Moses Turner to be interviewed today

A possible successor for Eldon R. Nonnamaker, outgoing vice president for student affairs and services, will be interviewed today by the Executive Committee of Academic Council and selected faculty and students.

Executive Committee members are expected to interview Moses Turner, director of student life and Texas Tech University, this afternoon, Steve Spivey, Academic Council Steering Committee member, said.

A student group chosen by the Steering Committee will also interview the candidate tonight, said Frederick Horne, Steering Committee member and professor of chemistry. Selected students and faculty members were chosen by the Steering Committee at the request of President Mackey. The interview process is designed to provide Mackey with student and faculty input in choosing Nonnamaker's successor.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEMBERS originally requested that Mackey postpone his recommendation for vice president of student affairs and services until the October Board of Trustees meeting.

The postponement would have enabled committee members to have "a broader discussion of the role of the student affairs vice president as well as a less hasty interview process," said Lester Mandersheid, chairperson of the Steering Committee.

Mackey informed Mandersheid Thursday that he had decided against the committee's recommendation.

At last Monday's Steering Committee meeting Mackey expressed an urgent need to fill Nonnamaker's position at the beginning of the academic year.

"The beginning of the academic year is an important time," Mackey said. "Delay in assembling the administrative office magnifies itself all the way down."

MACKAY ALSO TOLD the Steering Committee if action was not taken on Turner's recommendation as soon as possible there was a chance that MSU could lose him as a candidate, said Carl Page, Steering Committee member and professor of computer science.

Though Mackey rejected the committee's request, he informed them that their input would be considered in his final decision.

"We asked him point blank that if we were to reject Turner, how much weight would that carry in his decision," Page said. "He said it might cause him to reconsider."

"But he (Mackey) thinks he has a very fine person and that we'll (the Executive Committee) be pleased with his recommendation," he added.

Turner, 41, holds a doctor of education degree from Washington State University with a major in higher education and a minor in administration. He was administrative associate and assistant dean of students at Washington State University, from 1972 to 1977. In September 1977 he was appointed director of Student Life at Texas Tech under Mackey.

IF TURNER'S NOMINATION is approved by the Board of Trustees he will become the third black to be appointed to a high level administrative position since Mackey took office. Reactions and recommendations from the Executive Committee, faculty and students concerning Turner's nomination will be presented at the Board of Trustees meeting Friday.

"We (the Executive Committee) thought the man was going to get picked anyway," Page said, "but we wanted to try to get as much input from faculty and students as possible."

Turner was interviewed by the Board of Trustees Saturday. The Board also interviewed Joseph E. Dickinson of the University of Michigan, who is a possible successor to Leslie Scott, outgoing vice president for University Development.

'Anti-nuke' rally attracts celebs

By MARIA PALLAIS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Approximately 200,000 anti-nuclear protesters gathered Sunday in Manhattan to hear big-name rock stars and activists such as Jane Fonda and Ralph Nader in the largest such demonstration in the nation's history.

Police at the six-hour rally, sponsored by the Committee of the Musicians United for Safe Energy, said by late afternoon up to 200,000 had gathered. The largest previous nuclear rally was held in Washington in May and attracted 100,000 persons.

The New York rally was one of as many as a dozen being held during the weekend from Washington State to Vermont. It was the major public event in a week of concerts, climaxed Sunday by major rock 'n' roll performers who donated their performances in an effort to raise money for political activity and opponents of nuclear power.

Supported by several hundred protesters shouting their support, more than 130 demonstrators blocked the main gate of the Vermont Yankee nuclear power plant at Vernon on Sunday during an attempt to disrupt the plant's annual refueling.

VERMONT STATE POLICE arrested an undetermined number of protesters on unspecified charges. Officers said some had to be dragged to waiting buses for the trip to Brattleboro's Municipal Building for processing. Protest leaders said another demonstration would be held on Monday.

Before heading for the Vernon, Vt. plant, the Vermont Yankee Decommissioning Alliance, a coalition of groups from Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont, held a rally in Brattleboro. Spokesperson for the group said the purpose of the plant demonstration was to get the issue of nuclear power into the courts.

The New York rally was a colorful spectacle with many in the crowd wearing blaring red "Anti-Nuke" t-shirts, and waving banners that read "Phase Out" and "No Nukes." A single-engine plane hovered above, flying streamers that were inscribed with "No Nukes."

The rally site was a sandy sanitary landfill along the Hudson River at the southernmost tip of Manhattan island. The area, eventual site of a housing project, looks over New York Harbor at the Statue of Liberty.

With the sound of punk-rock music drowning their words, Jane Fonda and her husband, Tom Hayden, briefed the press before addressing the crowd. The couple reiterated its commitment to a solar energy society.

"We are here to propose a conversion program from a nuclear to a non-nuclear society, community by community, state by state, region by region, to an age of solar energy and renewable resources," said Hayden, a well-known anti-war activist of the '60s.

FOLLOWING THE BRIEFING, the couple walked to the open-air stage and Hayden congratulated the crowd for, what he called, one of the best demonstrations ever held in the nation.

One of the first speakers to address the crowd was Bella Abzug, a former congresswoman who said the anti-nuclear movement "can begin to develop a certain political influence in the next presidential election, provided it deals with the broad questions of the solar and nuclear energy lobbies" in this country.

"It's time for the American people to say no more... Are you going to allow the oil and the nuclear lobbies to take over?" she asked the crowd, which shouted "No!"

Wearing a red "Anti-Nuke" t-shirt, Joe Forehand, 17, of New York, a spectator at the rally, commented, "There are safer energy forms to pursue (that) are fool-proof," and could avoid nuclear accidents such as the one at the Three Mile Island plant near Harrisburg, Pa., last March.

Asked whether the crowd was arriving for the music, the youth said "No, most of the people here are anti-nuclear."

But, 30-year-old Aaron Kaye, former Yippie activist known for throwing pies in the face of politicians, said although he came to the rally "on behalf of survival," he also wanted to enjoy the music.

Maggi Kuhn, founder of the Gray Panthers, an activist group for senior citizens, said: "We are calling for a crash program to put solar panels on every rooftop."

Others on the agenda included performers Pete Seeger, Graham Nash, Tom Paxton, Bonnie Raitt, and Jackson Browne.

More than 200,000 people attended a demonstration in New York's Battery Park protesting the dangers of nuclear power Saturday. The speakers included Jane Fonda, Tom Hayden and Ralph Nader.

McHenry replaces Young at U.N.; suspects his job will be difficult

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Donald F. McHenry took the oath of office Sunday as the United States ambassador to the United Nations and predicted he will have a tough first year.

"We probably face the most difficult General Assembly that we have faced in the last 10 years," McHenry said at the White House ceremony.

He said he didn't expect quick solutions to all the world's problems. "Indeed, we will be lucky if we can come up with the solutions to a very few," he said.

McHenry was second in command to his predecessor, Andrew Young, and said Sunday that as ambassador he would continue to seek help from Young.

YOUNG IS PLANNING to set up a non-profit consulting firm in Atlanta to push for various objectives, including a more favorable U.S. policy toward the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Young praised McHenry's abilities, and also predicted that the upcoming General Assembly session would be a difficult one for the United States.

Using a footnote analogy, he said he was passing on the baton to McHenry even though "I wasn't getting tired." Young resigned under pressure after admitting that he told less than the truth about an unauthorized meeting he held with a PLO representative.

"I really have no regrets," Young said. President Carter called McHenry a "foreign policy professional" who could continue Young's work. He said McHenry had shown coolness under pressure in his airport negotiations with Soviet officials last month over the status of Bolshoi ballerina Ludmila Vlasova.

CARTER SAID THE choice of McHenry signals to the world that the United States wishes to bridge gaps between itself and poorer nations, and that "We are committed to ending racism and apartheid in Southern Africa, and we will never yield."

Carter volunteered that it was "absolutely and totally false" that Jewish groups had sought Young's ouster. (continued on page 16)

Chinese and Soviets meet in Moscow to discuss relations and differences

By STEVEN R. HURST
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW — A Chinese delegation arrived Sunday to open reconciliation talks after two decades of chilly relations between Moscow and Peking, but the sessions begin against a background of propaganda blasts between the two communist giants.

The Chinese delegation leader, Deputy Foreign Minister Wang Yiping, was greeted at the airport by his Soviet counterpart, China specialist Leonid F. Ilyichov. The two men shook hands warmly and disappeared into a meeting room for about five minutes. Then Wang's delegation drove to downtown Moscow.

A source close to the negotiations said the talks would open Tuesday.

The official Chinese news agency Xinhua (Shinhua) expressed doubt about Soviet sincerity in trying to settle the two countries' deep-seated disputes. It accused the Soviets of trying to "create suspicions over the motives of the Chinese side," citing Soviet statements that China had become "a hotbed of war danger."

ON THE EVE of Wang's arrival, the Soviet news agency Tass carried Vietnamese charges of Chinese bad faith in negotiations with Hanoi.

The Soviet Union and China have been feuding since 1956. The animosity was touched off by differences in ideology. In part, the Chinese demanded adherence to rigid Stalinist tactics and a grassroots political line while the Soviets were moving toward a more liberalized industrial state under Nikita Khrushchev, a direction in which China now is heading.

Neither side has said specifically what the talks will include, but sources say the discussions will touch upon seven main points:

- A delineation of basic principles of relations between the countries.
- The issue of hegemony, or controls of spheres of influence. This issue will probably include the Chinese invasion of Vietnam last February and the Soviet-backed Vietnamese invasion of Cambodia in late December.

- An exchange of opinions on science, technology, sports, tourism and other cooperation.

- A common stand by the two sides in identifying what problems have led to their split.
- A decision on what the two sides will say publicly about the talks.

- Procedural questions on continuing the talks.
- Where the next round will be held. The Chinese demand they be moved back and forth between Moscow and Peking. A source said the Russians have so far refused meeting in the Chinese capital for the next round.

China first proposed the reconciliation talks last April after it notified the Soviets it would not renew their 30-year treaty of alliance, which expires next spring.

DNR chief says much too costly to clean water

By United Press International

State natural resources officials say toxic waste contamination in Michigan could be so widespread "we can't afford to clean it up" in some areas.

The accumulation of industrial wastes and other toxic materials threatens groundwater supplies in some areas, said Jack Bails, chief of the Department of Natural Resources' enforcement division.

"It is to the point where we may find it cheaper to simply write off the groundwater supplies for large portions of southern Michigan," Bails said.

"Chemical contamination may be so widespread and pervasive that we can't afford to clean it up," he said.

THE DISCOVERY OF two illegal toxic waste dumps in northern Oakland County and other similar sites found earlier in southern Michigan only amount to "the tip of the iceberg," Bails said.

Many wastes are "10 times more dangerous than PBB could ever have been and groundwater supplies in many areas are probably contaminated," said Dr. James Truchan, head of the enforcement division's civil litigation section.

"It's a safe bet that anywhere in Michigan where we have a chemical manufacturing concern or an industry using chemicals and discharging them, we will find some kind of problem," he said.

