Commerce official resolves trade agreement with China

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

CANTON, China (AP) — Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps and Chinese Trade Minister Li Qiang (Li Chiang) Monday initiated a broad and complex trade agreement which one U.S. negotiator called "good, fair and hard-nosed."

The agreement, if signed and approved by Congress, will open the way to full economic relations between the nations after a 30-year hiatus.

It provides most-favored nation treatment for both and smoothes the way for China to receive U.S. Export-Import bank credits.

Commerce Department officials said they would not submit the trade agreement to Congress until a pending textile agreement is signed.

The trade agreement was initiated here by Kreps after it was flown 1,200 miles from Peking, where Li initiated it earlier.

"Today marks a major step on the way to full normalization of our economic relations," she said.

"It is a continuation of the momentum generated by Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping (Deng Hsiao-ping) and President Carter earlier this year . . ."

Chen Jie, China's vice trade minister, said at the ceremony here, "I am sure that the success of the initialing of the trade agreement will bring a fruitful result in the future signing of the final trade accord."

"I think we have a good, fair agreement for both countries," said C.L. Haslam, general counsel of the U.S. Commerce Department. "I think it will hold up. It is a hard-nosed agreement."

He called it a "breakthrough" agreement, noting that it was negotiated in just 11 days, while others, like one with Romania, took nine months.

"We both had points we compromised on," he said. "We both had points we considered crucial . . . There were points both sides considered desirable. We got some points and not others."

Haslam estimated 85 percent of the original U.S. text was redrafted.

The agreement accords both nations most-favored nation tariff treatment, meaning each one will pay the lowest tariff charged by the other.

Currently, tariffs on Chinese goods entering the United States are on the average twice as high as those on goods from other countries.

The agreement also provides equal customs treatment, promotion of economic and trade relations, multiple entry and exit visas and conversion of currency.

U.S.-Chinese trade was $1.1 billion in 1978. After diplomatic relations were established in January, U.S. officials projected the figure would hit $2 billion in 1979 and reach $3 billion to $4 billion a year by 1984.

Kreps left Peking Friday after the signing of a pact that will repay Americans $80.5 million for assets seized by China in 1949 and free an equal amount of Chinese assets frozen by the United States in retaliation. That document had been holding up the trade agreement.

She also signed four science and technology accords and a trade exhibition agreement. On Tuesday she goes to Hong Kong, and on Wednesday to Tokyo for talks on business and finance.

'UPHILL BATTLE' AHEAD, SAYS KENNEDY

Health plan is proposed

By JANET STAIHAR
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., announced on Monday his plan to insure all Americans against health care costs, but acknowledged that congressional resistance makes passage "an uphill battle."

Kennedy and other backers of his national health insurance plan, including leaders of labor unions, organizations for the retired and minority groups, called upon the administration to throw its weight behind the proposal, which would cover all Americans regardless of age or income.

"We are appealing to President Carter to come in from the cold," Bill Hutton, head of the National Council of Senior Citizens, told a news conference called to unveil Kennedy's bill.

Carter wants a more modest health care plan that would phase in segments of the population while at first protecting the elderly, the poor and those suffering from catastrophic illnesses.

"The American health care system is now strained to the breaking point by runaway costs," said Kennedy, who is chairperson of the Senate Human Resources subcommittee on health. He said his proposal "is the best chance to avoid national bankruptcy and to bring spiraling health costs under control."

Both Kennedy and his chief co-sponsor in the House, Rep. Henry A. Waxman, D-Calif., chairperson of the House Commerce subcommittee on health, agreed it will be a long, tough congressional fight, especially against those members who want to cover only the expenses of catastrophic illness.

"I believe my legislation is inevitable," said Kennedy. "It's only a question of time." But the plan came under immediate fire from the American Medical Association, which said the "inevitable result" of Kennedy's proposal would be "rationing of health care services, new federal regulations and huge new costs."

Dr. James H. Sammons, AMA executive vice president, said, "The AMA continues to believe that consumer choice, private insurance and limited government regulation should be at the heart of our health care system."

In a separate statement, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., called Kennedy's idea "a first step

Marijuana bill faces state Senate debate

By KIM CRAWFORD
State News Staff Writer

A bill easing penalties for the use and possession of small amounts of marijuana could face debate on the floor of the state Senate in about a week, an aide to the bill's sponsor said Monday.

The bill also contains provisions to allow the therapeutic use of marijuana by persons suffering from certain diseases.

The measure introduced in February by Sen. Jerome Hart, Saginaw Democrat, was approved and sent out of the Senate Judiciary Committee last week by a 4 to 2 vote.

Compromise amendments to the bill, adopted by the Senate committee, increase penalties outlined in the original version, and reduce the amounts of marijuana that could be possessed.

The original language of the bill said that anyone possessing or delivering 100 grams or less (over three and a half ounces) in a public place would be subject to a civil fine of $25.

State Police amendments originally adopted lowered the amount to 30 grams (slightly over an ounce) and called for a $100 fine and a misdemeanor charge. The committee compromised, keeping the $100 fine and the lower amount but making the possession of less than 30 grams a civil offense, not a criminal one.

But a person who is "ticketed" for the use or possession of a small amount of pot would have to show up in court to pay his or her fine, or face criminal contempt charges.

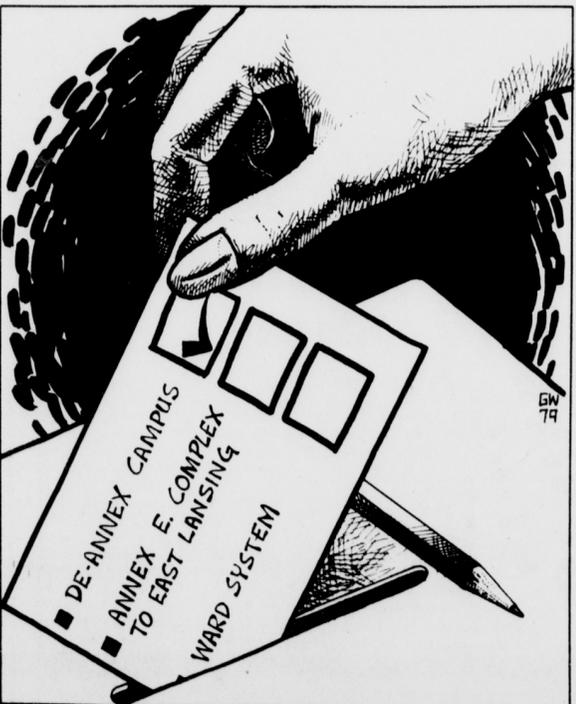

Rhett Johnston, an aide to Hart, said the bill will face opposition from senators who oppose the combining of the therapeutic use section with decriminalization provisions.

Under the therapeutic use section, which was lifted from another bill, a patient qualification review board would be created to choose persons suffering from cancer chemotherapy, glaucoma or other diseases to take part in a marijuana research program.

Sen. Stephen Monsma, Grand Rapids Democrat, the sponsor of the bill which would allow and govern the therapeutic use of marijuana in Michigan, opposes the combination of medical use and penalty reduction, even though he co-sponsored the penalty reduction measure.

Monsma fears a battle over lesser penalties would keep the therapeutic use provisions tied up, said aide Dick Klaver.

"The penalty reductions may go through a long debate," Klaver said. "We want to see separate bills, for therapeutic use and lesser penalties, judged on their own merits."

ASMSU rep endorses recall

Petitions to recall the College of Education representative to the ASMSU Student Board are currently being circulated, said Henry Sosa, a board member working on the petition drive.

Kathy Wright, who was elected College of Education representative in the election during spring term registration, has not yet attended a board meeting.

Sosa said the petition drive is being coordinated by Intercomp, a student organization involved in student government. Sosa said he is personally endorsing the drive.

For a representative to be removed from the board, a petition with the names of at least 10 percent of the students in the college must be presented to the board. A special election will then be held in the college.

Sosa said the petitions will be distributed in education classes to gather the 158 signatures required for a recall election.

A bill to have Karen Passiak, board chairperson, ask Wright to resign will be introduced at tonight's board meeting, Sosa said.

But "there's no way to force it (Wright's resignation)," Sosa said.

Wright, who ran unopposed in the election, has not attended any of the four board meetings this term and did not attend the orientation meeting for new members.

Passiak said she has tried unsuccessfully to contact Wright, who she said lives and works full time in Battle Creek and attends classes two nights a week at MSU.

Wright was unavailable for comment Monday.

Student dies in IM accident

Bulletin — A twenty year old MSU student identified by hospital authorities as Steven Morgenthaler of 472 North Hubbard Hall died late Monday night after playing Intramural softball on the east IM fields.

Witnesses said Morgenthaler was running to second base when he was struck in the chest by a thrown ball.

External heart massage and electroshock treatment were used on the student before he was rushed to Sparrow Hospital where he died a short time later.

Zimbabwean elections debated in seminar by MSU professors

By JENNIFER DIXON
State News Staff Writer

Members of the Freedom House team who observed the Zimbabwean elections in April concluded they were "relatively free." But Michael Bratton, MSU professor of political science, said calling the elections either free or fair is meaningless.

