Trustee Stack to leave MSU board in '80

By TIM SIMMONS and MICHELE McELMURRY
State News Staff Writers

Dr. Jack M. Stack, one of two University trustees whose term expires in 1980, will not run for re-election to the MSU board next year.

Stack, an Alma physician and one of two Republicans on the Board of Trustees, said he would like to see someone with an agricultural background succeed him in 1980.

"I have a considerable concern because there is no one with an agricultural background on the board," Stack said. "It would be wise to nominate a person for the board with an agricultural background. It is a major industry in the state and MSU has a unique role as a land grant college."

Stack, who has served on the board since 1973, urged both Democrats and Republicans to find a candidate who is a representative of agriculture.

"It is important that the person be fairly independent, but both parties should give considerable thought to making sure an agricultural person is nominated," he said. "I will urge the Republican party to do that," he said.

Stack said he believes the establishment of the department of family practice in the College of Human Medicine was one of the board's major accomplishments in the past seven and one-half years.

Similar programs in family practice were also instituted at Wayne State University and the University of Michigan after MSU's program was developed.

The MSU trustee said he expects to become more involved in medical research, community mental health education, a child abuse prevention project and the editing of a new medical journal after he leaves the board.

"There is a limit to the amount of time and energy one can devote to professional activities and other areas simultaneously," Stack said. "This does take up a considerable amount of my time and energy."

Stack added he believes his eight years on the board will sufficiently repay his debt to the University for providing him with an educational opportunity.

The MSU alumnus, whose independent actions often caused him to vote against party lines, confirmed Friday earlier speculations that he would not seek re-election.

"I have been perceived by others to function that way (independently)," Stack said. "I am clearly not aligned with any special interest groups."

Stack also was the first male member of the National Organization for Women when he joined the Lansing chapter in 1972. He has been a strong advocate of women's rights and a supporter of a campus rape counseling and prevention center.

Trustee Aubrey Radcliffe, R-East Lansing, is also up for re-election in 1980, but has made no formal decision concerning his position.

In September, Radcliffe said he may oppose U.S. Representative Bob Carr for the Sixth Congressional District seat in the 1980 elections.

"I have not made up my mind if I will run for the Board of Trustees or the United States Congress," Radcliffe said. "My intentions are to run for Congress, although finances are a factor."

U.S. EMBASSY SEIZED

Shah's return demanded

By The Associated Press

A mob of Iranian students overran U.S. Marine guards in a three-hour struggle Sunday and invaded the American Embassy in Tehran, seizing dozens of staff members as hostages, Tehran Radio reported. They demanded that the United States send the exiled shah back to Iran for trial, the radio said.

No serious injuries were reported. Tehran radio said as many as 100 hostages were being held, but an Iranian Foreign Ministry spokesman said he believed it was fewer than 45 — about 35 Americans and seven or eight Iranians.

He said an estimated 200 or 300 students were involved.

The Tehran Radio broadcasts, monitored in London, said the embassy's Marine guards hurled tear gas canisters but were unable to hold back the waves of students. None of the broadcasts mentioned any weapons besides the tear gas.

Some unconfirmed reports said the hostages were blindfolded and handcuffed, but the Foreign Ministry spokesman denied this, saying the embassy takeover was "a very peaceful exercise. They are dealing with them very nicely."

Asked whether the students were armed, he said only he had heard no reports that they were.

The spokesman, who was contacted by telephone from New York, said a Scandinavian ambassador in Tehran would act as a mediator "to try to convince the students to get out of the compound." He said an Iranian Moslem religious leader also was reportedly trying to talk the invaders into leaving.

The spokesman, who asked not to be named, said he was unsure of the identities of the two mediators.

The State Department said in Washington the Iranian government had "given assurances that our people being held are safe and well."

Tehran Radio said the Marines and other "mercenaries" — not further identified — were safe in a room and "No violent action has been taken against them."

An official at the British Embassy, reached by phone from London, said it appeared "as though the hostages are having to spend the night in the basement. There is no knowing how long they are going to be held."

The Foreign Ministry spokesman said that after the takeover thousands of other Iranians converged on the spacious embassy compound, along a once-fashionable boulevard in central Tehran, and milled around outside, shouting anti-American slogans.

Just hours after the embassy invasion, seven demonstrators chained themselves inside the Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor to protest the ousted Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's presence in New York.

Mayor Graves sees Frandor as alternate site for Hudson mall

By MICHAEL VEH
State News Staff Writer

An unusual development in the Dayton Hudson mall issue took place Friday, when Lansing's mayor announced the Frandor shopping center as a possible alternative to the proposed mall at U.S. 127 and Lake Lansing Road.

Mayor Gerald W. Graves suggested the possibility of constructing a Hudson store in the northeast corner of the Frandor property, adjacent to the Marshall Music store.

Graves said that a letter had been sent to the president of the J.L. Hudson Co. on Oct. 31. Graves said he hoped Hudson's would "be receptive" to the plan.

Daniel Swantko, project director for Dayton Hudson properties, said the Hudson people had not received any sort of development suggestion.

He said the suggestion, when received, would probably be rejected.

"THERE HAVE BEEN numerous studies done," he said, "and the (Dayton Hudson) Corporation has consistently said we still think our site on Lake Lansing Road is the best one, and I don't see anything that was presented today as changing that."

Swantko said Graves was presenting his plan as if Hudson's had already approved it. "I think that is a flat out lie," he said.

East Lansing Mayor George Griffiths called Graves' announcement an "unconscionable intrusion into the political process of the City of East Lansing."

"This is a disservice to the merchants of Frandor, and a disservice to the citizens of Lansing," he said.

Graves' announcement was "empty, shallow, nonsense, political trickery," Griffiths said.

"As Mr. Swantko has pointed out, there is nothing to the mayor's proposal," he said.

GRIFFITHS SAID SWANTKO had been in contact with representatives of both J.L. Hudson's and Dayton Hudson, and had assured Griffiths that there was "no possibility of Hudson's ever considering the Frandor location."

Griffiths called Graves' proposal "an absolute political frock."

The plans drawn up for the possible Frandor development include using a portion of the empty Ranney Park land east of Frandor for parking.

Graves said he had not contacted any of east side Lansing neighborhood groups concerning using parts of the park for a parking lot.

"The Parks Department feels that this plot cannot be further developed," he said. Graves said the development portions of the park will not be destroyed.

Swantko said Graves' announcement could affect Tuesday's advisory vote.

"I HOPE THE people of East Lansing will see this as a deliberate attempt to confuse the issue, and they will see through it," Swantko said.

"The whole thing's a real circus show," said Wayne Williams, chairperson of the Citizens for a Better East Lansing.

"The biggest thing is his (Graves) regional attitude," said Williams, a former member of the Executive Board for the Regional Chamber of Commerce.

"He's destroying, with this ploy, everyone's efforts for regional sharing of resources," Williams said.

"There's no wonder why the Oldsmobile plant is in Delta Township and the Coca-Cola plant and Delta Dental is out there," he said, "because they cannot communicate with this man."

New communist group says class struggle, not racial conflict, cause of attack on unionists

By The Associated Press

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Leaders of a newly formed communist group said Sunday that class struggle — not racial conflict — was responsible for the attack on a weekend anti-Ku Klux Klan rally that left four persons dead.

"We are not dealing primarily with the Klan in this thing. We are dealing with the state, the government, the capitalists," Johnson said as he met Sunday with reporters.

"If I am murdered, the blame lies with the state," he added. "The Klan is nothing but an instrument of the government." Johnson received wounds in both arms during the attack Saturday.

Members of the communist group that sponsored an anti-Ku Klux Klan rally in North Carolina said Sunday they planned a funeral demonstration for their four slain comrades "and this time we're going to be armed."

Mike Young, a spokesperson for the New York-based Communist Workers Party, U.S.A., said he does not know when and where the funeral demonstration will be held.

He said the demonstrators would arm themselves "because we don't believe in protection by the police. . . We're not going to be under the illusion that somebody else might not just drop by and open fire on us."

The bloodbath at an anti-Ku Klux Klan rally in Greensboro, N.C., was a natural outgrowth of unabated recent Klan violence, Southern civil rights leaders say, calling for an immediate federal inquiry.

OVER THE PAST 18 months, the various organizations operating in the guise of the Hooded Order have become increasingly militant, inciting violence reminiscent of the mid 1960s in Selma and Decatur, Ala., and Tupelo and Okolona, Miss.

There is no proof that Saturday's assault on a "Death to the Klan" rally in Greensboro that left four dead and 10 wounded was the work of the KKK, and leaders of the local klaverns (groups) in the area said they had nothing to do with it.

While police said some of the suspects were avowed members of the Klan, local KKK leaders said they were members of other right wing organizations. Two Klan sources and a Nazi leader said some of the suspects were Nazis, but that could not be confirmed.

Young said the four dead — Sandy Smith, of Piedmont, S.C.; Jim Waller, William Sampson and Caesar Caucue of Greensboro — were active union leaders in the textile mills of North Carolina and therefore, Young said, they were "deliberately fingered" for death.

Two different Klan leaders said Sunday the ambush was the work of Nazis, but there was no proof of that either.

Greensboro police said at least some of the 12 men jailed on murder charges — all from towns outside of Greensboro — admitted they were members of the Klan.

and civil rights organizations want something done about the resurgent nightriders.

HAROLD COVINGTON of Raleigh, state unit commander of the National Socialist Party of America, said one of the jailed men, Roland Wayne Wood of Winston-Salem, was the Forsyth County unit leader for the Nazis. Covington said the other 11 jailed men were "whites rights advocates" and he recognized some names among them as Klansmembers.

"We're reminded of days 15 years ago when the Klan attempted to rule social conduct by fear and violence," said Steve Suits, executive director of the Atlanta-based Southern Regional Council, which monitors civil rights and economic progress in the Southeast.

"It is not surprising that those folks who committed those acts of violence thought they could get away with it, since other acts of violence in the past 18 months have gone without arrests or indictments."

Suits said the only "serious investigation and prosecution" of Klan violence in that period was in Alabama earlier this year. A federal jury convicted 10 Klansmembers from Talladega and Sylacauga of various acts of terrorism in east-central Alabama.

A shootout between Klansmembers and black demonstrators on the street of Decatur, Ala., last summer left two Blacks and two Whites wounded. U.S. Attorney J.R. Brooks in Birmingham announced two weeks ago that the Justice Department would not prosecute anyone, and his office refused to release a report on its investigation into the incident.

Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference in Atlanta, says the Klan is growing in violence, if not in size, and on Sunday he urged President Carter to take action.

"I'M NOT SURE the Klan is rising in significant numbers, but the intensity of their violence is a grave threat to this country," he said. "I think we've sown the wind and are reaping the whirlwind."

Calling on Carter to instruct the Justice Department to start a "major offensive" against the Klan, the SCLC leader said:

"I think the Klan, which is born in racial hatred and nurtured on murderous violence, needs the immediate attention of the nation's highest level of criminal investigation."

