Trudeau, Liberals headed for victory

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

TORONTO (AP) — Pierre Elliott Trudeau appeared headed back to the leadership of Canada Monday as early election returns gave his Liberal Party a commanding lead in eastern provinces and indicated a national sweep.

The Canadian Press declared the Liberals elected over the Progressive Conservatives of Prime Minister Joe Clark. Two national television networks — the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and the commercially operated Canadian Television — projected a majority government for Trudeau.

For Trudeau, 60 and prime minister from April 1968 to May 1979, this would be his fourth term as government chief. He had said this was his last election and that he would step down in two or three years. He handily won re-election to his Parliament seat in his Mount Royal district in Montreal.

The Liberal tide against Clark's Progressive Conservatives began in the eastern Maritime provinces, where Trudeau's team took four House of Commons seats that had been held by Conservatives in Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia, and swept across staunchly Liberal Quebec into all-important Ontario, which has 95 seats in the 282-seat House.

"Obviously we're very encouraged and very pleased," the national Liberal Party president, Alasdair Graham, said of the early results.

BUT THE KEY was expected to be the results in Ontario, which has 95 seats. The party electing the most members to the House of Commons forms the government and the party leader becomes prime minister.

Canadians, electing 281 members of the House of Commons with one more to be elected in March, were deciding whether to give the young Clark the "fair chance" he had asked for to carry out his tough economic program, or to call in the veteran Trudeau for an encore as leader.

Pre-election opinion polls pointed to a victory by the 60-year-old Trudeau, whose Liberal government was defeated by Clark's Conservatives in elections last May. Beginning in the eastern Maritime provinces, through Quebec and Ontario, voter turnout was generally reported moderate to heavy. The weather in the east was mostly fair and not too cold.

A MIXTURE OF SNOW and freezing rain in Western Canada may have been cutting into the turnout there.

More than 10 million people — over 70 percent of those eligible — were expected to vote in 281 parliamentary districts. The House of Commons has 282 seats, but one district's election was postponed until March because of the death of a candidate. The last national Gallup poll gave the Liberals a 48 to 28 percent edge over the Conservatives, with the socialist New Democrats holding 23 percent. Another survey, by Canadian Television, showed the Liberals with a 10-point edge.

Despite this, the Conservatives predicted an upset victory, saying Canadians did not want to return to a Liberal government so quickly after 11 years under Trudeau.

Analysts considered Ontario, Canada's most populous province, the key. Its 95 seats account for one-third of Parliament, and its voters swing easily from one party to another.

THE PUNDITS DUBBED it "the 18-cent campaign," because the key issue was a proposed austerity budget in which Clark called for an unpopular increase of 18 cents a gallon in the gasoline tax. There was another underlying issue — Clark himself. For reasons ranging from his narrow background, to his youth, to his lanky awkwardness, the 40-year-old Westerner had serious "image" problems and had drawn little public confidence.

The Clark minority government fell last Dec. 13 when the Liberals and New Democrats and five members of the rightist Social Credit Party.

Trudeau had announced his intention to step down as Liberal leader this year, but he withdrew his resignation in December and began the campaign.

The Conservatives, on the defensive for the painful economic steps they proposed, adopted as their slogan: "Real change needs a fair chance."

Israeli embassy opens

By MAGDA EL-SANGA
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt — Israel quietly opened its embassy in Cairo on Monday, its first in an Arab nation. The sight of the blue and white Star of David was greeted with some smiles, some tears — and loud wails of mourning.

A dispute over Jewish settlements in occupied lands, the Arab boycott of the Egyptian-Israeli peace and questions about the speed of the normalization of relations loomed in the background.

"I am sure that other Arab leaders will join our peace process," said the Syrian-born Israeli charge d'affaires, Yosef Hadass, in a statement he read in Hebrew, Arabic and English. He then uncovered a brass plaque that said "Embassy of Israel" in the three languages.

The brief ceremony marking the opening of the Israeli embassy was attended by about 30 Egyptian Jews, 44 from the United Synagogues of America and the Woman's League for Conservative Judaism and several Egyptian diplomats.

DOZENS OF POLICE patrolled the streets outside the two-story building that rents for $4,200 a month in the Dokki residential district on the west bank of the Nile.

Neighbors watched from windows and doorways, but passersby were urged to keep moving during the sidewalk ceremony.

Next door, at an Arab women's student hotel, wailing and screaming could be heard as the Israeli flag was unfurled. Fifteen students watched the ceremony from the windows. One teen-ager closed her eyes and lowered her head; another wept openly as the State of David appeared.

Other neighbors said they welcomed the (continued on page 2)

U.S., IRAN APPROVE

Commission gets go ahead

By the Associated Press

The United States and Iran have accepted the membership of a commission to investigate the former shah and the panel will go to Tehran in a few days, the United Nations announced Monday. There was no word on how or when this might bring release of the hostages held in the U.S. Embassy there.

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim was quoted by a Vienna newspaper as saying the hostages would be released "in the course of the commission's work. Otherwise one would not have received the agreement of the two sides."

According to Die Presse's Tuesday edition, Waldheim said the commission's report would be handed over to him and he would forward it to the U.N. Security Council for whatever action it saw fit.

The commission to investigate Iranian grievances has been considered one of the steps that would lead to release of the approximately 50 Americans who have been held hostage at the occupied embassy in Tehran since Nov. 4.

U.N. SPOKESPERSON Rudolf Stajduhar, who announced U.S. acceptance of the members on Friday, said a Tehran official was given Waldheim Iran's acceptance by telephone from Tehran. He said Waldheim was awaiting telexed confirmation before officially announcing the panel members' names.

Stajduhar told reporters the timing of the hostages' release as part of a package deal had not been finalized, but the commission's guidelines had been completed.

Waldheim met separately with U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and the charge d'affaires of the Iranian U.N. mission, Jamal Shemirani.

The Washington officials said a major part of the Vance-Waldheim agenda was making certain both sides understood precisely the rules under which the commission will conduct its investigation of the shah's regime. They described the commission as part of a fragile understanding with Iran that is supposed to lead eventually to release of the hostages. They said Bani Sadr's three other requirements do not necessarily violate the terms of the understanding.

In addition to the investigation, and an admission of U.S. interference in Iran's internal affairs, Bani Sadr says Iran requires a pledge that the United States will not interfere again, and will not interfere in Iran's efforts to extradite the shah and recover his fortune.

THE ADMINISTRATION HAS made a concession to Iran by agreeing to creation of the commission without first obtaining the release of the hostages.

The commissioners, Stajduhar told reporters, would be meeting in Geneva and would fly to Tehran this week.

Two men among Waldheim's reported — but still unannounced — choices for the commission were also on his appointment list for meetings Monday — Algeria's U.N. ambassador, Mohamed Bedjaoui, and Venezuela's former ambassador to Washington, Andres Aguilar.

The others reported in line for the commission were Adib Daoudy, foreign policy advisor to the president of Syria; H.W. Jayewardene, 63-year-old lawyer brother of the president of Sri Lanka, and Edmond Louis Pettiti, former president of the Paris Bar Association.

In Omaha, Neb., an American Roman Catholic priest just returned from Tehran said if the United States refuses to "acknowledge its guilt for the abuses of the past 25 years" in Iran, the American hostages "could be there for years."

THE REV. DARRELL RUPPER was one of 49 Americans to visit Iran the last two weeks with the Committee for American-Iranian Crisis Resolution.

In Switzerland, a newspaper reported two Iranian air force generals and 10 other officers were executed following an abortive plot last December against the lives of revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and other leaders.

Zurich's Neue Zurcher Zeitung, in an article by its Middle East affairs specialist, said new purges of the Iranian armed forces "which promise to be more energetic than all previous ones" appear to be linked to the discovery of the attempted coup.

The paper said recent demonstrations, including sit-ins by army members at Tehran University and by members of the air force in a Tehran mosque, were assumed to be protests of the purges. It said Sadeq Khalkhali, the chief Islamic prosecutor, led the purges.

Hostage talks 'on track' despite Iranian demands

WASHINGTON (AP) — The diplomatic release of the American hostages in Iran is "on track" although there is no firm timetable, State Department officials said Monday.

The officials, speaking privately, said the United States probably will not be certain about the release of the estimated 50 hostages seized during the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran Nov. 4 "until we see the whites of their eyes."

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance flew to New York Monday to confer with U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim, who has assumed the role of chief mediator between the United States and Iran.

Vance was expected to report to President Carter, either in person or by telephone, after returning to Washington from New York.

The officials said additional demands from Iran, voiced Monday by President Abolhassan Bani Sadr, do not necessarily violate the terms of the understanding.

Bani Sadr, in a statement broadcast by Tehran radio, said in addition to the investigation, Iran would require an admission from the United States that it had interfered in Iran's internal affairs, a pledge not to do so again, and a promise not to interfere with Iran's efforts to extradite the shah from his refuge in Panama and recover his fortune.

So far, the Carter administration has refused to apologize for past American activities in Iran. But, officials said Monday, there are ways it could issue a statement that, without directly apologizing, might satisfy Bani Sadr's demands.

