The Lady Alexander, a former cruise ship which was converted to a floating restaurant, rests on its side after it tipped over and sank in 18 feet of water late Wednesday in Redondo Beach, Calif. Pounding waves from consecutive storms that have pummeled the Pacific Coast for more than a week caused heavy waves that battered the ship in the Redondo Beach Marina until it capsized.

Militants demand shah for hostages

By The Associated Press

Inspired by a message of support from Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the young militants holding the U.S. Embassy in Tehran vowed anew Thursday they will not release their American hostages until the "fugitive" shah is handed over to Iran. The militants' reaffirmation of their tough stand raised new questions about the prospects for an early release of the hostages. The U.N. investigative panel on Iran, whose work might be crucial to resolution of the crisis, continued to mark time in Switzerland. Iran's president and foreign minister both insisted there is no deal guaranteeing freedom for the hostages in exchange for the U.N. inquiry. And both Khomeini and President Abolhasan Bani Sadr reiterated Iran's demand for extradition of the ousted shah.

Bani Sadr said the hostages' freedom was contingent on it. But the embassy militants made the connection clear. In a statement broadcast on Tehran radio, the militants said the United States "must deliver up fugitive Mohammad Reza and the assets he has stolen." "It must realize that the longer it delays the more it exposes its anti-human nature to the world. In the event of delay any expectation of clemency for the hostages would be foolish," the statement said. A spokesperson for the young radicals told a reporter by telephone that Khomeini's message "encouraged us to stand firmly and reiterate strongly our demand for the return of the shah." Khomeini, in a broadcast Wednesday, said Iranians should "forcefully demand" the return of the shah and "not rest until final victory." Bani Sadr also demanded return of the shah in an interview with a Canadian radio reporter.

THE MILITANTS HAVE not taken a public stand on the question of the U.N. commission — and its implied potential for winning the hostages' freedom. But they have always said they will obey whatever Khomeini tells them to do. Ghotbzadeh said Thursday the Iranians had made it clear in their dealings with the United Nations that there was no connection between the commission's work and the hostages. But Bedjaoui said Wednesday there was a "gentlemen's agreement" that the hostages would be freed as a result of the inquiry. The militants held a news conference Wednesday at which they displayed purported embassy documents allegedly showing that Victor Tomseth, an embassy political officer, had been kept informed of the activities of the counter-revolutionary group Forghan, which has claimed responsibility for some half-dozen assassinations of Khomeini associates and supporters.

ONE OF THE co-chairpersons of the five-member U.N. commission, Mohamed Bedjaoui, Algeria's U.N. ambassador, unexpectedly left Geneva, Switzerland, for New York on Thursday. The commission members had been scheduled to fly from Geneva to Tehran Wednesday, but U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim at the last minute delayed their departure until this weekend. Waldheim told reporters at the United Nations that Bedjaoui was returning because he had "urgent business" in his diplomatic mission in New York, but a U.N. spokesperson later said Waldheim and Bedjaoui would meet Friday.

Presumably they will discuss the obstacles that caused Waldheim to delay the commission's departure. Iran's foreign minister, Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, indicated Thursday they might now arrive even later than the weekend, telling the Iranian news agency they would be coming to Tehran "early next week." Well-placed sources at the United Nations who asked not to be identified said the delay was necessary because Bani Sadr needs more time to marshal various groups in Iran behind a settlement of the crisis. The commission is to carry out a "fact-finding" mission hearing Iranian charges of mass murder and corruption against deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and of U.S. interference in Iranian affairs, and hearing American grievances over the hostage-taking.

THE APPROXIMATELY 50 hostages spent their 110th day in captivity Thursday. In statements Wednesday demanding return of the shah, neither Khomeini nor

Students tell COGS of alleged plagiarism

By LOUISE WHALL
State News Staff Writer

The Council of Graduate Students has uncovered evidence implicating an MSU professor on charges of alleged plagiarism and "intellectual dishonesty," said COGS President Sharon Cogdill. Six students have contacted COGS with concerns that a professor in one of the science departments has been publishing their research work under the professor's name without the students' consent. The students have asked not to be named for fear of repercussions in the subjective area of graduate and doctoral work.

One of the students concerned, who is also a COGS representative, introduced a resolution at Wednesday's meeting which stated in part, "The Council of Graduate Students considers that these practices violate basic rights of graduate students and are contrary to professional ethics and academic excellence." The resolution concerning professional ethics further directs the COGS president to "pursue this matter at appropriate levels within the University."

"We are collecting evidence that this is a fairly widespread practice," Cogdill said. "The offense is grounds for dismissal." One of the students involved had previously tried to file a grievance with the department but the grievance was disallowed on the grounds that no policy exists dealing with the question of unauthorized use of a student's work in the Graduate Rights and Responsibilities Document, Cogdill said. "The need for anonymity at this point is crucial because of the unspoken offense of having the gall to file a committee chairperson," Cogdill said. Cogdill further stated that in at least one instance, the professor is collecting a royalty on the published material. One student has taken the case to a lawyer who has advised him to file a civil suit after graduation. The lawyer is protecting the evidence until that time under lock and key, calling the case "an open-and-shut violation of copyright," Cogdill said. The copyright law, which was revised in 1977, now states that the act of writing a given work constitutes copyright. "Copyright subsists in the writings of the author," said MSU Library Director Richard Chapin, a local expert on the copyright law. "Ownership is substantiated from the time the owner puts it down on paper." Using any portion of a person's work without authorization constitutes a violation of copyright, Chapin said. COGS will vote on the professional ethics resolution at their next meeting on March 5. If the resolution is adopted, Cogdill has four options which she can pursue. The choices are: • To pursue the case with the individuals through the academic grievance system. In this system, the grievance will go to the department, then to the college, and then, if necessary, to a panel composed of faculty members and graduate students. • To use the Faculty Grievance system. If this course is taken, Cogdill would have to ask for dismissal on grounds of "intellectual dishonesty" under the provisions of the system. • To present the evidence to the University lawyers, MSU President Cecil Mackey and Provost Clarence L. Winder. • To have COGS write a policy and get it passed through the Graduate Council. This would make it easier in the future for an individual to bring suit against a professor in such a sensitive matter, Cogdill said.

MSU PROFESSOR IN PANEL DISCUSSION

'Soviet invasion not crisis'

By ELYSE GOLDIN
State News Staff Writer

American responses to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan does not signal a return to the Cold War era or an anti-communist crusade, nor does it represent the worst crisis since World War II, an MSU professor said Thursday in the Auditorium.

Warren Cohen, history professor, was one of six speakers addressing about 300 people at a panel discussion on the Afghan crisis. He said although the United States must respond to the Soviet incursion into Afghanistan, the possibility of war is not very likely.

"War with the Soviet Union is not imminent... nor is the draft," he said.

Cohen said that the United States must peacefully indicate to the Soviets that their occupation of Afghanistan is intolerable. The embargo on grain and technology and refusal to participate in the Olympics have been among the few reasonable options open to the president, he added.

"They are indications of U.S. interests... and have also been steps to preempt forces by some government officials willing to take military steps against the Soviet Union," Cohen said.

He said that any government policy now made regarding Afghanistan would be designed to satisfy the political needs of a president seeking re-election.

Rhoades Murphey Jr., professor of Mid-Eastern History at the University of Michigan, said newly founded American policies must be more foresighted and realistic than those that have been decided upon in the past.

Referring to possible mistakes the American government made by supporting the shah in Iran, Murphey suggested the United States be more cautious to whom it delegates future support.

Michael Schechter, professor in James Madison College, explained why the reactions of America's allies have not been as supportive of the United States as may have been anticipated.

He said the importance of foreign trade to each country has been a major reason for limited support. Western Europe is tied together in economics and is committed to working out common foreign and domestic policies, he said.

The difference between threats facing the U.S. and those confronting our allies is due to the Soviet incursion also alter their support, he said.

Many other Western governments may not have the constitutional power to respond more favorably to the U.S. due to the structure of their government, he said.

Schechter added that the U.S. is not the only country which must establish foreign policy during election time. He said France and Germany will hold elections next year and their current leaders are also determined to set a policy which will boost their campaign.

Allen S. Whiting, political science profesor at the University of Michigan, said the current international risk spurred by the Soviet Union is greater than those of the past, due to client relationships.

"In most other situations we were one-on-one. We are now getting to the point where there are second, third and fourth parties becoming public commitment... clients of one sort or another," he said.

Explaining Soviet motives for entering Afghanistan, Robert M. Slusser, MSU professor of history, said the invasion was an expression of the "crusading ideology of Marxism-Leninism."

He said the invasion was of ideological motivation and not in the national interest of the Soviet Union.

It is in Soviet interests to avoid a nuclear

Reps' plan would end property tax

By TIM SIMMONS
State News Staff Writer

Homeowner property taxes would be replaced with a 1.5 percent increase in state personal income taxes under a proposal introduced by two state legislators Thursday.

Rep. Roy Smith, R-Saline, and Rep. Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, introduced the tax shift plan during a press conference at the Capitol. The plan is one of six tax proposals which will be competing for spots on the 1980 general election ballot.

"For working people this amendment represents a more equitable funding of K-12 education by shifting from an often unfairly inflated property tax on homes to a much more progressive income tax," Smith said.

The tax proposal calls for a tax on business property of up to 30.5 mills. School districts would have the option of voting to supplement state educational funding with a local tax of either seven mills, a 1 percent income tax or a combination of both.

ONE MILL IS equivalent to $1 for every $1,000 of state assessed value on a person's property. State assessed value is equal to one-half the actual market value of a piece of property.

Senior citizens would be exempt from all property taxes on the first $25,000 of the assessed value of their homes.

"We want to give our senior citizens, which I prefer to think of as our mothers and fathers, some peace of mind," Smith said. "They can sit back with the peace of mind that they will not lose their property due to taxes." Bullard pledged to introduce legislation which would grant renters an additional tax credit should the "Smith-Bullard" tax plan be passed by the Legislature. Renters do not pay school property taxes, but would be affected by the 1.5 percent increase in state incomes.

"WHEN THIS IS implemented, renters would be protected by a change in the property tax credit formula," Bullard explained.