There are many different fragmented and splintered organizations using the initials KKK, and all are secretive about their true strength.

Also on Sunday Mayor Jim Melvin defended his city's police department's handling of a protest that led to the shooting deaths of four anti-Ku Klux Klan demonstrators and the wounding of ten other persons.

But he said the department's response to Saturday's violence would be investigated by the City Council. Civil rights leaders, however, demanded an independent investigation.

It was a chilly autumn day, but the temperature didn't deter the runners in the third annual East Lansing State Bank 10,000 Meter Run. For more pictures and related story, see page 12.

Mekong River opens; Cambodian aid may move

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP)—The aid bottleneck to Cambodia may be broken soon with the opening of the Mekong River for deliveries of food and medicine to Phnom Penh, sources here said Sunday on the eve of a U.N. conference on aid for starving Cambodians.

The well-informed sources, who asked not to be identified by name, said the situation is also improving at Cambodia's only deepwater port, Kompong Som, which has only four usable berths. They estimated the port's capacity to unload food and other supplies is increasing from 350 tons per day per ship and may reach 800 tons per day.

In New York, a former Cambodian politician said he will ask the United Nations at its one-day conference Monday to help set up a demilitarized zone through which food could be funneled into Cambodia, where some estimates say as many as 2 million persons face death from starvation.

Chhang Song, a former Cambodian information minister, said he would ask the world body to grant an international commission jurisdiction over a swath of land 125 miles long and 16 miles wide along Cambodia's border with Thailand, where the work of most relief agencies currently is concentrated.

Bolivia regime cracks down on protesters

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP)—Two Bolivian air force jet fighters roared over downtown La Paz on Sunday with their guns blazing, scattering students and workers who had gathered in a central plaza to protest the 4-day-old military regime.

The buzzing incident followed a night of bloody clashes between soldiers and civilians in which Red Cross and hospital officials said at least 20 civilians were killed and 40 wounded.

A broadcast communique issued by the new military administration of Col. Alberto Natusch, who led a coup against the civilian government last Thursday, described Saturday night's bloody crack down and the jet flights Sunday as part of a "cleanup" operation.

There were no immediate reports of casualties from the plane gunfire. It appeared that the pilots sought only to intimidate the civilians in San Francisco Plaza and did not fire directly at them.

The plaza was also surrounded by about 20 tanks and armored cars, and one was heard firing a cannon shot.

The square is five blocks from the presidential palace, Natusch's headquarters. A local report said the planes attacked the presidential palace, but journalists who later went to the palace found it to be untrue.

Margaret Thatcher—keeping her promises

LONDON (AP)—In the six months since sweeping to power as Europe's first woman prime minister, Margaret Thatcher has acquired a new nickname: "Attila the Hen."

Unlike the Soviets' "Iron Lady" tag, "Attila the Hen" comes from closer to home — the senior colleagues of a prime minister who has quickly put her own stamp on Britain.

From the first weekend spent personally telephoning even junior appointees after her Conservative Party's May 3 election victory, the 54-year-old Thatcher has been determined to do things her way. At home, she has started dismantling state socialism as she promised — lowering the income tax, increasing the sales tax and slashing public spending by $7.25 billion.

The government began selling off large chunks of state-owned industries this week, including 5 percent of its 51 percent share, or $600 million worth of British Petroleum.

The woman behind Britain's swing to the right has emerged as a tireless leader who spares no one — least of all her colleagues.

Chrysler workers may have to sacrifice more

DETROIT (AP)—Chrysler Corp. workers could conceivably make further sacrifices on behalf of the company a few years from now, the head of the United Auto Workers union said Sunday.

UAW President Douglas A. Fraser predicted Chrysler had about a "70-30, 60-40, something like that" chance of attaining profitability again with the help of the union and federal aid.

"It's a chance worth taking," he said on CBS's "Face the Nation" program.

Asked what UAW members would do if Chrysler should need further help to

"tip it towards success," Fraser said: "If it should come to pass that the very survival of the Chrysler Corp. would depend on the workers doing something additional, I think that the workers would respond in an affirmative fashion."

In a contract currently being voted on, the UAW gave up what it said was $403 million to help the struggling No. 3 automaker. Last week, the Carter administration announced its support of federal loan guarantees of up to $1.5 billion for the company.

Kennedy, Brown to declare candidacy

WASHINGTON (AP)—Efforts to wrest the 1980 Democratic nomination away from President Carter get under way in earnest this week as two challengers — Massachusetts Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and California Gov. Edmund G. Brown — formally declare their candidacies.

Kennedy goes first, with an announcement scheduled for Wednesday in Boston's Faneuil Hall. His declaration is to be followed on Thursday by Brown's announcement at the National Press Club in Washington.

Both candidates will then hit the campaign trail with appearances scheduled for New Hampshire and Massachusetts, two early primary states.

President Carter plans to announce his candidacy for a second term on Dec.

House votes on welfare-revision bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House votes this week on President Carter's welfare-revision bill, which would put a definite payment floor under many welfare recipients for the first time.

In a tactical vote last week, Republicans who oppose the bill — and there are a lot of them — lost their chance to try to modify it much on the House floor. The House voted 209-177 to limit amendments severely, assuring a final vote on the version approved by the Ways and Means Committee.

That version, already scaled down considerably from what Carter asked two years ago, would for the first time set a minimum aid level for many welfare recipients — guaranteeing them direct payments or food stamps equal to at least 65 percent of the poverty level.

SENATE COMMITTEE FORCING A DECISION

Carter may face tax choice

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Carter, who once called the U.S. tax code a "disgrace to the human race," may soon face a tough choice between accepting repeal of a key 1976 tax reform or vetoing his high-priority "windfall profits" tax.

The Senate Finance Committee is trying to force that choice on the president.

The committee voted unanimously last month to attach repeal of the "carryover" provision, a major change in the way the government taxes inherited property, as a rider to the windfall bill.

Tax Reform Act of 1976. It would tax capital gains on the sale of inherited property based on the property's original value instead of its value at the time of inheritance.

For instance, under the old law, if a person bought stock worth $10,000 and 10 years later willed it to a relative when it was worth $55,000 and if the heir later sold it for $60,000, the heir paid capital gains tax on only $5,000 instead of the total $50,000 appreciation.

The new law, which is to be implemented on Jan. 1, 1980, would tax the entire difference between the original cost and the eventual selling price.

Treasury Department official, who asked not to be identified. "It's a complete giveaway to the rich. It is the classic tax loophole."

However, critics of the new law — including some of Capitol Hill's most powerful lobbies — say it is too complex to be workable and contend the government should be content with what it receives in estate taxes.

"I don't see why the government feels it has to get that much more blood," said Robert L. Bevan of the American Bankers Association, a leading supporter of the repeal drive.

ESTATE TAXES RANGE from 18 percent to 70 percent, although the law effectively frees from taxes all but the wealthiest 3 percent of U.S. estates.

Repeal is also backed by the American Bar Association and Organizations representing farmers and small businesses. In addition, repeal has strong backing in both houses of Congress.

The success or failure of the Finance Committee's attempt to make repeal a rider on the windfall tax is likely to be decided by a House-Senate conference that will reconcile differences in the windfall bills passed by the two chambers.

The House-passed version of the windfall bill does not contain the repeal proposal.

The windfall-tax, now awaiting Senate floor action, would take back some of the extra revenue gained by oil companies as the result of the decontrol of domestic oil prices.

THE REPEAL EFFORT

has drawn threats of a presidential veto. But administration officials concede it would be hard for Carter to veto the windfall bill, which is needed to finance an array of Carter-backed energy initiatives.

The "carryover" tax provision was a central part of the public interest groups and labor unions say return to the old law would benefit primarily the very rich and cost the government nearly $1 billion a year in lost tax revenue.

"There is simply no justification for the old law," said a

Oil disruptions hurt Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP)—Don't blame the Soviet Union for oil-export disruptions in Iran and elsewhere around the world, CIA analysts have told Congress. The Soviets themselves would suffer in the long run, from such disruptions, the analysts said.

"Any disruption would increase the price they would have to pay," a House intelligence subcommittee was told by Maurice Ernst, director of the Central Intelligence Agency's office of economic research.

He made his comments in a close-door meeting Oct. 17, and a transcript of most of the proceedings was released Sunday by Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis.

Ernst told the subcommittee that Soviet oil production likely would "peak this year or next" and then start declining. And he added, "The Soviets are faced with a labor problem, a productivity problem and an energy problem at the same time."

In such a situation, he said, it is unlikely Soviet leaders would encourage disruption of oil production in any of the Oil Producing and Exporting Countries — or encourage anything else that would raise prices — since that "would make their problem worse."

More likely, Ernst said, OPEC "increases in price result primarily from a limitation in production" by nations deciding that their own best interest calls for "stretching out their reserves over long periods."

The most significant recent export disruption since last year when the Shah of Iran was overthrown by followers of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. The CIA analysts said that was not the Soviets' doing.

"I don't think the Khomeini movement in any way was a result of Soviet action," said John Eckland, chief of the CIA's petroleum supply analysis center.

Challenged on that point by Rep. John Ashbrook, R-Ohio, Eckland replied, "The Soviets have been the biggest losers in the short term from the cutoff of energy of Iran."

'Exhausted' Ryan resigns; 'can't handle it anymore'

By SUSIE BENKELMAN
State News Staff Writer

An "exhausted" Pat Ryan, Ingham County Commissioner from Lansing resigned Friday, saying he "just can't handle it any more."

With his golden retriever "Duke" nearby, Ryan informally addressed a full house at a press conference he scheduled for Friday.

"I am resigning for one reason," the 35-year-old Democrat said. "It's not that I'm in trouble. I'm not in that big of trouble. The one reason is exhaustion. I just can't handle it anymore."

Ryan's "trouble" has been his recent failure to pay $149.50 in city income taxes for 1976 through 1978 and an arrest for keeping junk cars in his Lansing backyard, which violates a city ordinance.

"I'm going to clean up my back yard. I'm going to try to do some other things different," he said.

"My junkyard. Big deal, I mean big deal, huh?" he said. "I've enjoyed playing with junk cars all my life."

"My income tax, yeah, that and a bunch of other things," he said. "It doesn't mean much. The real reason they want me is because I understand some dynamics in the community that other people don't understand."

Ryan has been one of four targets of a recent campaign by a citizens group that claims four Ingham County commissioners are "anti-law enforcement." The group says the four were instrumental in drawing up the 1980 county budget which deletes funding for nine positions in the sheriff's department.

Mark Grebner, Jess Sobel and Thomas Mitchell have been selected, along with Ryan, as recall candidates. The group, Citizens for the Preservation of Law Enforcement, formed shortly after the budget meeting Sept. 23.

Ryan said that "certain groups" of people may try to take credit for his resignation, but that it was totally his own decision.

"Well, I've buried myself deep, and if they want to take credit for it they can," he said. "Things and charges against me have been overblown. But I can do a service by getting out of public life," he said.

