturally refreshing taste inside. The above mountaineers and these scenes of their exploits are legendary, any similarity to actual people, living or dead is purely coincidental.

Don't just reach for a beer. BUSCH Head for the mountains.

CHICAGO SCHOOLS UNDER HEW FIRE

Intentional segregation charged

CHICAGO (AP) — The legal staff of the Chicago Board of Education is reviewing a 100-page federal document contending that officials deliberately kept city schools racially segregated for the last 35 years, a board spokesman said Thursday.

Spokesperson Tom Maloney said it was too early to say what the board would do about the allegations, noting the board had only received the document Tuesday from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

But he said the board would "cooperate with federal officials to resolve existing problems" within the city's school system.

School Superintendent Joseph P. Hannon on Wednesday denied the charges made by HEW, saying "there never has been a finding of deliberate segregation against the Chicago public school system."

The board has argued that segregation in the school system is a result of city housing patterns.

Meanwhile, the Illinois Board of Education on Thursday granted the school system an indefinite extension of its deadline for compliance with state desegregation guidelines.

HEW contends city school officials have deliberately maintained segregation in the school system by, among other means, locations of new school and by creating and changing attendance boundaries.

The state board has asked the city board to submit plans for desegregation by the fall. The requested measures include development of plans in the event Chicago's "Access to Excellence" program, which federal officials already have indicated is unacceptable, fails to meet projected goals.

The federal charges were contained in a letter and accompanying documents delivered to Hannon.

Smaller parking spaces

parked in the proper spaces, he said.

The commission also recommended the city establish and maintain stable traffic flows at intersections such that drivers would not be forced to wait at signals for more than one cycle.

Because no statistics are available regarding the number of problem intersections in the city, commissioners recommended that a study be conducted of all intersections with signals.

Ralph Monsma, Planning Commission chairperson, said the improvement could be a long-range goal, depending upon the extent of the problem. If such a program seems to be too expensive, Monsma said, the commission needs to know before including it in the new Comprehensive Plan.

Bicycle storage facilities to be included in the proposed Lot 9 parking structure on Grove Street were also supported by the commission.

The commission voted to recommend to City Council that bicycle racks be available in all parking lots.

In other business, the commission tabled a request for the rezoning of a series of lots on Lake Lansing Road between Coolidge Road and Rolling Brook Drive.

The developer, Vern Sayers, requested that the lots be rezoned from residential to business.

Sayers proposed the building of a small doctor's office on a portion of land on Rolling Brook Drive. An office complex was proposed for the remaining lots.

Residents of the area who spoke at the meeting disapproved of the request, saying increased traffic levels would present a danger to the children in the area.

Because the land is vacant and is being considered by the Housing and Commercial Advisory committees in the formation of a new Comprehensive Plan, the commissioners voted to defer the request until more information is available.

EVELYN WOOD VS. MSU

Speedreading techniques argued

By BARB DONOVAN

Students cannot learn the necessary techniques of speedreading from the machines used in learning centers and reading clinics — machines like those used at MSU, said an Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics instructor.

However, a reading coordinator at MSU's Learning Resource Center said many of the techniques used by Evelyn Wood are unnecessary.

At an introductory Evelyn Wood session last week, Mary H. Marek said "there are hundreds of hand motions used in speedreading that cannot be learned on a machine and must be personally taught."

"Besides," she said, "a student might become dependent on it (the machine) and will lose his skill when he has to do without it."

Elaine Cherney, assistant professor and reading coordinator of the MSU Learning Resource Center, disagrees with Marek. A student should not have to pay $345 for seven weeks of training when the MSU center can be used free for as long as necessary, Cherney said.

The machine in the resource center is a "Tach 500" which uses film strips that show students how to break sentences down and find the key terms, she said.

"Although our primary concern is to help students handle their studying by teaching them to read more efficiently," Cherney said, "students can learn speedreading techniques and usually double or triple their speed using nothing more than the machine."

Cherney said the resource center likes to start students on the Tach 500 because it uses a slower pace than other programs. Students are then encouraged to move into programs where they can work at a faster pace.

