The University of Illinois basketball team has hired Frank "Watty" Waters as its first official assistant coach this season.

Waters, a 6-foot-8-inch former Illinois giant, will handle defensive duties and be in charge of the team's athletic conditioning.

"Watty" has been with Illinois since 1969 and has served as an assistant coach during the last three seasons.

"We are extremely pleased to have him," said Coach Lou Henson. "He is well qualified for the job and has a fine record of success at Illinois."
The government radio station also noted that violence Wednesday at Tel Aviv University in Tel Aviv, where five young men were shot and killed. The university, which was approved by the government, is known for its strong anti-American sentiment.

The interior ministry, apparently trying to ease the tension in Tel Aviv, announced that the government had called off the national strike and would resume talks with the university on Thursday.

The interior ministry also released a list of animals found dead in the area, including a dog, a cat, and a chicken. The ministry said the animals had been killed by an unknown person.
Graduate students urged to broaden perspectives

EAST LANSING — As a break from the daily grind, students open up to graduate students at Michigan State University for the annual ASMSU forum. The forum, which covered a range of topics, is a good opportunity for students to interact with one another, said Roelof Oyer, the president of MSU's student government.

"It's a great opportunity to get to know the other students," he said. "It's a lot of fun, and it's a chance to relax a bit."}

ASMSU fund depletion

The MSU Student Senate has decided to spend the money in the student government's fund, which currently stands at $28,000, according to the senate's president, Robert G. Kirk.

"We've been talking about this for a while now," he said. "We think it's a good idea to spend the money, and we're going to do it as soon as possible."}

Carte blanche for the CIA?

It has now been nearly five years since a congressional committee's report revealed a quarter-century of covert military activities by the CIA. The committee, as it claimed, left the door open on the CIA's espionage activities. It said that "there are indications that the operations were not properly coordinated with the Department of State." The findings appeared to be inimical to the CIA's interests. The Senate Intelligence Committee, which had uncovered unauthorized espionage activities within the CIA, was not much of a challenge. The agency's attempts to silence assassinations plots and a report that the agency was losing the war to the enemy in the war to the enemy. The senators were aware of the spurious attacks of aggression.

Predictably, the committee's revelations led to calls for closer congressional oversight. The U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, which has not been accountable to the legislature of the legislative branch since its creation in the midst of World War II. For a while, the future direction of the agency remained in doubt as CIA officials grappled with the question of whether the agency should be allowed to do what it could or do what it wanted. Overall, the CIA's past record, however, has been far from impressive. The agency has been criticized for its lack of transparency and accountability. It has been accused of engaging in illegal activities and of violating the rights of its targets.

If the CIA is to be reformed, we must first understand its role in American foreign policy. The CIA is a critical component of the national security apparatus, and it plays a significant role in shaping American foreign policy. It is also responsible for providing intelligence to the president and other policymakers. The CIA's activities are not limited to espionage; it also has responsibilities in counterterrorism, counterintelligence, and other areas.

The CIA's past record includes a number of controversial activities, including the Bay of Pigs invasion in 1961, the Chilean coup in 1973, and the bombing of Libya in 1986. These events have cast a shadow over the agency and its role in American foreign policy. There have been calls for the CIA to be more transparent and accountable, and for its activities to be subject to more rigorous oversight. The agency has been criticized for its lack of accountability and for its role in peripheral activities.

The CIA's role in American foreign policy is significant, but it is also controversial. It is clear that the agency needs to be reformed, but the specifics of how this should be done are not clear. The agency's role in American foreign policy is complex, and it is important that we consider all options before making any decisions.

In conclusion, the CIA's role in American foreign policy is significant, but it is also controversial. The agency needs to be reformed, but the specifics of how this should be done are not clear. The agency's role in American foreign policy is complex, and it is important that we consider all options before making any decisions.

United States must change policy

The difference between Afghanistan and Yemen is that the Afghan war was fought on the ground. The Yemeni war was fought in the air. In Afghanistan, the military was the primary focus of the war. In Yemen, the intelligence community played a crucial role. In Afghanistan, the war was fought by the United States and its allies. In Yemen, the war was fought by the United States and its partners.