Leon Weaver, MSU professor of criminal justice and member of the Freedom House team, debated Bratton on the value of the Zimbabwean elections Monday at a seminar sponsored by their respective departments.

Charles Press, professor of political science, moderated the seminar.

"The elections were a calculated alternative to majority rule," Bratton said.

Weaver said the elections were not a cosmetic change from white to black rule as alleged by some observers, and the new government is "a lot different ball game than the government under Ian Smith."

"Ian Smith, gagging and retching, has been forced to try a little democracy," Weaver said.

Bratton said Freedom House concluded the irregularities, such as voter turnout reported at over 100 percent in two districts, were minimized in light of the large turnout, estimated to be between 50 and 64 percent.

The figure is based on an outdated census and there was no voter registration or way to determine if voters were 18 or older.

Bratton has said.

The turnout does not measure the black population's support for Bishop Abel Muzorewa's regime, Bratton said.

Weaver said there were no serious irregularities in tabulating ballots and added intimidation by guerrillas banned from the country who urged people not to vote and coercion by the Ian Smith regime to encourage people to vote "balanced out."

The Freedom House "focuses on the electoral process and technical conditions" Bratton said, but does not take into consideration a constitution that entrenches white rule.

Bratton said whites still control the military, economy, judiciary and civil service, but Weaver said blacks now have the power to tax and spend money.

Weaver, who depended on the government for transportation to polling sites, information and protection from guerrillas, said he was a "visiting dignitary" while in the country.

He said he held "useful conversations" with foreign dignitaries, black ministers and other observers and concluded he was "confident" in the electoral process, and that it was much more democratic than elections held in other black African countries.

Bratton called Weaver's statement an unproductive argument. Other African countries are at least self-ruled, and Zimbabwe is and will continue to be run by a white minority, he added.

The over-representation of whites will not exist after 10 years, Weaver said.

Bratton said at the end of 10 years, according to the internal settlement signed in March 1978, whites will determine whether the constitution should be altered or remain the same.

The possibility of black majority rule in 10 years would be greater if white moderates had been elected, Bratton said, and Weaver added no moderates were elected in April.

Bratton said the elections were staged for the benefit of the West, but the United States government said "the transfer of power was neither legal, genuine, or complete."

Weaver said critical observers were failing to note the "glass is half full, not half empty," and the elections signal progress in the transition from minority to majority rule.

The Patriotic Front, a guerrilla group banned from the country, called the elections a sham and the United Nations has refused to recognize the new regime.

Bratton said the "civil war" in Zimbabwe escalated during the war and "institutionalized violence is a cornerstone of the Rhodesian government."

Most of Zimbabwe is under martial law and six armies operate in the country.

Freedom House has termed the violence "terrorist insurgency."

Chilean police's extradition refused

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The head of Chile's Supreme Court refused to grant extradition Monday of three former Chilean secret police officials wanted by the United States for trial for the 1976 murder of exiled Socialist Orlando Letelier.

Gen. Juan Manuel Contreras, one of the three accused in the United States of ordering the assassination, said he was happy with the "professional justice" of the ruling. He called the proceedings "a very well mounted show."

Court President Israeli Borquez in a brief announcement after meeting with Contreras and the other two accused said the evidence submitted by the U.S. Justice Department was not sufficient.

In Washington, E. Lawrence Barcella, one of the federal prosecutors in the Letelier case, called the decision "extremely disappointing" and said the U.S. government plans to appeal to a Supreme Court panel in Chile.

Amin's forces hold Italian civilians

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — About 100 Italian civilians are believed to be in the northern provincial capital of Gulu still held by forces loyal to deposed dictator Idi Amin, a Swiss businessleader said Sunday.

Gulu is in one of three northern provinces that are the targets of Tanzanian and Ugandan troops who overthrew Amin. Reports from the front said the Tanzanians were moving toward Lira, about 55 miles southeast of Gulu and 113 miles north of the capital of Kampala.

Their ultimate goal is the provincial capital of Arua, Amin's hometown. Various reports have placed Amin in Arua with some 2,000 to 10,000 loyal soldiers.

Joseph Mueller, a Swiss businessleader who escaped from Gulu May 4, said Sunday most of the Italians there are Roman Catholic missionaries who operate St. Mary's Hospital, a local technical college and the Alokalo Seminary.

He said the missionaries had not been harmed when he left, but there had been looting by Amin's troops and civilians.

Commercial sperm sales predicted

CHICAGO (UPI) — The rapid growth of commercial sperm banks eventually may lead to artificial insemination kits sold over-the-counter, Advertising Age magazine reports in this week's edition.

The magazine said commercial sperm banks in several major cities have reported growing numbers of donors, particularly from men who choose to store their sperm before undergoing vasectomies.

The article said some specialists believe home insemination kits "could eventually become available as over-the-counter consumer products."

Dr. Cappy Rothman, the founder of the New York-based Cryobank, one of the nation's largest and oldest commercial sperm banks, said the threat of nuclear accidents may also increase interest in storing semen as a safeguard against the possibility of "involuntary sterilization resulting from radiation exposure."

Dole seeks Republican nomination

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Dole is back home in Russell, Kan., to announce he is running for the 1980 Republican nomination for President of the United States.

The senator scheduled his announcement at a news conference in the Russell City Hall.

His declaration isn't likely to surprise many people, least of all his rivals for the nomination.

Dole kept right on campaigning after the votes were counted in November 1976 and it was clear that the Ford-Dole ticket had lost the presidential election to the Democratic slate of Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale.

Dole has been in all sections of the country, addressing groups large and small. In 1978, he campaigned for any Republican who hinted he'd like Dole's help.

Despite all the travel, Dole still doesn't rank among the front-runners for nomination in any of the polls.

Poisoning charged in Silkwood case

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Karen Silkwood and her contamination by plutonium were compared Monday by an attorney to poisoned harvester ants, whose fatal sickness was not discovered until too late.

In an emotionally charged closing argument, Gerry Spence of Casper, Wyo., attorney for the Silkwood estate, told the three-man, three-woman jury how the Wyoming harvester ants avoided poisons set out for them for years.

The poison that finally killed the ants was one that doesn't act for several weeks after it is eaten, he said.

"By the time you understand you've been poisoned, the poisoning has already happened," he said. He called it the "harvester ant syndrome." He said that by the time Silkwood knew she had been contaminated by plutonium, the damage was done but probably would not have shown for years.

White defense to plead mental illness

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — When the jury in the Dan White murder trial gets the case this week, it will not have to decide whether White killed Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk, but rather his state of mind at the time he fired the fatal shots.

The prosecution says White planned with malice — and with awareness of the consequences — the City Hall slayings last Nov. 27, and will ask the jury for a first-degree murder conviction.

The defense, conceding that White pulled the trigger, says he was mentally ill, suffering from severe manic depression, and will ask the jury for a verdict of voluntary manslaughter.

Nobody is talking about an acquittal. One psychiatrist testifying for the defense told the jury that he feared White, depressed by the slayings, would commit suicide if freed.

White, 32, has not testified. "He is not emotionally up to it," says his attorney, Doug Schmidt.

Group reports children's deaths

PARIS (AP) — The imperial guard of Emperor Bokassa I bayoneted, clubbed and stoned to death as many as 100 children last month in the Central African Empire because they protested wearing uniforms to school, Amnesty International said Monday.

The Paris section of the London-based human rights organization said the children, aged eight to 16, were rounded up in the capital city of Bangui on April 18 and taken to the central Ngarangba Prison to be punished.

The amnesty report said the children had thrown stones at official cars, including Bokassa's.

Amnesty International, which won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1977 for its work on the plight of political prisoners, cited "numerous, varied and reliable sources, both African and European" for its report on the slayings.

Amnesty said Bokassa's guards swept through the Bangui neighborhoods of Malimaka, Boy-Rabe, Zande and Nzakara and arrested several hundred children.

"Some of the children were stoned by the imperial guards to punish them for having thrown stones at the imperial car," Amnesty said.

"Others were stabbed with bayonets, others died from blows by clubs containing nails. Probably nearly 100 children were killed and buried in a common grave during the night by the guards," the report said.

The organization said the students were locked in small cells sealed so tightly that about 20 of the children suffocated.

Amnesty said one witness alone counted 62 bodies.

The next day, the 58-year-old Bokassa, who describes himself as "the father and protector of the children who are the future of the country," announced he was going to free those still in custody.

"It appears that in fact some were released," Amnesty said.

Bangui youths have been restive since January when the Ministry of Education ordered students to begin wearing the uniforms. The students said they could not afford the new clothes.

January's protests developed into violence when university students rioted in Bangui, damaging two factories and many shops around the university. Sources in Paris, who asked not to be named, estimate that between 50 and 100 persons were killed in those disturbances.

Travelers from the Central African Empire, a former French colony of 234,000 square miles, say "a reign of terror" has existed in Bangui since January.

The country, a landlocked nation in the heart of the African continent, gained independence from France in August 1960, when it became known as the Central African Republic. Before that it was known as the Ubangi-Shari territory in colonial French Equatorial Africa.

