James Madison College role in review

By SUE ROBACH
State News Staff Writer

Whether James Madison College should remain a separate college or become a department of another college is being questioned by Provost Clarence L. Winder.

Winder has requested that the role and structure of the college be reviewed by a task force to establish its organizational status.

The Executive Committee of Academic Council met Monday, at Winder's request, and decided that the Academic Council would be the governance body to appoint a task force to assess the organizational structure of the college.

Winder presented his request to the Steering Committee last week.

"THIS IS NOT a review of the programs of the college," said Dorothy Arata, assistant provost, "just the organizational status."

"We want to look at the various structures that may or may not be conducive to James Madison College."

Student, faculty task force to reassess the college

Arata, who represented Winder in his absence used Winder's term "propitious" to describe the timing of the reassessment because the college is currently operating with an acting dean, John E. Paynter.

Paynter asked that the findings of the task force be presented in a public report. "The task force composition will be crucial to the quality of the study," Paynter said.

ALSO THE COMMITTEE approved four categories for membership to the task force which will be recommended to Winder for approval.

The task force will include a James Madison faculty member, a James Madison undergraduate, a representative from the faculty with commitments to undergraduate education and a representative from the faculty with commitments to graduate education.

After a motion to include academic governance members in the task force, the committee decided to include the acting dean of James Madison College and a representative of the Steering Committee as "members or active observers to the task force."

Winder asked that the task force report to the provost on or before Dec. 14 and he will then issue a response to Madison faculty on or before Jan. 18.

The committee will recommend to Winder that the time be altered by one or two weeks because of winter break.

"Overall I am pleased with the decisions made by the committee," Arata said.

GREATEST IMPACT: 'STRESS' FACTOR

3-Mile Island discussed

A direct social effect of the Three Mile Island nuclear accident is that people are now demanding a voice in regulating nuclear power plants, a Pennsylvania official said Monday.

Joyce Freeman, executive director of the commission investigating the effects of the accident, spoke before a Special Joint State House and Senate Committee on Nuclear Energy in Lansing Monday.

Freeman's testimony is part of 13 scheduled meetings of the Joint Committee on Nuclear Energy which is investigating nuclear energy in Michigan and its negative and positive aspects as an energy source.

"The direct effect of Three Mile Island is the way people perceive government," she said. "One message was loud and clear. They won't be content with regulation after the fact. They want in on the decision making process for regulation."

THE GREATEST SOCIAL impact of the Three Mile Island nuclear accident is the "stress" factor forced upon the population in the area, she said.

Freeman said the population surrounding the area was forced to make decisions based on incomplete and contradicting information released immediately after the accident.

One out of five households disagreed on whether to evacuate the area or not, Freeman said.

The nuclear accident drove an estimated 144,000 persons from their homes and cost residents near the plant about $18.2 million in evacuation expenses and lost wages, according to an independent survey conducted for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

About one in five persons living near the disabled reactor, or two percent surveyed, considered moving elsewhere fearing future nuclear accidents and radioactive emissions.

THE SURVEY CONDUCTED by Mountain West Research Inc. of Arizona, is the first detailed socio-economic study of the March 28 accident near Harrisburg, Pa.

The telephone survey of 4,585 persons living within 40 miles of the plant was conducted between July 23 and Aug. 6.

Some stress upon people in the area may have been caused by the droves of national reporters covering the story, Freeman said.

"The local press gets high marks on relation complex information," Freeman said. "The national news doesn't get as high a mark." She said national reporters were just out for a story.

Tax reduction measure likely in 1981; restore inflation-lost purchasing power

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Congress will likely enact a tax cut of $20 billion or more next year with the reductions taking effect in the last quarter of 1980, a key Democrat on the House Ways and Means Committee said Monday.

Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., said a tax cut is unlikely during the current fiscal year unless "the bottom falls out of the economy," but he added that one probably would be approved for the start of fiscal 1981, next October.

In a speech to a conference of certified public accountants, Jones predicted that two-thirds to three-fourths of the tax cut would go to individuals to help restore purchasing power lost to inflation.

He said the rest would go to business with the "centerpiece" of the corporate tax cut likely being his proposal for accelerated depreciation of business equipment and plants.

"MY JUDGMENT IS that if the bottom

"We can still make the (national) news at the drop of a hat," she said.

THE COMMISSION FREEMAN directs studied the environmental, socio-economic and psychological effects of the worst nuclear accident in the nation's history.

Tests conducted since April 4, show no radiation levels above normal, she said.

"The state (Pennsylvania) government was not prepared to monitor the environment," Freeman said. Since that time, the legislature has appropriated $300,000 for monitoring radiation and other effects of the accident, she said.

While 40 percent of the surrounding population did not evacuate, the remainder evacuated for an average of five days and moved 100 miles, she said.

Freeman said at least $5 million in tourist revenue was lost because of the accident.

ALMOST 50 PERCENT of the farmers surveyed within 10 miles of Three Mile Island said they felt it posed a health threat," Freeman said.

"Fortunately the accident occurred when the food crops were below ground, she said. "We shudder to think what would happen if food was above ground."

The NRC and the utilities will be holding public meetings in Pennsylvania on regulation. The public meeting aspect is the "kind of thing that would make a bureaucrat shiver," Freeman said.

MSU professor Stanley D. Brunn, department of Geography also told the committee about a survey he conducted.

Most people evacuated out of fear and conflicting reports between government and utilities, Brunn said.

Freeman and Brunn were guest witnesses to the Joint Committee on Nuclear Energy in Michigan which is co-chaired by Rep. Mark Clodfelter, D-Flint and Sen. Douglas Ross, D-Oak Park.

NOW shedding 'white middle-class' image

By DENISE M. HOLT
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — The National Organization for Women wants to shed its "white middle-class" image and foster greater participation by minority women, the group's president said Monday.

"We are working with the leadership of women's groups from black constituencies and Hispanic constituencies," Eleanor Smeal said at a news conference ending NOW's three-day convention here.

"We are forming chapters in minority communities and hiring minority field organizers," Smeal said. "You can't really work to eliminate sexism without dealing with racism. They're part of the same fabric."

To obtain equal rights for women — regardless of ethnic background — Smeal said NOW will continue to work for ratification of the federal Equal Rights Amendment as its first priority.

The ERA, which would outlaw discrimination based on sex, must be ratified by 38 states by June 30, 1982. So far, 35 states have ratified it, although five states have voted to rescind their ratifications.

For NOW members, the big push is on to get three more states — specifically Illinois, Florida and Virginia, where state legislatures are reportedly close to ratification.

Smeal said NOW's support for a 1980 presidential candidate would be contingent on guaranteed support for ERA and not just "lip service."

Feminist author Betty Friedan, one of NOW's founders, told the group Sunday that political candidates would have to prove their commitment to the ERA to gain support from women.

"It's no secret that many of us are thinking about Teddy Kennedy," Friedan said. "I will not support Teddy Kennedy no matter what, until I have guarantees about women's rights ... about the Equal Rights Amendment."

Secretary Brown announces the 'neutralization' of Soviet brigade

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer

KEY WEST, Fla. — Secretary of Defense Harold Brown said Monday the United States has "neutralized" the presence of Soviet troops in Cuba.

Brown spoke after touring the Boca Chica Naval Air Station, which will be revitalized as headquarters for a Caribbean Contingency Joint Task Force ordered by President Carter.

The secretary said "much of the command structure is already in place" at the base. The task force will direct increased surveillance of Cuba, 90 miles away, and maneuvers by U.S. forces.

Sixty to 100 military commanders will come to the base, which was home to 14,000 personnel during the height of U.S.-Cuban tensions in the early 1960s. There are now 2,000 personnel and a handful of aircraft at the air station. Officials said they didn't know how many additional planes will be sent in.

"BY THE RECENT military related activities, as well as the assurances he's obtained from the Soviet Union, President Carter has effectively neutralized the presence of the Soviet brigade," Brown said.

He added the United States "certainly doesn't intend to rely on Soviet assurances" that the troops won't be increased or armed with attack weaponry.

Noting the Soviets claim the estimated 2,000 to 3,000 troops are in Cuba as advisers, Brown joked, "With the Cubans having seen as much operational activities, including combat in Africa, it may well be that the Cubans ought to be, and maybe are, training the Soviets."

In Pittsburgh, meanwhile, retired NATO commander Alexander M. Haig chided the Carter administration on Monday for what he called its show of "mock toughness" in response to the troops in Cuba.

Haig, considered a possible Republican presidential candidate and Richard Nixon's chief of staff in the waning days of his presidency, said the Soviets would only be impressed by an American response that stressed action, "hopefully quiet and not designed to show some mock toughness that can be questioned."

"By the recent military related activities, as well as the assurances he's obtained from the Soviet Union, President Carter has effectively neutralized the presence of the Soviet brigade." — Secretary of Defense Harold Brown

CARTER ORDERED THE expanded military activities a month after the Soviet troops' presence was confirmed. He had said last month that "the status quo is unacceptable."