The contamination problem apparently has been compounded in some cases by inadequate enforcement, the Detroit Free Press said Sunday.

A check of DNR files showed cases of lax enforcement and some instances in which department field employees actually witnessed chemical contamination but never reported it, the newspaper said.

IN AN APPARENT housecleaning move aimed at beefing up enforcement, William

It is to the point where we may find it cheaper to simply write off the groundwater supplies for large portions of southern Michigan.—Jack Bails, chief of the Department of Natural Resources' enforcement division.

Turney, head of the DNR's Environmental Protection Bureau, last week was "Re-assigned away from environmental questions."

State Natural Resources Director Howard Tanner said there will be additional personnel changes "down through the ranks" of Turney's bureau, which is made up of field employees.

Tanner had set up Bails' separate enforcement division last year in an effort to upgrade legal action against environmental lawbreakers. Previously, Turney's division had been in charge of enforcement.

"I feel that we did everything we knew how to do and we were expected to do," Turney said Saturday, adding his staff acted properly in enforcement activities with very few exceptions.

But litigation specialist John Shauver disagreed, saying Turney's bureau often did its best to work around the civil litigation section.

"We have 50 to 75 sites that may be truly dangerous to human health," he said. "But I can't be sure that's all."

"Oakland County landfills were not on our original list. Our division didn't know about them and, to this day, we've not seen those files."

Haslett towing service has license suspended

A Haslett towing service won't be towing cars this week due to a five day license suspension by the East Lansing assistant city manager.

Haslett Super Service Station, 1619 Haslett Road, was put on suspension and one year probation by the city for using a "hook up charge" — a fee for releasing a car before it's towed and for failing to immediately notify police when cars were towed.

The failure to notify police resulted in some subjects reporting their cars stolen, Assistant City Manager Arthur T. Carney said Sunday.

The problem with the hook up charge, Carney said, was not that it was illegal, but that the fee wasn't listed on the rate schedule required to be filed with the city clerk.

The Haslett station provides towing service to various East Lansing merchants. The suspension means that merchants must either hire a new service or do without towing for a week, Carney said.

The severity of the suspension is proportional to the degree of the proven offense, Carney said. On this first offense, the towing service is also put on probation for a year. Other violations in this time period could result in stronger penalties, he said.

Out of about 14 complaints against the service, one instance of a hook up charge and four instances of failure to notify the police were proven, Carney said.

Spanish governor shot during stroll

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain (AP) — Armed persons shot and killed the military governor of Guipuzcoa province Sunday as he strolled with his wife on San Sebastian's seaside boardwalk. Police said they believed the assassins were Basque separatist guerrillas.

Gen. Lorenzo Gonzalez-Valles Sanchez, 59, was the third Spanish military man murdered in the past three days and the 10th this year.

The assassination put fresh pressure on Premier Adolfo Suarez, already drawing criticism from leading Spanish generals for failure to stem Europe's worst political violence.

One general was quoted in a newspaper interview as saying the army should intervene if regular police cannot handle the battle against terrorism.

After the Sanchez slaying, Suarez called the joint chiefs of staff into an emergency meeting Sunday in Madrid, while police closed the border to France and said they were searching for commandos of the Basque separatist organization ETA, which has claimed responsibility for the nine previous military assassinations this year.

Developing nations gain in economic growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — With India showing considerable strength, the underdeveloped countries outpaced developed nations in economic growth last year, the World Bank said Sunday.

It also said India was the largest borrower of bank resources, obtaining a total of just under $1.2 billion, followed by Indonesia, Brazil and Mexico.

In its annual report, the bank said growth of all developing countries, excluding major oil exporters, was 4.9 percent in 1978, more than a full percentage point above the industrialized nations' 3.6 percent growth rate.

A healthy export performance was one major cause of recent growth in the developing world — especially in those countries with more advanced and diversified economies, the report said.

It said growth in South Asia, dominated statistically by India, was 8.9 percent, while in East Asia, it was 8.9 percent. However, the nations of sub-Saharan Africa lagged badly with growth of only 2.9 percent.

Pope asks for blessing in upcoming growth

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II asked a crowd of 50,000 Sunday to pray for him on his upcoming U.S. visit so that he might accomplish his service in the land of Washington.

He said that on his tour of Ireland and the United States, beginning next Saturday in Dublin, he will be fulfilling a service for the glory of God and the good of men, my beloved brothers and sisters.

The pontiff, who addressed the crowd in St. Peter's Square before his traditional noon blessing, flies to Boston Oct. 1 and then to New York the next day to speak before the U.N. General Assembly. During the six-city U.S. tour, which ends Oct. 7, he will meet privately with President Carter and his family at the White House.

The Polish-born pope called his trip to Ireland a pilgrimage that is a clear sign of how the Holy See and the entire church share the merits as well as the sufferings and tests of the Irish people.

I express my indestructible faith that my visit to Ireland will serve to the great cause of peace and conciliation, so much desired by the entire Irish nation," he said.

Local officials say Indians still "servants"

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Indians trying to enforce zoning regulations on their Fort Hall Reservation have been told by some local officials that nothing has changed in a century and they are like servants to the white man.

When the Indians talk about rights they should remember it's like a master-servant relationship," said Deputy Power County Prosecutor Ben Cavness. The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. This is the white man's case; there are more of us than there are of them. If the treaty gives them rights, treaties can be amended."

But on the other side of the dispute is Dan Mabey of the trial land use commission.

We are a domestic sovereign nation, and we control the land," he said. Throughout our history we have lost our rights because we have not enforced them. We must turn that around."

The dispute arose in January 1977 when Interior Secretary Thomas Kleppe approved an Indian ordinance giving the tribes land use and zoning authority over all land on the reservation — including land previously sold by the tribes to private parties.

Residents survive plane crash into home

MIRAMAR, Fla. (AP) — Four people died Sunday when their twin-engine airplane crashed into a home shortly after takeoff from the Broward County airport, police said.

A woman and four teen-agers in the house escaped virtually unscathed. Identities of the victims were not immediately available.

I heard a big, loud crash," said 15-year-old Maxine Hemming. She, her mother, sister and two friends fled to the pool behind the Hemmings' house.

I didn't know what it was," she said.

My sister grabbed me and pulled me back to the back of the house. My mother was running around grabbing everybody. We didn't know what had happened, but we all ran."

The home was owned by Archie and Hillary Hemming. Neighbors said the Hemmings are British and moved to Miramar about a year ago.

Police said Hemming, a construction engineer, was at work when the Beechcraft plunged into the front of his one-story home, destroying the living and dining rooms.

Jordan a participant in "wild" L.A. party

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hamilton Jordan, facing possible appointment of a special prosecutor over allegations of cocaine use, is being described as a participant in a "licentious" 1977 party in Los Angeles.

Leo Wyler, a former Carter fund-raiser, says Jordan and two other White House staff members attended a party at his home. And he told CBS News Thursday night that he felt their approach to this relaxation was one of . . . drugs and girls.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles Herald Examiner reported that the FBI is contacting actress Shirley MacLaine and several others who were present at any of four California parties with Jordan in the fall of 1977. An FBI agent said the agency was looking into certain allegations involving narcotics use" by Jordan.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said, as he has before, that Jordan has never used cocaine, and he said Wyler's description of the party at his home was not accurate. Jordan told CBS News that if a special prosecutor was appointed, he would not resign or take a leave of absence.

NRC puts price on 3-Mile Island

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Three Mile Island nuclear accident drove an estimated 144,000 persons from their homes and cost residents near the plant $18.2 million in evacuation expenses and lost wages, according to a survey conducted for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

The study also found that nearly one in five persons living near the disabled reactor has considered moving elsewhere because of their continuing fears of nuclear accidents and radioactive emissions.

The independent survey concluded that the nation's worst accident had profound and adverse economic and social consequences for most people residing within 40 miles of the plant.

The survey, the first detailed socio-economic study of the March 28 accident at the complex near Harrisburg, was conducted for the NRC by Mountain West Research Inc.

Details of the survey were published Sunday in The Philadelphia Inquirer which said it obtained a copy of the report.

KARL ABRAHAM, a spokesperson for the NRC's regional office in King of Prussia, said in a telephone interview that he was unfamiliar with the contents of the survey and that he was unsure the NRC had seen the report.

The survey was conducted by telephone between July 23 and Aug. 6, and involved 4,585 persons living in some 1,500 households.

Although some residents went as far as California and Oklahoma, the average evacuation was 100 miles, and the average stay was five days, according to the survey. Many residents did not leave only because they feared losing their jobs.

Two out of every three children under 5 years of age and three of every four pregnant women left during the emergency.

The main reason for leaving, the survey found, was the discovery of a hydrogen bubble in the Unit 2 reactor on March 30, which threatened the worst possible outcome — a "melt-down" of the reactor's radioactive core.

OTHER REASONS FOR the evacuation, the survey said, were conflicting reports on the seriousness of the situation and the expectation that government officials would order an evacuation.

The extraordinary expenses of those who had left averaged $100 per household. About 19,000 evacuees lost wages; most of them stayed with friends or relatives, the survey said.

The survey also showed that: • 22 percent of the respondents said some member of their family suffered extreme emotional upset during the two-week emergency period, and about half of all households said their normal activities were disrupted during the crisis.

• Residents ranked Gov. Dick Thornburgh and the NRC as the most reliable official sources of information. President Carter and Metropolitan Edison Co., part owner of the plant, were given "least reliable" ratings.

• Local television and radio were ranked as the media providing the most useful information. Network television was found somewhat less useful. Newspapers and magazines were called least useful.

African nation celebrates

By RICHARD TOMKINS
Associated Press Writer

BANGUI, Central African Republic — Jubilant crowds toppled a gigantic statue of deposed Emperor Bokassa I Sunday as heavily armed French soldiers guarded key roads and weaponless local troops swept up debris from a looting binge that followed Bokassa's bloodless ouster.

A happy throng swarmed up to army headquarters and, as unarmed Central African soldiers watched, hauled down the statue, bringing it crashing to the pavement.

Bokassa, who seized power in 1966 from David Dacko, and later appointed himself emperor, was toppled late Thursday night in a French-backed coup led by Dacko. At the time, Bokassa was in Libya attempting to obtain financing for his tottering regime in exchange for granting Libya a military base in the northern part of his nation.

THE DETHRONED EMPEROR flew to France Friday from Libya but was denied the right to leave his plane. France on Friday sent 400 to 500 French troops to the Central African Republic to help Dacko solidify his control over the former French colony.

Bokassa's blue-and-white Caravelle jet sat on the tarmac under a bright sun at Evreux. Officials said the 26 other people in Bokassa's entourage were allowed to leave the plane for a few hours Saturday night, just long enough to rest and refresh themselves.

His sudden arrival in France, his second homeland, posed a sticky legal problem for authorities here, but they were adamant Bokassa would be forced to leave the country as soon as a place could be found to send him.

The French soldiers were sent in from neighboring countries at Dacko's request, ostensibly "to meet threats to the people's safety."