"The value of a person's property used to be a fair indicator of ability to pay taxes to support public services," Bullard said. "Today, because of inflation, the amount of real estate a person owns may have very little relation to ability to pay taxes. The income tax has historically been a much fairer way to share the costs of government services," he added.

The plan does not have the approval of Gov. William G. Milliken, the legislators said. They added, however, that the governor will probably wait until all ballot proposals are submitted before backing a particular plan.

The proposal is also an attempt to do what the Headlee Amendment said it would accomplish, said Charles Varnum, R-Manistiquic, who is supporting the amendment.

"The people who were saying there would be tax cuts and rollbacks (with Headlee) are seeing it's not happening," he said. If legislation fails, the lawmakers will try to put the issue on the ballot by securing 300,000 voter signatures in a petition drive.

Boycott wins little support

LONDON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said at the end of a European tour Thursday he failed to win unanimous support among America's major allies for a boycott of the Summer Olympic Games in Moscow in protest of Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

Concluding a tour that began Tuesday night in Bonn and then took him to Rome and Paris, Vance could count only Britain as a firm public supporter of President Carter's decision to boycott the Summer Games in the Soviet capital.

The secretary encountered the stiffest opposition in Paris, where he had talks earlier in the day with French Foreign Minister Jean Francois-Poncet. France has argued that a

Democrats rush to register for closed caucuses

By TIM SIMMONS
State News Staff Writer

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last in a two-part series which goes behind the closed doors of the Michigan Democratic Party caucus system.

The list of Democrats who will be participating in Michigan's closed caucuses in April is growing quickly as the Feb. 26 deadline draws near.

Michigan Democrats who want to help choose their party's 1980 presidential candidate must register with the Democratic Party by Feb. 26.

A few thousand more Democrats are expected to register during the last week, said Shirley Gray, public information director of the Michigan Democratic Party.

"We expect boxes and bags of forms these last few days," Gray said. "In 1976 we had about 8,000 memberships arrive in the last few days."

THE MEMBERSHIP DRIVE, as well as the closed caucus system itself, has been criticized by Republicans and Democrats who favor Michigan's open primary elections.

The Michigan Democratic Party was forced to use a caucus system after the National Democratic Party ruled the open primary system to be in violation of party rules.

When the membership drive began, the state party placed a $10 fee on memberships, with a $2 fee for retirees and a $3 fee for full-time students.

The practice was soon dubbed a "poll tax" by its opponents and the backlash forced the party to drop the money requirement for new members.

Regardless of this fact, however, the state Democratic party expects to receive about $200,000 this year in membership fees, Gray said.

PEOPLE WHO DO not need to register for caucus participation include those who were 1979 Democratic Party members and those who were Democratic precinct delegates in 1978.

The Democratic Party is predicting 30,000 to 40,000 people will be eligible to participate in the April 26 closed caucuses.

When Michigan used an open presidential primary to select delegates in 1972 more than 1.5 million people participated.

More than 700,000 people voted as Democrats in the 1976 open presidential primary in Michigan.

The vast difference in the number of people involved in selecting delegates has changed campaigning strategy.

Thousands of phone calls and personal appeals will be the modus operandi of dedicated campaign workers hoping to give their candidates an edge in the delegate selection.

CAMPAIGN WORKERS MUST identify their supporters, register them, and make sure they turn out at the caucuses.

Potential supporters will be identified by volunteers, interest groups and the party itself.

The smaller number of participants in the 1980 delegate selection process will make the voter "a valuable commodity," said Morely Winograd, former Democratic state chairperson.

Afghanistan not crisis, prof says confrontation with the U.S., Slusser added.

"Because the self-proclaimed regime in Afghanistan is failing, it was in the ideological interests of the Soviets to use power to stabilize that society," he said.

Vladimir Shlapentokh, a former Russian citizen and currently MSU visiting professor of sociology, said most Soviets probably support their country's invasion into Afghanistan because they are patriotic.

"Every Russian feels threatened by China. The possibility of alliances between the United States and China is a nightmare to them," Shlapentokh said.

Donald Lammers, MSU history professor, moderated the three-hour discussion, which was co-sponsored by the Undergraduate History Club, MSU's East European Studies Program and Great Issues.

Vance wins little support for boycott

boycott would disrupt East-West detente, and Vance apparently failed to alter that position.

At a brief news conference on the steps of the Foreign Office after conferring with Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington, Vance refused to be drawn into a discussion of the French stance. He would only say, "The French have not yet arrived at a final decision. I said I was seeking a coordinated response, not that everybody had to agree with the United States."

He described his European talks as "very useful," and said he found "general agreement on the nature of the (Soviet) threat and on the general objectives." But, he added, "There are differences of opinion on how to carry them out."

Vance told reporters in Paris, "There was a great degree of similarity on the analysis and origins" of the situation in Afghanistan, "but some differences on actions remain." He refused to say what the differences were.

Despite the French opposition to an Olympic boycott, State Department spokesperson Hodding Carter told reporters the U.S. has only just begun the process of enlisting backers for the boycott. "This is an idea that has come to a number of countries and that number will grow," he said.

West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt has indicated his country will delay announcing a decision on a boycott until May 19, the deadline to accept or reject the formal invitation from the Soviets to take part in the Summer Games.

"We have for a long time said that it is up to the Soviet leadership to create the circumstances that would make possible participation by all," Schmidt said after a two-hour meeting with Vance on Wednesday. "We want to give a few people in the world another chance to create a structure which will enable participation by all."

"They're going to get more attention than they've had in the last 10 years," he said.

THE FIGHT OVER Michigan's 141 Democratic delegates will begin at 11 a.m. April 26 when registered party members begin to convene in schools, armories, fire stations and other places across the state.

Some caucuses are expected to last only 30 minutes, while others will probably carry on for 12 hours or more.

Actual delegates will then be chosen the following week. Through the caucus system 96 delegates will be chosen directly.

On May 10 the remaining 45 delegates will be chosen. Thirteen of these remaining 45 will be chosen as "add-on" delegates to ensure party leaders a place in the nominating process. The "add-on" delegates will be chosen by the 96 delegates already selected.

AN ADDITIONAL 32 "at-large" delegates will complete Michigan's Democratic representation and ensure that the total group meets affirmative action goals. "At-large" delegates are chosen by the State Democratic Central Committee. Although the closed caucus system has been criticized by many people and called a "major embarrassment for all Michigan residents" by Gov. William G. Milliken, it will probably determine Michigan's delegation at the Democratic National Convention.

On Feb. 5 Milliken said there is "a little less than even chance" that Michigan Democrats will abandon their caucus system.

Michigan Democratic Chairperson Olivia P. Maynard, said, however, that there is no chance the closed caucuses will be dropped.

House bill may limit paraphernalia sales

By TIM SIMMONS
State News Staff Writer

Sales of all smoking paraphernalia to people less than 19 years of age will be prohibited if a bill introduced in the House Thursday is passed by the Legislature.

The sponsor of the bill, Rep. Richard Fitzpatrick, D-Battle Creek, said legislation is necessary to limit paraphernalia sales because manufacturers are purposely exploiting the elementary and high school student market.

"The new paraphernalia romanticizes drug use and is often aimed at children," Fitzpatrick said. "Frisbees with built-in pot smoker's pipes, 'Space Ship Enterprise' roach clips and comic strip character stash holders are made for one reason: to appeal to young people."

Despite the fact that legislation banning paraphernalia has never been upheld anywhere in the nation, this bill is constitutional, Fitzpatrick said.

"THE SUPREME COURT has held that the state can protect minors in ways that we can't protect adults. Secondly, we solve the definition by including all smoking paraphernalia and smoking material, whether intended for an illegal substance or for tobacco," he said.

Fitzpatrick added that a recent survey of East Lansing High School students showed that two-thirds of the student population has tried marijuana and one-quarter said they smoked pot on a weekly basis.

"We have found that smoking marijuana is a problem at even the fourth-grade level," Fitzpatrick said. "By the age of 12 or 13 most children have had to decide whether or not to use drugs."

"Look at the absurdity of the situation today in Michigan: a 20-year-old family man cannot buy a beer, but a 12-year-old junior high school student can buy a Whamo-bong," he said.

The Democrat illustrated his point at the press conference with an orange bong made in Trenton and added he did not think the bill would have a large economic impact on the paraphernalia industry in the state.

"IF WE LOSE a few jobs along the way it will only be a handful and that is unfortunate," he said. "There is probably nothing the Legislature can do to stop this widespread abuse completely. However, one step in that direction is the legislation we are proposing today," he said. "What it does is prohibit the dissemination or sale of smoking paraphernalia to persons less than 19 years of age."

The representative said he did not smoke marijuana regularly, but refused to answer if he had ever.

'Vapors not hazardous'

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

Although vapors in Kresge Art Center do not pose any health hazards, there is a number of ways in which safety at the center can be improved, it was announced at a press briefing Thursday.

However, long range remodeling changes in Kresge to completely rid it of the vapor problem could cost nearly $1 million, said John E. Cantlon, MSU vice president for research and development.

A University investigation showed vapors at Kresge did not exceed permissible levels set by the state and were "more in the class of an objectionable work condition than a confirmed health hazard," Cantlon said.

But "we're not happy with the environment in the building," he added.

To help cope with the vapor problem, Cantlon outlined a three-phase program which the University has already begun to implement.

Phase one of the program includes:

- a safety education program for students and faculty in Kresge;
- proper posting of certain areas of the building to limit access, as is done in chemistry and other buildings on campus;
- posting no smoking signs where there is a fire hazard;
- ordering safe storage cabinets for solvents and approved waste containers;

analyzing and providing estimates for alterations which can be made to the building; and

• regularizing safety inspections of the building.

In phase two, classes will be rescheduled so processes which generate fumes can be restricted to a few areas of the building.

Currently, vapors are in the air in "more than half the building," said Roger L. Funk, chairperson of the art department.

Also in phase two, as many building alterations as can be afforded will be done, Cantlon said, and the safety program will be assessed.

Phase three includes updating and redesigning ventilating systems in Kresge, a process which could cost nearly $1 million, Cantlon said.

However, due to the cost, phase three will probably be carried out in small stages as funds become available, he said.

"Where you don't have a confined health hazard," Cantlon explained, "it vies for priority with other things."