Its first president banned all political parties and was ousted in a military coup led by Bokassa in 1966. Then-Col. Bokassa declared himself president and dissolved the parliament. In subsequent years he converted to Islam but renounced the conversion to become Emperor. He was crowned in December 1977 in a lavish ceremony modeled after the coronation of the French Emperor Napoleon in 1804. The festivities surrounding the ceremony reportedly cost an estimated $50 million, half the national budget.

Desertion charges fail to break Marine's pride

By KATHY OSOBA
Associated Press Writer

GREAT LAKES, Ill. (AP) — After a month visiting family and friends, Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood returned to military life Monday and the possibility of a court-martial on charges of deserting in Vietnam and collaborating with the enemy.

But despite the charges — which could lead to his execution if he is found guilty — Garwood is proud of being a Marine and is considering reenlisting, his attorney said.

"Despite everything, Bobby is a very proud Marine, and he is proud of the Marine Corps," Dermot G. Foley of New York City said in a telephone interview.

"The bringing of these charges has not resulted in any deterioration of his feelings of the Marines. He has strong feelings about these charges, but it would be fair to say that he is considering re-enlistment."

Garwood, 33, arrived at Great Lakes Naval Hospital Monday from a month's convalescent leave. After undergoing a physical examination he is to report Thursday to Camp LeJeune, N.C.

Foley said Garwood has adjusted well to American life since returning in March after spending 16 years in Vietnam, 14 of them as a prisoner of war. His speech is still punctuated with a slight Vietnamese accent, Foley said.

Foley said although his client feels the need to talk about his Vietnam experiences with a doctor, he has instructed Garwood not to because information obtained by a physician can be used in court-martial proceedings. In civilian trials, conversations between patient and doctor are confidential and cannot be used as evidence.

"We are not permitted to talk to a doctor about the problems Bobby has encountered unless we're prepared to scrap our constitutional rights. And we're not prepared to do that," Foley said.

"I don't think it's fair to force Bobby Garwood or any military defendant to be in a position where he is compelled to elect between his legal rights and his mental and physical well-being."

Foley contends that the Marine Corps knows nothing about Garwood's years in Vietnam and would use the information furnished by an attending doctor as the basis for the charges against him.

Foley said the government has seized about $147,000 in back pay held in a bank account in Garwood's name. The money was in a government bank during the years Garwood was in Vietnam. Foley said Garwood has been informed that he must "prove he's innocent before he can get the money," which Foley said his client needs for legal fees.

When the military investigation into the charges in concluded, the commanding general at Camp LeJeune will decide whether military proceedings against Garwood are warranted.

The government contends that Garwood had unlawful communication with the enemy, misbehaved as a prisoner of war, and urged American soldiers to refuse to fight. He is also accused of attempting to subvert the loyalty of other Americans.

Some prisoners of war who were held captive with Garwood say he also carried arms against his country, and informed on POWs to the Viet Cong.

Court upholds law affecting abortion aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, without a dissenting voice, refused Monday to disturb a Massachusetts law that denies financial aid for most women on welfare who want abortions.

A spokesperson for the Washington-based National Abortion Rights Action League called the refusal "devastating."

"It's now clearer than ever that the pro-choice movement cannot depend on the courts" but must seek help from Congress and state legislatures, Janet Beals said.

She said a number of abortion-funding controversies over similar state laws are pending in lower courts.

Draft is discussed

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said Monday he favors draft registration, and suggested he thinks women should register as well as men.

"Personally I would be for it," O'Neill told reporters. "I think we should have registration for use in an emergency... It's one of the things we ought to do to protect our nation."

O'Neill made clear he would not favor renewing the draft itself. Asked if women should register also, O'Neill said, "Seeing that my last two appointments to the naval academy were women, I would have to say my thoughts would be to go down the same road."

The House Armed Services Committee approved a measure last week that would require 18-year-old men to register starting Jan. 1, 1981, in case the draft is reinstated in a war or emergency.

The provision is in a $42 billion weapons authorization bill that may get House action next week.

Protests have been organized against renewing draft registration, and there is no indication yet whether the full Congress will do so.

The House committee measure specifies men, but it also would require the president to report back to Congress recommendations on how to carry out registration and whether women should be included.

The purpose of registration when there is no draft would be to speed up war mobilization by having young people already registered if the draft is reinstated.

Few bothered by overcrowding survey indicates

By SUSAN TOMPOR
State News Staff Writer

Few downtown area renters consider themselves to be caught in the binds of overcrowding, according to a recent East Lansing survey.

The survey, which was conducted by volunteers from the Tenants Resource Center, showed that only 15 percent of the 372 renters who responded, "felt they were overcrowded."

City planner Glenn Remus said the responses came as no surprise.

"Students have come to expect higher densities. It's becoming more natural to have five or six people to a house," he said. On the average there are 4.25 people living in single family rental units in the downtown area, according to the survey.

The survey, funded through the city's 1978-79 Block Grant Program, was circulated in February among 800 renters with 372 replying.

Data from the survey has recently been compiled, Remus said, with some of it to be used by the city's Department of Housing, Planning and Community Development in its study regarding housing discrimination practices.

Other data from the survey will be used by the Tenants Resource Center in its efforts to inform renters about specific housing problems.

Most renters surveyed said their leases were for a 12-month period with about 11 percent having nine-month leases and 16 percent having no lease at all.

The survey also showed that the average rent in the downtown area for a single family rental unit was $406.31 a month.

About 76 percent of the tenants in such units pay their own water bills, according to the survey with 83 percent paying their own electric bills.

In a few instances — about 2 percent of those surveyed — tenants and landlords shared the costs of electric and water bills.

Repair work tends to be done by the landlords who supply washers and dryers, refrigerators and stoves, according to the survey.

Rats and other pests bothered few renters surveyed.

Roaches were the most dominant of all of the pest problems with about 13 percent of those answering saying they were present.

Yvonne Nanassi, director of Tenants

Resource Center, said the data compiled regarding pest problems may be reflective of the season in which the survey was conducted.

Although the results do show that garbage levels are being controlled, she said, the results may also show the bug and rodent problems are less intense in the winter.

When renters do have problems, many go to their landlords for improvements, according to the survey.

If the complaint was not corrected, 68 percent of the renters replying turned to the Tenants Resource Center, 21 percent turned to the city housing inspector and 4 percent sought assistance from the ASMSU legal services.

Single rental units housing minorities are few, according to the survey.

About 9 percent of those surveyed said blacks lived in the unit with 2 percent saying Orientals lived in the unit.

About 1 percent of the renters are native Americans, according to the survey.

Few of those surveyed said landlords had discriminated against them because of color, race, age or sex.

However, students voiced the greatest amount of concern regarding discrimination against themselves.

About 12 percent of those surveyed said landlords had given them less than fair and equal treatment based on student status.

Rally today to begin Palestine Week events

Palestinian students will demonstrate at 11 today at Beaumont Tower in support of the Palestinian people's struggle.

There will also be a lecture on "U. S. Policies in the Middle East" at 7:30 tonight in 332 Union. Both are part of Palestine Week.

Other Palestine Week events include:

- a slide show and film on Palestine at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in 332 Union;
- a lecture on "Developments in the Middle East" at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in 332 Union; and

- a lecture on "Implications of the so-called 'Peace Treaty' with Egypt" will be given at 7:30 p.m. Friday in 332 Union.

An exhibit of pictures depicting the Palestinian struggle will be on display in the International Center from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. through Thursday.

Palestine Week is sponsored by the Organization of Arab Students at MSU and Lansing Community College.

Budget is expected to pass council

The East Lansing City Council is expected to approve the 1980 operating budget in a meeting at 7:30 tonight, at the Public Library, 950 Abbott Road.

City Manager Jerry Coffman is recommending that council pass an ordinance which would establish a service charge for commercial garbage collection.

Council will also consider an ordinance that would establish a re-inspection fee for housing inspections where non-compliance exists after a notice of violation has been issued by a building or housing inspector.

Another code enforcement amendment would require that a sticker be attached near the doorway of rented property to show tenants and neighbors that the unit has been inspected and been found in compliance with the city housing code.

Film groups to get funds

Thirteen organizations have been allocated more than $7,500 by the Residence Hall Association for alternative film choices during fall term 1979. Sherry Moody, RHA movie board chairperson, said.

Classic Films will receive the largest amount of money with 10 films being funded by RHA at a cost of $1,900. Holden Hall and Frontline Cinema also have been allocated more than $1,000 in funds for fall term movies.

The allocations amount to about 12 percent of the expected total budget of about $50,000 for next fall, Tom Leach, RHA movie director, said.

The remaining alternative movie organizations will also be partially funded by RHA fall term:

STRESSES IMPROVED COMMUNICATIONS

'U' prof lectures on child abuse

By ED BRADLEY

The key to preventing child abuse is the improvement of parent and child communications at all levels, an MSU professor said Monday.

Ray Helfer, professor of human development, discussed "The Importance of Networking for Child and Family Advocacy" at a Kellogg Center luncheon.

The presentation was part of the day-long "Tri-County Conference on Community Prevention of Child Abuse," which focused on Eaton, Ingham and Clinton county residents.

