Bribery charges expected within 90 days

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department expects criminal indictments in 90 days in the corruption scandal that implicates at least eight members of Congress and reportedly has spread to high levels of the New Jersey state government.

Meanwhile, Rep. Richard Kelly, R-Fla., confirmed reports that he took $25,000 in cash in the probe but asserted he was conducting his own investigation.

Chagrined by press disclosures of the FBI investigation, Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti asked Congress Wednesday to refrain from conducting separate inquiries that might jeopardize federal prosecutions.

If Congress persists, Civiletti said, "a number of guilty individuals may go unprosecuted or unpunished."

Already, knowledgeable sources said, the FBI has shut down several other undercover investigations in several cities rather than risk disclosure because of scandal publicity that began last weekend.

THE SOURCES, WHO asked not to be named, said the other, discontinued undercover operations were "showing great promise" of producing significant criminal charges. None involved a member of Congress, the sources said.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said President Carter and Civiletti had a "general conversation" Tuesday about the case, but they did not discuss it in detail.

Also Wednesday, the Senate Ethics Committee voted 6-0 to conduct a "preliminary inquiry" into allegations that Sen. Harrison A. Williams, D-N.J., accepted money in exchange for the promise of legislative favors.

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., the committee chairman, also said the committee staff will make a preliminary examination of published allegations of possible wrongdoing by Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev.

Heflin initially reported that the panel would similarly look into allegations concerning Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind.

But late Wednesday, Heflin said he has been informed by the Justice Department that "they don't have any evidence of wrongdoing."

AS A RESULT, Heflin said, the committee would drop any plans for a separate investigation of Bayh.

Cannon and Bayh have both denied the allegations.

Cannon says he was assured by the FBI Wednesday that "there is no pending investigation against me."

Cannon said he spoke to FBI Director William Webster and Webster told him he is not the subject of any current inquiry.

The FBI in Washington had no immediate comment on Cannon's report of the conversation, but the head of the FBI field office in Las Vegas, Joseph Yablonsky, told reporters:

"It has been confirmed to me by our headquarters that such a conversation took place. There is no pending investigation of Sen. Cannon."

Meanwhile, the Trenton (N.J.) Times reported the FBI was investigating at least six prominent New Jersey figures in the bribery case, including top officials of Democratic Gov. Brendan Byrne's administration.

IN AN INTERVIEW with NBC News, Kelly said that "I put the money in the pockets of my coat."

Kelly said he took the $25,000 from what turned out to be FBI agents because he thought they were "shady characters" and was investigating them.

Another newspaper, Newsday of Long Island, N.Y., quoted unnamed federal sources as saying that Kelly took the money from undercover agents at a Georgetown townhouse, stuffed the bills in his trouser and jacket pockets, smoothed the bulges and asked: "Does it show?"

But Kelly said in the broadcast interview that "when they (the FBI agents) blew the cover on their case they blew the cover on mine."

Kelly said he returned all but $174 of the $25,000 to the FBI.

Quoting federal sources close to the investigation, the Trenton Times said those implicated in the FBI investigation include Joseph Lordi, chairperson of the New Jersey Casino Control Commission, and former state Sen. Martin L. Greenberg, a former Byrne law partner who is now president of a yet-to-open gambling casino in Atlantic City.

BOTH LORDI AND Greenberg, who once headed the state Senate committee with jurisdiction over casino laws, both denied involvement.

The newspaper said two other unidentified members of the casino commission were under investigation in addition to Kenneth MacDonald, who resigned Monday. Also (continued on page 2)

AMERICAN GROUP DETAINED

Bani Sadr denounces militants

By The Associated Press

Iranian President Abolhasan Bani Sadr, taking on the U.S. Embassy militants directly for the first time, attacked them as lawless "dictators" on Wednesday after they engineered the arrest of a government minister as an alleged ally of the CIA.

Later Wednesday, in what could prove to be the government's second rebuke of the young Moslem radicals holding the embassy, authorities at Tehran airport detained a 49-member American delegation as it arrived in the Iranian capital at the invitation of the militants.

Western journalists in Tehran quoted airport sources as saying there was confusion over the status of the Americans' entry visas. The sources said the group might be kept overnight at the airport and then be sent back to the United States on Thursday.

The developments seemed to foreshadow a possible showdown between the militants and Bani Sadr's emerging government that could affect the fate of the approximately 50 Americans held hostage at the Tehran embassy for 95 days.

Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and his Revolutionary Council have accepted a United Nations plan for an investigation of the ex-shah's regime that American officials hope will lead to the release of the hostages.

BUT THE IRANIANS continued to make conflicting statements Wednesday about whether and when the hostages would be freed.

Bani Sadr denounced the arrest as unauthorized by the state prosecutor, and assailed the state radio-television system for giving air time to the militants without prior government approval.

In an interview with the Tehran newspaper Kayhan, he said the embassy militants were paving the way for lawlessness in Iran and he called them "dictators who have created a government within a government."

"How could you expect a government employee to go to work feeling secure?" he asked. "No legal or judicial security in the country . . . will undoubtedly lead to disorder."

It was the strongest attack yet on the militants by Bani Sadr, who has taken over as head of the Revolutionary Council, which will be dissolved after parliamentary elections scheduled for March.

THE 49-MEMBER American group, invited to Iran by the embassy militants to help publicize the militants' positions, were being detained by immigration authorities at Tehran airport after arriving from London because they did not hold proper entry visas from the Iranian Embassy in Washington, an informed source at the airport told a reporter.

"They were expecting to get their visas here at the airport," the source said, adding there was a possibility the group could be held overnight at the airport and sent back to the United States Thursday.

U.N. officials in New York say the key unresolved issue in their plan for an investigation of the ex-shah's regime is whether the hostages will be freed once an investigatory body is established, as the Carter administration demands, or not until after the investigation is completed, as the Iranians insist.

Tehran Radio, monitored in Kuwait, quoted an unidentified Foreign Ministry official Wednesday as saying the investigatory commission's "work" would have a "profound effect" on the hostage crisis.

But it also quoted Ayatollah Mohammed Beheshti, influential secretary of the Revolutionary Council, as saying he believes the hostages will not be released until the ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi is returned to Iran to stand trial for alleged mass murder and corruption.

Federal standards on evacuation called 'inadequate' by legislator

By TIM SIMMONS
State News Staff Writer

The standards used by a federal agency which recently reviewed Michigan's emergency evacuation plans were called "inadequate" by a democratic state legislator Wednesday.

Rep. Mark Clodfelter, D-Flint, also said the review by the Federal Emergency Management Agency was "cosmetic and really doesn't hold any weight."

The federal reviewers claimed last week Michigan's emergency evacuation plan "is in very good shape" and developing right on schedule.

"This plan is like a car on the assembly line, one that is being put together according to a changing set of guidelines," said Patrick McCollough, planning and preparedness director for FEMA in Michigan.

AN AIDE TO Clodfelter and Sen. Doug Ross, D-Oak Park, said, however, reviewers could not find 34 of the 70 essential parts of the evacuation plan.

"This plan is not functional, but you have to realize all these guys are in this together," he said. "The reviewers would say something like 'we can't find this in your plan' and the state would reply with something like 'well, we really would do that if we had to.'"

"The federal reviewers would then huddle together for about five minutes and display in the process they really don't know what they are doing, before they would say 'I guess this is all right' and then move on to the next requirement," the aide said.

Clodfelter emphasized that only the Nuclear Regulatory Commission can grant national approval to an evacuation plan, eliminating the influence of the federal agency's review.

"Failure to get concurrence with the reviewers on this plan means nothing," he said.

CLODFELTER AND ROSS released a statement last week calling Michigan's emergency evacuation plan inadequate and incomplete and demanded it be reconsidered by Gov. William G. Milliken.

On the same day, Maurice Reizen, director of the department of public health, released a document which also claimed the plan was inadequate.

"While we have it (the plan) on paper, until equipment is purchased and we begin mock exercises to ensure our capability, we are not able to provide any degree of public health protection," the document said.

The health department needs about $300,000 to put the plan into use and it would then take "several months" before it became operational, the aide said.

Police arrest 'U' students on cocaine, LSD charges

By MARK FELLOWS
State News Staff Writer

Two MSU students and two former students were arraigned Wednesday in Mason District Court and another is being sought by police in connection with the sale of cocaine and LSD on campus, police said.

Lyman Briggs freshman Lisa M. Marshall, 19, of 566 W. Holmes Hall, was charged with conspiracy to deliver LSD, conspiracy to deliver cocaine and delivery of cocaine.

No preference sophomore Donna S. Engle, 19, of 565 W. Holmes Hall, was charged with delivery of LSD and cocaine.

James M. Schuler, 20, of 4010 N. East St., Lansing, was charged with delivery of cocaine, and David L. Grossman, 20, of 13342 Nadine in Huntington Woods, a Detroit suburb, was charged with conspiracy to deliver and delivery of cocaine.

Both Grossman and Schuler were MSU students fall term.

Another student, Lyman Briggs freshman Catherine A. Jackson, 19, of 565 W. Holmes Hall, is being sought by police for escape from lawful custody as well as delivery and conspiracy to deliver cocaine, campus police said.

After being arrested in her room, Jackson escaped through the door of the suite's adjoining room in the arrest confusion, Police said.

"The room was pretty crowded and we were trying to be as congenial as we could," Metro Squad Lt. Gene Wriggelsworth said. "She wasn't missed."

The four were arraigned by Judge John P. O'Brien, who scheduled their preliminary examinations for 1:30 p.m. Feb. 14 in Mason District Court. All are out on $3,000 bonds, a court spokesperson said.

Six officers from the Metro Narcotics Squad and two uniformed officers from the Department of Public Safety made the campus arrests at 4:45 p.m. Tuesday, at 565 and 566 W. Holmes Hall, police said, culminating a three-month investigation by Metro Squad officers.

Wriggelsworth said two ounces of cocaine worth about $3,200 was confiscated in the arrests.

The arrests were made at the time of the alleged "buy" in order to ensure the immediate return of the money to the Metro Squad, Wriggelsworth said.

Wriggelsworth added that investigators had made smaller drug purchases previously, including a small amount of "purple microdot" LSD.

Police said Jackson, Marshall and Engle were arrested in their rooms and Schuler was arrested in his house at about 5:30 p.m. by Metro Squad officers.

Grossman was arrested Thursday night at his home by Huntington Woods police, campus police said.

West endangers detente by backing U.S. — Soviets

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union warned NATO they must choose between continued detente and support for U.S. foreign policy, including a boycott of the Moscow Olympics.

The official Tass news agency said in a lengthy article that as a result of the situation in Afghanistan, the United States appears determined "to shelve the policy of detente, to resume the Cold War, bring pressure to bear on the U.S.S.R., week its isolation."

The commentary by Nikolai Portugalov flatly rejected what it said were U.S. demands that the Kremlin "refrain from supporting the national liberation movements, and moreover refrain from any reaction to crises provoked by the West, even if they take place along the perimeter of the Soviet Union's border and grow into a direct threat to its security."

