White House denies apology sent to Iran

By The Associated Press

Iranian officials insisted Sunday that they had received two conciliatory messages from President Carter admitting mistakes in previous U.S. policy toward Iran and said the White House disclaimed them because of domestic political problems.

Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh claimed the messages said an international panel should be formed to resolve issues between the two countries, but that the panel should not meet before the 50 American hostages were freed. The Americans on Sunday spent their 148th as captives inside the occupied U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Presidential spokesman Jody Powell, speaking to reporters in Milwaukee, Wis., admitted that Swiss diplomats had conveyed messages from Carter to Iranian leaders, but denied they contained any mention of past mistakes.

Powell had said Saturday, "The president sent no message to Khomeini," and no such message as the one referred to by the Iranians had been sent to Khomeini or other Iranian officials by any representative of the United States.

GHOTBZADEH SAID THAT if Carter acknowledged the purported messages it would help in "reducing tension and resolving differences between Iran and the United States."

The foreign minister told a Tehran news conference that Iranian President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr received one message from Carter early last week and another Sunday, "which indicates the continuation of such a dialogue in messages."

Bani-Sadr told reporters the alleged message from Carter had prompted the ruling Revolutionary Council to make new decisions in the hostage crisis, but he did not elaborate.

Another top U.S. official, who asked not to be identified, said the reported Carter message "was a fabrication." He said he did not know where it originated and that it did not represent the views of President Carter or his administration.

However, Swiss Foreign Ministry spokesman Hansjoerg Renk in Bern said that a Swiss Embassy official in Tehran had "transmitted a message from President Carter to Bani-Sadr. This took place some five days ago."

HE SAID THE Swiss ambassador in Tehran, Erik Long, delivered a second letter to Bani-Sadr on Sunday. Renk said the Swiss government did not know the content of the communication. "We acted merely as a go-between, as a postman," he said. "Postmen do not read the letters they deliver."

Powell said the Swiss "statement is in fact accurate." However, he said "no message such as the one reported from Tehran had been sent by the president or any other American official to any Iranian official."

"As you can probably tell, this is a period of some ferment in this situation," Powell said. "There have been over the period of the past several months numerous channels employed by this government in an attempt to bring about the release of our people."

"I wish I were in a position to discuss the matter in a little more detail. If I were, I think you would see that the statement (Saturday) was not misleading. Perhaps we'll be able to do that a little later on."

Ghotbzadeh, questioned on the ABC television program Issues and answers, said the alleged message "wasn't a written, signed letter." He said it had been "passed orally," and added: "I firmly believe that this message was that of President Carter." He did not specify in what form the alleged message had been conveyed to government officials.

BANI-SADR, QUOTED BY Tehran Radio, said: "The truth of the matter is that Mr. Carter has not yet understood our (continued on page 2)

RESULT OF CUT IN REVENUE SHARING

'U' braces for budget woes

By KARL BLANKENSHIP and KY OWEN

State News Staff Writers

MSU officials are now expecting only a 3 to 5 percent budget increase from the state Legislature — not the 8.5 percent previously expected, MSU President Cecil Mackey told the Board of Trustees Friday.

The lower appropriation is expected as a result of state revenue sharing cuts proposed by President Carter as part of his plans for balancing the federal budget.

In Gov. William G. Milliken's original budget proposal, Michigan's four-year colleges and universities were slated to receive $52.8 million more in fiscal 80-81 than they received under the 1979-80 budget.

However, Mackey said he now expects $20 million or less to be allotted to higher education.

"THAT WOULD BE a heavy blow to us and all institutions of higher education," he said.

"There will be a much smaller pie and each piece will be noticeably smaller," he added.

The University must begin to set priorities, Mackey said, adding that it may be two more years before the economic situation is noticeably improved.

"The message that we received from the Legislature is just as gloomy as you see in the press everyday," Mackey said.

University officials expect to see a new budget proposal within the next few days, but a state official said a new proposal would not be released until April 14.

MACKAY ALSO INFORMED the trustees about the Department of Health, Education and Welfare audit, which begins today, to see if the University is in compliance with Title IX regulations. "We feel we are in compliance," Mackey said. "If there were areas in which we were not in compliance we would be at work on them." He assured the trustees there is no special reason for MSU to be audited.

This is the first HEW audit in which a Department of Justice official will take part, Mackey said, noting that "this puts any institution one step closer to legal action."

"They're just trying to educate another bureaucrat," he added.

TRUSTEE BLANCHE MARTIN, D-East Lansing, asked Mackey to comment on the "gag order" policy which Mackey implemented last fall.

Under the policy, faculty members are to inform deans of any non-social contact they plan to make with MSU trustees, state legislators, federal agencies, members of Congress or private agencies when acting as a representative of the University.

"I'm fully aware of the First Amendment of the Constitution," Mackey said. "I've sworn an oath to uphold it."

"It was my feeling we needed a policy of coordination for people acting in the capacity of representatives of the University," he added.

Mackey also told the trustees the policy had been in effect before he arrived last summer, and he had merely been restating the policy.

ON OTHER MATTERS, Mackey told the trustees spring term enrollment is on the verge of being the highest spring enrollment ever.

Currently, 39,000 students have been registered and officials expect an additional 1,000 to 1,500 students to enroll during late registration.

Hildebrand asks for clarification

By LOUISE WHALL
State News Staff Writer

John R. Hildebrand's attorney has filed a motion in federal court asking for a clarification of the judge's reinstatement verdict.

Provost Clarence L. Winder appointed Hildebrand, a former associate professor of social science, to the Office of the Provost last week to comply with the court order to reinstate him by spring term. His assignment is to prepare to teach Economics 200 and 201 fall term.

"Clearly the reinstatement calls for the plaintiff to be put in as nearly as possible the same position he would have had if he had not been unlawfully terminated," Laing said in his brief supporting the motion.

When U.S. District Judge Wendell A. Miles ordered MSU to reinstate Hildebrand in January salary, rank and tenure considerations were not included in his decision.

"WE DON'T FEEL the University has complied with the earlier judgment," Laing said. "In effect, defendants have agreed to pay the plaintiff but have not 'reinstated' him," he said in the brief.

Under Laing's interpretation of the reinstatement verdict, MSU is in contempt of court. Because the provost acted on the advice of the MSU attorneys in making his decision, Laing merely asked for a clarification of the ruling under the assumption that MSU would comply without a contempt of court citation.

"There can be no doubt that Dr. Hildebrand is entitled to be reinstated as a full professor, with tenure, in the Department of Social Science and the Latin American Studies Center," Laing said in his motion. Laing also stated that because Hildebrand was placed in the provost's office, he has no departmental standing. Without it, Hildebrand cannot attend meetings or participate in departmental elections. Miles now has the option of ordering an open hearing or deciding solely on the basis of the written arguments.

WINDER DISTRIBUTED a memo near the end of winter term asking the colleges of Social Science and Business and the University College to assess Hildebrand's qualifications and make appropriate recommendations.