When Kresge was built in 1958, only three rooms were equipped to exhaust fumes outside. Air in the other rooms was recirculated to keep heating costs down.

Earlier this year, students were warned that vapors from solvents could be harmful to those with allergies. One student complained that her contact lenses were destroyed by the fumes.

Group protests segregated swim

By LESA DOLL
State News Staff Writer

The recent designation of separate swimming hours for women at the IM Sports-Circle pool has sparked angry criticism from many who feel men are being deprived of swimming time.

The change, which began winter term, specifies certain times five days a week for only women to swim.

A group of 457 faculty members, students and concerned citizens is protesting the schedule.

Ron Suter, a professor in the Department of Philosophy, has instigated a petition drive to acquire swimming hours for men. He said there is an equal number of men on campus "equally interested" in swimming.

The petition brings up two points, he said. One concern is that men are given no specified times for single-sex swimming.

Suter's other concern was that hours for women only would "oppose the letters and spirit of Title IX, which demands a halt to sexist policies." "There appeared to be enough women," said Moses

Turner, vice president for student affairs, "who would make use of the single-sex swimming that it would not deprive other individuals of using the facility."

Turner said the decision to specify women's swimming hours stemmed from a concern with maximizing swim time for cost effectiveness. He said there were not enough men involved

A second look at incarceration

When hundreds of maddened inmates ran amuck through the corridors of New Mexico State Penitentiary, wrecking facilities and killing more than 30 "informants" with a savagery rivaled only by the most grisly scenes of war, attention in Michigan turned quickly to the problems of the state's own overcrowded, antiquated prison system. The tragedy in New Mexico raised serious questions about the efficacy of incarceration. And suddenly even supporters of hard-line corrections programs were harboring second thoughts about Gov. William G. Milliken's proposal to dole out as much as $400 million over the next 10 years to build still more prison facilities.

Their reservations, though a bit late in coming, are welcome if only for the reason that they raise the possibility of rehabilitating criminal offenders by non-traditional methods which have been neglected in the rush to build a "law and order" society. Until now, incarceration has been the byword of law enforcement, the prison system's lack of success being chalked up to the incorrigible nature of its inhabitants or brushed aside for supposed lack of alternatives.

The workability of those "non-existent" options has been brought to light recently, and not a moment too soon. Speaking before a joint legislative committee on prison overcrowding, Milton Rector, president of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency, suggested last week that Michigan could pocket its prison expansion funds if it were to implement a number of alternative corrections programs. In fact, Rector stated, the state could safely divert about 40 percent of its prison population to such programs. And it could save money and improve its rehabilitation record at the same time. Rector's visions are admittedly idealistic; his rehabilitation figures are probably somewhat inflated and his cost figures more appealing than they would be in actual practice. But his plan bears examination as an alternative to conventional incarceration. If there is one area of consensus between "law-and-order" advocates and proponents of "soft-line" rehabilitation programs, it is that the prison system, by and large, has been a wretched failure. First-time and hard-core offenders, white-collar criminals and those convicted of violent offenses are thrown together with little regard to social or mental well-being, and the goal of mere containment replaces that of rehabilitation. Recidivism rates are higher than ever. And even the most optimistic prison officials concede that the present system is little more than a holding tank which probably does more to encourage crime than to discourage it.

Ironically, Rector's plea for self-examination comes at a time when "law and order" sentiment in Michigan, and the nation as a whole, is running at a fever pitch. Clearly, there must be a distinction made between hard-core offenders for whom incarceration may be the only safe solution, and non-violent, first-time felons who could logically benefit from alternative correction programs. Despite the present tide, however, Michigan has always been a state where progressive approaches to the problems of crime have been given a reasonable chance. Rector's suggestions, as unconventional as they might seem, should be given that same chance. At worst, they could cost the state a small sum for experimentation; at best, they could provide a substantial savings of money and human dignity.

Draft resolution misses its mark

Nearly a month after President Carter's announcement of the reinstatement of draft registration, a week after PIRGIM-MSU's anti-draft protest rally and three weeks after PIRGIM's rally at the University of Michigan, MSU's major student governing group has finally decided to take a stand on the issue. ASMSU voted Tuesday to actively oppose the reinstatement of draft registration, an opinion that many had formed back when the increasing international tensions originally spurred the draft question.

ASMSU's opinion on this issue, had it been formed earlier, might have been beneficial to the group's chairperson during a recent trip to Washington to meet with the president. But two weeks ago, ASMSU members avoided the issue by sending it back to committee after they had dealt with a heavy internal issue. A week later they tabled it.

Granted, Student Board Chairperson Bruce Studer probably could not have voiced his views to the president during the 15 minutes that Carter did speak to college student representatives, but we think this "meeting" with the president and his aides might have been more of a learning experience for Studer and ASMSU had they been able to form an opinion beforehand and develop it as more information became available. It seems, however, that the only vital information about draft registration that Studer returned with was the fact that the registration plans would be implemented. Studer himself said the president "touched gently" on the issue. We think the information Studer learned on this trip could have easily been obtained from the airwaves or a newspaper — and that about three weeks ago. The cost of the trip, about $250, could surely have gone toward the promotion of the group's opinion had it been formed earlier.

ASMSU seems to have been deliberately tardy in defining its position on the issue. After many other student groups expressed discontent with the reinstatement, it was definitely much easier for this local group to follow the pack. But is the student group so insecure with its opinions as to wait until after everyone else has been confident enough to air their views? Before tabling the issue last week, one representative said more time was needed to define constituents' opinions on the issue. But we think student government could have been more expedient in acting on an issue which is of extreme importance to and would directly affect so many of us.

'LASH' LARROW

Fair play for Hildebrand

I'm takin' a break in the dance marathon out at Meridian, this James Madison creep comes over.

"I was talking with one of MSU's top vice presidents today, Lash," he announces, leaning sideways at my partner. "He says if Milliken puts you on the trustees to replace Smydra, nobody'll be able to tell the difference. You have anything to say to that?"

"That's only his opinion," I wheeze. "You want to talk about it, see me during my office hours."

"I've tried that," the turkey says acutely. "You're never there. Anyway, I've been looking for you for days now to ask you what the University's going to do about Hildebrand. I figured you'd know, you being a member of the top administration and all."

"The judge ordered the 'U' to take him back," I snarl, taking a whiff from the oxygen mask. "What is there to ask about?"

"All the court said was Hildebrand is to be reinstated by spring term," he says. "What worries me is the judge didn't give the University any guidelines as to the terms of his reinstatement."

"Who needs guidelines?" I says. "Hildebrand was an associate prof when the 'U' zapped him back in '69, right? The judge orders him reinstated, OK, they take him back as an associate prof, same as he was then."

"What salary are they going to pay him?" he asks doubtfully. "I'm afraid that without guidelines from the court, the 'U'll put him back on the payroll at the salary he was getting in 1969, too. I looked it up, Lash, he was only getting $15,000 in those days."

"Hold it right there, bub!" I bark. "You ever stop to think that's all the 'U' can afford to pay him? MSU doesn't have its own printing press like Uncle Sam has, you know."

"Then how can the 'U' afford to pay all those provosts and vice presidents up there in the ad building $50,000 a year and up?" he wonders.

"If they weren't worth every nickel they get," I says, "they wouldn't be laying those big bucks on themselves."

"I hadn't thought of it that way," he admits. "What if Hildebrand turns down that offer, says he can't feed his family on $15,000 a year, Lash?"

"You ask me, he's mighty lucky to get that offer," I says. "The University could throw half that much at him, they'd be complying with the judge's order."

"I was hoping you'd give your pals in the administration some advice on a fair way to treat Hildebrand when he comes back," he says. "They'd listen to you."

"Why does the 'U' have to be fair to Hildebrand?" I snaps. "You got any suggestions?"

"You told us in your labor law class, Lash, when a worker is fired for union activity the Nation Labor Relations Board orders the employer to put them back on the job at the salary and at the level they'd be at now if they hadn't been unlawfully fired."

"Hildebrand wasn't fired for union activity," I corrects him sternly. "He wasn't fired," either. He just wasn't reappointed. So this NLRB of yours don't apply."

"I know that," he says impatiently. "He was fired for exercising his right of free speech. But the principle is the same, Lash."

I did some checking, and I found out that in '69, his salary was the average of what the profs in his department were getting.

"Nowadays, the average is $30,000. From what you told us in class, the NLRB would tell the 'U' that when Hildebrand comes back that's what they have to give him."

"OK, wiseguy," I says. "What would this board of yours say about Hildebrand's rank and tenure when the 'U' takes him back?"

"They'd say that in Hildebrand's department," he says, "you put in your five years, you get tenure. He'd have been a full prof with tenure, in 1973."

"I get the impression, Lash," he muses, "you're not sold on what I've been saying. He's been sweating this out for 10 years. Don't you agree it's about time he got a fair shake from the 'U'?"

"No I don't," I growls. "You set a precedent in this case, you'll see an army of grumblers marching on the courts lookin' for a handout."

VIEWPOINT: RIGHTS

Draft is just another violation

By TODD LOVAAS

The recent raft of letters to The State News decrying registration and the draft tend, however unintentionally, to make a point about the power of state bureaucracies vis-a-vis individuals and rights.

I don't believe that most of those who oppose the draft are "cowards," or "parasites," as some conservatives charge. Most of us are willing to fight our own battles, and most of us hold certain ideals, beliefs, loved ones or whatever in such high regard that we might be willing to fight and die for them. Those who would be subject to the draft, though, and who would therefore be doing the dying, would naturally prefer not to do so just because someone else (the state) declares their lives are less important than some vague "national interest."

The anti-draft argument, then, is simply put: an individual's life ought not be forfeit to any goal, ideology, or interest, no matter how grand and just, unless that person freely consents to the arrangement.

Every power that the government exercises, it exercises, ultimately, at the point of a gun. The state has the power to draft us, and we quite correctly condemn that power as illegitimate and unjust. The injustice is not ameliorated just because the draft or its objectives are popular with the general public, (as they are) or even if war is, in fact, necessary for the betterment of the nation or the world. We claim to be fighting communism, after all, and the notion that the individual and his interests are subordinate to the state and its interests has lent legitimacy to most of the atrocities committed by socialist governments in the name of "the people."