"The status quo has to do with the balance between the sides," Brown said. "The United States' demonstration of increased military capabilities, and reminders of overwhelming capabilities, assures that the Soviet brigade will not have the capability to project combat forces into other countries in the region.

"That, I think, in the end will make itself understood to those in the Congress who have questions about the situation."

He expressed confidence that Carter's actions have defused an attempt to "hold SALT hostage," and said "sentiment is growing" to get the arms limitation treaty moving through Congress.

BROWN WAS GUARDED in his response to a weekend speech by Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev. Brezhnev said the Soviets would withdraw up to 20,000 troops and 1,000 tanks from Eastern Europe.

"I think that any reduction of the massive Soviet military presence in Eastern Europe would be helpful," Brown said.

But he noted the withdrawals, "if carried out, would be about a 5 percent reduction in the Soviet forces there."

Brown said "verification" of the withdrawals, and what equipment and troops are moved are among questions the U.S. has about the Soviet initiative.

Council to view report

A report of the Ad Hoc Committee to study the Faculty Grievance Procedure will again come before Faculty Council at today's 3:15 meeting in the Con Con Room of the International Center.

Last February, the council approved the proposed revision to the Interim Faculty Grievance Procedure. However, the document still awaits the provost's approval.

In other action, there will be a discussion of the procedures and rules concerning the council, and a report from the University Committee on Academic Governance concerning Faculty Council elections will be discussed.

Head of international racket gets jail sentence

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Eschel Rhoodie, mastermind of a secret, $100-million South African propaganda campaign that allegedly reached into the United States and around the world, was sentenced Monday to six years in prison on a fraud conviction.

Rhoodie, 46, former South African information secretary, had been accused of diverting to his personal use $90,000 in clandestine funds earmarked to pay off anonymous collaborators. He was convicted last week and was sentenced Monday by the Supreme Court. His lawyer said he would appeal. Rhoodie is the only former government official convicted thus far in the scandal — dubbed "Infogate" by the South African press — and complained that he was being made a scapegoat for higher-ups.

Five hours after his return to the Vatican, the 59-year-old pontiff went by helicopter to Castel Gandolfo to catch up on his rest in the seclusion of the papal estates in the Alban Hills 30 miles south of Rome. A Vatican spokesperson said he will return Wednesday for his general audience.

VATICAN CITY — A tired Pope John Paul II returned from a nine-day tour of Ireland and the United States on Monday to the cheers of thousands waving white handkerchiefs in sun-baked St. Peter's Square.

The pontiff hinted he would like to go back to the United States some time, saying he wants "more direct and familiar contact" with the American people.

He argued that then-Prime Minister John Vorster approved the government's five-year plan to finance secret projects aimed at bolstering this white-supremacist nation's tarnished image abroad, and he claimed other Cabinet officials knew about it.

JOHN PAUL, COMPLETE

Pope home after historic tour

Flies into seclusion to rest, calls United States 'a great country'

ING a 10,700-mile historic tour, was greeted by Italian Premier Francesco Cossiga and Rome's Communist Mayor Luigi Petroselli when he stepped off his TWA jetliner Shepherd I from Washington.

The pope called the United States a "great country" to which certainly corresponds an immense role and a great responsibility — because of its high level of welfare and technical progress — in the construction of a just world worthy of man.

The pontiff, who was welcomed by enormous, enthusiastic crowds during his tour of six American cities, added that "the devoted and exultant welcome of the faithful and of the entire people of the United States has left in my soul the desire for a more direct and familiar contact with these very dear children."

Before leaving, the pope had regretted his schedule had to be limited to Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Des Moines, Chicago and Washington and that he would like to return to visit other parts of the country such as the West and the South.

THE CHIEF VATICAN spokesperson, the Rev. Romeo Panciroli, asked about future travel plans, said John Paul's next trip would be to the Philippines at a date to be set but that it won't be this year.

The pope's final day in the United States was marked by controversy when a leader of America's Roman Catholic nuns appealed to John Paul to admit women to "all ministries of our church." The plea came from Sister Theresa Kane of Washington at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

The Vatican, in an apparent effort to emphasize remarks the pope inserted into his speech to the nuns extolling the Virgin Mary, released additions to the remarks on Monday.

"The woman who is honored as queen of the apostles, without being inserted into the hierarchical constitution of the Church, and yet this woman made all hierarchy possible because she gave to the world the Shepherd and Bishop of our souls," the pope said.

"THIS IS THE woman of history and destiny who inspires us today, the woman who speaks to us of femininity, human dignity and more, and who is the greatest expression of total consecration to Jesus Christ, in whose name we are gathered today."

Ahead of him lies a busy schedule. He has reportedly summoned the cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church to Rome next month for an extraordinary meeting. There has been no official announcement, but Vatican observers speculate the pontiff may be planning to give a "state of the church" message to the cardinals.

Retarded woman's adventure ends in death

RIDLEY PARK, Pa. (AP) — Relatives say that Beverly Ann O'Brien wanted to prove that she could be independent despite her mental retardation. They say that's probably why she wandered off from home alone on a brief adventure that ended in death.

Hunters found the body of the 21-year-old woman Saturday, floating in a foot of grassy water in Tinicum Marsh near Philadelphia International Airport. She had died of exposure and exhaustion, authorities said.

She wanted to show us she could do it on her own," said the victim's sister, Virginia App. But she's not a survivor. She wasn't street-wise in any way. She had no identification and no money when she left.

O'Brien was described by App as a happy and outgoing person, who recently became depressed because of her mental limitations.

Ever since our youngest sister graduated from high school and got a car, she realized she couldn't do the things that other people could," App said.

High rates cut back on business

WASHINGTON (AP) — Banks soon will charge their best customers 15 percent interest, forcing many businesses to curtail hiring, cut back production and lay off workers, two leading economists said Monday following new anti-inflation moves by the Federal Reserve Board.

"The board's actions guarantee a recession," said Otto Eckstein, head of Data Resources Inc., of Cambridge, Mass. "But the truth is we need it."

His forecasting firm has been predicting a recession with 7.75 percent unemployment, compared with a current 5.8 percent rate. "The board's actions risk something worse — unemployment possibly in the 8 percent to 9 percent range," he said.

"The Federal Reserve Board ran out of options. No matter what we do, we'll get a recession," said Michael Evans of the Washington based Evans Economics.

EVANS SAID THE sweeping tight-money moves adopted Saturday may yet prove inadequate in the fight against rampaging inflation. "The credit screws may have to be tightened further," he said.

Eckstein, who believes the nation has yet to enter a recession, welcomed the board's moves. "Bank loans have been growing at a 15 percent annual rate. They really cannot grow at more than 5 percent in the months ahead."

"That's going to require a higher prime rate and pressure on the banking system by starving them of reserves," he said.

That is the hope of the board, which voted unanimously to increase its bank lending rate, called the discount rate, from 11 percent to a record 12 percent.

IT ALSO ALTERED the way it controls the availability of credit, making it more difficult and expensive for banks to obtain funds they then can lend.

Economists and bankers anticipate immediate upsurges in short-term interest rates. The prime rate that banks charge their least risky customers currently stands at 13.5 percent.

Evans said the prime rate should reach 15 percent sometime next month and unemployment will rise rapidly as early as December. "Until then, economic news will not support a recession," he said.

Mountain climber's girlfriend 'sad' over death

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Kathy Sullivan says she is the "saddest woman on earth" and still can't believe that American mountain climber Raymond Edward Genet froze to death while descending Mt. Everest, one day after he had scaled the summit.

I had never lost anything else in my life. And I lost a man whom I love so much," she said.

Sullivan, of San Francisco, said Monday she had arrived at the expedition's base camp last Wednesday to await the return of Genet from the peak of the world's highest mountain.

She said Genet was the father of a 13-month old son she brought with her to meet papa and of another child she is expecting in January. Sullivan said she and Genet, of Talkeetna, Alaska, were not married.

I still do not believe the death story," Sullivan said Monday after returning from the base camp by helicopter. I still feel that Roy is alive, and he is climbing that high mountain."

Stock prices fall along with gold-dollar rises

NEW YORK (AP) — The government's plan to cut inflation and support the dollar did what it was meant to Monday, as the dollar rose and gold prices plunged. But stock prices fell amid fears that the plan means higher interest rates.

Economists generally reacted favorably to the program announced Saturday, but many said it could push the United States deeper into a recession. Some said it might not be strong enough to cure the dollar's chronic slide.

A trader on the New York Commodity Exchange, the nation's largest market for gold futures contracts, said the program doesn't look like a long-term solution.

although it will have a short-term effect. Prices of silver, grain and soybean futures fell on commodity markets in reaction to the actions by the Federal Reserve.

In an unusual Saturday night news conference, Federal Reserve Chairperson Paul A. Volcker announced a 1 percent increase in the discount rate — the rate at which member banks borrow money from the central bank. The discount rate now is at a record 12 percent. The Fed also increased the amount of reserves member banks must keep — a further effort to gain more control of the money supply.

