Voting reflects E.L. Progressive influence

By DEBBIE CREEMERS
State News Staff Writer

The East Lansing Progressives decisively influenced on-campus voting patterns, Councilmember Alan Fox said Wednesday.

Fox, who wrote the group's campus-circulated campaign literature with Ingham County Commissioner Mark Grebner, D-East Lansing, said student voters followed their Council and proposition recommendations right down the line.

Of the 13,831 registered student voters in precincts 11 through 16 and 30 through 35, 1,878 students cast votes in Tuesday's election.

Of the Council victors, they cast 1,288 of 6,472 votes for John Czarnecki, 1,723 of 5,566 votes for Larry Owen and 1,535 of 5,301 votes for Ralph Monsma.

Students in these precincts also cast 173 of 733 votes for Kim Thomas Capello, 122 of 1,668 votes for Julius Hanslovsky and 672 of 5,138 votes for Tom Wilbur.

Incumbents John Czarnecki and Larry Owen, and candidate Ralph Monsma won the election.

The analyses were in depth, honest, and not just one-sided. We brought out good and bad points on both Czarnecki and the parking ramp proposal. They were also written for students by students.

—Councilmember Alan Fox

EAST LANSING STUDENT voters also cast 1,906 yes votes to 295 no votes to pass the proposal to annex parts of Meridian Township to East Lansing. The measure passed 6,033 to 3,279.

Proposal B, a bonding proposition for construction of a $2.4 million, multi-level parking ramp to be located on the corner of Grove and Linden streets, fared equally well at the polls.

The Dayton Hudson shopping center, which has appeared on the ballot for the past two years, won by 61 votes at student polls. The proposal received 6,760 "yes" to 2,754 "no" votes overall.

FOX SAID CAMPUS voters heeded the 'Progressives' advice to the letter. He added they may have made Monsma's victory over Wilbur possible. By advising voters to vote for Czarnecki, Fox said he believed the few hundred student voters who might have voted for Wilbur ended up casting their ballots for Czarnecki, resulting in a narrow 268 vote margin by Monsma over Wilbur.

Fox said several aspects of the controversial Progressive advisory brochure made it particularly powerful.

"The analyses were in depth, honest, and not just one-sided," Fox said. "We brought out good and bad points on both Czarnecki and the parking ramp proposal. They were also written for students by students." Grebner and Fox are both MSU students.

Out of 6,100 registered residence hall voters, Fox said about 2,000 made it to the polls.

LANDLORDS, TENANTS DISPUTE

Interest bill causes controversy

By BRUCE BABIARZ
State News Staff Writer

Tenant and landlord interest groups engaged in a verbal crossfire Tuesday night over a proposed bill that would allow tenants to collect interest on security deposits.

The bill, introduced by Rep. Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, was debated at a public hearing of the Consumers Committee, when the bill is in its second draft.

About 40 of the estimated 60 persons at the hearing testified before the committee on the pros and cons of the bill.

Tenant groups said similar legislation has been in effect for about five years in 13 states without any problems.

Michigan law states that the security deposit is legally the property of the tenant and Bullard argues that the interest on these deposits should also belong to the tenant.

"The purpose of this bill is to give the tenant a cash rebate on the money invested," said Stephen Victor, president of the Apartment Association of Michigan.

"The reality is it's going to cost the tenant and the landlord a lot of money," he testified before the committee.

VICTOR SAID THAT administrative and mailing costs to the landlord would be more than the rebate in most cases and would force landlords to raise their rents.

Hope Alexander, representing PIRGIM in Ann Arbor, testified that security deposits are lawfully the money of tenants and therefore tenants should be able to receive the interest from the deposits.

"They (large landlords) collect $3 to $4 million a year for security deposits," Alexander said. "They can invest the money in stocks, bonds, time certificates and real estate."

Dan Cooper, an attorney for the Apartment Association of Michigan, said the bill will not have as great an impact on large landlords as it will smaller ones.

"A lot of consumer legislation does backfire," Cooper said. "People will pull out of the landlord business."

section of the bill is unfair because the landlord would have to spend extra time and money seeking a new tenant for the apartment.

Yvonne Nanasi, director of the Tenants Resource Center, said that the median rent in the tri-county area is about $120 per month and landlords charge one-and-a-half months rent as deposits. Nanasi's data was based on 1970 census tracts.

"WHAT THAT COMES out to is about $4 million in interest free loans (to area landlords)," Nanasi said.

Public subsidized housing should be exempt from returning security deposit interest, said Mary Levine of the Michigan State Housing Development Authority.

Levine said the housing authority provides low-cost housing for ADC and welfare persons. Interest from security deposits are recycled into maintaining the rental units.

Rep. Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing, said that an amendment is being considered that would cut down landlords' office and mailing costs by rebating the interest in the form of rent deductions.

Jondahl, chairperson of the Consumers Committee, said that the committee will hold a meeting to consider the arguments and proposals that were presented at the public hearing.

JANET GREEN, SPOKESPERSON of MSU's Off-Campus Council, said that she represents about 20,000 off-campus students that support the legislation.

Green said that the issue is whether landlords should be allowed to make money off tenants' security deposit money.

Several landlords testified that were upset with the bill as a whole and particularly despised the "24 hour clause." Part of the bill requires landlords to return a tenant's advance deposit within 24 hours if the tenant decides not to move in.

Landlords claimed that the 24 hour

Student aid programs allocated $60 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted by a wide margin Wednesday night to authorize about $60 billion for federal grants and loans to college students over the next five years.

House members rejected amendments that would have allowed the government to bypass state garnishment limits in collecting overdue loans and that would have forbidden federal loan subsidies to families making more than $40,000 a year.

The bill, approved 385-15, now goes to the Senate which is considering a separate version in committee.

A number of present loan and grant programs would be expanded under the House bill. They include:

- Expanding maximum awards from $1,800 to $2,160 in the 1981-82 school year for the Basic Education Opportunity Grant programs of aid to families who can't afford to pay all the college expenses of their children. Maximum awards would rise further in later years.

- Increasing the total money a student and his family can receive under the National Direct Student Loan program from $10,000 to $12,000 for graduate or professional students, from $5,000 to $6,000 for students who have completed two years of study from $2,500 to $3,000 for all others.

Limits also would be expanded for the Guaranteed Student Loan program, which Rep. John Erlenborn, R-Ill., wanted to restrict to families with adjusted gross incomes of less than $40,000 a year.

House members voted 21-16 against an amendments by Rep. Thomas Tauke, R-Iowa, who wanted to give the government authority to take overdue loan payments out of the wages of the borrowers — even if those garnished amounts were more than allowed by various states' laws.

Tauke told colleagues that the government is unable to collect in as many as 22,000 cases at present because of state garnishment laws.

Senate approves '80 budget, House votes today

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate approved a compromise 1980 budget Wednesday night, accepting a $700 million cut in its demand for higher defense spending.

By a 65-27 vote, the Senate sent the $547.6 billion compromise spending package to the House, which is scheduled to consider it today.

The compromise budget calls for a $29.8 billion deficit, about $2 billion more than was recorded in fiscal 1979, the budget year that ended Sept. 30.

The Senate had demanded a 3 percent increase above inflation for defense spending in fiscal 1980. However, the increase was cut to 2.5 percent "real" growth in a House-Senate conference committee.

Although a reduction, the defense figure was generally seen as a victory for the Senate since the House raised its military outlay figure by $1.3 billion. The House also accepted the higher Senate figure of $141.2 billion in defense budget authority, which obligates the government to spending beyond the current fiscal year.

IN RETURN FOR the House concession on defense, the Senate negotiators agreed to higher levels for social spending demanded by the House.

Disagreement over defense and social spending was a key factor in delaying congressional action on the budget for fiscal 1980, which started more than five weeks ago.

"In the end, each House seems to have achieved its own priorities," said Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, Senate Budget Committee chairperson.

Muskie said the compromise budget still represents a policy of fiscal restraint, "dictated by the continuing need to fight inflation, the nation's most pressing concern."

The one remaining obstacle to full House and Senate agreement is the Senate's demand for $3.6 billion in legislative savings that were included in May's target budget but so far not enacted.

The Senate's version of the budget still contains the demand for the cuts. However, the House Democratic leadership will seek to delete that requirement when the House considers the budget today.