Consistency, though, I believe, demands that we place the same constraints on our own interests that we wish to place on the interests of those who would trade lives for oil. Let us be just as quick to condemn, then, the violation of others' rights, even if we are the beneficiaries, as we are in condemning the draft, lest we become the ethical equivalent of those who believe our lives are less important than their lifestyle.

Rights are violated when people are drafted. Rights are violated when the state can dictate to a business person what prices to charge, what wage must be paid to his employees, and what a "fair" profit is. Rights are violated when workers and employers are forced to contribute to a "social security" system that is the economic equivalent of a chain letter.

Rights are violated when the average worker, over a lifetime, is extorted out of approximately 20 years of labor, in the form of taxation, to fund a voracious bureaucracy, ever willing to provide more "protection" or "security" to what it sees as a hapless, ignorant, public, in exchange for the liberty of individuals.

Rights are violated when the private sexual activities of consenting adults are subject to majority approval. Rights are violated when one finds, as the narcotics agents drag him away, that he does not even own his own body.

The examples of state intrusion into the private and voluntary activities and transactions between individuals is all but endless, of course, and the draft is only the latest violation or attempted violation of what ought to be our rights. Only by reducing to the barest minimum all the powers of the state can individuals even hope to live in freedom.

It will take sacrifices, to the extent that each of us benefits, in some ways, from the government's trampling on other peoples' rights, but if we expect to avoid being trampled ourselves, we owe it to ourselves to make those sacrifices. So to those who demand my life to defend what they deem to be national interests, and to the various people of both the left and right, I offer the following from William Simon: "If you would not confront your neighbor and demand his money (or life, or liberty) at the point of a gun to solve every new problem that may appear in your life, you should not allow the government to do it for you."

Normalization a beacon for peace

Tuesday, Feb. 26, is a momentous day in the continuing quest for world peace. It is the day when two nations that have engaged in four wars in the last 32 years exchange ambassadors and officially establish normalization. Last week, with emotional speeches, Israel opened an embassy in Cairo and Egypt one in Tel Aviv. This is an event for which we should rejoice. The exchange of ambassadors is another milestone of the peace process taking place now in the Middle East. The Camp David accords offer a concrete beginning to a comprehensive settlement involving all of the nations and peoples of the region, including a solution to the Palestine question.

The Israeli-Egyptian peace process should be viewed by all the nations of the world as proof that two leaders who were outright enemies three years ago can embrace each other as friends today. Menachem Begin and Anwar Sadat have set an example for other Middle East leaders; that two men who possessed opposite and dogmatic views as to the means to achieve peace, can reach a compromise benefiting each of their countries.

On Tuesday, Feb. 26, we will be holding a peace rally at 12:30 p.m. on the Farm Lane Bridge honoring the exchange of ambassadors. We invite the entire MSU community to join us in this celebration. We look forward to the day when all the peoples of the Middle East are able to live together in brotherhood. Salaam, Shalom, Peace!

Bowling teams are overlooked

I am certain that The State News has a good reason for ignoring one of the top athletic teams at MSU. But as a longtime fan of the MSU bowling team, I am curious to know what that reason is.

In the fall, the team's accomplishments surpassed every other athletic team at MSU, varsity or otherwise. It had to beg for coverage then. Now in the winter months, it is still among the top teams in competition and is refused any coverage in The State News.

The men's and women's teams are ranked 13th and 14th, respectively, in the nation. They are both at the top of their leagues, with the second-place teams groveling far behind. They have had superior performances in all their national and state tournaments, including the Las Vegas Invitational and the ACUI Tournament at Kent State University.

It is disturbing that such a representative of MSU cannot be given any consideration by The State News.

What does an athletic team have to do to gain the support of this newspaper?

FTC halts Ford's warranties

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ford Motor Co. has agreed to notify customers about potential problems they otherwise might not know about until their cars break down, the Federal Trade Commission said Thursday.

FTC officials said the consent agreement signed by Ford is a major break in an auto industry practice of maintaining "secret warranties" to cover manufacturing defects.

The FTC officials said car owners are not informed about these warranties, which are invoked only in unusual cases where the consumer complains vigorously.

The automobile industry maintains there are no secret warranties because car dealers are notified about the extra warranty protection.

Soviets, Moslems battle

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (AP) — Moslem soldiers of the Afghan army killed some 50 Soviet soldiers when they arrived at Ghazni Airport, 80 miles southwest of Kabul, the Afghan capital, the Pakistan Press International reported Thursday.

Later, in retaliation, the Soviets killed all the Afghan soldiers posted at the airport by strafing them from gunship-helicopters, said the report, which could not be independently confirmed. The agency did not say how many Afghan soldiers were killed or when the reported attacks took place.

Chicago man contracts polio

CHICAGO (AP) — A 24-year-old man has come down with polio, the first case in Chicago in 10 years, and authorities said Thursday they fear the disease could spread this summer.

Margot Phillips, a spokesperson for Cook County Hospital, said the disease was first diagnosed by the hospital staff in August but confirmation was received only Tuesday from the national Center for Disease Control.

She said the victim was partially paralyzed and has "great difficulty" walking. He was not identified.

Afghans protest

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Almost all merchants in Kabul shut down their shops Thursday in the most dramatic demonstration thus far of Afghan opposition to the Soviet military occupation in this capital city.

"We have won a great victory today," one shopkeeper told a group of Western reporters. "We have shown the Russians what the Afghan people think of them."

The protest, bringing the commercial life of this city of one million people to a halt, was staged in response to leaflets in which Afghanistan's anti-communist rebels urged the shopkeepers to show their "unanimous condemnation" of Moscow's 2-month-old military intervention.

Firefighters locked out

CHICAGO (AP) — Striking firefighters tried to return to work at their regular fire houses Thursday but the city locked them out, jeopardizing a truce that had raised hopes of renewed negotiations.

Frank Muscare, Chicago Firefighters Union president, ordered the 4,350 firefighters in the nation's third-largest city back to work at 11 a.m. on the eighth day of their walkout, but strikers were not allowed inside stations.

Circuit Judge John F. Hechinger said the city had instituted the lockout because the union violated the back-to-work agreement. He did not specify the violation but said, "the men (firefighters) did one thing at the request of their union and the city took that as a violation of the order."

Calif. awaits next storm

(AP) — Floodwaters gushed over the tops of overloaded dams and broke through levees Thursday across Southern California, sending thousands of people fleeing the desert resort region of Palm Springs and inundating a hotel and shopping district in San Diego.

New rain from the sixth in a series of Pacific storms over the past nine days, which have left at least 31 people dead and damage in the hundreds of millions of dollars, also threatened dams in Arizona, Idaho and Utah.

A seventh storm was expected to hit the California coast Thursday night.

Reagan-Bush debate still on WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Election Commission refused Thursday to stop a scheduled one-on-one debate Saturday night in New Hampshire between Republican presidential candidates George Bush and Ronald Reagan.

Sens. Howard Baker of Tennessee and Bob Dole of Kansas and Rep. John Anderson of Illinois had appealed to the regulatory agency to stop the debate, which is being sponsored by the Nashua Telegraph.

The complaint had argued that by limiting the forum to Bush and Reagan, the newspaper had chosen front-runners in the New Hampshire presidential primary next Tuesday, and was giving them an advantage over other GOP candidates vying in the election.

Landscape students help design city park

By NUNZIO LUPO
State News Staff Writer

Approximately 110 MSU landscape architecture students will have a chance to see their ideas for Lansing's Ranney Park come true.

Ranney Park, bounded by the East Lansing city limits and the Frandor Shopping Center, is the subject of the second annual "Vertical Studio," sponsored by the MSU School of Urban Planning and Landscape Architecture.

Vertical Studio allows landscape architecture students to devise master plans and suggestions for real-life developments.

The students were divided into 12 teams. The best five team designs for the 19-acre parcel will be presented to the Lansing Department of Parks and Recreation at 2 p.m. today.

"A lot of the students really enjoy a realistic project," said Patricia Cornelisse, a teaching assistant who is coordinating the project.

The week-long project began Monday, and classes for sophomore, junior and senior landscape architecture students were suspended this week to allow them time to devise ideas for the park.

Cornelisse said the city parks (continued on page 11)

Prosecutor may install computer

By MOLLY MIKA
State News Staff Writer

Ingham County is being offered $180,000 of computer equipment to establish a Prosecutor's Management Information System.

Ingham County is one of eight Michigan counties targeted to share a $2 million grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, said Prosecuting Attorney Peter Houk.

Houk told the Law and Courts Committee Wednesday he expects the system to improve case management.

"Currently, if I need to know which court cases are more than six months old, an employee would have to thumb through more than 12,000 files," Houk said.

the county would pay $12,000 a year to maintain the hardware equipment, Goergen said.

THE PROSECUTING ATTORNEY'S association is working on grants to provide a technical staff for the system, he added.

With the purchase of additional terminals, the system could be expanded to the courts, the county jail, and the sheriff's department, Houk said.

Commissioner Don Tavano, D-Lansing, said that some of the information within those departments is very confidential.

"There needs to be control over the security of that information," he said.

Goergen said one version of the system runs on a buffered terminal with pre-selected security.

"THE RESPONSIBILITY for disbursement of information would be with the department heads," he said.

If a department head does not provide access to information that, by law, should be accessible, there is recourse in the courts, he said.

Commissioner Mark Grebner, D-East Lansing, said he anticipated problems and suggested that the board reserve the right to appoint a policy board.

BUT A COMPUTER system in the prosecutor's office could provide this information immediately, as well as process subpoenas and set up calendars, he said.

The county saves money through more efficient handling of cases, said John Goergen, a member of the Prosecuting Attorneys association of Michigan, which is administering the grant.

With better scheduling, police officers would no longer need to work overtime on cases and witnesses could be scheduled to make one trip instead of several trips to testify, said Goergen, assistant director for the project.

The federal grant would pay for all hardware, as well as the starting costs, Houk said.

If the county Board of Commissioners accepts the grant,

Employees protest hiring policy before MSU Board of Trustees

By ANNA BROWNE
State News Staff Writer

Members of the MSU Employees' Association will address the Board of Trustees today to protest the 30-day delay which has been imposed on all non-academic positions at the University.