Meany's vacancy open to challengers

WASHINGTON (AP) — At least one major union president is planning a challenge to frontrunner Lane Kirkland for the presidency of the AFL-CIO, the powerful labor post that George Meany is giving up next month.

AFL-CIO sources say J.C. Turner, 62, president of the 400,000-member International Union of Operating Engineers, has told them he has decided to run against Kirkland, the AFL-CIO's No. 2 person and Meany's personal choice for a successor.

The sources also say backers of Martin J. Ward, 60, president of the 350,000-member Plumbers Union, have been touting him as a successor to Meany, who came out of that union. But unlike Turner, Ward has not told anyone yet that he wants the job, say the sources, who requested anonymity.

Neither Turner nor Ward could be reached for comment.

Kirkland, 57, the AFL-CIO's secretary-treasurer since 1969, is the only announced candidate to succeed the ailing Meany, 85, the group's only president since he helped engineer the merger of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations in 1955.

200-lb. 'cat' shot after its escape from family

MACEDON, N.Y. (AP) — James Flora had raised Keenja from a cub, but he decided he had to shoot the family pet after the 200-pound declawed lioness escaped and posed a threat to neighbors.

We didn't know what she would do," said Flora, who used a 12-gauge shotgun to fire four deer slugs at Keenja.

He didn't know whether his shots late Sunday night hit the 2-year-old lion, but the body was found about a mile away at noon Monday by a television news crew.

During the 15-hour lion hunt, officials urged parents to keep their children indoors.

State troopers, volunteers and officials from the local American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, some armed with weapons or tranquilizer guns, began searching at daybreak.

Flora said the cat broke away about 8:30 p.m. Sunday while the family was trying to train it to ride in a van.

After trailing the pet for three hours, Flora spotted it and fired.

Tower Guard honors student

By SUE ROBACH
State News Staff Writer

Karl Dahlke may have thought his blindness would keep him from becoming a vital part of the MSU Tower Guard until the club members surprised him with an honorary membership Sunday night. Dahlke, a sophomore computer science and mathematics major, addressed the club on what it is like being a blind student at MSU. He was later awarded the membership along with a Tower Guard pin. What makes this situation so unique is that Dahlke is the first blind student eligible for membership to Tower Guard.

"It's kind of fun being a star," Dahlke said.

STUDENTS ELIGIBLE TO become members are chosen strictly on academic performance. During spring term of their freshmen year, the top 200 students, chosen by their academic standing, are asked to join. They are then interviewed and approximately 65 are chosen. Dahlke was eligible for membership last spring, but decided for reasons of his own not to join. Those reasons centered around Dahlke's feelings that he would not be able to perform the group's primary function which is to read texts to the visually impaired students at MSU.

"Any one of you could do a better job than me," Dahlke said. At the club's first meeting in September, the members voted unanimously to give Dahlke the honorary membership.

"THIS MEMBERSHIP DOES NOT require Karl to come to the meetings, nor take on the responsibility of reading to the blind," said Ann Marie Kazyaka, president of the club. "However, he will be a member in all other aspects."

In his talk on being a blind student at MSU, Dahlke said that he finds it difficult getting around campus.

"Getting around is hard," Dahlke said, "even if you can see. I love it up here, though. MSU has the facilities for me."

To get around campus, Dahlke uses a braille map, which he says is "large, like MSU." "I usually learn one way to get to my classes and then use that way each day," he said. Dahlke, who is from Troy, had a peripheral vision of about six feet at birth.

DAHLKE CHOSE TO undergo an operation when he was 9 years old that attempted to increase his visual abilities. "I knew it was never going to go away," Dahlke said. "I lost, that's all."

Dahlke spoke up for a lot of the blind students at MSU when he said, "We all appreciate what Tower Guard does for us."

Tower Guard members donate two hours twice each week reading to blind students. "After hearing what Karl has to say, I could never mind reading to these students," said Karen Bole, club historian.

Tower Guard members sometimes use cassette tapes so the visually impaired students can use them instead of having the texts read.

"Sometimes I speed up the tapes so I don't get bored to tears," Dahlke, who believes his 3.7 grade point average is "respectable," said.

Auto 'do-it-yourselfers' polluting ground water

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

Automotive do-it-yourselfers who have been dumping oil in their backyards for years have unwittingly been polluting the ground water and even the oceans, an official of the West Michigan Environmental Action Council said.

"Oil disposed of by well-meaning do-it-yourselfers is a more serious problem than offshore drilling or tanker spills," said Diane Lobbestael, administrative director of the Council. Oil dumped into the ground, she explained, migrates into the water table, getting into rivers and eventually oceans.

Today in the oceans, there are actually oil slicks caused by this, she added.

THE TASTE OF fish can be ruined by 300 parts per million (ppm) of oil in the water, Lobbestael said, and 5 ppm is intense enough for a person to smell and taste it.

The council started a program last June in Grand Rapids which collects used oil at 80 different sites, and then sends it out to be re-refined, she said.

"It's a program that I think needs to be going," Douglas Hyde, an official in Michigan's State Energy Administration, said of oil recycling.

Hyde, who works in the Administration's Renewable Resource Division, is currently working on establishing a state-wide oil recycling program.

If the plan to set up a state-wide system is successful, Hyde said, the planned kickoff date will be next spring "when people are thinking about changing their oil again."

HOWEVER, IF THEY are unable to set up a network of collection points, he added, the Administration would then try setting up community programs, similar to that established by the West Michigan Environmental Action Council in Kent County.

Currently, 10 states have oil recycling programs, Hyde said. "California has the most advanced program," he added. "Their legislature passed an oil recycling act."

In Michigan, it is estimated that 20 million gallons of oil is available for collection, oil that can still be used for a number of things, Hyde said.

"Oil that you drain out of your car is basically just plain dirty," he added. Hyde cited an Environmental Protection Agency study which showed that of all the oil that was used in automobiles nationwide, 43 percent was re-used as fuel supplements, 18 percent was re-used for road oil, 8 percent was re-refined and 31 percent was unaccounted for.

Much of that 31 percent was probably dumped by do-it-yourselfers, he added.

Meanwhile, in Grand Rapids, Lobbestael said they have collected 4,000 gallons of oil out of an estimated 400,000 gallons circulating in the area since June.

She pointed out, however, they have been collecting more each month and anticipate that they will collect 10 times as much next year.

Group suggests new bike racks

By LOUIS A. WHALL

There are too few bicycle storage racks on campus and in East Lansing and the ones that are here provide inadequate protection for students' and residents' bicycles, Bonita Dostal Neft, bicycle specialist for 4-H Youth Programs, said Monday.

"The current bicycle storage facilities on the MSU campus are not meeting the needs of the minority of serious bikers on campus," Neft continued.

Bicycle storage lockers and a new theft-proof style of bike racks were suggested as possible solutions at an organizational meeting, which was open to any interested bikers.

The increased interest in better storage facilities is a result of more and more students taking their bikes inside campus buildings and dormitories, said Tom Carroll, assistant director of the MSU computer laboratory.

The group is very interested in the Rally Racks, which are currently being used at Lansing Community College. These racks have had a high success rate against theft and damage, Neft said.

THE RACKS ARE in two sections which secure the front and back tires, as well as a special section which secures the derailleur. These new racks would be financed through private donations to the MSU developmental fund, Neft said. The 4-H program, in conjunction with the developmental fund, would work on the placement of the racks around campus, she said.

The group has set a goal to have the first racks installed by spring term. They plan to spend fall and winter terms gaining support and interest for the project through surveys, brochures and meetings for interested bikers.

"New storage facilities are becoming more and more necessary since the cost of bikes is rising faster than the rate of inflation," Carroll said. "This is primarily due to the devaluation of the dollar abroad and the fact that many parts (of bicycles) are made in foreign countries," he said.

More and more commuters are using their bikes as their sole source of transportation, Neft said, and they can't afford to have them stolen or damaged.

Parking improvements project to begin this week

By SUE ROBACH
State News Staff Writer

The Division of Campus Park and Planning will make some parking improvements in a two-part, $253,000 project beginning this week.

Phase I, which begins today, includes paving the gravel section of parking Lot L, located at Kalamazoo Street and Harrison Road. This lot handles student cars and Kellogg Center overflow parking.

"We are attempting to make maximum use of the land," said Milton Baron, director of Campus Park and Planning.

Baron said that the Kellogg Center is not operating to full capacity because of the lack of parking spaces in that vicinity.

THE NEWLY PAVED portion of the lot will accommodate 288 cars for students with Lot L permits, while the previously paved section will be used for Kellogg Center parking.

Each part will have a separate entrance-exit drive and the east entrance for Kellogg Center parking will be gated and have a control booth.

Also included in this project will be additional night lighting and surface drainage facilities. Weather permitting, the basic work should be completed by the end of November.