Helfer described parent-child relations as a cycle beginning with birth and perinatal care of a newborn to adulthood, when humans are grown and ready to become parents themselves.

He said the perinatal period — the first two or three months of life — is "probably the most critical and important of all areas." "Newborns are very dependent upon interacting, using their senses to communicate with the adults around them," Helfer said.

"When a person abused as a child grows up, he may find it's safer not to touch, not to interact." He said this trait may be carried to the next generation unless relations are improved, either on an individual or group basis through perinatal "coaching."

Coaching, he said, would be designed for all young parents, especially men. "Men particularly need more coaching. We need the experience in holding, cuddling and rocking a baby."

GROUP CALLS FOR ENERGY BILL APPROVAL

'Lifeline' electric rates are proposed

By United Press International

Senate bills creating "lifeline" electric rates and a utility-supported fund for consumer groups could restrain spiraling energy costs, a diverse coalition of interest groups said Monday.

The Michigan Energy Coalition — which includes such influential organizations as the United Auto Workers, Michigan Education Association, Michigan Catholic Conference and Michigan Citizens Lobby — called for immediate hearings on the bills and rapid legislative approval.

The group also announced it will develop a proposal to give the state more control over the construction of new power plants.

The lifeline bill, introduced by Sen. Stephen Monsma, D-Grand Rapids, would establish special low rates for homes which use minimal amounts of electricity. Power wasters would be socked with higher rates.

The funding bill, introduced by Sen. John Hertel, D-Harper Woods, would require utilities to pay two cents for every residential customer into a fund supporting consumer groups fighting rate increases.

Both are pending in the Senate Environmental Affairs Committee.

"In the past five years, the prices we pay for electricity and natural gas have risen at an alarming speed," said Terry Black, a spokesperson for the coalition.

"The thing that makes energy inflation particularly cruel is that energy for most Michigan citizens is a necessity, not a luxury," he said.

County talks face impasse, attorney says

By MARCIA BRADFORD
State News Staff Writer

Contract negotiations between Ingham County and the county assistant prosecuting attorneys have reached an impasse, it was announced Monday.

Dan E. Hankins, attorney for the Ingham County Employees Association, Assistant Prosecuting Attorneys Unit, said the two have been disputing since November over a difference of $1,500 over an 18-month period.

The difference would cover overtime and cost of living expenses, which the assistant prosecutors feel they have been denied, he said.

The assistant prosecutors are asking that their salaries be raised from $14,705 to $15,705 at entry level and from $26,658 to $28,000 at the top of the pay scale.

A mediator, brought into the negotiations by the prosecuting attorneys in April, failed to resolve the issue, Hankins said. The prosecutors are now asking the county to consider fact-finding.

He said neither party has to abide by the decisions of a fact-finder, but it is the desire of the attorneys to exhaust all available resources.

There is no provision by law or in the contracts for the attorneys to go to binding arbitration and strike, Hankins said. The only method available is to deal with representatives from the Ingham County Board of Commissioners across the bargaining table, he said.

Hankins said he does not feel the position of the prosecuting attorneys has been sufficiently presented to the board of commissioners.

"To our knowledge, they (Chuck Young, personnel director and Pete Cohl, county attorney) have not taken it back to the commissioners," he said.

Michael Woodworth, chief spokesperson for the assistant prosecutors pointed out that Ingham County has the sixth largest population but pays its prosecutors less than any of Michigan's 10 largest counties.

Hankins said even if the demands of the attorneys were met, their salaries would still not be among the top 10 paid to assistant county prosecutors.

"With the low salaries in Ingham County, it is obvious we can't catch up in one collective bargaining agreement," he said. "We realize it takes time and it's obvious we aren't going to be in the top six for some time."

Marty Sibert, a member of the bargaining team for the assistant prosecutors said the morale of the attorneys is extremely low.

"We are disheartened and discouraged," he said. "But the same level of output and the same quality is coming out of the office."

Hankins said two of the assistant prosecutors have left the county and it is likely more will leave if the issue is not satisfactorily resolved.

Sibert said the people leaving will be senior prosecutors and important cases will have to be handled by attorneys with less experience.

The assistant prosecuting attorneys are also upset because the county has refused to grant anniversary date step increases mandated under a contract that expired last Dec. 31.

Hankins said the county has granted step increases to all members of the ICEA except the 22 prosecuting attorneys, although none of the members had contracts as of Jan. 1.

Sibert said the assistant prosecutors want to be recognized by Ingham County as professionals working in very essential areas.

"Our theme is professional level pay for professional employees," he said.

Outdoor concerts planned

By SUSAN M. POKREFFKY
State News Staff Writer

Beautiful music and the great outdoors — no one could ask for more. And campus residents and friends can have their fill of both in the Annual Outdoor Series featuring the University Bands.

Most of the concerts will be performed in the gardens east of the Music Building and are free to the public. The term's performances are as follows:

- Tonight: The Green Band performs at 6:30 in the gardens. The 75-member repertory band consists mainly of non-music majors who want to continue playing during college.

- Thursday: The White Band performs at 6:30 p.m. in the gardens.

- May 22: The series hosts the Concert Band, to be conducted by P. Carl Chevallard at 6:30 p.m. in the Gardens. The Concert Band has 80 members, mostly music majors. The band studies significant original literature and transcriptions.

- May 23: The Jazz Lab Bands, directed by Ron Newman, perform at 8:15 p.m. in the Music Building Auditorium.

According to a University Bands flyer, Lab Band I "provides a medium of self-expression for those with considerable experience and expertise in jazz rock music performance, while Jazz Lab Band II exists primarily as a training unit for those with less experience in the techniques required in this American art form."

- May 24: The Symphony Band performs, conducted by Stanley E. De Rusha, also director of bands at MSU. The concert is at 6:30 p.m. in the Gardens. The symphony is MSU's nationally famous "premiere concert band" and has 85 members.

- May 29: Stanley De Rusha conducts the Wind Symphony at 6:30 p.m. in the Gardens. The Wind Symphony "stresses the single performer concept which provides the greatest opportunity for the artist-level musician. It is made up of both graduates and undergraduates."

- May 30: The Jazz Lab Bands return for a performance at 8:15 p.m. in the Music Building Auditorium.

- Thursday, May 31: The series features a combination of all University Bands at 6:30 p.m. on the lawn of the north building in a finale performance.

Dime day featured by CATA to promote mass transit

Fares on all Capitol Area Transportation Authority bus routes will be lowered to 10 cents Wednesday in celebration of Michigan Transportation Week.

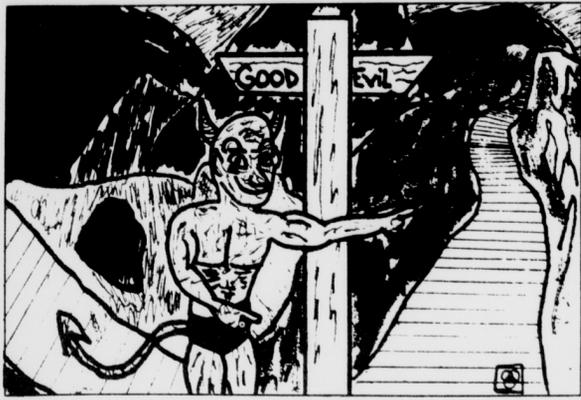

"Dime Day" is also designed to attract additional riders to mass transit, said Rich Leonard, planning and grants manager at CATA.

On most CATA routes, adults are required to pay 35 cents, Leonard said. East Lansing service requires adults to pay 15 cents, with students and elderly persons paying a dime.

"We are hoping to introduce the convenience of riding a bus to people who do not normally ride," Leonard said.

May 13th through May 19th has been designated Michigan Transportation Week by Gov. Milliken.

There's no hope left for America

We are, it would appear, doomed. Look at this world. Rape, robbery and revenge have replaced reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic in our schools. Our children have become hoodlums, young thugs out for a free ride. And the free ride is delivered — in full — by a scared and frantic public.

What's there to be scared about? Take a look at what the American public does with its spare time: maybe go to the movies — movies where human bodies are treated like rubber toys, bent, cut, frazzled and coated with blood; maybe watch television — television that features scantily-clad women and bumbling, lecherous men; maybe read a book — a book like "Looking Out for Number One," self-help lessons for a people that can't be helped.

Any plumber will tell you. America is going down the toilet. Who can we turn to? To our politicians, whose scandals began years before Watergate and certainly show no sign of ending? To our religious leaders, who alternately prove ineffectual or, worse, virtuous? To a "God" whose very existence we can't be sure of?

No, we think not. There's no place to turn. Anyone will tell you that there's hope. There's hope in our children, they say. But our children pollute their minds and their bodies with drugs and television. There's hope in other countries, they say. But other countries have their own problems. There's hope in our educational system, they say. But our educational system places grades before knowledge, politics before experience. They tell you there's hope — but is there?

People are looking for answers to questions that have no answer. They look inside themselves for answers that are outside their front doors, they look up and down their street for answers that lay only in their souls.