If the House makes that change, the budget would be sent back to the Senate.

American hostages still held; oil port 'open'

By The Associated Press

The U.S. government urged remaining Americans to leave Iran Wednesday as at least two more U.S. citizens were reported seized and placed with some 60 hostages held by students demanding that the United States hand over the shah for trial.

American hostages held in the U.S. Embassy in Iran are being "pushed around, abused, intimidated and mishandled," but there is no evidence that any have been seriously injured, a U.S. official said late Wednesday.

The official, who asked that he not be identified, said there was no evidence that any of the estimated 60 American hostages held in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran have been "beaten, stabbed or shot."

U.S. officials said the Iranians have brought new weapons into the embassy compound, including machine guns.

Tehran radio said Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini would not meet with two special envoys sent to Iran by President Carter in hopes of winning freedom for the Americans, held since Sunday at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

"Should the U.S.A. hand over to Iran the deposed shah — this enemy No. 1 of our nation — and give up espionage against our movement, the way would then be open for talks about certain relations which are in the nation's interest," Khomeini was quoted as saying in the radio broadcast, monitored in Kuwait and London.

The broadcast denied reports Iran had halted oil shipments to the United States but said it would consider doing so if

Iranians seize more Americans; envoys depart

America did not extradite Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, ousted last January in Khomeini's Islamic Revolution.

THE UNITED STATES HAS refused to extradite the shah, hospitalized in New York for cancer, to face what the ayatollah calls crimes and corruption against the state.

In London, the British Broadcasting Corp. reported without attribution that two Americans were taken from the Hilton Hotel in Tehran and put with the hostages at the embassy. BBC television also reported Americans were being rounded up around Tehran.

Another Tehran radio report monitored by the BBC said three Americans were prevented from leaving the country on a commercial flight because of problems with their documents. It quoted the airport general manager as saying the problems were resolved and the group would leave Thursday.

The airport manager also denied reports that a number of Americans trying to leave Iran were prevented from doing so after completing airport formalities, it said.

In Washington, the State Department said about 200 Americans had left Iran on commercial flights since the embassy takeover. It urged the 300 to 400 still in the country to leave. Department sources who did not want to be identified said some U.S. citizens working on construction and technical assistance projects had no plans to depart immediately.

STATE DEPARTMENT SPOKESPERSON Hodding Carter indicated official surprise over Khomeini's reported refusal to meet with the U.S. envoys. He said "we have had enough contact with them to get authorization for the mission."

He said the trip was specifically approved by Iranian officials. The mission is led by former Attorney General Ramsey Clark, who met with the Ayatollah during his exile in Paris and urged the United States to reject the shah's regime and contact Khomeini. Its other member is William Miller, a Senate committee aide.

The two left Washington Tuesday night after conferring with President Carter. Tehran radio did not say whether Khomeini would also refuse to meet with a special Palestine Liberation Organization delegation going to Iran in efforts to free the hostages. The PLO group was "already on the way" to Tehran, said a spokesperson for U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

U.S. NATIONAL SECURITY advisor Zbigniew Brzezinski welcomed the support of the PLO mission, saying: "Anybody who (continued on page 5)

NEW YORK — The State Department and oil companies said Wednesday that tankers were being loaded at Iran's main Persian Gulf oil terminal despite reports the port had been shut down. Wholesale home heating oil prices rose sharply in the United States.

Reports of a shutdown at the Kharg Island port, possibly due to local labor troubles, also were denied by the oil minister and national oil company of Iran, which supplies up to 5 percent of U.S. oil.

But wholesale spot market prices for home heating oil continued to rise sharply, and there were reports some U.S. companies' tankers may be facing delays in loading.

"Rumors are flying everywhere," said a source at a U.S. oil company. The source, who asked not to be identified, said one of his company's tankers "has been waiting since Saturday" for oil.

"WE BELIEVE U.S. companies are being singled out," he said, "but we also are led to believe this is a temporary situation."

"They're being very selective," Onnic Marashian, editor-in-chief of the daily newspaper Platt's Oilgram News, said of the Iranians.

State Department spokesperson Hodding Carter said in Washington, "it is my understanding that at this point there is no interruption in those shipments from the port."

Presidential Press Secretary Jody Powell

Iranian officials deny shutdown of main oil port said the White House does not have any information that would suggest Iran had halted oil shipments to the United States or other countries.

But Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said one U.S. tanker was turned away from Iran's major oil port Tuesday in an action that was followed by a general shutdown.

"All you can go by are the facts and the facts are they're not moving," said Jackson, chairperson of the Senate Energy Committee.

IT WAS NOT clear from Jackson's comments whether he had information that all Iranian oil exports were shut down or if only the United States was affected.

"We have got vessels in the area and they are keeping in touch with our tanker company, and as far as we know the oil port at Kharg Island is still operating," said a spokesperson for British Petroleum Co. in London.

British Petroleum buys an estimated 385,000 barrels a day of Iranian oil and is Iran's largest single customer. The United States receives about 700,000 barrels of Iranian oil daily.

In Tokyo, the Kyodo news agency quoted the Japanese embassy in Iran as saying three Japanese tankers were being loaded at the port, and several sources said a Norwegian flag tanker left Kharg Island for Korea early Wednesday after receiving its oil cargo.

IN A TEHRAN Radio interview monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp. in London, Oil Minister Ali Akbar Mo'Infar said, "there has not been the slightest break in the exports of Iran's oil."

"Both the refinery in Abadan and the oil-loading terminals at Kharg Island are functioning," said a National Iranian Oil Co. official in a telephone interview from Tehran.

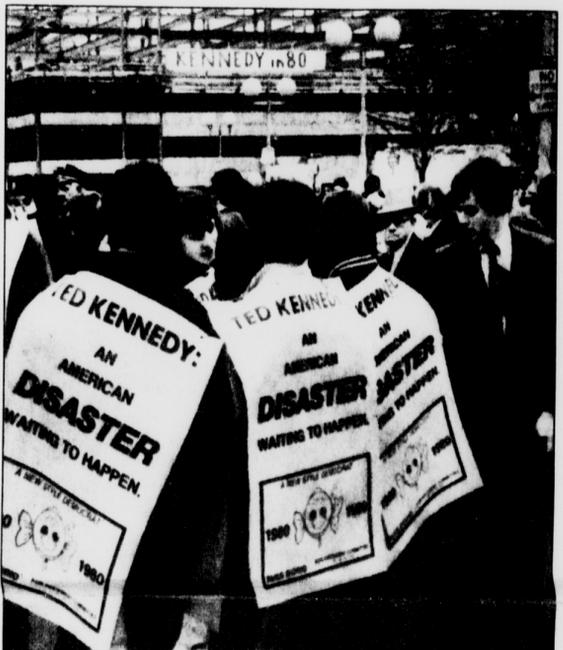

But in a Tehran Radio broadcast monitored in Kuwait, Mo'Infar said "Iran will consider cutting oil shipments" to the United States if Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi "is not extradited."

Iranian oil jitters continued to push spot market prices high in the United States and abroad although analysts and Energy Secretary Charles W. Duncan maintained that domestic supplies were adequate.

"There's no need for homeowners to panic," said Vincent Sgro, editor of the Oil Buyers' Guide, a newspaper which covers oil markets.

"There's plenty of heating oil around," he said. But wholesale spot market prices for the fuel jumped 4 cents to 98 cents a gallon Wednesday. The rise came on top of a 6-cent increase Tuesday.

The spot market includes trades not covered by long-term supply contracts.

Not everyone in Boston is sold on Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's presidential candidacy. This group outside Faneuil Hall, where Kennedy announced his running intentions Tuesday, was definitely anti-Kennedy.

S. Korean gov't loosens grip, frees dissident

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea on Wednesday ended the three-year house arrest of a major dissident who says his release indicates the government is loosening the repressive policies of assassinated President Park Chung-hee.

The same day came another hint there might be a change in the authoritarian course Park set: South Korea's Deputy Premier Shin Hyon-hwak gave the first official indication that the government is considering amending the constitution Park wrote to ensure his one-man rule.

Former President Yun Po-sun, who had been held under close house arrest since 1976, was freed, then immediately echoed his fellow dissidents' calls for free elections of Park's successor. Park was killed Oct. 26 by his intelligence chief and the military has had control of the country since.