During the construction period, Lot L permit holders will be transferred to Lot 63, located between Harrison and Birch roads.

The project will be constructed by Capitol Excavating and Paving Co. The MSU Board of Trustees has approved $250,000 of the $253,000 needed for the project. The revenue will be obtained from parking revenues, which includes money from parking meters and pay lots.

INCLUDED AS PART of Phase I will be changes to Lot K at the Kellogg Center this fall.

This work will include installation of a control booth, revision of the parking meters, removal of the present gates and the closing of the south entrance near the Red Cedar bridge.

Because of these changes, more parking space will be available for persons who attend conferences, dinners and other events at the Kellogg Center.

The control booth will handle cash and validate parking tickets.

During the construction, the staff and faculty of Kellogg Center will be assigned to Lot J at Jenison Fieldhouse.

The lot at Jenison will also become a gated lot with additional walks and lighting provided for convenience and safety.

IN THE SPRING Phase II will be implemented.

The major thrust of this project will be to build a bicycle route south of the Kellogg Center. This path will separate bicycle traffic from all other traffic.

The redesign moves the present driveway to the south which will divide vehicular traffic from the main pedestrian route. It also creates a circular area for drop-off at the building for temporary parking.

Parking for handicapped will also be incorporated into this new entrance.

Two MSU women abducted, assaulted

East Lansing police are searching for a man who abducted two MSU women in East Lansing and forced them to drive to Monroe County where they were sexually assaulted.

East Lansing Police learned of the Sept. 28 incident from the Monroe County Sheriff's department on Oct. 2.

The victims were accosted outside of Lizard's Underground Bar by a man possessing a .32 caliber revolver and a knife, police said.

The women were then forced to drive their car to an isolated area in Monroe County, where the suspect sexually assaulted them, police said.

After holding the victims about 15 hours, the suspect released them and took their car, police said. The car was recovered Wednesday in Toledo, Ohio.

Though police have a composite sketch of the suspect, it will not be immediately released to the public, East Lansing police investigator Rick Westgate said.

The assailant is described as a white male of medium height and weight, with brown hair and blue-green eyes.

The State News inaccurately stated Monday that students interested in positions on the Off-Campus Council could pick up applications in 326 Student Services Bldg. The correct room number is 334 Student Services Bldg.

Cancer Bike-a-Thon awards prizes for top money earners

Psi Upsilon fraternity and WVIC radio station are sponsoring a 50-mile Bike-a-Thon on Saturday, Oct. 13, for the American Cancer Society.

Honorary Chairperson Jim St. John, WVIC disc jockey, will ride a new Schwinn Le Tour over the 10-mile course through campus and then award the bicycle to the rider with the most pledge money.

Prizes will be awarded to the top 37 money earners, including a color television set, gift certificates, dinner coupons, a bicycle tune-up, haircuts, albums, and a McDonald's gift certificate for all children under 15.

After riders campaign for pledges, they may register at the IM field across from Wonders Hall from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. the day of the Bike-a-Thon. Riders will start from the IM field at staggered times throughout the day.

Sponsor sheets and maps of the course are available at Psi Upsilon Fraternity, 810 W. Grand River Ave.; WVIC radio station, 1125 Mt. Hope Road; American Cancer Society, 416 Frandor Mall; all fraternities and sororities, Arby's, McDonald's and Jacobson's.

In case of rain, the Bike-a-Thon will be rescheduled for Sunday, Oct. 14.

GOES TO TRIAL

Libel suit against SN

A libel suit filed against the State News by the Lansing police chief and two police officers will go to trial at 9:30 a.m. Oct. 15 in Ingham County Circuit Court.

The $1.65 million suit, filed on June 22, 1977, stems from a story written in May 1977 by two former State News staff writers regarding the fatal shooting of a burglary suspect by a Lansing police officer.

The story quoted a surprise witness's testimony which contradicted the police's account of the shooting.

The police said the burglary suspect had attacked the officer and was shot in self-defense. The witness, who was not identified in the story, said he did not see a weapon and that he saw the suspect running "away from the officer."

Gerald H. Coy, general manager of the State News, and the attorney for the Lansing police both declined to comment since the case is in the process of going to trial.

Booklet aids Vets

Everything veterans ever wanted to know about federal benefits can be found in a Veterans Administration booklet entitled "Federal Benefits for Veterans and Dependents."

The 71-page publication, which can be found in the documents section of the MSU library, outlines what benefits are available and how they can be acquired.

The booklet is also available by sending $1.50 to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

Sederburg to talk

Sen. William Sederburg, R-East Lansing, will give a presentation at the ASMSU Student Board meeting at 7 tonight in 4 Student Services Bldg.

Included on the agenda is a proposal for a computer dating service and a bill to support a student walk-out to protest high tuition costs.

ASMSU is still accepting applications for representatives on the Student Board for the colleges of Education, Natural Science and Social Science.

Applications can be obtained in 334 Student Services Bldg. The deadline is Oct. 12.

The board's Space Allocation and Personnel Committee will interview the candidates, and present a slate of nominees to the Student Board. The board will then make the final appointments to fill the positions.

The Klan looks for new members

The infamous Ku Klux Klan is making headlines once again in the American social scene. Almost 10 years of relative calm have passed since the Klan and its violent tactics quietly slipped into virtual obscurity. As if ethnic groups do not have enough trouble finding decent jobs and a life full of equal opportunities, the Klan is back to its old tricks of preaching policies submerged in hatred and white racial superiority.

Last weekend, a predominantly young group of Klan supporters held a rally near the naval docks at Virginia Beach, Va. Though the rally was essentially peaceful, there were a few Klan-organized disturbances on nearby ships. For the stated goal of the Virginia Beach group was to convince Naval administrators to avoid an active recruitment of racial minorities.

The American public can surely do without this type of racial factionalism in the ranks of the new conservatives. Since its lowpoint after the civil rights protests of the '60s, the Klan is apparently making one of its most active recruiting efforts of the twentieth century.

Some human rights advocates have accused the press of indirectly supporting the Klan by reporting the group's actions. In some instances this is a point well taken. If the Klan fails to receive the publicity it so desperately wants, it may fall back in the closet with all the other outcast national radicals. Unfortunately, this will not happen. The press cannot disregard the Klan's actions as isolated attempts to spur a national campaign, because these incidents occur with alarming regularity. They reflect the latest in a continuing series of attacks against the right to equal opportunity.

Saturday's rally in Virginia Beach proves the Klan is a force willing to seek almost any method to express its policies. The crowd there, cited as heavily armed and potentially violent, is cause for all "justice seeking" Americans to be concerned. These concerns, however, should not concentrate as heavily on the actions of the Klan — for they are efforts to scrounge for attention — as they should on the underlying social outlooks which impregnate groups like the Klan.

With the problems of a cumbersome recession making life a little more difficult, those nearer the bottom of the socio-economic scale — namely the poor whites who comprise the majority of the Klan's membership — feel their situation is caused by the growing strength of special interest groups, especially blacks. Because blacks have finally begun to creep up the social and economic ladder, the rift between the Klan and the rest of society becomes larger. In other words, a desperate Klan member sees poor blacks getting rich and the poor whites getting poorer.

Several philosophers contend that radical social unrest recurs every 20 years. If this is so, the '80s may be more turbulent than the '60s and the '30s combined.

Officials feud in policy decision

Lansing City Council has been in the process of selecting two Board of Water and Light Utility Board members since last spring. This absurd situation stems from a lack of cooperation between council members, Mayor Gerald W. Graves and officials from the board itself. The community will once again suffer while individual philosophies are battered around the political arena.

The central roadblock is the two-faction split of the City Council. Four liberals and four conservatives split Council decisions down the middle consistently, forcing key decisions to be prolonged. The selection of the two utility board members is but another example of this factional voting.

Six persons have been nominated by Graves to fill the two positions, but five of those nominees have been rejected by the Council. The appointment needs a majority vote for approval. The Council however, has turned down five nominees by 4-4 votes. The one person who was elected is reportedly completely non-committal on pertinent issues — which unfortunately works to the public's disadvantage.

The issues center around several different areas. The most controversial debate is over the tentative buy-in plan proposed by Board of Water & Light (BWL). The plan is to buy-in to other large utility operations around the state, most favorably the Midland and Fermi II nuclear power plants. Councilmembers are split over the Nuclear Power issue. General Manager of BWL Earl Brush is in favor of the buy-in, and Graves wants to fill the position. Council members are also concerned that Utility Board appointees will merely voice the opinions of management, instead of making public-minded, conscientious decisions. Discrimination charges also came up when the Council rejected two women applicants. And lack of "community experience" has been a buzz word for denial.

Mayor Graves has accused the Council of "not doing its homework and failing to meet the charter deadline of June 1, to confirm board nominees." Council members have also been known to voice some rather choice words about Graves.

The selection process recently took on a new dimension, when an Ad Hoc Committee of three Council members took over the appointment process. The fact that a normal selection process was not sufficient is a poor comment on the state of Lansing city government. As Dick Holmes, of the UAW Community Action Project cited, "This lack of communication between the mayor and city council is tragic."