The administration might, for example, refer to the book recently written by former Central Intelligence Agency operative Kermit Roosevelt, which recounts the CIA role in the coup that put the shah in power in 1953.

As for the shah's extradition, there is no treaty of extradition between Panama and Iran, and State Department officials have said they will consider the subject a matter strictly between Iran and Panama once the hostages are released.

Post open in women's programs

By LESA DOLL
State News Staff Writer

After 17 months of operating without a director, the position of acting director to the Division of Women's Programs has been posted, Ralph Bonner, director of Human Relations announced Monday.

The posting will enable candidates to be nominated to the temporary position. Nominations must be submitted by Feb. 29.

Representatives from 12 women's groups on campus will participate in nominations and screening for the office, with the administration having final decision.

Bonner said the final selection will be made within 45 days.

THE POSTING FOR an acting director of women's programs follows a year and a half long search for a permanent director, which resulted from the firing of Mary Pollack from the position in June 1978. Pollack had been criticized for being too vocal in areas including Title IX and sex discrimination in athletics.

After Pollack's termination, the assistant director Karen Cottledge, who filled the role of acting director, resigned in March 1979. Since that time, graduate students and various University personnel have been performing the duties of the acting director.

Last year, the department of Human Relations underwent an extensive search for a full-time director with the assistance of a representative committee of women's groups. The women's groups and administration decided on a candidate in October 1979, but the woman selected turned down the position.

Bonner said the major change between the new position and the position Pollack held is removal of Title IX and affirmative action concerns from the Office of Women's Programs. This change is the result of a revamping of the University administrative structure at the request of former MSU President Edgar L. Harden in October 1978.

The duties of the acting director will include "serving as a reference point for consideration and redress of matters of interest and concern to women as faculty, students and staff; liaison with the three women's advisory committees, provide consultation and assistance on the recruitment of women for academic and non-academic employment; provide consultation and assistance on the recruitment of women as participants in the University's programs; conduct and participate in workshops, conferences, programs and classes about the issues affecting women," according to the job description.

"We need to have a kind of person that can not only lead but will serve as a focal point for women's issues at MSU," he said. Qualifications required of the acting director include a bachelor's degree in either social science or labor and industrial relations or an equivalent combination of education and experience, at least five years of relevant professional experience in related areas, and familiarity with the academic and administrative structure of the University. A master's degree is desired.

Bonner said the acting director will be named to the position for "no less than six months, or longer than 18." During this time, the search will continue for a permanent director.

"It's very conceivable that that person may be the final candidate, depending on performance," he said.

It's one thing to reason with somebody who happens to be blocking one's path, but when Ma Duck and her flock decide to journey across the road, Kevin Hill of Lansing had absolutely no say in the matter. Hill waited a full five minutes for the ducks to make their crossing at the Potter Park Zoo exit Monday.

Afghans kill 200 Soviet troops, report says

By The Associated Press

Moslem Afghan rebels killed 200 Soviet troops during a 10-day battle that culminated with the rebels retaking the airport in a provincial capital in northeastern Afghanistan, a Pakistani newspaper reported Monday.

The Daily Jang of Karachi said the rebels suffered 50 killed during fighting in Faizabad, but they also claimed to have captured 15 Soviet troops, shot down two Soviet fighter planes, destroyed 17 tanks and four helicopters, and seized rifles, machine guns and ammunition.

Fighting for control of the city 195 miles north-northeast of the capital of Kabul was still going on, the newspaper said, but the rebels had the city surrounded. Faizabad is located in Badakhshan Province where, Western analysts have said, rebels are providing some of the stiffest resistance for Afghan government and Soviet troops.

The newspaper report could not be confirmed independently, and the number of Soviet casualties appeared exaggerated.

Defense Department analysts in Washington said the Soviet intervention force of some 90,000 men has suffered 2,500 casualties, only a small fraction of them deaths, since the first troops were sent to Afghanistan seven weeks ago. Whenever possible, analysts in Washington have said, the Soviets are leaving the fighting to Afghan army troops.

In other developments Monday: Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance announced he would be going to Rome and Paris, in addition to Bonn and London, for consultations with U.S. allies on the situations in Iran and Afghanistan.

The talks in France were regarded as particularly sensitive. Last week, France pulled out of a meeting of Western allies in Bonn, saying the United States was trying to turn it into an anti-Soviet forum.

Vance's trip, which begins Tuesday night in Bonn, will be in progress on the Feb. 20 deadline President Carter has set for the Soviets to withdraw their troops from Afghanistan. If they don't — and they show no sign of doing so — Carter has said he will urge an international boycott of the 1980 Summer Olympic Games set for Moscow.

Discussion of further retaliatory measures was expected to figure prominently in Vance's meetings with the foreign ministers of Britain, France, Italy and Germany.

Assistant U.S. Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke, who is in Manila, said the United States was "preparing and undertaking serious countermeasures" to blunt the perceived Soviet threat, but did not detail the steps.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko urged a resumption of arms control talks in spite of the countries' differences over Afghanistan. Congress readily complied with a Carter administration request to suspend consideration of the SALT treaty after the Soviets moved into Afghanistan.

Israeli embassy opens

Israelis, although a few expressed concern about the possibility of terrorist attacks by those who oppose the peace-making process.

The Egyptian Jews offered a prayer of thanks at Cairo's downtown synagogue before attending the flag-raising, then were invited inside for some specially blessed wine and peeled pistachios.

Egypt's state-controlled news media played down the embassy inauguration and the first concrete example of normalization, while giving big headlines to stories criticizing Jewish settlement plans in the West Bank.

IN AN EDITORIAL, the daily newspaper Al Ahran criticized Eliahu Ben Elissar, Israel's ambassador-designate to Cairo scheduled to arrive on Sunday.

Al Ahran accused Ben Elissar of undiplomatic behavior for saying Egypt and the United States had no right to say where Jews could settle.

A recent Israeli Cabinet decision to allow Jews to settle in the Arab town of Hebron on the West Bank prompted denunciations from both Washington and Cairo, warning that the move threatened the Palestinian autonomy negotiations.

The Internship MBA
"an education that works"

The Internship MBA Program offers college graduates an intensive one-year educational experience which combines coursework leading to the MBA degree and two ten-week internships with Chicago area business firms. Tuition costs are partially underwritten by participating firms. The purpose of the Program is to provide recent college graduates, and others exploring career alternatives, with both the MBA degree and the experience needed to make intelligent career decisions.

In addition to coursework and the internships, students are involved in a program of activities designed to assist them in achieving an informed and realistic approach to their career planning. To this end, students meet informally with executives representing a variety of firms and job categories, and participate in individual and group career planning sessions designed to hone their skills in resume preparation, job searching, and interviewing.

The School seeks motivated, accomplished and well-rounded individuals who will be challenged by the demands of a rigorous working/educational program. The competitive admissions process draws on a variety of indicators of accomplishments, including GMAT scores, academic achievement, recommendations, prior work experience, non-academic interests and activities, as well as motivation for undertaking the Program.

Keller Graduate School is fully accredited by the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools. Financial assistance is available to accepted students.

Even tow trucks have troubles, as one from Rogers Marathon in East Lansing found out Monday. The truck was in the process of towing an auto from the parking lot near the Physics Building when the front wheels of the car unlocked. The vehicle veered into the car on the left, which knocked into two others. All of the autos except the one being towed were owned by MSU staff.

ONLY HOUSE IN AREA

Battered women's shelter fills up

By ROLAND WILKERSON
State News Staff Writer

A shelter for battered women, which opened Sunday, will most likely be filled by the end of this week, said Marcia Macomber, executive director of the Council Against Domestic Assault.

The shelter, which is operated by CADA, may house up to 20 women and their children escaping violent family situations, Macomber said.

The house may also be used by women who are not married and are trying to get away from a volatile relationship, Macomber added.

She said she expected the house to fill quickly because battered women in Lansing have no other place to seek refuge from violent mates.

MARRIED WOMEN WITH children are in an especially tough situation because it is "much harder to find a place to go with a couple of kids in tow," Macomber said.

To ensure security, victims will be picked up at a pre-arranged point and then transported to the shelter in order to keep the location from becoming common knowledge, Macomber said. The number to call if assistance is needed, is 372-5572.

Macomber estimated that most women would live in the shelter for about two weeks. She stressed, however, that two weeks was a fairly short time period when "you're trying to put your life together after it's been reduced to a shambles."

Although a shelter for battered women has been contemplated for many years, positive action began four years ago following an Ingham County Women's Commission and Board of Health study which indicated that such a shelter was needed.

CADA recently obtained a special use permit from the Lansing City Council, which was needed before the shelter could be put into operation.

LAST SEPTEMBER City Council gave the tentative go ahead when it gave CADA six months to bring the shelter in compliance with city housing codes.

At a public hearing last summer, the proposed shelter drew mixed response from Lansing residents. Concerned citizens presented

City Council with a petition asking that the special use permit be rejected.

Those residents said they feared for their own safety in the neighborhoods, saying they did not want "irate husbands looking for their wives" stalking the area.

Other residents feared there would be too many women living in the shelter, thus creating a "slum."