It was the first time since invading Afghanistan in December that the Soviets suggested unrest in that country represented a direct threat to Russian security.

"The Soviet Union has more than once declared that detente by no means implies an end to class struggle on the scale of the world," Tass said.

"One cannot, as some politicians in the NATO countries do, declare for continuing detente in Europe and simultaneously express solidarity with the U.S. policy directed at frustrating it, boycotting the Moscow Olympics and curtailing contacts with the Soviet Union in all fields of life."

Dixon visits Lansing, explains her foresight

By ROLAND WILKERSON
State News Staff Writer

Nationally known psychic Jeane Dixon was in Lansing Wednesday to continue her quest to "help people find themselves."

Dixon, who was invited to speak at the Lansing Chamber of Commerce Annual Dinner, explained at a press conference how she is able to make predictions about a person's life.

"I just close my eyes and try to pick up the channel in the air that belongs to you and only you," she said.

Dixon predicted that the United States and the Soviet Union, will not go to war over the Persian Gulf.

"WE WILL END up being allies with Russia," Dixon said. "We can't beat them, so we'll join them."

Dixon said she is unable to tell her prediction as to who will be elected president in 1980 because she is under contract to a newspaper in California to release her prediction to that publication first.

She added she was unsure how the American-people felt about the candidates, but predicted that she would be able to determine their "vibrations" in June.

Dixon claims she has powers of foresight because God has endowed her with special abilities.

"We all have extra-sensory perceptions — we could not be alive if we did not have any. The Lord has given me a little more sensitivity to it," Dixon said.

"MAYBE HE WANTS me to use it to tell world affairs as I have done," she added.

Dixon said that she had predicted the Iranian crisis "years ago" and also said that she knew over a year ago that the U.S.S.R. was going to invade Afghanistan.

Dixon said her purpose in life is to help the world's children conquer birth defects and added that she spends most of her time flying around the United States raising funds for pre-natal research.

Dixon noted a difference between her predictions and prophecies.

Predicting what will happen to someone is a talent that involves picking up on someone's "vibrations," Dixon said. Prophecies are revealed to her during a one week period, when she is in a "higher state of mind," she said.

"There are seven days that you might almost say are heaven on earth," Dixon said about her psychic experiences. "You are looking at the world through rose-colored glasses."

Bribery charges

reported under investigation were state Sens. Joseph Maresa and Angelo Errichetti.

Sources told the Times that the Justice Department shifted responsibility for the bribery investigation from U.S. Attorney Robert Del Tufo in Newark to the Brooklyn office because some subjects of the inquiry had learned of it through Del Tufo's office.

Del Tufo, who has refused to discuss the investigation, was nominated as federal prosecutor by Williams, one of the members of Congress allegedly involved in the scandal.

ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL Philip Heymann, who is in charge of the Justice Department's criminal division, read the letter and then made what he called an "optimistic estimate" that all indictments would be returned within 120 days and that all criminal trials would be completed in about six months.

Heymann said it had not been decided how many public officials would be charged with criminal misconduct. But he and Civiletti clearly were determined to head off what Heymann called a "nightmare picture" of competing Justice Department and congressional investigations.

Civiletti said such a situation "could severely impede our ability to secure convictions of those guilty." So, said Heymann, until criminal trials are completed, "we'll be very adamant" in resisting congressional requests for evidence in the case.

In response to Civiletti's appeal, the House ethics committee agreed to go ahead with an investigation using any information it could get from the Justice Department without jeopardizing federal prosecutions.

THE SENATE ETHICS Committee, meanwhile, was understood to be debating the issue late Wednesday. Calls for creation of a special commission to investigate the allegations came from Sens. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., and William Roth, R-Del. "I think people expect Congress to take action now," Roth said.

According to Newsday's sources, Kelly took $25,000 from the undercover agents, then met with federal authorities in Washington Sunday and turned over nearly the same amount of cash.

It was not known if Kelly gave any explanation for handing over the money, just hours after reports of the FBI investigation were published.

The Newsday account said Kelly went to the Georgetown townhouse to discuss using his influence to help an Oman sheik arrange political asylum. The paper said various sources said the agents were told that to get Kelly's help, they also would have to pay off two Long Islanders and an underworld figure living in Orlando, Fla.

The $25,000 was to be a downpayment on an eventual $250,000 to be split among Kelly and the other three, the paper said, but Kelly pocketed the $25,000 and did not tell the others about it.

Young to lecture in spring course

Former United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young will be a visiting professor in the College of Urban Development during spring term.

Young will lecture five times throughout the term as part of the course "World Conflict and Development - New Dimensions and Strategies for Change." Other guest lecturers will also speak as part of the course.

The four-credit course is listed in the Racial and Ethnic Studies Department as Special Topics 485, sections 4 through 11. Three hundred students may enroll in the course, which is open to people both inside and outside of the department.

Young's lectures will give an overview of Third World and Western relations.

In addition to the guest lectures which will meet on Tuesdays from 3 to 4:50 p.m., students must sign up for weekly discussion sections. Campus faculty members will instruct these courses, aimed at discussing the historical role of the Third World.

Young resigned as U.N. ambassador in August 1979 after admitting he had met with a representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization. The United States had pledged not to associate with that organization.

He has appeared several times at MSU since 1968. Young's last lecture on campus was in October 1979.

Facility will be ready for Muddy

Construction is ahead of schedule

If everything goes as expected "Muddy" Waters and his staff will be able to move into the new football training facility across from Case Hall within the next month.

The building's construction, which was begun in fall 1978, was not scheduled for completion until March. However, construction is ahead of schedule and will be ready for the new coach shortly, said Mary K. Smith, secretary to the head coach.

The structure, which is totally funded by the MSU Department of Intercollegiate Athletics, cost between $1.6 and $1.7 million. Much of the money was raised at annual football banquets in Lansing, Grand Rapids and Detroit.

Smith said the football program, which was spread out all over campus, will now be centralized in the new 22,000-square-foot facility adjacent to the practice fields.

"We used to have offices in Jenison, trainers in Munn Ice Arena and locker rooms and weight training rooms at the stadium," Smith said.

The new building features a lobby with a green chandelier, and trophy cases, coaches' offices and meeting rooms, a press lounge and three classrooms that can be opened into one large room for receptions. It also comes complete with a locker room, a weight training room, doctors' examining rooms, a rehabilitation room, a sauna and an equipment and laundry room.

"The building has been popular with recruits," Smith added. "It's a very good tool. They love to go through it."

She said the old football office in Jenison will probably be divided between the basketball staff and the Women's Athletic Department.

Paul Plank of Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., Lansing, puts the final metal trim on the new football training facility.

STUDENT BOARD VOTE

Sosa dismissal upheld

By MIKE CHAUDHURI
State News Staff Writer

The ASMSU Student Board decided Tuesday to uphold the dismissal of Henry Sosa, College of Arts and Letters representative.

Sosa was dismissed from the board last week by Board Chairperson Bruce Studer because he failed to pay his ASMSU winter tax and was in violation of the ASMSU constitution.

"I feel ASMSU might have lost some credibility if we did overturn your (Studer's) decision," said Valerie Spangler, College of Education representative.

The only board members who voted to overturn Studer's decision were Ken Passiak, College of Human Ecology representative, and Dennis Jones, College of Social Science representative.

Jones said he has seen "a lot of different people interpreting the constitution different ways."

"The interpretation of the constitution is the job of the judiciary," he said.

The judiciary, rather than the board or chairperson, should make the final decision regarding Sosa's status, Jones added.

Passiak said Sosa's dismissal may hurt his political career in the future.

The constitution should not rule over the Student Board, Passiak said.

"I believe the board has a responsibility to uphold the constitution," Studer said.

Sosa said he was never in violation of the constitution since a deadline was never set for paying the ASMSU tax.

"My work in this college (Arts and Letters) is damaged," he added.

Several people spoke in favor of Sosa at the meeting.

"I am very disappointed to see that he was bounced out of office for a minor technicality," said Eric Gilbert, a sophomore in James Madison College.

The board defeated two motions to close the meeting during its discussion of Sosa's dismissal.

The board in other business voted to give $350 to the Off-Campus Council to help advertise the council's first election.

"We have a responsibility to the Off-Campus Council because we in essence got it off the ground," Studer said.

Campaigns begins to abolish board

By MIKE CHAUDHURI
State News Staff Writer

A petition drive to abolish the ASMSU Student Board is being engineered by an MSU student who is dissatisfied with the board's performance.

The Student Board "has to be forced to change," said Daniel T. Jones, a member of the Student Media Appropriations Board.

The drive, if successful, would put a proposal on an ASMSU referendum which states "Be it resolved . . . the next elected Student Board shall be the last Student Board."

That board would then "allocate their tax monies and responsibilities to successful areas of ASMSU," according to the proposal.

JONES SAID HE would like the board to replace itself with "something that could work," but said he does not have any definite replacement for the board in mind.

The proposal needs 3,700 signatures to put it on a referendum, he said.

"I don't see much of a problem in getting 3,700 signatures," he added.

Jones said he had elicited support from several campus leaders.

of Students For Basic Rights, said he has collected 100 signatures by himself and has three other people working with him.

SCHWARTZ SAID THE object of the petition drive is not to abolish the Student Board totally, but to restructure it.

"We want to abolish what it is now," he said.

He said he hopes as many as 6,000 signatures are collected.

Student Board Chairperson

Bruce Studer said the proposal is not written like a constitutional amendment, and so if passed could not change the ASMSU constitution.

It would "just be an advisory-type thing," he said.

"If passed, the board would have to take notice," he added.

HENRY SOSA, WHO was dismissed from the Student Board last week, said he supports the petition drive.

He said he would like to see the Student Board, Council of Graduate Students and the Student Council merge into one organization.

Studer said he does not think the structure of the Student Board is a problem.

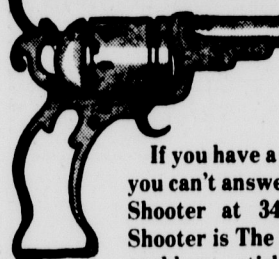

The board could be improved if it had better personnel, he said, and added that more communication with students about ASMSU activity would improve its image.

'Abdulgate' opens corruption scars

If it were not so very real, it would be almost comical: a Lebanese business person, working for the FBI and posing as an Arab sheik named Kambir Abdul Rahman, arrived in the United States with bundles of cash ready to trade for political clout. And he found takers — not only immigration officials happy to grant him permanent residency in exchange for bribes, but eight, perhaps nine, members of Congress. Granted, the FBI's evidence can easily be chalked up to "entrapment." But the country's latest political scandal — already code-named "Abdulgate" — serves to remind us that if political misdeeds did not start with Watergate, they did not end with it, either.

