NO ASU OFFER YET

Rogers says bye to team

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer

MSU football coach Darryl Rogers said goodbye to his team Wednesday morning, but still insists he has not received a job offer from Arizona State University.

Several MSU football players said Rogers told them at their Wednesday morning running session he would be leaving MSU for ASU.

Earlier Wednesday, Rogers denied that he had told his team he was leaving. Wednesday night Rogers confirmed with UPI he had told the team goodbye.

Rogers is expected to follow former MSU Athletic Director Joseph Kearney, who accepted athletic directorship at ASU Tuesday.

When Kearney was informed that Rogers had told his team he was going to ASU, the former MSU athletic director said, "Well, he had better get an offer first."

However, Kearney has said Rogers is his No. 1 candidate to fill the vacant ASU football coaching position.

"I have talked to the president of this school (MSU) and he said I'm still the coach."

(MSU) Cecil Mackey expressed the interest in having me coach at Michigan State University in 1980."

A State News reporter contacted MSU President Cecil Mackey and asked him whether or not Rogers is leaving MSU.

"I guess he has not made a decision yet," Mackey said.

"Rogers never really came out and said he was going to Arizona, but we all got the feeling," the player said. (MSU offensive center and guard) coach (C.T.) Hewgley told us that the coaches all will be leaving except for (defensive and backfield coach) Sherm Lewis.

"My opinion is that Rogers is gone and all his assistants are gone, unless Sherm Lewis will be hired by the new coach," he added.

Other players expressed their feelings. "We're on our own now," quarterback Bert Vaughn said. "I guess this had to happen sometime. He's been rumored to be going to so many places. A lot of us expected this."

"I feel bad he has to leave," punter Ray Stachowicz said. "I'm sure he will go over there and turn the program around."

Neither Vaughn nor Stachowicz knew why Rogers was leaving.

"I'm sure it's just a better situation for him there," Vaughn said.

Former ASU coach Frank Kush was fired for allegedly striking an ASU player in the sidelines during a 1978 game, and attempting to hide the incident from school officials. Once the season concluded, Fred Miller, former ASU athletic director began his search to fill the coaching position.

Miller was known to covet Rogers and the two were apparently close to agreeing on a contact at that time.

But Miller was fired on Jan. 3.

Also for various violations of NCAA rules, Arizona State's football team will soon be placed on probation. Those close to the ASU situation feel that the Sun Devils will receive a stiff penalty.

Rogers took over at MSU when the Spartans were just embarking on a three year probation in 1976. MSU finished 4-6-1 that season, and 7-3-1 in 1977.

Then, in 1978, Rogers piloted the Spartans to an 8-3 record and a share of the Big Ten title. For his work, he was named Coach of the Year by The Sporting News.

City Center Development

HEARINGS COMPLETED

City Centre plan ready

By MICHAEL VEH
State News Staff Writer

The City Centre Development proposal received needed approval Tuesday and will soon be on its way to Washington, D.C., with a request for federal funding.

After hours of public hearings, the East Lansing City Council voted unanimously to approve the $8.9 million multi-use project which needs a federal funded Urban Development Action Grant to become a reality.

The proposed development which will contain office and retail space as well as residential apartments will be located on the "Cito block" at the intersection of Albert Street and M.A.C. Avenue.

"The project does not mean that we will have the special downtown that we want," said East Lansing Mayor Larry Owen. But he added that the project's approval gives it a chance.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION President Carolyn Stell urged adoption of the project despite the questions that were raised.

"We don't have all of the answers," said Stell, a former East Lansing City Council member.

She added that it is "obvious that this was a project that we (EDC) all could see the public purpose in."

Fred Bauries, president of the Citizens for a Better East Lansing, called for analysis of the financial feasibility of the project.

CBEL presented its estimation of the "actual costs to the public," which differed from the figures provided by the developer and the planning commission.

DAVID KRAUSE, THE project developer, called CBEL's estimation of a $9.7 million direct investment by East Lansing taxpayers the "worst misrepresentation of facts" he has heard regarding the property and about compensation for any damage.

Former East Lansing Mayor George Griffiths expressed his personal support for the City Centre project.

Cities often grant abatements to industrial parks where companies move out after being there only a short time, he said.

He added that the City Centre Development is not that type of "runaway" project.

GRIFFITHS ALSO SAID that traffic problems are part of a thriving business district and that increased traffic reflects increased business.

Another citizen, Phyllis Andersland, 901 Woodingham Drive, said studies should be done to examine the feasibility and possible problems of the project.

"It would be doing the developers a favor in finding something wrong and correcting it now," she said.

A member of the Housing and Community Development Commission, Ronna Benjamin, said the commission has "serious reservations" about spending a major part of the next year's Community Development budget on the project.

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT FUNDS could be used for moving the Howland House and Delta Upsilon fraternity and for the public plaza but not for the proposed skywalk across Albert Street, she said.

Romayne Hicks, 1530 Sherwood Drive, questioned the project's overall feasibility. He said he has seen no proof that the project is feasible.

"I think we have to do a lot more homework than has been done to date," he added.

City council agreed to have the planning staff examine the problems raised at the hearing.

Allies uncertain of boycott

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has received little encouragement from its allies on the question of boycotting the Moscow Olympics but still could decide to try to boycott the games alone, State Department officials said Wednesday.

Western European governments generally are sympathetic to the idea of punishing the Soviet Union for its military intervention in Afghanistan by boycotting the Moscow games, the officials said.

But officials of the allied governments indicate they fear that public opinion would be negative and are uncertain they could enforce an unpopular boycott or that it would be wise to try to do so, said the State Department officials, who asked not to be identified.

In Paris, for example, French officials said they doubted the value of a boycott by a few Western countries and said there would have to be support from Third World nations.

Maurice Herzog, a French member of the International Olympic Committee, said a boycott of the Olympics would be "ridiculous."

He said the Carter administration "has realized it must absolutely do something . . . (and) the Americans are starting to say the first thing that comes into their heads."

NONETHELESS, ONE U.S. official said, "We are the leader. We must take steps as the leader," in support of the principle that the Soviets cannot move into Afghanistan and do business as usual with the rest of the world.

The Carter administration is waging a campaign to build American support for a boycott. The drive has taken the form of a series of statements of "personal opinions" that officials acknowledge have been carefully orchestrated.

News Briefs

Soviets, U.S. to benefit from gold prices?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both the Soviet Union and the United States will benefit from soaring gold prices, official and unofficial sources said Wednesday, adding that individual Americans should not be hurt by the spectacular price surge.

The greatest danger to Americans would occur if the rising price of gold pushed down the value of the dollar, which could worsen inflation. Although this happened in 1978 and part of 1979, the dollar hasn't budged at all in recent months.

One said that whereas the rising price of gold in earlier months reflected in part a lack of confidence in the U.S. dollar, the recent price surge, coming against the background of widespread turmoil in the world, reflects a loss of confidence in all currencies.

The U.S. government has retreated to the sidelines during the current wild upward price spiral that took gold to $765 per ounce on Wednesday, an increase of $50 in a single day.

The price of gold has more than doubled since the last Treasury Department gold auction on Nov. 1, when gold sold for $372 an ounce.

Factory production up .3 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Production at the nation's factories rose a weak 0.3 percent last year, the most sluggish performance since the recession in 1974, the government reported Wednesday.

The Federal Reserve blamed much of the weakness on auto production, which declined 20 percent in 1979 in the wake of slow sales that followed the spring gasoline shortage.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department reported that inventories held by the nation's manufacturers, retailers and wholesalers rose 0.7 percent in November to $424.2 billion. Inventories had risen 0.9 percent in October.

At the same time, November sales of $299.2 billion were about the same as October. Sales had risen 0.9 percent from September to October.

NRC investigating Bethany waste dump

BRECKENRIDGE (UPI) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission will conduct a survey and environmental sampling at a Bethany Township dump where 150 tons of low level radioactive waste is buried, an NRC spokesperson said Wednesday.

Jan Strasma, a spokesperson for the NRC's regional headquarters in Glen Ellyn, Ill., said officials from the state of Michigan, the NRC, and the Environmental Protection Agency met with radiation experts to lay the groundwork for the investigation.

Authorities are trying to determine whether radiation is leaking from the former Michigan Chemical Co. — now the Chicago-based Velsicol Chemical Co. — dump and if such leakage could be responsible for an unusually high rate of lymphatic cancer in the area surrounding the dump.

Mexico to buy U.S. grain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mexico has agreed to buy 2.35 million metric tons of corn and wheat that was scheduled to go to the Soviet Union before President Carter imposed an embargo in retaliation for the Russian move into Afghanistan, administration officials announced Wednesday.

Mexico will buy 1.7 million metric tons of corn and 650,000 tons of wheat out of the 17 million tons of wheat and corn shipments which had been scheduled to go to the Soviet Union before Carter imposed the partial grain embargo.

All told, U.S. and Mexican representatives announced an agreement which calls for Mexico to buy an additional 4.8 million metric tons of U.S. farm products this year.

In addition to the wheat and corn purchases, officials announced additional purchases by Mexico of 1 million metric tons of sorghum, 500,000 tons of soybeans, 250,000 metric tons of edible beans, 300,000 tons of sunflower seeds, 200,000 tons of soybean meal, 80,000 tons of tallow, 50,000 tons of rice and 30,000 tons of soybean oil.

ON JAN. 4, Carter announced the suspension of sales of 17 million metric tons of wheat and corn that the Soviet Union was to have received this year, along with the suspension of about 740,000 tons of soybeans, 400,000 of soybean meal, and 30,000 of soybean oil.

Dale E. Hathaway, undersecretary of agriculture, told a news conference the 4.8 million metric tons of commodities represents an increase "above and beyond" what Mexico had been expected to buy from the United States this year. Now, he said, total sales will be around 7 million metric tons.

By comparison, he said, Mexico bought 3.5 million metric tons of the products in 1977; 3.6 million in 1978; and an estimated 3.7 million in 1979.

Hathaway said he had no firm estimate of the value of the new sales to Mexico but thought they would total $750 million or more.

The official announcement said the agreement makes available to Mexico "some of the quantities of wheat, corn, soybean and soybean products resulting from the suspension of exports to the Soviet Union."

Officials said the agreement involves commercial transactions and that no U.S. government credit package was involved.

MSU: Nader's studies misleading on college admission testing procedures

By LOUISE WHALL
State News Staff Writer

College admissions testing procedures at MSU are not meant to predict college performance, contrary to a recent report by Ralph Nader outlining the failures of the testing system.

Nader's claims, in a report released Tuesday, that standardized tests do not accurately predict factors such as creativity, experience and wisdom are misleading, Charles Eberly, an associate professor in Learning and Evaluation Services, said. An objective test is not meant to measure these factors, he said.