Winder said he would make his decision based on those recommendations and other available information including the University's needs. Hildebrand's assignment related to the Department of Economics was made after the promotions committee in the department voted unanimously not to recommend his appointment.

Hildebrand has spent the past 10 years fighting his dismissal through the court system. In January, a federal jury ruled that MSU had violated his first amendment rights of freedom of speech and ordered his reinstatement.

Forty funeral attendants killed in San Salvador

By GORDON MOTT
Associated Press Writer

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — An explosion and gunfire touched off panic among an estimated 50,000 persons gathered Sunday for an outdoor funeral Mass for slain Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero. At least 40 persons were known killed, most of them crushed in the fleeing crowd, but witnesses said at least seven suffered bullet wounds.

Medical sources said about 226 other persons were injured. They were in the huge throng that jammed the downtown Cathedral Square where the funeral Mass was to have been performed.

"There was total panic," said the Rev. Ricardo Uriste, acting archbishop of San Salvador.

Several cars in the downtown area were overturned and burned, and gunshots, bomb explosions and automatic-weapons fire could be heard as a new wave of violence engulfed the capital city in the hours after the incident.

A military bulletin broadcast early Sunday evening over a national radio-television broadcast early Sunday evening over a national radio-television network announced that the army was being sent out to "restore order." Like other security forces, army troops had been on alert but confined to barracks Sunday by the ruling civilian-military junta.

THE ORDER CAME a short time after reporters and other witnesses saw small gangs of youths looting stores in the vicinity of the cathedral. Some of the shops were set afire.

Reporters said 20 bodies, including five with bullet wounds, were carried into the Metropolitan Cathedral that was packed with about 3,000 persons who had fled into the church. An attendant at Hospital Rosales, about 15 blocks from the cathedral, said 11 bodies were received there — nine victims of asphyxiation and two who had been shot to death. Nine other bodies were taken to the city morgue, a morgue official said. He did not say how those nine died.

Medical sources said 87 injured persons were admitted to various city hospitals and some 100 others were being treated inside the cathedral.

The attendant at Hospital Rosales said some of the victims arrived with their limbs nearly severed. Several were described in serious condition, and the death toll was expected to rise.

Police sources said there were "victims," but did not elaborate. They blamed leftists for the violence.

The official church radio said the funeral service had been suspended "because of the disturbance in the street" and said the archbishop was hastily buried in a crypt inside the church after the trouble started. It did not say when, or if, another funeral mass would be held. Romero was assassinated last week while celebrating mass.

WITNESSES SAID THERE was a loud explosion like a bomb in the square in front of the cathedral shortly before noon, and then leftist marchers pulled out submachine guns and began firing at nearby buildings.

The papal envoy was telling the crowd about the pope's wishes for peace and justice when the explosion was set off, followed by shooting from the same direction seconds later.

Workers remove rubble in a search for possible bodies Saturday in Natchez, Miss. after torrential rains earlier in the day sent a mudslide from a Mississippi River bluff crashing through a tavern and sandwich shop. Two persons were killed and seven others were injured. For the complete story on this past weekend's southern storms, please turn to page 14.

President to unveil modified 1981 budget

By United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Carter officially unveils his long-awaited balanced budget Monday — down about $15.4 billion from the spending proposal he sent Congress two months ago.

The president announced two weeks ago he would bring down fiscal 1981 spending by $13 to $14 billion as part of his anti-inflation program, but he did not outline specific cuts at the time. The somewhat deeper cuts were worked out in a series of meetings between his economic advisors and Democratic congressional leaders and budget writers.

The major points of Carter's new economic plan are credit controls, energy conservation and a balanced budget.

The president may back his program with a prediction that inflation will continue this year at about the same rate as last year — although in January it had been expected to drop. The Washington Star said Sunday the administration's economic forecast for 1980 shows the Consumer Price Index will rise 12.8 percent, compared to 12.7 percent last year.

IN AN INTERVIEW on CBS' Face The Nation, Sen. Alan Cranston, the assistant Democratic leader, said: "Every program will be reduced in some way — except defense. But even defense will be carefully pruned to get rid of what can be put off or ended to make room for 'readiness' efforts to strengthen our defense."

But, the California Democrat added: "There will not be a cut in Social Security. I'm absolutely certain of that."

"I believe there will be a cut, and should be a cut, in revenue sharing for the state, in water programs, in farm programs," he said.

In a speech last week, Carter himself said there would be no cuts in Social Security, Supplemental Security Income, Medicare, federally assisted housing and for the Council on Aging.

According to a list obtained last week, Carter will propose elimination of:

- revenue sharing to the states, saving $1.7 billion;
- Anti-recession aid to the cities, $1 billion;
- 50,000 CETA jobs, $500 million; and
- Grants to the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, $89 million.

The revised budget also includes a $250 million reduction in the $800 million federal subsidy to the Postal Service, which leaves (continued on page 2)

Olympic medalist Owens battling cancer

TUCSON (UPI) — Quadruple Olympic gold medal winner Jesse Owens' condition deteriorated to "very critical" Sunday in his battle against lung cancer, hospital officials said.

A University of Arizona Hospital spokesperson termed his condition as "very critical and continuing to deteriorate."

Dr. Stephen E. Jones, the head of the medical team treating the 66-year-old former Olympian said late Saturday that Owens had "taken a turn for the worse." He is now in critical condition and quite weak.

"There is evidence of lung infection. His general condition deteriorated in the last 24 hours. In the face of all this he remains courageous."

The hospital declined to issue a prognosis for Owens, who for 35 years was a pack-a-day cigarette smoker.

Owens first entered the hospital in January for six days of tests.

He returned to his Phoenix home for outpatient treatment, but on Feb. 11 he entered a Phoenix hospital.

Owens was flown to Tucson by helicopter March 21 and readmitted to the University of Arizona's Health Sciences Center where doctors have pioneered a cell cloning technique to evaluate drugs' effectiveness in fighting cancer in humans.

Owens was given a new treatment, including both radiation and chemotherapy.

Owens achieved world-wide fame in the 1936 Olympics held in Germany when he won individual medals in the 100 and 200-meter dashes and the broad jump, and was a member of the winning 400-meter relay team.

In other action, the trustees:

- approved salary equity adjustments for faculty and administrative-professional employees. The increases were recommended by Mackey in his State of the University address in February;
- approved an affiliation agreement with the Traverse City Osteopathic Hospital to provide training for MSU medical students; and
- approved an affiliation agreement with the Upper Peninsula Health Education Corp. to enable continued development of a graduate training program in family practice.

White House denies apology

Bani-Sadr, Ghotbzadeh and Khomeini's son Ahmad said the letters admitted alleged U.S. foreign policy mistakes, fulfilling one of three conditions set by Bani-Sadr for the release of the hostages.

The revolutionary regime also demands a U.S. pledge of non-interference in Iranian affairs and the return of ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi for trial on charges his regime tortured and killed thousands of political opponents and took public money.