Kim Young-sam, leader of the major opposition party, again called for free elections and warned that if the next president is chosen under the present constitution, "there may be some disorder and instability."

Soviets celebrate Bolshevik anniversary

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet military displayed its muscle. Russian workers marched in solidarity with the Communist Party and 72-year-old President Leonid I. Brezhnev showed himself still able to climb to the top of Lenin's mausoleum.

Possibly ailing, Premier Alexei N. Kosygin was absent from the showy military parade in Red Square that marked the 62nd anniversary Wednesday of the 1917 Bolshevik revolution.

The 75-year-old Kosygin, who has not been seen in public since Oct. 17, also skipped a gala rally Tuesday night kicking off the annual anniversary celebration.

Western diplomats believe Kosygin is ill. Soviet sources say he is resting at the Black Sea, but do not comment on his health.

Brezhnev looked fit as he made the approximately 40-foot climb to the top of Lenin's tomb in the blustery, snowy weather.

The Soviet leader, the subject of recurring rumors about his health, stopped halfway to the top of the mausoleum to wave to a contingent of foreign guests below.

Chinese dissident loses court appeal

PEKING (AP) — Prison claimed its most famous Chinese dissident Wednesday and on the same day a new poster on Democracy Wall decried a lack of support for the fledgling democracy movement.

Wei Jingsheng, a 29-year-old magazine editor, lost the appeal of his 15-year sentence for counter-revolutionary activities. He was convicted of supplying military secrets about last winter's Vietnam invasion to a foreigner, and agitating for overthrow of the system. Wei was editor of the radical Reflections magazine.

When he emerges from prison Wei will be stripped of his political rights for three years. He has no further right of appeal.

He was convicted Oct. 17 in a six-hour trial open only to the official press and ticket holders. The Peking People's high court hearing the appeal upheld the sentence Tuesday after 3 and-one-half hours. The foreign press was not admitted.

After Wei's conviction, the U.S. State Department protested the stiff sentence, calling it surprising and disappointing.

Senate defeats synthetic fuel bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate easily defeated an attempt Wednesday to sharply scale down the size of President Carter's proposed $20 billion synthetic fuels program.

By a vote of 57-37, the Senate set aside a $3 billion synthetic fuels measure urged by critics of the synthetic fuel program, a crucial element of the president's energy plan.

A close vote had been expected and Vice President Walter F. Mondale was on hand in case his vote was needed to break a tie.

More challenges are expected to the proposal, including attempts to eliminate creation of a five-member independent corporation with authority to hand out billions of dollars in loans and loan and price guarantees.

The $20 billion would be spent over the next four or five years by energy companies willing to invest in commercial development of plants to extract oil and gas from coal, oil shale and tar sands.

Carter's supporters cited the uncertain supply of oil from Iran and said only if a big synthetic fuels program is sponsored by the government will the United States reduce its dependence on foreign oil.

Town elects officials after 40 years

MARENGO, Ind. (AP) — It had been 40 years since folks in this tiny, barren community elected local officials, but they turned out en masse this time — nearly 90 percent of the registered voters.

They walked down from the hills to the town hall by Brandywine Creek on Tuesday to enter their votes in makeshift polls with torn sheets tacked up for privacy.

They even waited on street corners. "Just checking out the polls, just curious," said one resident.

The issue was not lower taxes or paved streets or even candidates.

The issue was the right to vote. Since the last election in 1937 or 1938 — no one remembers for sure when it was — the jobs of town treasurer and town board members had simply been passed on to willing friends of the incumbents.

Indiana law doesn't require elections to be held on a regular basis, said John N. Shanks, executive director of the State Election Board.

"If there are no candidates, if no one files, the incumbents hold over. If there is only one slate of candidates, then they're considered elected," he explained. "What you find in Marengo is fairly typical. There are some situations where the same family has held office for more than 20 years."

Texas jury deliberates conspiracy case

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The jury began pondering 12 weeks of testimony Wednesday, trying to weed out the facts from the fiction in the trial of millionaire industrialist Cullen Davis, charged with trying to hire someone to kill his divorce judge.

The eight-man, three-woman jury — the 12th juror broke her leg several weeks ago and was dismissed — got a night's sleep after receiving the case Tuesday evening.

The jury can acquit Davis or convict him on one of two charges — solicitation of capital murder or conspiracy to commit capital murder. Both carry penalties of five to 99 years or life in prison.

Davis, 46, his third wife, Karen, and his niece, Kay Davis, sat in the back row of the courtroom to wait.

The case was tried once before, in Houston, but a jury there deadlocked 8-4 for conviction last January.

Davis was acquitted in 1977 by an Amarillo jury in the Fort Worth killing of his 12-year-old stepdaughter, Andrea Wilborn.

Kennedy announces candidacy

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy declared Wednesday he will seek the presidency in 1980 because President Carter has failed to provide leadership to a country that is "willing, even anxious, to be on the march again."

The Massachusetts Democrat, last of the Kennedy brothers and heir to a modern political dynasty, made his announcement in Boston's historic Faneuil Hall, listing what he called stark failures of Carter administration domestic policies.

Then he left on a sweeping campaign trip taking him from Maine to Oklahoma, with stops in New Hampshire, Illinois, Tennessee, Florida, South Carolina and Connecticut.

Kennedy said that before the last presidential election, "we were told that Americans were honest, loving, good, decent and compassionate. Now, the people are blamed for every national ill and scolded as greedy, wasteful and mired in malaise."

"WHICH IS IT?" he asked. "Did we change so much in these three years? Or is it because our present leadership does not understand that we are willing, even anxious, to be on the march again?"

The most dramatic moment of the announcement came when Kennedy was asked whether his wife, Joan, who has lived in Boston apart from the senator, would campaign for him.

Kennedy supporters in the crowded hall boomed the question. But Kennedy motioned for silence and then turned to his wife, seated on the stage behind him, and said, "Joan?"

Joan Kennedy stepped forward and said, to cheers and applause, "I look forward to campaigning for him."

SHE ADDED THAT she soon would talk to reporters, "and I hope to answer all the questions you might have on your minds today."

Seated with Kennedy's wife on the platform were the couple's three children, Kara, 19, Edward M. Jr., 18, and Patrick Joseph, 12.

Other Kennedy family members, including Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis and Ethel Kennedy, the widows of John and Robert Kennedy, were seated in the front row. Also given a place of honor with the family was Mayor Jane Byrne of Chicago, who recently endorsed Kennedy's presidential bid after first indicating she was leaning toward supporting Carter.

After leaving the hall, Kennedy spoke briefly to the crowd outside, asking whether "it is time to put America back to work again?" The crowd responded with cheers.

In his speech, Kennedy said that "when present difficulties grow so large that they threaten the essential confidence of the nation, only the president can marshal the energies of the people and provide a sense of direction."

"FOR MANY MONTHS," he said, "we have been sinking into crisis. We have no clear summons from the center of power . . ."

"Government falters. Fear spreads that our leaders have resigned themselves to retreat."

"This country is not prepared to sound retreat. It is ready to advance. It is willing to make a stand. And so am I."

Enumerating what he called stark failures, Kennedy said "workers are forced to take a second job to make ends meet because wages are rising only half as fast as prices. Families go into debt and suffer real financial hardship to educate their children. This year the poorest 10 percent of our population must pay 119 percent of their incomes for the necessities of life."

Rosalyn Carter visits Cambodia

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter on Wednesday sent his wife Rosalyn on a four-day mission to Thailand's refugee camps "to observe at first hand the consequences of the horrible tragedy that is occurring there."

The First Lady and a delegation of aides, including the U.S. surgeon general, left Andrews Air Force Base, Md., with a request from the president to assess the obstacles to delivery of food and medical supplies to Cambodia and its people who have fled into Thailand.

The president said the warring factions in Cambodia — forces loyal to the deposed Pol Pot regime and the government in Phnom Penh backed by Vietnam — were placing "unwarranted obstacles" in the way of food deliveries.

"We have no political motives. We have one single commitment, and that is to stop the suffering and the starvation among these unfortunate people," Carter said in a ceremony on the White House South Lawn before his wife departed for Bangkok just after dawn.