Already the evidence and rumors of evidence have made appreciable dents in the less-than-lofty mood of Congress and the public. In the House of Representatives, a body whose supposed integrity was established by the Watergate era, official business prevailed on the floor but talk in the cloakrooms centered around the scandal and the newest blow to the Congressional image. "I'm discouraged," lamented one legislator. "I'm shocked. I'm sick." Most of the nation would probably concur.

"Abdulgate," ironically, comes at a time when its impact on national unity and spirit could be the most devastating. International crises and domestic troubles are pressing harder than ever, and even in an atmosphere which assumes political corruption to be the rule rather than the exception, few of us care to have the sins of our elected representatives rubbed in our faces.

Disgust, however, is no reason for avoidance, either in the halls of Congress or the eyes of the nation. If the allegations of the FBI and the U.S. Department of Justice turn out to be true, then those accused should be spared neither punishment nor further political embarrassment. If there is anything more abhorrent than a dishonest public official, it is one who is allowed to remain in office.

While a thorough and speedy investigation of the scandal is certainly a prime concern at this time, the proceedings of the moment should not overshadow the need for in-depth reflection on possible Congressional reform. The revelations of the Watergate era may have taught us that lust for private gain often outshadows the desire for public service; "Abdulgate," however, seems to say that what few reforms have been initiated have not been enough. For this reason, the Congressional ethics committees would be wise to view their role in the case not as "quasi-investigatory," but legislative, with the ultimate purpose of any action being Congressional improvement.

It may be true, as one legislator noted, that the scandal represents an indictment of the entire Congress; if so, it is not the first. It is likely, however, to be among the most painful. If Watergate focused our attention on the need for reform; "Abdulgate" tells us that somehow we have failed.

Kelley halts Fermi

A halt has finally been called to Fermi II's zooming costs, and none too soon. Attorney General Frank Kelley has asked the Public Service Commission to cut off financing for the Detroit Edison nuclear plant, charging the project's cost has skyrocketed another 76 percent in just three months.

The increase is the latest in a series of escalations, up 659 percent from an original cost estimate of $229 million. Kelley's move, though late, shows the state has serious doubts about the economic viability of the project — now estimated to cost $1.7 billion.

Whether the attorney general's request is granted or not, losers in the long run will be electrical cooperatives which have invested in the Monroe plant, and Detroit Edison consumers who will undoubtedly bear the brunt of the nuclear venture.

Northern Michigan and Wolverine co-ops, which together own 20 percent of the project, can either swallow Fermi's exorbitant increases or lose the money they have already invested in the plant. The co-ops' request that the Public Service Commission approve a $181 million loan to pay a portion of their share in the plant triggered Kelley's action.

Anti-nuclear sentiment in Lansing resulted in a Board of Water and Light decision last December to scrap a nuclear buy-in proposal that has been tossed about the last few years. Had Lansing bought into Fermi II, the projected fixed costs of power to be generated at the plant — now pegged at 2.5 times higher than those Edison pays for purchased power — would have bankrupted the city in a matter of years.

The project, now 82 percent complete, obviously cannot be scrapped. But additional financing should be shelved until questions concerning the safety, costs and feasibility of nuclear energy are answered.

The state's plan for evacuation in case of a nuclear accident was criticized as inadequate and incomplete by Michigan legislators just last week.

The uncertainty surrounding many facets of nuclear energy — aside from inevitable higher costs — needs to be resolved before any further increases are rubber-stamped.

VIEWPOINT: THE DRAFT

We must avoid hasty responses

By ALAN FOX

The Soviet intervention in Afghanistan is a deplorable act which the United States should vigorously condemn. Our actions at the United Nations, the President's decision to restrict trade with the U.S.S.R., and the attempt to withdraw the Summer Olympics from Moscow are reasonable, responsible actions which will deliver that message of condemnation. They also ally us, for the first time in many years, with the forces opposed to superpower control of the rest of the world. To the extent that our policies are aimed at inducing the U.S.S.R. to leave Afghanistan, no other actions short of war seem possible.

I am greatly alarmed by the moves recommended by the President and apparently gaining overwhelming support in Congress which seem designed to lead to an unnecessary confrontation with the Soviet Union in nations other than Afghanistan. I urge you to oppose these measures, which include reinstatement of draft registration and possibly the draft itself; the removal of some modest controls over CIA covert activities through repeal of the Hughes-Ryan amendment; and military aid to the tyranny in Pakistan and to other dictatorships whose only virtue seems to be their proximity to Afghanistan.

The current atmosphere of crisis over the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan is based on a crucial misreading of Soviet intentions. I have not seen a trace of evidence to support the claim that the intervention is the first part of a Soviet drive for control of the Persian Gulf or for warm water ports — yet that is the premise on which our policy is now based. Far more plausible is an analysis that the U.S.S.R. sees itself as holding its own ground. Afghanistan has been militarily dependent on the U.S.S.R. for 25 years.

There have been Soviet-backed governments in Afghanistan since April 1978. It was fear of losing Afghanistan, not the hope of gaining more which motivated the invasion. There is nothing to suggest that the Soviet Union now threatens Pakistan, Iran or any American interest to any greater degree because of the invasion.

The real threat to Pakistan is in the nature of its own government. General Zia is a despot hated widely in his own country; he has canceled or repeatedly postponed elections, analysts agree, because he knew he would lose. American support for his regime because he happens to oppose the Soviets will inevitably lead us down the disastrous, bankrupt path of similar policies in Iran, Vietnam, Nicaragua, and elsewhere: identification of American interests with a right-wing dictator leads to support for his repressive policies which leads to identification once again of the United States as the enemy of progressive change in the Third World. When the revolution comes in Pakistan we will be reviled in Pakistan as we are today in Iran as the perpetrators of corruption and repression. The same could happen in many of the other countries the United States is counting as partners in an anti-Soviet alliance.

We should also study carefully the results of past CIA covert activity before rushing off to unleash the agency for another round of destabilization. We are still feeling the repercussions from the CIA's overthrow of Mossadegh in Iran in 1953. The international condemnation of the Soviet Union's move in Afghanistan demonstrates the folly of any superpower intervention in the Third World. To resort again to such immoral activities ourselves, however surreptitiously, is to throw away whatever good will we have gained from the current situation. The worst possible attitude we could take about the Soviet intervention is that it entitles us to respond in kind. When we legitimize our methods of intervention, we legitimize the Soviet Union's as well and reduce the moral outrage of their move to the status of a tactic in a game.

Finally, I see nothing in the current situation which justifies resumption of the draft or of draft registration. I have to wonder for what the drafted troops will be used — to protect Pakistan from the Soviet Union? There is no evidence Pakistan is under threat of attack, and plenty of reasons to avoid using American troops to prop up another dictator. To protect Iran from the Soviet Union? Again, there is no threat, and the Iranians have demonstrated that they don't want our help. To protect the oil fields? The Soviet Union doesn't threaten them. It would be the ultimate outrage to seize them from the nations to which they belong. To protect pro-American governments from internal opposition? That seems to be the real reason — and never mind the lessons of Vietnam and Iran or the fact that the Soviet hand in such opposition is more often imagined than real. If we end up sending American troops to protect the Zias of the region from their own people we will have learned nothing from the last 30 years.

Except in times of a real threat to the United States and its interests, conscription is the most basic violation of individual liberties. It violates the right of the individual to plan a future and to act on those plans. It violates the individual's ability to act on his or her conscience. It makes the individual a pawn — or an outlaw. In the absence of any showing that the survival or basic interests of the United States are at stake, conscription is an inexcusable intrusion upon the basic rights of American citizens. Today, with no evidence that our survival or interests are even about to be threatened, even the renewal of registration is wrong. It reinforces the crisis atmosphere. It gives our nation the means to easily escalate a crisis or to bog itself down again in defense of allies we could better do without.

I hope you will resist the war fever now raging in Washington and critically examine the assumptions on which our nation's proposed responses are based. There have been far too many instances in which nations have blundered into war because they were too blinded by their own prejudices to sort out the facts from the myths. If we must fight or intervene, let us be clear why and to what ends, as we failed to do the last time around.

Board's decision nullifies project

I was outraged, though not particularly shocked, to read in last Thursday's State News that the ASMSU Student Board voted down the textbook exchange proposed for spring term.

The board refused to allot $591 toward the exchange, which had the potential of freeing literally thousands of students from the control of outrageously expensive bookstores.

But then the board voted to drop $1,321 into the lap of the Women's Culture Club for a play which is the Programming Board's responsibility to fund anyway.

Does the Student Board really believe that a play students may or may not attend is a better investment of student money than something that could ease the economic pain of throwing away $60 or $70 per term for texts?

Students don't need a play about domestic assault to graduate. Students don't even need the Women's Culture Club to graduate.

But we do need textbooks. Maybe ASMSU has forgotten where it gets its funds. The $3 tax imposed on us at the beginning of each term is paid by ALL students, not just the cultural ones.

ASMSU comptroller Terry Buckley said the exchange should be voted down because he was unsure that the $591 for labor and publicity would draw enough participants.

Apparently, Terry Buckley hasn't visited a bookstore lately.

I can't think of anything that could help more students than a place where they could get fair prices for both buying and selling their books.

I urge the Student Board to make more responsible decisions when allocating my money, and the money of my fellow students.

Muddy Waters deserves support

After four years of questioning the knowledge of your sports columnists, I have to conclude after reading Adam Teicher's column of Jan. 31, that there is very little knowledge. He spent half of an article on how George Perles could acquire talent from Michigan when in fact he would have had no place to begin, where as Frank Waters has coached in Michigan for 30 years, and has his connections already set throughout the state. As for Darryl Rogers, what little recruiting he did do in Michigan all went to waste on his bench. As for the experience of Frank Waters in a major college, what about the likes of Bo Schmebeckler, Darryl Rogers and Big Ten champion coach Earle Bruce; who had ever heard of them before they went to their respective schools?

I say give the man a chance before judging him, as we have done with your columns, and I think that you will find the outcome for him will be a lot better than it will be for you.

Chicanos slighted

Gerry Skoczlas' "TV's New Season," article (Jan. 31), while riveting everyone's attention to the mindlessness of today's television fare, nonetheless stooped to some tongue-in-cheek racism.

I found "MASH (Mexican Americans Selling Hashish)" to be offensive to the Mexican American (Chicano) students, staff and citizens who have a vested interest in MSU's informational role.

While the attempt was to some humorous, the utter callousness of denigrating Raza in such a flippant manner is inexcusable.

Conflict of policy

A parallel can be drawn between the United States embargo of grain and technology to the Soviet Union and MSU's divesture of stocks in South Africa. Both reactions show opposition to policies and actions taken by these countries, the Soviet Union's intervention in Afghanistan and South Africa's institutionalized racism.

But inconsistencies exist. While President Carter is threatening to withdraw the U.S. from the Olympic Games, MSU President Cecil Mackey has confirmed a purchase of coins containing South African mint gold. An investment worth over $6,000.

The main issue here is setting an example — for the rest of the world. Carter is taking every step possible, outside of military intervention, to oppose the USSR's invasion of Afghanistan. Shouldn't Mackey be illustrating his opposition to South Africa's policies?