The Scholastic Aptitude Test and the American College Test used with a student's high school transcript enhance the predictions of a student's success better than either evaluation used by itself, Eberly said.

The native intelligence of a student is only a very small part of determining their success or failure in college he said. Other factors such as a student's determination and his ability to adjust to the college environment constitute the majority of a student's success or failure, he added.

"What the tests measure is only a very small part of what goes on in any given term," Eberly said.

NADER'S SIX-YEAR study charges that the tests conclude a disproportionate number of minority applicants and the scores correlate directly with family income.

"Because middle class, working class and poor students systematically score lower than their upper class peers, a disproportionate number of minority and less wealthy students who could succeed if given the chance are excluded because of reliance on ETS tests," Nader stated in the report.

Eberly said it is not the test itself that discriminates against students with working class backgrounds but other outside factors. A family whose parents are struggling to meet the basic necessities cannot spend extra time or money on books or musical lessons for their children, he said.

The biases in race and income are problems that have been worked on and to an extent corrected since the start of Nader's research six years ago, Eberly said. New concerns are arising in other areas such as biases in sex.

In his study, Nader claims that the SAT combined with high school grades improves the accuracy of prediction for first-year college grades by only 3 to 5 percent.

Recently compiled data by Eberly shows a 27 percent correlation between predictions and first-term grades for first year MSU students in the Liberal Arts and Social Sciences.

ONE OF NADER'S criticisms is that the tests do not measure important standards such as writing or creativity.

Henry Silverman, professor of American Thought and Language, is working on a project to use a creative writing sample as part of the orientation exams to determine at what ATL level an incoming student should be placed, Eberly said.

MSU currently requires either the ACT or the SAT as criteria of admission. These criteria were established in 1969. Before that time a college admissions test was not required.

Each year approximately 16,000 people apply to MSU. Out of those about 12,000 are accepted.

Sometimes the student's academic record is so good that the admissions office doesn't even look at the test scores, said Charles Curry, associate director of admissions and scholarships.

The strength of a student's academic program is more important than either the high school GPA or the test scores.

"We have a saying around here. Performance predicts performance," Curry said.

SOMETIMES WHEN A student tests poorly the admissions officer will still see some strength or potential in the individual. The student may be admitted and referred to the Developmental Admissions Program operated in the Office of Supportive Services.

"We provide them with general information about MSU so that the adjustment from high school to college won't be such a shock to (continued on page 2)

Iranian officers attempt overthrow

By The Associated Press

Revolutionary guards foiled a plot by Iranian army officers to overthrow the Khomeini regime, and the conspirators were secretly executed by firing squad, a Kuwait newspaper reported Wednesday.

Word of the alleged plot came after saboteurs reportedly bombed an oil pipeline in what Iranian officials also described as a pro-shah, anti-Khomeini attack.

Wednesday was the first anniversary of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's flight from Iran, and the 74th day in captivity for 50 American hostages held by Moslem militants at the occupied U.S. Embassy in Tehran. It was also the first full day of a blackout imposed by the Iranian government on American news reporting from Tehran.

Outwardly at least, the embassy situation was stalemated. The Iranians again rejected the idea of having U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim act as a mediator to try to resolve the U.S.-Iranian crisis.

ABC NEWS HAD reported that the Iranian Foreign Ministry sent a message to New York saying Waldheim, rebuffed on a mediation mission to Tehran two weeks ago, was now acceptable to Khomeini as an intermediary.

But Tehran radio, monitored in London, said later the Foreign Ministry had denied the report as an "absolute lie."

A Waldheim spokesperson said the U.N. chief had received "no official communication on this matter," but the spokesperson said Waldheim remains in contact with Iran's U.N. ambassador, "so he must be acceptable to Iranian authorities."

Waldheim has proposed a U.N. investigation of the shah's alleged crimes against the Iranian people. Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh has reacted favorably to the idea as a possible avenue of conciliation, but he still insists the shah must be returned to Iran before the hostages are freed.

Iranians marked the anniversary of Pahlavi's departure with street decorations, congratulatory messages to Khomeini and other celebrations, government-run Tehran radio said.

The report of the coup plot, by the usually reliable Kuwait newspaper Al Rai Al Am, could not be confirmed with officials in Tehran. But ever since the shah's downfall, the revolutionary regime has warned repeatedly of alleged conspiracies to bring him back to power.

THE REPORT SAID revolutionary guards uncovered the plot by chance when they stopped and searched the car of one of the conspirators at a roadblock.

The newspaper, which quoted unnamed diplomatic sources, said the plotters were all middle-ranking army officers and that they had planned to seize control of Tehran and then lay siege to the holy city of Qom, Khomeini's headquarters, 100 miles south of the capital. They expected other Khomeini opponents and supporters of the shah to join them, the paper said.

All of the officers were rounded up and secretly executed, it said.

The pipeline explosion occurred Tuesday night about 25 miles from Ahwaz, in the heart of Iran's oil-producing region, touching off a fire that burned into Wednesday before being extinguished, Tehran radio reported.

It quoted officials of the (continued on page 10)

British foreign secretary vows Britain's support of Pakistan

By The Associated Press

Britain's foreign secretary, the first Western leader to visit the Afghanistan-Pakistan border since the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, said Wednesday that "anybody who does not take the Soviet threat to the region seriously is certainly deceiving himself."

"Pakistan has the support of Britain in defending its solidarity and integrity," Lord Carrington said, adding that he believed Western nations would join in that resolve.

Carrington flew to New Delhi later Wednesday and conferred with Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, who was reinstated as prime minister Monday after a landslide election victory.

Gandhi said India and Britain agreed on the dangers posed by the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and added that India was not supporting Moscow's action.

"I DON'T THINK any country is justified in entering another. I don't think we supported the action; we're just trying to find a way so that the situation doesn't escalate," Gandhi told reporters after a 45-minute talk with Carrington. U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher wound up a five-nation European trip saying it was "heartening for the United (continued on page 10) them," said Florence Harris, director of supportive services. Since 1971, about 250 to 300 students have been admitted each year who otherwise would not have been accepted at MSU. The students attend a pre-orientation program during the summer and workshops throughout the academic year.

"We try to establish a positive relationship with the students so they don't feel like a number among 40,000 students," Harris said.

The office likes to work with students in a preventive way when they are admitted instead of waiting until after problems develop, Harris said.

CATA may service outlying Lansing areas

The CATA bus system may be servicing Grand Ledge and Williamston by spring if funding becomes available, said a director of Capital Area Transportation Authority.

Richard Leonard, planning and grants manager for CATA, said Wednesday that no contract has been made, but state money has been promised for the project.

"We are contacting communities as a time saver, even though there is no financial commitment," Leonard said.

Leonard speculated that the earliest service could begin would be the spring.

The cities accepting the program would have two years of state-funded service, before deciding whether to appropriate their own moneys or drop the service, said Clare Loudenslager, executive director of CATA, at a meeting of the Board of Directors Wednesday.

Eighteen outdated buses that were replaced earlier this month by CATA are planned for use in the program, Leonard said. The rehabilitation of these buses will cost $60,000, which must be requested from the state transportation committee.

Rehabilitating a bus takes two months, Loudenslager said, and involves sending the vehicle to Chicago.

Loudenslager said that bus usage increased by 327,000 persons during the last three months of 1979 compared to the same period in 1978.

"The problem is we need more buses on the street," Loudenslager said. "But we don't have the money to operate them right now."

Lansing has the second highest bus fares in the state, and Loudenslager said, even raising the fares would not alleviate the problem.

The board also replaced two members of CATA's Local Advisory Committee Wednesday.

Robert Ryan will represent handicappeders on the committee, and Ereell Brozmann, a member of the American Association for Retired Persons, will represent the elderly.

CATA directors also decided that a board member should attend all Local Advisory Committee meetings to act as a liaison to the board. The committee has 12 members.

Satellite clinics proposed to ease Olin crowding

By MIKE CHAUDHURI
State News Staff Writer

To alleviate overcrowding at Olin Health Center, a satellite program of health care clinics around the MSU campus was proposed Tuesday by Moses Turner, vice president for student affairs.

Turner, speaking at an ASMSU Student Board meeting, said several small satellite clinics around campus would decrease "the clogging of the system at Olin."

Most student complaints about Olin involve having to stand in line for long periods of time, Turner said.

Although the University is still in the process of developing the project, Turner said that it plans to open a clinic this term in the Brody Complex.

THE CLINIC AT BRODY "will provide a pilot view of what the satellite project will mean," he said.

Turner said the University may open another clinic at the beginning of spring term. If the initial clinics are successful the program will probably be implemented by fall term, he said. There would eventually be about four or five satellite clinics formed, he added.

Turner said he does not expect the over-all cost of health care at MSU to increase because of these additional clinics. The costs of operating Olin would decrease if satellite clinics were formed, and that would compensate for the cost of the new clinics, he said.

"We'll probably be able to offer improved service that's closer to the people, and with all things equal — less cost," he said.

TURNER NOTED THAT the current director of Olin, Dr. Lawrence M. Jarrett, was retiring at the end of this year. He said the University should wait until the success of the satellite program is determined before finding a replacement for Jarrett.

When asked if he thought that the $18-a-term health fee students are now required to pay should become optional, Turner said that "my gut reaction is that there ought to be an across-the-board assessment to the student."

The student board later unanimously voted to fund Listening Ear, an East Lansing crisis counseling center, with $1,600.

Bob Carr, College of Business representative, said that Listening Ear serves approximately 10,000 people a year, and that 35 to 40 percent of those people are MSU students.

"We're still furnishing less than a proportionate amount," he said.

In other action, the board:

- Appointed Terry Buckley, a junior majoring in accounting, as ASMSU Comptroller. He will serve as interim comptroller until the beginning of spring term, when he will begin a one-year term.

- Voted unanimously to oppose the reorganization of James Madison College.

RATE BEGINS JUNE 1981

Bell will charge for information

By ROLAND WILKERSON
State News Staff Writer

Michigan Bell Telephone Co. customers will be charged for directory assistance calls after 20 free calls beginning June 1981, the Michigan Public Service Commission voted Wednesday.

Bell's plan, which was modified by the PSC, allows customers to use directory assistance services 20 times a month without being charged.

Customers will also be credited with 20 cents on each bill.

The credit represents the money the customers are saving by subsidizing the cost.

After customers make more than 20 calls to "411" information services, they will be charged 20 cents for each additional call.

The assistance charges do not apply to handicappers that file for exemption, or to calls made from hotels, motels, hospitals and pay phones.

The plan, which was unanimously approved, will be reviewed after three years to see if it warrants any changes.

Mary Low, a policy analyst for the PSC, said the plan "strikes a balance" between total subsidization by all customers and those who "abuse" the service.

Low reviewed past public hearings, citing that 88 persons had addressed the issue.