"I could win this fight if I weren't so tired," he said. "But I'd have to burn out the rest of my friends and the rest of the people who feel the same way I do."

"There's so much to be done," he said. "I wish I could do more."

Ryan related his recent "battles" to his experiences as a marine in the Vietnam war.

"My adult life, and my attitude about everything was framed and formed in Vietnam," he said.

He added that the Vietnam battle was one that taught him tenacity, intensity and the importance of deciding priorities.

"This latest fight isn't the biggest fight I've been in," he said. "I am feared far beyond my abilities."

"I haven't been abandoned. It's not that other people wouldn't help me," he said. "I just got to the point where I couldn't do everything. I was burnt to the core."

"I'm 35, I'm broke, and essentially my parents have been supporting me and that's OK," he said. "But the inflexibility of my support goes beyond any other type of need. Material needs are all secondary to me. Well, that all came crashing down."

"I'm not naive," he said. "People aren't going to leave me alone. They've got to bury me deep."

Ryan said he has some apologies to make, and that all "political favors" that people may owe him are "dissolved."

"I'm sorry for a number of people I might have hurt," he said. "I'm sorry for people I may have let down."

"But anything I've always done is absolutely truthful to the people."

GLASSBLOWING TAKES METTLE

Ancient craft is essential

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

"Glass is as old as the pyramids and as new as tomorrow's unborn dawn," — Helmut Drechsel, scientific glassblower.

The unsung heroes of modern research may well be the scientific glassblowers.

They are, after all, responsible for custom making all the glassware required for research.

"Scientific research sort of revolves around scientific glassblowers," said Peter Severn, a master scientific glassblower with 20 years experience from the University of Michigan.

"Anything in the scientific world that has glass involved with it has a scientific glassblower involved somewhere along the line," he added.

SEVERN WAS ONE of about 30 scientific glassblowers from universities and private businesses who gathered at MSU Saturday for a glassblowing symposium sponsored by the Great Lakes Section of the American Scientific Glassblowers Society (ASGS).

Glassblowers at the symposium had previously made such devices as models of the inner ear, molds for artificial kidneys and an artificial lung, all of glass.

Severn had made some of the glass items needed for the first heart transplant.

On Saturday, however, the glassblowers did not attempt any exotic scientific apparatus — which can take up to several weeks to make. Instead, they made simple glass novelty items, such as vases, which could be finished in 10 or 15 minutes.

Glassblowing is accomplished by heating a glass tube over a flame while slowly turning it and gently blowing into one end of the tube, Severn said. The entire process requires practice and dexterity.

ALTHOUGH SCIENTIFIC GLASS-BLOWERS make their living by making scientific items, Severn said they enjoy creating novelties in their spare time.

Occasionally they make items to be auctioned off for charity benefits, he added.

The big difference between novelty glassblowers and scientific glassblowers however, is the amount of time it takes to learn each craft.

It takes about five years of apprenticeship and about five years as a junior glassblower before a person actually becomes a master scientific glassblower. A person can learn to make simple glass novelty items in a matter of weeks.

There is a shortage of scientific glassblowers in the country, however, the ASGS has only about a thousand members and there probably are not many scientific glassblowers who are not associated with the group.

Council considers prostitution patrol

Allocation of about $47,000 for a special police patrol to rid Lansing neighborhoods of prostitution will be considered by City Council at 7 tonight on the tenth floor of City Hall.

The council will first vote on setting up a "flexipatrol," a five person police squad that will have options of dressing in uniform or plainclothes, method of transportation and the area in which they work.

The patrol will have the flexibility of being able to work in different areas of the city, so that they can move to the area that needs assistance most.

Four officers and one sergeant will be transferred from the federally funded STAR program. Funds for the operation, Stop All Traffic Accidents Right, will run out at the end of November, said First Wark Councilmember Robert Hull.

The money from the city's contingency funds, along with funds from the police department, will keep the flexipatrol in operation until the end of June. At that time a report analyzing the efficiency and effectiveness of the patrol will be made.

The council's action follows pressure from a neighborhood group, Stamp out Pimps and Prostitutes, that has voiced considerable anxiety over the prostitution problem in the city.

The residents have complained that they could not leave their homes without being harassed by prostitutes, their managers or potential customers.

Members from the group have attended City Council meetings and have asked the city to prevent non-neighborhood traffic from driving through the area of Eureka and Eighth streets, where prostitution has become a major problem.

Group promotes women in politics

By MOLLY MIKA
State News Staff Writer

Women are no longer going to be envelope-stuffers; they are going to be the candidates, said Helen Milliken Saturday at the Michigan Republican Women's Task Force conference.

The task force is promoting women for political office and striving for a 50 percent representation next July in the 1980 Republican National Convention in Detroit.

Milliken, a task force member, is also the national co-chairperson of ERAmerica, which represents 230 national organizations in support of the Equal Rights Amendment.

The task force met to develop methods to improve the representation of women in politics, particularly at the national convention.

AT THE 1976 Republican National Convention, women comprised only 34 percent of the delegates.

There will be 1,993 delegates to the 1980 Republican National Convention and an equal number of alternates.

The delegates nominate the Republican candidates for president and vice president, develop a Republican platform and adopt rules for the functioning of the party over the next four years.

"My job is to build the party so that when we go to Detroit, we can elect anyone we nominate," said the guest speaker, Mary Dent Crisp, co-chairperson of the Republican National Committee.

Crisp added that women must run for political office at the local, state and national levels if they are to be truly represented in government.

ONLY 10 PERCENT of all elected offices are held by women, Crisp said. At the national level, there are only 17 women in Congress — the same number of women that were in Congress 40 years ago.

"Women must politicize themselves and develop the skills and knowledge needed to change the present administration," Crisp said. "President Carter is not addressing the

COMPLETION SET FOR FALL '81

Building will feature innovations

By PAUL CURTIS
State News Staff Writer

The $21.5 million Communication Arts and Sciences building, scheduled for completion in the fall of 1981, will feature innovations for each department housed there.

A major advantage of the building is that it will house all the offices and classrooms of the College of Communication Arts and Sciences (CCAS), Dean Erwin P. Bettinghaus said.

"Students who have had to run all over campus to add and drop classes will appreciate this building," he added.

The building will house the offices of all of the departments, which are currently scattered all over campus. The Union, Auditorium, Linton Hall, Journalism Building, South Kedzie Hall and the Audiology and Speech Sciences Building currently house all CCAS offices.

THE CCAS CONSISTS of the schools of journalism, advertising, communications, telecommunications and audiology and speech sciences.

"It will be the most accessible building on campus," he said. "It will also be the most energy-efficient building here."

A thermal storage system, one of the first in the United States, will capture heat from television studio lighting and other sources. It will then store the energy in a 270,000 gallon water tank below the building.

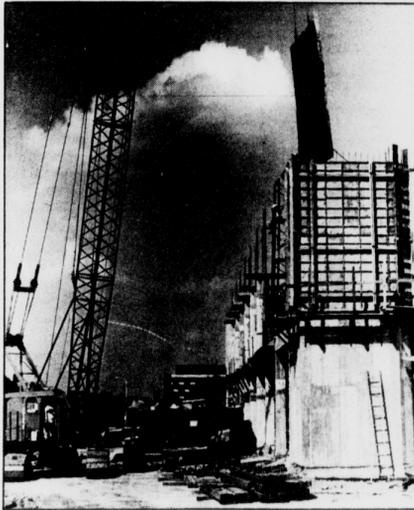

The tank will be used to supplement energy needed to heat the building in the winter and cool it in the summer.

The building will house WKAR radio and television, and WMSN radio, and will have six television studios, a 272-seat lecture hall, six smaller classrooms and special facilities for each department.

IT WILL ALSO have laboratories and reading rooms to be used by all departments.

The auditorium will be completely automated, Bettinghaus said, and will be the largest room on campus capable of producing video tapes and films.

Highway sign research project may be misleading motorists

By JOHN PATTISON
State News Staff Writer

Some motorists during the past few years have thought they were headed toward Kalamazoo via Farm Lane. They probably noticed a large, green "Interstate 94" highway sign with the word "Kalamazoo" straddling Farm Lane, near Forest Road.

The sign is mounted on the southern side of a metal superstructure. Three smaller "exit" signs are affixed to the northern side. They are part of a defunct Michigan State Highway Department research project.

"The area is not currently being used and we're thinking about phasing it out entirely," said John Haley, technician with the State Highway Department.

Research is underway that may result in the dismantling of the signs, Haley said.

THE SIGN TEST area was created in the fall of 1957, said Jerry Rademaker, supervisor for the Statewide Overhead Sign Crew.

The area was used to test different types of signs and materials prior to their use on Michigan highways, Rademaker added.

"Different types of scotch-light tape were tested for headlight reflectability," he said. Rademaker noted the lettering on most Michigan highway signs is made from such tape.

The signs were tested for durability in various weather conditions, Rademaker said. Different types of fasteners, such as cadmium-plated or stainless steel bolts, were also used in experiments.

Rademaker said the test area was used to eliminate problems in signs before they were installed on the highway.

"YOU WOULDN'T WANT to go out to U.S. 10 in Southfield to find the bolts in the sign you installed two years ago had rusted through and you had to replace them with six lanes of traffic coming at you," Rademaker said.

Nonetheless, the highway department has switched to testing signs in actual job locations, Rademaker added.

"The last time I was out to the sign test area was five years ago," he said. That was when his crew put up the exit signs.

"I'm one of the old boys on the erection crew," Rademaker said. "If I mention the sign test area, there isn't anybody out here that knows what I'm talking about. The employees that helped on that are either retired or moved up to higher positions to get away from roadwork."

Rademaker transferred into the overhead sign crew in 1958.

Mall not needed

The advantages of building the Dayton Hudson mall in East Lansing can be quickly stated — much more so than the long list of ill effects the mall would have on the community. Consequently, the Dayton Hudson mall should not be built. Supporters of the mall cite the increased tax revenue as being paramount in their defense of the mall. Although the tax relief the mall will provide is very much needed by East Lansing homeowners, the building of an unnecessary shopping complex is not the best solution to the city's tax/revenue problems. Certainly the administrators of East Lansing can initiate a better proposal to alleviate the problems of increasing taxes without the citizens having to bear the burden of a regional shopping center.

The controversial nature of the mall proposal is one reason to question its validity. Land originally set aside for agricultural development is now slated as the future mall site. The surrounding area is predominantly non-commercial, as was originally intended, and would have to be drastically modified to accommodate the mall. The commercial development of this area will be devastating if the present plans for the mall go into effect. Sewage and drainage problems that the mall will present are going to be a constant source of trouble. Utilities that have been provided for this area cannot be expected to handle the increased workload the mall will put on them.

The tactics used by the developers to sway the vote of the people are simply intolerable. Developers have threatened to build the mall on a site across the street in Lansing Township.

If the developers were able to build the mall at this alleged site across the street from Lake Lansing Road and U.S. 127, then it seems quite ironic that they have invested such a large amount of time and money to get the current site approved. Consequently, their threats are both idle and ambiguous.