Ghotbzadeh told reporters, "Obviously as far as we are concerned the message was correct and we welcome it. But unfortunately this immediate denial, which I understand perfectly well was for internal consumption in the United States. . . . has diminished the . . . impact which this message could have on our public opinion here."

"Even if there are denials, if they don't continue the denials — if just for once for God's sake they keep quiet — I think we may have done something," Ghotbzadeh said.

Former Irish Foreign Minister Sean McBride, who unsuccessfully tried to mediate the crisis last December, said he met with Iranian officials in Tehran over the weekend in a new effort to break the deadlock.

In Cairo, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat gave the Order of Merit to Houston surgeon Michael DeBaakey and other doctors who removed the deposed shah's dangerously enlarged spleen on Friday.

Carter also will propose a $1 billion cut in defense spending and a delay in purchases for the strategic oil reserve which would save $850 million. The president also wants to delay planned welfare reforms to save another $859 million.

Groups distribute 'no nuke' leaflets

By DAVE VARGA
State News Staff Writer

Many people crossing the foot bridge near Wells Hall Friday afternoon were confronted by persons distributing leaflets against nuclear power.

The "no nuke" literature was part of an uncoordinated national effort in response to the first anniversary of the accident at Three Mile Island nuclear power plant in Harrisburg, Pa., which occurred March 28, 1979.

The anti-nuclear program at MSU was sponsored by the Lansing Area Mobilization For Survival, the Public Interest Research Group in Michigan, and other area anti-nuclear and peace groups.

Between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m., members of these groups distributed literature and discussed the nuclear controversy with the media and bystanders.

The program was also held to publicize an anti-nuclear march on Washington, D.C., scheduled for April 26 and a march on the Big Rock power plant in Charlevoix, Mich., planned for May 4, said Eugene Hayhoe of the mobilization for survival group.

A $55 million rate hike for cleanup operations at Three Mile Island has been approved for Metropolitan Edison Hayhoe said.

The average nuclear plant, Hayhoe said, produces over 500 pounds of plutonium waste each year.

Hayhoe said Nuclear Regulatory Commission regulations could be changed to make nuclear energy production more safe.

"But it's the same as being a little bit pregnant," he added.

The march on the Big Rock plant is to protest the operation of the plant, which does not meet the minimum NRC requirements. The plant is exempt from these regulations because it was built before they came into effect.

A protest at the Big Rock plant on Dec. 2, 1978, resulted in 14 arrests for trespassing.

The 14 people arrested were convicted without a trial by jury because a judge decided that the issue of nuclear power was too complex for a lay person to decide, said James Olson, environmental lawyer representing the 14 defendants.

"It is the trial court's decision that the safety of a nuclear power plant is somehow too technical or complex for a citizen sitting as a juror which we are appealing," Olson said.

Unilateral disarmament by the United States in the area of nuclear weapons would show the world that we have a moral concern for the human race, said Burt Garber, of the mobilization for survival group.

"The question of trusting the Soviets is a cover for increasing the arms race," he said.

"In a nuclear war there is no winner," Garber said, "so we could compromise by putting our money into conventional arms."

Board of Trustees accepts gifts, grants

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

The MSU Board of Trustees accepted nearly $5 million in gifts and grants while awarding more than $800,000 in construction contracts at its monthly meeting last Friday.

The trustees awarded a $447,000 contract to McNeilly Construction, Inc., for fire safety alterations to the auditorium.

The project involves replacing the present combustible acoustical ceiling and wall tiles, which were installed when the Auditorium was built in 1940.

Other alterations will include fire doors, stair enclosures, fire escapes and sprinklers. The project is planned to get underway in April, and should be completed by Dec. 31. The Auditorium will be closed for two months this summer while the ceiling is re-tiled.

The trustees awarded $39,600 to the Irish Construction Co. for the restoration of entrances to the union.

The project includes replacement of the existing quarry tile and concrete at the south entrance terrace and the installation of aluminum handrails at all major entrances to the building.

A contract of $84,300 was awarded to the Hanel-Vance Construction Co., Inc., for roof restoration to buildings 1513, 1514 and 1527 in Spartan Village.

Included in the project is additional roof insulation to conform with the latest Michigan Energy Code, which will substantially reduce heat loss.

The trustees also awarded contracts for alterations to rooms 203 and 205 of the Computer Center; putting an addition on the Public Safety building for the Telephone Office, and an extension of the broadband cable system from Shaw Lane to north campus.

The trustees also accepted 171 gifts and grants totalling $4,979,689. So far in the current fiscal year the University has received $63.5 million in gifts and grants — $12 million more than was received at this time last year.

Among the gifts and grants accepted was a $294,729 grant from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare's division of Medicine to continue funding of the family residency training program, which is jointly administered by MSU's College of Human Medicine and Lansing's St. Lawrence Hospital.

A $155,831 contract to develop a course for medical students and residents on cancer prevention was awarded to the College of Human Medicine by the National Cancer Institute, Division of Cancer Control and Rehabilitation of the HEW.

The MSU Management Education Center at Troy received land valued at $486,000 from McDonald-Halliday Enterprises No. 2. The land — about four acres — is to be sold with the proceeds to go to the center.

Also, the MSU School of Social Work was granted $226,848 in support of a new master's program at Traverse City, for employees of the grantor, the Michigan Department of Social Services.

'U' professors to speak in series

The MSU Evening College will feature six MSU professors in the "Evenings with the Professors" series this spring.

David D. Anderson, a professor of American Thought and Language, will open the series on April 9 with a discussion on the character of the Midwest as demonstrated in its literature. Anderson is also the host of the series.

Walter Adams, distinguished professor of economics, will discuss "Inflation, Recession and All That" April 16.

Assistant Provost Dorothy Arata will discuss "The Future of Higher Education" April 23.

"The Soviet Union Today" is the topic Ellen Mickiewicz, a professor of political science, will discuss April 30.

Barnett Rosenberg, a professor of biophysics, will lecture on "Some Battles Won the War on Cancer" May 7. Rosenberg is the co-discoverer of the cisplatin as an anti-cancer agent.

The final guest professor, Fauzi Majjar, a professor of social science, will speak on "Egypt and the Middle East Today" May 14.

Passover: Jews celebrate tradition commemorating exodus from Egypt

By ELYSE GOLDIN
State News Staff Writer

Four generations of lineage gathered in the dining room. Although arranged for dinner in a stately manner, the table had an alien look about it.

Central to the 23 place settings was a larger platter, garnished with an egg, a bone, parsley, water and other seemingly unrelated, unidentifiable substances. Next to it stood an oversized silver goblet of wine.

Despite its awkward appearance, the arrangement was not at all foreign to the group. From those with dimples, to those showing wrinkles at the corners of their eyes and mouths, the people sat anxiously awaiting the forthcoming festivities.