Barbara Reeves, president of MSUEA, said the personnel office must wait 30 days before posting notices of vacant positions within the campus clerical staff. Positions have previously been posted every week.

"Now there will be a month's delay, which means the extra work created by the position vacated must be absorbed by remaining personnel," Reeves said.

The MSUEA represents 2,500 clerical and technical workers on campus.

"This will affect both faculty and students," she said. "Our employees do all the form processing and paper work for transcripts, grades and registration. Students may find it harder to get their grades this term."

"This is another case of the people at the bottom being dumped on" with no sacrifice from the people at the top," Reeves said. "University officials claim they have to make these cutbacks in order to provide the 2 percent April 1 salary increase for faculty and administrative professionals. Why couldn't the University look first to make these cutbacks from the huge raises given to MSU administrators in October?"

"Our primary concern is that this is a temporary solution the University made without thinking through the ramifications of it," she said. "They are making (continued on page 11)

'CRUISING'

Why the big controversy?

By MARY TINNEY
State News Reviewer

Cruising (United Artists, at the Spartan Triplex), the controversial story of Greenwich Village homosexuals victimized by a psychotic killer, opened last week to cries of anger from gay groups all over the country. Organized gays, saying that the film is both unfair and dangerous, staged massive protests at both the San Francisco and New York openings, and smaller but equally vocal gay opposition has erupted in nearly every city that has shown the film. The emotional outcry has caused star Al Pacino to disown the film altogether.

"It's a horrible movie," Pacino said as he left the New York theater opening. "I wish I'd never made it."

"Absolute trash," a friend of mine who had seen the film told me unequivocally, and the critics have either panned it without many specifics or hemmed and hawed, avoiding decisive judgment but intimating that the film is ugly and maybe, as many gays have alleged, even dangerous.

Why, I wonder after seeing Cruising is everyone so afraid of this film?

Cruising is based on actual events that took place in New York City from 1962 to 1979. During those years a series of unsolved "bag murders" took place. Dismembered limbs and torsos, some of them mutilated and wrapped in black plastic bags — washed ashore near the World Trade Center and on the New Jersey shore of the Hudson River. Physical evidence such as tattoos and remnants of unusual clothing, corroborated by testimony, indicated that at least four of the bodies were those of homosexuals who had frequented the waterfront S&M sex clubs. Another series of unsolved killings — "times of passion" in which the homosexual victims were mutilated or stabbed scores of times — occurred during the 17-year period. Police speculated that the crimes were related.

Patrol officer Randy Jurgenson was assigned to go undercover — to establish a gay identity in the S&M heavy leather bars and sex clubs, and to track down the murderer. It is his story that director William Friedkin dramatizes.

A message appears on the screen as the movie begins (added by Friedkin in a last minute attempt to appease angry gays) . . . "This movie is not intended to be an indictment of the gay community. It depicts actual events, places and people, far from the mainstream of gay life."

The world that Friedkin creates indeed seems far from the mainstream. It is, in fact, hard to imagine that this sweaty, secret, sadistic world — a world that is small and isolated, Friedkin takes pains to remind us — exists at all. With his dark, shadowy, sometimes surrealistic cinematography and the disturbing, repetitive Jack-Nitche musical score, Friedkin creates what seems more like a macabre fantasy-land, where every character and event is surrounded by a terrible fog of ambiguity, where each individual teeters on the edge of perversity.

Regardless of any particular criticisms, it's a fascinating, terrible, riveting world. Pacino is perfectly cast as Steve Burns, the police officer undercover. He has an intense always-on-the-brink-of-exploding presence that makes him instantly believable as the mysterious, not conclusively innocent officer. Burns feels as did the original officer, Jurgenson, and the criticisms have either panned it without many specifics or hemmed and hawed, avoiding decisive judgment but intimating that the film is ugly and maybe, as many gays have alleged, even dangerous.

Dismembered limbs and torsos, some of them mutilated and wrapped in black plastic bags — washed ashore near the World Trade Center and on the New Jersey shore of the Hudson River. Physical evidence such as tattoos and remnants of unusual clothing, corroborated by testimony, indicated that at least four of the bodies were those of homosexuals who had frequented the waterfront S&M sex clubs. Another series of unsolved killings — "times of passion" in which the homosexual victims were mutilated or stabbed scores of times — occurred during the 17-year period. Police speculated that the crimes were related.

Patrol officer Randy Jurgenson was assigned to go undercover — to establish a gay identity in the S&M heavy leather bars and sex clubs, and to track down the murderer. It is his story that director William Friedkin dramatizes.

A message appears on the screen as the movie begins (added by Friedkin in a last minute attempt to appease angry gays) . . . "This movie is not intended to be an indictment of the gay community. It depicts actual events, places and people, far from the mainstream of gay life."

The world that Friedkin creates indeed seems far from the mainstream. It is, in fact, hard to imagine that this sweaty, impression is that Friedkin has deliberately raised thematic questions to make the movie interesting for which he himself has no answers. Consequently, we feel we're being teased, even manipulated by a movie that doesn't give us sufficient information to make any conclusions. If the film has a major flaw, it is this manipulative ambiguity.

Al Pacino portrays Steve Burns, an undercover police officer stalking a killer through New York's gay community in Cruising.

Cruising is no more an anti-gay film than Looking For Mr. Goodbar is an anti-heterosexual film. Why was there no organized heterosexual argument that Looking For Mr. Goodbar portrayed a seamy side of heterosexual life and that it promoted violence against straights? Both movies depict a very specific, perverse side of sexuality — whether hetero or homosexual — and both films refrain from making any broad, invidious generalizations.

Friedkin, who has consistently taken risks with innovative films like The Exorcist and Boys in the Band, should be commended for the effort and courage it took to make a movie like Cruising. Although it is not without flaws, Friedkin has created a film that is relentless, probing, and not, by any means, without compassion.

CONCERT DEPT. Showcase jazz presents the McCoy Tyner Sextet, the popular jazz pianist and his band, in the Erickson Kiva at 8 and 10:30 tonight and Saturday. The tickets — available at the Union ticket office, WhereHouse Records II and Flat, Black, & Circular are $6 in advance and advance sale ends at noon today. Admission is $7 at the door.

Ten Pound Fiddle presents Peter Madcat Ruth — recently here with Taj Mahal — who will perform blues and jazz harmonica. The performance starts at 8 tonight in Williams Hall. Admission is $3.

Here are the music department events for the weekend: The Woodwind Quintet performs this at 5 p.m. today in the Music Auditorium. On Sunday, Dennis Burkholder will conduct the MSU Symphony Orchestra with guest soloist Yossi Zivoni, the Israeli violinist. That takes place at Fairchild Theater at 8:15 p.m. For other student recitals and information, call 355-3345.

THEATRE DEPT. PAC's Julius Caesar is sold out — which is regrettable if you didn't get tickets. The Boars-Head Theatre presents the American classic, Tennessee Williams, The Glass Menagerie, which will be presented in the Center for the Arts at 425 S. Grand Ave., Lansing Friday and Sunday shows are at 8 p.m., Saturday's are at 6 and 9 p.m. Tickets and information are available at 372-4636 or 484-7805.

The dinner theater at the Albert Pick Hotel will present Dudley Moore and Peter Cook's Good Evening, beginning with a 7 p.m. "burger & beer" dinner show Friday for $8, and a 7:30 p.m. Saturday (full course) dinner-show for $17.50. Call 337-1741.

The Lansing Community College presents the Vietnam drama Streamers at Partington Auditorium this weekend. Call 372-4636 for tickets or information. This weekend also has The Jade Dragon, presented by the MSU Toybox Theatre in the Arena Theatre. Tickets and information are available at 355-0148.

MOVIES DEPT. One new film in town, and that's the comedy Hero at Large with John Ritter from Three's Company. Isn't it great that the fine standards of TV can finally be brought into movies?

On campus (briefly), RHA presents comedy Love at First Bite, Robert Altman's original M*A*S*H, and the best of the Roger Moore-Bond films, The Spy Who Loved Me. Call 355-0313 for times, etc.

Classic films presents The 39 Steps and The Lady Vanishes, both directed by Alfred Hitchcock (at 7:30 and 9 tonight respectively in 109 Anthony Hall). Luis Bunuel's contemplative adventure The Milky Way is also to be shown (7:30 and 9:30 p.m. Saturday in 109 Anthony Hall; 8 p.m. Sunday in 336 Union). All Classic Films are $1.50, or $1 with RHA pass.

Other films include Holden Late Show's Gypsy (in G-8 Holden basement at 7:30 and 10 tonight — admission $1.50, free with RHA pass). Frontline Cinema presents Confidential Agent with Lauren Bacall, Charles Boyer and Peter Lorre and the civil war in Spain 7:15 and 9:30 tonight and Saturday, in B-104 Wells Hall — admission $1.50, 50 cents with RHA pass.

Beal films presents a truly bizarre film, the X-rated Through the Looking Glass. Through the Looking Glass (on the bill with the mainstream Misty Beethoven) is like no other porn film ever made or ever likely to be made again. Misty is at 7:30 and 10:30 p.m., Glass is at 9 p.m. midnight Friday and Saturday in B-104 Wells Hall, although we found another film scheduled there too. Oh well. Look around Wells Hall. Admission $2.50 students, $3.50 otherwise.

And finally, the classic horror-monster-special effects masterpiece King Kong (the '30s version) plays 100 Engineering Hall at 7, 9 and 11 tonight and Saturday. Admission is $1.50.

NO FUN DEPT. — No Fun Productions will be presenting a live rock 'n roll party in the Union Ballroom from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. Friday (the doors close at midnight, however — get their early!). The music will be provided by Trainable, The Deceivers (made up of members of the Scott Slash Band, Your Mother and the Melt-downs), and the Delinquents. Admission is $1.50. Bring Mom and Dad and the kiddies!

Tomorrow's music today

By JOHN NEILSON
State News Reviewer

Most rock groups — and I use that term loosely — go out of their way to appeal to the generally accepted notions of popular taste, a fact which eventually leads to stagnation in the music as uniformity becomes the rule. The dominant position held on local radio station playlists of heavy metal macho and pomp rock clones is one example of this — the recent outpouring of atavistic power pop combos is another. While neither form of music is inherently bad, the fact that they tend to dominate the medium and exclude new ideas and fresh approaches can only hurt rock music in the long run.