Macomber says that CADA will work with neighborhood residents and other community people to work out any problems that may arise because of the shelter.

West Coast storms kill 24 people

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer

A deluge in its sixth day carved away more California hillsides and thousands homeless at an inundated Navy base Monday as "one storm right after the other" rolled in from the Pacific.

The fifth in the series of Pacific storms was expected to strike the already saturated area during the night, and a sixth was due late Tuesday or early Wednesday, the National Weather Service said.

The death toll climbed to at least 24 in the rainstorms that began last week. The victims included 18 in California, three in Arizona and three American tourists swept away by floodwaters in Tijuana, Mexico, just across the border. One person was missing in Arizona after being swept from a raft on a flooded creek.

By Monday night, the season's rainfall in Los Angeles had reached 19.33 inches, 9.8 inches above normal for this time of year.

WHILE THOUSANDS of flood-routed residents returned to their homes in Phoenix, Ariz., there was no let-up in Southern California, where mudslides and high water have caused millions of dollars in damage and left hundreds homeless.

"There's one storm right after the other," said National Weather Service forecaster Al Bascomb. "There's so many I can't keep track."

Hollywood divorce attorney Marvin Mitchelson saw his home in Hollywood Hills left perched precariously on the edge of a cliff created when the wet hillside gave way and flattened another house down the hill.

"Look at this, I can't believe it," Mitchelson said. "We've worked on this home for 10 years. It's worth a million dollars—at least it was worth a million dollars."

home Sunday as he was trying to cover it with plastic during the rain. Griffith broke a bone in his lower back and will be in the hospital about a week, said Richard Linke, Griffith's personal manager.

IN PHOENIX, renewed evacuations were urged Monday night as a new flood described as potentially worse than one over the weekend headed down the normally dry Salt River. The river became a raging torrent in its 20-mile run through the metropolitan area of 1.5 million people over the weekend and only three of the city's 10 bridges were open Monday.

Flash flood watches were issued for all of southern and western Arizona, and a flash flood warning was issued for Oak Creek Canyon, a scenic area south of Flagstaff.

About 400 homes in the Phoenix area were damaged in flooding, along with hundreds of streets and bridges. Damage to public property alone was estimated at $30 million. No estimated of private property damage was available.

Just across the Mexican border from California in Tijuana, where authorities were forced to release some water from the aging Rodriguez Dam, about 50 Americans were among those stranded by flooding.

Dorothy Alvord of Chula Vista, Calif., and her five children were marooned in the Tijuana area for three days before they were rescued Sunday by a Mexican helicopter.

BAXTER WARD, chairperson of the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors, estimated that damage had exceeded $20 million.

Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley has declared a state of emergency, and police officers on tactical alert have been assigned 12-hour shifts with all leave days canceled.

More than 50 people fled their homes late Sunday in Mandeville Canyon and Laurel Canyon, both near Los Angeles. About 300 persons were evacuated from hilly areas in Palm Springs and nearby areas. A 3 and one-half square-mile area of San Bernardino was evacuated when muddy water began pouring over Harrison Dam.

More than 20,000 sandbags were sent to hard-hit residents of the Sunland-Tujunga area north of downtown Los Angeles.

LSAT aids law students

By KY OWEN
State News Staff Writer

For prospective law students taking the Law School Admission Test, a "crash" course in how to take the exam may be advantageous, a representative of University LSAT said.

Alan Helmkamp said most students taking the University LSAT preparation course take it only a week before they take the LSAT exam.

Registration is now open for the April 11 course to be offered in East Lansing. Courses will also be offered in Detroit and Ann Arbor in April.

Students are encouraged to register early since the class size will be limited.

HELMKAMP SAID THE "crash" course method is effective because the course requires a psychological effort, which is difficult to put forth for a longer period of time.

Helmkamp, a Detroit attorney, said the preparation course is a three-day seminar dealing with how to take the LSAT and what students should expect on the exam.

"It takes a psychological commitment," he said. "You're more likely to come to all the lectures on a weekend (as opposed to during a month's time)."

Generally, students who take the crash course just before the actual exam do better on the exam than students who take a similar course over a month's time, Helmkamp said.

Steve Lemberg, a Detroit attorney working with Helmkamp, said of the test, "It's a test to see how much you can cram in."

"IT'S WORTH IT to kill yourself for the test. It's that important."

While grades are also considered by law school admissions officials, LSAT scores can "make or break you," Lemberg said.

Most schools multiply grade point averages by 200 and add them to the LSAT scores, which are figured on a scale of 200 to 800, he said.

Then a cutoff point is determined and the students scoring above the minimum score are considered for admission, he said.

Lemberg told the group the admission standards for Michigan law schools are as follows:

- University of Michigan: 3.58 GPA, 696 LSAT;
- Wayne State University: 3.45 GPA, 633 LSAT;

- University of Detroit: 3.2 GPA, 585 LSAT;
- Detroit College of Law: 2.8 GPA, 574 LSAT;
- Cooley Law School (Lansing): 2.9 GPA, 512 LSAT.

ALL FIVE SCHOOLS are accredited, Lemberg said. Helmkamp said students stand a better chance of being admitted to law school if they apply to a school in their home state.

Also, it is easier to be admitted during summer term or to night school, he added.

Asked if minority students stood a better chance of being admitted, Helmkamp said schools are being more careful about giving minority students any advantage since the Supreme Court ruling the Alan Bakke case, forbids reverse discrimination.

However, minority students may be able to get into law school with slightly lower grades and test scores than other students, Helmkamp said.

CURRENTLY THE JOB market for lawyers is tight and competition is stiff to get into law school, Lemberg said.

But, he added, if a person is good enough he or she will get a job.

The abundance of law school graduates is one reason the American Bar Association is opposing the opening of new law schools, Helmkamp said.

This is one of the reasons MSU is not likely to get a law school in the near future, he added.

He also said the state legislature does not have enough money to pay for development of an MSU law school at this time.

Helmkamp also advised students not to take the LSAT once for practice.

He said many school are aware of students doing this and therefore discount the value of the second exam score unless the student does substantially better on the second test.

The Spartan Spirits are part of a team

By SUSAN STANTON

Let's go State!
Defense! Defense!
"Go right through for MSU!"

Those cheers should be familiar to anyone who has attended an MSU basketball game in Jenison Fieldhouse. They should be especially familiar to anyone sitting near the Spartan Spirits.

The Spirits is a group of 306 students whose purpose is to support the Spartan basketball team by cheering at home games.

Spartan Spirits started four years ago when head coach Jud Heathcote approached members of the Student Foundation with the idea for a spirit block at the games.

The Student Foundation then went to the residence halls recruiting people for the spirit block.

This year, about 900 people signed up in the Spartan Spirit lottery for admittance to the group.

Mike Fisher, student director of Spartan Spirits, said the spirit block starts cheers within their section and do four-corner cheers to involve the entire fieldhouse. Before a game begins, they form a tunnel for the team, coaches and officials to pass through.

Fisher said the Spartan Spirits were enthusiastic last year, but it had taken a little longer to get the group motivated this year. "It's easy to cheer for a winner but this year is when the team really needs us," Fisher said.

Many people who have seats near the group complain to Fisher that they cannot enjoy the games when the Spartan Spirits stand and cheer.

"They might as well sit at home and watch the game on TV," Fisher said.

Enthusiasm for the home team can mean the difference between victory and defeat, he added.

"Thanks chiefly to the efforts of the Spartan Spirits, Jenison Fieldhouse has become one of the most difficult arenas in the country to play in," Fisher said.

City Council to consider mall plans

By MICHAEL VEH
State News Staff Writer

The fight regarding the Dayton Hudson mall will come one step closer to its end if East Lansing City Council approves the development plans for the shopping center at 7:30 tonight in the East Lansing Public Library, 950 Abbott Road.

The mall, which has been dubbed Cedarbrooke Mall, will be located at U.S. 127 and Lake Lansing Road and will contain two major department stores and a number of small specialty stores.

Ground breaking for the project is scheduled to begin in the spring if the council approves the plans.

A lawsuit filed against Shopping Centers Inc. (a division of Dayton Hudson), the city of East Lansing and Citizens for a Better East Lansing may halt construction.

The suit is pending in the Michigan Court of Appeals and should be heard sometime this spring.

The mall development received voter approval last November by a 3-1 margin. A proposal for a larger development was rejected by East Lansing residents in November 1978.

Another major topic on the council's agenda is a public hearing on the proposed renovation of East Lansing State Bank.

The meeting will be open for public comment on the proposed renovations.

The $1.75 million project, partially financed with Economic Development Corporation tax-exempt bonds, will convert apartments in the upper level of the bank building into offices.

The renovation will allow the bank to centralize its activity in the downtown East Lansing business district.

To make up for the lost housing, the bank is offering to make financial assistance available to other housing projects.

The bank has offered to provide a low-interest mortgage to the buyer of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity house, 343 Albert Ave. The house will be moved if the proposed City Centre Development is built.

Questions have been raised dealing with the public benefit of moving a small number of employees to the East Lansing offices and displacing existing housing.

Planning Commission chairperson Dan Chappelle said, "There would be more public benefit if the bank were to eliminate the drive-in windows."