We, as a people, are misdirected. We band together, we go to Washington to march against an economic force that is much more powerful and much more terrifying than the one scientists have devised. We vote in elections that offer us Choice A or Choice A. And if we write-in Choice B on the ballot, we still get Choice A. We drink beer, we watch TV, we fret about the world — or, even less effectively, we read our books of radical politics, we search religious manuscripts empty of truth or inspiration, we complain about the "they" that is really "us."

The weak among us end our lives. The strong among us live them. And the answers — well, they're not to be found in any college newspaper.

Councils need life

ASMSU minority councils must turn in their applications to become members of Programming Board to Chairperson John Haytol by Wednesday or they will lose all sources of funding. Because of the move made winter term that placed councils under the auspices of Programming Board, these groups will receive no more funding from the ASMSU Student Board. And in turn, if these groups do not apply by Wednesday to Haytol, minority councils at MSU will no longer exist.

Although we agree that the councils should never have been removed from the political arena the Student Board offers, we understand that if Programming Board does not receive the applications from the councils and accepts the councils onto its board, they will have no funding for next year.

Minority councils are one of the few vital components ASMSU has to offer. They must continue to be working organizations within student government not only because of the services they offer to MSU students, but also to fight to once again become a part of the political body. If they choose not to apply to Programming Board they will lose all connections to the governmental body and also lose any opportunity to once again become a political proponent of ASMSU.

Haytol made a grave error by waiting so long to officially notify the councils, when the deadline decision was made last Thursday by the Student Board. It is errors like this that must be kept track of by minority councils when they try to once again gain a political voice.

We urge all councils to apply to Programming Board for two reasons: to receive funding and, to make sure errors such as Haytol's are not repeated. We also urge Programming Board to not think twice about accepting the councils as members to its board and to provide them with the adequate funding they need.

The real truth is obvious

OH BOY!! The dummies here decided it'd be a good idea if all us editors switched jobs today, an' I think it's a great idea too! Cause I got the BEST JOB IN THE PLACE, the Opinion Editor's! Now I can talk about all the stuff they don't let me talk about on the entertainment pages!

First up: President Carter! BOY, IS HE A JERK!! I tell ya, nobody believes me when I tell 'em that I voted for President Ford back in 1976, but I DID an' now I bet YOU'RE all sorry you DIDN'T! I mean, sure I voted for Ford 'cause I thought he was a big dummy — who didn't, ya know? — but he was especially cool 'cause he was always bumpin' into things or trippin' all over! Now nobody cracks jokes about Jimmy Carter 'cause everyone knows he's just a big WIMP!!

Next: the search for an MSU president! Hey, WHO CARES who they choose to run this dumb place? It's so big it's just gonna run itself ANYWAY, so why do we gotta run around pretendin' that if we had a new president things would be cool? WHO'S KIDDIN' WHO?

Next: Dayton Hudson Mall! Boy, you really blew it by sayin' ya didn't want a mall around here, I tell ya. First of all, WHAT DIFFERENCE DOES IT MAKE when we all know we're gonna be leavin' here soon anyway? Man, if they woulda built it there woulda been a buncha real cool NEW places to hang out at! I'm sicka the Meridian Mall, an' if you had any brains you'd be sick of it, too! Hey, next time ya wanna go out an' get somethin' ta eat an' ya realize you're sicka EVERYPLACE HERE, just realize that you could be eatin' at a buncha new franchises IF ONLY YOU VOTED FOR THE MALL! DUMMIES!!

Next: vegetarianism! Hey, I can write about anything I want here, so lemme tell ya I'm REALLY BUGGED by all these people that tell me that I'm KILLIN' A COW OR SOMETHIN' just 'cause I like eatin' at McDonald's. What kinda dopey reasonin' is that? Hey, man if you PAY YOUR TAXES you're supportin' a government that ENDORSES killin' cows an' stuff, so why don't you creeps NOT PAY YOUR TAXES FOR A COUPLA YEARS before you tell me what I should be eatin'? Go eat your health food, ya jerks!!

abstract ERA junk!!

Next: this waste-disposal biz! Hey, right now while you're readin' this, somebody's diggin' up part of the campus an' stickin' DEAD THINGS an' POISIN an' SEWAGE down where no one's gonna notice it, so what's the big deal? Hey man, the only reason this whole thing's a big deal is 'cause the ones responsible were dopes and shoulda been smarter about where they were gettin' rid of everything. They should just be sneaker in the future, an' everything should work out fine, ya know?

Next: Earvin going pro! Well now you're dealing with REAL IMPORTANT topics, and lemme tell ya, Earvin's no big dummy 'cause he knew that BIG BUCKS is what life's all about and now he's gonna go get some! What's this junk about "loyalty"? — it's an insult to pull that kinda stuff on Earvin, man, especially since him and his buddies were DIRECTLY RESPONSIBLE for East Lansing's first major RIOT in five or six years!! Basketball's great, no kiddin', but LOOTING 7-11 STORES is a WAY OF LIFE! So don't gimme this sentimental stuff, gimme another EAST LANSIN' RIOT 'cause THERE ARE NO RULES!!

VIEWPOINT: ELECTIONS

Sanctions entail harm, not good

By JON GOETZE

I question the reasoning behind The State News' editorial position against ending the current economic and diplomatic boycott of Zimbabwe-Rhodesia. What seems most objectionable about our present policy with regard to that nation is precisely that it does constitute an irresponsible meddling in the internal affairs of a nation we really don't understand — exactly the sort of approach The State News supposedly decries. Indeed, the parallels with Vietnam are already depressingly obvious.

In Vietnam, we justified our regrettable involvement in that country by an appeal to a worthy but highly inappropriate ideal, democratic government. In Rhodesia today, we are appealing to an equally worthy and equally nebulous and inapplicable ideal of racial equality to justify our destructive policies against that nation. One can argue the difference between the use of military force in Vietnam and economic force in Rhodesia, but no one disputes the devastating effect our boycott has had on Rhodesia's economy, previously the most prosperous in Africa. Lest anyone question the deliberateness of our isolation policy, consider after all that there is almost no nation on Earth with whom we do not carry on diplomatic relations and we number many of the most repressive governments in the world as our trade partners. To single out Rhodesia for these extraordinary sanctions seems highly unjustified.

Apartheid is still an unfortunate reality there, but so is the fact of the recent elections, very likely the fairest and most democratic ever held in Africa. Probably no government in Africa today can be considered democratic by Western standards, while some of the most corrupt and oppressive dictatorships in the world may be found on the continent. Idi Amin's late regime being only the most notorious. That the rulers of these nations are usually black (albeit, often heavily supported by the Soviet Union), seems to automatically ensure their legitimacy in the eyes of The State News. To me, this seems an arbitrary and even a racist perspective.

With regard to the Soviet Union, there does seem considerable evidence that, far from being the popularly based liberation movements they purport to be, the guerrilla forces of Mugabe and Nkomo constitute a small, disaffected minority of the population armed and trained by the Soviets who have every interest in the overthrow of a democratic and Western-oriented nation in Africa. Furthermore, what military successes the rebels have had, ("successes" generally involving savage atrocities committed against the black rural population), can be attributed to the crippling effects of the harsh American and European sanctions on Rhodesia's military capability.

Despite our misguided efforts, the Rhodesian people have taken a major step toward the realization of fully representative government, without abrogating the legitimate rights of the white minority, nor sacrificing the much needed economic and political expertise of that class. There is no rational or moral reason to immediately recognize and end the sanctions against Zimbabwe-Rhodesia.

LETTERS

Cheap slam, yeah, but no sexist pig

I'm sorry Mitchell Robbins thinks I am a sexist pig. But not very, because I'm not. My whole letter, with its snide tone, was in condemnation of the physical attitude men take toward women, and which many women take toward themselves.

Personally, I am in favor of at least some separate hours for men and women, if only because each sex should have the opportunity to exclude the other when it wishes.

What I object to is the use of topless sunbathing as the focus of the issue, which is simply stupid.

The fact is, I firmly believe that women are no better than men and vice versa. Neither should be getting special privileges. And it is not the University's place to subsidize personal vanity (which is all that sunbathing is, after all). My last letter was undeniably a cheap slam but I refuse to apologize for a word of it.

Whether you like it or not — and I certainly don't like it — there are women who are overly concerned with how men see them, and who substantially regulate their lives thereby. These unliberated ladies deserve all the contempt they receive.

Both sexes must accept the responsibility for the negative image they have of each other. We are all biologically constructed to be sexist. I say this not to justify it but to show that we cannot continue to see the war between the sexes as a contest of our side vs. their side, good guys vs. bad guys. Both men and women are actively chauvinistic for the most part (I say this from personal acquaintance) and both are ultimately victimized by their own attitudes.

Perhaps I should have given the men and their idiotic vanity over their own "family jewels" equal time. It's amazing enough in its own way; men trying to come off like big lovable teddy bears because they think this attracts women. The alarming thing is, it does.

We can't drink but then we're not rich alumni

As I read the article in The State News about the upcoming spring concert, I was surprised to find out that no alcoholic beverages would be allowed.

I guess the sight of 20,000 college students sitting in the sun (hopefully) drinking a couple of beers has become too much for the bureaucrats here to handle.