By and large, students at MSU are not going to benefit from the mall. Few students have access to transportation to the mall, which will be located two miles from the campus. The jobs that businesses in the mall will provide will be jobs with minimum wages, and these jobs will probably be filled by local high school students who have easier access to the mall than MSU students.

Another major problem is that it will damage an already dangerous traffic problem in East Lansing. Some argue that this will not be so, since East Lansing may be by-passed by those wishing to get to the mall. Somehow it seems physically impossible for East Lansing residents to by-pass East Lansing when trying to get to a mall located in the same community.

In general, the mall is a threat to the interests and desires of the members of the greater Lansing area.

College radicals are needed

Whatever happened to the days when being a modern college student meant being a good, leftist radical? For many of us, it seems as though those good old days have been as far removed from the collegiate scene as the Republicans from the grasp of reality. I suppose being a radical is no longer the "in" thing to do; but I cannot understand how the decline of radicalism means this country has to be the spawning ground for a bevy of young conservatives. Or then again, does it?

Many of the same fiercely hated conservatives who are lobbying against the legalization of abortion are also thwarting efforts to extend aid to desperate Vietnamese and Cambodian refugees. Do these conservatives not understand that perhaps the world is unable to adequately feed the people it has because there are too many people and not enough food to go around? Then, if this were understood — which unfortunately it must not be — there would be no battle against abortion rights on the premise that precious lives would be wasted. It would be undeniably clear that an increasing world population will perpetually worsen the food situation for all of us — that means for your children as well as mine.

For today's college student who wants to see this country get back on the right track to progress, one of the best and most hotly debated issues to take a firm, liberal stance on is abortion. In this viewpoint, my main intent is not to support abortion per se — although every woman on this earth should have the right to choose her own future — instead, my main intent is to show the incongruities and convoluted logic lurking beneath the arguments of those who lobby against abortions in general; and more specifically against federally funded abortions for poor women.

One of the major problems of several million politically minded Americans is that they have not been able to distinguish between hard facts, soft facts and facts that are totally irrelevant. Granted, this is not an easy task, but for a society of people who are supposedly as educated as Americans are, then it is not an impossibility.

Point One: Too many groups who oppose abortions for poor women have been unable or unwilling to argue that they are against the general concept of abortion. Instead, they have singled out poor women (of which a disproportionately large number happen to be Black), as undeserving of federal support for abortions. Some people think that abortions are just for the poor and the indigent, and then again, some people are just plain "dumb." The argument that the main issue is the funding of abortions, though an argument founded on conservative American principles, is shallow, narrow-minded, inept and irrelevant to the issue at stake.

The issue at stake should be the legality of abortions: not whether the government should participate in their funding. If one is going to take a stance for or against abortion, then that stance should consider all women — not just those who are unable to meet the economic "middle-class" standards of a WASP society.

One must reluctantly admit there is some substance to the claim that the federal government should not participate in the funding of abortions. After all, the feds have their hands in almost every aspect of our lives, and the government should not get in the habit of defining morality. There has to be a point when the people of this country demand the extension of personal freedoms from government intervention.

Unquestionably, there are many people who would vehemently be opposed to seeing the feds venture into the business of "baby killing." However, the federal government is already involved, and those who want to see them removed should address themselves to the problem. Some of the more liberal right-to-lifers say that abortion is OK as long as the feds don't finance it. Under those principles, it should be OK with an almost casual disregard of where the financing comes from. Poor women, theoretically, are no different from rich women, so why is it that they should not be allowed to have abortions?

Point Two: Another major issue concerning abortion which has been subbed in the rhetoric of the right-to-lifers is the inability of our society to see abortion both as a medical and a social issue. Some people pointlessly argue that an abortion should be performed only when the life of the mother is in jeopardy. Is the mother to have no say in the matter? After all, isn't it she that is burdened with carrying around a 25-pound load for nine months? By no means am I calling for the widespread institution of abortion as a means of birth control. Adults should be obligated to take total responsibility for their sexual actions. When they fail to do so, on the other hand, the consequences should not be permanent or fatal. The days when people were killed for making social mistakes left modern society long before the coming of the covered wagon.

Speaking of the covered wagon, when I was younger, I was told by some of my wisest and most respected neighbors that there will always be an abundance of people who are impatiently yearning to play an advisory role in another's life. The issue of abortion follows a similar perspective, for many Americans feel that they unequivocally know what is best for the good of humanity. Consequently, they have rudely thrust their alleged wisdom upon all American women. An isolated group of biased, uninformed, naive racist people should not and cannot be allowed to have the power to make decisions that will affect the whole of the American society. Abortion should be an issue involving a woman and her doctor. Moreover, it should be an option available to all women who desire to seek it.

Three candidates deserve support

In tomorrow's East Lansing City Council elections The State News supports John Czarnecki, Ralph Monsma and Larry Owen for the three council positions open in the election.

Czarnecki, Owen and Monsma, through their experience, involvement in city affairs and specific stances on issues which are important to student voters, have shown that they are the best candidates for the city council openings.

Larry Owen has been a strong supporter of student rights during the four years he has been on the council. Two years ago he introduced a resolution that resulted in the removal of East Lansing funding from the controversial Tri-County Metro Narcotics Squad, which was accused of violating police conduct laws. The overall quality of his work on the council has been capable and efficient, and his support of student voting rights and low-cost student housing make him a logical choice in Tuesday's election.

John Czarnecki has come out strongly for student voting rights and plans to give students greater access to housing through increased bus service. In addition, his work on the council has been steady, and the experiences he has acquired will be helpful if he continues on the council for the next four years.

Ralph Monsma's involvement as chairperson of the East Lansing Planning Commission clearly establishes his interest and involvement in East Lansing's future. He has played an important part in developing the new Comprehensive Plan for East Lansing. His obvious dedication to the East Lansing community and his desire to increase the amount of housing available here make him another good choice for the council.

All three of these candidates respect the rights of students to vote and participate in East Lansing city government. In recent years, this respect has been absent from local politics. For these reasons, they should be elected to the East Lansing City Council Tuesday.

Opinion Page merits laughter

To The State News

It is a great comfort to know that whenever I feel a need to isolate myself from the academic rigors of having to think clearly and express myself cogently, all I need to do is turn to the Opinion page of The State News and laugh myself bonkers.

It's really a great staff, and I feel that the comic relief you provide should not go unheralded. The Oct. 23 issue was choice. That bit about the hypothetical poor family ("Fuel aid to the needy") with the $1,000 per month fuel bill killed me, but I guess that's because I don't know many people with a bessemer converter in their basement.

But, on with the yuks; a letter from the bemusing and dreary Carliece C. Collins inveighs against the "overuse of psychic energy" in race relations (while poor people go without, no doubt). The exorcisingly lonely Mary Sue writes yearning for soft drinks and a man to share her straw; an incredibly poorly written editorial denounces nuclear weapons while endorsing disclosure of how they are made; and a "professor of economics," a la Leo Gorcey explains his version of the Andy Young/PLO/Mideast debacle.

When they read that kind of stuff, the grammarians may want to cry, and the logicians may wish to slash their wrists, but I am not inclined to be so harsh. I feel that you are doing a great service by making the world a funnier, hence safer, place in which to live.

Indeed, if Stalin or Joe McCarthy had minds like these surrounding them, the Cold War would have been a snowball fight.

Keep up the good work.

Chances to learn should be taken

During the Rev. Jesse Jackson's recent speech on the future of minorities at the seventh Annual Conference on Counseling Minorities, he spoke of the advantages Black students have that allow them to exist with and gain experiences from students of universal backgrounds. He described how important it is for the Black community at MSU to discuss its perspective and learn the perspectives of other students concerning the United States' role in the Middle East and other Eastern countries.

After the conference, Jackson spoke with a group of Jewish students to reinforce his perspectives about the Middle East situation. He suggested that the Black student community get together and become involved in a discussion with Jewish and Arab students. Immediately after the session, only two Black students remained behind to elaborate with the Jewish Students about materializing the proposed discussion. I was surprised and angry. If the Black students at this University waste their time to go and hear people like Andrew Young and Jesse Jackson speak, and do not act responsively to the advice these speakers give, then the students are wasting their capabilities and losing a very important educational experience.

I believe the majority of the Black community has lost a sense of consciousness and involvement. I challenge the Black community at this University to prove their awareness of the issues in the Middle East and Africa, and respond with a discussion between all students concerning these issues. I also challenge the Black community to prove that the message from the Black leaders of this country has not failed, and the message being sent will be absorbed to create involvement in a college atmosphere.

Basketball year to remember

I believe that the article entitled "Shoes' Huffman no longer a Spartan," which appeared in last Thursday's State News, was misinterpreted. Although I'm no longer on the Spartan basketball team, I remain a Spartan fan.

Sure, I was disappointed in not being able to play basketball this season, but I was never unappreciative of what the MSU program has done for me.

I am still behind the basketball team and all MSU athletics here at MSU 200 percent. Last year, being a member on the team was the greatest experience in a lifetime. I hope this clears up any misunderstanding that may have arisen from the article last week.

ICE SHOW LOOKS FOR LOCAL TALENT

Holiday on Ice holds auditions

To run away and join the circus, "Greatest Show on Earth" is a common fantasy.

But for a change of pace, joining one of the greatest shows on ice may provide another means of escape into a world of glitter and applause.

Holiday on Ice will hold auditions 4 p.m. Nov. 15, at the Lansing Civic Center, in hopes of recruiting aspiring young skaters to the show. The show looks for local amateur talent and holds auditions in every town where it schedules performances, said Nancy Schultz, public relations co-director.

"We find that there's a wealth of talented people that don't even know they're good enough," she said.

The show is looking for all kinds of skating talent including figure skaters, line skaters, daredevil skating, and comedy and "dry" acts, Schultz said.

"Dry" acts are usually comedy acts, such as dog shows, which do not require skating talent.

The show always needs more skaters for understudies and to skate in the line, so any "outstanding" skater will qualify for the show, she said.

The only requirement for the audition is to mail name, age, address and phone number to Auditions, Holiday on Ice, Lansing Civic Center, 501 W. Allegan St., Lansing 48933.

Performance director Sandy Purecelly and co-manger Martin Durham will judge all contestants at the audition. Contestants will be notified within one week if they have qualified for the show.

This year, Holiday on Ice acts features some of the Sesame Street characters such as Big Bird, Cookie Monster and Bert and Ernie.

"It's glamorous, but it's a lot of hard work," said Mark Herseh, regional marketing director. "Like anything else, you start at the bottom."

Men officers not jealous of female superior

Patrol Sgt. Allyson Bertrand

By MARK FELLOWS
State News Staff Writer

Being a woman in a predominantly male profession never seemed to bother patrol officer Allyson Bertrand.

After all, she has been accepted by her male co-workers during the three years she has worked with them.