A fair settlement

It was indeed difficult, as well as premature, to feel nothing but optimism and relief when Iran's new president, Abolhassan Bani Sadr assumed office a few weeks ago. Americans saw him as the solution to the tense standoff between the United States and Iran over the hostage crisis. A western-educated statesperson touted as sympathetic to the wishes of Iran's adversaries, Bani Sadr surprisingly enough seems to be on his way to achieving exactly what he set out to do. And in a very short time.

Obtaining the release of the hostages seems closer now, largely because of Bani Sadr's bargaining power with Ayatollah Khomeini and his ability to appease the religious demands of the country. Bani Sadr has steered Khomeini's government from its unconditional demands, mainly, the extradition of the shah from Panama, while piecing together a proposal for the hostages' release that is acceptable to the Imam.

The cornerstone of that proposal is the establishment of an international tribunal, a body of human rights officials that would investigate the alleged crimes of the shah as a condition for setting the hostages free. The idea is not a new one; it was one of the first suggestions made by U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim shortly after the embassy siege and Sen. Kennedy's claim that he proposed it a while back is partially true.

Kennedy's call for an investigation into the shah's activities was a way of alerting the nation to the fact that, if the country is not going to extradite the shah, it must be least acknowledge its support for his repressive regime. At first, the Carter administration balked at such an admission. Now it seems to be more than acquiescing. We think it is a step in the right direction.

Although acceptance of the tribunal is still contingent upon Iran's agreement to release the hostages on a specific date, an investigation of the shah's activities is a reasonable and fair demand, a welcome departure from the fervency that spurred the storming of the embassy. Both governments should be commended for their temperance. Each side could have held out for more; instead they struck a compromise and a very workable one.

This was not so much the result of worldwide pressure as it was Iran's flexibility. The United States did have much of the world on its side with economic sanctions waiting in the wings. But if the Iran crisis has taught us anything, it has shown that the power of Islam can override any outside economic or political exertions.

The Iranian demands are threefold that America condemn its past actions, promise not to interfere in Iran's internal affairs and avoid preventing Iran from prosecuting the shah. Actually, the United States, willingly or unwillingly, has already capitulated to the second and in doing so has probably hastened the hostages' release.

Considering Iran's initial demand that the United States return the shah for trial, the tribunal compromise falls far short of redressing Iran's original grievances. But the proposal represents the advent of negotiations not thought possible a few months ago when the militants announced their unconditional stance. The nightmare of crisis, if not yet over, appears to be giving way to Bani Sadr's dream of solving the conflict.

Loophole closed

When then-MSU Trustee Michael Smydra finally bowed to public pressure and resigned his post on Jan. 24, he created not only a vacant position but a spate of controversy over the method by which his successor was to be chosen. Six days later, the state Senate moved decisively to head off the appointment power of Gov. William G. Milliken, if not in time for the selection of Smydra's successor, then as a symbolic and long-term show of legislative defiance. A proposed constitutional amendment, introduced by Sen. Jackie Vaughn, D-Detroit, would require Senate confirmation of all gubernatorial appointments to elective offices — as in the Smydra case. Under the amendment, also, those appointments which were approved would stand only until the next general election, when the vacancy would be placed on the ballot.

Vaughn's move is not isolated; it is, rather, just another step in an ongoing power struggle between the executive and legislative branches. Undoubtedly, the Legislature is still harboring resentment over Milliken's appointment of George Romney to serve six remaining years in a vacated spot on the Wayne State University Board of Governors, a move which Vaughn himself summarily termed "inappropriate." And the controversy has been fueled by a number of executive-legislative conflicts which, on occasion, have stripped both parties of any semblance of political decorum — witness the battles over abortion funding, or the fight over Milliken's appointment of Richard Hemmings as insurance commissioner. Vaughn's proposal, coming when it does, is a calculated political stab, and a very well calculated one at that.

In fact, what makes Vaughn's proposal so potent is its inherent bipartisan acceptability and its inarguable good sense. Elective officials, as Vaughn points out, are intended to be chosen by the electorate, and in cases where gubernatorial appointment becomes necessary, appointees should serve only until an election can be held. The current proposal, since it would fill the vacated office by way of the next regularly scheduled election, would entail no extra cost to taxpayers. It would also ensure a measure of gubernatorial accountability, as the governor involved would tend to appoint someone with a reasonable chance of re-election.

If passed by a two-thirds vote of both the House and the Senate, the proposal would go to the voters for ratification, a rather appropriate course for a motion so rooted in public participation. Undoubtedly, the Legislature has purposes of its own in pushing for the amendment, and Michigan voters may or may not take pleasure in being made accessories to a political fracas. But while the amendment's purpose is twofold, its substance is reasonable, sound, and a welcome extension of democratic principles.

VIEWPOINT: FOREIGN POLICY

U.S. youths are pawns for elite

By CHRISTIAN BAY

President Carter brought some new faces to Washington, but U.S. foreign and military policies are run by the same old crowd. The folks that gave us Vietnam, the Somoza dynasty to the Nicaraguans, the shah to the Iranians and Pinochet to the Chileans.

Now they are preparing to edge us closer to World War III. They want their pawns to get ready; they want you people to register for a new draft, just in case.

And that is not all. Carter has announced his readiness to use military force against "any attempt by any outside force to gain control of the Persian Gulf region." God help us all if the Ayatollah expires and feudalism falters in Iran; there are a lot of young leftists in that country, many of them pro-Soviet.

Meanwhile, those great strategic minds in Washington are now going to try to bolster Gen. Zia's hated regime in Pakistan with huge shipments of arms. Perhaps you will soon be asked to go over there and help Zia keep his people in line.

But the folks in Washington don't want you to think about that. Just rally around the flag, please. Remember the hostages, and don't ask any questions about foreign policy. Above all, don't debate the draft; instead, debate whether women, too, should be drafted!

American presidential election years are becoming more and more dangerous for all of mankind. Macho-politics are at a premium. Especially, as I.F. Stone has warned us on many occasions, when the Democrats are in power, and on the defensive against rightwing Republicans.

With his Mr. Nice Guy image, Carter had been doing poorly in the polls, until the Ayatollah came and rescued him. Domestically, the two appear to have profited equally from the protracted hostage situation.

Carter became the tough president who threatened with economic sanctions and military force, which did nothing for the hostages but boosted his popularity; while Khomeini in his country was able to unite right and left by giving free vent to the intense anti-American feelings that our masterful foreign policy has produced, in Iran as in many other countries.

As Kurt Waldheim apparently found out in Iran, the hostages could soon have been freed, had the Americans been willing to go along with a U.N.-sponsored tribunal to investigate the crimes of the shah and his American supporters. That was, of course, out of the question. How could the U.S. protect the morale of all the other oppressive client-regimes, if Washington were to be a party to condemning the shah? As the shah himself wisely observed, such a trial would have far-reaching consequences.

So the stalemate continued. Even our military leaders conceded their impotence: the lives of the hostages could not be saved by military action. American opinion became increasingly furious: it was indeed an unprecedented violation of international law to take diplomats as hostages. But Iranian opinion, too, was enraged: unprecedented or not, was this crime, without the shedding of blood, as heinous as the crimes of the shah and his American accomplices over so many years? East is East and West is West . . .

Then came the Soviet military invasion of Afghanistan, at the invitation of the shaky Soviet-supported regime. Washington's pent-up fury over the Tehran situation could now be given free vent against the U.S.S.R. American anti-SALT sentiment could now be appeased by the new Carter; and the dream of peace, and the hopes for a de-escalating arms race, could be thrown out of the window.

The stockmarket responded favorably right away. An early end to the recession is now anticipated. Prospects for far ways mean a big upswing for arms production, steel, autos, and the many related industries.

Ironically, the first semi-official American reactions to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan were almost gleeful: The Soviets were said to have gotten themselves into a Vietnam-type no-win situation of their own. But then a total ban on any further mention of Vietnam would seem to have followed, to allow Carter to wax indignant over this unprecedented act of aggression, which all the world must now condemn. Whatever the Americans may do with their military might in other countries, or with their omnipresent "Committee on International Altruism," the U.S.S.R. is evidently expected to play by the rules of cricket, outside their supposed sphere of influence (as defined at Yalta and Potsdam at the end of World War II).

That Carter's new macho-politics could destroy the Olympic Games as a festival of peace is unfortunate; while he may not succeed, they are expendable. Far more serious is his apparent readiness to place SALT II on ice indefinitely, and to accelerate the arms race even beyond all the frightening measures he announced last year — including more than 600 nuclear intermediate-range missiles to be installed in Western Europe, and the new giant MX first-strike long-range missile systems in North America.

Over the last 30 years the United States has consistently been the leader in over-all arms expenditures for strategas as well as tactical arms production and deployment. The U.S.S.R. with its weaker economy has had to struggle to avoid falling too far behind, and to repress dissidents harshly to preserve discipline. It has caught up with and surpassed the United States in some weapons systems, but has repeatedly, and even last year, tried to achieve de-escalating agreements. In the U.S.S.R., too, there are hawks, however, and their influence in the Kremlin grows whenever Soviet peace initiatives are rebuffed in Washington.