She said many had suspected that Bell wanted to charge for directory assistance to increase revenues, and added that many opposed the plan because they objected to paying for a service that had previously been free.

Low noted that only about 6 percent of Bell's customers use the service more than 20 times a month.

That 6 percent, however, accounts for 46 percent of the service used, Low said.

Bell's original plan had allowed only five free calls and a 53-cent credit. A 10-cent charge would have been issued for each of the next five calls. Additional calls would have cost 20 cents each.

Gene Rykse, community relations manager for Lansing area Michigan Bell, said he felt Bell's original plan was better.

He added, however, that the telephone company is "pleased that the principle of charging for heavy use of directory assistance has been established."

Rykse said directory assistance calls cost Michigan Bell $28 million in 1977, and at that time it was estimated the cost would be about $55 million by 1982.

Rykse said the revamping of the system would produce no immediate changes. He added that the ultimate impact will not be known until the plan is fully implemented.

He noted that the equipment necessary to tally the number of assistance calls would be expensive, but said the actual cost had not been calculated.

Hearing on E.L. housing study set

By MICHAEL VEH
State News Staff Writer

The Commission on Housing and Community Development will hold a public hearing at 7:30 tonight at the 54-B District Court, 301 M.A.C. Ave. regarding the East Lansing Fair Housing Study and a proposed Fair Housing Program.

The Fair Housing Study was done as part of the process for qualifying for a federal Community Development Block Grant.

The study investigated discrimination in housing sales and rentals and in lending institution practices.

The survey first questioned 372 renter households in single family and duplex housing in the City Center/Avondale area.

A second part of the survey was a questionnaire mailed to a random sample of 10 percent of the multi-family rental units in the city.

Another survey was mailed to homeowners who had purchased houses in East Lansing between January 1975 and May 1979.

The second survey received responses from 18 percent and the third had a 32 percent response rate.

Other surveys were also sent to 54 community and civil groups in the Lansing and East Lansing area. Only 11 groups responded.

The business practices of lending institutions were also examined to determine "whether differences in lending activity could be attributed to the socioeconomic status and housing stock of a neighborhood."

The final part of the survey consisted of examining city codes and ordinances that regulate and control the development of housing.

The codes and ordinances reviewed were the Human Relations Commission, the Non-Discrimination Ordinance, the Zoning Ordinance of the City of East Lansing, the East Lansing Uniform Building Code and the City of East Lansing Housing Regulations.

According to the study, discrimination can be found in advertisements in area newspapers which is illegal under the Michigan Elliot-Larson Civil Rights Act.

The act prohibits persons engaging in real estate transactions from advertising tenant preferences, such as "no students," the study indicated.

The study also said that many landlords discriminated against possible tenants because of "personal characteristics."

Other survey results included an absence of notification about fair housing rights, discriminatory lending practices and a lack of housing development restrictions.

People unable to attend the hearing may submit written comments to the East Lansing Commission on Housing and Community Development, c/o The East Lansing Department of Planning, Housing and Community Development, 410 Abbott Road.

Officials deny student's charges of work-study violations

By BRUCE BABIARZ
State News Staff Writer

State House officials denied Wednesday charges levied by an MSU student that a state representative was abusing federal work-study guidelines.

Brett Dreyfus, a junior in political science, charged Monday that Rep. Dana F. Wilson, D-Hazel Park, was violating federal work-study rules by forcing him to do "political work."

Dreyfus, a Republican candidate for Ingham County Commissioner, said in a grievance filed Monday that he spent about 70 percent of his time on political activities.

Dreyfus charged that his work included mailing Christmas cards and sending congratulatory letters to Wilson's constituents.

WILSON DENIED THE charges and said he fired Dreyfus because he was unreliable.

"You never knew when he was coming in," Wilson said.

"The allegations he (Dreyfus) made are not true," Wilson said. "The work-study students don't do any political work in this office — none."

Wilson said he believes Dreyfus made the charges to draw attention to himself because he is running for Ingham County Commissioner.

Dreyfus denies he filed a grievance for political mileage.

"He (Dreyfus) was using my office to gather support for that Republican seat and we didn't care for that," Wilson said.

Dreyfus is running for the 19th District seat vacated by Pat Ryan.

Wilson said Dreyfus was assigned some "nit-pick" work because he was unreliable and could not handle greater responsibilities. He said that he has hired dozens of work-study students without any complaints.

"But I guess there is always one bad apple," he said.

Despite the allegations and counter accusations, Jack Shingleton, MSU Placement director, is investigating the charges of violating the Federal work study guidelines.

WILSON SAID HE has already hired another work-study student who is "doing a fine job."

House Speaker Bobby Crim, D-Davison, who coordinates the work-study program with MSU, said he is confident that the charges against Wilson are "completely false."

"I reviewed his (Dreyfus) record with Rep. Wilson and concluded that he is probably the worst work-study student we've had," Crim said.

"He was caught going through the representative's desk," Crim said. "He missed three days because he had a sick rabbit."

DREYFUS SAID HE may have missed three hours to "save the rabbit's life," not three days.

Crim said that if any mistake was made it was that Wilson waited too long to fire Dreyfus.

Dreyfus was given menial tasks because he was unreliable and he could not handle minor committee assignments, Crim said.

"Dreyfus interpreted the menial work to be political work," Crim added.

"I've met with University officials and we definitely want to continue the program," Crim said. "He was a rare exception to a very fine program."

The charges stem from Dreyfus' firing Dec. 21. He had been working for Wilson since November.

Senate begins consideration of Blues bill

UPI — The Senate Commerce Committee Tuesday began its consideration of legislation that would overhaul Michigan Blue Cross-Blue Shield — amid pleas from House members not to fall prey to attempts to weaken the bill.

"We hope the Senate will not be fooled into thinking we did not know what we were doing (in) the House," said Rep. James Hadden, R-Adrian, one of more than a half-dozen lower chamber proponents of revamping the Blues who appeared before the committee.

But Blues' executive vice president Richard Whitmer maintained the sweeping House-passed bill is not needed to protect the giant insurer's 5.3 million subscribers. He said 90 percent of its customers "are not in need of protective legislation."

The bipartisan group of House lawmakers, many of whom had spent nearly a year hammering out the reform measure, admitted no one "really loves this bill," but called it a compromise acceptable to all but the Blues.

The bill — passed in the last days of fall session — calls for reduction of the Blues board of directors from 60 to 33 members and strengthening consumer representation with three panelists appointed by the state.

The measure also opens up the insurer's records and gives customers greater access to them.

Further included are cost containment requirements and authority for the Blues to operate health maintenance organizations.

In an unusual appearance before a Senate panel, House Speaker Bobby Crim, D-Davison, scoffed at accusations the lower chamber hurried to pass the measure before the session ended because it was "a political hot potato" and the House merely "wanted to get rid of it."

"I believe the reform of Blue Cross-Blue Shield of Michigan is one of the top priorities of this Legislature," he said.

Whitmer of the Blues charged "virtually nothing" in the bill benefited his firm.

"What we have in this bill is a series of poorly analyzed conclusions drawn by people without the benefit of expertise in the complex field of health care insurance," he said.

He said he would push the Senate committee for amendments to make the measure more palatable to the Blues.

Downtown needs the City Centre

After nearly two years of enthusiastic planning, a proposed multi-purpose development for downtown East Lansing's "Citgo block" appears close to reality. City Centre, an $8.9 million project which is to include student-accessible apartments, received the approval of the Planning Commission last week and was approved by the East Lansing City Council Tuesday night. The project could do a lot to meet community needs for housing and shopping.

This is not to say that the development is without its drawbacks. With the Dayton Hudson Mall on the horizon, East Lansing residents — both on-campus and off — would be well-advised to consider the advantages of keeping business in the downtown area.

By anyone's standards, City Centre will be a fairly glamorous piece of architecture. Funded by $2.2 million in hoped-for federal grants and $5.7 million from the sale of low-interest bonds by the city's Economic Development Corporation, the project will contain a bevy of specialty shops and restaurants, three floors of open-air plazas and 32 apartments.

Predictably, the project's glossy exterior has given birth to charges that the building is not designed for students but for the city's more affluent permanent residents. On first examination, this might appear to be true. City Centre's plan calls for an emphasis on the "finer" specialty shops and states outright that its restaurants will not be student oriented. Nevertheless, the project's developers have made good on their promise to price City Centre apartments within the reach of students — a one-bedroom apartment is projected to rent for $300 when opened in 1982, putting it roughly on the same level with other student housing in the city. In a recent study conducted to assess the public's buying preferences and perceptions of the city's retail needs, about 38 percent of those consulted were MSU students, a fact which says a lot for the city's willingness to accept student input.

There are, however, a few unanswered questions which should not be ignored in the city's eagerness to see the project constructed. Although it appears that East Lansing taxpayers will not be subject to any financial risk in the deal, some citizens groups are still voicing doubts about who will bear the burden in case of City Centre's unlikely failure.

Given the spiraling costs of construction and the cutthroat race for federal funding, the city's desire to begin the project is perhaps understandable. For all its drawbacks, City Centre would probably be just what its advocates say it will be — an East Lansing "Renaissance Center." But for city officials to rush into the project without fully consulting and informing the public would be an unjustifiable loss to the community.

Who's watching those trustees?

To understand opposition to the antics of Michael Smydra is to begin with Charles Diggs. Why did the U.S. Congress choose to censure Diggs for his financial misconduct? Similarly, why is the MSU Board of Trustees pondering action against Smydra for his unauthorized expenditures?

The concept of publicly elected officials maintaining clean images has been, in recent times, regarded as a facade rather than a reality. Bert Lance went on trial this week because his facade was exposed. Diggs was slapped on the wrist because, as a member of Congress, he should have known better than to take kickbacks.

While it is not our intention to equate Smydra with Diggs or Lance, we find the antics of all three to contain one shared characteristic: breach of the public trust. In Smydra's case, the breach spans the length of his appointment. He has been under financial scrutiny more than once for being a spendthrift, and has given those in favor of appointing trustees — rather than electing them — a great argument on which to base their case.

The idea of appointing trustees died a quick death in the legislature last summer. William Sederburg, R-East Lansing, and John Engler, R-Mt. Pleasant, introduced a bill that would end popular election of governing boards for MSU, U-M and Wayne State University. Gov. Milliken also expressed his support for the bill, which is likely to surface again in light of circulating rumors about trustee audits.

When the bill debuted, we did not see just cause for it. There were strong suspicions that the legislation, which would set a new precedent for all state-funded universities, was based solely on the MSU Board of Trustees' inept handling of the presidential search and selection.

That is still our position. But we feel we have lost ground with opponents of popular election, largely because of Smydra. The other trustees have kept in line since last year's presidential selection fiasco. Their behavior warrants our continued opposition to a bill calling for trustee appointments. The transfer of voting power from citizens to party caucuses still makes us uneasy.