Mackey has said that his investment "is not relevant to the divesture policy," but aren't they one in the same?

How can divesting MSU stock show disfavor to foreign policies when our president ignores that disfavor by purchas-

More violence erupts in prison

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Inmates set fires and flooded cells in a new round of violence at the riot-torn New Mexico State Penitentiary, and officials said Wednesday they were trying to expedite the transfer of hardcore criminals out of state.

No injuries were reported in the Tuesday night outbreak, which began after maximum-security prisoners were moved back into a cellblock.

Gov. Bruce King's news secretary, Jill Marron, said the group involved in the flare-up included men believed to be ringleaders in the 36-hour weekend uprising that left at least 36 inmates dead at the state's only maximum-security prison.

"They set mattresses, paper and blankets on fire," she said.

Officers entered the cellblocks to extinguish the fires and bring the situation under control.

The violence was the first since the National Guard and a Santa Fe police special weapons team moved into the penitentiary Sunday to take back control from the prisoners.

State Liquor Director Jim Baca, a spokesperson for the prison, termed the latest disturbance "minor."

Koreans resume negotiations

PANMUNJOM, Korea (AP) — North and South Korea resumed on Wednesday the deadlocked negotiations they began in 1972 aimed at reunifying the peninsula, which was divided at the end of World War II.

Three-person delegations from each side sat at a conference table in the meeting room of the Neutral Nations Supervisory Commission to try and arrange a meeting of their prime ministers.

South Korea suggested such a conference be held in Geneva. There was no immediate response from the North Koreans.

Former Deputy Foreign Minister Kim Young-choo heads the South Korean delegation here and the North Koreans are led by Myon Jun-guk, a deputy cabinet minister.

It was the first official North-South contact since March, when officials met here to discuss unification and the forming of a single Korean team for a world table-tennis tournament. The talks broke down after a few meetings.

This session was agreed to after North Korean Prime Minister Li Jong-ok proposed on Jan. 12 that he meet with South Korean Prime Minister Shin Hyon-hwak in another effort to get negotiations back on track.

Hermit's case goes to jury

WINNEMUCCA, Nev. (AP) — The case of Ronald Bristlewolf, a desert hermit accused of killing two gold hunters and a fellow recluse when they strayed too close to his hovel, went to a jury Tuesday.

Bristlewolf, 44, who had his name legally changed from Ronald Gress in 1973, pleaded innocent and innocent by reason of insanity in the June 1978 slayings of the three whose bodies were found 150 yards from Bristlewolf's dugout home in the Black Rock Desert.

"He was a cruel, mean, nasty, ornery individual," Special Prosecutor Mills Lane told the jury as an overflow audience spilled out of the State District Court in Winnemucca.

He claimed Bristlewolf killed the two prospectors because he felt they threatened his occupancy of the remote patch of desert. And Lane said the third victim was killed later, "executed to shut him up."

But Deputy Public Defender Martin Wiener said all three psychiatrists who testified for the defense agreed Bristlewolf suffered from paranoid schizophrenia. And he claimed that the prosecution had failed to connect the killings to Bristlewolf's guns.

"There's something going on behind this man's eyes you and I don't understand," Wiener told the jury. "There's no emotion."

FDA maintains cyclamate ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Food and Drug Administration administrative law judge has recommended against lifting the agency's 10-year-old ban on the artificial sweetener cyclamate.

Judge Daniel J. Davidson made the recommendation Monday to Commissioner Jere Goyan. The manufacturer, Abbott Laboratories of Chicago, can appeal the recommendation to Goyan.

Spokesperson for the firm could not be reached for comment.

The sweetener was banned in 1970 after it was linked to cancer in animals.

Davidson, in Monday's decision, said the long hearing record did not conclusively show that cyclamate was a cancer-causing agent, but he said Abbott had failed to show it is safe. Food and drug law puts the burden of proof on the company.

Cronkite to leave evening news

WASHINGTON (AP) — Walter Cronkite says he plans to leave his post as anchorperson on the CBS Evening News next year and concentrate on other special assignments, according to a published report.

Cronkite, in an interview published in Wednesday editions of The Washington Post, said he wants to leave the anchorperson job no later than November 1981, when his current contract expires.

"I have no intention of leaving the air, it's just my intention to slow down a little and not be frozen to the daily grind," said the 63-year-old Cronkite.

Cronkite said he would sign a contract renewal next year, "but I don't think there's any likelihood it will include me on the CBS Evening News. It's just not in my plans to continue with the Evening News."

City Council accepts parking ramp bid

By MICHAEL VEH
State News Staff Writer

A bid for building the proposed Grove Street parking structure was accepted by East Lansing City Council Tuesday, making it possible for construction to begin in late February.

Finance manager Gary Murphy said the structure, to be built on Lot 9 near Grove Street and Albert Avenue, should be in operation in time for Christmas shopping.

The city received a total of eight bids for the project and accepted the low bid of $2.61 million from Hanel-Vance Construction Co.

The accepted bid was $510,000 higher than the previously estimated cost of construction.

MICHAEL DIMITRI, PROJECT consultant, said the bids were higher than expected due to current market conditions.

"All of the bids were significantly above our estimates," he said.

The contractor was willing to make changes in the project plans that would lower the cost of construction by $147,000, Dimitri said.

The changes include architectural design changes as well as minor structural alterations, he said.

Council also approved the low bid from the Merrill Lynch, White Weld Capital Markets Group for the sale of $2.4 million in General Obligation Bonds to finance the project.

THE BONDS WILL be sold by the city to Merrill Lynch and the city will pay 7.08 percent interest until the bonds mature, Murphy said.

Normally General Obligation Bonds are repaid with income from the project, city planner Jim van Ravensway said. However, the bonds for the Lot 9 ramp may be paid with city funds if income revenue is insufficient.

"We anticipate sufficient income to support the project," Murphy said.

He added that the city's parking system as a whole should be able to support the structure. If it should fail, he said, the city will be able to use tax dollars and increase taxes slightly.

"We don't expect that to happen," he said.

COUNCIL ALSO COMMITTED $20,000 from the city's Park Development Account to be used to purchase 3.1 acres east of Harrison Road and north of Gainsborough Drive. The money will be combined with a matching amount of money from the Department of Natural Resources if the application for the grant is approved.

An application for funds to aid in purchasing the property was submitted to the DNR in late January, said Brad Pryce, Group Manager for Planning, Housing and Community Development.

A second application for a similar loan to be used for development of the property will be submitted in March, he said.

A proposed traffic light at the intersection of Abbott Road and Burcham Drive was also given the go-ahead by council. The $22,000 project will be paid for with State Gas and Weight

Tax funds which are available because of the mild winter weather.

COUNCIL VOTED to use $34,000 of the city's Community Development budget to purchase additional park land adjacent to the Red Cedar School in East Lansing.

Rapellers reach new heights

By DAN INDISH

"Thirty-five feet!!! If you fall off the platform, you could die when you hit the floor," the rappelling instructor said.

Well, I was committed. I had done two practice rappels from the 10-foot platform, I had tied my Swiss seat, I had hung upside down and righted myself. I had even climbed the swaying rope ladder. It looked so easy on Emergency.

"Breathe and get ready," the student in the black beret and jungle fatigues commanded.

"Oh no," I thought and jumped. Keep your legs spread, he said. I kept them spread. Bounce, he yelled. I bounced. Bounce again. I bounced. By the time I opened my eyes I was on the Gymnasium floor.

"Phew." We had done it. Approximately 40 people, mostly students, leapt from a three-story high platform in Demonstration Hall Tuesday night. The only injuries sustained were a few rope burns and a cut thumb.

The students had just completed a rappelling clinic funded by ASMSU and presented by Ranger 1, a campus organization which practices military tactics, survival training and mountaineering.

The student rappellers learned how to secure descent lines, prepare a Swiss seat and descend a vertical rock face. They practiced from a 10-foot platform where they were instructed to hang from the rope with one hand. They were then told to hang upside-down and right themselves. When the Ranger instructors thought they were ready, the rappellers were allowed to descend from 35-foot platform.

"I couldn't wait to get on the 35-foot platform," said 13-year-old John Schiemann. "I came last year but only did the practice platform."

Some people came to the clinic because Army ROTC friends had told them about rappelling. Others came to try something different.

"I looked in the paper," said Brenda Holly, East Lansing resident, "and it was this or watching TV. There wasn't anything good on TV."

Several Rangers demonstrated the Australian rappel, which involves going down the rope face first without stopping. This allows soldiers to descend quickly using one hand as a guide while firing their rifles with the other hand, Ranger John Aldermann explained.

"We do this clinic as a service to the University," said Marco Gutierrez, a Ranger commander. "We have even taught Boy Scout troops, police officers and fire fighters to rappel."

PIRGIM sponsors anti-registration rally

MSU student opposition to President Carter's proposal to renew draft registration will crystallize Wednesday when the Public Interest Research Group in Michigan sponsors its first rally.

The PIRG-MSU rally will begin at noon in front of Beaumont Tower. Speakers, including state Rep. H. Lynn Jondahl, will be on hand to address a turnout expected to be between 300 and 500 people. Carol Linteau, campus organizer for PIRG-MSU, said the group is looking for other MSU student organizations and individuals that might be interested in helping with the rally.

Persons interested in helping can attend an anti-draft task force meeting at 3 p.m. Tuesday in 4 Student Services Bldg. The task force, composed primarily of PIRGIM volunteers and board members, meets each week to work on anti-draft and draft registration activities.

India subject of discussion

The significance of India's recent political elections will be discussed at 7:30 tonight in 201 International Center.

'ENTERTAINING AND ENDEARING'

'Hampton' a comedy charm

By MARY TINNEY
State News Staff Writer
Lu Ann Hampton Lavery Oberlander, the theatre department's latest effort, is, all in all, entertaining and endearing. It comes, in fact, as a welcome respite from the generally lack-luster offerings of the MSU theatre department this year. The appeal of Lu Ann Hampton lies both in the humorous and moving Preston Jones script and in the talented and engaging cast.

Directed by Kay Robinson, a doctoral student who directed Vanities last season and was praised for her performances in When You Comin' Back Red Ryder and Dracula, Lu Ann Hampton... is the story of a girl growing up in a small Texas town in 1953. The action takes place in three scenes, first the Hampton home in 1953, second the town bar in 1963, and third the Hampton home in 1973.

In 1953 Lu Ann Hampton (Marcia Pihl) is a senior in high school, a cheerleader who is going out with the captain of the basketball team. Her world consists of her mother (Janice Mooney), her brother Skip (Tom Luce), who has just returned from Korea, and her boyfriend Billy Bob (Dean Remington). She dreams of a more exciting life but her mother insists that she be practical and consider business college. As the first scene ends she has just met the man who will become her first husband, her brother's friend Dale Lavery (Rob Jones).