The situation prior to the invasion of Afghanistan was all in favor of the Moscow hawks: with the U.S. Senate likely to vote down SALT II, or to ratify it only at the price of a massive new MX-system; with West European nuclear defense forces about to be escalated (and a deaf ear in NATO to a Soviet proposal to reduce its nuclear missile strength in Europe instead); and with evidence of increasing U.S.-Chinese military collaboration; the Russians may well have become increasingly pessimistic about the prospects for peace. When the Afghan regime seemed in danger of collapsing, the hawks evidently won the day in Moscow.

A costly mistake it was, I am sure, and a crime that must be condemned. But a heinous, unprecedented crime, as Carter repeatedly asserts? Not by the standards the American government has set, over the last 30 years.

If we avoid a wider war until past the presidential elections, will cooler heads come to prevail? Or will we, and more particularly Americans, be bogged down in another war in Asia? Or will some irresponsible jingo even find his way to one of the many nuclear triggers, and do all of us in?

Much could depend on what American students do, or fail to do, in the months and years ahead.

In the '60s, students were in the forefront of resisting the American crimes in Indochina. President Johnson conceded that the unrest in the universities had much to do with his decision not to run again, and to seek to negotiate for peace in Vietnam.

Will the new generation of students wake up and organize a movement to resist the new draft registration before some of you find yourselves killing and being killed, for no good reason, in Iran, or Pakistan, or Saudi Arabia?

Or do you prefer to debate whether or not women, too, should be drafted?

VIEWPOINT: FOREIGN RELATIONS

Military strength will ensure peace

By DENNIS R. CRUPPER

I am writing in response to the viewpoint by Peter J. Ohren that appeared in the Feb. 11 State News.

Like Mr. Ohren I share a sense of concern and uneasiness over this nation's response to events in other areas of the world. Unlike Mr. Ohren, however, my concern is that we have not gone far enough in showing our displeasure to the Soviets and that we are not prepared militarily, economically, politically or spiritually for the increasing challenges the Soviet Union will present in the days ahead.

We are facing a situation of "it's them or us." Mr. Ohren was quick to cite the lessons of history in his article to show that being prepared for war inevitably led to war. I suggest to Mr. Ohren that he reread his history. Wars occur when one side of a dispute perceives that it can gain by force what it cannot gain through the force of its arguments or economic might. The Soviet Union is fast reaching the perception that it has nothing to fear militarily from the United States and its allies and therefore it has a free hand to use military force to achieve its political goals when it cannot achieve them by other means.

Let someone say that I am suffering from "cold war mentality" or that I am a war monger; I would merely point out that the avowed aim of the Soviet Union is to destroy our system. This aim has been consistently held by every Soviet leader from Lenin to Brezhnev. When Khrushchev said in 1962, "we will bury you," he meant it. While the current Soviet leadership has been more subtle, it has worked toward fulfilling Khrushchev's prophecy by every means at its command. The invasion of Afghanistan is part of this effort and is consistent with past Soviet military action, i.e., the invasions of Hungary and Poland in 1956 and Czechoslovakia in 1968. Unless this nation and our allies meet the challenge now, firmly and consistently, we will soon find ourselves facing the Soviets in areas of much greater importance to us.

The world is facing, in Afghanistan, today, a situation similar to that of the late 1930s. The history of the late 1930s is marked by the challenges that were presented to the democracies by the fascist nations. The democracies failed to meet the challenges facing them when they occurred and the challenges evolved into World War II. Had the democracies responded with political, economic and military sanctions from 1935 through 1938, while they were still perceived by their future adversaries to possess the means to do so, World War II may never have occurred.

Appeasement has never worked with nations bent on dominating the world. Such nations perceive the lack of firm, consistent action as a sign that their adversaries neither possess the will nor the means to protect themselves, their friends or their interests. The United States, if it is to survive, must not allow the Soviet Union to reach such a conclusion. If this means that we must spend more money for weapons, register people for potential military service and in general ready ourselves to use military force, then we should.

Like most other Americans, the thought of using force and violence frightens and appalls me. I hope that we are never forced into a situation where we must respond with force. However, emasculating ourselves militarily, or having a potential adversary perceive us as being a military pushover, is the surest route to being forced into a situation where the only options left are to fight or surrender.

We, as a nation, are facing a critical period in our history, perhaps the most critical ever. Two basic questions must be answered by each of us and collectively as a nation. Are our political, economic and social systems with all their faults worth saving? And what sacrifices are we as individuals together as a nation willing to make to ensure the survival of our system? I hope when historians examine this period of our history and analyze the response of the American people to the above questions, they find the Americans met the challenges with courage, determination and firmness.

U.S. concerned with OPEC oil

It seems that we are too caught up in our newly re-found nationalism and our love for freedom to truly stop and see what the real reason is for the scare in Central Asia. We are too blinded by our desire to preserve political freedom across the globe to realize that we are being led into a "war of freedom" that has nothing to do with freedom.

The fact is, none of the countries being threatened are free countries. We had no concern for the Moslem rebels in Afghanistan until the Soviet invasion. The present struggle in Afghanistan is one between a Soviet-backed Marxist group and another Marxist group. Now we are worried about the "freedom" of the people in Pakistan and Iran. Neither of those two countries enjoys political freedom. Pakistan is ruled by a right-wing military dictatorship, Iran by a raving lunatic.

What is the real reason our leaders want such a tough stand against the Soviets? The answer should be evident from the so-called "Carter Doctrine." We are preparing for war to protect our oil interests. We are being asked to register for a draft, and possibly fight and die in order that American business in general and oil companies in particular can have access to their precious oil. This is what our leaders are after, and in all probability is exactly what the Soviets want — secure access to oil.

Yes, I will avoid the draft if it becomes necessary. It is not to say that I can see nothing worth fighting and dying for. I will fight for my freedom, I will lay down my life for my beliefs. However, I refuse to die for Exxon.

Our apathy may get us drafted

I am writing in response to Robert Nulf's letter of Feb. 15. Mr. Nulf arbitrarily labels those who oppose the president's registration proposals as ingrates and then proceeds to spew forth the popular arguments in support of registration. Mr. Nulf's self-righteous sarcasm does a great disservice to the youth of this country.

I seriously doubt that President Carter would be so inclined to urge registration had Soviet imperialism not threatened our oil supply. Yet has the president taken the lucid, but unpopular step of imposing a gas rationing system, a system which could be generous enough to meet the public's needs and still reduce consumption? No, instead he has followed the politically expedient course of registering 20-year-olds for the draft. By doing this the president snuggles up to the conservative power enclaves, showing them he's not afraid to stand up to the Soviets, while risking only the alienation of a small segment of the electorate. The belief that "we are the apathetic generation . . ." is precisely why he has gone this route!

The president is engaging in a dangerous form of electioneering and Mr. Nulf should not chastise those of his peers who have the acumen to recognize this.

Confusion aids robbery

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — About 25 people, including women in long dresses, jewelry and "a lot of makeup," walked into a grocery store and distracted employees with questions as their companions pilfered $5,000 to $10,000 from the safe, officials said.

Afterwards, the band of thieves piled into three dirty automobiles and fled, said Frank Van Winkle, manager of Bestyet No. 2 grocery store.

He said the theft of cash and checks Sunday took about five minutes.

"They snookered us all," he said.

"They came in and had all the employees busy, asking them questions about tomatoes or dog food or plants or something like that," Van Winkle said.

Fire fighters negotiations stall

CHICAGO (AP) — Hundreds of men recruited to replace striking firefighters reported to work Monday as the city suffered its first fire death since the start of the five-day-old walkout.

Positions on both sides of the bitter dispute seemed to harden. The strikers repeated their determination to defy back-to-work court orders and $40,000-a-day fines, and Mayor Jane Byrne said she would never again negotiate with the Chicago Fire Fighters Union or its president, Frank Muscare.

In a telephone interview with a radio station, the mayor was asked whether she planned talks with federal mediators or union officials.

"No, I am not. It wouldn't make any difference," Byrne said. "I will never again sit down with Mr. Muscare, nor his men. Not again — not ever. I will never subject anybody in the mayor's office or the staff or the corporation counsel or the commissioner of fire to negotiations with the union."

Rebels, police work for elections

ROMEO CAMP, Zimbabwe-Rhodesia (AP) — After fighting each other for seven years, rebel chiefs and police forces are now working together in relocation camps to organize national elections later this month.

Voting that will guarantee Black majority rule in the overwhelmingly Black British colony is scheduled Feb. 27 through 29, and approximately 22,000 rebel fighters have returned to camps throughout the country under a cease-fire agreement that became effective Jan. 4.

"We might have been enemies before, but we're allies now," said Lookout Masuku, a onetime commander in Joshua Nkomo's arm of the Patriotic Front rebel army.

Ford divorce trial begins

DETROIT (UPI) — Auto magnate Henry Ford II and his jet-setting second wife, Cristina, square off Tuesday in the long-awaited divorce trial.

The proceedings, expected to last about a month, get underway in Wayne County circuit court on what would have been the couple's 15th wedding anniversary, although the two have lived apart the last four years.