James Millhouse, an MSU graduate assistant in psychology, is an instructor for Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics.

Although Millhouse admitted he was unfamiliar with the center at MSU, he said he did not think the "mechanistic study" step of Evelyn Wood could be learned someplace else.

"In simplified terms, this is a process of dealing with a great deal of information. The student learns how to distinguish main ideas from lesser ones," Millhouse said.

Evelyn Wood instructors are trained for about seven weeks in speedreading theory, background and instructional and behavioral concepts, Millhouse added.

Students are also taught to use their hand as a guide and move it in various motions under a line of text to aid in their comprehension, he explained.

Cherney said many of the techniques and hand motions taught by personal instruction are unnecessary.

"Reading centers teach the basic and most common hand motions," she said. "However, some students are not comfortable with the motions and do very well without them."

The most important point in speedreading is training the student to make decisions about what is critical to read, Cherney added.

Hawaiian university offers class credit in summer study program

By JENNIFER DIXON
State News Staff Writer

Education, business, law, economics and Asian Studies students will have the opportunity to earn college credit this summer while basking in the Hawaiian sunshine.

The Pacific Asian Management Institute, a branch of the University of Hawaii at Manoa, will offer courses July 5 through Aug. 16 in an international business curriculum focusing particularly on the Asia Pacific region.

Students accepted into the program will choose from a variety of courses, including marketing, management, finance and economics at the undergraduate as well as graduate level.

Courses selected will apply to each student's degree program and a letter grade or just credit can be requested. Credits earned are transferrable to other universities and applicable to the University of Hawaii's College of Business degree programs.

Graduate students enrolled in the program are required to take three three-credit courses, including "Current Economic Problems."

Undergraduate students are required to take "Dynamics of Asian Business" and two other courses to receive a PAMI certificate of completion.

Auditors or people interested in taking less than three courses must receive University approval.

A colloquium series of lectures will be available for all participants.

The campus is three miles from the business center of Honolulu and two miles from the beaches of Waikiki.

Tuition is $30 per credit hour for non-residents and $20 per credit hour for residents. A $5 activity fee will also be charged.

On-campus housing is available to participants. Residence hall fees include room and board. University apartments are also available for all participants as well as married students without children.

Cost varies according to type of room but ranges from $322 for a residence hall room and $275 for a shared occupancy apartment to $660 for a married student apartment.

An optional meal plan for apartment dwellers costs $113.60 for 10 meals per week or $128 for 15 meals.

Interested students should apply before May 15. Applicants will be notified by June 5.

Applications are available by writing James Willis Jr. at the Management Institute of the College of Business Administration, University of Hawaii at Manoa, Honolulu, Hawaii 96822.

Radioactive milk fears discounted

By WILLIAM GLASGALL
AP Business Writer

As you would expect, there's a lot of milk in milk chocolate.

So when the nation's most serious nuclear accident released radiation into the air 11 miles from Hershey Foods Corp. on East Chocolate Avenue late last month, there was an obvious question.

"Is the milk, all right?" asked Hershey Chief Executive William E. Dearden.

The company also wondered whether Americans scared by the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant might stop buying Hershey bars.

The company says 11 percent of its milk comes from farms within 20 miles of the power plant. The remainder comes from up to 70 miles from the nuclear station. Some of the 116,000 gallons a day is turned into powdered milk and sold.

State officials say radiation levels in samples of milk taken in the area of the nuclear plant area have ranged from nil to far below danger levels.

Dearden said in an interview the firm does not plan an advertising campaign assuring the public its products are wholesome. But the company sent a letter to employees and shareholders saying its facilities and products are "safe and free of radioactive contamination."

"We are carefully monitoring all products leaving our plant," said the letter. "You can have complete confidence that all products we manufacture are absolutely safe."

The White House, while not naming Hershey, also issued a statement saying "the food from the Three Mile Island area is safe to produce, buy, transport, prepare and eat as the food available at any other place in the U.S."