Nevertheless, we may be heading in that direction, possibly because of one bad apple in the MSU governing board. This is not a call for Smydra's resignation; that is too simple a solution. The board would benefit more by exercising stronger discipline upon its members. What the board fails to act upon just might be taken up by the Legislature.

Is the Cold War returning?

If the current situations in Iran and Afghanistan do not improve, Americans can expect another war of nerves between the United States and the Soviet Union. Hopefully this war of nerves will not be as drastic as the Cuban Missile Crisis and the Bay of Pigs incidents.

A resurgence of Cold War politics between the United States and Russia seems inevitable. President Carter has tried diplomatic means to alleviate both problems. And now he has flexed America's military muscle. Granted he has not completely used that muscle, but he has tried to show it is still there.

Carter has proposed economic sanctions against Iran for its taking of the American hostages, and against Russia for its invasion of Afghanistan. But on both occasions Russia vetoed the measures.

Carter issued a weak statement calling for Russia's withdrawal from Afghanistan within one month. He has also increased U.S. military presence in the eastern part of the world while he has improved relations with China. All of these steps by Carter lead one to ask: what does he have planned for the Russians? One has to wonder what will happen if the Russians do not heed Carter's warning and leave Afghanistan within a month. Is the United States to boycott the Summer Olympics in Moscow? Or, are we going to make Afghanistan and Iran our next Vietnam? It is an interesting, if not perplexing, question.

These issues might seem trivial to many, but considering that this is an election year, there is the possibility some issues can, and probably will, be blown out of proportion. We must remember the Iran and Afghanistan crises have increased Carter's popularity. They can also decrease it. Remember the biblical saying: "If you live by the sword you die by the sword."

Many columnists have talked about the military threat Russia poses. Various political analysts have cited the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's (NATO) decision to deploy "new" nuclear weapons in Europe as one reason for the Russians' becoming aggressive again.

Newsweek diplomatic correspondent

Fred Coleman summed up the situation best when he said "Soviet policy has changed little since the original Cold war."

Coleman said Russian policy has to talk peace to reduce the threat of nuclear buildup; starve consumer spending to pay for military buildup; seek trade to ease the strain on the Soviet economy; and use military power to exploit military and political opportunities.

So far Russia has been doing this.

The Soviet government has been directly involved in the affairs of African and other Third World countries, while America has, for the most part, been involved indirectly. The Russians have also purchased substantial amounts of American technology and agricultural goods and have taken advantage of many political opportunities.

President Carter has no other choice than to try to stave off Russian domination in the Third World. So far he has tried to take steps through diplomatic channels, but circumstances lead one to believe that a war of nerves, and hopefully only nerves, looms ahead.

The Cold War is on again.

The United States does not want another Cuban Missile Crisis. It cannot afford the mistakes of another Vietnam or Bay of Pigs. Russia realizes this and continues to manipulate world opinion with its claims that American propaganda is causing mass hysteria.

An interesting point revolves around claims by Russia and other critics of America which state the United States has acted harmfully toward the Third World. The Russian government is now doing many of the things for which Americans were criticized.

The problems that surround the Cold War are astronomical. But the belief that the United States and Russia will engage in more than a cold war is (well, hopefully) exaggerated. One does have to wonder whether Afghanistan and Iran will be our next Vietnam.

Granted, the circumstances are different, but the players are the same. The same two teams are involved; the western powerhouse, the United States and the eastern powerhouse, Russia.

Bill up for vote

Senate Bill 65, sponsored by Sen. Jerome Hart, is expected to be reported out of the House Judiciary Committee and put to a vote in the House of Representatives early this year. The bill, which reduces penalties for the use and possession of 30 grams or less of marijuana to a civil offense, has already passed the Senate.

Bill supporters point out, however, that unless constituents contact their representatives expressing support for SB 65, the bill could die in the House. Last session, a similar bill before the House failed to pass by one vote when a representative whom people thought would vote "yes" was persuaded to walk off the floor.

This year's Senate bill decriminalizes the penalty for use and possession of less than 30 grams of marijuana to a civil offense — carrying a $100 fine and no jail sentence. All persons convicted of using or possessing marijuana within 10 years before the bill took effect, can petition to have their convictions set aside if their offenses would have been civil violations.

Under current law, a person who is caught possessing 30 grams or less can be jailed for up to one year and fined $1,000.

According to the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML), 15,000 to 18,000 drug arrests occur in Michigan each year. About 75 percent of these arrests are for marijuana smoking, possession or sale.

Supporters of SB 65 contend that reducing the penalties for marijuana use and possession would lower the state's costs of trials and imprisonments by at least $6 million a year.

Opinion polls indicate that more than half of Michigan voters favor reducing the penalties for personal possession and use. Most of them don't tell their representatives, however, which helps to explain the discrepancy between public opinion and legislative voting.

Certain representatives and opponents of the bill believe that decriminalization will lead to increased use. However, just as it has been found that punishment does not reduce use, studies conducted in several states that have lowered penalties (such as Maine) showed that less than 1 percent of all adults in the state reported an increase in use as a result of the law.

Surely, the passing of SB 65 would save Michigan millions of dollars by reducing the number of arrests, trials and imprisonments. If SB 65 is passed, law enforcement officials can turn their attention and priorities toward more serious crimes.

VIEWPOINT: DR. MARTIN LUTHER KING, JR.

Brief history of a great man

By The MSU Black Faculty and Administrators Group

Martin Luther King Jr., born Jan. 15, 1929, was the son and grandson of Baptist ministers. A bright student, he entered Morehouse College in Atlanta, Ga., at the age of 15. He received his theological degree from Crozer Theological Seminary in Chester, Pa., and his doctorate from Boston University.

He developed his intellectual basis of social philosophy from the writings of Thoreau and others. His operational techniques at civil disobedience were developed from the techniques of Gandhi. But, his philosophies and techniques were not to be fully tested until the development of a "new" attitude among southern Negroes in the mid-'50s.

The court case of Autherine Lucy in 1955 angered many white citizens in the state of Alabama. Lucy had gained admission into the University of Alabama, an all White higher education institution. Whites organized councils throughout the state and distributed literature which vowed to put, by violent means, Negro citizens in "their place."

Many Negroes, conversely, were psychologically prepared to free their minds by pushing for more than equality in higher education. The White backlash and Negro egalitarian movement conflated dramatically when Rosa Parks, now a receptionist for Michigan's U.S. Representative John Conyers, triumphantly violated a segregation seating law on the Montgomery, Ala., transit system.

When freed minds decided to support Parks, the battalions of city hall and Negro citizens drew their war lines. For the segregationists, their policy would be hard line business as usual. For Negro citizens, they needed an innovative strategy and rare leadership with exceptional perspicacity. The cream would have to rise to the top because the stand made by Negroes of Montgomery had captured national attention.

Because of the injustices of segregation in the South, this young Baptist minister organized in December 1955 the Montgomery Negro community to support the plight of Parks, a Black seamstress arrested and fined for refusing to take a seat in the rear of a public bus. The success of the Negro community boycott of the Montgomery city buses threatened their economic survival. This precipitated legal action against the Rev. King and his many supporters. King was found guilty, but the boycott continued. A year later, King, through the boycott that lasted 332 days, had effectively raised the consciousness of the country and the Supreme Court so that segregation on public transportation was declared unconstitutional.

In 1957, King helped form the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and became its first president. The organization has maintained a role of leadership in the struggle for human equality. However, the struggle was never tougher than in early 1963 when King and the SCLC took on the issue of southern bigotry infesting Birmingham, Ala.

For many citizens of our fast paced society it may be difficult to remember Birmingham in 1963. The city was a symbol of racism. Hospitals, restaurants, schools and even parks were segregated. Birmingham led the nation in the bombing of Negro homes. King and others led a series of marches into this citadel of segregation. The struggle was fierce.

Birmingham's Commissioner of Public Safety, Eugene "Bull" Connor, ordered high pressure fire hoses to be used against the marchers. Police dogs snarled and snapped at children. Two police officers beat a Black woman to the ground and jammed a knee against her throat. One famous picture shows a young determined Afro-American willing to stand his ground for equality while a white police officer orders a dog to bite his front pelvic area. The whole scene was typical of a war battleground. King was arrested and wrote the classic "A Letter From Birmingham Jail."

Birmingham was so brutal that President Kennedy went on national television to tell the nation he was sending in federal troops. Two months after receiving the respected Nobel Peace Prize (from the King of Norway in 1964) for having done the most for the furtherance of brotherhood among men, Selma, Ala., authorities arrested Martin Luther King.

He had organized and led a protest march into Selma aimed at securing voting privileges for Black citizens. Of the 15,000 Black citizens of Selma only 350 were registered to vote. The others were kept off the rolls by voter registration tests.

The marches, mass arrests and incidents of brutality focused national attention on the inequalities of voter registration systems practiced against Black citizens throughout the South. The Selma protest prodded Lyndon Johnson to sign into law the Voting Rights Act of 1965, enabling millions of Black citizens in the South to vote.

King became the symbol of all oppressed people, campaigning their causes of economic equality in the South as well as in the North. The march on Washington and his "I Have a Dream" speech marked the coming together of Blacks, browns, reds, poor Whites and other oppressed people. This symbol of unity was a silent force that triggered a change in federal attitudes toward this noble laureate.

On April 4, 1968, in Memphis, Tenn., Martin Luther King Jr. was struck by an assassin's bullet while standing on a balcony outside his motel. His death precipitated anger and violence throughout this country — the anger of despair, hopelessness, frustration and overwhelming grief.

Perhaps Phyl Garland best described the reason for special attention being drawn to Martin Luther King today: "Often the world ignores an exceptional human being when he appears on one of those rare occasions in history . . ." Perhaps the persons who orchestrated James Earl Ray to assassinate Martin Luther King also believed that to kill the dreamer was to kill his dream. Ostensibly, many have remembered and will always remember and honor King's dedication to humanity. The Black Faculty and Administrators Group hopes you will read his works, listen to his speeches and pass on to others his indefatigable spirit of inspiration and vision.

URNS DOWN MILLIKEN'S REQUEST

Court refuses Headlee opinion

By CHRIS PARKS

United Press International

The Michigan Supreme Court declined for the second time Wednesday to issue an advisory opinion on provisions of the Headlee Tax Limitation Amendment viewed as important to the planned state takeover of county probation services.

On a 4-3 vote, the high court turned down Gov. William G. Milliken's request for an opinion on a 1979 statute interpreting the aid to local government provisions of the voter approved Headlee measure.

A similar request from the Legislature was rejected last year.

The law implements a provision of the voter-approved Headlee measure which prohibits the Legislature from reducing the portion of state expenditures earmarked for aid to local government currently about 41 percent.

It states that the cost of local programs taken over by the state will be counted as state aid to local government not as a state expenditure.