Although policy makers are expected to act on their best judgment, they should not let their subjectivity stand in the way of constructive action.

Selection committees need stronger commitment

When the 14-step plan for affirmative action hiring in the academic sector was devised by the Office of the Provost last winter, it was generally well-received by the University community. Observers felt the process was a good step toward equal opportunity in an educationally liberal institution.

But one stumbling block, some confided, could be the deans of our University. While most were committed to the principles and aims of equal opportunity hiring, some still lagged behind and insisted on a conventional procedure. Observers hoped the plan would be enthusiastically received and followed to the letter.

Some members of the University community were outraged, however, when this memo appeared in their mailboxes last week:

October 3, 1979
TO: Department Chairpersons
FROM: Marshall Hestenes

RE: Hiring Committees
In order to make sure that affirmative action practices are being followed, we are being asked to HAVE BOTH A WOMAN AND A MINORITY ON ALL HIRING COMMITTEES. (Of course, a minority female would satisfy both requirements.) These people may be 'consultants' without vote.

Since many of our units do not have enough women and/or minorities to serve on the hiring committees within their unit, I would like to develop a list of women and minority faculty members within the college who would be willing to serve on hiring committees. Consequently I am asking you to talk to the women and minority faculty members within your unit to determine if they would be willing to serve on hiring committees for other departments within our college. Please list all those who would be willing to serve and send me the list by Friday, October 12."

Hestenes is the assistant dean of the college of Natural Science. And while this memo has stirred a lot of controversy due to its lack of specifics, the specifics are now becoming just as controversial.

The story behind the statement is a curious one. While it can be interpreted as discriminatory by denying women and minorities a vote in some instance — one must also consider the source of the memo. For the College of Natural Sciences — a college plagued by a virtually non-existent rate of women and minority faculty — emphasized the consultant status as a way of recruiting minority committee members from other departments. One underlying problem surfaces, however, when faculty from outside a department are assumed to lack the expertise to make personnel decisions. Of course, it is essential to include selection committee members who thoroughly understand the demands of a specific job. As part of the University's on-going commitment to affirmative action, however, it is equally as vital to include members who understand both the demands of a faculty position and the value of qualified minority members. It is, as another column indicated, a matter of including personal sensitivities which majority members simply do not have. And in this context, the memo brings a rather putrid racist and sexist aroma to the University air.

Additionally, a very interesting precedent surfaced with this memo, when Hestenes contended a minority woman could fulfill both minority characteristics. At press time, there was much disagreement about this claim. It is almost as if departments can use a minority woman as their way around what they may consider to be a cumbersome process. While departments should, indeed, be encouraged to appoint minority women to voting positions, this should not be sufficient. Don't split the vote between a woman and a minority — put another minority member in the same committee. Make the commitment to affirmative action stronger, rather than hold it back from effective leadership by finding loopholes. In a committee where two out of five committee members are minorities, the white majority still holds the upper hand. All minority members can add is a wider perspective into the prevalent problems of today's society.

VIEWPOINT: UTILITY RATES

Lifeline bill will not aid the poor

By JAMES H. JOHNSON, JR. and BRADLEY T. CULLEN

The rally at the State Capitol for electric utility rate reform was interesting and timely, especially since the poor and the near poor are more adversely affected than their more affluent counterparts by rising electricity costs (see "Lifeline" Bill Supporters Rally," The State News, Sept. 28). Proponents of electric utility rate reform have proposed "lifeline rates" to mitigate against the impact of rising energy costs on the poor.

Under a Lifeline plan, utility companies would be required to offer an initial block of electricity (i.e., the first 200 Kilo Watt Hours consumed) at a low uniform rate, usually below service cost. Lifeline rates would be subsidized by either high volume residential consumers or industry and commerce. Proponents of Lifeline rates believe if electricity is provided to small volume users at reduced cost, then income will be redistributed to low income families. While the proposed legislation is conceptually appealing, supporters of the Lifeline concept have failed to assess the implications for low income households.

Inherent in the legislation is the assumption that the poor are low volume users of electricity. Based upon our analyses of data obtained from the Crisis Intervention files of the Department of Social Services in Oakland and Livingston Counties, Michigan, there appears to be substantial variations in electricity usage among low income households. While 47 percent consumed less than 500 KWH per month, 42 percent used between 500 and 1100 KWH and 11 percent more than 1100. The average for the sample was 603 KWH.

which was 22 percent higher than the system average of 496 KWH for all residential consumers serviced by the Detroit Edison Company. More importantly, the electricity consumption of over half (53 percent) of the sampled households exceeded the system average for the Detroit Edison service area. The data revealed that a substantial proportion of the sample were not low volume users of electricity and therefore would not benefit from Lifeline electric rates. Additionally, a considerable number of low income households live in multiple unit, master-metered dwellings or trailers (with electric charges included in the rent), which are not covered under the proposed Lifeline legislation. Thus, these low income households would not benefit from a Lifeline allowance.

Furthermore, if the subsidization of Lifeline is relegated to high volume users, then such rates may in fact be injurious to those low income households who are high volume users of electricity. On the other hand, if commerce and industry are forced to pay for Lifeline, the increased cost of electricity will likely be added to the cost of consumer products. If this is the case, Lifeline may be analogous to "borrowing from Peter to pay Paul," that is, monetary savings accruing from reduced electric utility rates may be offset by higher product prices.

In short, Lifeline is at best an inadequate solution to the real energy problems of the poor, which are rooted in the high cost of home heating fuels and other sources of energy.

Birth control has social meaning

Under even excellent conditions, 15 to 30 percent of abortions have mild complications. Surgery for perforated uterus is performed on one woman in 2,500, though perhaps three or four times that have perforations which heal themselves.

The most frequent cause of unwanted pregnancy at the University is students who cannot admit to themselves they are going to start their love life. And taking precautions would be such an admission. The October 1979 issue of Consumer Reports has a sensible discussion of contraceptive devices.

Whether abortion is right or wrong no one can absolutely say. The Supreme Court is not a source of morality. It can only express the popular social mores. At one time, justices said it was necessary to return a runaway slave, and now they have adjusted a very serious problem of unwanted pregnancies by legalizing abortion. A woman with an unwanted pregnancy will go to extraordinary means to abort and that is the human reality behind the law. For those concerned about the long-range effects of a million or more abortions a year on society, the only realistic way out of it is education and better birth control methods.

As far as methods, I'm afraid little is being done. The drug companies have a vested interest in the Pill. A large number of couples have gone the vasectomy route, which also has a complication rate. I myself proposed sintered platinum-iridium spheres placed in the fallopian tubes which would permit the normal fluid movement there but interrupt the ovum. One would have to try it out on cats of course. When I approached the best biology person on campus about it, he was too busy. Y'see, it's a problem of deep social significance, but it's a backwater in medical research.

An alternative to abortion is to have the baby, and keep it or give it away. With natural childbirth methods, it's not a bad experience.

Gender traits do not apply to MSU

The editorial "Male Administrators in Womens Casings" (Thursday, Oct. 4, State News) confused gender traits with managerial traits held by top level administrators. Successful accomplishment of any program in both the private and public sector requires competence in goal setting, planning, and the ability to anticipate and solve problems. The fact that people are organized, logical, responsible, and issue-oriented is not a matter of sexuality, rather it is a reflection of their individual ability, education and experience.

The human rights movement has had the effect of broadening the acceptability of a wider range of human characteristics. It is OK now for men, as well as women, to display sensitivity and compassion for others; and for women, as well as men, to be assertive and ambitious. The result is not neutering, but an expansion of the spectrum of acceptable individual qualities.

Making broad generalities based on gender no longer fits in today's world. A successful administrator, male or female, needs to have a combination of all those aforementioned qualities and many more.

In addition, the effectiveness and usefulness of these qualities is dependent upon the working relationships one has with others, i.e., bosses, peers, and subordinates; for in essence, management is, by definition, accomplishing tasks by coordinating the efforts of others.

S.C. student opens fire at party

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A college sophomore charged with killing two students and wounding five at a weekend fraternity party was upset over being denied a refund of $2 he had paid to attend another party off-campus two weeks earlier, his roommate said Monday.

But Donald C. Rivers, roommate of the alleged gunman Mark A. Houston, 19, at the University of South Carolina said Houston had not tried to join the Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity, and had not mentioned disliking any of its members. Rivers is a member of the non-residential fraternity.

Prosecutor Richard Harpoottian said the party two weeks ago was shut down by police because too many people were present. He said Houston apparently believed the fraternity sponsored it when in fact it was held by a single member.

Rivers described Houston as a "tough personality . . . uncompromising" but "a real nice guy." Rivers said he had no idea what might have led to the shooting.

HE SAID HOUSTON bought a .32-caliber pistol about a month ago and kept it under his mattress. Houston did not tell him why he acquired the weapon, Rivers said.