The French Sunday were patrolling important intersections and roadways throughout this sprawling capital on the Ubangi River, and guarding stores along Avenue Boganda, the city's main thoroughfare, where hundreds of persons looted Friday and Saturday in the coup's aftermath.

MSU prof's account of Soviet injustice banned

By SUE ROBACH
State News Staff Writer

Soviet Union censors have banned a book written by an MSU history professor that was to have been exhibited at the Moscow International Book Fair Sept. 4. The book, "Crimean Tatars" by Alan W. Fisher was one of about 40 books confiscated by Russian authorities Sept. 3. "Crimean Tatars" was the first of a series of books published by the Hoover Institution Press at Stanford University on the history and development of the non-Russian nationalities in the Soviet Union. As was reported by the press, seven Soviet officials went through the English language books and took out the ones that Boris Stukalin, chairperson of the Soviet state publishing committee, said were "insulting."

FISHER SAID THAT he was not surprised that his book was among those banned by Soviet officials.

"This book was sent with 13,000 other books from this country to be put on display, which is an important breakthrough in Soviet society because they were letting people see books they couldn't put their hands on before," Fisher said.

"I was surprised they put my book in that group because it really is a hostile book," Fisher said. "So I wasn't really surprised it was removed."

In his book, Fisher assesses many of the problems faced by the Crimean Tatars as a non-Russian nationality in Russia.

The Tatars are one of the more than 100 non-Russian ethnic groups now living in central Asia. They were deported in 1944 from the Crimean Peninsula, which is near the Black Sea, for many reasons, including collaborating with the Germans against Russia during World War II.

During that time Stalin closed down the Tatar schools and did not allow them to publish a newspaper or speak their language in an effort to eliminate the non-Russian nationalities.

In 1967 there was a decree by the Soviet government stating that the deportation in 1944 was wrong. However, the Tatars were not allowed to return to the Crimean Peninsula.

"They are still maintaining an identity and have been struggling ever since to go back to the Crimean Peninsula," Fisher said. "They have been sneaking back, but this causes problems because in Russia you need a work permit to work in certain areas."

FISHER NOTED THAT his interest with the book was to inform U.S. specialists in Russian studies that the Crimean Tatars have been mistreated.

"Too many books published by Americans say that the Tatars were traitors and they pretty much got what they deserved," Fisher said. "I felt that because I knew the language I was responsible to write their story."

By banning the book the Russians have, Fisher said, violated the Helsinki Agreement, a pact with the United States calling for more freedom of integration and freedom of movement among peoples.

The book says that the Russians violated the agreement. This was part of the reason for the banning, he said.

"I also think they banned the book because Crimean Tatars are a people the Russians have a particular dislike for," he added. "They are Moslems and the Russians strongly dislike them."

In the Soviet Union, Fisher said, banning a book does not mean a thing. "I know for fact that three months after the book was published 30 copies were taken to a city where many Tatars live," he said. "The people who were interested in the book already had access to it before the ban."

FUNDING FOR CENTERS 'BLEAK'

E.L. seeks grants for facilities

By JULIE MACK

Although local funding prospects for the proposed human services facilities look bleak, East Lansing officials are exploring possible grants from private foundations.

A progress report for the resource centers was delivered at an East Lansing Housing and Community Development commission meeting Thursday night.

The facilities, which were proposed in the fall of 1977, would be constructed at Spartan Village and Red Cedar schools at an estimated cost of $1.2 million.

Services to be provided at the facilities include child care, health, recreation and educational programs.

The city has allocated $500,000 for the project with the remainder of the funding being sought from the East Lansing School system, MSU and the city.

THE EFFECTS OF simultaneous inflation and recession, however, have limited potential money from the three governmental units, said city manager, Jerry B. Coffman, in a memorandum distributed to the commissioners.

As a result, representatives of MSU, East Lansing schools, and the city are exploring private foundations as possible funding sources, Coffman said.

Peter Brown, a member of the facilities' study group and Student Affairs program coordinator, said he has tracked down specific funding sources for this type of project and has created a "shopping list" for the human service facility study group.

"The way it stands now, we're following up on sources through personal contacts by MSU personnel," he said. "Chances are quite good we'll get an interest response before Christmas."

Because most private foundations will not award large grants unless research programs are part of the project, Brown said, MSU will be seeking qualified persons interested in conducting research in conjunction with the facilities.

ONCE PRIVATE FUNDING sources are established, the East Lansing school board and MSU Board of Trustees will decide on their financial contribution, said Vivian Najjar, member of the human service facilities study group.

"It would be on the basis of these private sources that MSU and the public school board would take action," she said, "but that's way in the future. This is all very nebulous."

Both Brown and Najjar said they were optimistic about the future of the project.

"The fact that the university has asked people to spend time to find funding is a very good sign," Najjar said. "It shows the university is very interested and we need that."

Attempts to obtain private funds should be successful, Brown said.

"I feel very optimistic about this," he said. "There's a definite track record of funding these types of projects. We could get return on money at any time."

MSU study finds high toxicity of PBB contaminated meat

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

Meat containing PBB residues may be more toxic than the contaminated feed originally fed to Michigan farm animals, a recently issued report by two MSU professors said.

Richard Aulerich and Robert Ringer, both professors in the MSU Department of Poultry Science, made the conclusions in a report published last month based on tests done with minks in 1974 and 1975.

Both men were quick to point out that studies done on mink cannot be directly applied to humans.

"You just can't draw those types of conclusion," Aulerich said. "Even in closely related species toxicity could be quite different."

AULERICH CITED AS an example previous work done with ferrets and mink which showed mink to be far more sensitive to PCB's than ferrets although the animals are "virtual cousins."

However, it should not be surprising that the meat was more toxic than the original mixture, toxicologist Steven Aust, professor of biochemistry, said.

Aust explained that PBB is a complex mixture of chemicals, some of which are more toxic than others. It is likely that some of the more toxic chemicals were absorbed by the animals, while others were excreted, making meat from those animals more toxic.

Meanwhile, the report has been receiving a lot of publicity, not only because of the finding of the different levels of toxicity, but also because it is the only study in which meat from a contaminated animal was fed to another animal.

Ringer said the report was published in August and "it's been hell ever since."

THERE HAD BEEN speculation that the report's publication had been held up by the Farm Bureau, which had made a grant to the poultry department, until after last year's PBB trial.

Ringer said that money from the Farm Bureau had been given for general research and not for any specific project. He added that the Farm Bureau had never asked that publication of the report be delayed.

The delay in publication was caused by a matter of priorities in the Michigan Department of Agriculture, which performed the feed and tissue analysis of the tests, he said.

The chemical polybrominated biphenyls, a flame retardant, was mistakenly mixed into cattle feed by the Farm Bureau in the spring of 1973, causing the contamination and death of tens of thousands of Michigan farm animals.

The study by Aulerich and Ringer was originally done for the mink industry, because it was thought that PBB contaminated meat might be disposed by feeding it to mink.

"WE KNEW ALREADY that mink are extremely sensitive to PCB's which are very similar compounds to PBB's," Ringer said. "The mink ranchers knew that too. That's why they checked with us before they fed their mink any contaminated meat."

Aulerich said that in the study they "wanted to duplicate the problem a mink rancher would have in feeding the meat to them."

To do this, they used seven groups of mink, a control group which was fed a normal diet; four groups which were fed diets contaminated with various levels of PBB; and two groups which were fed meat with different levels of PBB.

Mink which were given feed with the highest levels of PBB, 15,625 parts per million, lived an average of 74 days.

However, the report said minks fed contaminated meat with only 11.98 ppm of PBB only lived an average of 54 days.

New fellowships available for minority students in doctorate programs

For minority students who want to complete their education at the doctorate level, the Committee on Institutional Cooperation has developed two new fellowship programs.

The programs are designed to increase the representation of minority groups in the social sciences and the humanities at the doctorate level.

The fellowships will provide full tuition and funding of $4,250 a year for two years, plus additional support if the student makes normal progress towards his doctorate degree.

The program is funded by grants totaling more than $1 million.

STUDENTS WHO HAVE or will receive a bachelor's degree by September, 1980 are eligible to apply for the 1980 program. But students should apply as early as possible fall term, before the Jan. 15, 1980 deadline.

To further aid the minority student, the Minority Graduate Student Locator Service, offered by the Graduate Record Examinations Board, is designed to help students locate suitable graduate programs and to find resources for financial aid.

The service is not an application to graduate school or for financial aid.

College juniors, seniors, and graduates who are members of racial and ethnic minorities in the United States are eligible to use this free service.

To take part in the Locator Service, students should pick up a copy of the Information Bulletin, which contains the necessary information and fill out the registration form inside the bulletin.

For copies of the bulletin, write the Minority Graduate Students Locator Service, Box 2615, Princeton, N.J. 08541.

For more information about the fellowship program, write the CIC Minorities Fellowships Program, Kirkwood Hall 111, Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind. 47405, or call toll free between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., from Sept. 15 through Jan. 15 at (800) 457-4420.

Cowley Ave. closing on transpo commission agenda

A petition to close Cowley Avenue north of Saginaw Street will be discussed by the East Lansing Transportation Commission at 7:30 tonight at 54-B District Court, 301 M.A.C. Ave.

Residents of Cowley Avenue and Harvard Street requested the closing several months ago to prevent the flow of through traffic at the entrance of Saginaw, said Gordon Melvin, assistant city engineer.

At an August public hearing on the matter, transportation commissioners asked the city staff for more traffic information on the situation, Melvin said. The city staff will make a presentation tonight.

Rape education seminar offered by Lansing Community College

An area rape counselor will hold a rape education seminar at Lansing Community College Oct. 5 and 6.

Jan Leland will focus on the causes, incidence, and prevention of rape, as well as the legal, medical, and political aspects of sexual assault.

Interested persons may register today and tomorrow by calling the LCC Women's Resource Center at 373-9970.

The one-credit course meets Friday, Oct. 5, from 7 to 10 p.m. and Oct. 6 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Afghanistan bound for trouble

By MOLLY MIKA
State News Staff Writer

Afghanistan may be headed for a war similar to Vietnam, said an American anthropologist who was expelled from Afghanistan.

Louis Dupree, who will teach a two-week course at MSU on current political and social changes in Pakistan and Afghanistan, said the country's problems stem from the existence of 12 major ethnic groups with different languages and cultures within the country, recent developments in Islam, and revolution in the Middle East.

"If the Afghans are not careful, there will be another war like Vietnam," he said. "The new regime of Hafizullah Amin is executing the liberals in his party, destroying Afghanistan's culture, and moving the country into the Soviet camp."

Dupree has spent the last 20 years reporting on the developing Islamic nations. As a member of the American Universities Field Staff, he spends two years overseas in his field of interest and then returns to the United States for a year to lecture at universities.

DUPREE WAS ACCUSED of being a CIA agent and expelled in June 1978. He was imprisoned by the Afghanistan government when he returned to retrieve his personal belongings. He was interrogated for a week and then released for lack of evidence.

For the past year, he has been a resident of Pakistan in direct contact with the exiled members of the former government of Afghanistan headed by Taraki.