It's funny, I have this picture in my mind — I'm walking to a football game on a really fine fall day and everybody is excited because we have a good team. I'm walking by the parking lot and I can't help but notice all the famous MSU alumni tailgate parties. The fall air has this sweet whiskey sour smell to it. It is too bad that the alumni and parents won't be able to have anymore pre-game drinks now that the "U" has decided to enforce its ordinance against drinking on campus.

I'm sure that many of them enjoyed it and it seemed so harmless. I just wonder how they will react to having their picnic baskets searched.

Well, all that has gone the route of Earvin Johnson's Magic Act, because selective enforcement is selective discrimination.

PAC uses 1920s in 'Three Penny'

By ROSANNE SINGER
State News Staff Writer

Against a Roaring Twenties background, the Performing Arts Company will begin tonight its production of Bertolt Brecht and Kurt Weill's Three Penny Opera, a musical usually set in London of the 1890s.

"I didn't want to do the 1890s," said director Frank Rutledge, theater department chairperson. "It's always done that way."

Based on the 18th century play, Beggars Opera, Three Penny details the adventures of Macheath, a murderer, thief and ladies' man. Macheath and his gang conflict with a merchant who runs a string of beggars throughout the city and takes a percentage of their profits.

In the course of Three Penny, Macheath is thrown in and out of jail a couple of times and sentenced to hang. At the final moment, however, he receives the queen's pardon.

Though Macheath is the epitome of a male chauvinist, Rutledge said it is the women who triumph in the end. This, he said, was one of his rationales for the 1920s setting.

"I try to emphasize the role of the women as controllers, and the 1920s represent the beginning of the feminist movement in the United States," he said.

The economic message of Three Penny also inspired the 1920s setting.

"Brecht, who was a Marxist, makes the economic point that capitalists are thieves and exploiters," Rutledge said. "I think there's a measure of economic brutality here that we need to get across."

Brecht began writing Three Penny Opera in 1926 after someone sent him a copy of Beggars Opera. However, Rutledge said, Brecht did not read the original play all the way through and wrote Three Penny haphazardly, never from start to finish.

"This may be one of the poorest-written scripts I have ever read," he said.

Therefore, Rutledge is using a mixture of four translations of the script and has rewritten several scenes himself. One script difficulty, for example, was the character of Lucy, to whom only one reference is made in the first act.

"However, she shows up pregnant in the second act and she's supposedly been Macheath's girlfriend all these years," Rutledge said.

With the help of the cast, Rutledge has also changed song lyrics in select spots, such as "Join the Army" in the first act.

Susan Chekaway as Polly and Mark Volland as Macheath rehearse a scene from Three Penny Opera, which opens tonight in Fairchild Theater.

Rutledge said his visual image for Three Penny is that of a rat trap maze or a prison cell block.

"None of the people in the play change, none reform," he said. "So, for example, in the epilogue I've repeated the overture."

In addition to a sizeable cast — 22 members — Three Penny combines the efforts of two musical directors and a choreographer. Kay Hickey has worked with the cast on vocal training and Ken Hopper has assisted the orchestra.

Although there are no actual dance numbers, choreographer Nan Burling has shaped crowd movement, instructed individuals on how to sell their songs and engineered anything requiring sophistication of movement.

Three Penny Opera opens at 8:15 tonight in Fairchild Theatre and continues through Saturday.

Siouxsie & Banshees a screaming success

By JOHN NEILSON
State News Reviewer

Did you ever think you were going to drown? You know, like when you've miscalculated your depth and suddenly there is no more breath inside you and panic starts to well up and you want to cry out but you can't without accelerating the process and maybe you even have your eyes closed but it doesn't matter because you're seeing everything all too vividly anyway? If you could watch a film of yourself at precisely that moment, the soundtrack would probably be music from The Scream.

The Scream (Polydor PD-1-6207) is the debut album by Siouxsie and the Banshees, and suffice it to say it isn't background music. It's the sound of claustrophobia — the suffocated passion that leads up to (but doesn't include) the scream of release. It's also an excellent vinyl exploration into the nether regions of the modern psyche.

Siouxsie and the Banshees have their roots in the earliest ripples of the English punk scene. Vocalist Siouxsie-Siouxsie and bassist Seven Severin were original members of the "Bromley Contingent" of fans that followed the Sex Pistols to their first gigs, and when they decided to become performers themselves the original line-up included Sid Vicious on drums. (This was before Vicious replaced Glen Matlock as the Pistols' bassist).

The connections with the Pistols' ends here, however — musically the two groups are like day and night. Siouxsie herself combines the intensity of Patti Smith's vocals with the fragile coldness of Blondie's (heart of glass indeed), while the band is closest to the new wave fringes inhabited by such groups as Wire and Pere Ubu. Comparisons with some of the Velvet Underground's early work are also valid — Steven Severin took his name from the Velvet's "Venus In Furs," and that song in particular would not be out of place on The Scream.

Songs like "Jigsaw Feeling" and "Switch" deal with fragmentation and schizophrenia, and the former even includes a reference to R.D. Laing's Knots. "Mirage" and "Mental Postcard" look at the thin line between TV and fascism, while "Nicotine Stain" explores a kind of suffocation that is much more common than the drowning scene on the album's cover.

If the songs mentioned above are concerned with some of the roots of modern society's diseases, others on the LP deal more with the symptoms of those illnesses. "Carcass," as the title suggests, is a love song that owes more to The Texas Chainsaw Massacre than to "Silly Love Songs." "Suburban Relapse" tells of the plight of a housewife who snaps under the pressure of her daily chores.

As an added bonus, the Banshees English Top Ten single "Hong Kong Garden" — which was not on the British album — is included here.

Siouxsie and the Banshees' music perfectly complements their lyrical stance. The beat is tense, the guitars brittle, and repeated listenings tend to leave you feeling wound up tighter than a clockspring. The purpose of art is not necessarily to make you feel good, however — it's to make you feel SOMETHING — and on that level The Scream is an unqualified success.

Spyro Gyra's jazz is OK at kiva gig

By DAVE DI MARTINO
State News Reviewer

Spyro Gyra's sparsely-attended concert at McDonel Kiva was a pleasant, if not exactly awe-inspiring, experience.

The Buffalo-based sextet has sold a phenomenal amount of records — a current press blurb boasts that their debut LP alone has sold over 200,000 copies — and currently are touring to promote Morning Dance, their newest venture on the new Infinity label.

Brought to MSU by Showcase Jazz, the group played a solid 90-minute set that proved they don't need the help of hot-shot musicians like the Breckers or John Tropea to establish their own free-wheeling identity.

As Spyro Gyra performed Sunday night, the audience seemed responsive to just about anything they played, which might have made the band feel good, but left me feeling that the audience was reacting to flash rather than substance. Not that the group members aren't capable musicians — saxophonist Jay Beckenstein certainly knows his stuff, and guitarist Chet Catalo, derivative as he is, has no problems with technique. Yet, when I left the concert I felt slightly ill-at-ease, as if I'd just spent 90 minutes in the dentist's office listening to an overly-loud Muzak system.

A large factor in the band's success must be the simplicity and inherent "sweetness" of their music, each one of their compositions is hummable, if nothing else. Unfortunately so are the compositions of Tim Weisberg, famed wimp flutist and otherwise dreary performer — someone who, unfortunately, I couldn't help thinking of when I saw Spyro Gyra perform.

They aren't very challenging musically, of course — but then, challenging music doesn't sell 200,000 copies of someone's record.

Spyro Gyra — and of course Weisberg — play tunes that give them little leeway for fluent improvisation. So much of their music is based on tight arrangements and (occasionally) tricky time signatures that what really seems to be getting all the applause ultimately seems to be the decorative arrangements and little else.

It was odd hearing saxophonist Beckenstein play a Sonny Rollins tune in concert, but after a little listening it became clear that his main musical inspirations seemed to be loosely drawn somewhere between Rollins' "St. Thomas" and "Oleo." Beckenstein's command of the saxophone was, in its own way, as impressive as the Rollins of oh, say Nucleus — but in total that doesn't mean very much. He simply didn't have enough room to stretch out and show what he could do.

It was ironic that one of the most technically capable musicians in the band, keyboardist Tom Schuman, seemed the least interesting soloist. His capabilities on his many synthesizers and his Fender Rhodes were never in doubt, certainly — as he had no trouble at all moving from one to the other in five-second intervals — but his solos, again, seemed all flash and little substance.

Guitarist Catalo's work was occasionally reminiscent of some of Pat Metheny's earliest, and his tone, though a little more up-front than Metheny's, was hardly dissimilar. His contributions to the band were, however, vital; I'd like to see him playing free from the constraints of a typical Spyro Gyra tune.

Both percussionists were more than adequate Sunday night. Drummer Eli Konikoff was a solid, versatile drummer, and percussionist Gerardo Velez was clearly enthusiastic and, in total, not bad at all.

In summary, Spyro Gyra will probably manage to sell a lot more records while they're together — which is, if nothing else, justified by their tightness and professionalism. They aren't very challenging musically, of course — but then, challenging music doesn't sell 200,000 copies of someone's record. Like they say, it's a fine line.