Dearden said "at the beginning there were people who were concerned" that Hershey's sales might slide because of customer worries over the safety of the company's candies and other products. But there have been no sales cancellations since the accident, he said.

Health officials' main fear has been that milk from the Harrisburg area might contain radioactive iodine 131.

GAO wants delay in electric vehicle demonstration plan

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Congressional auditors are trying to discourage the government from plans to put 10,000 electric cars on the road until technology gives the electric vehicle a better chance to compete in traffic and in the marketplace.

A new report from the General Accounting Office, which conducts investigations for Congress, says the Energy Department is moving too fast on a demonstration project designed to prove that cars powered by batteries or by a combination of batteries and small gasoline engines are potential alternatives to the gasoline-fueled vehicle.

Under the department's plans, private firms and individuals and state and local governments would get subsidies for buying and using 10,000 electric cars between now and 1986. The cars' users and the government would share the costs of the experiment.

The first 200 cars would be put out this year at a cost of $27,000 per vehicle, with $10,000 of that going to a management consulting firm hired to plan the project, compile data and handle other paperwork.

But demonstrating what today's electric vehicles can do will not induce people to buy them, the GAO said, because those now available cost too much and lack zip and range.

"The performance of current electric vehicles is so limited and costs are so high that widespread commercialization cannot be realistically expected at this time," the GAO said.

Under the department's plans, 20 cars are to be made available at a subsidized cost to the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. in Los Angeles for use by telephone repairpersons, 40 to Consolidated Edison of New York for meter installation jobs, 60 to the Long Island Lighting Co. of Mineola, N.Y. for meter readers, 20 to Disneyworld in Florida for landscaping and maintenance work, 25 to private drivers through an auto dealer in Pennsauken, N.J., and the rest to government agencies.

The Energy Department rejected the GAO's criticism.

"We do not agree with the view that scarcity of data, limited-range vehicles, the need to improve technology, etc., should postpone the demonstration effort in the private sector," the Energy Department said. It said Congress required that the demonstration project be carried out.

The department has estimated that in the next 21 years 8.6 million electric or hybrid cars will be in use in America, accounting for 5 percent of the total number of cars and saving 200,000 barrels of oil a day.

The GAO also criticized Energy Department research into an electrified road. Under that concept, electric cars would be powered by cables embedded in the roadway and would depend on their own power sources only when on side streets.

Employment

STUDENTS

Have you always wished you could strike up a conversation with someone you don't know... but would like to?

How would you like to be paid to meet people you would never have reason to talk to?

We can help place you in such an ideal situation.

We need outgoing, assertive individuals to demonstrate Westbend cookware on a part-time basis, for 2 week ends prior to Mother's Day at all Knapp's stores. (Downtown, Lansing Mall, Meridian Mall).

$3.75 per hour

Hours are flexible: 11 a.m.-3 p.m. Saturdays and 1 p.m.-5 p.m. Sundays. Don't worry if you have no experience (in cooking or demonstrating). We'll show you exactly what to do.

If you think you could handle this type of job, give us a call - especially if you have a "line" that works!

U.S. soldier killed in Turkey; left-wing terrorists suspected ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) - Assaults believed to be left-wing terrorists killed a U.S. soldier and wounded another on a crowded street Thursday in Izmir, officials said.

Izmir Gov. Necdet Calp said a large force of police was mobilized for a search that spread to shantytown areas of Izmir on Turkey's Aegean coast.

The slain soldier was identified as Master Sgt. Edward A. Claypool, 23, of Richards, Mo.

Wounded in the attack was Staff Sgt. Jeffrey P. Vail, 22, of Myrtle Beach, S.C. Vail was reported in satisfactory condition following surgery at a local hospital.

Officials said the masked assailants fired from a speeding automobile at the soldiers, who were both in uniform and returning to their quarters from Turkey's Aegean coast.

S. Africa ousts U.S.

(continued from page 1) Observers noted the photography could have been aimed at making a general aerial survey of broad stretches of territory for intelligence records, or at photographing specific targets - which perhaps might include South Africa.