"It's important that we maintain our commitment and our concern to all the starving people there, regardless of their political affiliation, regardless of the circumstances under which they suffer," the president said.

Mrs. Carter said, "This is a tragic situation and our whole country is concerned and I want to go also to see what every American can do to help."

She was accompanied by Surgeon General Julius B. Richmond; Jean Young, wife of former U.N. ambassador Andrew Young; Richard Holbrooke, assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs, and former Sen. Harold Hughes, D-Iowa.

Klan given copy of anti-KKK rally

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A man who identified himself as a member of the Ku Klux Klan was given a copy of the parade permit for an anti-Klan rally two days before gunmen killed five persons at the demonstration, police acknowledged on Wednesday.

Police Capt. J.W. Hilliard said officers had conferred with the city attorney before giving the man a copy of the permit, which gave the precise location of the rally. According to Hilliard, the city attorney advised that the permit was a public record and therefore could not be withheld.

Several carloads of white men drove up to the anti-Klan rally Saturday morning and opened fire, killing five persons and wounding nine others. Fourteen persons have been charged in the shootings.

Hilliard refused during a news conference to comment on whether police kept the man under surveillance after he got the parade permit and would not elaborate on the man's identification.

U.S. negotiators stalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two American emissaries sent to negotiate the release of some 60 Americans held hostage in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran were stalled in Turkey on Wednesday when Iranian leaders refused to let them into the country.

Ramsay Clark, a former U.S. attorney general, and William Miller, a staff member of a Senate committee, were reported by the State Department to be waiting in Ankara for further instruction.

State Department spokesperson Hodding Carter said the two emissaries, carrying a personal message from President Carter to Iranian leaders, would remain in Turkey indefinitely "pending clarification."

President Carter sent Clark and Miller to Tuesday night to meet with government leaders in Tehran.

But as Clark and Miller undertook their mission, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Iran's religious revolutionary leader, insisted that no Iranian official had been authorized to negotiate with them.

An Iranian government broadcast, monitored in Kuwait, demanded that the deposed Shah Mohammad Raza Pahlavi, now in a New York hospital for cancer treatment, be returned for trial as a war criminal before any talks could be held.

COURT SUIT TO DECIDE

Annexation battle not over

By SUSIE BENKELMAN
State News Staff Writer

Meridian Township is continuing its fight to keep parts of East Complex from being annexed to East Lansing, despite the almost two-to-one vote Tuesday in favor of the annexation.

A motion was filed by Meridian Township in late October, asking that Judge Jack W. Warren avoid a court trial and decide in their favor regarding the suit filed by Meridian Township Sept. 7. The date for hearing the motion is set for Dec. 12.

The motion is similar to one filed last month by Meridian Township. The township claims that an amendment to the Michigan Charter Township Act may be unconstitutional. The act provides the county clerk with the jurisdiction of scheduling annexation elections.

Meridian Township charges that County Clerk Ling Brewer should have followed Michigan Boundary Commission guidelines. The Boundary Commission statute gives exclusive jurisdiction in annexation matters to that commission.

IN THE SIMILAR motion filed last month, Ingham County filed a cross-motion asking for dismissal of the suit. The county claimed that Meridian Township was a creature of the state and lacks legal capacity to sue the county.

Warren denied both motions, indicating that Meridian's charges should be brought up after the election. Whether Ingham County will again file a cross-motion is still in question, county attorney Larry Salstrom said.

"At this point in time, we have not determined what type of motions we will file, if any," Salstrom said.

Salstrom said that if the county files a motion, it will try to set the hearing for the same date as Meridian Township's motion.

Meridian Township's suit, filed Sept. 7, is based on six counts, one being the question of the constitutionality of the Charter Township Act.

Meridian Township also charges that they will be deprived of $117,000 in state and federal revenue sharing funds if the annexation is carried through. Some of the funding, along with liquor licenses, is based on the population of 3,200, which the township would lose with the annexation.

The township's suit also claims that civil rights of Meridian residents have been violated because residents living outside the annexation area were not allowed to vote. Of the 3,200 residents in the "pistol area," about 2,300 are registered voters. Ninety-four of those voters voted in Tuesday's election with 73 approving the proposal.

New situations, changing lifestyle cause increase of women drinkers

By MOLLY MIKA
State News Staff Writer

The number of women drinkers and women alcoholics is growing fast, said Sharlene Rhines of the MSU Advisory Committee on Substance Abuse.

In the last 25 years, the number of new women drinkers has increased by a ratio of two to one over new male drinkers, Rhines said Wednesday at the Women's Resource Center brownbag lunch.

Recent studies estimate that about one-third of the nine or 10 million alcoholics in the United States are women.

Rhines attributes the rising number of women drinkers to their changing lifestyles.

"MORE WOMEN ARE drinking because of the pressure of new situations," Rhines said, "situations that women traditionally have not been taught to deal with."

Many of these women are not being helped because society attaches stigmas to women alcoholics, she added.

A woman alcoholic is tagged with the moral stigma of alcoholism and is doubly stigmatized because it has always been considered "unladylike" for women to be drunk, Rhines said.

Women are society's "hidden drinkers" because their traditional roles in the home have enabled them to disguise the effects of their drinking. "Women can be well on the way to alcoholism before the family realizes it, and when it is revealed by the family, they often try to hide it," she said.

"EITHER MOM IS an embarrassment to them or they think they're being kind by not exposing her drinking problem. But they're killing her with kindness."

When men drink excessively, they often get into trouble on the job or with the law, Rhines added.

"But alcoholic women don't usually fight, destroy property or assault another person. Instead they sit at home and are quiet about their drinking.

ASMSU board approves banner contests funding

By PAUL CURTIS

Funds for the sign and banner contests for the rally to protest high tuition rates Nov. 14 were approved by the ASMSU student board, Tuesday night.

The student board plans to spend $280 for an aerial sign that will circle the stadium during the Minnesota game Saturday. A prize of $100 will go to the winners of the banner contest, and $50 to the winner of the sign contest.

ASMSU Comptroller Jim Peterson announced that he will leave his post Jan. 1, 1980 because of a winter internship.

The comptroller has not recommended a replacement for his post to the student board yet.

Peterson also announced to the board that more than $3,000 has been spent on the tuition rally.

The rally might help the student cause, but it will be a long-term struggle, legislators in Lansing told Steve Wachsborg, ASMSU board member.

EDUCATION IS IN the middle of the priority list and the legislators believe education would help solve many social problems, especially unemployment, Wachsborg said.

The student body presidents of Oakland and Wayne State universities and the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor might attend the rally, he added.

The board also funded money to pay workers to call people the night before the rally.

The money bills did not pass without negative input from some of the board members. Henry Sosa thought the rally was turning into somewhat of a spectacle.

"While we're at it, let's sell appliances," he said.

The rules for the sign contest are: the sign does not have a size limit, but it must be carried by one person only. The sign must be carried during the rally.

Banners must be at least six feet long, with no restrictions on maximum dimensions, and judging will go on throughout the rally.

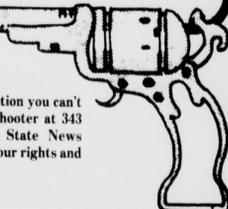

In other action, the board approved the revised Academic Freedom Report, a lengthy document which deals with all aspects of student academic rights.

The report still must be approved by several councils and the Board of Trustees, and then the president before it can go into effect.

Scott Denison, College of Social Science representative, was elected to a city council seat in Gibraltar, south of Detroit. He has resigned from the ASMSU student board to return to his hometown.

CATA improves service for handicapper riders

By MICHAEL VEH
State News Staff Writer

A plan to add two additional special transportation vehicles during peak usage hours was approved by the CATA Board of Directors Wednesday.

The Capital Area Transportation Authority's SPEC-TRAN service provides transportation to handicappers by using lift-equipped vehicles. The vehicles are sent to a location upon telephone request.

The new system would be more efficient than the current demand and response system, Richard Leonard, CATA planning manager said.

Currently, 40 to 50 requests for service each day must be turned down due to the unavailability of vehicles, Leonard said.

Under the new plan, the availability of service is increased while fares and territories remain unchanged.

Additional personnel would be required to administer the service. CATA would also face additional costs under a plan for supplementing its services with the aid of taxi companies.

In addition to adding the two vehicles, CATA is attempting to expand service by using standard taxi cabs.