The main task facing the high-powered attorneys representing the 62-year-old Ford and his estranged wife will be fixing a price tag for the official end of the couple's marriage.

Milton J. Miller, Ford's attorney, says dissolution of the marriage — sought under Michigan's no-fault divorce law — isn't being contested by either party. So, Miller said, the proceedings will have a single purpose — "money."

Nurses return to work

DETROIT (UPI) — A ratification meeting is scheduled Tuesday on a new contract between Grace North west Hospital and registered nurses who staged a bitter three-week walkout.

Union officials said nurses were expected to approve the three-year pact, details of which were not immediately disclosed.

Bargainers for hospital and nurses reached tentative agreement Saturday, about 18 hours after talks resumed for the first time in nearly a week.

The hospital, which had been forced to cut back on admissions and non-emergency surgery during the walkout, began calling nurses back to work with union approval later Saturday.

Trains kill one, injure another

NEW YORK (AP) — A man was pushed in front of a subway train and killed in Queens on Monday, about 13 hours after an 11-year-old boy was shoved into the path of another train in Harlem.

Sgt. James Duffy of the Transit Police said it was "too early to tell" if the same person pushed both victims.

The killing occurred at about 10:10 a.m. at the Roosevelt Avenue-74th Street station of the IRT Flushing line in Jackson Heights, Queens.

Duffy said a woman and the conductor of the city-bound train saw the victim pushed into the path of the train.

Police said they took into custody a young man, about 17 to 20 years old and about 170 to 180 pounds.

The victim of the first pushing Sunday night, Luis Rincon, suffered severe head and abdominal injuries after he was run over by two subway cars. He was admitted to Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center.

Detroit police investigate officers use of cattle prod

DETROIT (UPI) — Police officials have confirmed they are investigating charges that a 50,000-volt electrical cattle prod was used on prisoners at a west side precinct station.

Executive Deputy Police Chief James Bannon verified reports of the investigation during the weekend but refused to comment on the scope of the review.

"At this point, we're not at liberty to discuss the nature of the investigation," he said.

Bannon said the review thus far by the department's Internal Controls Bureau has not turned up the cattle prod at the station.

HE SAID THE allegations came up during a recent investigation that led to manslaughter charges against a 2nd Precinct officer in the death of a prisoner two weeks ago.

"But reports broadened the scope of the earlier investigation far beyond that single incident," he said. "A cattle prod is something that should never be tolerated by a concerned police department.

"Just the fact that a cattle prod — whether it was ever used or not — would be in a police station is so repugnant that it blew our minds."

The prisoner, Fred Warren, a burglary suspect, was found dead in his cell at the precinct house. Officials said the officer, John Pawlak, hit Warren with a blackjack after the two got into an argument and a spitting match.

Pawlak, 36, has been suspended without pay in the case. He is free on personal bond pending a Feb. 28 preliminary hearing in Recorder's Court.

AN AUTOPSY REPORT said Warren, 39, died of a ruptured spleen. But Internal Affairs investigators are believed looking into the possibility the alleged use of the cattle prod played a role in the man's death.

One member of a police review board set up to investigate Warren's death was told by an officer a cattle prod was being used at the precinct, Bannon said.

"When the board member received that information, he reported it to the chief and I and we agreed that the best way to proceed was to abolish the board of review and reassign the investigation to Internal Affairs," he said.

Other prisoners in the cell block at the time Warren was brought in reportedly told homicide investigators police officers tried to use the cattle prod — or "shock stick" — to revive the man.

"If supported," he said, "the allegations could be symptomatic of a general climate on the part of police personnel in that precinct."

"A cattle prod is designed and built to control and direct livestock.

"It has no legitimate police purpose. If the allegations are true, it reflects an attitude that the community is no more than an animal."

Two escape over Berlin Wall

BERLIN (AP) — At least two East Germans made a daring escape over the Berlin Wall this weekend at one of the most heavily fortified sections of the East-West dividing line, sources reported Monday.

West Berlin police said two men pulled off the escape early Sunday close to the American sector's Checkpoint Charlie, the Allied guard post at one of the crossing points into East Berlin.

But newspapers in West Berlin and West Germany said two men and a woman slipped out through a publishing company headquarters that forms part of the wall. The three worked for the publishing house, which is operated by the Christian Democratic Union.

Handbook on energy available

An energy assistance handbook detailing major state and federal programs designed to cut home heating and operating costs is available at the Capitol Building.

Energy Assistance Handbook, compiled by Sen. Richard J. Allen, R-Ithaca, provides information on home energy audits, weatherization grants, tax grants and other alternative energy tax credits.

Those interested can contact Allen at the Capitol for a free copy of the book.

Milliken to sign land bill

(UPI) — Gov. William G. Milliken was expected to sign legislation today which includes funds to begin buying Consumers Power Co. land along two of Michigan's most beautiful rivers — the Manistee and Au Sable.

The bill funds a variety of recreational land buys, but $4 million is earmarked for a 9,300-acre purchase which results from negotiations begun in 1975. The money comes from a trust fund supported by oil and gas revenues.

Included is 1,800 acres with 6.5 miles of river frontage on the Au Sable and 7,500 acres with 15 miles of river frontage on the Manistee.

The state is expected to purchase another 8,000 acres for the same prices later this year, while negotiations are continuing on the acquisition of an additional 18,500 acres.

Consumers originally offered to sell the state some 50,000 acres in the area.

SMAB accepts funding requests

The Student Media Appropriations Board is accepting applications for print media funding today through Feb. 29.

"We're looking for print publications which fill a need or provide a service not provided on campus," said Steve Politowicz, SMAB Chairperson.

Any major governing group, living unit or registered student organization can apply for funding, he said.

Groups which were funded fall term cannot apply for additional funding.

Approximately $11,000 to $15,000 will be available for group funding, Politowicz said.

SMAB usually funds three types of publications — newspapers, magazines put out by students from MSU colleges and "single purpose publications," which typically are artistic or literary, he said.

"This year we gave the highest priority to newspapers, because they provide the most consistent service to the student population," Politowicz said.

Funding decisions will probably be made during the first week of spring term, he said.

Applications are available in 307 Student Services Bldg.

Ford executive testifies

WINAMAC, Ind. (AP) — A Ford Motor Co. executive who said he was responsible for designing the 1973 Pinto testified Monday that the car was safe and was involved in no more fatal fire crashes than other subcompacts.

Ford is charged with reckless homicide in the burning deaths of three young women in a 1973 Pinto that exploded when hit from behind on a northern Indiana highway in August 1978.

The state contends that Ford recklessly designed the Pinto, knowing the fuel tank was subject to explode in rear-end collisions, but sold the cars anyway without making repairs or warning the public.

Harold C. MacDonald, now Ford's vice president of engineering and research, told the Pulaski Circuit Court jury that he was in charge of development when the Pinto was designed.

The 1973 Pinto's fuel system integrity also was "fully equal to other subcompacts of that time," MacDonald said.

MacDonald read from a federal study which he said showed that in 1975 and 1976, 1.9 percent of the nation's cars were Pintos, and 1.9 percent of the fatal accidents involving fire occurred in a Pinto.

"These figures mean Pintos were having the same number of fatal accidents with fire as all other cars — no better and no worse," MacDonald said.

He also defended his decision to place the Pinto's fuel tank behind the axle, a location the state has argued made the Pinto more dangerous. He said his father burned to death in 1932 when his car, which had the fuel tank over the axle, ran into a tree.

"BECAUSE OF THAT I feel the gas tank should be as far from the engine as possible," he said.

Prosecutor Michael A. Cosentino told reporters he still believes former Ford President Lee A. Iacocca — and not MacDonald — was responsible for the design of the Pinto. Iacocca is not chairperson of Chrysler Corp.

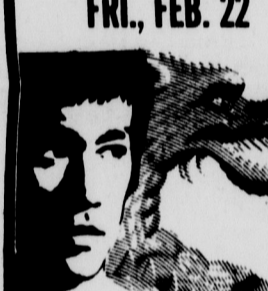

Foreign car limits should be temporary

DETROIT (AP) — Douglas A. Fraser, president of the United Auto Workers union, said Monday any restrictions on Japanese imported cars should be temporary.

Fraser, just back from a trip to Japan to try to persuade manufacturers to establish auto plants in this country, is backing a proposal to limit foreign manufacturers without U.S. plants to importing 200,000 cars a year. At a news conference here, he said the American industry needed help for only about 2 and one-half years in stemming the flow of imports.

Gere's body is sensational in 'Gigolo'

By MARY TINNEY
State News Reviewer

American Gigolo (Paramount; at the State Theatre) is not, as many critics will have you believe, a movie completely devoid of merit. It's not easy to admit that you find something enjoyable because of its skin — the way it is dressed up and presented — regardless of substance (or in this case, lack of). American Gigolo is a mediocre movie at best. It offers no real insights into anything and there is little provocative dialogue (even though the subject matter has loads of potential for it), but in spite of this, the film is undeniably attractive, even if in only a superficial way.