It was a religious tradition, now thousands of years old, that brought the family together this year as it had every spring season in the past. Though each person's memory of preceding Passover celebrations may have varied slightly, the ritual itself is unaltered.

Passover, an eight-day Jewish holiday commemorating the Hebrew people's exodus from Egypt and slavery begins at sunset tonight. Jews around the world will celebrate the agricultural and historical origins of this spring festival through next Tuesday evening.

The holiday was called Passover (Pesach, in Hebrew) because according to Jewish historical text, God passed over Jewish homes when he slew the firstborn of Egyptian families.

For Jews, Passover is a celebration rich with symbolic traditions and sentiment and which calls for much preparation if it is to be observed faithfully.

WHEN THE HEBREWS were still without the religious revelations of Moses at Mt. Sinai, the holiday was fully an agricultural one. While working as shepherds and harvesters in Egypt they inaugurated the flourishing spring crops.

According to Passover writings in the Haggadah, "A Pharaoh arose" who oppressed them to slavery, forcing the Hebrews to make bricks and build monuments.

Later, during their exodus from Egypt and the appearance of Moses, the Hebrews believed in one God and established a Jewish identity. From this point on, Passover was both an agriculturally and historically religious celebration of freedom.

SPIRITUALLY, PASSOVER HAS become a Jewish symbol of man's constant need to use his own efforts and not rely fully upon God in order to maintain. In this sense, the holiday celebrates not only that deliverance from Egypt, but a continuing experience involving all generations — those passed, present and forthcoming.

The celebration is abundant with symbolic gestures — most of which are food-

'U' finalizes natural gas leases — Vice-P

Natural gas located in a well on MSU property will be placed on the market within a year since the University has reached agreement with Reef Petroleum Corp., it was announced Friday.

The MSU Board of Trustees Land and Physical Facilities Committee approved an agreement to allow Reef, of Traverse City, to market natural gas located in a well on MSU property in Oakland County near Rochester.

"This will allow us to get the gas out of the ground and hopefully get some revenue," said Jack Breslin, vice president for administration and public affairs.

REEF OFFICIALS ESTIMATE that 60 percent of the 10 billion cubic feet of gas in the well is located under MSU property.

HE ADDED IT will be several months before the gas is on the market.

"With approval of these documents (the MSU-Reef lease agreement) we'll be on our way," Breslin said.

Reef officials have estimated the well will expire in eight to 10 years and have promised to clear all surface equipment at that time.

In other action, the board's investment committee approved an increase in the investment counsel fee paid to Scudder, Stevens and Clark, the firm which handles MSU's stock investments.

The fee will be increased from the current $29,000 to $34,000 for this year and will be increased to $39,000 for next year.

This will allow us to get the gas out of the ground and hopefully get some revenue. — Jack Breslin, vice president for administration and public affairs and expect the gas will bring the University about $1.5 million in royalties over an eight to 10-year period.

The proposal has been discussed by University officials for three or four months, Breslin said. All the University's attorneys voiced approval of the lease agreement, he added.

James H. Fisher, a professor of petroleum geology, also recommended to Breslin in a March 13 letter that the University accept the offer.

Breslin told the board that piping to connect the wells to the processing plant, which is also located on MSU property, should be installed within the next 60 to 90 days.

and finance.

The fee increase was proposed at the board's February meeting, and Wilkinson had been asked to review the recommendation.

MSU President Cecil Mackey, in a March 5 memorandum, also recommended approval of the fee increase.

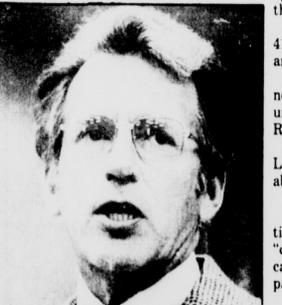

The board also met in closed session Friday morning to discuss the status of relations with Local 1585, the MSU local of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

The union, which is composed of custodial workers, has voiced opposition to custodial shift changes instituted last term by the University.

Republican Awareness Day held in state

By ROLAND WILKERSON
State News Staff Writer

If a straw poll at MSU Friday of the

Lt. Gov. James Brickley

Republican presidential candidates is indicative of voter turnout this fall, then apathy has a good chance of being declared the winner.

Of 67 votes cast, John Anderson received 41, George Bush 22, Ronald Reagan three, and Gerald Ford one write-in vote.

The poll was part of Republican Awareness Day held at MSU and various universities across the state to promote the Republican Party.

The day's events also included a speech by Lt. Gov. James Brickley, who addressed about 40 people in South Kedzie Hall.

BRICKLEY SAID THE American political system is suffering from what he called "celebrity politics" where people vote on the candidates' personalities, not their stands on particular issues.

Brickley illustrated his point, relating the incident of a Macomb County drain commissioner who won on the issue of busing. Brickley also painted a dark picture of the current status of the two major political parties in the United States.

Brickley says 'celebrity politics' hurts democratic system

"There are no political parties to speak of except the names assigned to them," he said. Brickley said "celebrity politics" coupled with weak political parties have caused our political system to produce "incoherent policies."

BRICKLEY ALSO LEVELED criticism at the presidential primary system, claiming that primary results are very misleading. Noting that only 4 to 7 percent of the eligible voters take time out to participate in the primaries, Brickley said, "It's a charade; we're making it look like the people are coming out and voting."

To alleviate the problem of voter apathy, Brickley suggested reducing the number of elected officials, while increasing the power of those elected.

He said voters often do not know what qualifications a person would need to fill a particular position, adding the government should appoint such positions as judges and treasurers.

Also speaking were Michelle Strom and James Dunn, both Republican candidates for Bob Carr's U.S. sixth district seat.

DUNN, A 36-YEAR-old MSU graduate who lives in East Lansing, did not surprise any members of the audience by claiming that inflation is the nation's biggest problem.

Dunn said Carr was using the current energy situation as the main reason for inflation.

"Mr. Carr and the Democrats in Washington blame our problems on energy. It is not the contributing factor that they make it out to be."

Dunn said federal spending must be limited if inflation is to be controlled.

Although Dunn did not make a commitment on whether the draft should be reinstated, he added he saw "nothing wrong" with registration.

DUNN DID NOT take a firm stand on nuclear energy, but said all sources of energy other than oil must be explored because the world's petroleum supply will eventually run out.

Strom, a 27-year-old Lansing resident, said energy, apathy and inflation are the three biggest problems facing Americans today.

Strom criticized Washington legislators for not doing all they could to cure the nations problems.

"Somebody has to stop and look what is going on in Washington," Strom said.

Strom said she plans to unveil soon a completely reorganized Social Security system and energy policy.

Strom said although she knew little about the specific problems of MSU, Carr "was not bringing enough federal funds back to the East Lansing area."

MSU trustee Aubrey Radcliffe, also a candidate for Carr's seat, was not present.