But now things are different. Patrol Shift Sgt. Allyson Bertrand, 28, is one of five road patrol shift supervisors in the Meridian Township police force, second in command during the day to an administrative sergeant and Captain John Amthor.

At night and on weekends she will run the show.

SGT. BERTRAND IS the first woman uniformed patrol sergeant in the tri-county area, and maybe in the state outside of Detroit, Amthor said.

She was promoted Thursday, along with another patrol officer, to sergeant on the basis of her scores on a written exam, on oral screening board and evaluation by the other sergeants on the force.

Out of a potential score of 100, she and the other officer, Robert G. Dutcher, both scored in the 80's, Amthor said.

Bertrand said she chose law enforcement as a profession hoping to use her knowledge of French, Spanish and some German in her work. Now, she says, language is taking the back seat to her job.

"My grandfather was with the Detroit police," she said, "so I had some contact with (police work) before the academy."

AS SHIFT SERGEANT, Bertrand will be responsible for everything from inspecting uniforms and patrol cars to briefing patrol officers before their shift.

Otherwise, she said, the job won't be that different.

She will still patrol and take complaints, and fill out forms in triplicate.

"The paperwork is phenomenal," she said. "I don't think I could get any more than I already have."

Bertrand indicates that she doesn't fear for her safety when responding to calls because of the fact she's a woman.

"I CAN HOLD MY OWN in a fight," she said confidently.

She does admit to being leery of being called to investigate domestic calls and is more certain to call a back-up unit if she feels there will be trouble, she said.

"You can really get hurt, but you must try to contain the situation so they can get help."

Although she said she never uses her gender as an excuse for shirking some duties, she will use it to help diffuse difficult situations, for example calming down male participants in a potentially violent argument.

As for her co-workers, she denies any jealousy or condescending attitudes toward her or Meridian's other woman patrol officer.

"The people at Meridian are exceptional," she said.

Social policies hurt aged; tax system needs change

By DAVID L. VARGA

Americans are the victims of a "very cruel illusion" regarding the treatment of the elderly in this country, a national authority on the politics of aging said recently at MSU.

"Our politics and policies on aging have been so far off target that it has become a critical social problem just short of inflation and energy," Robert Binstock said.

With one quarter of the federal budget being spent on the 11 percent of the population which is over 65, Binstock said, "All that money and effort is laid out to the elderly, but is not getting the job done for the worst cases."

A past president of the American Gerontological Society, Binstock spoke at the third annual Haak-Lilliefors Memorial Lectures Thursday and outlined some of the problems with our policies for the aged and suggested alternative solutions.

To get the money to the 14 percent of the aged whose incomes are below the official poverty line of $3,637 a year, Binstock suggested that "we have to change the agenda of what politicians do."

"We must stop subscribing to the Social Security myth and instead, make sure that everyone eats," said Binstock. "We should phase out the regressive Social Security tax and extend the regressive tax on income."

DPS arrests five in Spartan Stadium

Five MSU students were arrested in Spartan Stadium early Sunday by campus police on charges of breaking and entering, the Department of Public Safety said.

Police said that the five campus students, aged 18 and 19, were arrested at about 12:30 a.m. Sunday.

guaranteed minimum income level above which no one would receive aid.

"I'd rather see us worry about the quality of life rather than the quantity, by concentrating research funds on senility and organic brain syndrome instead of heart disease, cancer and stroke," Binstock added.

For senior citizens to get their voices heard by politicians, Binstock suggested applying pressure on local government instead of in Washington.

Binstock suggested that society needs to provide incentives for home care of the elderly sick, while not making it socially dishonorable for the elderly to live either in homes or institutions.

The men had broken into four upper concourse concession stands and the press box, police said.

Police said that some MSU property had been found in the possession of the men, but did not give any further information.

Call-a-ride replaces ride boards

A call-a-ride service to match riders with rides going to the same locations has been developed by Alpha Phi Omega, the national service fraternity. The system, which incorpor-

McDonald 'U'

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Farmer Old MacDonald is being offered a state university.

It all started when the Tech administration recently decided to have all university publications refer to the school as Virginia Tech instead of the awkward Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, its full name.

The winner, chosen from 110 entries, was the Eastern Institute of Enlightenment and Intellectual Outgrowth — EIEIO for short.

ated the Union ride board and all other campus ride boards, now receives about 110 calls a week, said Lynne E. Chollar, a member of the fraternity.

The service started when the ride boards around campus proved ineffective, Chollar said. Call-a-ride matches persons who are driving to specific geographic areas with persons who need rides to the same places.

The Union ride board had been operating since fall term, 1974, and its problem was that people took names off the board instead of copying them down and leaving them on the board.

There are two files that are consulted when a person calls, Chollar said. One file contains names and telephone numbers of people who need rides, and the other list has names and phone numbers of people who have cars and want riders. A considerable response from commuters, especially staff members who live just outside of Lansing and do not want to ride to campus alone, may result in a service for those persons, Chollar said.

There were 25,000 call-a-ride brochures printed up this fall for distribution to residence halls, she said.

"The farthest the system has reached has been Kentucky and southern Ohio, but we have cards on file for Colorado and places further west," Chollar said.

Call-a-ride has been operating since the beginning of fall term, Chollar said. "We expect we will cover longer distances at Thanksgiving," she said.

The system is funded by the Union and the Off-Campus Housing Office.

The phone number is 353 CARS.

John Cougar bares his rock 'n roll soul

By BILL HOLDSHIP
State News Staff Writer

In his green work shirt, blue jeans, unkempt hair, beard shadow and perpetual cigarette, John Cougar looks more like the kid who worked at the gas station in your hometown than he does an "up and coming" rock star.

Like most of those kids who hung around the gas station during the early to mid '60s, Cougar is friendly, courteous and rather shy, despite his "tough guy" looks. But ask him a question about rock 'n roll, and his eyes light up, he gives you that charismatic smile, and replies in a sincere monologue that takes up a good five minutes for each question asked.

What's most striking about Cougar, however, is his overwhelming modesty, something that's almost outdated in a field which now seems to thrive on cockiness and inflated egos.

"I appreciate it," says Cougar when I mention I think his new album is one of the hottest this year. "It's awfully hard to live up to." This modesty also shines through when Cougar — an artist who currently has the best sounding single on the airwaves ("I Need A Lover") and an album lacking one mediocre cut — claims that his musical ambition is "to learn to write songs."

"I'm just learning to crawl as a songwriter," continues Cougar. "I wanna write songs like John Sebastian used to write. They were accessible — like "Summer In The City" — but they were still credible. You could listen to them a hundred times and never get tired of them. Eric Burden used to do songs like that — he didn't write many of them but he sure could find them. And Jim Morrison was like that in the beginning. That's kinda what I'd like to do."

Cougar explains that he discovered these "good songs" on mid '60s AM radio, and he speaks lovingly of the power of the AM in a manner that brings to mind Jonathan Richman's "Roadrunner." "When I was growin' up, there was no FM radio. AM was THE progressive rock 'n roll medium. You couldn't hear a song like "Foxy Lady" on the AM now like you did then. So all I heard growin' up in Seymour (Ind.), 14,000 people, was the AM radio — Burden, Morrison, Mitch Ryder, Van Morrison, Motown. All the great stuff like that. I didn't know about people like Lou Reed, though, 'cause it wasn't on the radio and J.C. Penney's wasn't selling Lou Reed records yet."

Although the influences he mentions were all stars at one time or another, Cougar claims to have no interest in the rock star-making machinery.

"I'm not really interested in being a rock STAR. I prefer places like this (the 450 seat kiva) over places where I come on in front of Kiss. I hope the one-to-one situation in rock becomes popular again because people need to be personable with each other right now. We've got all the rock stars we need. There's no room for any more Elton Johns, Led Zeppelins or people like that. We don't need any more rock deejay stars. We need real people to deal with real people and real problems. That's the whole thing."

In the same vein, Cougar seems to have very little faith in what the media calls "musical trends."

"Disco is definitely over with, I think. It's great everyone finally had the balls to say, 'Hey, this is f-----'. As far as new wave goes, I don't think there really is a new wave. It's just people like me who grew up listening to stuff that was happening in the '60s, and maybe more or less mimicking what we heard at one time. And people call

"I'm just learning to crawl as a songwriter."
— John Cougar

that new wave. If that's a new wave, then I've seen three new waves in my life."

"I always go back to John Sebastian and guys like that 'cause they really weren't a trend. They were just writing songs they believed in. Now, you've got s--- like the Knack who are the 'next big thing,' and, ya know, it bums me out. Kids can't afford a trend. Records are so f----- expensive."

"Disco's a good example. I don't think it's dying so much 'cause people got tired of it but because they can't afford it. They never did buy the records so much as they bought the shoes and outfits to wear to the disco and spent money to f--- the girls — it became a real meat rack." (Cougar comments on this scene in his song "Miami.")

Cougar does mention, however, that the one positive factor in trends is that it helps keep people motivated.

"Even in disco, people were at least involved. Kids at the disco were at least doin' something, even if it was wrong. But it wasn't wrong to them, I suppose, 'cause they seemed to be having a good time. Apathy is like the worst thing in the world. But all these trends and everything. We should just forget them and concentrate on the rock 'n roll."

During the course of our interview, Cougar discusses David Bowie, who he once shared managers with ("He was at a real bad time in his life when I met him — real paranoid, illusions of grandeur. That's why Mick (Ronson) left him. I understand that he's out of that now. He's not afraid to walk down the street anymore"); the Knack ("I met those guys two years ago before they even had a record, and all that stuff about them is a lotta bulls---. Their record didn't cost $8,000 to make. It cost $80,000. I don't know why they allowed the hype to happen to them"); Steve Forbert ("one of the best artists to come along in years"); his Indiana youth ("I always had aspirations of being — this sounds corny and stupid — but the rebel with no cause. Then I grew out of it and realized, hell, everybody goes through this. So why was I feeling so f----- angry? I'm not that angry anymore"), and the Springsteen comparisons by the press ("It doesn't bother me. Most of those guys are just tryin' to pick up $35 real quick, so I don't pay attention to a lot of it. But I gotta say the press has been real nice to me this time around").

John Cougar is definitely going places in the music world. Anyone who feels the way he does about music and writes songs as beautiful as "Taxi Dancer," "Do You Think That's Fair" and "Night Dancin'" yet says his main ambition is "to learn to write songs" can only get better. And despite what he may claim to the contrary, John Cougar is going to be a big star. The two cheering crowds in McDonel Kiva Friday night can surely testify to that.

Cougar a truly great rock performer

By BILL HOLDSHIP
State News Reviewer

Onstage, John Cougar is the archetypal street punk turned rock 'n roll star. He's the kid from down the block who gave his all to a rock 'n roll band, and finally made it pay off. And what a great rock 'n roll band it is!

The selections Cougar and the Zone performed during their two shows in McDonel Kiva Friday night sounded much better than they do on vinyl (and the records sound pretty damn good) — which may explain why Cougar is recognized first and foremost as a live performer. The band concentrated mainly on cuts from the John Cougar LP, opening with the Van Morrison-like "Night Dancin'" before bursting into a brilliant full-throttle rendition of "Sugar Marie."