If cooperation can be obtained from the cab companies, CATA will call a taxi to fill a SPEC-TRAN request when a regular SPEC-TRAN vehicle is unavailable.

The taxi would still cost the user 50 cents and CATA would pay the rest of the cab fee.

OPINION

School prayer should be allowed

Students should be allowed to pray in school, as long as their prayer does not infringe upon the rights of other students. Any prayer in school should be entirely voluntary, and no student should feel pressured to take part in a prayer. Individual freedoms must be respected if prayer is allowed in school.

An individual's freedom to pray should also be respected, however. After the Supreme Court ruled to ban prayer in schools, students had to go somewhere else if they wished to pray. A period during the day in which a student is allowed to silently pray, or meditate in the classroom would be a restful moment of the day, and would harm no one. School days, especially those in grade school, are often hectic enough.

Under current state law, school boards in Michigan may give students time to meditate during the school day. This is a good law. School boards which give students periods of silence to allow ruminations or prayers would be doing a good service to students.

A recent measure approved by Michigan's House Education Committee would require school districts to provide that time. Although some might complain that this involves another instance of government limiting the freedom of local groups, such as school boards, the state should provide a good educational environment for all students in Michigan. A meditation period would help provide that environment, and the state is not wrong in requiring school boards to do so.

If passed, however, the measure would require for a daily period of what is termed "non-instructional, voluntary prayer". This could be radically different from a period set aside for just meditation in which a student would be able to pray if he wished. What is meant by "non-instructional" and "voluntary" must be made clear. In no way should a period be set aside, by a school board specifically for, say, fundamentalist Baptists to pray. If there are 29 Baptists in a classroom and one (for the sake of this example) Muslim or Jew, then that lone person would definitely feel out of place. If this occurred in grade school, when children are highly impressionable, then that non-Christian child might feel alienated or feel that something was wrong with his/her religion. A period set aside for prayer should in no way define what that prayer should be, nor should a teacher or other role model imply that one type of prayer is recommended. As long as these points are clarified then a state law which allows students a period of prayer would be a good law.

Iran closes port

The mid-Michigan area may be in for a more severe winter than had been anticipated since Iran's sole crude oil port has been closed. The Iranian oil, though it accounts for approximately 3.5 to 4 percent of this country's total oil supply, will drastically hurt the oil industry this winter.

The exact causes of the port shutdown are somewhat unclear. U.S. officials have said that it was probably caused by striking workers. This may be so, but there is a valid need to question the role the Iranian government had in controlling the ports. An attempt by the Iranian government to influence American politics must not be ruled out as playing a role in the port's closing.

The recent Iranian oil shutdown may not be discounted as a matter of relative unimportance. The causes of the shut down may be uncertain; the effects, on the other hand, should be strikingly clear. The same energy situation that confronted the American society last winter may return again this winter. Last winter when the ports closed, the price of gasoline rose to unprecedented heights the following spring. These drastic price increases — in New York City, gasoline last March was selling for more than $1 a gallon — were directly caused by the Iranian cutoff.

The loss of Iranian oil was not the only factor that influenced the price rises. The world supply of oil fell considerably when the Iranians closed the port, for the United States is not the only country to which the Iranians supply oil. The worldwide shortage further increased the damage that was thrust upon the American economy. Again this winter oil prices will continue to rise much higher than 3.5 to 4 percent, figures representing the loss in total supplies.

These price increases will not be limited directly to the oil industry. Many businesses that depend on oil for their major source of power will have to adjust their prices upward to reflect increased oil prices. The steel industry, for example, increased its prices last winter because of the Iranian oil shortage.

Energy prices and availability are not the only problems that are connected with the oil cutoff. The shut down of the Iranian port is another of the crucial indicators that must prompt the government to devise an effective energy policy. The current energy policies assume that (1) the United States will continue to use oil at a relatively constant rate, and (2) the supplies of oil will also remain constant. The recent shutdowns shows the latter assumption to be extremely foolish. Some oil companies and politicians refuse to accept the fact that there are other nations in the world that play a decisive role in our economic affairs.

Hopefully local and national legislators will initiate appropriate steps to confront any problems that may arise from the port closing. The port may not be closed throughout the winter, but the effects of the closing will remain for quite some time.

VIEWPOINT: SHOPPING AND ZONING

Controversy didn't end Tuesday

By JIM PAQUET

The article on the mall advisory vote which appeared in the Oct. 29 State News was very disturbing. I learned from Michael Veh, the staff writer who wrote the article, that his sources of information were the Dayton-Hudson Site Plan and the city staff report on the mall proposal. The article was essentially a reprint, without attribution, of much of the information contained therein. It is unfortunate that the author and his editor failed to analyze the information critically and question the basic assumptions behind the "facts." The result was an article that offered only one perspective on the "new" mall, while presenting misleading and erroneous information.

The most glaring errors in the article concerned the housing that will allegedly accompany the mall. The article stated that "the developers expect to open the mall in 1981 and build 100 housing units per year..." That statement is false! The developer, Dayton-Hudson, will not build any housing. Dayton-Hudson has not agreed to finance any housing. All Dayton-Hudson will do is "allow" the land to be zoned for residential usage and "exercise its best efforts to secure a developer" according to the agreement it has with the city. While zoning is necessary to make a housing development a reality, it is not sufficient to make it so. East Lansing residents cannot assume that the mall and the housing are a package deal. They are not. Dayton-Hudson will build a shopping mall. Given the right economic conditions, someday, someone, may build the housing.

The second major problem I have with the article (and the city staff report for that matter) is its treatment of the "strip development" question. The article asserted that the ability of the mall "to attract other commercial development" will be reduced "due, primarily, to the mall structure being moved further from Lake Lansing Road, where it would be less visible..." That statement is not only false, but it is also ridiculous! To hold otherwise is to imply that the visibility of the mall is some significant commercial advantage to a neighboring business. Strip development thrives where there is heavy traffic. The fact that the mall will generate an increased traffic flow in its general vicinity and draw traffic from many miles away to the northeast corner of East Lansing are far more salient factors to strip developers than the distance of the mall from the road.

The article further obscures strip development as a real issue by stating that Dayton-Hudson's offer to deed 18 acres of land to the city is "a major concession" which will "prevent strip development." It is reasonable to conclude that there will not be a McDonald's built on the limited frontage along Lake Lansing Road that is deeded to the city. However, the city does not, and will not, own the land to the east and to the west of the parcel. Anyone who is inclined to over value the "barrier" this will present to strip development, need only check the impact of a comparably sized area of green space near the Lansing Mall. Here's a tip for those of you who can't find it: there is a golf course east of Waverly Road and south of Saginaw.

Poor review of Metheny concert

Ross Boissoneau's review of the concert by the Pat Metheny Band displayed a weak grasp of musical awareness and absolutely no insight into the music.

Certainly, it was a favorable review, but this isn't much to credit him with, since anyone with the slightest bit of musical perception who attended the concert would have acknowledged the mastery of the performance.

Although Boissoneau comments on the group's originality and innovativeness, he destroys his own images by making outrageous comparisons to Genesis, Yes and King Crimson. The line in which he describes bassist Mark Egan's sound as "a regular guitar, only an octave lower" manifests unforgivable ignorance. What he clumsily describes here is simply the sound of a bass, which is hardly a just complement to Egan's unique tone.

Boissoneau completely failed to capture the Metheny group's high energy and driving emotional style. The ethereal intensity of the music and its impact on the audience seems to have been totally lost to him. After the concert I heard an awestruck audience exclaiming quotes like "incredible," "amazing," "my whole life has changed," etc. Boissoneau's critique tragically reflected none of this.

Consequently, Boissoneau's amateurish review has shown that as a musical critic his credibility is doubtful at best.

Conclusions are not understood

In response to Thursday's letter propounding the beneficial effects the Dayton-Hudson Mall would have on East Lansing, I must disagree with the conclusion arrived at by Park, Wenner, and Piper. I do agree with their reasons. I must concur that if their figures are accurate, these gentlemen are quite correct in saying that the existing residential tax base is far too heavy and the tax burden should be re-distributed in a more equitable level. However, the answer to their woes does not lie with the Dayton-Hudson mall, rather with an amendment of the city's property tax laws.