Police said the pistol was stolen from a Columbia house last year but they did not know how Houston obtained it.

Houston, a Columbia resident, appeared in court briefly Monday and told Circuit Judge Walter A. Cox he could not afford to hire a lawyer. Houston was ordered to remain in jail without bond after Cox named a public defender to represent him.

Houston is accused of slaying Terrell G. Johnson, 21, a St. Matthews, S.C., senior, at the party early Saturday in a residence hall and freshman Patrick McGinty, 19, of Wilmington, Del., on a nearby walkway.

He also is charged with assault and battery with intent to kill in the wounding of five other students. One, Allen University student John L. Aiken, 20, of Sumter, S.C., remained in serious condition in a Columbia hospital Monday.

He was hit while on the walkway.

Police investigator Ray Chandler said no one noticed the gunman at the party until he began firing.

Education gets 'U' funds for research

Ten faculty members of the College of Education were awarded $8,800 in grants for the 1979-80 fiscal year from the All University Research Funds.

Faculty members from the college submitted a total of 16 proposals, amounting to $20,308 in funds.

The program, funded by the MSU Foundation and the University, tries to stimulate faculty research, said John Cantlon, vice president for research and graduate studies at MSU.

The All University Research Funds program is divided into two facets.

About $98,000 is divided among the colleges that do not have their own internal support system for research, Cantlon said.

The other portion is competitively sought from faculty members from all of the colleges, he added.

The funds are distributed to each facet of the program on a competitive basis. Faculty members or college requesting funds from the program must submit proposals explaining their research plans.

The proposals must be of scientific or scholarly merit, Cantlon said. Only programs capable of receiving additional funding outside of the university will receive money from the All University Research Funds, he said.

The proposals are divided into three categories which are: arts & letters, social science and natural science. Each proposal is then mailed to two reviewers, experts in the fields related to the proposal, who comment on the merit of the proposals.

A committee made up of research associate deans and faculty members knowledgeable in the fields of the proposals, then rank and choose which proposals will be funded.

DNR reorganizes; goes after hazardous chemical dumps

By United Press International
The Department of Natural Resources — its environmental protection unit under new leadership — Monday began mobilizing a three- to four-month search to locate dangerous chemical dumps.

A task force is being put together by DNR Deputy Director O.J. Scherschligt, recently named in a department shakeup to replace William Turney as chief of the agency's environmental protection bureau.

Forms new task force

Turney and the department have been heavily criticized for not moving aggressively enough to deal with pollution hazards posed by waste dumps.

"There are hundreds of chemical dump sites in Michigan — large and small — each with the potential to suddenly become a public health or environmental hazard," he said.

"Finding even the worst of them in the short time we have to do it will be far from easy but we will find them."

A DNR spokesperson said the department's top experts are being assigned to the task force.

is expected to be a large amount of field work, but the number of DNR employees involved is yet to be determined.

James Miller of environmental enforcement, Mike Stifler of environmental services and Thomas Work of resource recovery also will join the effort.

"We will call on whatever talents needed to get the job done, even with the knowledge that some employees will have to be removed from other pressing assignments to do so," Scherschligt said.

"We will give this project our best shot, literally leaving no stone unturned, to find these sites and determine what must be done to clean them up," he said.

'Gotta Eat' in the Union on Tuesday

"Everybody's Gotta Eat" will be performed by a Canadian Portable Theater Troupe Tuesday in the Union Ballroom.

The musical revue, written especially for the International Year of the Child, takes a satirical look at agribusiness, frozen food, junk food and nutrition.

"The purpose of the 40-minute show is to alert people of all ages to the nutritional, moral, political and economic aspects of the world food situation," said Janet Laughlin, Michigan coordinator of the troupe.

The shows, sponsored by the Campus Hunger Coalition, will be presented at 4:10 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. A $1 donation will be accepted at the door.

Wobblies are alive and well and organizing Mich. workers

ANN ARBOR (UPI) — A radical union once nearly extinct is struggling back in Michigan.

The Industrial Workers of the World, known as the "Wobblies," have organized three new locals in the past two years — a bookstore and print shop in Ann Arbor and a print shop in Grand Rapids.

"Frankly, we've been more or less dormant, especially in the last several years," said Fred Thompson, retired general secretary of the Chicago-based Wobblies.

Thompson said the union has fewer than 1,000 members worldwide "and we don't kid ourselves that these membership drives are going to change the face of trade unionism."

Still, the three successful organizing efforts in Michigan are somewhat of a triumph for the Wobblies.

The Wobblies opposed United States involvement in World War II and many of its leaders were jailed under espionage laws.

It also was squeezed by the growth of large labor unions.

"The big boys didn't have much use for us, I guess,"

Thompson said.

"Detroit used to be one of our liver cities and if we could have gotten our foot in the door in the early strikes I think it's quite possible that the IWW instead of the UAW would be the car workers' union."

The Wobblies, however, concentrated on small craft operations.

Michael Hargis, the union's secretary-treasurer, said the name Wobbly may have come from a Chinese cook in an early strike kitchen who may have tried to pronounce IWW too quickly.

'Rich Kids' explores divorce

By BYRON BAKER
State News Reviewer

Franny (Trini Alvarado) is 12. Her parents aren't getting along the way they used to, and Franny, who is sensitive, observant and a tad precocious, knows it. Her father, for instance, isn't sleeping in the same bed with her mother anymore. Franny secretly watches him quietly come in and sneak up the stairs every morning around six. Later, of course, he comes in to "awaken" her, and walk her to school.

Franny's parents are cordial to each other when around her, and they don't directly let on to any problems, but she knows things have changed. They've never seemed to try so hard to get along with each other in her presence before. Jamie (Jeremy Levy), also 12 and Franny's new friend, says her father is probably seeing another woman, and that her parents' marriage is breaking up. Jamie's seen this before; his parents divorced not too long ago.

Both Franny and Jamie feel pretty misunderstood, and maybe a bit betrayed by their parents. It doesn't matter much how carefully and specially their parents treat them, how things are made to seem as normal as possible to protect their feelings. . . it's rough when parents split, even for New York Rich Kids (United Artists); at the Meridian Eight Theaters.

As written by Judith Ross and directed by Robert M. Young, Rich Kids considers contemporary parents, children and divorce in a reflective and basically honest fashion. Though the comedy-drama is not without its flaws, the film is sincere, generally well-acted and occasionally moving. It is also all fairly interesting, largely because it deals creatively with a subject not covered very often or very well by feature films. In sum, Ross and Young's often small but vital free-minded observations and perceptions about kids, divorcing parents and their feelings toward each other make Rich Kids worth seeing.

Alvarado and Levy are quite affecting as Franny and Jamie, and their common bond and friendship is the keystone of the film. Their attempts to make sense of the actions of the adults around them are touching and amusing. They know they're only 12, and never really taken seriously — particularly in the way they need to be taken seriously — and they do their best to band together and draw strength from each other.

The adults, oddly, seem like grown-up "rich kids." None of them are suitably equipped to make reasoned decisions regarding their own lives, let alone someone else's. They care — Franny's father (John Lithgow) is so careful of his daughter's feelings that he'll go to outrageous lengths to keep her from finding out about the impending divorce — in tenuous, projective ways. They don't know their kids, and they don't really have an idea how they might want to be treated. But, they try. Lithgow comes across as a desperately caring, if ineffectual parent, and Kathryn Walker, as Franny's mom, is at least up-front and candid about her abilities to deal with her daughter. Terry Kiser is fine as Jamie's swinging, distant commercial-maker father, and Roberta Maxwell has some moments as Jamie's mother, who hates her ex-husband so virulently she can't even discuss weekend custody with him.

The film may spend a bit too much time with the adults, though. Their problems and inter-rivalries are not quite so interesting — nor so well dramatized — as the children's. Also, the pace and tone of the film are at times uneven and tentative — possibly due to the inexperience of Ross (Rich Kids is her first produced script) and Young (a documentarian, the director has made only a few fiction efforts). But Rich Kids is different and rewarding in its own right, and executive producer Robert Altman deserves some credit for again taking a chance on some new and untried creative talent, and seeing it largely pay off.

Ed will stand by Johnny

NEW ORLEANS — (UPI) — Ed McMahon, the man who made "Here's Johnny" a national salute, says he'll retire from the Tonight show as soon as Johnny Carson calls it quits. "I think Johnny is going to stay a little longer than he planned, but I want to leave the night he leaves," McMahon said. "Just pick up the pencils and cup and go. I don't want to work the Tonight show after Johnny leaves."

"I don't think I should work the show with anybody else," McMahon said. "You couldn't capture what we have again. It would be like trying to do a Houdini magic trick without Houdini."

McMahon said his contract with NBC expires next April, the time most observers feel Carson will say his goodbyes.