The following albums have in common the fact that they are debut LPs by groups on the leading edge of the not-so-new-any-more wave. Keeping at least one step ahead of the current trends, these groups are laying the groundwork for some intriguing new directions in rock, while providing some very real here-and-now pleasure to listeners willing to meet the music half-way.

The Cure — Three Imaginary Boys (Polydor Import 2383 539): A lot of groups, when interviewed, insist they want their music to speak for itself. With the Cure's album you don't get much of a choice. The album sleeve is devoid of any information about the songs, and even on the disc itself the song titles have been replaced by little symbols, forcing the hapless reviewer to deal in generalities in place of a track-by-track rundown.

Of the three albums mentioned here, Three Imaginary Boys is easily the most accessible. Guitarist Robert Smith, bassist Michael Dempsey and drummer Lol Tolhurst play a sparse and economical brand of pop music that leaves no fat on the bones, while the vocals owe a great deal to those of Pete Shelley of the Buzzcocks.

The fact that they can loosely be termed a "pop" band does not mean the Cure owes any great debt to the Beatles.

Rather, it refers to the fact that their songs are insidiously catchy considering their skeletal arrangements — crammed with guitar hooks and basslines that sort of follow the listener around for the rest of the day. Most of the songs deal with the images of modern life — boredom, isolation, urban dread and day-to-day violence show up repeatedly. The album's only non-original, meanwhile, is a version of Hendrix's "Foxy Lady," wherein the Cure wisely foregoes all attempts to imitate the original and come up with a streamlined new approach instead.

By avoiding gimmickry and unnecessary embellishments, the Cure actually comes closer to the approach of groups like Wire than to "new pop" groups like XTC, but fans of either would be well advised to pick up Three Imaginary Boys if they can find it.

Gang of Four — Entertainment! (EMC Import 3313): The juxtaposition of this group's name (taken from Chinese political history) with the tongue-in-cheek album title goes a long way toward clarifying exactly what Gang of Four is all about. Over a very danceable beat that draws heavily from the realm of disco/funk, Gang of Four piles on lyrics that are the antithesis of disco's escapist hedonism, and the results are surprisingly enjoyable.

The Gang of Four is an overtly political band, but they are political without the romantic overtones that infiltrate the Clash's world-view. They are Marxist, feminist and a pretty unromantic lot — the liner notes quote them as saying "I don't think we're saying there's anything wrong with love — we just don't think that what goes on between two people should be shrouded in mystery." Still, lyrics like "love will get you like a case of anthrax/and that's something I don't want to catch" are a far cry from "all you need is love." (They say the world has had enough of silly love songs, indeed!)

Other songs take a similarly cold-blooded look at class struggles, sexual struggles, the consumer lifestyle, TV news, war and the use of drugs to fill up empty lives. It's not exactly "yah, yah, shake your groove thing," or "push, push, in the bush," but then the references in "I Found That Essence Rare" that equate two-piece bathing suits with the early H-bomb tests on Bikini Island show that these guys aren't TOTALLY without a sense of humor.

If nothing else, Entertainment! is worth buying for Andy Gill's jarring guitar playing, which sends jagged shards of sound skittering every which way over the throbbing beat. Mao sez: "Buy new record by running dogs Gang of Four today!"

Cabaret Voltaire — "Mix-Up

(Rough Trade Import): These guys take their name from the club that spawned the Dada art movement in the early years of this century, and like the dadaists, Cabaret Voltaire attempts to shake its medium down to the very foundation. Their music is an oozing, throbbing morass of electronic sound that sucks the listener in to a world of nightmarish visions from which there is "No Escape."

Built on a framework of bass, guitar, and ominous electronics, Cabaret Voltaire's songs are little more than jigsaw puzzles of images that surface through the mix and then just as quickly disappear, playing the imagination of the listener for all it's worth. In many respects they are the new wave's tribute to Can, although they might also be the Mr. Hyde to Brian Eno's Dr. Jekyll.

"Mix-Up" makes absolutely no concessions to trends and popular tastes, yet the music is by no means inaccessible. Those who think that Gary Numan represents the perfect grafting of paranoid/alienated imagery with electronic sound should be forewarned — Numan may whine about disorientation in the modern world, but Cabaret Voltaire locks you in the fun-house until you beg for the key. A must for the adventurous.

Mutants to invade Dooley's Monday

The Mutants are probably THE best (or at least the most fun) band to come from Detroit's new wave scene. The band (John Amore, bass and vocals; Pasadena, guitar and organ; Art Lyzak, lead vocals; Steve Sortor, drums, and Tom Morwatts, guitar) actually originated prior to the new wave explosion, and Detroit rockers may remember one of the Mutants' initial gigs, opening for Iggy & the Stooges and Bob Seger at a Detroit ice rink in 1973.

The band has released two singles on the independent FTM label, and — while their most recent release, "Cafe Au Lait" b/w "I Say Yeah," is relatively weak — their first single, "So American" b/w "Piece O' S...", is an independent single classic. The Mutants are superb musically, but their best feature is an absurd tongue-in-cheek humor in both music and stage rapport which the band classifies as "Clemma" or "honesty in rock." (In a recent phone interview, John Amore said that "Clemma" is a Polish term dreamt up for the Mutants by their fans in Hamtramck.) Song titles such as "You Like Pizza," "The Happy Weasels," "Molecular Weights," "College Grad," "Jesus Was A Hard Workin' Man" and covers of "Daydream Believer" or "Eve Of Destruction" are a small example of what Lansing rockers can expect when the Mutants perform at this week's Dooley's "I Don't Like Mondays" rock show.

Opening the show will be the Walkie Talkies, a new Detroit band which Amore describes as "a good, young band with an interesting approach." Tickets are $3 at the door.

Capture the flavor of the 1800's at Clara's

Venture out East Lansing, and experience the unique atmosphere of the early 1800's at Clara's, 637 East Michigan Avenue. Clara's offers you a warm friendly atmosphere in the midst of colorful stained glass, open air fans, and tropical plants.

You will find no other restaurant quite like Clara's in the Lansing area. The flavor of the 1800's truly is brought to life by the decor. Tiffany lamps are hanging near every table and booth. Clara's also has a balcony for the more intimate dining. If you are unfamiliar with the location it's the old train station.

Clara's has an extensive menu; something to please everyone. One of the many appetizing items on the menu is Clara's continental Beefburger, a 6 oz. beefburger served on a 6" loaf with Clara's chips. What is special about this burger is the selection of different toppings. For example, a German burger has sauerkraut, Swiss cheese and dressing. Italian burger includes pepperoni and provolone cheese, and that is just the beginning.

The most unusual item on the menu for you potato lovers is Clara's "Hot Potato." It is a steaming hot large baked Idaho topped with heaps of butter plus your choice of 12 different combinations. How does cheddar cheese and bacon sound or sauteed mushrooms, onions, peppers?

If you're in the mood for Pizza, well Clara also features, the excellent "Sir Pizza," fresh dough thin crust and 3 different sizes.

There are many more delicious items on the menu too numerous to mention, so come in and see for yourself. For your drinking pleasure... Clara's is now serving beer, wine and your favorite mixed drinks. Come join our cocktail hour Monday through Friday from 5-7 p.m.

Stop by for lunch or a casual dinner. We are open Monday-Thursday 11:00-1 am, Friday & Saturday 11:00-2 am, Sunday 12-12:00.

Indiana free throws kill Spartans, 75-72

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer

The Indiana Hoosiers beat the MSU Spartans for the second time this season Thursday night in Jenison Fieldhouse, and like in their first victory, they won it with free throws.

Indiana got only one field goal over the last six-and-one-half minutes, but sank 13 charity shots over the same stretch to nip MSU, 75-72, before a boisterous sell-out crowd of 10,004.

The Hoosiers trailed 42-38 at the half and were down until Mike Woodson hit a jumper to pull them ahead with over six minutes remaining. Woodson popped in two of those deadly free throws three minutes later to give Indiana the lead for good.

"It was a hard fought game, both teams played real well," a disheartened MSU coach Jud Heathcote said following the tough loss. "Maybe if we could have got a break or two we could have pulled it out. But you can't fault our team's effort. We played hard and well, so you have to give Indiana a lot of credit."

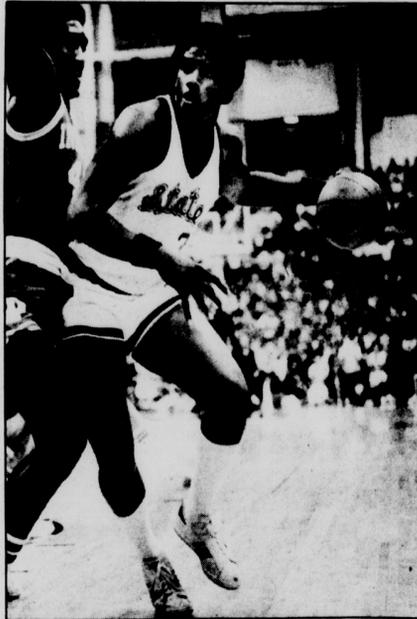

Indiana locked it up with just seven seconds left. Center Ray Tolbert hit the front end of a one-on-one from the line to give his team a 72-70 lead, but missed his second opportunity.

As five Spartans watched the ball bounce off the front lip of the rim, Tolbert retrieved the prized possession and was fouled by Kevin Smith. The junior from Anderson, Ind., calmly sank his next two tries from the line and it was over.

"I'm disappointed that we had a lead and lost it and I'm disappointed that we were asleep when Tolbert missed that free throw," said Heathcote. "You never know, we might have scored to tie it up."

Indiana coach Bobby Knight thought the key was when the Hoosiers pulled ahead.

"When we were down 56-50, we scored the next eight points and (continued on page 9)

PLAYOFF HOPES DEPEND ON THIS WEEKEND

Icers in crucial series with Irish

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

With four games remaining, and three of them in Munn Ice Arena, the MSU hockey team is still clinging to its hopes of qualifying for the Western Collegiate Hockey Association playoffs for the first time in three years.