Relations between the United States and South Africa have grown strained in recent years because of U.S. criticism of the ruling white minority's official policies of racial segregation. In 1977, the United States voted in the U.N. Security Council to enact the current world arms embargo against South Africa.

In an unexplained move earlier this week, the South African ambassadors to the United States and to the United Nations were suddenly called home for "consultations."

VACATIONS ARE 'REWARD FOR WORK'

Dollar-a-gallon won't stop trips

By JENNIFER DINEHART
MSU tourism experts say people will take summer vacations even if gas hits $1 a gallon, but many students are not as confident.

"The price would have to hit well over $1 a gallon to make people cut back," said Robert Christie-Mill, assistant professor of park and recreation resources.

"If I take a vacation, I will have to plan far in advance and save some extra money," said David F. Johns, a senior fisheries and wildlife major.

Johns said he would rather take one or two 60-mile trips and spend less for gas than he would spend on a long trip.

Colleen M. Johnson, a senior studio arts major, said she planned to go to the East Coast, but now will cut down on out-of-state trips.

"I will take short trips in Michigan," she said.

Thomas E. Edens, assistant professor of agriculture economics and resource development, said the probability of gas rationing could stop some summer vacations.

"Tourists are afraid of gas rationing," Edens said. "Rationing will limit the distance of their vacations."

William E. Munsell, a graduate student in agriculture economics, said gas rationing would keep him from traveling, not gas prices.

"I expect to go on vacation if gas hits $1 a gallon," he said. "Prices sure are not going to go down."

Robert W. McIntosh, professor of tourism, said Americans seldom like to give up their vacations because they feel vacations are earned and deserved rewards for work.

"Gas going up to $1 a gallon will not put too much of a crimp on people's vacations," he said.

Jackie M. Mason, a senior criminal justice and psychology major, said she will go on vacation even if gas prices are high.

"So what if I don't buy a new pair of sandals? I'll still go," she said.

McIntosh said he believes once a family has decided to take a vacation they will pay the extra cost of gas.

"People expect to travel and enjoy nature in the summer," he said.

McIntosh pointed out 49.5 percent of all trips in the United States are less than 400 miles long.

He said since everyone will be hit by higher prices at the pump, motorists should consider traveling in their own state.

"Michigan has very fine recreation areas," he said. "You don't have to travel very far to get to attractive country."

Constance M. Conklin, a junior graphic design major, said Michigan offers a lot of vacation spots.

"I love Lake Michigan," she said.

Christie-Mill said there would have to be a large increase in the price of gas before people will decrease consumption.

He said there would have to be weekend gas station closings or rationing before people will stop going on vacations.

Edens, like Christie-Mill, does not see $1 a gallon for gas as having a big impact on the average wage earner's vacation.

"Gas will have to reach $1.50 to $2 before there will be an impact on travel," he said. "A trip within 200 miles will be feasible."

Edens said in-state travel will increase as motorists travel fewer miles.

"Transportation is the second highest U.S. expenditure," he said. "Americans will give up a lot to keep traveling."

Field trips to Europe
offer credit

Four European field trips, lasting from two to six weeks, organized by North Shore Community College in Essex, Mass., are available to MSU students this summer.

The trips, collectively called "Project Discovery," include visits with distinguished Europeans and Americans such as Elliot Richardson, former ambassador to Britain, and Lord Mayor Manfred Rommel of Stuttgart, Germany.

"Discover the Continent" will be a three-week trip to Normandy, Paris, Versailles, Geneva, Amsterdam and other cities.

"Discover Britain" will travel through England and Scotland, including visits to Stonehenge, London and Stratford-upon-Avon.

"Discover Europe" is a six-week trip combining the European and British trip itineraries.

A two-week career program in Britain will expose career persons and continuing education students to historians, who will explain the landmarks and history of England and Scotland.

NSCC's Center for Alternative Studies will grant three credits for its "European Heritage through Field Study" course to field trip participants.

For further information, contact before April 30: Director of Project Discovery, European Seminar Association, P.O. Box 114, Essex, Mass. 01929.