Some lawmakers are known to feel the planned state takeover of probation services — now scheduled for April 1 — should be contingent on the high court's acceptance of this interpretation.

The takeover is designed to help out hard-pressed local governments — especially financially strapped Wayne County. But if the move is viewed as a new state expenditure, the Legislature could be forced to supplement it with even more assistance for local government in the form of direct grants.

Many lawmakers believed a system of state grants for probation services should be substituted for the takeover if the court did not render a favorable opinion.

The majority opinion — signed by Justices Thomas Kavanagh, Charles Levin, James Ryan and Blair Moody Jr. — cited the earlier opinion which said the potential constitutional defects were not clear and noted a lack of factual and legal information on the issue.

A premature decision could affect the right of people to bring suit under the amendment, the court had said.

'U' groups raise money for muscular dystrophy

By JOHN PATTISON
State News Staff Writer

Two residence hall groups at MSU are helping the Muscular Dystrophy Association by sponsoring events to raise money. The South Complex Coordinating Council is sponsoring the MSU Superdance and Akers Hall residents are playing basketball.

The MSU Superdance marathon will be held from 1 p.m. to midnight on Jan. 27 in the Holden Hall classrooms. Dancers can register during dinner at tables outside of the South Complex cafeterias until Jan. 24.

Dancers will be given a kit including a sponsorship list, receipts and identification as Muscular Dystrophy volunteers, dance chairperson Stuart Savitz said. Sponsors will be asked to pay immediately, rather than pledge, in order to avoid the difficulty of collecting money after the dance. Dancers must collect at least $10 before they can enter the marathon.

Marathon winners will be determined by those who finish the dance and the amount of money they collect, Savitz said. First prize is an $800 stereo system, second prize is a 10-speed bicycle and third prize is a cassette deck.

APPROXIMATELY 40 hourly prizes will be awarded to dancers through special contests and random drawings, Savitz said.

A "sister complex" and the University of Michigan is competing with MSU's South Complex, Savitz said. The school that collects the most money will be given the Brown Jug Award, a large brown trophy from Budweiser, one of the dance's sponsors.

Radio station WILS will supply two disc jockeys, while McDonalds Restaurant and the Coca-Cola Co. will supply food and drinks for the dancers. Two live bands will also perform. Savitz also said that gays would be allowed to dance in the marathon.

"We do not in any way, shape or form condone gay liberation," Savitz added.

HE SAID HE wanted it known that gays were welcome at the MSU Superdance because it would benefit the dance.

"It's for the simply purpose of self-interest," Savitz said. "We want as many dancers as we can get."

"Our marathon is open to anyone, whereas they place restrictions on their contestants," Savitz said.

This policy differs from the recent decision by Delta Tau Delta fraternity to prevent two gay males from dancing together in the Feb. 15 multiple sclerosis marathon the fraternity is sponsoring at Meridian Mall.

Also raising money for muscular dystrophy is "Jerry's Kids," a basketball team from Akers Hall that plays in MSU's Independent B league.

THE TEAM IS almost exclusively made up of seniors from various floors in Akers that played together last term. They are receiving sponsors who pledge a certain amount of money for each point the team scores.

"The average person pledges 5 cents a point," said team member Bill Jenkins. He said the pledges range from 1 to 25 cents a point.

This came to over $50, Jenkins said, when Jerry's Kids played "Dunk You," an off-campus team, at Jenison Fieldhouse Tuesday night. The "kids" won the game 44-38.

The team was a spur of the moment idea, Jenkins said. Team members bought blank T-shirts and one student affixed a caricature of Jerry Lewis, muscular dystrophy's national chairperson, to the shirts, using a stencil.

"This is our last year for basketball," Jenkins said. "We wanted to have some fun and help some people." (continued on page 10)

Grant for shelter passes committee

By MOLLY MIKA
State News Staff Writer

A $2,469 grant to be used for a Lansing shelter for battered women passed the Ingham County Finance Committee Tuesday and awaits final approval by the Board of Commissioners.

If approved, the grant will be added to a $47,519 federal grant and the package will be given to Lansing's Council Against Domestic Assault.

The $50,000 grant would cover 20 percent of CADA's $250,000 total budget.

The state contributes another 20 percent, Lansing provides 12 percent and East Lansing adds 4 percent. Other funding sources include Ingham County's CETA program and the federal government.

The CADA staff could use the funds to open a shelter and pay for rent, food, utilities and salaries for two staff persons.

"RIGHT NOW, we can provide only a few days housing," said CADA counselor Kate Young. "With the grant, we can open a shelter that will permit battered women and their children to stay two weeks to a month.

"This would give women time to reassess where they are and what they'll do. It also means women could give support to each other," she said.

The shelter could provide temporary housing for 20 people, usually four or five women and their children, she said.

The board voted last spring to add $2,469 in county funds to the federal grant of $47,519.

Now that the federal funds have been granted, the package is subject to final approval before the county contributes its share.

If approved, the grant will help CADA continue to offer services to battered women in Ingham County.

SINCE OPENING IN November 1978, CADA has provided 425 women and 850 children with crisis counseling, (continued on page 10)

Handcuffed and flanked by Tokyo police officers, Paul McCartney, member of defunct Beatles and current lead singer of the pop-rock group Wings, was arrested Wednesday for bringing more than 200 grams of marijuana into Japan. See related story on page 6.

Fusion expert to speak at MSU

An expert on nuclear fusion will discuss the scientific feasibility of capturing the limitless energy of fusion at 4:10 p.m. Thursday in 120 Physics-Astronomy Bldg.

John Smith, of Princeton University, will address a physics colloquium open to MSU faculty and students.

The issue to be discussed is whether enough pressure and temperature can be secured to generate electricity cheaply and reliably, said Claus-Konrad Gelbke, MSU associate professor of physics.

Fusion, which is the forcing together of atomic nuclei, is the reverse of nuclear fission, or atom splitting. Nuclear fission is the energy source which runs existing nuclear power plants. Gelbke said it will be at least another 20 to 30 years before research makes fusion a workable energy source. He added that fusion research is too expensive to conduct at MSU at this time.

Police said they are seeking a warrant for armed robbery from the Ingham County Prosecutor.

Make your yearbook complete.

It's hard to imagine yourself two kids and ten years away from college graduation. Yet, wherever you are, your M.S.U. yearbook will mean something special.

Of course, you'll smile and laugh at some of the silly things you did. The people you care about may even giggle at the way you looked back then. But, without your picture an important part of your college memories will be missing.

That's why it's important for you to make your senior picture appointment today.

Your picture will be taken absolutely free, and it will automatically appear in the Red Cedar Log. It's quick, and there's no obligation to buy pictures. Make your yearbook complete by having a free senior portrait sitting. Call 353-5291 for an appointment, or stop by Room 337 Student Union.

HURRY!
There are only a few days left.

A not very thrilling thriller

By MARY TINNEY
State News Reviewer

With Dial M For Murder, the MSU Department of Theatre takes a giant leap from bad (Shaffer one-acts last fall) to OK.

I'm not sure why this play doesn't quite make it. The acting is generally good, the sets are nice and the production as a whole seems to be loyal to the original Frederick Knott script. But whereas the excellent 1954 Alfred Hitchcock film version was intriguing and suspenseful — undoubtedly as the British playwright intended — MSU's version somehow, whether intentional or not, comes off more as a light-weight comedy romance.

Dial M For Murder is the story of a scheming opportunistic man, Tony Wendice (Joseph Viger) and his attempt to have his wealthy, unfaithful wife Margot (Linda Goetz) killed. He hires a man to kill her (Brian O'Sullivan) but his plot is foiled when Margot kills her assailant. Later she is charged with murder and sentenced to death, much to her husband's delight.

I have mixed feelings about Joseph Viger's portrayal of Tony Wendice. At first his character is very annoying. It seems to be over-acted and over-pompous. Viger seems extremely uncomfortable with his British accent. It comes and goes from line to line and often it garbles his words and makes them difficult to understand. As the play progresses, however, Viger slides into the role. His speech becomes a little more consistent and his mannerisms more regular.

Bernie White's portrayal of Margot's lover Max Halliday impressed me in much the same way. At times uneasy and mechanical, by the third act he appears comfortable with his role. White is an actor who seems to get noticeably better with every performance.

Brian O'Sullivan as the ill-fated killer, Lesgate, manages the best British accent of the lot. His expression and characterization are always fine, but he is an actor with a very bothersome stage presence. He moves with a timidity that very much contrasts with his large stature. If he would be more expansive and move with a little more self-confidence he would be a much more effective actor.

Linda Goetz gives an unremarkable but OK performance as Margot Wendice and Martha F. Haase is great as the police inspector in charge of investigating the crime.

What struck me most of all during this play was the audience reaction. At the two most climactic moments, the audience laughed. It wasn't because the actors were doing a bad job. It was just funny Inspector Hubbard (Martha F. Haase, right) questions Margot Wendice (Linda Goetz) as her villainous husband, Tony (Joseph Viger), looks on in the MSU theatre department production of Dial M For Murder.

— mostly, it seemed, because of the rather outrageous characterization of Tony Wendice (which isn't exactly a negative criticism), and the fact that Bernie White is too cute and innocent looking to express rage without appearing endearingly pathetic. It's hard to criticize a play for being funny... The point is that there is none of the suspense or intrigue that made Dial M For Murder so appealing as a Hitchcock thriller.

Another impression: With the exception of Joseph Viger, all of these actors are seen in almost every theatre department production. Is the reservoir of MSU talent that limited? It would be nice to see a few fresh faces.

Dial M For Murder, directed by Frank Rutledge, is, in all, a pretty typical theatre department production — mildly entertaining and, as usual, fairly disappointing.

The play can be seen through Saturday. Showtime is 8:15 p.m. in the Arena Theatre. Tickets may be purchased for $2 at the Performing Arts Company box office in Fairchild Theater or at the door.

VIENNA CHOIR BOYS

A group of pre-pubescent professionals

By WILLIAM BARNHARDT
State News Reviewer

The tradition of Old Vienna and the youth of children's voices united for an astounding evening Tuesday night, as the Vienna Choir Boys gave their fifth concert in the MSU Auditorium. Under the direction of Michael Gormley, the choir of 24 boys upheld the expectations of excellence of the 482 year-old Austrian legacy.

With Gormley playing the piano between the divided choirstands, the choir boys opened with Galuppi's 18th century canon Dixit Dominus. The same ethereal reverence graced the 16th century de Victoria ode O Regnum Coeli, performed a cappella. East Lansing was treated to a Mozart solo sung by a lone soprano, then the full choir in "Laudi alla Vergine Maria" from Verdi's Sacred Pieces. The first act ended with the Kodaly musical dialogue about the Nativity, The Angels and the Shepherds, which finished in a sparkling high note, with the required clear purity for which the choir is known.