This first scene is the most uneven of the play — probably due to a combination of opening night butterflies on the part of the cast and a difficulty for the audience in getting used to that irritating Southern dialect, it's difficult to understand exactly what anyone's saying. Marcia Pihl is so enthusiastic that it's almost exhausting to watch her. But things calm down — by the second act the performers seem comfortable and natural.

Pihl is a good Lu Ann. She is always in character. It's pleasantly surprising to look at an actor who is not in the limelight for the moment and find her believably involved in what's going on around her. If Pihl's first-act exuberance is a little irritating, the understated way that she handles her character in the third act more than makes up for it.

By the third act Lu Ann has been married twice and has a daughter. Her first husband, Dale Lavery, left her one night in a drunken fit and her second husband, Corky Oberlander (Todd Brenner), has died in a truck accident. She lives at home with her invalid mother and her hopeless alcoholic brother.

Tom Luce, who earned so much well-deserved praise for his role in When You Comin' Back Red Ryder offers the most affecting and brilliant performance in the play as Lu Ann's brother Skip. Everyone knows someone like Skip — the guy living off old war stories, not quite ambitious or smart enough to ever make it past his own front door. By the third act, Skip is a sick, pathetic man. He has attempted suicide once and now Lu Ann takes care of him and makes sure he doesn't go astray. Luce, as was demonstrated in When You Comin' Back Red Ryder, expresses anger and frustration extremely effectively. The transition of his character from an angry, vital young man to an impotent and dependent person old beyond his years is handled with just the right amount of restraint by Luce. He is a fine actor. Special mention should also go to Rob Jones for his nice handling of the part of Dale Lavery and to Peter Couse for his characterization of Red Grover, the cynical owner of the town bar. Grover seems to be the objective "third-eye" in the play that is able to see with depressing clarity the paralysis of the town and of the people who choose to stay there.

Lu Ann Hampton Lavery Oberlander is a comedy, and there are, in fact, quite funny lines throughout. But this play draws a very fine line between comedy and tragedy. Many of the times that I laughed, I laughed because the situation, the people, the town were all so pathetic — and, having grown up in a small town, much of what I saw was painfully familiar.

Congratulations to the cast — this was the best Arena Theatre Production I've seen this season.

Lu Ann Hampton Lavery Oberlander can be seen through Saturday, Feb. 9, in the Arena Theatre. Admission is $2.

Future 'superstar' LPs

Many people have been complaining recently that most recording artists aren't putting out anything new.

Well, The State News has learned the following albums are about to be released, which proves that today's rock stars are as creative and innovative as ever:

Lots of Sex by Donna Summer (Grunt Records). The Queen of Disco gives new meaning to the term "pillow talk" as she grunts and groans her way past our hearts and into our wallets. There isn't any music on the record, but by the end of the album, nobody cares. It's currently very popular at local discos.

The Boss is Black by Bruce Springsteen (Born-to-Run Records). Much to everyone's surprise, rock's answer to James Dean reveals that he is actually a Black bass player from Newark. Strangely, the best song on the album is "Sweet Home Alabama."

Tsk Tsk Tsk by Fleetwood Mac (Broken Records). Here we have FM's long awaited new 17-record set that lists for only $35.98. Unfortunately, the music "lists" as well. Still, there's a swell picture of Stevie Nicks doing exercises on the album cover! (You may want to avoid this album and wait for their next release, tentatively entitled Fleetwood Amuck.)

Arrested Live at Budokan by Paul McCartney and Wings (Saki Records). Everyone's favorite ex-Beatle sings about getting his wings clipped in a Tokyo prison. Includes old Beatle standbys "With A Little Help From My Friends," "Tragical Mystery Tour," and, of course, "Jailhouse Rock."

Ge, I'm Swell by Barry Manilow (Conceit Records). Nobody's favorite crooner gives us more love songs to himself including "My Way," "I'm Just What I Needed," and "Love to Love Me, Babe."

Tanks For The Memories by the Moscow Symphony Orchestra (Boycott Records). This includes some of the most classical Russian symphonies including "On A Nuclear Day You Can See Forever," "War and Piece of Pakistan," "1812 Overture," "I'll Take Sweden," and that Moscow favorite, "Put the Olympics Back In The U.S.S.R..."

The Money Run by the Eagles (Big Buck Records). Linda Ronstadt's old backup band finally shows its true colors on this album, dedicated to its own career. The best cut on the album, of course, is Glenn Frey's touching ballad, "Summer Stock Portfolio."

We Are Family by Charles Manson and the Gang (Sing-Sing Records). America's most popular musical family outside of the Osmonds gives a collection of their best: "Folsom Prison Blues," "Crazy on You," "Happiness Is A Warm Gun," and "Helter Skelter."

New fusion from Bruford and Peacock

By ROSS BOISSONEAU
State News Reviewer

Bill Bruford and Annette Peacock, while hardly household names, are becoming increasingly well known to jazz fans. Bruford, of course, is the former drummer of Yes, King Crimson, and most recently UK; Peacock has spent time with such giants of free jazz as Albert Ayler, Cecil Taylor and Paul Bley. When the two are paired together, the results are enticing. The lack of this cross-pollination on their latest releases is disappointing, but these albums deserve notice nonetheless.

Bruford has always been at the forefront of British progressive music. During his tenure with Yes and Crimson, he helped make some of the most brilliant music ever to emerge from that country. When Robert Fripp called an abrupt halt to Crimson in 1974, Bruford gained experience in a variety of contexts, from Genesis to Gong to National Health. When he teamed up with Allan Holdsworth, Eddie Jobson and former Crimson mate John Wetton, UK became the next supergroup. But differences in temperament split UK after a brilliant debut album.

One of the things that brought about the UK split was the fact that Bruford's first solo album had been released at approximately the same time as UK's. Entitled Feels Good to Me, it contrasted greatly with the UK album. It wasn't electro-shock fusion; rather, it was a warmer, less electric album, less immediately accessible, but one with hidden subtleties and nuances. And four of the cuts featured the voice of one Annette Peacock.

After UK split, Bruford put together another LP, One of a Kind, with his band, Holdsworth, bassist Jeff Berlin, and one of his partners in National Health, keyboardist Dave Stewart. Sadly, One of a Kind wasn't really; while a pleasant enough album, it could have been made by most anyone. Holdsworth departed on the eve of the supporting tour; his replacement was an unknown young Briton, John Clarke. This, then, is the band that toured the States this past summer, and recorded The Bruford Tapes (Polydor PB70028).

Clarke sounds like a clone of Holdsworth, which shifts much of the focus onto Stewart, most recent winner of the Best New Talent poll in Contemporary Keyboard magazine. Stewart's effects are intriguing, as he creates dark, moody sounds with his organ, contrasting with the bright, polished sounds of his synthesizer. The rhythm section is lithe and imaginative; Berlin's bass playing is smooth and supple, while Bruford's drumming is quick, solid, and never given to excess. There are no 20-minute drum solos; the only unaccompanied drumming is a four bar intro to "Sample and Hold."

The rather rough sound of the LP doesn't detract from the music once one becomes used to it, and it serves to give "The Sahara of Snow" and "5G" a tension and immediacy not found on the glossy, studio perfect One of a Kind. "Travels With Myself - And Someone Else" also comes across very strongly, and despite the lack of overdubs, "Hell's Bells" and "Beelzebub" both have a full, melodic sound.

While there are no vocals on the album, Bruford stated in a recent interview that the next LP would feature Berlin doing some singing. Perhaps we'll be treated to the voice of Peacock as well. Until then, however, we'll have to settle for The Perfect Release (Tomato TOM 7044).

The follow-up to her album X-Dreams (which featured Mick Ronson and Bill Bruford, among others), The Perfect Release places less of an emphasis on Peacock's sensuous voice than on her lyrics. Side two is an especially vivid example of this: "Survival" is an 18-minute ode to surviving in today's hectic, drastic, plastic world. It's strictly for the initiated.

Side one is much more accessible. "Love's Out to Lunch" and "Solar System," while not likely to be heard on AM radio, could easily garner airplay on one of the jazz-oriented or progressive stations. Melodic and hummable, they present Peacock's voice in a setting reminiscent of the best of X-Dreams. The band, featuring former Jeff Beck sideman Max Middleton and conga player Daryl Le Que, is strong and sympathetic throughout, if rather bland.

Both The Perfect Release and The Bruford Tapes show off the talents of the headliners. Despite their shortcomings, these releases are valuable indications of the different directions that progressive music, whether it's called jazz, rock or fusion, is capable of going. To get the best of both these artists, pick up Bruford's Feels Good to Me; to get their most personal statements, try Personal Release and The Bruford Tapes.

Eubie! — the hit musical revue celebrating ragtime great Eubie Blake — comes to the MSU Auditorium at 8:15 tonight.

The show is based on Blake's 1921 Broadway musical Shuffle Along, which featured the first all-black cast and production team. The effervescent score is taken from among the 1,500 ragtime numbers Blake has written during his lifetime, and the show features spirited dance revues and tap dance routines by the 14-member cast.

The national touring company that is presenting the show includes 1977 MSU graduate Tony Franklin, and Chris Calloway, the daughter of Cab Calloway.

Tickets for Eubie! range from $6 to $12.50 for the general public and half price for all students, and they are available at the Union Ticket Office.

Modern clarinetist performs on campus

The modern clarinetist Gerard Errante will be on campus today and tomorrow for lecture-demonstrations, master-classes, and a concert. Errante, considered by The New York Times to be a "first-rate player and a lively advocate of the avant-garde," will be involved in four separate events.

Errante will give a demonstration in contemporary clarinet musicianship from 12:20 to 1:50 p.m. today in the Music Auditorium. A lecture-demonstration with new music that features taped sounds will be at 8:15 tonight.

Errante will conduct a master-class for MSU students at 12:20 p.m. Friday. There will be a formal concert that night at 8:15 p.m. Friday's events are also in the Music Auditorium and all events are free.

The concert features Hannay's Pied Piper, Wideberger's Diario, and Boulez's Domaines among others. The public is invited to attend all sessions.

Showbiz news briefs

NEW YORK (AP) — Director William Friedkin defended his film Cruising after a pre-release screening in New York. "I think the vast majority of gay people are not against this film," Friedkin said Monday night. The movie portrays a killer preying on homosexuals.

"The film never intends to show what gay life is about," said Friedkin. "I think gay people are more in danger of the kind of totalitarianism that would want to ban the film, than anything else," he said.

In the film, Al Pacino plays an undercover police officer assigned to investigate murders in which the victims are homosexual. Friedkin said the killer is not necessarily gay and that most of the violence in the film is perpetrated by heterosexuals.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country-rock musician Charlie Daniels is nursing some broken bones at his farm near suburban Mount Juliet.

Daniels, 43, broke his right arm in three places and fractured two fingers in a farm accident last Tuesday. He was released from a hospital here Monday.

It was not known when Daniels will be able to resume his concert schedule, but doctors have said his arm is healing well and no permanent damage was expected.

FORT LEE, N.J. (AP) — There really is a Richard Feder and he really does live in Fort Lee, N.J. But he doesn't write those letters to RoseAnn Roseannadonna, the reporter played by Gilda Radner on NBC Television's Saturday Night Live.