Dupree said he will not return to Afghanistan until Amin's regime is overthrown. "I'm not known as Louis the Beloved there," he said.

However, he plans to return to Pakistan in November when local governmental bodies will hold elections for the first time since 1962. Dupree said it will be the voters' last chance to form a democracy with a civilian base.

Pakistan is currently struggling with unrealistic boundaries imposed after World War II and the existence of four major ethnic groups, he said.

DUPREE'S INTEREST IN Asia was kindled by his service in World War II as a merchant seaman and paratrooper. He received his doctoral degree in anthropology from Harvard University in 1955. He taught at Pennsylvania State University until joining the American Universities Field Staff in 1959.

In Afghanistan, he has directed numerous archaeological excavations, learned the Persian and Pashto languages, and published three books and several articles.

His wife Nancy received her master of arts degree in Chinese Studies from Columbia University and has written extensively on Asian women, architecture, and history.

MSU students interested in taking a closer look at one of the world's potential trouble spots may enroll for a course through Oct. 8 in the Anthropology Department office, 354 Baker Hall, IDC 400V. Current Issues in Pakistan and Afghanistan, is a two-credit course to be held Oct. 8 through 19.

Mexican mountain climb offered by outing club

The MSU Outing Club is looking for courageous and adventurous students who would enjoy spending Christmas break in an unusual way.

It wants student to go to Mexico to climb mountains.

The club is currently planning a mountaineering expedition to Mexico from Dec. 9 until Jan. 2. A bus or van will be taken to Mexico, where all participants will climb three summits.

Prior climbing experience is not required, but coordinators of the event suggest those wishing to attend be in good physical condition.

The cost of the trip will be about $250. Those interested should attend the club meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Men's I.M.

The MSU Outing Club sponsors a variety of activities each year, including cross country skiing and canoeing expeditions.

World hunger rally slated for tonight

A special rally will be held at 8:30 in Rm. 335 Union tonight for MSU students and faculty members interested in participating in a Walk/Jog to combat world hunger.

The rally will inform participants about the event and the hunger issue.

The Community Hunger Appeal of Church World Service, CROP, and WILS Radio are sponsoring the Walk/Jog, scheduled for Sunday, Oct. 14. Information and literature will be passed out about the event at the rally, said Janet Laughlin, coordinator. She said a movie about hunger will also highlight the evening.

Those unable to attend the meeting but still wishing to participate may receive sponsor sheets at the United Ministries, located at 1118 S. Harrison in East Lansing.

Nestle' boycott backers plan rally

Students wishing to support the Nestle' Corp. boycott may attend a rally to be held in Detroit 2 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 30.

Car pools are being organized for the boycott rally scheduled at Detroit's Clark Park. Transportation for the event is being coordinated by the Peace Center Office, 118 S. Harrison Road.

Several guest speakers are scheduled for the event, including Shirley Powell from the National Infant Action Coalition, the group leading the boycott. There will also be musical entertainment.

The rally is a part of a national boycott against the Nestle' Corp. Supporters argue that the corporation is promoting bottle-fed formula for infants in developing countries and then selling the formula at high prices after the mother's own milk supply has dried up. They claim the sales promotions are the cause of malnutrition, and in some cases, death.

Products manufactured by the Nestle' Corp. include Taster's Choice, Nestle's Crunch, Nescafe, Lancome Cosmetics, Los Hermanos Wines and Stouffer Products.

VP question needs action

President M. Cecil Mackey is moving, it would seem, to the center of a classic bureaucratic struggle this week over the appointment of Moses Turner as vice president for student affairs and services. And while Mackey will not discuss the upcoming confrontation, top administrators concede this week will be a crucial test of his presidential leadership.

It began last week, when Eldon Nonnamaker, former vice president for student affairs, announced he would return to teaching after conferring with his family and his soul. This introspection undoubtedly provided some harsh light for Nonnamaker — his term as vice president has been less than glamorous. The office's one time illegal alcohol policies, the bureaucratic red-tape which engulfs student grievance procedures and the office's refusal to call MSU's high rape statistics a problem situation, all indicate that Nonnamaker's perception of student rights and responsibilities leave a great deal to be desired.

Enter Mackey, who concurs with Nonnamaker's decision, and moves to bring former colleague and Director of Student Life at Texas Tech Moses Turner to fill Nonnamaker's shoes. Mackey feels his association with Turner at Texas Tech, and Turner's status as a black male, will not only benefit the ailing office, but the University's affirmative action record as well. The plot thickens, however, when the Executive Committee of the MSU Academic Council contends they need some time to interview Turner, and, following approval of the Academic Council, they will endorse him.

But Mackey, fully realizing the position must be filled immediately to calm on-campus hassles which abound at the beginning of the school year, tells the Executive Committee time is of the essence. The committee must interview Turner immediately, supposedly so Mackey can bring the nomination to the Board of Trustees — who must approve the appointment — at its next meeting this week. And so the battle begins here: the Academic Council wants the appointment to go through proper channels, while Mackey wants to push it through to the Board.

While Mackey has not been in office more than two months, he knows by reputation, that if the entire Academic Council gets into the act, we will not have a new vice president for student affairs for a few more months. By that time, a host of problems could break loose on campus. The Academic Council, it would seem, is eternally bogged-down by the same weight which burdens most of University life: red tape. Mackey wants faculty and student input — through the Executive Committee — but he wants it quickly.

At this point, little is known about Turner. While we cannot speculate how effective he would be in this position, we wonder why this position — and many others — has not been posted as a normal job description. We know that MSU has an abundance of talented, dedicated personnel who could fill the position if given the chance. We expect Mackey to bring in some of his own people, but feel that University personnel should also be given the opportunity to vie for the job. Perhaps if this had been done, Mackey's task would be a bit simpler.

And so the situation stands, for the moment, with Mackey asking the committee to push ahead and interview Turner, and the committee asking for more time. We urge the committee to abide by Mackey's wishes, interview Turner, and decided on that basis. Surely the committee realizes that an important function is performed by the vice president for student affairs, and most certainly, they want to see a smooth transition from Nonnamaker to his successor. But resignations cannot often be planned ahead to give the Academic Council two months to interview a prospective academic employee. It is time for the Council to be realistic with itself and its public.

Perhaps this incident will remind Academic Council that its procedures may not be expedient, and should be scrutinized to deal with situations such as this. Certainly, Mackey wants to keep a good working relationship with his academic supporters, and we hope this confrontation will not harm that. But if the committee takes Mackey's recommendation and interviews Turner this week, two of the most powerful forces in MSU government — the president and the academic "cabinet" — will start their marriage off with a unified action directed towards students and student safety.

VIEWPOINT: ENGLISH

English degree valuable to many MSU graduates

By STACY A. MOSHER

As an English major, I was very interested in Sandy Sweeney's Welcome Week article "Oh woe is the English major." I find it hard to believe that anyone who continues to dish out as much money as I'm sure Ms. Sweeney must for a literary education could really feel as negatively about it as she lets on she does. I will assume her essay is not a true reflection of her feelings, but only somewhat questionable witticism over the "negative" aspects of being an English major. However, since some students, including prospective English majors, might actually take this satirical creation seriously, I'd like to point out the positive points of literary study.

Somehow people get the peculiar idea that the English student who is not a prospective high school teacher is either 1) uninterested in any kind of "worthwhile" employment, or 2) unable to get it even if he or she wants it. However, I have yet to meet an English major who is here merely to find a husband (even a petroleum engineer!) who can keep her comfy while she reads all day. Male English majors are even less likely to have such a goal. Most of us really do have our minds set on some kind of profession, and although the English major is less likely than, say, an engineering major to have prospective employers waiting to pounce after commencement, the insight and creativity of a successful English student qualifies him/her for many kinds of jobs. A new career internship program begun last spring by the English department is attempting to acquaint English students with these possibilities by obtaining practical experience for them in areas like public and personnel relations, research of various kinds (including legal), and writing and editing publications for firms.

Then there's always teaching at the college/university level. It is not true that English professors spend all their time among dusty tomes in dimly-lit closets, only emerging, pale and semi-comatose, to drone Shakespeare at dozing students. Some of the finest and most interesting people I know teach English here at MSU, and some even have nice sunbans.

It is true that the literary field contains individuals with rather unusual sexual preferences (although I wouldn't count George Sand among them), but other fields also have their share. Believe it or not, heterosexuality is alive and well in literary circles — just ask Norman Mailer.

As for the examples Ms. Sweeney uses of successful writers, I take exception to placing the likes of Harold Robbins and Rosemary Rogers on the same shelf with Fowles, Dickey, Barth, Pynchon, Atwood, Gardner, Lessing, Barthelme, and other modern writers of high literary merit who also happen to be living well above the poverty level. Some are even college professors.

In short, anyone who wants to ask me my major and prospective profession is welcome to do so. But you may not recognize me — I wear a backpack.

Mosher is a senior majoring in English.

Ticket lines spawn more controversy

As part of the ticket-hungry throng in Spartan Stadium last Thursday, we were outraged to discover that officials in the MSU athletic office had struck again. Refer, please, to the "Welcome Week" State News: "for each ticket purchased you must have a validated fee receipt card and $18."

Naively assuming this information correct, we assembled cards and checks for our group of eight and proceeded to join the already lengthy line. Upon nearing paydirt (many hours later), we noticed to our horror that some imbecile had tacked a small notice — in #2 pencil — above the ticket booth stating that IDs also were required. Panic and confusion reigned as this discovery spread. For our group, a frantic, campus-wide ID round-up ensued, and although it was completed before we reached the box office, many others were not so lucky.

Generally, the whole affair stunk and we hope (skeptically) it won't be repeated.

Students: Beware of sharp knives

Abortion is perhaps not the most pleasant subject with which to greet incoming students, but it's one of the facts of life in the area. Every year some of our students, entrusted to the care of the university by their parents, go through abortions.

I hope by this letter to decrease the number. The main fact is: Abortion is not perfectly safe. There is cutting, there is bleeding, often there are complications, from infection and fever, to a perforation of the uterus which may require surgery through the abdominal wall.

Now I've read and heard many arguments pro and con abortion, and I have my own beliefs. But without going into these, a good recipe is to keep out of the situation as best you can. This would prevent most abortions.

National holiday for King?

In an era so void of heroes and public figures worth honoring, one would hope the U.S. Congress will quickly approve a bill making January 15 a national holiday. That was the birthday of Martin Luther King, Jr., the late civil rights leader, who shocked the nation and the world by his unique method of non-violent protests against the grave tragedies of U.S. civil rights policy. The bill, which recently passed a House subcommittee, would make King's birthday a legal national holiday.

Though the bill would make January 15 a legal holiday in every state, Michigan has already passed legislation making the date a state holiday. As a matter of fact, in November 1977, Michigan was the first state to do so.

There are numerous reasons to make this date a national holiday, for one must constantly be reminded the King's actions may have been the most important events in recent social history. It seems a shame that it has taken more than 10 years after King's death for many to realize his effects on American society. To postpone vote upon the bill, or refuse the measure altogether, would be totally inexcusable if this country is to continue to be an advocate of human rights.