It is the story of Julian Kaye (Richard Gere), the highest paid lover in Beverly Hills. Julian is as immaculate in character as he is in physical presence (this we're supposed to find endearingly ironic considering his shady profession). Julian certainly doesn't seem like a criminal. He knows how to treat women — with his soft-spoken shy manners and his ingratiating, gentle good looks he makes $1,000 a night, drives a black Mercedes and has closets full of Giorgio Armani suits. When asked dourly if he realizes that what he's doing is illegal, Julian looks aghast. "Giving women pleasure is against the law?" He blinks incredulously and three quarters of the women in the theatre swoon (the other third is with boyfriends).

But, alas, Julian is unable to receive any pleasure from women. His job has become dull and mechanical, and when he finally runs into a woman he can love emotionally, Lauren Hutton (minus the space in her teeth), he's unable to respond to her sexually in a way that is spontaneous and genuine.

If the whole thing sounds like sensationalistic drivel to you, you've got a 90 percent accurate understanding of American Gigolo. And that's too bad. The topic of the film, while hardly lofty, seems to have at least the potential for some interesting ideas and character examination. And as Julian is halfway through the film framed for the sado-masochistic murder of a woman who was once a client of his, there seems also to be the potential for developing the film into a sex-and-violence crime thriller (oh boy, oh boy!). Instead, American Gigolo fails to completely deal with any of the questions or ideas it raises. Instead, the film essentially becomes what the subject matter made it temptingly easy for the film to become — a vehicle for Richard Gere's body.

Now that's not all bad. Gere is not what you'd call a dynamic actor. He was good in Days of Heaven mainly because he is so pretty, and that movie's effectiveness stemmed from the fact that it simply oozed with so many flawless images and sounds. Gere is indeed flawless, but his performance in American Gigolo is either carefully understated or downright dull, depending on your point of view. On the other hand, a film which offers us two hours of Gere (and, yes, Lauren Hutton) in various stages of undress has already got a lot going for it.

Hutton has a fairly silly role as a senator's wife who falls in love with Julian and eventually — and this is the most pathetically trite development in the movie — is able to redeem him from both the law and his emotional hang-ups.

Writer/director Paul Schrader (from Grand Rapids, by the way) seems to be obsessed with the topic of sexual perversity. Previously in Hardcore, he examined the sleazy sexual underbelly of San Francisco and Old Boyfriends, the film that preceded American Gigolo, was a strange, disturbing, sometimes brilliant story of a woman obsessed by her sexual past. As in both of these films, American Gigolo comes at times close to being fascinating and relentless in its pursuit of an understanding of the dark, perverse side of both the city (in this case Los Angeles) and the individual human soul. Julian's desperate search for the answers to why and by whom he was framed allow Schrader to penetrate once again the seamy big city underworld, and the desperate glimpse he offers us is mesmerizing.

But Schrader sells out as in Hardcore, and we're back to the "real" world where love conquers all and dialogue like . . . "All my life I've been looking for something and I don't even know what it is. Maybe it's you" . . . is supposed to convince us that Julian's psychological problems have vanished and he'll be OK after all.

In spite of the generally pathetic dialogue, insufficient character development, a cop-out conclusion, and a total absence, as far as I can see, of any intention or reason for making this movie (other than a voyeuristic one), chances are that you'll enjoy it to yourself or not. As a friend of mine said . . . It's worth all the fantasies you can have afterward.

Harry ("Why-are-those-people-throwing-bananas-at-me?") Chapin

Harry Chapin was back in Lansing Sunday night for a sold-out performance at the Civic Center. The storytelling troubadour delighted his faithful Lansing following for almost three hours, mixing his more obscure material with his biggest hits. A Chapin fan reports that Harry was even better this time than he was during his last several area appearances, although there weren't quite as many bananas thrown at the stage during his rendition of "30,000 Pounds of Bananas." A special highlight of Sunday's concert was a musical sequel to "Taxi" — Chapin's first big hit — which he introduced during his encore.

A Wonder-ful film!

By CHRIS RIZIK
State News Reviewer

Stunning, beautiful, marvelous, brilliant, wonderful, visually awesome. I can't find enough adjectives to describe what I experienced last Friday at the Lansing premiere of The Secret Life of Plants (Paramount; at the Campus). Only a handful of people were present for the opening, but I can honestly say that the losers were those who weren't present. They missed more than just a movie. They missed a stunning visual and intellectual display, one that will not be easily forgotten.

Even after having talked with Stevie Wonder and producer Michael Braun earlier in the week, I entered the theater skeptical as to what was in store for me. But with the first note of Wonder's "Earth's Creation," amidst tidal waves, volcanoes and turbulently active skies, I was immediately displaced from my seat into the passages of Genesis. Guided by brilliant photography, my ephemeral journey carried me through millions of years of creation the beginning of life, and the formation of modern earth in a matter of a few minutes. It then returned me, sensually drained, to my role as an outsider looking in. This cycle repeated endlessly during the film, my total engrossment taking me further and further into unknown territory, then releasing me for the next scene.

Through the film's revealing observation and experiments, the existence of plants takes on a new significance. Their ability to sense, understand and respond is shown time after time. From the plant which empathized the death of a fellow plant to the cactus that was learning the Japanese alphabet (you must see it to believe it), the plants become personified, emitting human-like emotions often suppressed by their physical limitations.

This is the secret boasted in the title (the existence of plants as an entity equal to man, with lives as significant; and the need for man to recognize this, so that he may live in harmony with the earth. As producer Braun told me, "We use plants as a metaphor for the fact that everybody on this planet HAS to be involved with every other life form. We must, in order to survive.")

The film beautifully displays this message. Man's desire, and more importantly, his need for plants and other forms of life. As Wonder writes in the title song:

*I can't conceive the nucleus of all
Begins inside a tiny seed
And what we see as insignificant
Provides the purest air we breathe.*

Utah man claims FBI file is harmful

By RON BARKER
Associated Press Writer
SALT LAKE CITY — Almost 27 years ago, electrician Paul McCarty was fired from his job at an Atomic Energy Commission plant in Kentucky because someone — he doesn't know who — told the FBI that he had been a communist. He denied it, and demanded a chance to confront his accuser. Instead, he was marched off federal property by armed guards. Now, retired at age 66, McCarty of Cedar City, Utah, wants his FBI file expunged.

He isn't seeking damages from the government, although he lost at least four jobs because of that file. He wants his name cleared for his children's sake, and as a matter of pride. He is being helped by the Project for Open Government. His attorney, Theodore Jacobs, says there are many people like McCarty who have been harmed by information in FBI files that is inaccurate, untimely, irrelevant or incomplete. "They told me that if I denied it, I would never work for the government again," McCarty says. He denied it, and they kept their promise. Until 1974, he didn't know that the "record" was information supplied the FBI by someone who wouldn't give his name or testify openly against McCarty. After being fired by the AEC from his job in Paducah, Ky., McCarty was hired — then fired — from jobs requiring security clearances in Grand Junction, Colo., and Denver. He confronted by the FBI and Atomic Energy Commission security officers in 1953, he was warned to "keep his mouth shut." "They thought I had been a communist, I guess, but were willing to hire me if I didn't get into trouble," McCarty says. A YEAR LATER, he noticed he was being followed. The man even asked a cafe waitress what McCarty had talked about during dinner. "I decided to leave there because I thought if anything went wrong, or if anyone got hurt, I'd be the prime suspect," he says. He was also laid off by General Chemical Co. under unusual circumstances. "They laid off some trouble-makers, and my name was on the list," McCarty says. "The foreman couldn't understand why my name was on the list." He thinks the FBI may have been responsible. McCarty says every time he tried to clear his name with the FBI, he was given the brushoff. Once, he wrote President Lyndon Johnson asking for help. Johnson referred the case to the Justice Department, which later told McCarty there was nothing it could do. McCarty's lawyer says the FBI has taken the position that it is not responsible for the validity of a person's file. The FBI will only vouch for the accuracy of what its agents were told by informants. The anonymous informant told the FBI McCarty had been a Communist Party member in Los Angeles in 1943, and that he was a member of a front group in Los Angeles in 1949. McCarty says he didn't even live in Los Angeles after 1946, and there are no documents which back up the informant's claim. McCarty says he wants his name cleared simply because that's what he set out to do 27 years ago. And he worries about his 33-year-old son in the military. "If we get into a war with Russia, they're liable to investigate him and find that file on me. I don't want to see him hurt by it," McCarty says.

El Salvador rebels seize ministry offices

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Some 50 members of a leftist-dominated group identified as the National Teachers Association seized the payroll and administrative offices of the Education Ministry on Monday and held almost 200 persons inside. "We have done this to demand the freedom of political prisoners," a spokesperson for the group told a reporter through a window of the Education Ministry building. Israel said Monday that by the end of the month, it was closing its embassy, the sixth nation in recent months to do so because of the violence in this Central American country. Israel has not had an ambassador in this country for several years; the embassy has been operated by lower-ranking officers. Negotiations continued for the release of two remaining hostages at the Spanish Embassy, occupied Feb. 4 by leftist militants demanding freedom for several arrested militants. The same militants from the Popular Leagues of Feb. 28 also occupied the Panamanian Embassy twice this month but later freed the Panamanian diplomats they held hostage and left the building. Occupation of embassies and government buildings and the taking of hostages have become a routine tactic of the LP-28 — as the group is known — and other leftist groups press the government for social and economic reform demands. Various leftist groups — a half dozen activist organizations and three rebel groups — also say they oppose the military-civilian junta and seek a Marxist government in the country. The junta has been in power since the Oct. 15 overthrow of President Carlos Humberto Romero, an army general. Before that, El Salvador had been ruled by military or military-backed governments for 37 years. The West German Embassy announced Feb. 7 that it was closing for security reasons. The next day, all West German personnel left El Salvador. South Africa, Japan, Switzerland and Great Britain also have closed their embassies.