Even if he did write the letter, Feder says he would not be offended by RoseAnn's comeback line: "Whadda you doin' livin' in NEW JERSEY anyway?"

Says Feder, "I make fun of New Jersey. Factories, giant smokestacks, smog, the turnpike . . . it's the pits."

Feder, the vice president of a textile printing plant, rose to secondhand stardom one Saturday when brother-in-law Alan Zwiebel, a writer in the show, told him to watch that night.

"The first time I heard my name, I looked at my wife," Feder recalls. "I debated whether to go under the chair or feel good about it. So I decided to feel good about it."

'Padre Padrone': complex sensitivity

By MARY TINNEY
State News Reviewer

Padre Padrone (My Father, My Master), directed by Paolo and Vittorio Taviani and to be shown by Classic Films this Thursday and Friday, is a film of desolate beauty and power. It is the story of a father and a son, of the father's sadistic tyranny and the boy's escape and eventual return to the nightmarish country of his childhood.

Gavino Ledda, whose autobiography inspired the film, spent most of his life, from age 16 when his determined father yanked him out of school, as a shepherd in the isolated gray Sardinian countryside. Eventually Ledda was able to escape both his father's tyranny and the suffocating atmosphere of Sardinia by joining the Italian army. Still an outcast because of his illiteracy, he studies faithfully and masters Italian, Latin and Greek. Newly confident and independent, Ledda travels back to his homeland in order to come to terms with his past and establish some kind of understanding and reconciliation with his father.

Now a professor of linguistics and a writer, Ledda himself introduces his story — and the film is throughout a rather strange blend of realism and surrealism. The actual Ledda offers a walking cane to the actor who is to portray his father — we follow the father through a door, Ledda disappears and the story begins.

The scenes of Ledda as a boy tending the sheep nervously and attempting to escape the violent wrath of his bitter father, are the most haunting and riveting of the film. As a boy, Ledda's profound feeling of loneliness and his feelings of isolation from his father are signaled by the echoing sound of a gong and the sight of Gavino rocking, first slowly, then with a possessed determination.

The feelings and relationships examined in this film are complex — and the most complex psyche for the audience to penetrate is that of Gavino's father. The man's brutality appears random and purposefully severe — at the same time his face, whenever we see it up close, is calm and compassionate. When he beats Gavino to unconsciousness, he falls to his knees and rocks the boy in his arms singing mournfully. Never once, though, do we see the man exhibit outwardly any kindness and compassion toward Gavino.

Back in Sardinia, Gavino meets his father on the street. The father raises his hand to his head and Gavino winces, expecting to be hit. The father smiles, satisfied, and walks away.

Armed with his new knowledge and confidence, Gavino expects to be able to deal with and understand his father. But he finds he is wrong. They fight, verbally, physically, out of hate and out of love equally. It is the closest thing to intimacy that they will ever experience. As Gavino prepares to leave home in order to preserve peace, we witness the most poignant and powerful expression of this father/son relationship. The father sits on his bed, angry and dejected. Gavino reaches for the suitcase behind his father's feet and pauses for a moment resting his head wearily against his father's leg. The father reaches out his hand to stroke his son's head, then spastically clenches the hand to a fist as the scene fades. It is an alarmingly precise dramatization of the ambiguity of any parent/child relationship.

But not everything about this film is bleak and humorless. There are many scenes of irreverent good-humor. For instance, when the shepherd boys discover sex and begin (quite tastefully by the way) to sodomize mules and chickens, the scene shifts from one scene of lust to another — the villager's passionate grappling followed by the feverish panting of the little boys. The sequence is hilariously effective.

Padre Padrone was, remarkably enough, made in 1977 for Italian television — and at times it seems a little stylistic and showy. But for the most part the movie is sensitive, interesting and extremely powerful.

Padre Padrone will be shown in 109 Anthony Hall at 8 p.m. Thursday and at 7:30 and 9:30 Friday. Admission is $1.50, $1 with an RHA pass.

'Superstar' albums

Illustrated, "I Got Around Until Gas Prices Went Up," and "Barbara Ann Gets Pregnant."

Whack Your Knack by the Knack (Fascist Records). The leader of the New Wave "Power Pop" bands gives you a record you can really get off on. The Knack exploits its Beatles' rip-off hype to the point that when you play their best song, "My Whorona," backwards, it says "Buy this record or we'll kill you."

Silly Drug Songs by Elvis Presley (Qualude Records). This is a collection of little known recordings by The King that indicates he may have been into drugs more than was previously known. Includes "Cocaine," "Go Ask Alice," and "Lucy in the Sky With Diamonds."

Nixon Interviews by David Frost and Richard Nixon (Beat-the-Rap Records). The Trickster rears his ugly recording head once again as he gives us the most useless album since "Roger Whittaker Sings Disco Classics." Naturally, there is an 18-minute gap on the album.

BILL TEMPLETON

'No place like home'

As Judy Garland said at the end of a classic American film, "There's no place like home."

Although the line comes at the end of the movie The Wizard of Oz, the irony the words carry holds special significance for the MSU hockey team. Or at least they could.

Following last weekend's split against the defending NCAA title holder the University of Minnesota, the Spartans have six Western Collegiate Hockey Association games remaining on the schedule.

At this point in the season, MSU finds itself in the eighth spot in the WCHA. Should it finish the season there, it will qualify for the playoffs in March.

A key to whether or not the icers do make the playoffs for the first time in three years is that of their six WCHA games left to be played, five of them are in the friendly confines of Munn Lee Arena.

THE LONE ROAD contest is scheduled for March 1 against the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

A major problem which has haunted coach Ron Mason and his staff this season is a lack of consistency in goal. Mason and his crew have been agonizing over this problem since late December when a knee injury to sophomore goaltender Doug Belland forced senior Mark Mazzoleni into playing both games of the Spartans' weekend series.

Following strong performances in the first game of MSU's recent series with Michigan Tech and the University of Wisconsin, Mazzoleni did not have enough left to come back with an encore.

But Belland came back to play the first two periods of last Saturday's game against the Golden Gophers, a game MSU lost by a 7-1 count. Belland was the victim of a couple of quick goals, and then settled down to play a strong first period. Another of the Spartans problems, that being inconsistency on defense, helped produce four second period goals and sent Belland to the bench for the third period.

With a break of almost two weeks from the rugged league schedule, however, Belland will be afforded the additional rest he no doubt needs. With a healthy Doug Belland back in the starting lineup, MSU will once again find itself with two legitimate and seasoned goaltenders.

BUT PLAYING UP to capabilities had not been a Spartan strength.

Against Michigan Tech three weeks ago, MSU failed to score a power play goal in 10 tries throughout the series. Last Friday night against Minnesota, however, the icers came up with four goals in one game while skating with the extra man.

One night, the MSU defense looks marvelous, the next night it looks as though it could not stop a broom ball team.

The Spartans have the personnel this year to make the playoffs, and I truly believe they will. But to qualify for the post season action, everything will hinge on the current home-stand.

Although it is eighth at this juncture, Mason said one of the team's goals is to finish seventh, a position which, at this time, would pit the icers against Michigan.

"The sheer rivalry between the two schools would put all the pressure on them to beat us," Mason said, "and that would favor us."

Whether or not the Spartans play against Wolverines, Badgers, Fighting Irish, Huskies or anybody for that matter, is all just inane talk if the home stand is not a successful one.

CAGERS AT IOWA, OHIO STATE

Crucial pair for Spartans

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer
Call it a make-or-break weekend.

Beginning with a game at the University of Iowa at 8:30 tonight, the MSU basketball team faces a pair of crucial Big Ten road games. Saturday, the Spartans are at Ohio State University with tipoff set for 8 p.m. Both games will be televised live on WJIM-TV Channel 6 in the East Lansing area.

And the games are crucial indeed. MSU is tied with Iowa and the University of Michigan for fifth place in the Big Ten with 5-5 records. Purdue University holds the top spot alone at 7-3 and one game back of the Boilermakers in a tie for second are the University of Minnesota, Indiana University and Ohio State, all 6-4.

"A split this weekend will keep us alive," said MSU coach Jud Heathcote.

MSU TOPPED THE Hawkeys 75-67 and the Buckeyes 74-54 earlier in the season in Jenison Fieldhouse.

"I think those teams get a little upset when they see us coming," Heathcote said. "We have beaten Iowa six straight times and they have all been close and that galls the Iowa coaching staff and players. And of course, we now have won 14 straight over Ohio State."

Iowa is once again without the services of its All-America guard, Ronnie Lester. The senior from Chicago hurt his knee in the pre-conference portion of Iowa's schedule and missed the first five conference games. He came back and started against MSU, but later re-injured the knee and will sit out this weekend's action.

Without Lester the Hawkeys show incredible balance. Iowa has four scorers who average in double figures, Kevin Boyle the leader with a 12.4 average.

Ohio State has not suffered any injuries, but the Buckeyes still have plummeted from their perch atop the Big Ten and their lofty national ranking.

"WE WERE BEATEN soundly at Michigan State and admittedly, we have just not been playing very good basketball the past three weeks," explained Ohio State coach Eldon Miller. "It would be a mistake to write us off at this point however. We still have eight games left and we are only one game behind the leader."

MSU handled the Buckeyes easily last Thursday as the final margin of 20 indicates. The Buckeyes shot just 33 percent from the floor and Kelvin Ransey had just six points.

"Ohio State was our best performance of the year," Heathcote said. I have always maintained that if we can get ahead, we can use our three-guard offense in a spread situation and pick our shots."

Heathcote offered opinions on other subjects as well.

• On Terry Donnelly: "Terry Donnelly probably played his best back-to-back games of his four years last weekend. His defense on Kelvin Ransey, when he stopped his string of 80 games in which he scored more than 10 points, was super. Terry kind of took charge (against Illinois on Saturday) when Brk (Mike Brkovich) and Kevin (Smith) got three fouls in the first half. He controlled the entire play of our team."

• On Jay Vincent, the Big Ten's player-of-the-week: "Jay's performance Saturday (27 points) was his best of the year. We told him to be a passer, a shooter, a playmaker and a defensive player. He did very well, especially since Illinois was putting two men on him whenever he had the ball."

• On what it will take to win this weekend: "We're going to have to get four or five of our guys playing well at the same time, not just two or three."

• On the Spartan fast break: "It's not non-existent, but it's not as good as last year. Now we are starting to recognize more when it's there and when it's not."

WOMEN GYMNASTS AT BIG TEN'S

Ellis: Individual champ?

By WILL KOWALSKI
State News Sports Writer
The Big Ten trophy and a lot of pride will be on the line this weekend when the MSU women's gymnastics team travels to Champaign, Ill., for the Big Ten Championships.

MSU has won the title the past two years, and Spartan coach Michael Kasavana wants badly to keep the prized trophy in Jenison Fieldhouse for 1980.