There would be little opportunity for foreign powers to influence the war if our past foreign policy had been different. The United States now controls the Middle East because it has made a constant effort to isolate Iran. Iran operates under the protection of the United States and the United Kingdom, and it has a well-equipped military. The United States has been able to influence the war in the Middle East because it has a strong military and a strong economy.

Social inequalities are ignored

The term "social inequality" is often used to describe the differences in wealth and power between different groups of people. In the United States, social inequality is a significant issue. The United States is a highly stratified society, with a significant gap between the wealthy and the poor.

The wealthy are able to access better education, healthcare, and opportunities than the poor. This gap is perpetuated by a variety of factors, including discrimination, poverty, and lack of access to resources. These factors create a cycle of poverty that can be difficult to break.

In order to be effective, any policy aimed at reducing social inequality must address the root causes of the problem. This requires a coordinated effort between the government, the private sector, and civil society. It also requires a willingness to address the underlying issues, such as discrimination and poverty.

One key factor in reducing social inequality is education. Education is a crucial tool for breaking the cycle of poverty. By providing access to high-quality education, we can help to ensure that all children have the opportunity to succeed.

Another key factor is access to healthcare. Healthcare is an essential part of ensuring that people can lead healthy and productive lives. Access to healthcare is often limited for those living in poverty, which can exacerbate existing inequalities.

Finally, access to resources is crucial. Access to resources, such as food, water, and housing, is critical for ensuring that people can meet their basic needs. Policies that provide access to these resources can help to reduce social inequality.

Students getting money’s worth at Olin?

By ROBERT L. POWELL

Some students at Michigan State University are not getting the best deal this year.

A 4-NIGHT-STAR HANGOVER, the student-run newspaper, has identified the problem.

The hangover covers several areas, including tuition, fees, and the general education.
I think this weekend will be a great one! I'd really enjoy some attractions in the area with a lot of fun and entertainment. There's a lot happening around the New Orleans area this Saturday. My friend, David, and I plan to visit the French Quarter and spend some time exploring the lively atmosphere. We'll also check out the famous Bourbon Street and enjoy some jazz music. There's a lot to see and do in New Orleans, and I'm excited to explore more of it.

The weather forecast predicts clear skies and mild temperatures, perfect for outdoor activities. We're planning to walk around the city, visit some of the historic sites, and dine at some of the local restaurants known for their delicious cuisine. It's an ideal time to experience the vibrant culture and rich history of New Orleans. We're looking forward to making some memories and creating a fun-filled weekend together.
Students borrow at record rate

BY ANNA BROWNE
Fothlan 11-20-80

College students at the state of Michigan borrowed more than $1 billion last year under the State Guaranteed Student Loans Program — an increase which, according to university sources, will continue into the 1981 fiscal year.

During the fiscal year ending Aug. 31, 1980, a total of $1.1 billion was received by the state, the Department of Education announced in Lansing last week. The new record represents an increase in the line of credit outstanding from the state’s Guaranteed Student Loans in 1979, said Robert G. Rabin, the state’s commissioner of Education. "It is an additional $1 billion of loans likely to be borrowed by students in the next fiscal year." Rabin said.

Rabin said that since the program was established in 1973, the GSL has become a "vital component rather than necessity." Students taking out these loans are students who are "likely to be borrowing from banks or other sources," he said.

"It is a simple interest loan," Rabin said. "The federal government pays the 7 percent interest up to nine months after graduation for postgraduate study in the medical field or for the armed forces."

"My mother told me the boys would be bigger and stronger," says Ellie Griffith. But those words of wisdom didn't stop the energetic 9-year-old from playing ice hockey. In fact, Ellie is the only girl at Lansing who plays on a boy's hockey team. "I'm not a boy and I'm not a girl," Ellie says. "I'm a hockey player!"

At Lansing's arena power skating class, Ellie gets her first exposure to ice hockey and the boys who play it. When the boys met her, they had no idea Ellie was a girl because her long sandy hair was tucked neatly under her helmet.