Moving swiftly against the flow

No one expected incoming MSU President Cecil Mackey to take a business-as-usual approach to University affairs when he assumed office last summer. Yet with unprecedented speed that has sent waves of opposition reverberating through the University community, Mackey has taken the reins and transferred power formerly held by other University channels to the administration.

In a few short months Mackey has:

- presented his own version of the faculty grievance procedure to the MSU Faculty Council, which has been working on its own version for years;
- instituted a policy requiring faculty to report to their deans prior to approaching public figures to discuss University affairs; and
- requested the resignation of MSU Alumni Association President Jack Kinney, while recommending that the alumni president serve at the pleasure of the University president.

Without disputing the power of the president to institute change, the plans Mackey has introduced seem to suggest a concentration of power in the hands of a few. Final authority has always rested with the higher echelons of the University, but Mackey's proposals call for the administration to bypass the input process of the community, as well as reduce the autonomy of some longstanding University institutions.

In the case of faculty grievance, a grievance official independent of the administration seems to be the logical way of solving problems without approaching the president's office. Seeking redress through the administration breaks down the system of confidentiality and fails to utilize the opportunity to settle grievances informally.

Mackey's public figures contact rule also seems unnecessary. We wonder whether the issue of faculty interaction with public figures was previously a problem. What is the basis for this policy? Has University faculty embarrassed the administration to the point where Mackey feels he must keep close tabs on what it says?

The Alumni Association, whose president once enjoyed autonomy, is also being forced to succumb to Mackey's control. The move comes shortly after the Board of Trustees and former MSU President Edgar Harden voted in a plan to separate the association from the University. Why has there been a hedge?

We expected some power shifts when Mackey assumed office last summer. What is troubling, though, is the adversity with which the changes have been met. Perhaps change could be better attained if the administration were to rely more on input from the University community, and less on what it solely thinks is best.

Boycott dissent

The specter of President Carter barring American amateur athletes from the Summer Olympics in Moscow would be a sorry spectacle since his decision has received little support. But with the passing of the U.S.-imposed Feb. 20 deadline for Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan, Carter told amateur athletes he is determined they will not participate in anything more than a boycott of the Games.

The athletes are not terribly excited about the idea, and we can hardly blame them. In urging the athletes to "accept" the boycott, Carter told them many U.S. allies, particularly the "democratic" countries who believe in freedom, will not participate in the Games. But many Western European nations, none too pleased with Carter's hard-line stance against the Soviet Union which caught them by surprise, are having a hard time trying to convince their own Olympic committees to stay home. The British and Norwegian teams are joining a majority of European teams which have indicated they will play, and the Olympic committees' attempts to keep politics out of sports — regardless of where the games are held — is to be commended.

Our aversion to mixing sports with politics was rendered academic, so it seemed, when virtually all of Europe agreed somewhat reluctantly to back Carter. The clash of athletics and political beliefs appeared inevitable.

Now it seems the Olympic committees in countries which originally supported the U.S. position are going anyway and their governments, lukewarm to the idea of a boycott, are not pressing the issue. Carter may well be the only leader who is threatening to stop his athletes from traveling to Moscow next summer, and as the U.S. government has never contributed a cent toward financing its athletes' prohibitively expensive training program, his admonishments to be "patriotic" and do what is "best for our country," are weak at best.

A boycott would hurt us as much as it would the Soviets in terms of disappointed athletes, millions of dollars in actual and potential investments, and yet another loss of face in the world community. The concept behind the Olympics has traditionally resisted the cross of sports with politics, and Carter's insistence on maintaining a hard line with the Soviets ignores the number of coups and interventions in which we have been caught elbow-deep.

VIEWPOINT: VETERANS' BENEFITS

The government hid the real facts

By PAUL RAY JENSEN

"I was killed in Vietnam and didn't even know it." "Trying to come home has been harder than fighting in the Nam." These statements are being heard more often now than they were just after the United States pulled out of Vietnam, and for good reason.

Dioxins, the most toxic chemical ever, have been in manufacture and use worldwide since Dow Chemical Co. patented a process to produce Dieldrin (biocides) in 1936. The mechanism by which this process caused illness and death was not discovered until 1957, without the help of Dow and in some instances with the company's resistance.

Agent Orange-like herbicides have been used in this country to clear roadsides, by the U.S. Forestry Service to clear right of ways, and the list goes on. Dow and other producers are gearing up to build new plants in Canada for production of dioxin-laden products.

The 10-year U.S. herbicide program in Vietnam exposed untold millions of Vietnam veterans to the dioxin containing Agent Orange. LBJ was shamed for claiming that we did not have troops in Cambodia. The United States has been claiming no troops had been exposed to Agent Orange treated areas for four to six weeks. Facts show again that the government lied.

Vietnam combat vets are showing symptoms in ever-increasing numbers, symptoms ranging from children with birth defects to psychological, internal, neurological and dermatological problems.

A class action suit against Dow Chemical and other producers has been filed by 700 U.S. Vietnam vets, 650 Australian Vietnam vets with 3,000 U.S. Vietnam vets in the screening. An estimated 40,000 Vietnam veterans will eventually be included in the class action against Dow and the other producers.

Dow as the leading producer has filed a class action against the U.S. government claiming they were instructed to ship Agent Orange in unmarked drums. They are saying the government knew of the hazards and chose to ignore them.

All research supports prior knowledge of the dangers by both the government and the producers. Both are afraid of the issue for economic reasons. The government calls it "inflationary." Dr. Charles Haber, spokesperson for Veterans Administration head Max Cleland, said, "No evidence that these chemicals have any health effects in humans exists." Research shows that since the first incidents with Dieldrins in the 1930s, more than 1,000 workers in at least 15 different chemical plants in at least eight different countries have been afflicted with chloracne and related symptoms in connection with the production of chlorophenols and their derivatives.

VA disability compensation could run into the billions. To file your VA claim, obtain the National Veterans Law Center's guide, "The Veterans' Self Help Guide on Agent Orange" for problems possibly caused by exposure to Agent Orange. Follow the instructions to the letter. This can not be over-emphasized — file your claim now with the VA. It isn't easy dealing with the VA but it is easier than just sitting back and waiting to die.

For any disability claim work, discharge upgrading, or for general information, the American Civil Liberties Union has a handbook on The Rights of Veterans. It is in most bookstores. Get it and study it. It is the best, the only, information around on how the VA works for you and against you.

As for disability claims the VA is omnipotent. There is no system of checks or balances. The VA's decision is final. The VA is the only federal agency not required to prove its decisions in a court of law. In other words, the vets are denied their due process by not getting their day in court.

Until the birth of the National Veterans Law Center in Washington, D.C., a project of the ACLU, there were not any knowledgeable attorneys to help any vet deal with the VA. They are handling and overseeing the claims stemming from radiation exposure, LSD and other drug testing, Agent Orange exposure and many others. They are dedicated people who care and are good at what they do.