East German leads Nordic combo event

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — East Germany's Ulrich Wehling led at the halfway stage of the Nordic combined event Monday at the XIII Winter Games, with Walter Malmquist of Post Mills, Vt., a surprising second. The event combines 70-meter ski jumping — Monday's segment — with cross country skiing, to be conducted Tuesday. After the jumping, Wehling had 227.2 points, Malmquist had 221.8 and Hubert Schwarz of West Germany had 219.6. Wehling, who won this event in 1972 and 1976, made the best jump of the day — 85 meters on his second attempt. Malmquist was right behind him with a leap of 84 meters. Kerry Lynch of Grand Lake, Colo., was the second-best American, in 20th place. Each competitor jumped three times, with the two best jumps counting. Earlier Monday, Barbara Petzold of East Germany, with a time of 30 minutes, 31.54 seconds, won the gold medal in the women's 10-kilometer cross country ski race. Also, in the first head of the men's giant slalom, Andreas Wenzel of Liechtenstein turned in the fastest time with a clocking of 1:20.17 through the 56-gate, 1,254-meter course. The second heat will be run Tuesday. And in non-competitive news, it appeared that the horrendous transportation problems were being ironed out, but that lengthy delays, some of more than two hours, still existed. Hilka Riihivuori and Helena Takalo of Finland took the silver and bronze medals on the 10-kilometer course on Mount Van Hoevenberg. Alison Owen-Spencer of Indian, Alaska, the top American finisher, was 22nd in 32:41.33.

But who am I to doubt or question the inevitable being for these are but a few discoveries we find inside the Secret Life of Plants. This pantheistic credence reaches a visual summit near the movie's end, when Stevie makes his lone appearance. His lack of sight unimportant, Wonder sings the title song while walking confidently amid gardens of life, so in tune with them that he knows he will not fall. The plants appear to guide and support him, and eventually lead him (and us) to a breathtaking climax in a spectacular, vast field of blooming sunflowers where plant and man joyously sing their song of life. Equal to these visual displays of beauty is the stunningly sensitive music of Wonder. Every spoken word or blooming flower is enriched by music so natural it seems to simply rise from the earth. Wonder captures every facet of the film in amazing detail. How a writer who never saw a frame of the film could describe it in music so accurately is awe-inspiring. Wonder told me "What I tried to do with the music was to create what I felt the movie was to me. For me it was a journey. It leaves a mystery in people's minds because they feel they are the greatest things on earth, but that's not true. Our survival depends on something as significant as plants. There is far more to the earth than just us and the things we've created." This "journey" took Wonder three years to complete, and the results are worth every second. The music is at times delicate, happy, smooth or pulsatingly turbulent, depending on the scene. Each is effective though, and always pleasing. "In doing the music, I felt comfortable, but only because you felt comfortable with me," says Wonder. A lot of people have been around Stevie Wonder's music a long time, so I felt you would want to experience the journey as I had." Though this journey was a long one for Wonder (and his fans), its near perfection is testimony enough. "At first I wasn't satisfied with the music; and if I'm putting out something as a statement to the world, I won't do it until I feel it is right."

MEN AND WOMEN TRIUMPHANT

Spartan teams meet with success

MSU cagers top Wayne minus star Itnyre, 84-72

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer

Whatever MSU women's basketball coach Karen Langeland told her Spartans at halftime of Monday night's game with Wayne State University, she'll want to bottle it and use it again.

MSU trailed 42-33 at the half, but rallied to rout the Tartars, 84-72, before 191 fans in the IM-West Sports Arena.

After the Tartars reeled off six straight points to take a 15-point lead to start the half, MSU dominated the rest of the way.

The Spartans went into a full court press and Wayne State folded like a cheap suitcase. Their bulge shrank from 15 to 10, and then MSU ran off a 35-9 string to put the game away with 5 minutes left.

And MSU didn't even need leading scorer Mary Kay Itnyre, who sat out with an ear infection. She should return to action for MSU's next game, Saturday at home versus Edinboro State.

MSU jumped out to a 4-0 lead at the outset, but it was downhill the rest of the half. The Spartans employed their version of the swiss cheese defense (full of holes) and the Tartars exploited it, hitting several easy buckets underneath. When Wayne State did miss, more often than not they grabbed the rebound and layed it in. The Tartars held a 30-17 rebounding advantage in the first half.

It wasn't much better when MSU had the ball in the first half. The Spartans shot just 31 percent from the floor before the intermission.

"Laurie (Reynolds) was the only player in the game in the first half," Langeland explained. "It may have been we were a little overconfident, but I don't know for sure. It was like we took sleeping pills before the game."

"We should have thrown a bucket of water on them at halftime to wake them up," assistant coach Tina Krah quipped.

That wasn't necessary because in the second half, the Spartans had the midas touch and their press led to a flurry of turnovers. Wayne State's Monice Thomas led all scorers with 19 points. The Spartans were led by Reynolds with 15 and Nanette Gibson with 13. Gibson also pulled down 11 rebounds.

The victory gave MSU, now 13-10 on the season, its first three-game winning streak of the year.

More importantly, the Spartans avoided a loss to an in-state rival that would have dropped them in the seedings for next weekend's state tournament. MSU was ranked second and Wayne State seventh in the state by the coaches of Michigan college teams.

"This game would have had an adverse effect only if we lost," Langeland said. "I don't think we'll move up just because we beat the seventh-rated team."

Seven MSU teams met with modest success over the weekend, as both men's and women's squads competed home and away.

The following is a round-up of the weekend's action:

The women's basketball team won two games over the weekend, in the IM Sports-West arena beating Indiana University in double overtime Friday night, 73-71, before coming back to defeat Miami (Ohio) University, 71-70, Saturday afternoon.

In the game against the Hoosiers, MSU was led by sophomore Deb Traxinger's 17 points, including 11 of 13 from the free-throw line. Sophomore Nanette Gibson chipped in with 16.

Against the Redskins, freshman Karen Wells scored a career-high 19 points, while senior co-captain Mary Kay Itnyre added 12.

The fencing team won two of its four matches at the University of Notre Dame Saturday.

The Spartans defeated Purdue University, 17-10, and the University of Illinois-Chicago Circle, 22-5, while losing to Ohio State University, 18-9, and the host Fighting Irish, 19-8.

Senior Bryan Peterman was a perfect 11-0 for the day in epee, increasing his season record to 33-4.

His sophomore brother Barry posted a 7-4 mark in epee against the four teams.

In foil, senior Chris Young was 7-4. Juniors John Chambers and Jon Thomas led the sabre group with 8-4 and 6-6 records respectively.

The men's gymnastics team was a double-winner over the weekend, at Madison, Wis., holding off the University of Wisconsin, 255.05-252.85, while downing Western University, 255.05-239.80. Junior Marvin Gibbs placed first on the parallel bars against both the Badgers and the Broncos, while sophomore Rich Licata took top honors on the horizontal bar against Wisconsin.

Junior Ivan Merritt captured first place finishes in floor exercise in both competitions, while freshman Pete Roberts was the top vaulter against Western.

Posting its highest score of the season, the women's gymnastics team rolled to a 136.5-92.65 win over Indiana State University Saturday in Jenison Fieldhouse.

MSU captured all of the first-through-third positions in the meet, the exception being the Sycamores' third on the balance beam. In addition, the Spartans took the top five spots in the all-around scoring.

The women's swimming team swept its first two home meets of winter term over the weekend, stopping Oakland University on Friday night, 83-48, and drubbing Eastern Michigan University, 103-25, Saturday.

Freshman Laurie Thompson was the big star for the Spartans, winning three individual events in each meet and her time of 4:45.70 in the 400-yard individual medley against Oakland set a new MSU record.

In the Central Collegiate Meet in Ann Arbor, the men's track team placed second behind the University of Michigan with 77.5 points.

Senior Randy Smith was a double-winner for the Spartans, winning the 60 and 300-yard dashes.

Besides Smith's performances, MSU received second-place finishes from sophomore Michael White in the 880 and senior Keith Moore in the 1,000-yard run.

The wrestling team split its weekend matches at home by beating 20th-rated Ohio State University, 26-16, before losing to fifth-ranked University of Wisconsin, 25-11.

Fred Worthem, a 158-pounder, and Chuck Joseph, who competes at 126 pounds, were the only double winners for the Spartan grapplers.

Worthem beat Wisconsin's nationally-ranked Mike Terry in MSU's loss to the Badgers, the second time this season he has beaten a wrestler of national prominence.