MSU softballers take fifth in regionals

By DAVE JANSSEN
State News Sports Writer

Women's softball coach Dianne Ulibarri may have chosen a bad year to leave MSU. She will take a year's leave to work on her doctorate in philosophy in biomechanics at University of Connecticut, and when she returns, a banner season may have already been completed.

After taking second place in the state tournament behind powerful Western Michigan University, this year's team got an at-large bid to the regionals and grabbed a fifth-place finish. The Spartans finished fifth on the strength of a 22 record at the tournament that took place at the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater this past weekend.

Indiana University, which beat out MSU for the Big Ten title earlier this season, took the regional tournament crown. IU was followed by Western Illinois, Western Michigan and Southern Illinois universities in the 12 team field.

MSU lost its opening game during the weekend, a 3-2 affair at the hands of SIU. Though the Spartans came back to win their next two contests, 11-0 over U-W Whitewater and 6-4 over University of West Virginia, they faltered in the final inning and were eliminated by WIU, 3-2 in their fourth tournament game.

The fifth-place finish was a disappointment to the MSU players, who knew they were only a couple wins away from the championship game and a sure trip to the national tournament. But Ulibarri was pleased by her team's performance, pointing out that MSU will lose only five players to graduation after this season.

Pitchers Nancy Lyons and Sherrie Sprangle, catcher Pam Berlinski, left fielder Carmen King and shortstop Carol Hutchins will be sorely missed next year. "Hutch" led MSU with a .454 tournament batting average while King hit .307 after pacing the Spartans hitting attack for most of the

All anticipation for MSU's baseball team may be on this weekend's Big Ten title showdown with University of Michigan, but the Spartans still must face a doubleheader today against Eastern Michigan, at 1 p.m. at Kobs Field.

The twinbill will be MSU's last chance to improve its 4-8 record against Mid-American conference teams.

In MSU's only previous meeting with the Hurons, the two teams split a doubleheader at Ypsilanti April 18. Eastern Michigan won the first game 3-2, and the Spartans won the nightcap 8-5.

"We know they are a very good team," assistant coach Frank Pellerin said in evaluating the Hurons. "It will be two more tough games. They are well coached and play good fundamental ball. They would certainly like to beat us, too."

As the Spartans carry an eight-game winning streak into today's twinbill, they will be facing a 36-24 Eastern Michigan club.

The Hurons are coming from a twinbill sweep over Detroit 10-9 and 7-2. They are currently tied for third place in the MAC with a 9-5 mark. They won the conference last year.

Their top player is shortstop Brian Stemberger, an All-MAC and Midwest regional team selection last year. Stemberger leads the team in hitting (.333), RBI's (34) and home runs (7).

Sophomore Steve Kruse (3-1, 1.62 ERA) is scheduled to start the first game for the Spartans, but the MSU coaches are undecided on who will start the second game.

In Spartan statistics, Rodger Bastien took over the MSU batting leadership over the weekend with a .354 average. Chris Dorr is second with a .341 mark while Robinson is third with a .338 average.

Bastien also leads in home runs with five. Leftfielder Ken Robinson leads the Spartans in RBI's with 31.

MSUINGS: Starting pitcher Jim Cotter, who severely twisted his knee last Wednesday, had his knee scoped Friday. Surgery was not needed, and it will take four to five weeks to rehabilitate the injury, according to assistant coach Pellerin.

Spartans complete a very successful season

By JEFF MINAHAN
State News Sports Writer

For the first time since early January, the MSU lacrosse team had a chance to relax Sunday as members officially ended the 1979 season with the annual alumni game on Old College Field, followed by a banquet at the Village Market Restaurant in East Lansing.

The atmosphere was loose as players from past teams, including current coaches Nevin Kanner and Boku Hendrickson, donned helmets and gloves to test their talents against the most successful lacrosse team in MSU history.

While both teams took the game seriously to some degree, the varsity squad did get in its share of clowning around.

The Spartans freely exchanged positions, with almost everyone taking a turn in goal while goalie Bill McGinniss, looking quite lost at the attack position, tried his luck at offense.

In between the clowning, some goals were scored, with the alumni coming out on top in a shortened game 10-8.

It was early in the fourth quarter when the varsity squad decided to carry out its yearly ritual of depositing both coaches in the Red Cedar River, much to the dismay of Kanner and Hendrickson, who attempted to escape to the safe confines of Kobs field, only to be run down by a host of varsity players.

Before it was over, almost every player found himself in the waters of the Red Cedar, and another lacrosse season had ended.

Coaches and players then cleaned up and gathered at the Village Market to award the achievements of the past season.

Kevin Willits received the lion's share of the honors, taking awards for the most valuable player, total points, most ground balls and the Captain's Award with Ken Davis. Willits set a single season scoring record this year and ended up with a total of 97 points.

Davis also won the Unsung Hero award while Juan Figueroa took the Rookie Newcomer award. Dan McNulty the Most Improved award and seniors Bill Bromley, Roy Griffiths, Juan Figueroa, Mark Pinto, Joe Poltowicz, Bill McGinniss, Paul Lubanski and Davis won the senior awards.

Manager Deb Rogers was honored as the first letter winner of the season, and alumnus Val Washington was announced as the first recipient of the Distinguished Alumni Award. Washington was also the keynote speaker of the banquet.

The Dented Helmet Award went to team clown, junior Shawn Grady.

Ten Spartans were also announced as being nominated for All-Midwest honors, which will be decided this week.

Netters grab at-large berth

The MSU women's tennis team was among three college teams to receive an at-large bid to the Midwest Regional of the AIAW tournament.

Indiana, Ohio State, Northwestern, Wisconsin and Michigan all won their state tournaments and received automatic berths. The Spartans were the first to get an at-large bid, followed by Southern Illinois at Carbondale and Illinois State in the eight-team dual-match journey.

Ricky Flowers and Calvin Thomas won their individual heats in the quarter-mile. Flowers ran a 48.2 time and Thomas ran a 48.9 time.

"I don't think the rain out will affect the team one way or the other," coach Jim Bibbs said of his team, which enters the Big Ten meet next weekend.

N-plant hotlines installed

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Nuclear Regulatory Commission is installing telephone hotlines to link the nation's 70 commercial nuclear power plants with agency headquarters, NRC Chairperson Joseph M. Hendrie said Monday.

Hendrie declined at several points to call for stronger authority to require states to develop emergency plans for use in the event of a Three Mile Island-type accident in the future.

Senate subcommittee endorsed last week. While the operators of all licensed nuclear plants are required to develop emergency plans for the surrounding area, there is no such requirement for the 50 states. Officials say 12 states have plans which have NRC approval. But there are 41 nuclear facilities in 16 states without such plans.

De-annexation petition faces problems

(continued from page 1) "The law on this point is in some doubt in my mind," East Lansing City Attorney Dennis McGinty said. "I don't know whether the Boundary Commission replaced the Home Rule Cities Act."

Because it is questionable whether the act allows de-annexation, it is also unclear what jurisdiction would review the petition and set the election date.

The election process for annexation was wiped out by the amendment. Ingham County Clerk Lingg Brewer said if the State Boundary Commission does not have jurisdiction in setting elections, the county Board of Commissioners would have authority to do so.

James Hyde, executive secretary of the Boundary Commission, said that nowhere in the amendment is it stated that the commission has or does not have jurisdiction over setting election procedures for de-annexation questions.

Hyde said he believes the amendment to the Home Rule Cities Act wiped out the procedure for setting elections in annexation and de-annexation cases. The act only mentions detachment once aside from the section that was amended, he added.

Several legal and procedural issues could also prevent the de-annexation question from getting on the ballot. Brewer said that anyone could ask for a new census to make sure that 1 percent of the registered voters in the city have signed the petition. This could stall the question from getting on the ballot until a new census is taken - a procedure that could drag on for several months, he said.

Benefit aids protesters

By DEBBIE CREEMERS
State News Staff Writer

Music drifted from the second floor of the Union until after midnight Sunday as local musicians staged a coffeehouse benefit for 14 people arrested at the Big Rock nuclear demonstration in December.

The 14, including three MSU students, were arrested and charged with trespassing at the Big Rock nuclear plant near Charlevoix, Mich., Dec. 2.

The arrest followed an attempt to symbolically dismantle the Consumers Power plant with a four-foot orange styrofoam monkey wrench. They were arrested before they reached the plant.

The benefit to help pay the court costs of the protesters featured music by Victor McManemy, Sheila Ritter, Barb Hutchinson, the Barrie Brothers, Joel Mabius and Schroeder and Christian.

Eight of the protesters showed up during the intermission, along with the group's lawyer, James Olsen.

Kathryn Tracy, a MSU senior majoring in marketing and transportation, described the events leading up to the group's arrest.

"We met in Traverse City on Dec. 1, where quite a few of us took part in civil disobedience training," she said. "We were arrested the next day as we marched toward the plant."

Tracy said the group's trial will probably come up in July or August, if it is not thrown out of court.

Tracy called Big Rock "the most dangerous plant in the U.S." "It's a very old plant, and it's exempt from many of the safety standards applied to plants constructed later," she said.