As Americans curse Congress for being the most conservative lawmakers in years, this vote may be the most indicative factor of their true attitude. While the bill is expected to pass, there will undoubtedly be some obstacles to overcome in this crucially important election year.

The passage of this bill is considered a priority by some minorities in order to preserve the momentum of the nation's affirmative action programs.

But regardless of one's views about King and his philosophy, the fact that King's movement was non-violent must be permanently noted. King repeatedly used peaceful methods of expression — even though confronted in many instances by violent threats and actions. While millions of citizens protest the amount of violence on television, it is terribly hypocritical not to recognize the difficulty — and almost impossibility — of King's determination to protest peacefully.

If the United States can allow itself to put John Wayne's picture on a coin, there is no humane excuse for not having a national holiday for the late Martin Luther King, Jr.

Business students suffer

The MSU College of Business has recently made its most vigorous attack upon the many students enrolled in its various programs. As of this term, enrollment in business courses has been closed except to declared business majors. Moreover, students lucky enough to find space open in one of the business classes were rudely awakened by finding that grades will be computed by relative class standing, or where they rank compared with the other students in their class.

The University apparently fails to realize that these measures will hurt the reputation of the school when compared with that of other business colleges. There is nothing wrong with strong, solid competition, for that is a basic foundation of a good university. Once competition becomes injurious and unhealthy, however, things must change. It is no wonder MSU is referred to as the "Moo 'U'" after one becomes familiar with the way the University handles its students.

After students in the business college realize their futures will be controlled by their abilities to withstand barbarous competition, many irritating questions begin to surface. Why was this year chosen to limit enrollment? With a little proper managerial planning and foresight, could this situation have been avoided?

The administration claims hiring additional faculty would not be a quick solution to solving the problem of the faculty-student ration, which is now above the minimum standards set for accreditation. It should be pointed out that the major concern at the moment is to see the problem rectified over the long run and to see steps taken to prevent it from happening again. If hiring more faculty would not quickly ease the problem, perhaps the University feels students should be allowed to kill each other off until their numbers dwindle down to an acceptable level.

Oddly enough, students already enrolled in the college find themselves in the biggest pinch. After investing a year or so in business courses, it is too costly to drop out of the business college because of the unreasonable demands students now face. On the other hand, how are average students going to tolerate such competition for the remaining two years of their college career?

If students are able to hold up under these new demands, the business college will inevitably have to address the problem of accreditation. Since the business college is MSU's largest college, it is hard to understand why the University cannot acquire additional faculty to jibe with proper faculty-student ratios. To utilize all of the options available to the University, this may be the time to launch a full-scale campaign to step-up lobbying efforts to raise money. In light of the tremendous growth the business college has experienced in recent years, the possibility of its general expansion and overhaul must not be overlooked.

The tragedy of the decision to cut enrollment is that students outside the business college are restricted from taking business courses. In some cases, these students need business classes as part of a required degree program for their major.

A sound university functions on the principle of offering a diverse education to each member of its student body. Does the administration at MSU consider an education diverse if one is restricted from taking various courses? The business college desperately needs to be organized through sound academic principles.

MILLION EXPECTED AT MASS

Washington prepares for pope

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's capital, which views large gatherings as a way of life, is braced for what promises to be the biggest one ever, the Mass on the Mall celebrated by Pope John Paul II.

Since no pope has ever visited here before, no one knows how many people to expect for the visit of John Paul II, Oct. 6 and 7. But church leaders say they expect from 500,000 to a million people to crowd onto the Capitol Mall on Sunday afternoon. And no one is arguing.

The archdiocese of Washington, which includes the District of Columbia and its Maryland suburbs, has about 400,000 Catholics. But the pope's weekend visit will draw from all over the east, providing Catholics and non-Catholics with a once-in-a-lifetime chance to participate in a mass celebrated by a pope.

The expected crowd would be greater than the quarter-million who heard Martin Luther King Jr. declare "I Have a Dream" in 1963; it would be bigger than the largest of anti-war demonstrations during the Vietnam War era.

"THE BICENTENNIAL IN 1976 was a fireworks display," with spectators spread all over a large downtown area including the Mall, said George Berkley, spokesperson for the National Park Service which supervises Mall events. "We estimated that 1 million people saw it. But the pope promises to attract more people in one place than this city has ever seen."

The trick is where to put them — where to park their cars and buses, where they'll eat, sleep and go to the bathroom, where they'll stand to hear the pope, where they'll sit and wait to see him.

Hotel officials say the weekend is shaping up as a busy one, but rooms — running from about $30 to more than $100 a night — are not sold out.

Sports fans have been pacified. The Redskins football game, scheduled to be played the same afternoon at the RFK Stadium a few blocks from the Mall, has been switched to Philadelphia.

As a result, Mass-goers can park their cars in the stadium parking lot and ride the subway to the Mall. There will also be parking at the Pentagon, with shuttle buses going to the Mall.

THE TWO-HOUR CEREMONY, which will be televised by ABC, starts at 3 p.m. The pope will say the Mass at a specially-built altar, on the Mall side of the Smithsonian castle. Church officials say the altar will be high enough for everyone standing on the Mall to see the pontiff. They insist also that the sound system will allow everyone along the grassy mile-and-a-half mall between the Capitol steps and the Washington Monument to hear.

Fifteen hundred priests will fan into the crowd to offer Holy Communion to 300,000 worshippers.

The bill for the event is being split between the Archdiocese of Washington and taxpayers. Catholic planners say much of the work by local craftsmen and artisans is being donated. The Archdiocese is picking up the estimated $250,000 costs of an elaborate three-tiered stage and altar. It also is providing portable toilets and young people to pick up trash from the mall afterwards.

Washington police estimate overtime costs for approximately 2,700 police officers will be between $1 million and $1.5 million. And Park police estimate their costs for 500 to 600 officers, who will stand at 20-foot intervals along the chain-link fence, will be about $50,000 to $75,000.

As usual with Washington events, the pope's visit has prompted a counter demonstration. The Youth International Party has taken out a permit for 1,000 people to assemble at Lafayette Park across from the White House.

"They're calling for abortion rights, the legalization of marijuana and gay rights," a Park spokesperson said.

The pope's visit to the United States begins Oct. 1 in Boston and ends in Washington on Oct. 7. During the six days he will also visit New York, Philadelphia, Des Moines and Chicago. The longest stay will be two days in Chicago and the shortest, a few hours in Des Moines.

Soviet ballerina misses husband

By NIKKI FINKE

Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW — Bolshoi ballerina Ludmilla Vlasova, looking radiant after five curtain calls at her season debut, said Sunday she wants "very much" to hear from her defector husband, Alexander Godunov.

"Tell him that I love him very much," she told Western reporters in a stage-door interview, her first since returning to Moscow after a three-day U.S.-Soviet tug-of-war over her at New York's Kennedy Airport. The stand-off ended when she convinced U.S. authorities she wanted to come home.

Vlasova appeared on the Bolshoi stage — for the first time since her return — in a matinee performance of "Love for Love," the ballet version of Shakespeare's comedy "Much Ado About Nothing."

Playing the role of Beatrice, the brunette 37-year-old dancer won a rare five curtain calls from the Bolshoi audience and was presented three times with bouquets of flowers. Her mother, brother and nephew were in the audience.

ASKED WHETHER SHE had been in contact with Godunov since he defected Aug. 22 during the Bolshoi company's New York appearance, Vlasova replied sadly: "No, I haven't heard anything from him."

Would she like to? "Yes, very much," she said. "I would like very much to hear from him."

Godunov dropped from sight in New York soon after the defection, saying he would not re-emerge until he had made some decisions about his artistic future in America.

Calm and self-composed as she answered reporters' questions, Vlasova had her own ideas about why her husband decided to remain in the United States, leaving her behind.

"I DON'T THINK he decided," she said. "He was caught in some kind of a situation that is still not clear to me."

Will he make it professionally in America?

"Oh, yes," came her quick reply. "He'll be very successful because he is very talented."

But there was a trace of bitterness in her voice when one male reporter remarked that she looked "very beautiful."

"Tell my husband that," she said. "He always thought I was beautiful. Tell him you think I still am."

She told reporters that she will be dancing "all the roles I danced before." Asked what her next role will be after Beatrice, the ballerina said simply, "Whatever role they give me."

She refused to comment about the defections Sept. 16 of another pair of Bolshoi principals, Leonid and Valentina Kozlov.

"There's nothing I want to say about them," she said.

The Kozlovs eluded Soviet authorities in Los Angeles after the Bolshoi company's final performance on their U.S. tour and sought political asylum. The rest of the troupe returned to Moscow last Tuesday.

Firefighters funds

Public hearings on rezoning petitions and possibly action on the firefighters overtime funds will take place at 7:00 tonight at the Lansing City Council meeting on the tenth floor of City Hall.

Although firefighters overtime is not on the agenda, the rules might possibly be suspended in order to address the matter, said third ward councilmember Terry McKane.

Last Thursday at a Committee of the Whole meeting, McKane questioned the two month depletion of the year's budget for overtime funds.

Because there were no additional funds for overtime payments, replacement firefighters were not contacted when others called in sick.

The firefighters filed a suit Sept. 13 against the City and City Council to force them to keep 61 firefighters on duty for each shift, a number set by the fireboard.

Ingham County Circuit Court Judge James Giddings issued a temporary restraining order requiring that 61 firefighters be on duty at all times, but will make a final decision on Wednesday.

Out-of-state license plates disappearing

A series of out-of-state license plate thefts have area police departments speculating that someone may be starting a collection — from all 50 states.

The theft of at least three out-of-state plates was reported to have occurred Friday night at Cedar Village Apartments, 242 Cedar St., East Lansing Police said.

Two out-of-state plates were also reported stolen Saturday night from University Village Apartments on campus, the Department of Public Safety said.

The theft of out-of-state licenses is particularly hard on the victims, East Lansing police said, because they must order new plates from their home state. The cars cannot be used without license plates, police said.

Don't fear the Cult!

By JOHN NEILSON
State News Reviewer

After seeing the Blue Oyster Cult in concert last Friday at the Lansing Civic Center, it will probably be impossible for me to ever take their malevolent/black leather/evil image seriously again. In the long run I guess it really won't matter much, though, because what I did come away with was a new respect for this band's ability to kick out high energy rock 'n' roll.

The Cult's fascination with the bizarre and sordid has been a major part of their appeal since the release of their highly acclaimed debut LP in 1971. While most heavy metal groups spent the decade warming over the same macho fantasies and grandiose self infatuations, the Cult were singing about tyranny and mutation, subhumans, careers of evil, Hitler death weapons and the Grim Reaper himself. One got the impression somehow that here was a band that fed on raw flesh and small children while planning schemes of world domination and control.