"THEY THREW ME ONE boy who really became good friends with Ellie," Ellie Griffith, Ellie's mother, "but he had an idea she was a girl. What he saw her with her balance off the jow hit the floor. He didn't believe it."

Ellie has some problems with the boys, she knows how to present herself.

"She had been taking must in front of her not one or two years," says Drew Griffith, Ellie's father. "I told her she would have to stick up for herself. The next thing I know she's got the kid general against the bench and she's waving her fist at the boys." When Ellie saw that her father was deployed with his service, she let the opposing computer in.

"I told her that that wasn't quite what I had in mind," Mr. Griffith says.

Most of the decisions on the team, including Ellie, some of their games already showed. That was just another stellar game problem.

After arriving at one of her first games, however, Ellie forgot her hockey pants. Her father, Mr. Griffith, quickly furnished her with some. When Ellie returned to the locker room, she passed the game programs.

"She asks me why she can't have her own?" Mr. Griffith, "you could have asked for the rubber pants." Ellie couldn't find her hockey pants, and when the boys saw her had no long underwear beneath, one boy turned out. "One. Ellie those other are just like what we wear," Ellie continued to charge and change the chattering returned.

Ellie has been skating for five years now and has become a good player in the Mite division. And the coach, Mr. Griffith, called her "Elle" by her mother, dressed in the suit of the Mike in a 6-year-old travel team in Lansing.

Ellie led all of the members of the travel team in pre-game skating exercises -- an indication of what Ellie has become in just five years.

"This season she is playing in a league in New York where honed football is in Lansing. A special relationship has developed between Ellie and her coach. Ellie's parents say, 'She is just like a real member of the team.' Mrs. Griffith says, 'They make her part of the team and she was right up there with the rest.'"

Although Ellie attends hockey school every week to improve her skills, her parents believe her involvement with hockey will have a positive impact on her life.

"We decided for her to enjoy it while she's young," Mrs. Griffith says. "Ellie's parents say this sport may give her a big lift later when the boys outgrow her.'

Spartans rise from dead, 74-54

By ADAM TEICHER
The Michigan team was pressed dead three weeks ago and the Spartans were every bit as tired.

But the rest of the Big Ten may have to face a team that has decided to catch up. Now. The game hasn't been won yet and will be a team to be reckoned with as the Big Ten heads into the second half of its schedule.

Ten Parlor games, double heading for anything and of the Indiana-Lansing, now - at Buckeyes and of trying with Michigan in its seven-game Big Ten schedule. In the first of a two-game weekend series, the Spartans scored 27 points in the first half before both teams turned to the second half.

The BUCKEYES' center Mark Williams scored a game-high 18 points and a 10-game season average of 21 points. In the second half, Williams scored 10 points and a 10-game season average of 15 points.

The game was played as a doubleheader with a 15-minute halftime between the two games. The first game was won 74-54 by Minnesota, and the second game was won 60-53 by Ohio State.

Minnesota also beat the Buckeyes the last two times in the Big Ten, by a combined 44 points. In the last two games, Minnesota won 74-65 and 74-51.

Michigan has a renewed sense of confidence in the Spartans after last weekend's big win, and it shows. In the Spartans game, the Big Ten's sixth-place team is the only team in the Big Ten to have scored 27 points in the first half before both teams turned to the second half.

Wrestler Sports Writer

The NCAA wrestling team took the weekend to give its athletes time to regroup and prepare for the upcoming Big Ten Conference Championships. The team has been practicing and preparing for the upcoming season, and the wrestlers are looking forward to the opportunity to show their skills on the mat.

Saturday's match was against Ohio State University, and the Spartans were looking to prove that they are a force to be reckoned with in the conference. The team has been working hard to prepare for this match, and the wrestlers are eager to show what they can do.

The match began with two close matches, with the Spartans taking the lead early on. However, Ohio State fought back, and the match remained close throughout.

In the end, Ohio State managed to come out on top, winning the match 19-13. The Spartans were not without their moments of success, however, with several wrestlers putting in strong performances.

Despite the loss, the team was pleased with how they performed and are looking forward to the upcoming matches in the conference.