The question nobody seems to have asked is who stands to profit from this mall? The Citizens for a Better East Lansing would undoubtedly contend the citizens of East Lansing would. (A thousand pardons, the full-time citizens of East Lansing would.) Unfortunately, the misled CBEL is very wrong. The people who stand to profit most from this project are none other than the building contractor and the Dayton-Hudson Corp. and its stockholders. The building contractor will pull money in hand over fist, as contractors usually do. And of course, the Dayton-Hudson Corp. will earn enough profits to send the dividends up significantly.

This is just another example of the capitalist elite giving the proverbial shaft to the middle and lower classes. Homeowners will still pay the same tax rate, the tax laws won't change and the new mall will only pay its disproportionate amount of taxes.

Another factor that was not brought up by the CBEL is the environmental factor. A mall would create more waste with less undeveloped land left in the community. The time has come to take a stand against those myopic, capitalist elites that continue to deprive us of a clean environment just to build a mall here and make a substantial profit. The negative aspects outweigh any good aspects a Dayton-Hudson mall would have. Let the mall be built somewhere else.

CONSUMERS POWER AGREES

N-power safety needs improving

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

MIDLAND — Consumers Power spokespersons told reporters here Wednesday that they agree with last week's report by the Presidential Commission on Three Mile Island which said major improvements were needed to enhance the safety of the nuclear industry.

"We agree with the commission that improvements are necessary if nuclear power is to continue to receive the support of the majority of the public," said Gilbert S. Keeley, manager of the Midland plant.

Keeley added that Consumers Power believes the design and operation of present nuclear power plants is adequate to protect the health and safety of its employees and nearby residents.

The Presidential Commission report, also known as the Kemeny report, concluded that "fundamental changes will be necessary in the organization, procedures and practices," of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the nuclear industry.

"If the country wishes... to confront the risks that are inherently associated with nuclear power, fundamental changes are necessary if those risks are to be kept within tolerable limits," the report stated.

Those changes should cover all aspects of nuclear power, the report stated, from changes in the NRC to the operation and construction of reactors.

Previously, to pass the NRC nuclear plant operators exam, an "average" score of 70 percent was required.

With this operators test it was possible to get 100 percent scores on parts of the exam, fail the safety section, and still have an average score of 70 percent.

Because of the deficiencies found in the design of nuclear reactors, and the training given to operators of the plants, the report stated "an accident like Three Mile Island was eventually inevitable."

The report also stated the designer of the TMI plant, Babcox and Wilcox, and the operator of the plant, Metropolitan Edison Company, "failed to acquire enough information about safety problems, (and) failed to analyze adequately what information they did acquire or failed to act on that information."

Babcox and Wilcox were also the designers of the Midland plant.

The Midland plant, which is currently 63 percent complete, was originally scheduled for completion in 1975 at a cost of $349 million.

Last year, at this time the plant was 52 percent complete.

The latest cost estimate for the plant is $1.67 billion, not including fuel costs. A revised estimate, due in January, is expected to exceed $1.67 billion — already about five times the original estimated cost.

The number two reactor at the plant is now scheduled for completion in 1981, and the number one reactor is scheduled to be completed in 1982, said Bruce Peck, a plant official.

The delays and cost increases were due to problems with licensing, continuing regulation, and other safety requirements, plant officials said.

Peck added that the plant, which has an expected 40-year lifespan, would probably still be cheaper than a comparable coal plant.

Robert Montross, general manager of the Midland plant, said the reactors would not operate at full capacity for several years after the plant opened.

Despite preliminary tests and shakedown, Montross said it would take time to get the plant running adequately. He added the plant probably would operate only at 60 percent efficiency during its first year.

When both reactors are completed and operating, they will produce about 1,300 megawatts of electricity.

Meanwhile, work has resumed on the plant's diesel generator building, said Donald Miller, site manager of the Midland plant.

Work on the building halted last spring when it was discovered that the generator building had settled between three and seven inches.

Soviets' image of U.S. has declined since 1950s

By ELYSE GOLDIN
State News Staff Writer

The Soviet Union's image of the United States is deteriorating, due to the poor quality of American literature found in the USSR, a former Soviet sociologist said Wednesday in the Union.

Vladimir Shlapentokh, formerly of the Soviet Academy of Sciences in Moscow and a current visiting professor of sociology at MSU, said that the Soviet view of the United States has weakened since the 1950s, in part because the quality of American literature and media in the USSR has deflated.

"It is impossible for Soviet intelligentsia to have a good image of the United States when the majority of American literature received there are negative examples of this country," he said.

Sponsored by the MSU Russian and East European Studies Program, Shlapentokh spoke on "Literature and the Liberal Movement in the Soviet Union."

LITERATURE PLAYS A more important role in the Soviet Union than it does in the United States, he said. Literature is a major part of all aspects of Soviet life. It sets civic and aesthetic values in the Soviet Union, Shlapentokh said.

"The current fictions, novels and magazines are the topic of conversation among Soviet intelligentsia," he said. "If somebody at a party asks if you have read a certain book, you certainly would never admit that you hadn't, even if you didn't — it would be too embarrassing."

Shlapentokh said that research in the Soviet Union has proven that the higher a person's intellectual level is, the less desire that person has to watch television and movies. He said that Soviet intellectuals read far more books than Americans.

"Books and magazines are a sign of hierarchical position in the USSR," Shlapentokh said.

He said the demand for books, newspapers and magazines is unsatisfied in the Soviet Union. Part of the shortage is due to the government's restraint on literature that does not harmonize with the Soviet view.

"IN THE UNITED STATES, literature has a lot more freedom than it does in the Soviet Union. The USSR will either favor, tolerate or be hostile towards literature," Shlapentokh said.

If the government favors ideas presented in the publication, he said that the piece has a great chance of being published and of receiving positive reviews from the press. The author can also attain high official Soviet positions.

Literature which is simply tolerated by the government because it does not fully represent the Soviet view will have a small circulation. It is unlikely that the author will ever hold a high position in Soviet life, Shlapentokh said.

He said that literature which conflicts with Soviet objectives is treated with hostility by the authorities.

The work of such authors is never published in the Soviet Union and they must therefore go underground. Often these authors are arrested and tried, he said, and sometimes expelled from the country.

Shlapentokh said that those authors who go underground are considered unofficial. Soviet intelligentsia supports predominantly unofficial literature, he said.

Many Soviets purchase books on the black market, he said.

"You can buy a Bible on the black market for about $100. That's all right though, nobody ever said you must have a Bible to be religious," he said.

can help would be playing a constructive role."

The United States does not officially recognize the PLO guerrilla chief Yasir Arafat, who visited Khomeini shortly after he returned from exile in France last February.

Brzezinski also said the United States seeks normal relations with Iran and a solution to the present situation based on "common sense." He said he hopes to resolve the crisis in a manner consistent with principles of international law and that he expected top-level Iranian officials to receive the U.S. envoys.

In another Tehran radio broadcast monitored in London, Khomeini discounted the possibility of U.S. military force to free the hostages, saying that "America is far too important to do so."

U.S. officials have repeatedly stated they will not use force following the seizure of the embassy along with two U.S. consulates.

The only sizable American military power in the Persian Gulf-Indian Ocean area of the Mideast is a carrier-led task group of eight ships. If the administration were to change its mind, it would have to bring forces from as far as the United States.

Elvis wine: 'Jailhouse Crock'

A Detroit wine company has come up with another way to capitalize on the death of this nation's most exploited rocker, Elvis Presley.

Always Elvis, a slightly sweet, dry wine imported from Italy, has been distributed in nine states, including Michigan and Ohio.

Sales are said to be "very nice."

Personally, I think anybody who would buy the wine is off his rocker.

Sure, it's nice to miss the man and play his music as remembrance, but things have gone too far and I'm pretty shook up about it.

I don't mean to be cruel, but I think the people who comb the country looking for Elvis memorabilia are either opportunists looking to be "the first person on the block," or just plain morbid.

I shudder to think what these people would do if a member of their own family died.

Lucky, my dog of 13 years, died last summer and I don't carry a lock of his hair around with me — and he could shake his rear quarters as well as Elvis could.

I have to admit I get sentimental sometimes. I once buried a deceased Guinea pig in the garden, but at least he turned out to be good fertilizer. I had a great tomato crop the following year.