On stage, however, it's a different story entirely. Despite singer/guitarist Eric Bloom's attempts to act otherwise, the Cult came across as a bunch of average guys that just happen to enjoy singing about the stuff late-night thrillers are made of. What they lack in stage presence, though, is more than made up for in musical ferocity, and let's face it — if a rock band's going to sing a song about Godzilla, it might as well be one that's loud enough to send the monster howling back to the Sea of Japan with its tail between its scaly legs!

The Cult's show at the Civic

An Oscar for Miss Piggy?

CINCINNATI (UPI) — About 25,000 letters have poured in so far in what has turned out to be an astounding, and apparently serious, campaign to have a puppet voted an Oscar as America's best actress.

"A lot of the letters are filled with cynicism about some of the actors and actresses who are nominated for Oscars," says Bruce E. Collin, who is spearheading a campaign on behalf of the Muppets' Miss Piggy.

"There are thousands of people in this country who believe Miss Piggy is more deserving of an Oscar than a lot of actresses."

Earlier this year, Collin, 23, and James C. Hall, 46, both executives at a large corporation with headquarters in Cincinnati, organized a Committee to Award Miss Piggy the Oscar (CAMPO) for her role in "The Muppet Movie" and rented a postal box: CAMPO, P.O. Box 3311, Cincinnati, Ohio, to receive letters of support from Miss Piggy fans.

Center was an enjoyable cross-section of the band's material, from "Cities On Flame" up through new material like "Doctor Music." Although the Cult has recently begun to soften up their recorded work — including a lot of vocal harmonies and Byrds-like guitar — the bulk of Friday's show consisted of their crowd-pleasing hard rock classics.

Musically the focal point of the Cult's show is lead guitarist Donald "Buck Dharma" Roeser, whose junior executive looks detracted not one bit from his skull-splitting guitar work. Backing Roeser were guitarists Bloom and Allen Lanier (who also doubled on keyboards), while brothers Joe and Albert Bouchard provided the rock-solid bottom on bass and drums, respectively. During "Hot Rails To Hell" and "Born To Be Wild," however, all five group members took up guitars for a screaming assault that accurately simulated the sound of Dresden in the last throes of air-raid annihilation.

To these ears, at least, the show's highlights were the songs from Secret Treaties and Agents of Fortune, including dynamic versions of "Astronomy" and "Dominance/ Submission." "Godzilla," too, was great, but then I'd be hard pressed to find fault with any song that includes the classic line "Oh, No! There goes Tokyo!" The Cult encoored with a version of "Don't Fear The Reaper" that was marred only by what seemed to be a bad connection in Roeser's equipment that caused his sound to cut in and out.

The faults of the opening act, Rainbow, are not so easy to explain away. The band, led by ex-Deep Purple guitarist Ritchie Blackmore, seemed to be suffering from intra-group frictions, and their show was very disappointing to one who considers his work on Deep Purple's Made In Japan to be some of the bright moments of the Age of Heavy Metal.

Blackmore, ex-Purple bassist Roger Glover, and ex-Jeff Beck Group drummer Cozy Powell would occasionally lock into some grinding rock riffs, but more often their set was notable for its overblown baroque arrangements, bombastic soloing excesses, and tacky classical music thievery (which culminated in Powell's drum solo, done to a tape of the final crescendos from the 1812 Overture)

Blackmore, for his part, looked as if he wished he were a thousand miles away, and he eventually left the stage during the keyboard and drum solos, never to return. There was no encore (thank goodness), and the Lansing audience rewarded their poor showing with some well-deserved booing. Good riddance!

U-M jazz fest this weekend

The University of Michigan is heating up for the coming weekend as jazz returns to the annual Ann Arbor Jazz Festival. This year's festival commemorates the late Charles Mingus, band leader, music critic, arranger, and an undeniable giant in the popularization of jazz in America.

On Friday at 7:30 p.m., saxophonist Dexter Gordon — the father of the bebop tenor — is on the bill with Sun Ra & his Solar Arkestra and their trademarks of modernistic jazz and outlandish costumes. Gato Barbieri (Last Tango in Paris) brings his diverse saxophone song-styling to the festival Saturday at 8 p.m., sharing the bill with the Mingus Dynasty Band, composed of ex-Mingus ensemblemen. Egwu Anwu, two members of the Art Ensemble of Chicago, combine percussion and woodwinds to create jazz as poetry Sunday afternoon at 2 and 4 p.m. At 8 p.m., it's piano night with John Coltrane's pianist McCoy Tyner and jazz superstar Oscar Peterson generating the rhythm and excitement that earned their international fame.

All performances are in Ann Arbor's Hill Auditorium, but tickets can be purchased locally at Discount Records. Individual and series tickets are both available.

At The Movies...

Luis Bunuel's brilliant 1976 allegorical comedy of love, lust and anarchy, That Obscure Object of Desire, receives a rare area showing tonight and tomorrow night via RHA. The New York Times' Vincent Canby has described the film as "... a work of such perfect control and precision, it has the effect of magically clearing the mind. It restores one's common sense, and one's appreciation for the fantastic. . . . With an effortless match by no other director today, Bunuel creates a vision of a world as logical as theorem, as mysterious as a dream, and as funny as a vaudeville gag."

Noting the consistency of the great filmmaker's artistry, Molly Haskell has written, "... the irony is that Bunuel, the great thirties surrealist, has, without losing his radical credentials, become the classicist of the seventies simply because the absurdity of life caught up with him, and he was ready."

That Obscure Object of Desire stars Fernando Rey, a Bunuel regular, Carole Bouquet and Angela Molina. The film will be shown in Conrad Hall tonight and in Wilson Halls Tuesday. Showtimes are 7:30 and 9:30 both nights.

MSU RALLIES FOR WIN

Spartans edge Miami

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer

It wasn't hard for Darryl Rogers to find one thing positive after the Spartans rallied to beat Miami of Ohio University 24-21 Saturday.

"Right now," the MSU football coach sighed after the final gun, "you cannot take away the win."

But it would probably be hard for the fourth-year Spartan coach to find something else that pleased him after the Redskins stormed back from a 17-0 halftime deficit to take a 21-17 lead, only to see MSU pull the game out of the fire on a six-yard touchdown toss from Bert Vaughn to Mark Brammer with just 1:25 left on the clock.

"It was not an intense week of practice for us and our performance reflected it," Rogers said.

That it did, Miami tried hard to give MSU an easy win in the first half, fumbling three times inside their own 25 yard line, but a punchless Spartan offense, sorely missing placekicking ace Morten Andersen (out with a bad back), could only manage to get three points from Miami's generosity.

A Eugene Byrd fumble set up the go-ahead score for the Redskins and when Bruce Reeves fumbled on the Miami three with 5:25 left after MSU had marched downfield, it appeared the Redskins had the game in hand.

The Spartans stiffened, though, and Vaughn got one last chance with just over two minutes remaining. Three plays later, he was faced with a fourth and ten, but found Byrd on a crossing pattern to give MSU the first down. Derek Hughes scampered around right end for 27 yards, setting the stage for the winning touchdown.

BRAMMER WAS WIDE open on the play. "I saw the strong safety (Joe Pequignot) blitz, so if Bert saw me, I knew it would be a sure thing," the All-America tight end from Traverse City explained.

Tailback Steve Smith ran 14 yards for the first Spartan touchdown and fullback Lonnie Middleton dove in from the one for the second. Even though the MSU offense had looked sluggish in the first half, the 17 point bulge at the intermission seemed to be a comfortable one because the Redskins had shown nothing on offense. The Spartans held Miami to just 45 yards and one first down in the opening half.

The script was different in the final half. Miami began running the option more and the Spartans couldn't handle it as they had the week prior against the University of Oregon. And the Redskins began to throw with success.

In the meantime, MSU couldn't do a thing offensively. The Spartans didn't get a first down in the second half until midway through the fourth quarter.

Still, MSU clung to a 17-14 lead after the Redskins scored on a one-yard run by quarterback Chuck Hauck and a 34-yard strike from Hauck to Keith Dummitt.

On the first play following Miami's touchdown pass, Byrd fumbled a handoff from Smith on the reverse. When nose guard

John McCafferty recovered for the Redskins, the capacity crowd of 78,582 in Spartan Stadium looked on in shock.

THIS STATE DEEPENED for Spartan fans when Miami tailback Mark Hunter found the end zone from three yards out with 11:36 left in the game to put the Redskins on top 21-17.

Following MSU's winning touchdown, Miami still had over a minute to win the game, but Hauck's first throw following the kickoff was picked off by Van Williams and the Spartans had a victory over the Mid American Conference Redskins.