Bill, S. 330, now before Congress will allow vets to sue the VA for denial of disability benefits. It passed the Senate in the 95th and 96th Congresses. In the 95th Congress it was not passed by the House. Now in the 96th Congress it appears to be headed for the same fate. It is doesn't make it now it will have to start as a new bill in the 97th Congress. That could take years.

Jensen is a board member of the Michigan Association of Concerned Veterans and is local coordinator for Vietnam Veterans Against the War.

LETTERS

Policy changes lacked foresight

This letter is directed to the Dean of the College of Business concerning his inept handling of the overenrollment situation in the college.

In the Feb. 20 edition of The State News, the College of Business posted a small ad announcing the college was reopened to enrollment.

I am currently a third-term freshman enrolled as a no preference student. When I enrolled in November for winter term classes, I told my advisor of my intention to declare a major preference in the College of Business. She then read to me a letter from the dean's office of the College of Business, stating it was necessary to close the college indefinitely to further enrollment due to overcrowding. To paraphrase the dean's letter, "If you expect to major in business during your four years at MSU, you would best look elsewhere." I later spoke with an advisor from the College of Business and got the same story. I was more or less told: "Change your major or look to a new school." After much soul searching, I took heed of this advice and next fall I will be attending another institution.

This sudden change in policy on the part of the College of Business comes less than four months after being told that it would be a minimum of two or three years before the school would reopen. It seems that foresight and planning, the very things the college should represent, have been lacking for the past several years. And because of this, the college was not able to handle the needs of its students. If this is typical of MSU, I am glad I found out before I wasted much more time here.

Anderson 'fuzzy' on Bush's stands

In handouts run by the John Anderson campaign, Anderson seriously misrepresents, as he frequently does, George Bush's positions on several important issues.

The handouts say George Bush supports the military draft. He does not. He supports the volunteer army and did so in Congress. He does favor registration. The handouts state Bush favors the windfall profits tax. Not so. He supports a windfall profits tax with an energy reinvestment provision. The distinction, which Anderson ignores, is important. The reinvestment provision will ensure long term interests of the American people are served through energy exploration and development at home. It would also prevent further wasteful and counterproductive intrusion of government into the American economy.

On women's issues, Anderson has suggested George Bush is not interested, or somehow doesn't understand women's concerns. Again not true, and Anderson must know it. Just for beginners, Bush not only supports the ERA, he was, as a Congressman, one of its original co-sponsors, long before it became politically popular. Women are well represented on his senior staff and on his campaign staffs across the country, including the Michigan state chair, Loree Ruppe, and the Michigan campaign director, Colleen Engler. And he has geared many of his economic programs to women — both those working outside the home and those inside the house.

Anderson has also claimed that his was the "crucial" vote on Open Housing in 1968. It was a good deal more difficult for a Congressman from Houston, George Bush, to vote for that legislation, which he did, than for one from Illinois.

It seems that Anderson is "fuzzy" on George Bush's positions.

Downtown arena won't be a ripoff

As a MSU student who has the perspective of a life-long area resident, I wish to comment on your article concerning the proposed sports arena (March 7). I would like to point out that MSU students come and go and the percentage that remains in the area is relatively small. I suggest ASMSU conduct a poll of area MSU alumni who contribute a vast amount of money to the University (check the figures). Some of these alumni as well as many area residents who support the University, have been attending sporting events at MSU since at least 1940, when Jenison was built. I believe you will find they will express their discomfort with seating at Jenison, and having to walk a great distance to get to their seats.

I have seen downtown Lansing grow from a decaying city to a downtown area with a fine junior college, an open-air mall, and a new Riverfront Park that has inspired a strengthening of community ties. The park has held ethnic festivals, Fourth of July celebrations, boat races and numerous other community events.

As for Mr. Ferency's comments, I would like to know anything he is in favor of besides keeping his name in the media. Why should the state Legislatures fund an arena on campus; the Silverdome is not a state institution. The Pontiac stadium is not located on a university campus. In response to Ferency's statement, "Students would not reap a single benefit from a downtown arena," I suggest MSU students consider the number of jobs a 300-room convention hotel, 12-story office building and sports arena could create for students.

Ferency's concern for students being "ripped off" displays his narrow-mindedness and attempts at grandstanding. The permanent residents of this community and alumni who have supported the University for years, have to deal with unavailability of tickets, except at the inflated prices of hawkers. CATA buses run to the downtown area from campus and would make it much easier for students to attend games than it is for persons who live off-campus and are forced to deal with MSU's inadequate parking facilities.

I am not trying to slight the student populace. However, the "academic community" changes from year to year, but the communities of Lansing and East Lansing, which carry a sense of pride in the University, (remember the parade for the NCAA champs in downtown Lansing?), are enduring and growing. I believe this sports arena could be a positive force in bringing community members together, as well as generate much needed employment.

Rebels release 2 more hostages

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Rebels holding hostages in the Dominican Republic Embassy released on Sunday two of their 29 captives seized in the embassy takeover more than a month ago.

Among the 27 still held in the embassy is U.S. Ambassador Diego Asencio.

The two freed are not diplomats. A Foreign Ministry source identified them as Simon Rodriguez, a magistrate from the Cundinamarca region, and Jorge Valencia, publisher of the magazine Mundo Diplomatico Diplomatic World.

They were taken by police to a military hospital to be examined.

AST to replace SST

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the commercial failure of today's supersonic airliners, an advanced high-speed jet could be economically successful in the future if it overcame major fuel and environmental questions, says a congressional study.

A report released Sunday by the Office of Technology Assessment says a second-generation advanced supersonic transport — AST — which flies faster and carries more passengers than present models could account for $50 billion in sales through the year 2010.

An American AST could take about one-third of the total sales of long distance aircraft within the next 30 years, the report says. But producing such a plane would require overcoming many obstacles, not the least of which is the future price and availability of fuel, it adds.

France's economy stable

PARIS (AP) — The economic indicators here continue to sag, but France's new Middle East initiatives, increasing trade with the Soviet Union and a strong franc have halted rumors about the imminent dumping of Premier Raymond Barre and his economics of austerity.

"France needs calm and restraint" through the present world economic crisis, President Valery Giscard d'Estaing said in a recent tribute to Barre. Barre's "competence, determination and courage will mark this period and assure him the esteem and the gratitude of the French," he added.

This endorsement was greeted with relief by many French business executives, foreign exchange dealers and Western economists, who feel that Barre's management of the economy has enabled oil-strapped France to endure escalating oil prices and the resultant world economic crisis better than most Western nations.

Tito's condition unchanged

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — President Josip Broz Tito's doctors said Sunday there has been no substantial change in his condition, which they described as "very grave."

"The health condition of the President of the Republic has not essentially changed compared to the previous day," according to the daily medical bulletin issued by the 87-year-old leader's eight doctors. "Intensive treatment continues."

On Saturday, Tito's doctors said there were signs Tito's pneumonia was abating, but that his high fever persisted. He also was described then as "very grave."