But you cannot do anything with an empty wine bottle except stuff a candle in its mouth or use it for self defense.

The wine might be pretty good — it made the wine list at the show room of the Las Vegas Hilton — but after you get sloshed and rock around a bit, and manage to keep out of the jailhouse, what can you do with the bottle?

The wine distributors have got that one covered. They put in every way." Great stuff. Elvis fans will probably love this and will rush out to collect a bottle for each of the three golden bottle, is scheduled for next summer. Oh boy!

As for me, I wouldn't take a bottle if it was given to me. Well, maybe I'd drink the wine, but I'd sure feel bad that wine bottles don't carry a deposit.

Sure, it's nice to miss the man and play his music as remembrance, but things have gone too far and I'm pretty shook up about it . . . Personally, I think anybody who'd buy the wine is off his rocker.

Jeff Lorber—bland fusion at Dooley's

By RENALDO MIGALDI
State News Reviewer

The Jeff Lorber Fusion plays jazz fusion, which is supposed to be a "fusion" or mixture of jazz and rock 'n roll. Fusion has its proponents and opponents, and if you give a fusion group a bad review you're likely to be attacked as a "purist."

But although "fusion" is supposed to be the territory where rock and jazz meet, the usual result is that both get watered down in the process. I don't know why this has to be. Certainly there is nothing intrinsic in the nature of "fusion" which demands this blandness. Perhaps it's only because jazz-rock fusion has turned out to be a most lucrative genre; the musicians who want to get rich move there.

I don't know how badly Jeff Lorber, who brought his fusion group to Dooley's Tuesday night, wants to get rich, but his music reflects what I've been saying. He and his quartet have impeccable technique, but they simply aren't very creative.

Jeff Lorber seems to put most of his energy into writing his charts, which tend toward a sort of dreamy lyricism. His comping and riffing under other soloists shows novelty and taste, too. But his solos are very drab and monotonous. He treats the synthesizer as just another kind of funny-sounding organ, instead of exploiting it for its own individual potentials. On all his keyboards he just plays the same old riffs we've all heard before from a thousand known and unknown organists since the '50s.

Danny Wilson, on bass, is even more boring: addicted to flash instead of substance. He just runs as fast as he can instead of taking the time to say something meaningful. Reedman Kenny Gorlick, however, can be interesting. He is striving for something more than just another imitation of Dave Sanborn. He is capable of playing solos that stick in your head for awhile. But only the drummer, Dennis Bradford, seemed to be really doing a thing of (continued on page 7)

'Dracula' revival continues in Fairchild

By WILLIAM BARNHARDT
State News Reviewer

PAC and George Schuttler's production of Count Dracula can't even touch — can't hold a candle to — the previous Lansing area production, The Passion of Dracula that the BoarsHead Theatre presented. But it still isn't bad entertainment. In fact, with a few improvements here and there it might even be very good.

I really can't see why the play suffers where it does, for director George Schuttler seems to have great deference for the material — he wants to scare us and amuse us, and all evidence points to his devotion to the tone of Dracula. But while he has spent so much time putting spider webs and a live "wax museum" of live (?) ex-victims of Dracula in the lobby and perfecting all the minor details of the gothic legend he has ignored some of the basics on stage.

First of all, he must know that Count Dracula is as gothic and sensationalized and mock-victorian as things get. Did any of the actors manage an English accent? No. The full rich English setting seemed absurd with all the Midwestern dialects. Did the archetypical Professor Van Helsing, renowned Viennese genius, maintain a German dialect? No, or not at least through the entire show. Even the insane insectivorous Renfield, played to the hilt by Carlice Collins, seems to be a tool of comic relief — as if anyone took the premise seriously — in this adaptation. And there are many who would enjoy a Renfield that plays just short of a Richard Pryor routine. But I don't think there are many who could accept the Dracula, played by Bernie White, who could not communicate the evil, or the proper bass mesmerizing Transylvanian accent, or the stage presence and sweep of cape necessary to scare us or impress us. These above concerns are necessary to the Dracula story, they are the richness and appeal of the gothic legend. Such things should not have been overlooked.

Despite these breaches of tradition, the play still has some diverting performances. The hefty busybody Sybil (Kay Robinson) and the beautiful Mina, the Intended of Dracula (Jane Salutz) were fine, and at times couldn't help being the stage's main attraction despite the presence of the Count. The asylum-keeper Dr. Seward (played perhaps with a bit too much reserve by Bruce Marr) and his crew of orderlies also supported the production well.

The special effects are not as great as I thought they'd be. BoarsHead attempted transformations, explosions, actually hampered the stage into their Dracula, and never waded a chance for creepy lighting. PAC's production sets off loud bombs in the fireplace, drives the stake into the Count where the audience can't see it, and propels a bat into the audience where it got stuck on its string en route to the light booth. Not bad effects, just not very accomplished considering the buildup that the play is really an excuse just to do these things.

With all the revival and re-revival and legend-worship surrounded with the Dracula legend as of late, it was only inevitable that the famous vampire would creep onto the MSU campus too. Through Saturday, PAC presents him at a safe distance.

Count Dracula (Bernie White) approaches his next victim in the PAC production of the Bram Stoker horror classic. Count Dracula will continue through Saturday in Fairchild Theater. Curtaintime is 8:15 p.m.

Lorber Fusion

his own. For his one solo of the first set, instead of copping out to crowd-pleaser flash, he did some very subtle, eloquent things with rock rhythm. His solo only got polite applause, though.

Overall, The Jeff Lorber fusion isn't too hot. I've seen dozens of unknown bands that could blow them completely away, playing the same kind of stuff. But Lorber's music is mild, bland, and inoffensive, and in the USA that's what makes money: music for the middle class. That's why Arista Records is hyping him so hard.

Smith best 'half-tailback' in football

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Staff Writer

Steve Smith is the best one-half of a tailback you'll ever see.

Not that MSU's 5-foot-9-inch junior can't do it all; he's a fine blocker for his size, has run for 762 yards, which leads the team, and has caught 13 passes.

But Smith only plays half of the time. Every other play, Smith watches from the sideline as teammates Derek Hughes or Bruce Reeves play tailback.

OBVIOUSLY, HED RATHER be playing all the time. "I don't enjoy alternating, but I've learned to live with it," the Louisville, Ky., native said after practice Tuesday. "Maybe one day I'll play all the time, but there are some things in life you don't like, but you gotta do."

Smith was a part-time player last fall, but still led the club in rushing.

"I thought I earned the right to play full-time last year," he pointed out. "That's not the way it's meant to be, I guess." MSU coach Darryl Rogers has said before that one of the reasons Smith isn't in for every play is that his top runner weighs only 182 pounds and may not be able to take the beating that a bigger player could.

"I THINK I'VE earned the right," Smith repeated. "Size shouldn't have anything to do with it. I've taken more good licks than anybody on the team and if you've seen the games this season, you know that."

Even though he only plays half of the time, it is easy to see that Smith has improved since a year ago. "I'm doing a lot of the things I did towards the end of the season last year," he said. "I'm more confident making my blocks. I get to the line of scrimmage a bit quicker than last year. But other than that, I'm doing pretty much the same things as a year ago, except people didn't notice me as much last year."

Part of the reason people are noticing him this season is Smith's four 100-yard games, one a 101-yard effort against Michigan on national television. As a result of these performances, he needs 238 yards in the season's last two games to reach 1,000 yards for the season.

"Getting 1,000 yards in a season has been my goal," Smith said. "It's been my goal since high school."

chance against Minnesota and Iowa, but those contests have more importance for the Spartans. If MSU can win both of those games, it finishes 1979 with a winning record.

"Winning those games means a whole lot to us," Smith explained. "It's a lot of pride. I'm looking forward to getting on the right track for next year, my senior year."

Smith expects a better season next fall. Even if he still is a 'half of a tailback.'

SMITH WILL GET his

NCR means
next generation
microelectronics

If you want to build a career in the vital field of microelectronics, talk to a company with the resources, the staff, and the commitment you need: NCR.

Professionals at our Miamisburg, Ohio operation are now developing, designing, and fabricating a new generation of—MOS/LSI semiconductors and memories—devices that will substantially enhance our position as the world's 2nd largest computer company.