Cougar's raps and the Zone's musical improvisations brought new depths to tunes like "The Great Midwest," "Miami" (which featured Cougar striking mock Travolta poses), "I Need A Lover" and "Chinatown," the latter of which featured Cougar's infamous "My Sharona" parody.

The evening's only disappointment was that the band didn't perform "Small Paradise," "Do You Think That's

Fair" and "Taxi Dancer" (three of this reviewer's favorite Cougar tunes), but Cougar more than made up for it by resurrecting "American Dream" from the earlier part of his career, and introducing two new songs — the excellent "Tonight," which he wrote for Tina Turner, and "This Time I Think I'm Really In Love" from his forthcoming LP. In addition, Cougar performed bits and pieces of the Stones' "Honky proud to admit I'm a fan," Cougar told one excited guy who insisted on yelling "Springsteen!" throughout the second show.)

Cougar goes through a series of stances onstage, from the archetypal Elvis Presley pose he strikes with his microphone to the street dancing wildcat. And Cougar became so wild at times Friday night that his bad foot and limp — a result of "gettin' too wild in Detroit Need A Lover" (which seemed to appeal to the younger crowd at that show), he concluded his second set with a powerhouse cover of Iggy Pop's classic "Search & Destroy." The latter song was so loud and so nihilistic — in other words, so perfect — that people on the upper floors of McDonel Hall are probably still wondering what the hell was going down in the kiva Friday night. It was a truly GREAT rock 'n roll show, and I'm sure John Cougar won 900 Cougar converts in East Lansing the other night.

The Great American Dance Band from Flint opened both shows, and — while I'm not sure their brand of music was appropriate for a Cougar show — the group offered a brief set of inspired hard blues rock. The group was looser for the second show, and offered a better set as a result. The originals were okay, but — I'm a sucker for covers — and their versions of Roy Orbison's "Oh, Pretty Woman" and Larry Williams' "Dizzy Miss Lizzy" are what I recall the most.

Thursday night" — were hardly evident. (Cougar still has a visible scar on his forehead — a result of running head first into a guitar neck the last time he was in Detroit. That's how wrapped up in his music this man becomes!)

Cougar performed pretty much the same selection of songs for both shows, but the shows were different in audience rapport and stage action. During the first show, he brought members of the audience onstage to teach them the Stroll, a dance from the '50s. And whereas he encoored the early show with a reprise of "I Tonk Women," Van Morrison's "Domino" and the "na na na na" chorus from "Land Of 1,000 Dances." And Cougar wrapped it all up by ending both shows with a satirical rockin' version of "Plastic Jesus" from the film Cool Hand Luke.

Cougar has an overwhelming charismatic stage presence, and he has the power to control his audience which he shares with only the best of rock artists. This control was evident from the numerous standing ovations he received throughout both shows, not to mention the things audience members yelled at him. ("I'm not too

Byrne's Talking Heads give good show

By JOHN NEILSON
State News Reviewer

As good as they are on their records — and they are VERY good on their records — Talking Heads are even better live. As they proved in their show at Detroit's Masonic Auditorium last Thursday, this is a band that has to be seen to be truly appreciated.

On vinyl, Talking Heads' music is compelling yet cold, irresistible and yet untouchable. The built-in tensions of David Byrne's songs are complimented by the icy precision of Brian Eno's production (on More Songs About Buildings and Food and especially Fear of Music), and while there is no lack of emotion on the albums, there is also a claustrophobic edge to their sound that keeps it remote from the listener.

This feelings of distance mirrors the alienation Byrne expresses in his songs. In the world according to Byrne, nothing can be trusted or taken at face value. People are crazy, yet nothing can change their minds. Animals talk behind our backs and laugh at us. "Heaven is a place where nothing ever happens." Unseen hands are trying to control rock music. Home doesn't exist, and cities are just plain weird. Even the air around us is suspect as the ozone layer deteriorates. Life boils down to buildings and food. Faced with a world that is absurd and incomprehensible, people internalize all feelings. "I can't seem to face up to the facts, I'm tense and nervous and I can't relax... Psycho Killer..."

Onstage — stripped of its studio sterility — Talking Heads' music takes on whole new dimensions of feeling. The songs literally burst with emotion, and to people expecting the detached vibe of the album sound the experience is akin to taking an extra last step on a staircase that is shorter than they thought. After seeing the band in concert, Talking Heads' albums will never sound the same again.

Thursday night the band was in fine form, playing a concert that was flawless and powerful. Even the slow songs seemed ready to explode with passion, and the uptempo numbers like "Life During Wartime" and "Psycho Killer" were completely mesmerizing. Most of the songs from Fear of Music were featured — excepting "I Zimbra" and "Drugs" — and roughly half of the songs from their second album were played. While it was unfortunate that they didn't play more from their debut album, the heated versions of "Psycho Killer" and their first single "Love Goes To A Building On Fire" were among the evening's highlights.

Byrne is the band's visual focal point on stage, as he sings all of the material and dances eccentrically about with his guitar. His voice — always quirky — became almost manic at times, growling, screeching, plaintive and ominous by turns. The seamless husband and wife rhythm section of Tina Weymouth and Chris Frantz had much of the crowd dancing by the show's end, while Jerry Harrison provided most of the music's color as he alternated between second guitar and keyboards.

The relatively large — by recent standards — crowd drew the band back for a pair of encores, and were treated to dynamic versions of "Life During Wartime" and "Take Me To The River". The former was especially great live, taking on a whole new level of meaning as a tale of band-on-the-run paranoia. When rock music

MSU beats 'Cats to snap losing streak

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer

EVANSTON, Ill. — It had been six long weeks since MSU had won a football game and Darryl Rogers had almost forgotten what winning was like.

But Saturday the Spartans snapped their five-game losing string with a big 42-7 victory over Northwestern that brought Rogers' memory back.

"I feel a lot better," the MSU coach said, quite relieved. "Playing Northwestern was a lot different than some of the other teams we've been playing."

True, the Wildcats can't compare with Ohio State University or University of Michigan, but for the first time since the losing streak began, MSU played good football.

ran for 118 yards, marking the fourth time he has had a 100-yard-plus game this season.

"Defense is the key to the game and our defense played well enough to turn the ball over to the offense several times," said Rogers.

THE WILDCATS COMMITTED six turnovers, five of those interceptions. Safety Mark Anderson had two thefts, cornerback Jim Burroughs and linebackers Dan Bass and Bruce Williams one each. In addition, Bass had eight tackles, giving him 137 on the season which breaks his old record of 136, set last season.

It took a while for the Spartans to get untracked. MSU sputtered in the first quarter, but still found itself on the Northwestern three-yard line late in the period. But Clark fumbled the snap from center and Wildcat linebacker Scott Duncan recovered.

But shortly after, MSU was on its way. Burroughs picked off a Mike Kerrigan toss in Wildcat territory and two plays later, Clark found Williams for 38 yards and a touchdown.

Williams was covered on the play, but grabbed the pass over Northwestern defender Lou Tiberi.

"I could see the ball all the way and he was turned around and couldn't see it until it was too late," Williams said.

Quarterback Bryan Clark had a big day, completing 11 of 19 passes for 169 yards and three touchdowns. He also scored twice on short runs. Tight end Mark Brammer and split end Jimmy Williams caught four passes apiece, and flanker Eugene Byrd pulled in three, two of those for touchdowns. Tailback Steve Smith was third down on the one, but Hughes bobbled a Clark pitch-out and the Spartans blew the opportunity.

The Wildcats couldn't move and after a poor punt, the Spartans were back in striking range. Tiberi was called for pass interference on Williams on the two, and Clark snuck in on the next play.

A Clark-to-Williams pass set up the next score. The two hooked up on third down to give the Spartans the ball deep in Northwestern territory. On the next play, Clark went to Byrd from the three for the score.

CLARK KEPT FOR one more touchdown, on fourth-and-goal from the one, early in the fourth quarter. He was replaced by freshman John Leister, who, in his first college game, connected with fellow freshman Joe Stevens on a 22-yard pass for the final touchdown.

"This helps us," said Byrd, who, with jammed toes, was still hobbling after the game. "We needed a win badly. This kind of salvages our team pride."

"We played with emotion today," Bass said. "I think everyone knew we had to get emotional if we were going to win. I think this will get us back on the right track for next season."

Women harriers take third behind Wisconsin, Purdue in regionals

By CHRIS HANSEN
State News Sports Writer

The MSU women's cross country team placed third in Division I Saturday as five out of its seven runners set individual time records on Forest Akers West golf course during the Midwest Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women Regional Championships.

Spartan harrier Kelly Spatz was the No. 1 Spartan, finishing fifth with a time of 17:52.1. Cynthia Wadsworth and Lisa Berry took six and seventh places with times of 17:52.7 and 17:54.3. Sue Richardson finished 16th in 18:10.7 and Ann Pewe 23rd in 18:31.8.

Jill Washburn, suffering from a cold that has been nagging her since the Big Ten race, placed 32nd in 18:49.7 and Mary Ann Opalewski finished 36th in 18:56.8.

"YOU CAN'T ASK for much more when five out of seven of your runners run the best times of their lives," said MSU coach John Goodridge of his runners who had a team score of 56. Goodridge wasn't the only one pleased with Saturday's performance as Spatz, Wadsworth and Berry seemed confident that their ability to run well as a team will carry over into the national championships two weeks away.

Icers divide series with Wisconsin

By JEFF HITTLER
State News Sports Writer

For the first time in its last five games, the MSU hockey team survived its own mistakes long enough to enable the Spartans to gain at least a split in their weekend series with the University of Wisconsin in Munn Ice Arena.

After giving away a tight contest to the Badgers, 6-4, Friday night, the Spartans turned what looked like an easy win Saturday night into a nailbiter, before prevailing, 5-4. The weekend split gives MSU a 1-3 mark in the Western Collegiate Hockey Association and a record of 2-4 overall.

WHILE THE OFFENSE did its usual scoring act for the Spartans, the defense sparkled for the first time this season. But it was almost all for naught as the mistakes that have plagued MSU through the early season continued to show up against Wisconsin.

Right winger Russ Welch staked the Spartans to a 1-0 lead in the first game when he fired the puck past Wisconsin goaltender Roy Schultz from close range at 4:53 of the first period.

The fast-skating Badgers tied the score when right winger Scott Lecy put his own rebound shot into the MSU net at the 14 minutes mark.

But less than three minutes later, center Leo Lynett scored his eighth goal of the season after taking a pass from Welch on a two-on-one breakaway drive to give MSU a 2-1 margin after one period.

THE SPARTANS BUILT their lead to 3-1 early in the second period when defenseman Ted Huesing caught the rebound of linemate Dan Sutton's post shot and fired it into the Badger goal.

Lecy connected for his second goal of the night 38 seconds later. It was his 11th goal in five games against MSU, including nine in the four contests the two schools played last season.