Chuck Will, one of the 14 arrested, also participated in the May 6 anti-nuclear demonstration in Washington, D.C.

He said he went to Washington after listening to Governor Milliken speak on the possibility of a nuclear accident in Michigan after the Three Mile Island incident.

"I listened to Milliken say Michigan was ready for a nuclear accident and it really pissed me off," Will said.

Will said nuclear energy only provides 12 to 15 percent of the electricity the U.S. currently uses, "or three percent of its energy."

"When you subtract the energy it takes to transport the energy, it only amounts to one percent," Will said. "They're really misleading Americans on the importance of nuclear power."

Olsen said nuclear power originated in the "Atoms For Peace" program begun during the Eisenhower administration. "We wanted to rid ourselves of the disgrace of Hiroshima," he explained.

But Olsen said the scientists and industries approached by the government at first refused to touch nuclear power, claiming it was too risky.

"The Price-Anderson Act passed in 1954 persuaded companies to go with nuclear power by establishing a $500 million liability ceiling in any one accident," he said.

Olsen called the group leaders "because they called attention to the safety problem before Three Mile Island spotlighted it." He said the case is important because it is the first civil disobedience case involving nuclear power in Michigan.

"No movement in this country is meaningful without the right to demonstrate behind it," he said.

STUDENT SCORES BIG IN NATIONAL COMPETITION

Sports photographer wins awards

By CARRIE A. THORN
State News Staff Writer
Although Studio Art 200 doesn't really produce award-winning photographers, David Underwood has turned out to be an exception to the rule.

Underwood, a graduate student in intramural administration, is a student photographer for IM Sports-West. He recently won two top awards at the National Intramural Recreational Sports Association convention in Atlanta, Ga.

Underwood won the awards for photographs in two categories, overall black-and-white and individual sport black-and-white.

Underwood said he took the photography class during spring term 1977 and, because of his interest in photography, began freelancing for the IM.

"I really didn't know what my chances were of winning when I entered my photos in the contest," he said.

He was asked to enter the competition by Larry Sierra, associate director of IM Sports, Underwood said, because "he went (to the competition) last year and came home and told me that I had done better stuff (than the photos that won the awards)."

Underwood, who competed with photographers from several states, won the awards in two out of the five possible black-and-white categories for pictures of a woman swimmer and a woman tennis player.

"You can even see the look of concentration on her (the woman swimmer's) face," David Stewart, an associate director in the IM Sports-West and Underwood's supervisor, said.

"I knew the photograph was good, mostly because it captures so much in one picture," Underwood said. "I had no idea that I would win, though — it's the first contest I have ever entered."

Underwood said he would continue with photography as a hobby "until it becomes economically feasible to have a business of my own."

A display across from Office 205 in IM Sports-West has been set up with Underwood's photographs for public viewing.

MSU's hang-gliding club to hold special meeting for all interested

Ever wonder what it would be like to fly like a bird? The 18 members of the newly formed MSU Hang-Gliding Association get exactly that experience every week.

Tonight at 7 in the Shaw Hall lower lounge, the club will hold a special "get-acquainted" meeting for anyone interested in hang-gliding. Films will be shown and the guest speaker will be the regional examiner of the United States Hang-Gliding Association. A 35-foot glider will be on display.

Gary Harkins, a certified hang-gliding instructor, organized the group and spends much of his time working with the club.

The first full day of flying lessons and ground school instruction costs $50. Afterwards, the cost is $120 for three days of flying and lessons. The expense is necessary because the club does not yet have the funds to buy its own equipment. In order to offer better services at reduced rates to members in the future, the club's officers have requested the Mid-Michigan Alumni Association to provide funding for equipment.

Currently, the club flies at the Warren Dunes State Park near Benton Harbor on weekends. Shirey described the area as "one of the best training spots in the whole United States" because the sand makes the landing much easier. The club uses a local training site in Waverly on the weekdays.

Lowenthal said all new members who sign up during May and the beginning of June receive a crack at a free first day's lessons — a $50 value.

The club charges $5 for dues, which goes towards the programming of films and guest speakers. Lowenthal and Shirey said anyone in the University community interested in learning how to fly is welcome to attend tonight's meeting.

X-car rates begin

CHICAGO (UPI) — Reduced insurance rates for owners of the new General Motors "X-body" series autos take effect in 22 states Monday, Allstate Insurance Co. said.

The company plans to offer the lower rates — which include a 35 percent reduction in comprehensive coverage — to another 20 states when the states' insurance departments grant them approval.

"We believe that the damage confinement and repair-ability features built into the 'X-body' cars will result in lower repair costs," William P. Gregg, vice president-claims, said in a statement.

"Certain other features in the automotive design should have the effect of reducing theft," he said. "Since claims on these cars should cost less than on cars without these design features, we will charge less to insure them."

X-body cars include the 1980 Chevrolet Citation, Oldsmobile Omega, Buick Skylark and Pontiac Phoenix.

Data supplied by an Allstate subsidiary auto repair research center contributed to the design of the autos.

Amendments to academic laws argued

Academic Council will discuss the proposed bylaws amendment on the reorganization of basic educational and administrative units today at 3:15 in the Con Con room of the International Center.

The council will also discuss the guidelines for course formats and credits which the University Committee on Academic Policy and the University Committee on Curriculum has been working on for the past two years.

Samuel Moore II, professor of administration and higher education, will present to the council a report on the incomplete grading policy.

UNION EYES COLLEGE WORKERS

UAW outside Michigan

DETROIT (UPI) — For the first time, the United Auto Workers Union is moving out of Michigan to organize college workers.

The UAW is trying to organize office workers at Yale and Syracuse universities and administrators at the prestigious Eastern schools say the recruitment may be an attempt to revive declining union membership.

"You may wonder why a Detroit-based automobile union is interested in Yale," said Yale director of administrative services, Radley H. Daly. "One of the reasons may be the fact that across the country union membership has been falling off in the last several years."

"Because of this unions have been aggressively seeking new members outside their traditional area of interest," Daly said.

UAW President Douglas A. Fraser discarded suggestions that the nation's largest industrial union was interested in the universities only to boost membership.

"The UAW's average dues-paying membership last year was the highest it has been in the last five years and was third highest in our history," Fraser said. "We don't organize people just to get their dues money. We think we can be helpful in a variety of ways to those people at Yale and Syracuse."

For the most part, employees at the nation's college campuses are not unionized. As a result, labor leaders view the campuses as ripe grounds for recruitment.

If the 1.5 million member UAW is successful in its recruitment drive, it would represent the 2,800 Yale workers and 900 Syracuse employees. But the proposal has met with opposition from the college administrators.

The UAW has filed a petition with the National Labor Relations Board requesting an election at Syracuse. In a move to delay the election for weeks or even months, university officials have challenged the size of the bargaining unit.

The UAW represents 2,500 workers at five Michigan colleges: Eastern Michigan at Ypsilanti, Northern Michigan at Marquette, Oakland University at Rochester, Wayne County Community College and Detroit's Wayne State University.

Youths said to face heart disease risks

ANN ARBOR (UPI) — Many youngsters are becoming early high-risk candidates for coronary heart disease because they get too little exercise and eat too much junk food, says a University of Michigan researcher.

Professor Thomas B. Gilliam of the U-M department of physical education, said Monday his study of Michigan school children since 1975 has turned up conditions associated chiefly with sedentary and overweight adults.

Of the 400 children tested, he said nearly 50 percent showed one or more risk factors for heart disease, including abnormally high cholesterol levels, high blood pressure, overweight or family history of coronary disease.

And while those conditions do not necessarily mean a heart attack in the near future, Gilliam said, children with them are already forming the habits and that could lead to one in later years.

"Children are transported to and from school, extracurricular and even sports activities. They sit for long hours watching television and consume lots of high calorie junk food," he said.

"As a result, children are showing increasing evidence of high cholesterol, high blood pressure, obesity and other conditions which have been shown to be associated with heart disease in adults."

Under a grant from the National Institute of Health, Gilliam is conducting a three-year study to see if vigorous exercise can significantly reduce blood fats and blood pressure in children as it has in many adults.

"The early evidence suggests that it can," he said.

Gilliam cited a recent pilot study with 62 third and fourth graders in which half participated in their normal physical education classes twice a week while the other half were exposed to 12 weeks of intense, rigorous activity four days a week.

"Tests at the beginning and end of the program indicated that children in the experimental group whose blood analysis showed high blood lipid fats were able to significantly reduce these within the 12-week program."

Gilliam said researchers hope the full three-year study will show that vigorous physical activity in early childhood can substantially reduce the risk of coronary heart disease during adulthood.

Three-story fall fatal to elderly man

A 72-year-old blind male resident of the Lansing Roselawn Manor Nursing Home fell out of a third-floor window at the home Friday and died at Lansing General Hospital Sunday.

Dan Wilson, who resided at the nursing home at 707 Armstrong Road, was taken to the hospital Friday and apparently died from injuries sustained in the fall, Lansing Police said.

Police said it is not yet known how Wilson got near the window or how he fell out. There is no evidence of foul play but the accident is under investigation, police said.