Entry-level assignments span the full range of engineering functions, including advanced device development, memory and logic design, test systems development, process engineering, and quality assurance/reliability.

You should have a BS/MS/PhD in EE, or an MS/PhD in Solid State Physics, or a degree in Math or Computer Science with engineering emphasis at the MS or PhD level.

Off-the-job, you'll enjoy the advantages of living in a spacious community on the outskirts of Dayton and just a short drive from Cincinnati. Educational opportunities are readily available—with NCR paying full tuition.

Contact your placement office to learn when we'll be on campus. If you can't meet with our representative, or if we are not visiting your campus, please write to Personnel Resources at the address below. Only permanent residents or citizens of the U.S. will be considered.

BILL TEMPLETON

Hey, does anybody care?

Does anybody care that the Detroit Lions are the poorest excuse for a professional team since the Tampa Bay Buccaneers entered the league?

Does anybody care that the Chicago Cubs will probably not win another pennant until Dave Kingman and Bill Buckner sign contracts to play in Japan?

Does anybody care that the New York Yankees are doing all they can to try to "buy" another world's championship?

Does anybody care that Rick Leach will probably not play with the Tigers this year, while he may get a shot at shining Kirk Gibson's Spotlight?

Does anybody care that sports writer extraordinaire Adam Teicher is secretly a big fan of Woody Hayes?

DOES ANYBODY CARE that the Detroit Red Wings will not only not win the Stanley Cup this year, but that the city may be denied access to pictures of the trophy for the Wings' program?

Does anybody care that every rose bush in the city of East Lansing has been dead for the last four weeks?

Does anybody care that my residence hall football team won the Armstrong Hall championship?

Does anybody care that Larry Bird made a commercial for a popular soft-drink before Magic Johnson did?

Does anybody care that Tracy Austin made more than $300,000 this year and is barely old enough to drive a car?

Does anybody care that compared to the "Steel Curtain," the Lions have "Limp Lampshades"?

DOES ANYBODY CARE that Wilt Chamberlain doesn't really drive a Volkswagen Rabbit?

Does anybody care that ABC's Jackie Stewart fakes his accent? Does anybody care that President Carter was in the Pirates' lockerroom after the World Series?

Does anybody care that most pro golfers trying to break into the PGA Tour make less money a week than I do?

Does anybody care that Gordie Howe has played hockey for so long that he is a legend in his own family?

Does anybody care that Al Kaline had something to do with getting his son Mark a job last year with a local television station?

DOES ANYBODY CARE that Tiger pitcher Jack Billingham didn't receive a single vote for the Cy Young award?

Does anybody care that Richie Hebner will be a Tiger... except Jim Campbell?

Does anybody care that Jamie "Shoes" Huffman will not be wearing green and white this year?

Does anybody care that Gerald Busby left MSU last year?

Does anybody care that this column has even appeared in The State News. I mean that's why I wrote this... does anybody care?

Harrier coach's style is effective

By CHRIS HANSEN
State News Sports Writer

After being forced to adapt to four different coaches and their styles in the last four seasons, the women's cross country team seems to finally have found security in coach John Goodridge.

Goodridge has had a rough task to accomplish, taking over as the harriers' coach after this season had already started and having to implement his training program after the women had been training on their own with the old program.

The women harriers have done well this season and attribute this success in part to Goodridge's coaching style, which includes a variance of training methods. Coaches in the past have keyed on long distances day after day, running much the same course.

Goodridge has cut the mileage of daily practices, keeping the women prepared for each meet, yet keeping them from getting too tired or peaking too soon. And although cross country is a sport where success depends heavily upon individual motivation, the women agree Goodridge's style of coaching has helped them this season.

"I feel strong every time I get to a race," said runner Cynthia Wadsworth, attributing this to Goodridge's program.

Goodridge has a relaxed attitude and discourages individual competition. During meets, the team runs as a unit working towards team success rather than individual first place finishes.

The women on the cross country team are not the only ones pleased with Goodridge. Nell Jackson, MSU director of women's athletics, feels he is doing "an excellent job," especially considering he took over after the season had started. Jackson, who agrees with the Goodridge program, cites his two major strong points as his manner and his knowledge of the sport.

Jackson's respect is warranted by Goodridge's extensive background in long distance running.

After graduating from C.W. Post College in New York, where he was captain of the cross country team, Goodridge went to University of Michigan to work on his graduate degree. While attending U.M. Goodridge and his wife started the Ann Arbor Huron High School cross country program.

Goodridge then coached at Delphi University in New York and after going back to Ann Arbor Huron, he served as head track and cross country coaches at the University of Wisconsin at Milwaukee. Goodridge then coached at Ann Arbor Greenhills High School until the beginning of this year, when he arrived at MSU.

tain that the cab companies would be "willing and available."

"NOBODY'S RUSHING TO our doors offering their service," he said.

It is also likely that there will still be a need for setting priorities under the new system, he said, but the new system is a "substantial improvement" over the old one.

The new system is expected to add $136,205 to CATA's SPEC TRAN service costs.

Other topics discussed by the board included the RTS Celebration Day scheduled for Dec. 11.

The celebration, which includes a parade, is intended to introduce area residents to the 18 new RTS buses, said Clare Loudenslager, CATA Executive Director.

New members prepare for city council

By ROLAND WILKERSON
State News Staff Writer

Although the new Lansing City Council members have greatly varying plans for the immediate future, both plan to start hitting the books in an effort to prepare themselves for the council.

Sidney Worthington, one of three candidates who battled for two at-large positions, said he would soon be departing for the Virgin Islands where he will recuperate from a campaign he has been waging since July.

Worthington received 35 percent of the vote, while incumbent Louis Adado was elected with 34 percent. Incumbent Richard Baker was defeated, receiving only 30 percent of the vote.

When he returns, Worthington said he plans to get acquainted with City Hall and "get his feet on the ground."

He attributed his victory to a heavy door-to-door campaign and the fact that citizens were "upset" with the current council.

He added that the 4-4 vote that sometimes splits the council will go by the wayside because he will try to promote a better working relationship between the council members.

Pat Lindemann, who easily defeated opponent Ted DeLeon by receiving 86 percent of the votes, is the new First Ward council member replacing Robert Hull, who did not seek re-election.

Lindemann said he will begin preparing for the council by attending various city meetings and reading background material.

He cited a good, open and honest campaign as the reason for his victory.

Councilmember Terry McKane, who ran unopposed, was elected to his third consecutive term as the Third Ward representative.

McKane, who ran for Mayor of Lansing in 1977 but was defeated, said he will probably decide within the year whether or not he will run for the office in 1981.

Also elected to the council was eight-year council veteran Louis Adado.

Adado ran with a campaign platform that stressed the betterment of Lansing through the expansion of business.

The Lansing electorate voted to not raise their taxes, by rejecting all four bond proposals on the ballot.

Steve Dougan, administrative assistant to Mayor Gerald Graves, said he was concerned over the defeat of the proposals, adding that he did not feel the city was not asking for an "inordinate" amount of money.

Because the proposed police facility was rejected by the voters, Dougan said that conditions in the present building will continue to be cramped, with office space considerably smaller than the recommended size.

Dougan said there might be a possibility of making room in City Hall for police offices.

The city will now have to buy all the asphalt it uses for road repair from private contractors because the voters said no to construction of a new asphalt plant, Dougan said.

Torches stolen from Cyclatron

Three incidents of breaking and entering at the MSU Cycatron were reported to the Department of Public Safety this week with a combined loss of $850, campus police said.

Two acetylene torches worth $230 were reported missing between 5 p.m. Monday and 8 a.m. Tuesday.

Three transmitters worth $200 apiece were reported taken between Sept. 11 and Oct. 30 police said, and an electric drill worth $120 was stolen between Oct. 17 and 18.

Police said there were no signs of forced entry at the building.

Can YOU afford silence?

The Legislature doesn't realize the burden that soaring tuition has placed on students. We are an amorphous, apathetic and unimportant constituency as far as the Legislature is concerned.

And don't kid yourselves, inflation is not the primary culprit behind tuition increases. For over a decade, higher education has been the victim of steady budget erosion. In 1968, 21.9% of the state's budget went to higher education. Last year it was down to 16.4%. We literally cannot afford to remain silent any longer.