The weekend marked the beginning of Tito's third month of care at the Ljubljana Clinical Center in Slovenia. His kidneys have failed entirely, and he has been kept alive by an artificial kidney machine for more than a month.

Track team's buses overturn

AVINGER, Texas (AP) — A high school track team's triumphant return home was shattered over the weekend when two team buses overturned after colliding with an auto on a secluded highway in northeast Texas.

Six of the 20 persons injured — including the coach and two members of the Texarkana track team — remained hospitalized Sunday.

"It was a nightmare," said Anthony Bruce, one of 14 students treated and released at area hospitals after the Saturday night crash.

"I was trying to go to sleep and I thought I was having a nightmare. But then I got up and realized what had happened."

The team was returning to Texarkana from Longview where it had won the Longview Lobo Rotary Relays.

Mantovani dies at 74

TUNBRIDGE WELLS, England (AP) — Mantovani, the orchestra conductor with the silky smooth sound in light classics, has died after a long illness. He was 74.

Born Annunzio Paolo Mantovani in Venice, Italy, on Nov. 15, 1905, he was known to music lovers worldwide simply as Mantovani and was the first person to sell a million stereophonic records.

He died Saturday night at a nursing home in this royal resort town southeast of London. A family spokesman said he had been ill for several years. The cause of death was not disclosed.

Roller coaster trains collide

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — One train on a roller coaster plowed into another, killing a teen-age boy and injuring eight passengers, and an employee at Marriott's Great America Amusement Park said electric eyes designed to keep the trains separated had apparently failed.

Park spokesman Art Larson said Sunday the "Willard's Whizzer" ride would remain shut until they discovered what caused the accident.

He said no explanation could be given until an investigation was completed into Saturday evening's accident on the thrill ride that features a seven-story "free fall" in which cars plummeting down a track are restrained only by centrifugal force.

Michigan could boycott No. 1 labor law violator

By MARK FELLOWS
State News Staff Writer

Michigan may soon officially join the eight-year-old boycott against the J.P. Stevens Co., "the No. 1 labor law violator in the history of the United States," said state Rep. Perry Bullard.

Legislation sponsored by the Ann Arbor Democrat seeks to prohibit the state or any of its subcontractors from buying material from any company convicted three times in 10 years in a federal appeals court of violating the National Labor Relations Act.

The bill was unanimously approved recently by the House Labor Committee and should pass the House easily, said Bullard's aide, Dan Sharp.

J.P. Stevens, the second largest textiles manufacturer in the country, is the only company to be so convicted by federal courts, Sharp said. He added that in the past 14 years Stevens has been charged with more than 1,200 violations of the National Labor Relations Act.

STEVENS HAS BEEN convicted, Sharp said, of denying employees the right to organize and bargain collectively, spying on employees, threatening those who attempt to unionize and firing employees who testified before the National Labor Relations Board.

"In addition to these violations," Bullard stated, "J.P. Stevens has violated innumerable federal and state health and safety acts. Employees of one J.P. Stevens plant work in dust levels 800 percent higher than allowed by federal law."

"In another plant, noise levels are 2,000 percent higher than allowed by law," he said.

A boycott of J.P. Stevens products is supported by a coalition of labor and church groups around the country.

Sharp said the boycott has received the support of the Connecticut Legislature. Ohio's House of Representatives recently passed a similar bill, he said.

The California state administration also issued a directive supporting the boycott, Sharp said.

"STEVENS DECIDED LONG ago that it can sustain massive court costs and penalties and still stay ahead," Sharp said. "They've already been fined over $1.5 million in the past few years, but a company that size can make it up with low wages and substandard working conditions."

Bullard also urged Michigan residents to personally boycott Stevens' products, which range from raw fabric to designer clothes.

"By boycotting these products, working people and concerned citizens in Michigan can make a statement in the only language these corporate criminals understand — money," Bullard said.

Although Sharp said he couldn't think of any major state projects currently using J.P. Stevens products, he said it is possible subcontractors for state projects use Stevens' goods.

Sharp said Bullard had considered holding up the bill's vote on the House floor to coincide with Big Business Day, April 17. But, he said, immediate passage of the bill is the main concern, so proponents will try for a vote this week.

Judging from the broad, bipartisan support the bill received in committee, Sharp said, the legislation should have no trouble passing the House.

Carr says U.S. may be selling weapons to Afghan rebels for use against Soviets

By ELYSE GOLDIN
State News Staff Writer

U.S. Rep. Bob Carr, D-East Lansing, said Saturday the American government may be selling Soviet weapons to Afghans so the natives can defend themselves against Soviet insurgents in their country.

Though he did not elaborate on the statement, Carr said he has a "suspicion that there has been a covert reaction on the part of the U.S. to purchase arms from communist countries and sell them to the Afghanistan rebels... tribespeople." Carr is a member of the House Armed Services Committee.

Carr spoke to about 100 people on campus about the draft and U.S. foreign policy.

Suggesting that Afghanistan will be a learning experience for the Soviets as Vietnam was for the United States, Carr said the Russians will realize the extent to which they may or may not assert their power in foreign countries.

"The current problem may appear beneficial in the future," he added.

CARR SAID A major failure of the Carter administration in response to crises in Afghanistan and Iran has been an erosion of efforts made to secure arms control.

"It is necessary that we demonstrate to the Soviets and ourselves that there are non-violent forms of handling problems," Carr said. He also said the American relationship with the Soviets is not beyond repair.

Carr said although the Carter administration started with a strong foreign policy which included positive ideological content, the president applied it with a "vengeance" and hindered some U.S. relationships with other countries.

"We now seem to be groping, not having a thread of consistency and going off on different directions at once... which is not unusual for the United States," he said.

Speaking on the draft, the representative said some significant gains have recently been made against registration.

He said the Full Appropriations Committee last week rejected a proposal from a sub-committee. The rejection will have the effect of Rushen: 'I'm so uninspired'

By ROSS BOISSONEAU
State News Reviewer

Patrice Rushen is a talent gone to waste. A classically trained pianist, she is undeniably talented, but she has almost completely given up her keyboard playing to concentrate on her singing. Unfortunately, she's not a particularly strong or distinctive vocalist, and as a result, her music tends toward a bland sameness, which her show in Erickson Kiva Friday night aptly demonstrated.

The 8:30 p.m. show began promptly at 9:50 p.m. Is it just me, or are concerts getting later and later? But anyway, Patrice and company entered almost an hour and a half late, and proceeded to lay down some tracks from her latest release, Pizzazz. "Lay down" is an appropriate phrase, because the tunes just laid there. No amount of dancing or gesturing could cover up the fact that they were boring, boring, boring.

Her band also does little to distinguish itself. With two guitarists, a horn section, an extra keyboardist, and background vocalists, Patrice seems to be trying to gain strength through numbers. But none of the band members bring any personality to the music, and this cast of thousands serves only to clutter it up and try to obscure the fact that it cannot stand up on its own.