"The Big Ten trophy and title are very valuable to us, and we've looked at every aspect of our team in practice this week to ensure it remains here," Kasavana said.

The team finals will be held Friday night while individual competition takes place Saturday afternoon. Aside from retaining the title, Kasavana would also like to see a couple of his performers win individual honors as well.

THE SPARTAN WITH the best show at becoming a Big Ten individual champion is freshman Bonnie Ellis. A native of Syracuse, N.Y., Ellis has placed first in the all-around in four of MSU's seven meets this season and was fourth the other three times. Kasavana proclaims that Ellis is ready to become the premier gymnast in the conference, and Ellis hopes she can prove he is right. "Winning the individual all-around is definitely in the back of my mind," Ellis said. "I'm due for a good meet, but I'll have to be at my best and hit in all the events to have a chance against the strong competition that will be at the meet."

Ellis cited Ohio State University's Donna Silber, the defending all-around champion, as the competitor to beat. Also certain to make their presence known are Mimi Eberly from the University of Illinois, and Terry Schneider and Robin Heubner from the University of Minnesota.

AT LAST YEAR'S championships, which were also held in Champaign, MSU's Lori Boes placed second on the balance beam and Colleen Smith was third in vaulting. Kasavana hopes both can excel this time around as well. He added that Alice Hagan in the floor exercise and Beth Eigel on the uneven bars are both capable of high finishes, too.

The last Spartan to win an individual title was two-time All-America Pam Steckrodt, who won the Big Ten uneven bar championship as a senior in 1978.

The Spartans, averaging close to 133 points a meet, are seeded second going into the championships. Illinois holds down the top spot while Minnesota and Indiana University round out the top four.

"We're going to have to score around 137 (MSU hit 136.45 against Penn State University three weeks ago) to win the team title," Kasavana said.

Shooting over Oakland University's Helen Shereda is MSU senior Mary Vielbig in the Spartans' 93-76 victory Tuesday night at the IM Sports-West arena.

ITNYRE GETS 23 POINTS

Women cagers win 93-76

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Staff Writer

The MSU women's basketball team scored the most points against an opponent in nearly two years Tuesday night, as it defeated Oakland University 93-76 at the IM Sports-West arena before 399 partisan Spartan fans.

The Spartan cagers trailed by as many as six points in the first half of the game, and yet came on strong late in the first stanza to take a 49-47 lead into the locker room at halftime.

Both teams shot at torrid paces throughout the first 20 minutes, with Oakland shooting 56 percent from the floor and the Spartans 53 percent.

In the second half, however, only MSU could maintain its consistency from the floor. The Spartans once again came up with a shooting percentage of 53 percent, while Oakland dipped to a dismal 31 percent.

Senior co-captain Mary Kay Itnyre led the Spartans in scoring with 23 points. Sophomore Nanette Gibson came off the bench to net 17 points, while senior Mary Vielbig and junior Laurie Reynolds scored 12 points apiece.

ITNYRE ALSO EXCELLED on defense, as she held Oakland's Helen Shereda to 21 points and seven rebounds. Shereda had been averaging just over 26 points and 15 rebounds per contest. Both statistics ranked fourth nationally.

"Mary Kay just did an excellent job on Helen," praised MSU head coach Karen Langeland. "After we went into our zone defense in the second half, she seemed to score most of her points, but Mary Kay had an outstanding game both defensively and offensively."

Langeland also noted the play of three other players who made important contributions to the Spartans' ninth win of the year against eight losses.

"Nanette had her best game since her injury, but she's still not 100 percent," Langeland said. "She's coming back, though."

"Deb (sophomore Deb Traxinger) had one of her best games of the year, too. She had 11 assists, handled the ball real well for us and ran the offense."

"And Jackie (freshman Jackie Carter) played great defense. She's been a little weak all year on defense, but it looks like her defense is finally starting to come around."

Carter was also the game's leading rebounder with 10.

The win against Oakland was the cagers' final tuneup before this weekend's Big Ten championships in Madison, Wis.

Swimmers encounter mismatch against weaker CMU squad

This weekend's men's swimming battle between MSU and Central Michigan University would definitely have to be considered a mismatch.

The Spartans are expected to be given little competition in their meet against the Chippewas at 2 p.m. Saturday in Mount Pleasant.

"We are favored to win," MSU coach Dick Fetters said. "We are going to have a few good races, but we should win."

MSU has a 5-4 mark going into the meet. The Spartans are coming off two Big Ten losses to Ohio State University and Indiana University, but their record against Central Michigan is a little more impressive.

Last year Fetters' team defeated the Chippewas 85-28, and has defeated Central Michigan by similar margins the only other two times the teams met.

The prospects look even brighter for the Spartans when one considers that Central Michigan's record in the Mid-American Conference this season is 3-7.

Fetters plans to use the meet to give some of his swimmers a chance to enter events other than their specialties.

The Central Michigan meet will serve only as a short reprieve for the Spartans, who will travel to the University of Michigan, last year's Big Ten runner-up, on Feb. 23 and then compete in the conference championships in Ann Arbor March 6 through 8.

Fetters was asked to assess his team's top performers so far this season.

"Bob Lundquist and Mike Borre have been our most consistent winners in the breaststroke and individual medley respectively," he said.

Though the Spartans have yet to qualify any swimmers for the NCAA final, Fetters said George Kruggel's and Lundquist's times were only a few seconds away from the national standards.

Tracksters head south

The Mason-Dixon Games held this weekend in Louisville, Ky., are expected to lure some of the country's best men and women tracksters.

Among them will be several members of the MSU women's indoor track team.

The Mason-Dixon Games always considered one of the largest and most competitive invitationals on the indoor track circuit, will consist of a collegiate team meet Friday and an individual meet on Saturday.

Big Ten rivals Indiana and Ohio State universities and the University of Wisconsin are expected to give the Spartans their best competition Friday.

MSU will have four entries in the individual meet on Saturday.

Spartans Pam Sedwick and Judy Brown will run in the 500-meters while Lisa Berry will compete in the mile. Diane Williams and Carol Charles will run the 800-meter sprint relay, but as of Wednesday coach Nell Jackson was not sure who would run with them.

Sprinters Cheryl Gilliam and Desiree Pritchett are both injured. Gilliam is still suffering from shin splints that kept her out of the Spartans' second place finish at the Pittsburgh Invitational last weekend. Pritchett strained a hamstring muscle in her outstanding 5.9 second victory in the 50-yard dash in that same meet. Jackson, however, said Pritchett will be back next weekend.

Committee approves merit pool

By MOLLY MIKA
State News Staff Writer
A proposed merit increase pool for county employees was approved Tuesday by the finance committee of the Ingham County Board of Commissioners.

"In the past, there was never any real control on the amount being spent," he said.
Under the proposal, each department head would submit merit increase requests for outstanding employees to the personnel committee.

salary line-item total in 1980, Young said.
The proposal awaits final approval by the Board of Commissioners.
In other business, the finance committee approved tax exemptions for new facilities at Craft Printers, 2017 Turner St., and at Federal Forge Inc., 2807 S. Logan St.

quested an abatement of half the taxes for 12 years on a new $1.27 million facility, and 10 percent of taxes for 12 years on a $1.8 million bill for rehabilitating existing facilities.
Joe Nanaa, treasurer of Federal Forge Inc., told the committee an expansion of the manufacturing company would increase employment, city taxes, and operating revenue in Lansing.
The committee approved the tax exemption, with commissioners Mitchell and Grebner abstaining.

percent of total costs for Federal Forge," Mitchell said. "It's very minimal savings and doesn't warrant the exemption."
The proposal, if approved by the Board of Commissioners, will be channeled through the Department of Commerce and the State Tax Commission.
If approved, an exemption would be granted this year, Massa said.

Man gets life sentence

SAGINAW (UPI) — Keith R. Pontseele has been sentenced to life in prison for the 1978 sniping death of a 12-year-old boy police theorized he mistook as a rival for the affections of his teenage girlfriend.
Pontseele, a 30-year-old Merrill bartender, was convicted in December of second degree murder and two counts of assault with a dangerous weapon in a shooting attack from atop a building in downtown Merrill.

The prosecution charged that Pontseele perched on the rooftop early in the morning of Sept. 16, 1978, and fired a .30-06 rifle into a group of children standing on the street below.
One of the children, Billy Mills, 12, died of two bullet wounds in the back. Among the group was Delphine Merritt, 16, described by prosecutors as Pontseele's sometimes girlfriend.

Assistant Prosecutor Patrick M. Meter suggested at Pontseele's trial that Pontseele may have mistaken the boy — described as large for his age — as a possible rival.
Pontseele was sentenced Tuesday by Saginaw County Circuit Judge Hazen R. Armstrong.

Senate delays subway resolution

By LANI WIEGAND
United Press International
Senate bickering over the controversial Detroit subway proposal temporarily derailed a resolution releasing $950,000 in state funds for the project's engineering study Wednesday.
The upper chamber voted narrowly to delay action on the resolution and Sen. David Plawewski, D-Deerborn, voiced concern about the measure's prospects.
"It's going to be very close," Plawewski said. "I'm not sure if we'll be able to pass it" on Thursday.
State Budget Director Gerald Miller will present the 1980-81 state budget to the upper chamber Thursday and some lawmakers fear the prospect of such a dry presentation may keep some senators from attending the session.
Approval of the resolution by both the Senate and House would mean the beginning of the first solid steps toward building the subway and accompanying aboveground rail and bus service.

Plans now call for a combination of underground train and aboveground rail running out Woodward Avenue from downtown Detroit and connecting with bus service outside the city.
Although the federal government will pick up most of the cost of the estimated $1 billion project, including chipping in about $4 million for the preliminary engineering work, the state must pay one-fifth of the transit system's price tag.
"Where is the . . . money coming from, who's paying for it?" asked Sen. John Welborn, R-Kalamazoo, who said subway users should support the system.

book," Welborn said.
Sen. Robert Geake, R-Northville, called on his Republican colleagues to "set aside short-sighted provincial considerations" and approve the resolution which he said would spur economic growth throughout the state.
Another southeast Michigan lawmaker opposed the project on rather novel grounds.
"I'm not excited about voting for a tomb," said Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Detroit, who admitted he is claustrophobic.
"I like to see sunlight and open a window," he said.