This weekend, those chances can receive either a shot in the arm or be tossed out the window, as the Spartan icers face the University of Notre Dame at 7:30 tonight and at 3 p.m. Saturday.

After last weekend's split with the University of Denver, MSU finds itself in a tie for eighth place with the University of Wisconsin. Should the Spartans and Badgers end the season in a tie, however, the Badgers would get the nod for the final spot in the WCHA playoffs on the basis of total goals scored between the two schools in their series this year.

"Whether we end up battling Wisconsin, Michigan Tech or the University of Minnesota-Duluth, we've just got to go into each game and hope we can win it," MSU head coach Ron Mason said. "Wisconsin and Tech have tough schedules the rest of the way, and help from them is not going to matter if we don't win."

Last weekend against the Pioneers marked the fourth straight weekend in which MSU has won Friday night, only to come back on Saturday to lose.

"There's no way you can win consistently by having to outscore the opponent in order to beat them," Mason said. "That's why we have to receive hot goaltending down the stretch, especially if we're going to do better than splitting our last four games."

MASON SAID IF MSU splits its last four games, the final two of which are against the University of Michigan, it will need help from the other teams in the league to make the playoffs. If it can win three of its last four games, Mason said MSU would definitely make it.

The Fighting Irish will pose problems to the Spartans, however, as they have come on strong in the second part of the season. Notre Dame is currently fifth in the WCHA standings and own a 12-11-1 league record and a 16-14-1 mark overall.

Senior captain Greg Meredith leads Notre Dame in scoring with 30 goals and 25 assists for 55 points. Senior Tom Michalek is second in team scoring with 13 goals and 33 assists for 46 points.

Goaltenders Dave Laurion and Bob McNamara are expected to share the duty this weekend for the Fighting Irish. Sophomore Laurion is 6-9-1 with a 4.95 goals-against average, while freshman McNamara is 10-5-0 with a 4.68 average.

The Fighting Irish downed the Wolverines 5-4 in overtime in their first game of last weekend's series, then came back Saturday to skate to a 5-5 standoff.

Earlier this season, MSU split its series with Notre Dame, winning 5-4 and then losing 5-3 in South Bend, Ind.

Freshman Bob Martin, who missed last Saturday's game due to a kidney injury from the night before, is expected back in the Spartan lineup this weekend.

Sophomore Gary Harpell will be missing from tonight's game as a result of his kicking penalty in last Saturday's game. Harpell will play in Saturday's game against the Fighting Irish.

TRACKSTERS AT U-M

Bibbs looks for revenge

By WILL KOWALSKI
State News Sports Writer

Nothing beats an MSU-University of Michigan match-up for drawing the best out of Spartan athletes.

That could be the case Saturday when the MSU men's indoor track team travels to Ann Arbor for a re-match with the Wolverines.

At the Central Collegiate Meet held last weekend in U-M's Track and Tennis Building, the Spartans came in second behind the Wolverines, 129-77.5. Spartan coach Jim Bibbs is hoping to avenge that defeat, but remains optimistic as to his team's chances against the very talented U-M squad.

"The Wolverines are definitely favored to win the meet, but if we get some top performances from our distance crew of Michael White, Keith Moore, Martin Schulist and Ted Unold and from Randy Smith in the 300-yard run, we can make it close," Bibbs said.

"We had some real fine performances against Michigan last week, and we will need the same sort of production again on Saturday."

Two of those performances will carry a lot of weight in the future. Freshman Paul Piwinski cleared the 7-foot-1 and three-quarter inch level in the high jump, and sophomore Michael White recorded a 1:50.6 half-mile time, which is a new Spartan record.

BOTH FEATS QUALIFIED them for the season-ending NCAA meet to be held in the Joe Louis Arena in Detroit on March 14 and 15, and that now makes a total of five events in which MSU has made the national cuts in.

In fact, White's half-mile qualification marks the second event in which he will compete in March. Earlier, he ran a 4:05.7 mile against Western Michigan University that beat the time necessary for making the NCAA's.

Aside from an MSU victory, Bibbs also hopes to see a couple more of his tracksters make the qualifying cuts. In good positions to do so is another high jumper, Darryl Diamond, who is nearing the 7-foot mark; Calvin Thomas and Tyrone Williams in the 600-yard run; and Tim Kenney in the half-mile.

The Spartans will find their toughest competition in U-M's

Harlan Huckelby, who gave Smith a rough time in the 60-yard dash at the MSU Relays; plus Bill O'Reilly in the two-mile; James Ross in the long jump; Jim Lattny in the high jump; and Marshall Parks in the 60-yard high hurdles.

MSU will definitely be hurting in the hurdles as senior Andy Wells suffered an injury to his right knee at last week's meet in Ann Arbor. The injury required surgery, so Wells will be lost for the rest of the indoor season.

Hot no. 3 Sooners take on wrestlers

By JIM MITZELFELD
State News Sports Writer

The MSU wrestling team will try to end its dual meet season on a winning note at 7:30 p.m. Saturday when it takes on a very tough team from the University of Oklahoma in the IM Sports-West arena.

The third-ranked Sooners are the sixth nationally ranked team that coach Grady Peninger's Spartans have had to face in their last seven meets.

Oklahoma has a 14-5 dual meet mark while MSU is 11-7-1.

Peninger knows his team will have to be at its best to beat the Sooners but he's not counting out the possibility of an upset.

"They're not invincible," he said.

Peninger signaled out the matchup at 142 pounds between MSU's Jeff Therrian, who leads the Spartans with a 18-4-1 mark, and Andre Metzger as the feature match of the meet.

Metzger, whom Therrian beat last year, was named a Mid-Season All-America and beat one of the nations best in the 142-pound class in Le Roy Smith of Oklahoma State University. Last weekend was only the second time all season Therrian failed to win a match.

THE HEAVYWEIGHT CONFRONTATION between Shawn Whitecomb and the Sooners' Steve "Dr. Death" Williams will also be a showdown. Williams beat Whitecomb last season, so the Spartans' defending Big Ten Heavyweight champ will be looking for revenge.

Oklahoma features three other Mid-Season All-Americans in Frank DeAngelis at 134, Roger Frizzell at 150 and Isreal Sheppard at 158 pounds. DeAngelis finished in second place at the NCAA finals last year and is heavily favored at that weight.

The Spartans' 158-pounder, Fred Worthem, who has been upsetting some of the finest wrestlers in the nation on the way to compiling a 18-3-1 mark, will have his hands full with Sheppard.

"That match will be a very important one for both of them," Peninger said.

The meet will serve as a final preparation for the Big Ten meet scheduled for March 1 and 2. The conference championships will be hosted by MSU at Jenison Fieldhouse.

Spartans downed, 75-72

that was the whole ball game for us," he said. "We played on top from then on, we never had to play from behind and that was important for us."

All five Hoosier starters scored in double figures. Forward Mike Woodson had 20 and guard Butch Carter popped in 18.

"(Guard Isiah) Thomas played well," Knight said of the freshman who wore a bandage over his left eye as a result of a fight in his residence hall Tuesday. "I think he was only operating at 70 percent vision, but he controlled things. We got key baskets in the second half from Butch and Woodson played well."

"(Forward Steve) Bouchie has had problems at the free throw line, but he hit four in a row at the end and those were big baskets for us. It was a controlled game in the second half and that was our advantage."

Vincent led all scorers with 26 points, but they didn't come easy. "Indiana always plays aggressive, tenacious defense," Heathcote explained. "Jay always had two men on him. A couple times they took the ball away from him when he put it to the floor. Indiana's not a fast break club, but they take advantage of the breaks they do get and they scored five or six times on turnovers. That hurt."

Indiana remains tied for the Big Ten lead with Ohio State University, each with 10-5 marks. MSU is on the ropes with a 6-9 conference record.

The National Invitational Tournament had indicated that it wished to pit MSU against the University of Michigan in the first round with the contest to be played in the Pontiac Silverdome, but unless the Spartans can win at least two of their remaining three games, the tournament may have to scrap its plan.

MSU hosts Northwestern at 8 p.m. Saturday in the final home game of the season. The game will also mark the final home appearances of guards Terry Donnelly and Mike Longaker and forward Ron Charles.

Cagers host Scots

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

Riding on the heels of its third consecutive win, the MSU women's basketball team takes on Edinboro State College at 4 p.m. Saturday in the IM Sports-West arena.

The contest will be the last of the regular season for the Spartan cagers and will serve as a tuneup for the upcoming state tournament, which MSU will host next weekend.

The Fighting Scots are led by junior guard Lori Dolby's 18.5 points per game. After suffering a broken arm earlier this season, Dolby was forced to sit out six games, all of which Edinboro State lost.

Since her return, however, even while playing with her arm in a cast, Dolby has helped the Fighting Scots win eight of their last nine games. Edinboro State is 19-10 this season.

Besides Dolby, other players to watch will be starting forwards Audrey Scott and Tina Skidmore.

Scott, a 5-foot-8 senior, is second in team scoring with a 15 point average, while 6-foot-1 junior Skidmore is averaging 13.5 tallies per contest.

Freshman Linda Shorter will be the tallest player on the court Saturday, as she stands 6-feet-5 and averages 10.1 points per game.

"We've got a little bit of an incentive going into this game," MSU head coach Karen Langland said. "It will be a revenge-type match after losing to them last year 70-51 and also because Tina (assistant coach Tina Krahn) went to school at Edinboro State and played on the team for the same coach they have now."

Edinboro State is coached by 14-year veteran Judy Saurer, who owns a 155-55 career record.

MSU is led by senior co-captain Mary Kay Itnyre who is expected back in the Spartan lineup against the Scots after missing last Monday's game with Wayne State University. Itnyre, who has been suffering from a middle ear infection, is averaging 13.1 points per game.

Sophomores Nanette Gibson and Deb Traxinger are also carrying scoring averages in double figures, with Gibson averaging 11.9 per game and Traxinger carrying a 10.1 mark.

Fencers host pair in weekend duals

The MSU fencing team will attempt to close out the regular season Saturday with its first winning dual meet record since 1977.

The Spartans host the University of Detroit and Tri-State College at 10 a.m. in the upstairs gym of Jenison Fieldhouse.