When Sutton was sent off for cross-checking at 17:43, Wisconsin needed just 31 seconds to convert the power play opportunity with left winger

The fluke plays we've seen all year started up again at the end (of Saturday night's game). We played better last night but finally put a win together in this one. Just the fact that we have a win after three close tries is enough. The players really needed this.
—MSU coach Ron Mason

Chuck Durocher picking up the goal to knot the score at 3-3.

MSU had put 15 shots-on-goal in the second period but the Badgers made better use of their nine attempts.

Wisconsin took a one-goal margin early in the third period on another power play opportunity set-up by the penalty to right winger Mark Hamway for tripping. Left winger Todd Lecy, younger brother of Scott Lecy, netted the goal for the Badgers.

THE SCORE WAS tied for the third time when the Spartans netted a power play goal of their own at 15:48 of the period. Welch brought the crowd of 5,142 to life with a shot from medium range for his second goal of the night.

But Wisconsin took the lead for good at 18:07 when Spartan goaltender Doug Belland pushed the puck out in front of a crowd of players instead of freezing the play, allowing Todd Lecy to score an easy goal. It was the Badgers' third power play goal in three tries for the evening.

Wisconsin added a late goal by left winger Ed Lebler with 49 seconds left to make the final 6-4.

"Wisconsin's fifth goal was a gift," a disheartened MSU coach Ron Mason said afterwards. "Our penalty-killing has hurt us all year. Overall, our defense played very well.

We're not going to play much better than that. Wisconsin just made its shots count."

THE SPARTANS MADE their shots count in the second game — and they needed every one they made.

The Badgers jumped out to a 2-0 lead midway through the first period on power play goals by center Jim Scheid and Todd Lecy. It was the younger Lecy's third goal of the series and gave Wisconsin a five-for-five conversion on power play opportunities in the series.

The second period belonged entirely to MSU. Welch scored twice in the frame with right winger Hamway collecting his third goal of the season in between, to give the Spartans a 3-2 margin.

Welch made it 4-2 at 7:09 of the third period on his third goal of the night and fifth of the series. He now has seven goals for the season, one behind team leader Lynett. That duo also has MSU's two hat tricks this season.

Huesing netted his second goal of the series and fourth of the season at 14:52 to give the Spartans what seemed to be a comfortable 5-2 lead. The score sent much of the crowd of 5,178 heading to the exits for an early trip home.

BUT BADGER DEFENSEMAN Theran Welch put in a goal at 18:24 and another with four seconds left to keep the game exciting until the final horn.

"The fluke plays we've seen all year started up again at the end," Mason said. "We played better last night but finally put a win together in this one. Just the fact that we have a win after three close tries is enough. The players really needed this."

Mason credited the Spartans' aggressive play around their own net as the difference in the game.

"We've been getting scored on around the net," Mason said. "I told them after the first period to get physical in there."

The Spartans play their next two series on the road, beginning at Michigan Tech University next weekend.

State News: Mark A. Deremo
MSU's aggressive play around the nets helped the Spartans to a 5-4 victory Saturday night over the University of Wisconsin after a 6-4 loss to the Badgers Friday night. Both games were played at Munn Ice Arena.

BEAT WMU 3-2 IN FINALS

Stickers win state championship

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

The MSU women's field hockey team emerged with its second consecutive title in this weekend's state championship in Marquette as the stickers beat Western Michigan University in the finals, 3-2. The tournament began Friday when the Spartans opened with a 2-0 win over the Chippewas of Central Michigan University. "It was a game which just went back and forth for most of the time," said MSU head coach Sam Kajorsin. "But as it turned out, we got the better chances to score."

The MSU-CMU game was scoreless after one period, before Julie Johnson fed a pass to Jennie Klepinger, which Klepinger converted into the only goal the Spartans needed. Later in the second stanza, Barb Oakley passed the ball to Debbie Robson who slammed it home for the insurance goal. The third-seeded Spartans met the fourth-seeded Broncos in the finals, with WMU riding on the heels of a 3-0 win against Eastern Michigan University, and a 1-0 upset of number one seeded University of Michigan.

Harriers sixth in Big Ten race

MSU cross country coach Jim Gibbard's "super sophs," a dominant force for the Spartan squad Saturday, failed to capture a top notch ranking as the harriers placed just sixth in the Big Ten championships at Ohio State University.

MSU's top finisher was sophomore Martin Schulist, taking seventh in 23:57. Sophomores Mark Mesler and Michael White were next with 26th and 32nd place finishes. Senior Keith Moore and junior Tim Kerr were 33rd and 40th for MSU.

The big winner of the day was the University of Wisconsin which captured its third Big Ten title in three years. Badger harriers Jim Stinzi and Randy Jackson took second and fifth places. Stinzi, who has taken at least a tie for first place in every meet so far this season finished 23:39 while Jackson finished in 23:53.

Steve Crane of Ohio State University ran the OSU Golf Course in a second 23:29.9 to take the individual championship.

Dan Heikkinen of the University of Michigan finished third in 23:31, followed by Jim Spivey and Randy Stoneman, both of the University of Indiana, finishing in 23:42 and 23:44. Gerald Metzler of the University of Minnesota finished eighth, Kevin Higdon of Indiana finished ninth and Brian Diemer of U-M finished 10th. Their times were 23:59, 24:06 and 24:08.

Indiana finished second in team standings with a total score of 59. U-M finished third with 75 points, followed by the University of Illinois with 98 points, and Minnesota, MSU, OSU, Purdue, University of Iowa and Northwestern University with 119, 138, 187, 227, 252 and 276.

The harriers next meet will be Nov. 10 when they host the NCAA District IV cross country championship at Forest Akers West Golf Course.

the time to score three goals.

SIX MINUTES INTO the game, the Spartans scored their first goal on a short-corner play. Klepinger passed to Marie Herman, who stopped the ball allowing Doreen Roudebush to put the Spartan stickers on top early, 1-0.

Five minutes later, the same trio converted to give MSU a comfortable 2-0 cushion. To make matters worse for the Broncos, MSU scored its third straight goal with six minutes to play in the half.

The three-goal first half seemingly put MSU in a position to coast to its second state championship in as many years. But the Spartans quickly learned that coast they could not, as WMU scored ten minutes into the second half to cut the lead to 3-1. "They came out and really started attacking us," Kajorsin said. "We seemed tense and we still put a lot of pressure on them, but they just didn't give up."

EIGHT MINUTES AFTER its first goal, Western scored again and the MSU cushion had become a hot pad. "After their second goal, we changed some things we were doing and altered our strategy," Kajorsin said. "We started attacking them again pretty well and Connie Seymour nearly scored for us on a one-on-one drive, but neither team scored again."

Kajorsin noted that WMU should be credited for its performance in the game, because of the way it changed its strategy after a poor showing in the first half.

"They knew their strategy was not working and they set out to make it work," Kajorsin said. "It was not an easy thing to do, but they did it."

The stickers will travel to Mt. Pleasant this weekend for the regional championships.

MSU third in regionals

The University of Wisconsin was the first place finisher in Division I, with a score of 41. The Badgers were led by 25-year-old freshman from Kenya, Rose Thompson, who placed first in the division with 17:11.4, her best time ever. Also running strong for Wisconsin were Ann Mulrooney, Suzie Huston, Amy Johns and Marty McElwee placing fourth, eighth, 13th and 15th.

Purdue was second in Division I with a team score of 48. The Badgers were led by Diane Bussa, who finished second in 17:24.3. Alanna McCarthy, Ann Marie Malone and Janette Dowton placed third, 10th and 14th.

Kelly O'Toole of the University of Indiana, Carrie Craven of Ohio State University and Becky Dodson of Bowling Green State University placed ninth, 11th and 12th and were the only runners from schools other than MSU, Purdue or Wisconsin to finish in the top 15 and advance to the national championship.

EASTERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY finished first in Division II with a total score of 37. University of Wisconsin at Milwaukee and Marquette University took second and third with 51 and 53.

The women harriers have the next two weeks to prepare for the national women's cross country championships at Florida State University. Last year MSU finished tenth in the nationals.

Kickers tie Falcons in defensive struggle

The wind and cold aided both defenses as the MSU soccer team battled Bowling Green State University to a 0-0 tie Saturday afternoon on the MSU Soccer Field.

Neither team was able to mount any kind of offense, although BGSU had the best chance to win the game in overtime.

The Falcons were awarded a direct free kick at the MSU goal after the Spartans' Matt Davis was called for a penalty with just 1:30 left in the extra period.

BGSU's John Bertrams lined up to shoot the ball from 10 yards out with only MSU goaltender Rob Grinter allowed to defend. But Bertrams sent the ball sailing wide left to preserve the tie.

"Both defenses took the best of the match," MSU coach Joe Baum said. "We were lucky to tie, but we should have won it in regulation."

The Spartans, with a season mark of 8-6-2, close out the 1979 campaign Wednesday with a match at the University of Toledo.

SILENCE IS DEADLY.

When someone drinks too much and then drives, it's the silence that kills. Your silence. It kills your friends, your relatives, and people you don't even know. But they're all people you could save.

If you knew what to say, maybe you'd be less quiet. Maybe fewer people would die.

What you should say is, "I'll drive you home." Or, "Let me call a cab." Or, "Sleep on my couch tonight."

Don't hesitate because your friend may have been drinking only beer. Beer and wine can be just as intoxicating as mixed drinks.

And don't think that black coffee will make him sober. Black coffee never made anyone sober. Maybe it would keep him awake long enough to have an accident. But that's about all.

The best way to prevent a drunk from becoming a dead drunk is to stop him from driving. Speak up. Don't let silence be the last sound he hears.

(continued from page 3) problems of the '80s." Crisp resigned from the President's National Advisory Committee for Women earlier this year. "I resigned, like most of the advisory committee, because as the only visible Republican on the committee, I was a 'rubber stamp' for the administration," Crisp said. "I felt then and still feel the administration was not giving us the role to advise," she added. "Carter just wanted women who represented a large constituency to support his administration."

THE PRESIDENT HAS not utilized his power to establish the passage of the ERA as a national priority, Crisp added.

"I feel he has been derelict on women's issues," she said. Crisp advised women to "sift out" an appropriate candidate in the primaries and endorse that person for the presidency.

The conference was also held to honor Republican women who currently hold public office in Michigan. Among those honored were: Kay Jaworski, Ingham County Commissioner; Patricia Leuzzi, Michigan Women's Commission; and state representatives Ruth McNamee (R-Birmingham), Connie Binsfeld (R-Maple City), and Mary Keith Ballantine (R-Jackson).

is outlawed, only outlaws will play in rock bands, and this song seems to be a scenario of a group touring in enemy territory. It could well be Bryne's vision of his band five years hence, traveling incognito, dressing like students and housewives (as if they don't already), and playing guerrilla concerts before disappearing into the night. Whatever the song's intent, it proved to be a favorite with the Detroit audience, most of whom joined in on the lines "This ain't no party, this ain't no disco, this ain't no fooling around ..."