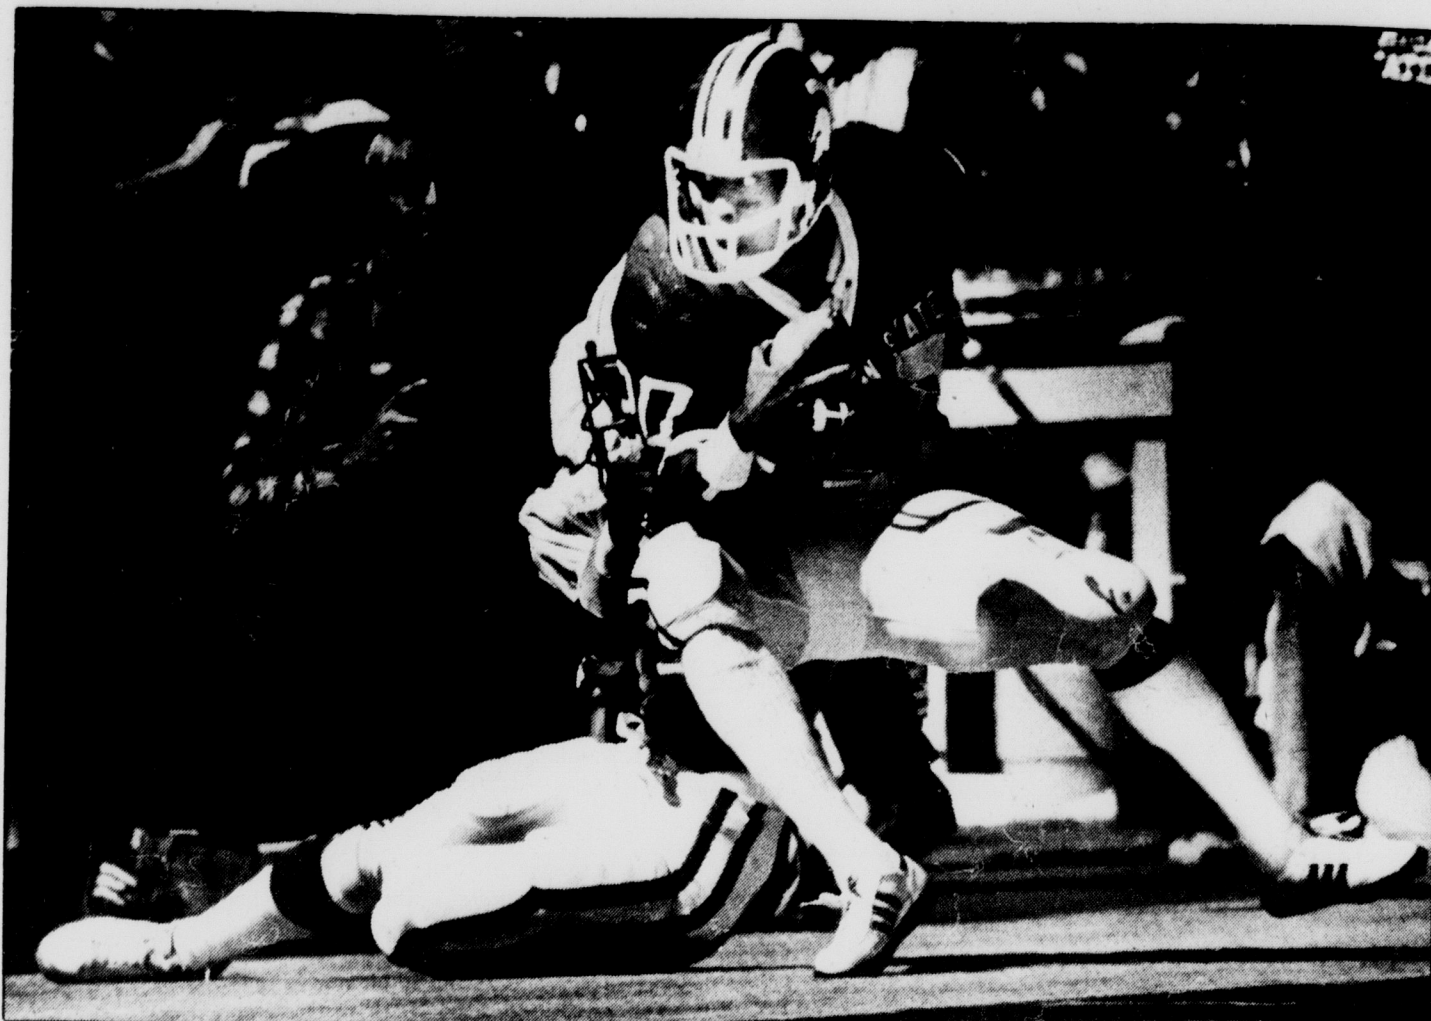

One of the sour notes for the Spartans was the sub-par performance by Vaughn. The sophomore from Mogadore, Ohio was just 14 for 33 for 160 yards.

"Bert's stats weren't good, but he threw well when it counted," Rogers said. "He's going to have his up days and his down days and I think today was one of the down days," he continued.

One receiver Vaughn had no trouble hooking up with was Brammer, who caught five passes for 69 yards and, of course, one touchdown. In MSU's first two games, Brammer had just two receptions for 14 yards.

"I knew I would be getting open sometime," Brammer said. "Miami ran a lot of man-to-man coverage today and I think that's why I got open a little more today."

MSU tailback Steve Smith ran for 70 yards and a touchdown in the Spartans 24-21 win over the Miami of Ohio Redskins Saturday in Spartan Stadium. Smith has now run for a total of 308 yards in MSU's first three games of 1979.

DAVE JANSSEN

'Best win yet,' —MSU's Byrd

You can choose any adjectives you like to describe MSU's 24-21 win over Miami of Ohio University Saturday. Trying to perceive that the Spartans did, in fact, win still may be the hardest assignment that came out of Saturday's contest.

Eugene Byrd

But despite apparent repeated attempts to give the game away, the Spartans notched the win and we are told that the score and quality of MSU's play no longer matter—at least not until next Saturday.

from defensive backs each time he goes out for a pass, would soon relay his feelings about the game.

To put it mildly, Byrd's thoughts about the win were quite different from any others offered by the players. "That's the best one," Byrd reported. "To come back like that when everything looked so bleak, that's just got to be the best win yet."

BYRD ADMITTED THAT he has never been as tense about a game near its end as he was Saturday. Yet, the All-Big Ten wide receiver had no doubts that he was going to make that fourth down catch with less than two minutes left that would keep alive his team's glimmering hopes for victory. "I was just hopin' I would get the first down," he said.

He made it, and with 16 yards to spare. It was a big catch, but then all of them are for Byrd, who is now just 18 catches away from tying Kirk Gibson's career all-time record of 112 catches. Brammer is only three behind Byrd's total at 91, after making five grabs against Miami of Ohio. Both Byrd and Brammer are only a big day's work away from the second slot on the list held by Gene Washington, who had 102 receptions in the '64 through '66 seasons.

The slender Byrd, whose number 84 like the 91 worn by Brammer is becoming increasingly popular at Spartan Stadium, believes he will reach the top of the receiving list this fall. "I think I'm about where I was last year," said Byrd, who, with 10 catches is indeed, exactly where he was a year ago.

But Byrd doesn't waste much time thinking or talking about records unless they affect his team as a whole. He, like everybody else, is concerned about the play of MSU team, which looked somewhat less than the calibre of a Big Ten title contender Saturday.

"Right now we're 3-0, but we've got to play better football," offered Byrd. "The bulk of our schedule is coming up and we've got to be sharp."

It was at this time last season when Byrd started to become a bit more noticeable in the MSU offense. Against the University of Notre Dame last fall, Byrd caught seven Eddie Smith passes for 124 yards and one touchdown.

NOW WE APPROACH the fourth weekend of the football season and again — Michigan State vs. Notre Dame. "I feel like my good game is on the way," Byrd predicted. "I mean like getting seven or eight catches. It's time for me to have that good game and there's no better one than the one comin' up."

It's certain the rest of the Spartans believe time for them to have a good game too. When it comes to Notre Dame, we all know what happens to teams that are not sharp and games that are not well tucked away.

Rose Bowl fever has struck the Big Ten and Pacific Ten conferences and public ticket sales for the 1980 Rose Bowl are going on now.

Only 3,500 seats are available for the 66th playing of the classic. This will be the only ticket sale to the general public for the game which will be played on Jan. 1 in Pasadena, Calif.

To purchase tickets, one must enter a drawing that will run until Oct. 15. Ticket seekers should write their name and address on a postcard and mail it to: Rose Bowl Ticket Drawing, P.O. Box 1800, Pasadena, Calif. 91109. There is a two ticket limit.

After finding its winning form once again over the weekend, the MSU soccer team will try to make it two in a row when the Spartans host Albion College today.

The Spartans raised their season record to 2-1 with a well-played 1-0 victory over Hope College Saturday.

Albion was a 6-0 victim of the Spartans last season and appears in no better shape to make a challenge to them in the 3:30 p.m. contest. MSU has won all six of its meetings with the Britons and has recorded shutouts in each match.

"We would like to put it all together against Albion," said MSU coach Joe Baum. "We play Calvin on Wednesday and that is going to be a tough game."

The Spartans had little trouble in registering their second shutout of the season in the game against Hope. The Flying Dutchmen managed just nine shots on goal compared to 39 for MSU.

"The defense was outstanding once again," Baum said. "Richard Huff was amazing. He stopped two sure goals by Hope."

Junior goalie Rob Grinter was in the Spartan nets for the third straight game and found his job made easy by the fine play of the defense.

The only goal MSU needed came 10 minutes into the second half off the foot of sophomore forward Mark Neterer, his third of the season. He stole the ball from a Hope defender and let go a blast from 13 yards out in front of the Dutchmen net.

"We played very well overall," said Baum. "I thought we moved the ball well and I'm happy about that. We don't have good concentration yet because we're forcing shots. But it was only the third game so I'm happy where we are at this time."

Baum indicated that team morale was high and the squad was feeling good about the way they were playing. Unfortunately for Albion, it will be able to do little to change that.

While Ray Stachowicz still remains among the top punters in the nation, Rogers admits he is worried about the other half of his kicking game.

Andersen had booted six of nine field goals in MSU's first two games, including two three-pointers from over 50 yards, but entered the hospital Friday night before the Miami game after aggravating a back injury against Oregon.

Because of his absence, the Spartans had to go for the first down several times in the game on fourth and long when they were outside reserve kicker Rich Schario's range. In addition, Schario missed two field goals that would have been chip shots for Andersen.

It won't be known until sometime later this week whether Andersen will be back for next week's clash with the University of Notre Dame.

DEAR WEIGHT WATCHERS

"In the Dark" wants us to shed some light on "Weight Watchers."

Q. I've heard about the Weight Watchers® Program for years. But what exactly is it? When somebody says "I go to Weight Watchers," where do they go?

(signed) IN THE DARK.

A. Glad you asked. The term "Weight Watchers" refers to a unique weight control organization that conducts meetings all over the world. If you join the Program you'll pay a modest registration fee plus a small fee for each weekly meeting. (No contracts, no payments in advance, no extras.) The program is comprehensive! It includes the famous Eating Plan, to help you achieve your ideal weight. And the Personal Action Plan, which teaches you how to face challenges that tempt you to overeat, how to be slim and stay slim. This year Weight Watchers has also introduced the PEPSTEP™ Personal Exercise Plan, which is optional. (Also easy and fun.) The Weight Watchers Program is scientifically planned. But the atmosphere of the meetings is warm, informal and friendly. Best of all, it gets results! That's why so many people "go to Weight Watchers."

Stickers salvage overtime win

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

Following an exhibition of inexperience in the first half of their opening game of the season, the MSU women's field hockey team escaped total disaster and defeated Albion College Saturday, 3-2 in two overtimes.

"We just plain looked sloppy," head coach Sam Kajornsin said. "We saw our weaknesses as a young team in the first half and then came back in the second half and played a strong game."

Albion led the Spartans at the half, 1-0, and Kajornsin said he had "a lot to say at that time."

"I told the girls not to get down on themselves and to go out and do their best in the second half," Kajornsin said. "I told them that our weaknesses had come out in the first half and to try and capitalize on Albion's mistakes for the rest of the game."

LESS THAN TEN minutes into the second half, Albion made it 2-0, before Barb Oakley scored for MSU on an assist by Connie Seymour.

With time running out and the score still standing at 2-1 in favor of Albion, Val Duerr picked up a pass from Marie Herman and netted the tying goal to send the game into overtime.

Duerr's goal came with ten seconds to play in regulation time.

During the first overtime, neither team seemed very willing to put themselves into a situation which might force errors.

"We had made too many mistakes earlier in the game," Kajornsin said, "and since we had gotten ourselves into the position we were in, I just didn't want the girls to get too anxious about the victory."

IN THE SECOND overtime, Barb Shannon passed the ball to Julie Johnson, who slammed the game-winning goal into the net.

"I'm happy that we won," Kajornsin said, "but we've got a lot of work to do. We play at Valley Farm in Brooklyn, Mich.

this weekend and our home opener is Oct. 2 against the University of Toledo."

Sunday the stickers played a series of scrimmage games against the Ann Arbor and Detroit field hockey clubs at Old College Field.

"We use the scrimmage games for practice," Kajornsin said, "and a lot of the girls that play graduated from MSU."

Rugby club to present 'Match of the Century'

Following a successful summer season the MSU men's and women's rugby clubs will be hosting the showing of the film "Match of the Century" — the 1973 New Zealand All Blacks against the Barbarians.