During the last selection, I saw a boy repress a laugh and nudge the boy beside him... It reminded me — for it was easy to forget — that these performers with the excellence of trained professionals are just children between the ages of 10 and 13.

The work demanded for this level of excellence is needless to say, rigorous. The boys attend a special preparatory school which details practice, music theory and the learning of a musical instrument. At nine, the final choir selection is made by way of an examination directed toward musical ability. The history of the choir has produced some outstanding musicians, such as Franz Schubert, while the list of those associated with the Vienna Choir Boys is equally prestigious. Gluck, Mozart, Haydn, and Bruckner were among the composers that played the organ or composed for the choir.

The second section of the program was Weber's one-act opera Abu Hassan. It was rather "show-biz" as the boys donned costumes and acted out the simple drama, much to the distraction of themselves and the music. Not taking away from the work and strenuous effort that went into the Weber piece, this Americanized script full of "lovable" clichés delivered through intended-to-be-cute German accents transported the vocal concert to the realms of vaudeville. Well, this reviewer is a mean, unsentimental, old fogey who would rather not see an early forerunner of romantic opera rewritten so Lansing grandmotherly-types could pucker up and say "isn't that just darling?" The evening would not have been as long or as uneven had a traditional second section of non-theatrical choir music been used. Tradition, bei Gott!

After the second intermission, the third section returned to a more restrained format. Among the highlights were Schubert's Germanic "The Nightingale," four luscious songs from Brahms' Jungbrunnen, a lovely French trio of children's songs from Poulenc, a rousing folksong, and two Strauss polkas.

During the last selection, I saw a boy repress a laugh and nudge the boy beside him who got to giggling too. It reminded me — for it was easy to forget — that these performers with the excellence of trained professionals are just children between the ages of 10 and 13. I think back on my days of producing ungodly squeaks and half-attained notes from the choir loft at our church and the expertise of these boys is inspiring and all the more impressive. This beautiful sound, angelic and naive, is a precious musical commodity attained through years of preparation for a transient sound that will last only a few years. But what isn't transient is the quality, the tradition of the world's most beloved and renowned choir.

Paul McCartney arrested in Japan on dope charges

TOKYO (AP) — It was a hard day's night for former Beatle Paul McCartney, jailed on charges of marijuana possession and smuggling after his arrest Wednesday at Tokyo's airport. The arrest occurred as McCartney and his rock group Wings arrived for an 11-concert tour that now has been canceled.

The 37-year-old ex-Beatle was seized by airport customs officers who said they found 219 grams — 7.7 ounces — of marijuana in a plastic bag in one of the singer's suitcases as he passed through the airport checkpoint.

He was led away in handcuffs and jailed overnight, authorities said, and would face a Japanese magistrate within 72 hours. McCartney was held without bail but allowed to speak with a lawyer, police said.

McCartney was quoted by customs officials as having said he "brought some hemp for my smoking." Japanese authorities use the term "hemp" for marijuana.

Police said the 37-year-old ex-Beatle spent the night in the Tokyo metropolitan jail. Narcotics officials said they would question him Thursday and turn him over to the Tokyo district prosecutor's office Friday day for further questioning and a decision on whether to bring formal charges. Customs officials had said Wednesday night McCartney already had been charged with possession and smuggling marijuana.

McCartney could be held up to 20 days for questioning. If he is formally charged and convicted, he could be sentenced to a maximum of seven years in prison and a fine of up to the equivalent of $2,000, officials said. Such trials can take months or even years in Japan. Japanese news reports said it was likely McCartney would be expelled from Japan without facing formal charges.

Japan enforces its drug laws strictly, and marijuana smokers are found mostly among a small minority of persons who have traveled abroad. The courts have shown increasing lenience in sentencing in recent years, with most first offenders being given only fines and probation.

The arrest meant cancellation of the series of concerts in Tokyo, Nagoya and Osaka, for which 100,000 tickets were sold, said the newspaper Yomiuri Shimbun, sponsor of McCartney's visit.

In 1972 McCartney and his wife and Wings drummer Denny Seiwell were fined the equivalent of about $1,800 after pleading guilty to smuggling six ounces of marijuana into Sweden. Their Swedish hotel was raided during a Wings tour.

'Oh, yes, they're the great Pretenders'

By JOHN NEILSON
State News Reviewer

I don't usually like to make hasty predictions about new bands, but in the case of the Pretenders a few seem warranted. First off, if there is any justice at all in the music business (I have my doubts at times) the Pretenders are going to be big in no time. Very big. Secondly, knowing how rock journalists and photographers go for a pretty face, I imagine Chrissie Hynde is going to start popping up soon in every magazine and fanzine around. Finally, by the time I finish with this review I will probably have wasted a week's worth of precious superlatives in one article.

The reason for this sudden gush of enthusiasm is the release of the Pretenders' nearly flawless debut album, simply entitled Pretenders (Sire SRK 6083). It's a real gem in every respect, and it showcases a band that has all the necessary elements for success at its fingertips.

The Pretenders' story goes back a few years, to a time in 1977 when Chrissie Hynde was living on the streets of London, trying in vain to live out a rock 'n' roll dream. Originally from Akron, Ohio, Hynde packed up her guitar and went to England to scrape together a band, eventually enlisting lead guitarist James Honeyman-Scott and drummer Martin Chambers — both of whom had been in a band called Cheeks with ex-Mott the Hoople keyboard player Verden Allen — and Pete Farndon on bass. Together they cut a few demos, and a big break came when Nick Lowe agreed to produce their first single.

That single was a beautifully-rendered cover of "Stop Your Sobbing," a Ray Davies tune from the first Kinks album, and it soon became a minor English hit. Surprisingly enough, many critics considered the single's B-side — a hard-driving original tune called "The Wait" — to be better than the hit, and this raised some suspicions that the Pretenders weren't just another nostalgic happy power pop group. The group's follow-up singles "Kid" and "Brass in Pocket" confirmed the notion that the Pretenders were definitely a band to watch.

Pretenders is America's first introduction to the band, and it certainly ought to win them a lot of fans. All three singles are included, but it's a good measure of the quality of the LP that most everything else on the album is at least as good as the singles. Producer Chris Thomas has wrapped everything up in a slick production job that makes the songs sparkle without filing away too many of the edges "Stop Your Sobbing" is the only exception, as the Nick Lowe version is retained here.

Hynde's vocals are superb throughout, and they display a range of emotion that far outdistances those of Debby "Heart of Glass" Harry. Hynde is mock-tough on the opening song "Precious," pleading on "Up the Neck," tender and vulnerable on "Kid," cool and reflective on "Private Life" — I could go on, but suffice it to say that Hynde pours herself into her songs and makes them come alive. As great as she is, however, Hynde never eclipses her band, so one doesn't get the feeling that they are only accessories to her show. Playing her own rhythm guitar may give Hynde a different perspective on her position with the group, and in interviews she is quick to point out that the Pretenders is definitely a group affair.

Pete Farndon's bass-playing meshes perfectly with Chambers' drumming, and on songs like "Mystery Achievement" and "Space Invader" he locks everything together with some gripping and imaginative lines. Honeyman-Scott's guitar, meanwhile, is as versatile as Hynde's vocals — he can play bruising rhythm licks on one song and gentle, almost fragile leads on the next.

Side one of Pretenders is the harder of the two, blustering in with the chugging rock of "Precious." "Up the Neck" is a story of a disintegrating relationship ("lust turns to anger . . .") which is followed by the quirky bouncing beat of "Tattooed Love Boys." "Space Invader" (named after the arcade game) is a grinding instrumental romp whose final sound-effects fade-out leads into "The Wait." "The Wait" is a great hard rock song which features Hynde's so-far-their-almost-seat vocals and a neat solo by Honeyman-Scott, but if I have one complaint about this album it's that the Nick Lowe version wasn't used here, because the grittier production gave it an all-important edge, and the searing solo of the single version makes the album track pale by comparison. Side one ends with the glorious "Stop Your Sobbing," which should be a single over here (but probably won't be).

"Kid" opens side two with a wistful love song built around a nostalgic melody some older readers might remember. On the subdued reggae-influenced "Private Life" Hynde comes startlingly close to sounding like Joni Mitchell as she twists her voice around the luxurious beat, and this leads into the upbeat "Brass in Pocket."

For a first album Pretenders shows a remarkable degree of musical sophistication and diversity that promises more great music in the next few years. Meanwhile, it's only two weeks into the new year and I've already got one sure choice for my Ten Best Records of 1980 list!

Warhol's 'Trash' a decadent classic

Classic Films brings Andy Warhol's Trash to MSU this Thursday (at 8 p.m.) and Friday (at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m., both nights at 109 Anthony). You might be surprised to hear after you sit through it — if you sit through it — that Classic Films considers it a classic and critics of pop culture and art alike consider this film art. Art? The film that brings us this inspired bit of dialogue between a ratty looking dirty woman with child and an impotent heroin-strung-out male prostitute:

"Ever made it with a pregnant woman?"
"Uh, no, I can't say that I, uh . . . but what will your sister say about it?" The sister is really a male transvestite who the man is living and loving with.

The woman takes off her blouse, reclines and says, "So? What about my sister? I've made it with her too . . ."

TRASH!!!! These people are such garbage: forget your tirades on the basic human dignity of man for this film. Warhol — by way of Paul Morrissey's trashy script and filming — wholeheartedly agrees. When Vincent Canby reviewed the film in 1970, he expressed a complaint that the characters never despaired or reached out from their depths of seamy. For him, they were too apathetic. But that's just what Warhol wanted. These people don't want to change, they love being trash, human lives without meaning or worth. Get a load of this plot.

Joe is the street-hustler on heroin, whose addiction has rendered him impotent. For a place to stay, he shacks up with Holly, a male-transvestite with a horrible overbite and a strong desire to drug high school Westchester boys and abuse them. Strangely enough, she's the most likable character in the film. Just like the Westchester kid, there's a girl from Grosse Pointe — trash can be rich too. This shrill nagging vain sex-starved slutty society rich-bitch catches Joe breaking in her apartment and begs to be raped until her chic young-lawyer-type husband comes in which inspires her to make it a threesome. Then worthy of its X-rating, Trash proceeds to one of the most vile and degrading scenes recorded on film — considered by some to be the height of late '60s underground film realism: the beer-bottle masturbation sequence during which Holly, on her seedy old mattress in her slum apartment decorated by the trash filched from other neighborhoods' trash cans, ecstatically grunts and groans . . . we'll be on welfare soon . . . I just know it . . . The film continues with Joe trying to make it with Holly's sister and finally the two of them trying to fool an incompetent greedy welfare worker.