Coach Charlie Schmitter's squad will take a 7-6 record into the meet. A win against one or both opponents would give the Spartans their best won-lost record since an 11-5 mark three years ago.

The dual with Detroit will pit MSU against Schmitter's alma mater.

Bryan Peterman tops the MSU squad with a 33-4 mark, having won his last 11 bouts. Chris Young has a 25-17 record in foil, while Brian Morrow and Jon Thomas have identical 22-17 marks in sabre.

Tennis team at U-M

The MSU women's tennis team travels to Ann Arbor Sunday for a dual meet with the University of Michigan at 2 p.m.

MSU head coach Earl Rutz will start five freshmen in the match with the Wolverines, who are the defending state champions.

Freshman Monte Gettys will play No. 1 singles for the Spartan netters, with freshman Jill Grinberg slated for the No. 2 slot. The pair will team together to play No. 1 doubles as well.

Senior captain Cindy Bogdonas will play No. 3 singles, while freshman Sue Kim will be in the fourth position. The tandem makes up MSU's No. 2 doubles team.

Freshmen Pam Pierce and Jennifer Tewes will play No. 5 and 6 respectively, besides combining their talents to make up the No. 3 doubles team.

"I'll be very anxious to see what kind of players we have," Rutz said, "and we have a lot of hope going into this match."

Heiden wins fourth medal

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Speed skater Eric Heiden, shaking off a near-disastrous slip, became the first man ever to win four gold medals in one Winter Olympics when he won Thursday's 1,500-meter race.

Asked about his slip on the third turn, Heiden said: "I think there is a rut in the ice and I didn't really step in it but just the pressure from my left foot going around the turn broke the ice and I fell into it after that. I came pretty close to falling and I had to put my arm down but it didn't sit in my mind too long after that. It passed pretty quick and I was just able to concentrate on the race again."

Heiden, the 21-year-old from Madison, Wis., was timed in an Olympic-record 1:55.44, surpassing the mark of 1:59.32, set in 1976 by Norway's Jan Egil Storholt.

A woman, Lydia Skoblikova of the Soviet Union, won four speed skating gold medals in 1964.

Heiden now has tied the total number of gold medals won by the 1952 U.S. team at the Winter Games. The only U.S. team in Winter Games history to win more than Heiden was the 1932 squad, which won six. And Heiden has one more race to run, the 10,000 meters on Saturday.

Norway's Kai Arne Stenshjemmet took the silver in 1:56.81 and Norway's Terje Andersen was third for the bronze in 1:56.92.

Wenzel, a 23-year-old native of West Germany, led the women's giant slalom after Wednesday's first run with a time of 1:14.33 seconds.

There is a place to satisfy the late night appetite.

COGS backs PIRGIM

By LOUISE WHALL
State News Staff Writer

The Public Interest Research Group in Michigan received a full vote of confidence from the Council of Graduate Students to continue their current funding procedures during registration, at the COGS meeting Wednesday.

PIRGIM currently uses a registration receipt card check-off system in which students can decide whether they wish to check off a $1 contribution for the non-profit organization. In order for the University to continue the system, PIRGIM must maintain at least a 20 percent rate of return over a two-year period.

Results of the most recent two-year period showed the check-off rate was only 19.6 percent. ASMSU has adopted a resolution to repeal the check-off system, so PIRGIM members made a report to COGS to enlist its support.

Several members of PIRGIM told the council about their current activities, especially those concerning graduate and professional students. The PIRGIM organization is working on a "truth in testing" bill which would ensure students greater access to their testing materials.

Other PIRGIM projects include lobbying against the Landlord Security Deposit bill, a grocery pricing survey, a copying price survey and the recent "March Against Nukes."

The council voted overwhelmingly to support PIRGIM's efforts to maintain the check-off system at registration.

In other action, the council elected Carl Friedlander, the College of Engineering representative, to fill the treasurer's seat immediately. Friedlander ran unopposed in the election.

The council also voted to table two motions from groups requesting funds. One request came from the Health Professions Indochina Relief Committee and the other was a request to attend the National Conference on Rural Primary Care.

Discussion was resumed concerning the possibility of establishing a computer account for COGS to analyze the results of its recent Employment Forum survey. After determining that the number of surveys to be analyzed was too small to require computer analysis, the motion failed.

No free services — health board

By DAVE VARGA
State News Staff Writer

A minimum fee of $2 will be charged for previously free clinical services offered to low-income people, the Ingham County Board of Health decided Wednesday.

The minimum fee and updated sliding fee schedule will be submitted to the County Board of Commissioners for approval in March.

The fee schedule was updated according to federal poverty levels and is termed sliding because charges are based on family size and income.

The clinical services involved in the change are all family planning, pre-natal, dental, adult health and all other services that were not previously free for the public, said Bruce Bragg, director of the County Board of Health.

Updating the schedule and instituting a minimum fee will result in very little additional revenue for the county, because most people who use the clinical services are poor, said Bruce Miller, director of Clinical Services.

The board also decided to send to the Board of Commissioners a recommendation for dental treatment for the mentally impaired and handicapped.

Under the plan, services would be available at the Dental Clinic for half a day each week solely for the mentally impaired and handicapped.

In other board activities, a Fluoridation Education Program may be instituted pending a grant to the state from the federal government.

The grant would pay for a health educator and a part-time secretary. Their jobs would be as information sources on the subject of fluoride.

The board also asked approval for continuation of a federal grant which provides a health screening clinic for Medicaid candidates.

The grant, used since 1973, pays for the measurements and physical assessments of Medicaid applicants, ages 0 to 21, said Deanna Kramp, Clinic Coordinator of Child Health. In other action, the board also approved negotiating a three-year renewal of the lease of the Professional Center West building at 701 N. Logan St., Lansing.

The lease will be renewed with the option of terminating the contract if county funds are dropped or if a proposed new building to combine county health services is built.

"They (city planners) could then sit down and make their own master plan," she said. Cornelisse said the Vertical Studio is not just beneficial to the students' education. Lansing will benefit from the brainstorming of the students and save "thousands of dollars," she said. The students' plans were expected to include a multi-purpose area for community and cultural events, outdoor sports and activity areas, a comfort station and an adult playground.

The playground, however, does not mean swings and merry-go-rounds for adults. Students were instructed to examine the concept of an adult playground in a broad sense.

decisions about their budgetary problems without even telling us about them. There are many far-reaching ramifications about this."

"We have no choice," Reeves said, "but to advise our membership to perform their normal workload at this time and contact the MSUEA office immediately if any attempt is made by the University to foist the equivalent of a 'speed up' on them, or to induce them to work extra hours with no pay."

Reeves said the association sent a telegram to MSU President Cecil Mackey Thursday to let him know their feelings and plans for action.

"A lot of what we want to talk to the University officials about is that we think they should have consulted with us before they did something like this," Reeves said.

Group protests single-sex swim

Turner said the change was "based on a desire to make facilities as accessible to as many people as we can," he said.

In a recent report, submitted to Turner by the Women's Advisory Committee, it was stated that swimming is the major participatory activity for women on campus — while the activity ranks fourth on the men's scale.

Historically, sentiment on the swimming issue has been divided. As early as 1958, when the Men's Intramural facility was built, co-recreational versus single-sex concerns was an issue.

Single-sex swimming hours were abolished with the appearance of Title IX, said Harris F.

Beeman, director of Intramural Sports. He also said participation rates by men did not make it cost effective to operate separate hours.

Women on campus petitioned for segregated hours in 1979.

Beeman said the possibility of designating more single-sex hours or returning to the previous co-recreational schedule will depend on the "interest shown."

A TOUCH OF THIS A TOUCH OF THAT WHAT HAPPENED TO SARGE? HE LEFT, HE DIDN'T FEEL WELL SAID HE HAD A TOUCH OF SOMETHING

'ASMSU fails to use all its funds efficiently'

By MIKE CHAUDHURI
State News Staff Writer
ASMSU has approximately $71,000 in carry-over moneys from previous years which is not being used toward funding activities, the ASMSU controller said Thursday.
Of that figure, at least $23,500 is not being used efficiently, Terry Buckley said.
"That money should not be sitting there — it's not benefiting the students," he said.
About $30,000 of the $71,000 should go toward establishing "financial bases" for the three ASMSU boards, in order to guarantee none of those boards goes in the red, he said.

The Student Media Appropriations Board will spend $10,000, at most, of its carry-over toward funding print media next term, SMAB Chairperson Steve Politowicz said.
Buckley said he would use another $7,500 to "reimburse" the special projects fund of the Student Board during fall term. He said the money now present in the fund will probably be spent by the end of spring term, even though it is supposed to last until December.

The remaining $23,500 is serving no purpose, he said.
None of the $71,000 is collecting interest, he added. Buckley said it would be difficult to invest the money intended to be used as a financial base, because that money might be needed on short notice.
But some of the $23,500 figure could be invested, possibly in treasury bills, he said.
Buckley said some of the money should go toward funding Registered Student Organizations, which have not been heavily funded by ASMSU recently.

"RSO's got kind of ripped off this year," he said.
Politowicz said he is working on a proposal to form a new board, solely responsible for funding RSO's, which would be more efficient than having all three boards fund them.
Some of the carry-over money could be used in helping the proposed board fund RSO's he said.

Part of the carry-over may also go to ASMSU Legal Services, which is requesting $8,000 more than it was budgeted for this year, Buckley said.
Politowicz said the budget committee almost passed a proposed tax increase two weeks ago, which was meant to help fund Legal Services.
"We don't need a tax increase

— we should plan better," he said.
"It is the opinion of a lot of people at ASMSU that (a tax increase) would be, more or less, political suicide," he added.
"ASMSU is in good shape right now," said Buckley, who agreed a tax increase is unnecessary.

Evil topic to be discussed at Philosophy Club event

The topic of evil will be discussed in a colloquium from 3 to 5 p.m. Sunday in 120 Computer Center.
The MSU Undergraduate Philosophy Club has invited three philosophy professors to speak on the subject. The speakers include Charles McCracken, associate professor; Winston Wilkinson, assistant professor; and Craig Staudenbaur, department chairperson.
All interested persons are invited to attend. Admission is free.