The film will be shown on Friday at 7:30 in Rm. 215 of the IM Sports-West. A brief meeting of the clubs to familiarize new players and appoint new officers will precede the showing.

During the summer, the men's rugby club participated in three tournaments. At the Cherry Pit Festival in Traverse City in early July, MSU placed third, being beaten in the semi-finals by University of Michigan. U-M lost in the finals of the tournament to University of Detroit.

At the Poe Ditch Seven's tournament in Ohio, MSU placed a creditable second, losing in the final game after some inspiring play by Doug Dowdy, Wade Smith and Tony Tocco.

At the Windsor Tournament in Ontario on Memorial Day, MSU was scheduled to play University of Leeds, a visiting team from England, and was narrowly beaten. MSU placed second in the consolation round.

For the initial two weeks of September, seven MSU Rugby players were selected to represent the Michigan Invitational Touring Side of Great Britain. MSU players selected among the 25 were Frank Cox, Mark Collatz, Dowdy, Steve LeMere, Bruce McLaughlin, Smith and Duncan Wright.

The team will be playing club sides in London, South Wales, Glasgow, Scotland and Yorkshire, England.

Store of WWII-nerve gas forces evacuation

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP)—The discovery of at least 500 tons of World War II-vintage explosives and lethal gas at an abandoned chemical plant forced 600 persons to evacuate their homes in Hamburg on Sunday.

The cache included canisters of a nerve gas that was made for Adolf Hitler's Nazi arsenal but now is banned by international treaties. Authorities have been searching the area for a week, retrieving the deadly materials. But the operation was suspended Saturday because of a brisk wind that could have spread any escaping gas across a residential neighborhood in this city of 2 million, West Germany's largest. Although the wind died down Sunday, officials decided to evacuate the area.

Investigation of the storage depot at the former Stolzenberg Chemical Works began Sept. 6 after three boys found a cache of hand grenades and one exploded, killing an 11-year-old boy and injuring his 13-year-old brother.

THE CACHE INCLUDES eight grenades of the lethal gas Tabun, which Hitler was said to have considered using against the Allies in the last years of the war but did not, for fear the Allies would retaliate with an airborne gas attack. Tabun now is internationally banned.

West Germany's newspapers are calling the Hamburg affair "the country's greatest post-war environmental scandal" and demand to know how many officials knew of the cache.

In an interview with the magazine Der Spiegel, Martin Leuschner, the last owner of the chemical plant, claimed the West German military and Hamburg police knew what materials were being stored at the site. The firm was founded in 1923 and disbanded two years ago.

There has been no official government response to this allegations, but the city has set up an investigatory committee. At a news conference Sunday, an opposition politician called for the resignation of Mayor Hans-Ulrich Klose, saying the police and fire departments had been warning city officials since 1975 that dangerous materials might be stored at the site.

Officials said some 500 tons of explosives, poison and deadly gas had been recovered so far, and expected the search to be completed soon. It was believed that military experts plan to try to neutralize the gas and then bury the materials in a secure area.

BESIDES THE TABUN and other chemical weapons from World War II, the cache included British and American explosives and tank ammunition that evidently were stored during the post-war occupation, officials said.

Hitler's former minister of armaments, Albert Speer, said that toward the end of the war Hitler had considered using Tabun. Speer wrote in the newspaper Welt am Sonntag that Propaganda Minister Josef Goebbels urged Hitler to approve the use of Tabun because the Allies had no defense against it.

But Hitler rejected the suggestion at the urging of his generals for fear the British and Americans would retaliate with airborne gas attacks.

New battery brings electric cars closer

By WILLIAM SILBERG

United Press International

General Motors Corp. is expected this week to announce it has taken the major step in battery technology required if electric-powered cars are to become viable in the future.

GM President Elliott Estes has scheduled a Tuesday news conference in Washington, presumably to detail development of an improved zinc-nickel oxide battery long sought as a power source for electric autos.

GM has been trying for years to come up with a smaller, lighter, more powerful zinc-nickel oxide battery that can hold a charge longer and be recharged more often than conventional lead-acid batteries.

Although not a sign the No. 1 automaker is prepared to start marketing electric cars immediately, the development of the new battery is seen as a key to eventual mass production.

GM has said in the past it hoped to be able to start marketing an electric vehicle of some sort by the mid-1980s, but could do so only with a breakthrough in battery technology.

ment remain unknown, but GM engineers apparently have come up with a new zinc-nickel oxide battery that fits the bill in terms of "being capable of longer charges," company sources said.

The new battery will power a car 100 miles on a charge — about double the range of current GM test vehicles equipped with lead-acid batteries — and would have to be replaced every 20,000 to 30,000 miles, the sources said.

Also unclear were specifics of the cost of the new power cells. They will be more expensive than a lead-acid battery system but are far more useful, a GM technical source said.

"A lead-acid battery powered electric vehicle is not viable at all," the source said. "It's not a matter of costing more or costing less."

"You just can't have a viable electric vehicle with a lead-acid battery. You just don't have the range."

EVEN IN USING zinc-nickel oxide batteries to power cars, the obstacle so far has been in the number of times they can be recharged. GM's breakthrough is believed to be focused in that area, one source said.

The new batteries still will require further tests and will be installed in GM's Electrovette — a special Chevrolet Chevette research vehicle the company has used in the past with lead-acid batteries.

GOP county heads favor Reagan

DETROIT (UPI) — Grass-roots Republican leaders across the nation consider Ronald Reagan far and away the favored GOP presidential hopeful and don't see his strength eroding, a Detroit News survey said Sunday.

In a copyright story, the News said the survey conducted by Market Opinion Research also found four of five GOP county leaders viewed Sen. Edward Kennedy as the toughest Democratic opponent in the 1980 election.

The survey found Reagan the presidential choice of 41 percent of the county chairperson on an overall basis. The former California governor led significantly in many areas.

"The findings underscore how strong Reagan is," said Robert Teeter, president of the well-respected survey research firm.

"THEY DON'T SAY he is unbeatable — but God, he is strong."

"It would take a major turn of events for another candidate to pass him — either a dramatic surge by someone, and there's no evidence of that, or, more likely, self-inflicted problems in the Reagan campaign," he said.

Reagan's age — 68 — could become "a more critical issue," Teeters said.

The poll, based on 1,377 responses to a questionnaire mailed to all 3,130 GOP county leaders, found Reagan considered the most popular Republican in the home counties of 64 percent.

Fifty-six percent of the county chiefs said they believed Reagan would win the GOP nomination, 44 percent said they believed he would win the 1980 general election and 36 percent said he was their personal favorite.

ONLY 35 PERCENT said they believed Reagan would make the best president, however, the survey showed.

A distant second in the race was former Texas Gov. John Connally, who had 23 percent of the overall support of the county GOP officials, followed by former President Gerald Ford, with 10 percent.

Trailing were Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee 9 percent; former CIA chief George Bush 6 percent; Rep. Philip Crane of Illinois 3 percent and Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas 2 percent.

Former NATO Commander Alexander Haig and Rep. John Anderson of Illinois polled 1 percent each.

Kennedy's strong showing among the GOP chairperson was unaffected by the Republican candidate the leaders favored or regional factors.

Eighty-one percent of the chairpersons saw Kennedy as the strongest Democrat. Only a percent named President Carter, 2 percent selected Vice President Walter Mondale and 1 percent named Calif. Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.

"Kennedy's on a honeymoon now," Teeter said. "I think you've got to wait three or four months to see how strong he really is."

Forty-eight percent said the Massachusetts lawmaker was the Democrat most likely to be nominated, but 45 percent said they believed Carter would win re-nomination.

Suspected leader jailed

NEW YORK (AP) — A man believed to be the mastermind of the record $500,000 robbery of a Rockefeller Center bank was arrested early Sunday, the FBI said.

FBI spokesman Quentin Ertel said Charles Johnson, 25, was arrested at the apartment of a friend on Manhattan's Upper West Side following an anonymous tip. Johnson was unarmed and offered no resistance, Ertel said.

He was the sixth suspect arrested in the Aug. 3 robbery of the Banker's Trust Co. branch at Rockefeller Center, the largest cash theft at a New York City bank.

Johnson's girlfriend, Coral

Crawford, who worked as a teller at the bank, was arrested after the robbery for allegedly providing the gang with detailed plans of the bank vault and security procedures.

The seventh suspect, Virgilio Gabriel Blanchar, of Queens, is still being sought on an arrest warrant, Ertel said.

Lansing, Detroit teachers' strikes not resolved

A special meeting by the Detroit School board Sunday did nothing to resolve the impasse reached in talks aimed at settling the strike in the 213,000 student district.

And in Lansing Sunday, a judge kept members of the school board and striking teacher's union bargainers locked in a courtroom while round-the-clock negotiations continued through their third uninterrupted day.

At the special meeting of the 13-member Detroit school board, an amendment calling for residency requirements for new teachers — a sore point with the 12,000-member Detroit Federation of Teachers — was passed 7-6, as an addition to the board's contract offer to the teachers.

That amendment was seen as guaranteeing the full proposal would not be accepted by the teachers union in the state's largest school district.

However, one board member changed his mind when the vote came for the newly modified full proposal and it was defeated by a vote, keeping negotiations in the strikebound district at a standstill.

Elsewhere in the state, 4,710 teachers were on strike in 10 other districts, idling nearly 93,000 students.

Strikebound districts were Baldwin, Benton Harbor, Bloomingdale Chippewa Valley, Flint, Kelloggsville, Lansing, Milan, Van Buren Intermediate and Oxford.

McHenry

Carter drew sustained applause from the predominantly black audience of White House guests when he called Young "my friend, and a friend of the world."

McHenry, 42, a former English teacher at Howard University, joined the State Department in 1963 and has shuttled back and forth between the foreign service and various foundation jobs since then.

In Lansing, a judge kept bargainers sequestered through the weekend as negotiations continued in that strikebound school district. Members of the negotiating team were not allowed to leave the courtroom during round-the-clock sessions which started late Friday.

UAW begins voting on new 3-year pact

DETROIT (AP) — United Auto Workers locals at the 130 General Motors Corp. plants around the country started voting on the new three-year contract Sunday. The UAW has said it expected to report complete results by Oct. 1, but a majority of votes should roll in within a few days.

Little opposition appeared to the contract at a meeting Friday and Saturday in Dallas where provisions of the agreement were explained to some 3,000 officers, stewards and shop committee persons of the 151 local unions.

Food was delivered to the courthouse and negotiators were allowed only brief naps during the marathon session.

The Benton Harbor school board has sent letters to all teachers telling them to report for classes Monday morning or face possible dismissal.

The agreement sharply increases pensions on a rising schedule of payments over the next three years. It increases the annual number of paid days off from seven to 26 over the next three years. And continues the traditional wage formula that, the union says, will raise the straight-time wage of an assembler from $8.67 an hour now to $11.32 in June, 1982, if inflation runs at 8 percent per year.

If agreements are ratified, it will be the first time since 1958 there has not been a strike.