Warhol's art came out of the return-to-realism movement of the early '60s — a movement, though confused by op art for a year or two, is still with us today in the form of photorealism. His particular Pop Artistic philosophy is super-realism. Telling things for what they are, particularly in film. Why not watch the six hour Sleep (it's about a film of someone sleeping), or the eight-hour Empire (a day of the Empire State Building) or Henry Geldzahler (a vibrant portrait of a man smoking a cigar for 90 minutes). So super-realist Warhol then commissioned Paul Morrissey to do Trash. No social comment, no character redemptions, no technical expertise (the film is often out of focus, the sound is horrible, the prints are all scratchy) no worthwhile aspects in its being made. Just a piece of intentional cinematic excrement. Think of Trash as a long, 100-minute painting of low-life. A painting without subjectivity or arty interpretation — just a moving snapshot of human debris.

Retired MSU professor publishes bird study

By SUSIE BENKELMAN
State News Staff Writer

An MSU professor emeritus has written a book that will ruffle the feathers of warbler watchers and finch followers everywhere.

My World of Birds, authored by George J. Wallace, was published in summer 1979 and is available at local book stores.

Wallace, an MSU zoology professor for 30 years, chronologically relates his lifelong experiences in the watching, studying and teaching of ornithology.

Beginning with his boyhood in Vermont, he shares personal bird watching records with the reader as well as telling of "non-birding" activities. It is this personal-life aspect that separates Wallace's book from other research books and gives it a readable format.

He tells of his adventures traveling "out west" from Vermont to the University of Michigan, where he received his bachelor's, master's and doctorate in zoology.

After his studies in Ann Arbor, Wallace returned to Vermont where he worked at a sanctuary before coming to MSU. He dedicates a chapter solely to his work here, although he refers to his 30 years of work in East Lansing throughout the book.

In the remainder of the book, Wallace tells of more worldly bird watching in such places as Europe, Africa and Australia. It is obvious throughout the book that he is as much a nature lover as a bird watcher. He describes the beauty of the mountains, flowers, and other wildlife as well and almost as often as he discusses birdlife.

Although it is plain that Wallace "knows his birds," his book is definitely not only an account of bird life throughout the world, but also a collection of personal memoirs. It is not the book to buy when one is looking for merely an informational guidebook, but a journal of the adventures, fortunes and experiences of one of the country's leading ornithologists.

The 320-page hardcover is published by Dorrance and Co. and costs $10.

Spartans back in action

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer

Basketball has been pushed to the back burner during this hectic week of sports at MSU, but moves to the front tonight as the Spartans host the University of Wisconsin in Jenison Fieldhouse. Tipoff is scheduled for 8 p.m.

Following the tussle with the Badgers, MSU will host the University of Iowa in another 8 p.m. contest Saturday.

The Spartans reside alone in last place in the Big Ten and desperately need to win at home if they plan to escape the cellar. Last Thursday's action saw MSU drop a 65-61 decision to Northwestern University, everybody's pre-season pick to wind up in the Big Ten's basement. Last Saturday, MSU cut an 18-point deficit to just one late in the game, but Indiana University prevailed, 72-64.

"THAT WAS ONE of the great comebacks of all-time in Michigan State basketball," said MSU coach Jud Heathcote. "We just can't come up with the big play when we need or have to have it."

"Now we have to play the games one at a time," Heathcote continued. "We're at home now and we play Iowa and Wisconsin and we have to beat them. Our ability to comeback when he were down shows our competitive nature."

Heathcote will most likely go with a lineup of Kevin Smith and Terry Donnelly at guard, Jay Vincent at center and Ron Charles and Rob Gonzales at forward.

Gonzales may have won himself a permanent spot in the lineup after his best performances of his career last weekend.

"Rob has started to play within himself and recognize that he can't score every time he gets the ball," Heathcote said of the sophomore from Detroit. "He doesn't try to create things for himself when they aren't there."

THE BADGERS BRING a 2-2 Big Ten mark into East Lansing. "They have basically the same lineup that ended the season last year when they won their last four games of the season," Heathcote said. "I said before that if there is a darkhorse in the league, it's Wisconsin."

"They are 2-2 and maybe they don't have the confidence so it is probably good for us to play them Thursday."

Wisconsin starts a rugged front line that features 6-foot-7 Joe Chernelich, 6-foot-8 Claude Gregory and 6-foot-9 Larry Petty. Heathcote described Wisconsin's leading scorer Wes Matthews as "a classic guard."

Iowa is also 2-2 going into tonight's game at Indiana University. The Hawkeyes have played their Big Ten games without All-America guard Ronnie Lester, who has missed action because of a knee injury.

"Iowa played the best basketball of anyone in the conference in the pre-season," Heathcote said of Iowa's 9-0 start before league play began. "They have done well to hang in at 2-2 until Lester comes back."

Women cagers rolling

By BILL TEMPLETON

State News Sports Writer
The MSU women's basketball team got a little help from its friends Tuesday night as the Spartans rallied to beat the University of Michigan 70-65 at the IM Sports-West Arena.

MSU head coach Karen Langeland noted that the partisan crowd, which totaled 410, gave her team the lift it needed late in the game.

"The crowd really helped," Langeland said. "When we were down by two late in the game, the crowd got behind us and really gave us the momentum we needed to win."

The Spartans, who improved their overall record to 6-5, had four players score in double figures, led by Mary Veldbig's 18 points. Laurie Reynolds added 17 points, followed by Deb Traxinger with 15 and Mary Kay Itnyre with 10.

ITNYRE IS NOW just five points away from the 1,000-point mark in her MSU basketball career. If the senior co-captain, who is averaging just over 10 points per game, can reach the mark in the Spartans' home game Friday, she will become the first MSU woman basketball player to do so in a career.

Langeland was pleased with the balanced scoring attack she got from her team, a statistic which helped stake MSU to a 51 percent shooting average from the floor.

"I thought we played the first five minutes of the game and the last five minutes of the game very well," Langeland added. "We shot extremely well from the floor and many of our shots were from the outside."

Something which did not please Langeland, however, was the defensive play of the Spartans.

"Our defense was terrible," Langeland said. "It was probably the worst individual and team defense we've played all year."

Michigan center Abbie Currier's 33 points added to Langeland's woes, but the mentor was quick to point out the play of Traxinger.

State News/Mark A. Deremo

With a chance to make MSU women's basketball history, senior Mary Kay Itnyre will need just five points in the Spartans' home game Friday to reach the 1,000-point mark in her career.

MEN AND WOMEN BOTH AT HOME

Gymnasts take on powerful foes

By WILL KOWALSKI
State News Sports Writer

An action-packed night is in store for Jenison Fieldhouse Friday as both the MSU men and women's gymnastics teams take to the floor against a couple of highly-ranked squads.

The women's team, coming off a narrow loss to the University of Minnesota, will find its work cut out for it again when the University of Pittsburgh becomes the Spartans' foe at 8 p.m. Friday.

Pittsburgh, ranked seventh nationally, brings with it two fine gymnasts in Holly Martin and Bonnie Tressler, plus an array of excellent freshmen and sophomore performers.

MSU coach Michael Kasavana expects a close match and said the meet could be decided on the first two events.

"WE NEED TO come out strong and finish highly on the first two events, the vault and the uneven parallel bars," Kasavana said. "That way we'll be in good shape when our best event, the balance beam, comes around."

Kasavana has again juggled his line-up in an attempt to find the right winning combination. In the all-around will be Bonnie Ellis, Alice Hagan, Lori Boes and for the first time this season, Colleen Smith.

Pam Swing will compete in the vault, bars and floor exercise; Beth Eigel will be on the balance beam only; senior captain Diane Lovato will be on bars; and Kit Bunker is in vault, floor exercise and uneven bars.

"We're still looking for the right combination, but all in all we're doing real good as a team," Kasavana said.

The women's schedule doesn't get any easier in the near future, either. After Pittsburgh at home, the squad travels to eighth-ranked University of Louisville Sunday.

For MSU coach George Szypula's men's team, the University of Illinois, rated in the top 20 in the early national rankings, brings with it two national-champion pommel horsemen.

The Illini's Butch Zurich and Dave Stoldt both have been No. 1 on the horse in the last two years, and Szypula describes them as "phenomenal."

MSU's Marvin Gibbs is coming off an excellent outing at last weekend's Big Ten Invitational where he won first in the floor exercise and parallel bars and seconds in the pommel horse and rings.

Injuries have begun to take their toll on the Spartan squad, though.

Big Ten match-ups

By RANDY MINKOFF
UPI Sports Writer

Are the Minnesota Golden Gophers legitimate contenders for the Big Ten title this season? Thursday night should go a long way in determining if Coach Jim Dutcher's team is a serious contender for the crown.

The surprising Gophers take a 3-1 record to Ohio State University to battle the league-leading Buckeyes in the feature game in the conference Thursday night. The second-ranked Bucks are 4-0 in league play and 11-1 overall.

Dutcher's club has won three straight contests after an opening loss against Michigan.

"All we have to do now is go to Ohio State," Dutcher said. "Actually, we have to play the three teams regarded as the best in the Big Ten in our next three assignments. It just gets tougher and tougher."

AFTER TRAVELING TO OSU, the Gophers, 10-3 overall, host Purdue on Saturday and then entertain Indiana Jan. 24.

"We need to win at least two of these next three to remain in the race and that will be difficult," Dutcher explained. "We'll have to play our best ball of the season to win at Ohio State. The Bucks may have the best team in the country right now and they are flying high."

Kevin McHale, third in the Big Ten in scoring with 21.3 average, has led the Gophers thus far this season and he will have to stop OSU center Herb Williams, who is eighth in the league.

But OSU Coach Eldon Miller said the key to his team's success has been the work of the bench.

"I'm beginning to realize they can be very outstanding players to our team," Miller said.

PURDUE, TIED WITH Minnesota for second place, hosts

Northwestern with an eye on grabbing a share of the Big Ten lead. The Boilermakers, coming off last Sunday's nationally televised loss to Syracuse, are not overlooking the 1-3 Wildcats while eyeing Saturday's showdown with Minnesota.

"Obviously, we're facing two of the Big Ten's most improved teams this week," said Purdue Coach Lee Rose. "Northwestern played us tough in Mackey Arena last year and we were lucky to break it open at the end."

Joe Barry Carroll, Purdue's all-league center, still tops the conference in scoring with a 23.3 point per game average.

Northwestern Coach Rich Falk said containing Carroll is the key for the Wildcats.

"JOE BARRY CARROLL is an intimidating force inside along with being a great player and leader," Falk said. "We must play a great game to be competitive with the Boilermakers."

Iowa and Indiana, two teams hurt by key injuries earlier in the season, meet in Bloomington trying to move above the .500 mark. Hawkeye Coach Lute Olson, who said guard Ronnie Lester is still questionable for the Hoosier contest, said he has been satisfied with his club thus far "but we need to develop more confidence in the late stages of a game."