BLUEGRASS EXTENSION SERVICE

Faculty members play 'roots' music

By WILLIAM BARNHARDT
State News Reviewer

If you're not busy on Thursday nights, then get yourself over to Moon's Food and Drink Establishment, on M.A.C. Ave., and hear the weekly performance of the Bluegrass Extension Service. You can't beat beer and bluegrass as a combination, particularly their good ol' mountain bluegrass — none of that electric stuff, just the traditional sound. These five guys get up there and pick and play and tell the worst old jokes, and it seems that the more they drink, the better they play. (In fact, the more I drank, the better they sounded.)

Now what's a stodgy old classical reviewer like myself, doing at a bluegrass concert? Well, it just so happens that I'm a country boy from North Carolina, the home of bluegrass, and I know it when I hear it. And last Thursday I heard those high-speed mountain breakdowns ("Turkey Knob" and "Free Wheelin'"), slow mournful ballads ("How Mountain Girls Can Love"), truckin' songs ("... 'cause God is a truck-drivin' man...") all with those yodeling gospel harmonies and a smug sense of corny country humor.

There are a lot of local bluegrass groups as well as a lot of groups that visit East Lansing, but the Bluegrass

"You go electric, and you lose what distinguishes our sound from everybody else — and I like our sound. I want to enhance it," said guitarist Erik Goodman. "It's not a richness, a mass appeal. Look at the variety — from sad to happy to jazzy, from Rocky Top to lonesome Blue Ridge melodies."

original members — are professors of mathematics and electrical engineering and systems science respectively, while mandolinist Jack Clarkson is a doctor in the medical school. The two newest members are banjo-player Steve Ellis and bass-player Buck Robinson.

Despite their University jobs, the Bluegrass Extension Service manages to do a little touring, mostly in the summer. Erik sat down during their break and told me about playing in Nashville, Arkansas, and bluegrass festivals throughout the South and Midwest. On tour, the group is less experimental and solidly traditional as compared to their more relaxed request-taking style at bars. "Right-wing bluegrass," as Farley called it.

The group has made one record, First Time Out (Great Lakes Records, 1356) which is totally traditional sound. The Bluegrass Extension Service is planning to make another album, and there are also tentative plans for a single, too.

There are a lot of local bluegrass groups as well as a lot of groups that visit East Lansing, but the Bluegrass Extension Service seems as close to the genuine article as I've ever seen.

Extension Service seems as close to the genuine article as I've ever seen. John Hartford came with as many gimmicks as songs, and The New Grass Revival came with rock-bluegrass and electric guitars calling itself progressive. And that stuff is all right, but — in the traditional form — bluegrass is more difficult, more dexterous, and far more entertaining.

"And we work to make it lush," added fiddler Farley MacCluer. "You can't get that rich sound with electric. Of course, there are also economic considerations to us not modernizing. And besides, we don't play what we don't like."

And guess what these guys do from 8 to 3? Well, most are MSU faculty. Fiddler Farley MacCluer and guitarist Erik Goodman — the group's two

ABC tops Tuesday and Wednesday

By MATT OTTINGER

Editor's Note: This is the second installment in a series of articles about the new television season.

Tuesday — ABC has dominated this evening's programming lately, and that trend should continue. They open with Happy Days, one of their top comedies, and Angie, another midseason replacement that had the good fortune of being scheduled behind Mork and Mindy last season. Neither of these shows are getting the ratings they used to get (Happy Days was 14th in the first two ratings so far) but they are still superior to their competition.

Their competition, if it can be called that, consists of two shows which the critics are calling the worst of the new season. One of them, The Misadventures of Sheriff Lobo, shows just how desperate NBC is this season. They couldn't spin any characters off a smash series (the procedure ABC used with The Ropers and Benson) because NBC has no smash series, so this show about a corrupt Southern lawman (the only kind of Southern lawman in television) features a character spun from only a minor success, BJ and the Bear. The CBS offering, California Fever, wasn't spun off any series. It's bad enough on its own. It has Kristy McNichol's brother Jimmy, surfboards, cars, and very little else.

NBC and CBS each follow their respective flops with a movie. ABC has Three's Company, which enters its third season with Don Knotts as the new landlord; Taxi, a critically acclaimed comedy about New York cabbies, and The Lazarus Syndrome, one of the few new series with class. It stars the very talented Louis Gossett Jr. as the chief surgeon of a major hospital.

ABC will win the first hour by default, and since neither NBC nor CBS put their best movies on Tuesday, ABC will usually take the rest of the night as well.

Wednesday — Wednesday looks like ABC's best evening as far as ratings go. They offer Eight is Enough, with Dick Van Patten and a cast of thousands, Charlie's Angels, with Shelley Hack as the new member of the trio, and Vega$, with Robert Urich and all the glamour and excitement of the gambling capitol of the world. (Sorry, network hype.) Eight is Enough and Charlie's Angels were the top two shows for the first ratings week and sixth and second respectively in the second week, and Vega$ was in the top fifteen both weeks, so ABC probably won't change that combination.

NBC's competition is Real People at 8 p.m., the live pseudo-documentary series that for some reason was better last summer than it is now. After that, the NBC line-up is unclear. They promised Shirley, a household drama starring Shirley Jones, and From Here to Eternity, a series based on a miniseries based on a movie, but both series have had production problems and NBC has been filling the spot with movies and miniseries. (Editor's Note: NBC announced last week that it will air repeats of Saturday Night Live, replacing From Here to Eternity. The Best of Saturday Night Live will premiere Oct. 24, the night From Here to Eternity was scheduled to debut. Check local listings for time.) Back at 8, CBS has two forgettable comedies: The Last Resort, about a hotel restaurant, and Struck by Lightning, about Frankenstein. Funny, right? At 9 p.m., CBS runs what they call their Special Movie Presentations, but they're still just movies.

PAC season premieres with 'Red Ryder' play

The fiery drama When You Comin' Back, Red Ryder? opens the Performing Arts Company 1979-1980 season at 8:15 tonight in Fairchild Theatre. The two-act psychological drama, written by Mark Medoff in 1973, deals with a gun-wielding Vietnam veteran who vents his hostility towards the innocent customers and employees of a seedy New Mexico diner.

The play stars Sean P. Kelly as the alienated veteran, with Tom Luce and Kay Robinson as the going-nowhere workers at the diner whose lives he changes. The production includes some violent moments and abusive language which may be considered offensive.

Tickets for When You Comin' Back, Red Ryder? are on sale from noon to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday at the Fairchild Theatre box office (phone 355-0148).

Stickers suffer first loss of season to defending Big Ten champions

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

The MSU women's field hockey team took its spotless record to West Lafayette, Ind. over the weekend and emerged with its first loss of the season to a very strong Purdue University squad.

Playing in the Purdue Invitational, the Spartans were dealt a 4-2 setback at the hands of the Boilermakers, last year's Big Ten champions, and also came up with a 1-1 tie with the University of Dayton.

In the Purdue match, MSU head coach Sam Kajornsin admitted the Spartans played poorly. "We didn't play a very good game at all," Kajornsin said. "It just seemed like our people lost their concentration."

THE BOILERMAKERS SCORED first on a short corner play before MSU's Debbie Robson came up with the Spartan's first tally. Both goals came early in the first half.

Purdue scored again to make the score 2-1, and enjoyed the one goal margin at halftime.

"Purdue played nearly the entire first half in front of our goal box," Kajornsin said. "They had three one-on-one's with our goalie as well, but they missed all three chances."

As the second half progressed, Kajornsin said Purdue again established its offense in MSU territory.

The Boilermakers came out quickly and jumped ahead to a 3-1 lead, but a minute later, MSU's Jennie Klepinger drew the Spartans a bit closer with her goal to make the score 3-2.

THE SPARTAN COMEBACK came to an abrupt halt with seven minutes left in the game as Purdue capped off the scoring. "We just didn't play our game," Kajornsin admitted, "if we had, they wouldn't have scored as often as they did. Our halfbacks weren't getting back fast enough to help our fullbacks on defense."

Wells swings golfers into runner-up spot

By DAVE JANSSEN
State News Sports Writer

Freshman Syd Wells put together rounds of 74 and 78 this weekend to lead the MSU women's golf team to a second place finish in the 20-team, 36 hole Purdue Invitational in West Lafayette, Ind.

The 152 total for Wells, one of four freshmen on coach Mary Fossum's squad over the weekend, enabled the former Menominee, Mich. prep star to earn a tie for second place in the run for individual honors at the end of the two-day competition. Wells was eventually beaten by Cathy Kratzert of Marshall University in a tie-breaker, and was forced to settle for third place.

THE STORY OF the tournament, however, was that Kratzert's Marshall teammates managed to outshoot Wells' MSU cohorts 324 to 327 in the final day of action Sunday, to defeat the Spartans by a 633 to 636 count. The University of Missouri finished in third place, four strokes behind MSU.

Rounding out the scoring for MSU were junior Cathy Hackett, 77-83-160, sophomore Nina Spatafora, 78-84-162, and freshmen Sue Johnson, 81-83-164, Alison Sellers, 80-84-164 and Lisa Brown, 87-83-170.