All things considered, the concert was terrific — a great performance by a great band. I was there with some friends who were rabid fans that had never seen the group live, and they all came away with the glass-eyed look of fans whose faith in the band had been "born again."

Research needs glassblowers skills

"IN YEARS PAST, we've had an identity problem," Severn said of the shortage. "The old glassblower would sort of hide in the corner."

Scientific glassblowing "doesn't turn people on," said Keki Mistry, master glassblower and manager of the MSU glassblowing laboratory in the chemistry department.

Mistry and two assistants provide all the glass needs for 82 different departments on campus.

"Very few kids want to come in and be glassblowers because they're afraid of fire," Mistry said.

Glassblowers work with flames which average 3,600 degrees Fahrenheit, Mistry said, and pieces of hot glass can fly off and burn holes in clothing.

"ALL MY CLOTHES have got holes in them," he added. Mistry learned glassblowing in 1952 in Cambridge, England from Robert Smurthwaite, who Mistry said is a "very fine glassblower."

When Mistry emigrated from England 12 years ago, he said he was given first priority due to the shortage of scientific glassblowers in the United States.

Mistry is intensely proud of his trade and emphasizes its importance.

"Without scientific glassblowing," he said, "there would be no research."

MSU student hurt

The accident occurred at the intersection of Grand River Avenue and Park Lake Road at about 2 p.m. Saturday.

MSU alum wins 10,000 meter run

Herb Lindsay won the third annual East Lansing State Bank 10,000 meter run Saturday for the third straight year. He then hopped on a plane bound for Los Angeles to compete in another race.

Lindsay finished the run in a race record time of 28:20, one minute and three seconds ahead of second place Frank Shorter.

Lindsay, an MSU graduate, said he is currently training for the 5,000 or 10,000 meter run in the Olympics in Moscow next summer.

Of Lindsay, Shorter said "I don't know if they could have imported anyone around the world who could have beat him today."

"I knew from the start I could win if I stayed to a 4:35 mile," Lindsay said. "If at five miles I had company, I would have started to surge."

Shorter and Lindsay both train at Boulder, Colo., which Lindsay calls home.

Shorter said later that the top finishers were altitude-trained. This means they trained in higher altitudes than Michigan runners can, which strenghtens endurance and wind.

Gordon Minty, MSU education instructor who won the Detroit Free Press Marathon, did not run Saturday because of a nagging foot injury.

"It's not that big of a race," he said. "I can run on my foot it just hurts when I push it. I ran 10 miles this morning (Saturday) and I will run 10 more tonight," Minty said.

An awards ceremony at Dooley's followed the race. Shorter, whose store supplied the awards, presented the trophies and certificates to the top three finishers in each of the 11 age groups.

The proceeds from the race went to the East Lansing School/City Recreation Fund for scholarships for "300 East Lansing youngsters," said Bill Mueller, chairperson of the East Lansing State Bank.

MSU President Cecil Mackey ran and finished the race, although his time was not obtained.

Over 3,000 runners participated, although only 2,465 registered, said Stu Bartlett, race director.

Shorter finished in 29:23 and third place finisher Steve Flannigan came in at 29:34. The first woman finisher was Karen Blackford with a time of 36:04.

Duane Spitz, who tied for second in the Free Press Marathon, came in fifth place at 30:48.

MSU freshman Janet Bubeck won the 14 to 17 year old division with a time of 41:58.

Many of the runners were vocally annoyed about the finish procedure. Several runners were backed up before they reached the finish line as race officials tried to line up the participants for proper placing.

A chute right after the finish line made the runners line up single file until they were given their place cards, so anyone racing to the finish would have to either risk losing his place in line, or not cross it.

For those that had their own watches, that was not problem. But those who did not have watches and wanted to know their time with some degree of accuracy were out of luck.

FOUR UNRELATED RENTERS MAXIMUM

Ordinance limits occupants per unit

By ELLA CHOINSKI
State News Staff Writer

Students living together may be doing it illegally.

An East Lansing zoning ordinance, passed in 1975, states that no more than four unrelated individuals can occupy the same dwelling unit.

The ordinance applies to one and two family housing units. The only exception to this occupancy restriction is if more than four individuals rented a unit together before the ordinance went into effect.

AS OF LAST summer, the city has tried to enforce this ordinance more heavily by issuing housing inspection stickers stating the maximum occupancy for a rental unit.

Further limitations on rental occupancy are set by the East Lansing Housing Code.

According to the Code, the number of bedrooms and the size of each determines how many people can live in a rental unit.

There has to be at least 70 square feet in a bedroom for one person and 50 extra square feet per additional person living in the room.

Because of the zoning ordinance, however, more than four unrelated individuals could not live together even if there was enough space, Rosie Norris, East Lansing Housing Administrator, said.

EVEN IF A house had five bedrooms, only four unrelated individuals could live in it, she said.

The reason behind the zoning action is to maintain balance in a neighborhood, City Planner Robert Owen said.

"It's an attempt to achieve economic balance between young families trying to buy or rent a house as opposed to a group of individuals renting it," he said.

He stated that if there were no restrictions, landlords could rent the unit for $600 and have five or six individuals sharing costs. Such rents would be nearly impossible for a family to afford, he said.

A diverse pattern of housing also helps motivate overall maintenance in the neighborhood, Owen said.

HOMEOWNERS ACT AS "watchdogs" for the rest of the neighborhood, he said.

If homeowners maintain the upkeep of their houses, there is a tendency for others to keep their homes neat, he said.

Allowing an area to become concentrated by students segregates them and their problems from the rest of the community, Owen said.

Homeowners would no longer be aware of student housing problems because they would not be a part of it, he said.

Another problem that over occupancy may cause is environmental stress for the community, Norris said.

"OVER OCCUPANCY IS A constant challenge to the Housing Division because of its side effects on the neighborhood," she said. "Side effects" include too many cars and too few parking areas, she said.

While such side effects are often evident of over occupancy, actual housing inspections have to be made to determine if there is a violation, Norris said.

If there is over occupancy, the property owner is informed of the problem and it is handled as a misdemeanor with a maximum of $500 or 90 days in jail, Owen said.

Communication building

To determine what the new building would include, each school submitted program statements to the state Legislature in the early '70s, stating what each department needed.

The legislature then decided what items were the most necessary, eliminated those that it deemed unnecessary and returned the statements.

The statements, which also included how much office space each department would require, were forwarded to the architect.

THEN NEGOTIATIONS TOOK place to determine which departments would get the office space they desired.

The architect sent his plans to the departments, and they reacted to the plans. "All departments had a lot of input," Bettinghaus said.

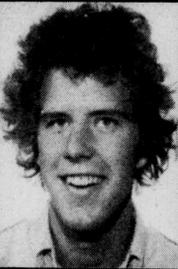

There will be four reporting laboratories for journalism courses, two equipped with video display terminals and two with typewriters.

"Students still need to know how to use these, because some newspapers still use typewriters, like The State News," Bettinghaus said.

In advertising, the building will have laboratories for creative courses, media research and graphics, said Gordon E. Miracle, chairperson of the department of advertising.

THE ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT will share computer facilities, photographic laboratories and teaching facilities with the other departments, Miracle added.

A Better Alternative

Here's a Better Site for a New Hudson Department Store

Within the past few weeks and after many consultations, local business and civic leaders have developed a new, workable plan enabling construction of a regional Hudson department store serving Central Michigan without creating controversy which surrounds the northwest East Lansing site.

The Better Alternative involves expansion of Frondor to accommodate a spacious, multi-level Hudsons, adequate for the store's needs with ample customer parking in an already-established shopping center.

It would be accomplished by utilizing a portion of the city-owned Ranney plot just east of Frandor without disturbing the baseball field and tennis courts already in use at Ranney Field.

The Frandor site, located in the northeast section along East Grand River Avenue, provides ample store space with adjacent parking developed on the unused portion of Ranney Field. Because the Ranney plot is dedicated to recreational purposes, the City of Lansing would seek to develop equal or better recreational space at another city location.

Here are nine major reasons why a Hudsons store in Frandor is a Better Alternative:

- 1. Central Location. The Frandor complex is centrally located between East Lansing and Lansing. It is served by an adjacent expressway and major arterial streets for convenient access by the greatest number of Central Michigan residents.
- 2. Tax Benefits To Both Cities. Because Frandor is located in the East Lansing School District, school taxes generated in the shopping center benefit East Lansing schools while it also is part of the City of Lansing whose municipal taxpayers would benefit by commercial expansion of Frandor. (Last year Frandor paid more than $173,000 in East Lansing school taxes.)
- 3. Energy Conserving. Frandor's central location shortens travel distances for most shoppers and avoids extra trips. Major and easily available public transit bus lines already serve Frandor.
- 4. No Zoning Problems. The City of Lansing will seek to expedite permit requirements by Hudsons to begin immediate construction, eliminating any pending zoning and legal problems for the Lake Lansing Road site which then could be developed for residential use.
- 5. Utility Services Ready. All public utilities such as power, sewers, and water already are installed and paid for in the Frandor area. This eliminates costly extension of these services to a new and more distant area at added cost to taxpayers and Hudsons.
- 6. Near M.S.U. Campus. Frandor offers the easiest access for the 50,000 MSU students, faculty, and staff compared with any other potential Hudsons store site. Many students and East Lansing residents are within walking distance.
- 7. Less Environmental Impact. Although an expanded Frandor could increase traffic, it would entirely be in an area already designated for commercial use and would not disrupt or create added environmental pressures on any residential section.
- 8. Traffic Accessibility. Eight vehicle entrances and exits at Frandor are conveniently located for shoppers coming from any direction in the Central Michigan area. Traffic flow patterns already are safety-engineered and can be easily modified.
- 9. Customer Services. The variety and quality of Frandor's speciality shops would complement a Hudsons department store. Combined with Sears, the recently renovated Frandor provides all of the shopper attractions which a Hudsons could share.

Many Central Michigan citizens want a centrally located, convenient Hudsons store in the Lansing-East Lansing area. Frandor will welcome Hudsons and accommodate its needs.

Support a Better Alternative. If you want a Hudsons store in this area and believe the Better Alternative would best serve you, please indicate your support by writing to the Mayors and City Council members in Lansing and East Lansing and to the J. L. Hudson Co., 1206 Woodward, Detroit 48826.

The State of Michigan offers a two-year Cosmetology Apprenticeship program which I am currently participating in through the Hair Loft Ltd. I've received advanced education in salon services at the 1979 Midwest Beauty & Trade Show in Chicago, the 1979 Redken Regional Seminar in Kalamazoo, Michigan and the Malys' of Michigan Educational Seminar in Kalamazoo and also have participated in many Hair Loft in-shop clinics and fashion shows. Being halfway through the apprenticeship program, I am now taking appointments for haircuts (at reduced rates), perms, hennas, luminizes and braids. Call the Hair Loft Ltd. at 332-8660 for an appointment with me.