Embassy, ministry still held

By EDUARDO VAZQUEZ BECKER
Associated Press Writer
SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Armed leftists occupying the Spanish Embassy vowed Wednesday to hold the building and eight hostages, including the Spanish ambassador, "until our demands have been satisfied.
Leftist high school students also continued their occupation of the Education Ministry, holding Education Minister Eduardo Colindres and hundreds of other hostages.
The students invaded the ministry Tuesday demanding a 40 percent reduction in tuition at private colleges, expanded enrollment at free public universities and dismissal of some ministry officials. A spokesman for the students said they ranged in age from 13 to 18 and that the occupation was peaceful. It was not known if they were armed.
Crowds chanting slogans gathered at the Spanish Embassy on Wednesday. Some brought bags of food for the leftists, members of the Feb. 28 Popular Leagues, of LP-28.
The militants released three Salvadoran employees of the embassy Tuesday night but were still holding Ambassador Victor Sanchez Mesa, embassy counselor Juan Carlos de Ranero, chancellor Manuel de la Helguera, three Spanish industrialists who were visiting when it was seized.
The ambassador told an Associated Press reporter, allowed into the embassy that the Red Cross was supplying food to the hostages and had allowed a doctor to visit him. He has a history of mild heart problems.
The three diplomats said they slept on couches in the ambassador's office on the second floor of the two-story structure. The other hostages are held in an office on the ground floor.
Sanchez Mesa said the militants received telephoned threats from rightists who vowed to burn the building if the leftists did not free the hostages and leave.
The leftists demand that Spain break relations with El Salvador, that a human rights team from the Organization of American States visit the country and that four of their comrades allegedly arrested over the weekend and a fifth seized Tuesday be freed.

Gacy 'rational, evil man,' prosecutor tells jury

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO — A prosecutor told a jury Wednesday that John W. Gacy Jr. used a "rope trick" to strangle his victims and "snuffed out 33 lives because they were inconvenient to him."

Assistant State's Attorney Robert Egan, in opening arguments before a jury of seven men and five women, said the killings of the 33 young men and boys between the ages of 15 and 21 were premeditated. He described the former remodeling contractor as a "rational, evil man."

Gacy, 37, accused of more murders than anyone else in this country's history, sat motionless during the opening statement. He has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

Defense attorney Robert Motta, in his opening statement, said the crimes were "acts of an insane mind... acts which Gacy (couldn't) stop, couldn't control. He became a compulsive killer."

Among the spectators who filled the courtroom of Circuit Judge Louis B. Garippo were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Piest, their son Kenneth, 26, and daughter, Kerry, 23.

The body of Robert Piest, 15, was among four recovered from rivers and linked to Gacy. The other corpses were found on Gacy's property, 26 dug up from a 30-inch-high crawl space under his ranch-style dwelling.

IN EACH CASE, Egan told the jurors, Gacy used a "rope trick" in which he put a rope around the neck of the victim to make a tourniquet and strangle him. He stuffed a cloth in the mouths of some, Egan said, to "keep the blood from dripping out the mouth and nose."

Egan said that on the night of Dec. 11, 1978, when Gacy was at a drugstore in Des Plaines talking about remodeling work, Piest overheard him say he was going to hire youths for summer work.

Piest's mother was to have picked him up later that night to celebrate her birthday with the family, but her son never showed up.

Piest had told co-workers he was going to see Gacy about a summer job and drove away with him, Egan said. Gacy and Piest, the prosecutor said, eventually drove to the defendant's home where Gacy tried to have sex with the youth, who refused.

However, Gacy forced him to have oral sex and showed him the "rope trick." The youth was dead within 10 seconds, the prosecutor said.

Eventually officers got a search warrant and a receipt for developing film that belonged to Piest's girlfriend was found in the house.

THE NEXT DAY, police put a stakeout on Gacy.

Egan said that one of the officers went into the bathroom and when the heat came on he noticed an odor coming up from the vent.

Later, a youth told police of being employed by Gacy and digging drainage ditches under the house. Gacy told the youth to leave mounds alone down there, Egan said.

When authorities started digging under the house, Egan said, they found "bodies, bodies and bodies, day after day after day."

Egan pointed out that some bodies were found in trenches that had been dug under the house and quoted Gacy as saying, "I wanted to have graves available."

Egan said that Gacy gave statements to authorities in comfortable surroundings in which he remembered the names and details about them.

"He (Gacy) was very responsive, gave details, was engaging at times and laughing at times" as he gave the lengthy statement, Egan said.

Egan said Gacy said he killed because he thought the victims, if they lived, would tell the neighbors and others that he was a homosexual.

License tab sales slow

By TIM JOHNSON

New Michigan license plate tab sales have been lagging throughout the state and the Secretary of State office in East Lansing is no exception.

Albert Orsborn, the office manager, said that 1980 sales of tabs are running slow this year and his office is prepared for what will hopefully be the last "March rush" ever in the state.

"Sales are usually slow in years when tabs are issued instead of plates," Orsborn said.

"In 1979, the rush wasn't as bad because everybody wanted the new license plates," Orsborn added.

This year, as in past years, the deadline for passenger cars and motorcycles is April 1, while the deadline for pick-ups and vans is March 1.

MICHIGAN IS INITIATING the staggered-registration system, under which registration of vehicles will occur year-round and the registration will expire on the Owner's birthday.

"About 45 days before the individual's birthday, a form will be sent to him and the procedure can be done through the mail," Orsborn said.

When Michigan drivers receive their 1980 vehicle registrations, they will be valid from seven to 19 months, depending on when the individual's birthday is and what type of vehicle the individual owns.

Each vehicle owner will receive two tabs, one with the year on it and the other with the month of the person's birthday on it.

"People who are born in November will receive a 1980 tab that is valid for seven months from April to November," Orsborn said.

"Those born in October who own passenger cars will receive a 1981 tab that is valid from April 1, 1980, until their birthday in October 1981," he added.

The different length of registration is due to the fact that this year and in previous years, new tabs or plates were available to the public beginning in November.

VEHICLE REGISTRATION WILL be valid for one year, once the transition is completed in October 1981.

Several other states use the staggered-registration system, which is expected to be much more convenient for Michigan drivers.

According to the Secretary of State office, the new system will also save the state money by cutting out overtime which was needed in the past for the "March rush."

Students from Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties may find it beneficial to purchase their 1980 tabs in East Lansing.

Tri-county residents must pay an additional $2.50 tax for the mass-transit plan that is in the works for the Detroit area.

"We had many parents purchase tabs at our office when they brought their children back to school after Christmas break," Orsborn said.

Security deposit bill could cost landlords

By TIM SIMMONS
State News Staff Writer

A bill requiring landlords to pay tenants 5 percent annually on security deposits was voted out of a House committee Wednesday and will not go to the full House.

House Bill 4037 left the House Consumers Committee on a 7-4 vote, but is expected to receive strong opposition from landlords throughout the state, said Dan Sharp, administrative assistant to Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, who sponsored the bill.

Landlords would have to pay tenants 5 percent of the security deposit per year in addition to the original deposit at the end of occupancy, if the bill passes as written.

If a tenant lives in a unit for more than three years the payments would have to be made at the end of each year, Sharp said.

"LANDLORDS WHO OWN a total of five units or less are exempt right now," he added. "There is no minimum amount of time that a tenant is required to rent."

Supporters of the bill are expected to add an amendment which would change the 5 percent figure to a floating annual interest rate, Sharp said.

"This way if the interest rate goes up, the rate paid to tenants will also go up," he said.

"Any tenant who pays $500 to $1,000 in security deposits should get interest," Bullard said. "After all, the landlords are probably making 10 percent a year on that money. It is a basic justice principle."

The bill has been in committee for almost seven weeks and only stands about "a 50-50 chance" of passage in the House, Sharp said.

"THE LANDLORDS ARE going to go berserk," Sharp said. "Landlord opposition is going to be statewide and they may be able to defeat it on the floor."

Sharp and Bullard urged students to lobby for the bill to encourage its passage.

"Students create a natural state-wide base for lobbying because they come from different hometowns," Bullard said. "If they send letters to representatives with their hometown addresses the legislators may take notice."

Chrysler negotiates with Peugeot for loan

DETROIT (UPI) — Chrysler Corp. said Wednesday it is negotiating with P.S.A. Peugeot-Citroen on a variety of cooperative measures to strengthen the French automaker's U.S. market position in exchange for a $100 million loan.

Chrysler said it would try to reach the necessary agreements with Peugeot, Europe's largest automaker, by June 1.

Ultimately, the trade association could result in U.S. production of a car by Chrysler based on studies already made by Peugeot. Such a car could be marketed here under both Chrysler and Peugeot names, Chrysler said.

Peugeot also may eventually supply diesel engines to Chrysler, the company said.

Chrysler said Wednesday it is negotiating with P.S.A. Peugeot-Citroen on a variety of cooperative measures to strengthen the French automaker's U.S. market position in exchange for a $100 million loan.

Chrysler said it would try to reach the necessary agreements with Peugeot, Europe's largest automaker, by June 1.

Ultimately, the trade association could result in U.S. production of a car by Chrysler based on studies already made by Peugeot. Such a car could be marketed here under both Chrysler and Peugeot names, Chrysler said.

Peugeot also may eventually supply diesel engines to Chrysler, the company said.

UNDERSTANDINGS ALSO WILL be sought on ways Chrysler can help Peugeot beef up its U.S. marketing apparatus and the variety of its imported vehicle offerings.

Chrysler owns approximately 15 percent of Peugeot's outstanding stock. That equity will be used as security for the $100 million short-term loan, which Chrysler said would serve as badly needed interim financing while it pulls together the $1.43 billion in private funds it needs to qualify for $1.5 billion in loan guarantees from the U.S. government.

Chrysler said that if the two firms are unable to reach agreements on the new association by this summer, Peugeot will be given an option to buy back the 1.8 million shares by the end of the year.

Estimates of the value of the stock have been placed at more than $200 million. The sale of its Peugeot holdings has long been considered as one ready means for Chrysler to raise some of the cash it desperately needs this year to stay afloat.

The agreement, unlike the recently announced trade association between the French automaker Renault and American Motors Corp., would not involve a purchase by Peugeot of Chrysler stock. Both companies would remain firmly independent.

CHRYSLER CHAIRPERSON Lee A. Iacocca said the two parties signed a letter of intent to try to reach the necessary agreements by June 1.

"This signing of this letter of intent represents another step forward in Chrysler's recovery plan," Iacocca said. "The $100 million loan constitutes an important portion of the interim financing we need until we have the entire financial package in place."

"The potential of future cooperation on certain products and components is a strong indication of our intention to work closely with our Peugeot partners as we gear up for the markets of the 1980s."

A Peugeot spokesperson said the accord "will give Peugeot the possibility to attack the American market in a more aggressive way than they ever have been able to do before."

The county adopted zero-based budgeting last year in order to review the entire operation of county government each year.

Zero-based budgeting requires that every expenditure be justified on the basis of services provided before funds are allocated.

NATIONAL LAMPOON

Anniversary ISSUE

You've heard all the wonderful stories about the seventies; now read about the real and disturbing stories that we experienced in the seventies. It's all in the February 1980 special tenth anniversary issue of National Lampoon - plus pages of the winners of the National Lampoon contest of nude girl friends with buckets over their heads.

And for fans and collectors, the issue will include a complete history of National Lampoon from its beginning, including its special projects, such as record albums, radio shows, live comedy productions and, of course, National Lampoon's Animal House - how they came about and how we cornered the market on the best comedy performers, such as John Belushi, Gilda Radner, Chevy Chase, Bill Murray, and many more.

It's all in the February issue of National Lampoon - on sale now.