"I feel really good about how the kids played this weekend," Fossum said. "I'm especially proud of the four freshmen and what they accomplished."

Nevertheless, the Spartan coach was not completely satisfied with the weekend performance of her team.

"WE KNEW MISSOURI and Marshall were strong and that Michigan had a pretty good team," Fossum said, "but there was no team that we thought would be better than us. I told the kids I thought we could win it but that we'd have to play well — the second day we didn't play as well as we could have."

And it was the second day of the tournament that was especially important to MSU. On that day, the 18 holes were played on the Purdue south course, the same course that and we just didn't play as a team."

Kajornsin stated that Purdue only lost one senior from its conference champion team from a year ago, and that they had a very good recruiting year. "Purdue is one of the schools we (MSU) can't compete with off the field," Kajornsin said, "because they can offer full-ride scholarships."

In the Dayton match, Kajornsin conceded the Spartans dominated the majority of the game, but couldn't come up with a very explosive offensive thrust. "Compared to us, Dayton had the faster team," Kajornsin said, "but their passing wasn't very accurate and passes were often behind the intended receivers."

DAYTON SCORED FIRST in the match and took its 1-0 lead into the second half.

In the second half, MSU's Marie Herman found the net for the eventual game-tying goal.

"We (MSU) had the better strategy and we had more shots on goal than Dayton did," Kajornsin said, "we just couldn't put the ball in the net."

MSU's season record is now 6-1-2.

Kickers hopeful; battle Pioneers

After using a five-day layoff to regroup, the MSU soccer team will swing back into action today when the Spartans face Oakland University at Rochester.

MSU's 1-1 tie with the University of Michigan last Wednesday was its fifth game in ten days and the effects were more than evident. MSU coach Joe Baum feels the rest has given his squad a chance to regroup.

"We're mentally and physically ready for Oakland," Baum said. "The layoff gave us a chance to work on some problem areas. The key from now on will be if our offense can play together with more consistency."

Oakland brings a 3-5 season mark into the match, but Baum is cautious about the Pioneers.

"Oakland is a better team than its record shows," Baum remarked. "The team has a number of scholarship players from around the country and they are trying to build a solid unit. The players are just not used to each other and have played inconsistently."

The Pioneers are led by junior forward Tony Hermiz, last season's top scorer with 10 goals, and senior fullback Larry Murray.

Their coach, Wayne Pirmann, looks at this game as the state championship because he feels we are the top two teams in Michigan," Baum said. "I try to down-play that with my players. But it can be a springboard to the second half of the season."

The Spartans were defeated by Oakland, 1-0, in East Lansing last year. The tight series between the two schools has produced one-goal margins in the last four meetings.

Vaughn hospitalized

By DAVE JANSSEN
and ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writers

MSU quarterback Bert Vaughn was admitted to Sparrow Hospital Monday afternoon with what hospital officials listed as "hematuria," the presence of blood in the urine.

Vaughn's physician, Dr. David Hough, could not be reached for additional comment.

Vaughn was injured two weeks ago in MSU's 27-3 loss to the University of Notre Dame. He was reached by telephone at the hospital Monday evening, but was uncertain as to the seriousness of his ailment.

"I don't know anything right now," Vaughn said. "They just let me in this afternoon and are giving me some tests."

Back-up quarterback Bryan Clark went through drills in Monday's practice as the team's No. 1 signal caller. However, when asked if he would be ready for Saturday's game with the University of Wisconsin, Vaughn replied, "I'll be there."

Earlier in the day, talk at MSU coach Darryl Rogers' weekly press conference centered not around Vaughn but around Saturday's MSU-University of Michigan football game. And Rogers was in good spirits.

"After watching it (Saturday's 21-7 loss to U M) on film, it was a good football game and it was well played," the MSU football coach said. "Either team could have won the game and the University of Michigan did. Michigan State could have won if we had come up with some breaks."

He saw good things even in defeat. "I thought we improved greatly on defense and our offense moved the ball better running," he explained. "Steve Smith has been a great back for us," he added, referring to the MSU tailback who has rushed for 512 yards this season and had 101 against the Wolverines.

Rogers emphasized that a loss to the Wolverines doesn't end MSU's season. "A loss to Michigan is always traumatic, but the season is not over and we are still in the Big Ten race," he stressed. "We just cannot lose any more football games if we are to achieve what we set out to do."

So MSU's road to a comeback begins with the University of Wisconsin Saturday in Madison, Wis. The game is a sell-out and will begin at 1:30 p.m. CDT (2:30 in East Lansing).

Spikers third in tourney

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

The Gold Country Classic in Minneapolis, Minn. set the stage for the MSU women's volleyball team to play against some top-notch competition as it finished third in the four-team tournament over the weekend.

The Spartans opened play Friday night against the University of Minnesota and was defeated in four games in the best of five game match, 13-15, 9-15, 15-11 and 14-16.

"Our passing was just terrible," said head coach Annelies Knoppers, "and our serve reception was very bad again."

Knoppers stated that the plane into Minneapolis was delayed for nearly three hours and that by the time the team arrived to play its match against the Gophers there was very little time to prepare. "We made a lot of mental errors in the Minnesota match," Knoppers said.

THE SPARTAN SPIKERS didn't have it any easier in their second match as MSU faced defending national champion Utah State University.

In a match which the Spartans lost 6-15 and 3-15 in the best of three, Knoppers admitted that MSU was simply "out-played. Our passing was a little better, but their blocking was just awesome," Knoppers said. "They had some girls that were 6-0 and 5-11, all of whom had vertical jumps of up to 25 inches. They were blocking some of our shots with their elbows above the net."

Knoppers said that the Spartans have not played against a team this year with the talent possessed by Utah State. "We learned a lot from them," Knoppers said, "and the experience was invaluable."

The spikers pulled themselves together in their final match of the tournament and defeated the University of Kansas in four games, 15-11, 11-15, 15-11 and 15-8.

"We played so much better in the Kansas match," Knoppers said. "We changed our lineup around a little bit and we played excellent defense."

KNOPPERS PRAISED FRESHMAN Jackie Carter's play in the Kansas match, as well as the overall performance of junior Mary Jane Williams. "Jackie really started hitting the ball and was almost literally ripping the cover right off," Knoppers said, "and Mary Jane played all the way through the entire match and really played well."

Knoppers pointed to the fact that MSU had the shortest team in the tournament, but could have looked much better. "We did face some great competition in this tournament," Knoppers said, "but our serve reception and our blocking still have a ways to come before everything will be together."

The spikers, who face the University of Michigan at 7 tonight in the IM Sports West arena, practiced serve reception and blocking Monday and should be ready for tonight's action.

MSU defeated the Wolverines in the two teams' only match of the season thus far, winning the semi-final match in the Spartan Invitational.

DEATHTRAP
Monday, February 25
An entertaining, hilarious, devilishly fiendishly clever, ingenious, absolutely spellbinding, chilling comedy-thriller. In other words, a hit! Don't miss it! (Also a University Series event)

HARRY BELAFONTE
Tuesday, April 8
The Belafonte mystique is many things. There's the voice, "crystal-pure and tender as an Irish tenor's" but, also "as full of animal lust as a blues singer's." Belafonte is a recording artist (33 albums to date), a concert singer, Broadway TV - Film star, friend to the meek and the mighty, humanitarian. A musical evening with Harry Belafonte is an unforgettable experience.

All shows in the University Auditorium at 8:15 p.m.

Firms seek China trade

Nine firms will participate in Michigan's first trade mission to the People's Republic of China next week, offering technology high on the Chinese shopping list, it was announced Monday.

The mission will run Oct. 14 through 29, and will be led in its initial Peking meetings by Gov. William G. Milliken. He also is leading an official visit Oct. 15 through 27 by a delegation of seven state governors.

Michigan is seeking to expand its largely agriculturally oriented trade with China to include more industrial items.

In 1978, Michigan exported 15,650 metric tons of wheat, 1,300 metric tons of other agricultural products to China. "The People's Republic of China represents a new and growing market for American technology and American products, Milliken said.

"The Chinese people have a special need for modern industrial know-how and equipment — areas in which Michigan leads the nation," he said. "This is a working group. Its effort should lead to export

Operation changes limbs

NEW YORK (UPI) — In what may be the first American operation of its kind, doctors reattached a left foot to the right leg of a woman whose limbs were severed by a commuter train this weekend.

"As far as we can determine, this is the first time a transposition of a lower limb has been performed in the United States," Dr. Thomas Crais, a member of the Bellevue Hospital surgical team that performed the eight-hour operation, said Sunday.

Crais said the patient, Adrienne Brown, 19, of Queens, was in satisfactory condition following the operation Saturday.

Brown's right leg was severed below the knee, her right foot was crushed and her left leg was crushed between the ankle and the knee Saturday when she was struck by a Conrail commuter train in an accident in Harlem.

He said the foot was "living on its own blood supply. In 10 to 14 days we'll have a good idea of how functional it is."