The Hoosiers have defeated Iowa seven straight times at home. Michigan, also 2-2, travels to Illinois, 1-3 in another conference matchup.

"Illinois has great depth and can utilize that asset against any team in the Big Ten," said Wolverine Coach Johnny Orr. "We need this game very badly but you have to know Illinois also needs it just as bad."

The Illini are coming off losses to Minnesota and Purdue.

MSU — after four straight losses — is seeking its first conference victory, hosting Wisconsin. The Spartans have already lost twice at home in the conference season while the Badgers, 2-2 in the league, are coming off an overtime loss to Minnesota and a one-point defeat at Iowa.

Fan bash

The MSU Student Foundation and Dooley's are sponsoring a Tipoff Faceoff party tonight following the MSU-University of Wisconsin basketball game. The bash, to be held at Dooley's downstairs, is to allow fans to get acquainted with players from the MSU basketball and hockey teams.

Bowlers stage Spartan Masters

The bowling lanes in the MSU Union will set the stage for the second annual Spartan Masters Match Game Championships Friday through Sunday.

Collegiate bowlers from Minnesota, New York and across the Midwest will gather this weekend in East Lansing to compete in both men's and women's divisions.

Qualifying rounds for the tournament begin Friday and will continue through Saturday, with the finals slated for Sunday.

In the preliminary rounds, all contestants will bowl eight games. The top eight finishers in both the men's and women's division will then advance to the match game finals.

In the finals, each competitor will bowl against each of the rest of the finalists, with the winner from each match being awarded 30 bonus pins.

The champion will be decided by the highest combined total of actual pinfall and bonus pins. With the format set in this manner, each finalist will be looking to not only defeat his opponent, but also to knock down as many pins as are possible in each match.

Fencers host trio in season-opener

Beginning his 41st year as head coach of the MSU fencing team, Charlie Schmitter will direct the Spartans in their season-opening meet this weekend.

The Spartans host the universities of Michigan at Dearborn and Windsor along with Wayne State University at 10 a.m. Saturday in the upstairs gym of Jenison Fieldhouse.

Schmitter, whose MSU teams have won 244 meets during his reign, said the Spartans could be in for a rough weekend.

"Wayne State is the defending NCAA champion and should be real tough again this year," Schmitter said. "Ernie Simon was the individual national champion in foil for Wayne State and he's back."

Schmitter, however, admits that Michigan at Dearborn and Windsor are more in the same league with the Spartans.

"I just hope we can fence as well as we can," he said. "With a couple of exceptions, we don't have great fencers yet."

Schmitter said the Spartans appear to be relatively strong in epee and sabre.

Senior Bryan Peterman, the defending Big Ten champion, is joined by sophomore brothers Brad and Barry along with senior Ward Best to give MSU an experienced epee group.

Junior Jon Thomas, whose brother Chris and father George were both two-time Big Ten champions for MSU in sabre, is likely to be the No. 1 performer in that same event. But he has been sidelined with mononucleosis and is doubtful for this weekend.

John Chambers, another junior, is also expected to do well in sabre.

Schmitter said the foil seems to be the Spartans' weakest weapon.

Senior Chris Young is Schmitter's No. 1 performer but seniors Dominic Marazita and Dennis Brauning are fighting him for the top spot.

Swimmers host conference rivals Illinois and Purdue this weekend

By JIM MITZELFELD
State News Sports Writer

MSU men's swimming coach Dick Fetters expects a couple of close meets when two Big Ten rivals come to town this weekend.

The Spartans, with a 3-2 record, will be hosting the University of Illinois Friday night and Purdue University Saturday afternoon.

Both meets will be in the IM Sports-West. Friday's will begin at 7:30 p.m. with Saturday's contest to start at 2 p.m.

"There are going to be a lot of good races," Fetters said. "Both should be wind-ding meets. I am hopeful we can take them both."

But it will not be easy. Illinois, Purdue and MSU finished seventh, eighth and ninth, respectively, in last year's Big Ten meet. And the Illini and Boilermakers return most of their starters.

Illinois' biggest strengths are freestylers Rick Walker and Chris Tague, as well as individual medley specialist Jim Werner.

"Illinois main strength is in its freestyle swimmers, where as Purdue is much more versatile," Fetters said.

FETTERS FIGURES
BOILERMAKER Bob Norris

will give Spartan George Kruggel quite a race in the 200-yard butterfly, but his biggest fear seems to be Purdue's Al Fager.

"Fager is an excellent swimmer," Fetters said. "He can swim the 200-, 500- or 1,000-yard freestyle events. He whipped us last year."

Purdue's other threat is Scott Knake, who swims either breaststroke or individual medley.

"He's very versatile," Fetters added. "He can do a lot of things for them."

"Our Dan Mejer should be in for some good races with both teams in the 200-yard freestyle," said Fetters.

"We are still without both backstroke Scott Wilson and diver Mike Brown and that makes it rough," Fetters added.

The status of Brown's hand injury is still questionable. Diving coach John Nacey said they would decide in three weeks whether or not they would red-shirt the freshman diver.

very agile" by Langeland.

Pittsburgh beat Northwestern University 81-71 earlier this season. Northwestern is the only Big Ten team to beat the Spartans this year in four conference games.

Saturday's game with the Boilermakers won't be an easy one either, as Langeland noted three players the Spartans will be watching closely.

"Laura Newcomb is their leading scorer with about a 16-point average, and she's their second leading rebounder," Langeland said. "They've also got two freshmen, Carol Emanuel and Leslie Schultz, who are their second leading scorer and top rebounder respectively."

States to see the shared concern" of its allies over Afghanistan and Iran.

A bomb exploded at the entrance to the Soviet airline Aeroflot's office in Damascus, Syria, slightly injuring one person and doing extensive damage.

In Peking, more than 30 foreign students chanted "Soviets out of Afghanistan!" outside the Soviet Embassy and burned a Russian flag.

In Moscow, the magazine New Time carried a lengthy article titled "Communist Solidarity With the Afghan Revolution," saying some Communist parties had taken what it called "a dual position."

SOVIET UNDERSTANDING OF the principle of "international solidarity of revolutionaries" includes material and — if necessary — military aid, the magazine article said.

The magazine article did not name the dissident Communist parties. However, Communist parties in Italy, Spain and Britain have criticized the Soviet military moves in Afghanistan. Yugoslavia also has criticized the Afghan action.

The Soviets sent up to 100,000 soldiers into Afghanistan last month to crush a Moslem rebellion that threatened to end 21 months of pro-Kremlin Communist rule. They backed a Dec. 27 coup in Kabul, the capital, in which President Hafizullah Amin was ousted and executed, and Babrak Karmal was installed. The Soviet troops since then have fanned out into the Afghan countryside.

At a meeting in Strasbourg, France, the European Parliament passed a resolution condemning the Soviet intervention and called for immediate withdrawal of Soviet troops. The assembly also asked a review of commercial and financial relations between the Common Market and the Soviet Union and asked the International Olympic Committee to consider moving the 1980 summer games from Moscow.

The Parliament — a 410-member part of the Common Market — has no real power.

LEADER of Britain's Labor Party, told Soviet Ambassador Nikolai Lunkov in London the West "no longer trusted the motives" of Moscow following the intervention in Afghanistan, aides reported. Callaghan told Lunkov that Moscow would be wrong to believe Western anger at the Afghan intervention would die quickly.

Christopher said in Bonn that "the door must be kept open to the pursuit of peace" despite the Soviet moves in Afghanistan. Earlier, in Brussels, he said a NATO meeting agreed tentatively over restricting high-technology exports to the Soviet Union.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE reported Wednesday that Ghotbadeh had talked twice by telephone with Panamanian

President Aristides Royo about Iran's request for extradition of the shah from Panama, where he has been living for the past month since leaving the United States.

The report could not be immediately confirmed, but Royo has said his nation would never hand over the shah before the hostages are freed. He also said last month he doubted that the Iranians could meet the technical requirements of Panama's extradition laws.

The United States is seeking support from its allies in a coordinated campaign of economic sanctions to pressure Iran into freeing the hostages. The Carter administration wants to cut off all trade except for food and medicine. But the Iranians issued a new warning Wednesday against such a multinational embargo.

Oil Minister Ali Akbar Moinefar said Iran would cut off all oil supplies to any nation that joins in the U.S. sanctions.

Beware of frostbite nipping at your nose

By MARY MICHAELS
State News Staff Writer

Long distance trudges across campus on these cold, windy days are invitations to frostbite if precautions are not taken, say area doctors.

Exposure in 20 degrees below zero for two minutes may be enough for frostbite to occur, said Dr. Gary Campbell, a physician at Sparrow Hospital and MSU associate professor.

Frostbite is possible at any temperature 32 degrees or below. It is present when ice crystals have formed in the body cells. The blood circulation is stopped in the parts affected, usually the fingers, ears and nose, Campbell said.

Different factors are involved, however, making it difficult to predict how long the process to frostbite takes, said Dr. Lawrence Jarrett, director of physicians at Olin Health Center and assistant professor of osteopathic medicine.

FOR EXAMPLE, a person who eats properly, is in good health, and has good stamina is a lot less likely to contract frostbite than someone who is exhausted, in poor health, or inebriated, Jarrett said.

"There is no reason for anybody to be subjected to frostbite," Jarrett said.

He stressed "common sense" forms of prevention such as the wearing of hats, scarves and mittens.

He said tight clothing could also be avoided, as it restricts circulation.

"Warm, loose clothing should always be worn. Even a wind-breaker to be worn over a jacket is advisable," Jarrett said.

AMONG THE characteristics of frostbite are a white, grayish discoloration to the skin, blisters, numbness and pain.

The amount of blisters covering the affected area is a determining factor of the degree of frostbite. In mild cases, only a few, small blisters will be present, Campbell said.

Many large blisters indicate a more severe case when a doctor should be contacted, he said.

Mild frostbite can be treated at home. The frostbitten area should be warmed with body heat or immersed in water of a temperature not exceeding body temperature. Overly warm or hot water will only burn the area and make the condition worse, Jarrett said.

"If gangrene has set in, the condition is beyond repair and amputation may be necessary," Campbell said. "It's even possible for people to lose their noses due to frostbite. However, that doesn't happen very often, because there is more blood circulating to the nose." Both Campbell and Jarrett have not seen very many cases of frostbite at MSU.

Sport, noun. Recreation. Athletics. Pastime. Everyone has a sport of some sort.

To play, compete, or just to watch. Meijer is one of the biggest sporting goods stores around. No matter what your sport is, Meijer Thrifty Acres has the quality gear and the same name brands you want, priced to save you money. So, instead of spending your last dime at the sporting specialty goods store, why not jog on over to Meijer and save some money. Maybe enough for two seats behind the dugout. Whatever your sport, Meijer can outfit you. On the court, diamond, or field. And off.

An education in itself.