Patrice has taken the same route as Chuck Mangione, Earl Klugh, and especially George Benson: make the music as bland, palatable, and smooth as possible, add a bit of funk, and then sweeten it up, with lush backgrounds of strings or voices. It's worked for those mentioned above, especially for Benson, who, like Rushen, has almost given up his stellar instrumental abilities to make millions by singing in a pleasant and instantly forgettable voice. It also must be working for Rushen, as Pizzazz is currently No. 8 on the Billboard jazz charts.

Perhaps Patrice just needs someone to give her a musical direction. She is certainly capable of producing engrossing music, as her work with people such as Jean Luc Ponty has shown. But on her own, she gives in to the megabuck lure of lightweight funky pop music. Commercially successful, to be sure, but artistically? Not a chance.

As Patrice herself put it, "I'm so sick and tired/I'm so uninspired I just want to dance..." Right on, Patrice. Right on.

The writer stumbles in new Stitt play

By WILLIAM BARNHARDT
State News Reviewer

I could have no more sympathy right now for anyone in the world than Milan Stitt, whose second effort at playwriting, Back in the Race (which has finished its run at the BoarsHead Theatre), is seemingly irredeemable and just weeks away from an off-Broadway opening. After the highly successful The Runner Stumbles, which was made into a film with his screenplay, Milan Stitt surely must be aware that this play lacks what made his first play successful. Now some lines are very nice, I suppose, but for the most part the play was a grab-bag of Milan Stitt's stray political comment, Michigan upbringing, and reservoir of favorite lines that must have been dying to get out for some time. It's too bad these cherished lines couldn't wrap themselves into some kind of believable plot, convey a worthwhile theme, adapt to credible characters, or dignify a premise worthy of writing about.

It's too bad Stitt's lines couldn't wrap themselves into some kind of believable plot or convey a worthwhile theme . . .

Since this production is on its way (supposedly) to bigger and more professional things, we decided to review the final "creation" in its revised form. The grapevine — some anonymous BoarsHead regulars — relate that Saturday night's show was nearly a complete rewrite. A character had been dropped, props had been changed — this production is running scared.

The play is about — geez, I don't know what it's about, come to think of it. I think it's about Jonathan Edwards VII, who has shown up at this cottage at Lake Tawas, Mich., to deliver a will to someone named Cliff who had something to do with Jonathan Edwards VI who has a half-Indian daughter (?) named Zabrina who has mental problems and physical defects. And from these three totally uninvolved, unconvincing characters, the play forays into every conceivable Michigan problem. Stitt has been quoted as saying his Edwards family is like many powerful American families. Well, Stitt has made the Edwards like so many families with their multi-conglomerates and decadent social life and innumerable other big powerful family cliches, that the play has totally lost any connection with the stoic sterile holiness of the original Jonathan Edwards. Except for random bits of World Book Encyclopedia trivia (key dates, famous quotes, last words, etc.) this Edwards family saga could have been the John Doe story for all its insight into the great Puritan minister. If you're going to write about Jonathan Edwards, don't write about the Fords or the Duponts and don't set it in Michigan, set it in New England perhaps. And most importantly, don't tackle Native American exploitation, the problem of heritage, the raping of America by industry, the fading of old expectations and enjoyments, the sadness of delusion, the distance between sex and love, the fallacies of the American way, the corruption of the U.S. Senate, and yes, yes it was in there, the treachery of the PBB scandal! Oh, bemoans the embittered Jonathan Edwards the Seventh, "... the chemical poisons twisting the genes of young mothers..." Oh, come off it, Milan! What junk! Find an issue, focus on it, write something resembling a play about it.

If there was redemption it was in two members of the cast. John Randolph as the pioneerish outdoorsy Cliff, and Joyce Reehling as the disturbed Zabrina are fine actors, taking what they've been giving and spanning the incredulities of their roles. William Carden as Jonathan Edwards VII added to the production's troubles by taking a character developed as jaded and bored with cynical casually deprecating lines and making him some troubled angst-ridden youth. Whether it was Carden's or director Leonard Peters' idea, the character didn't fit the lines, he seemed obsessed with noblesse, and seemed incapable of having any interest in those around him. He'd look off into the void and deliver a line to Cliff like, "... No shopkeeper you, no caretaker you..." Now who the hell talks like that? This oppressed cast piloted its best through the shallow dramatics, unmotivated fight and love scenes, and CONFESSION, oh Lord, every other scene was a confession. After a long and arduous tell-all by Zabrina, intoning everything from insanity to incest, Jonathan looks at her tenderly and says gently, "People deserve better..."

I agree. Audiences deserve better. At this point my only advice to Milan Stitt is to recapture the success of his first play in his next one. Write with an audience in mind, and don't cater to local Michigan concerns if you're aiming for Broadway.

Dirty Looks

Dirty Looks, a newly-formed rock trio from Staten Island, N.Y., will be headlining the first "I Don't Like Mondays" show of spring term tonight. Appearing with Dirty Looks will be Heaven Seventeen, a Detroit band featuring Geoffrey Fieger — little brother of the well-known Knack hack, Doug Fieger.

Dirty Looks — Patrick Barnes on guitar, "Marco Sin" on bass and Peter Parker on drums — draw upon and synthesize from a variety of influences ranging from rockabilly to Hendrix. The band recently signed a recording contract with Stiff Records.

As a special promotion, Pyramid Productions will be sponsoring a "dirty looks" contest the night of the show. Contestants will be judged on the basis of the "punkiness" of their clothes, and prizes will include concert tickets and albums.

Tickets will be $3 at the door, which opens at 8:30 p.m.

IN SPRING OPENER

Netwomen topple Miami

By RICK MAYDAY
State News Sports Writer

The MSU women's tennis team defeated Miami (Ohio) University, 6-3, in its spring season home opener Friday, but coach Earl Rutz Jr. could have been happier with the team's results.

"We did not play up to our potential," Rutz said. "This year Miami is a much improved and well coached team. For a while we were worried about losing the match."

The Spartans overall record now stands at 5-4.

Monty Gettys upped her individual record to 8-1 with a 6-1, 3-6, 6-0 win over Miami's Wendy Sweney in No. 1 singles.

Second singles player Jill Grinberg took her match with an impressive 6-3, 6-0 victory over Nina Howard, and Cindy Bogdonas came back against Lee Eare to win her match 4-6, 6-1, 6-1 in the No. 3 slot.

THE SPARTANS, HOWEVER, did manage to lose two of their singles matches. Sue Kim lost to Miami's Pam Dodman, 6-3, 6-3 at the No. 4 spot, and No. 5 player Pam Pierce fell to Lauren Montgomery 6-2, 0-6, 6-1. Jennifer Tewes, at No. 6, defeated Diane Edelman 7-5, 6-4.

In doubles, Gettys and Grinberg won 6-2, 2-6, 6-1 over Sweney and Howard, but Pierce and Bogdonas lost to Eare and Montgomery 6-4, 7-5.

Seventh singles player Diane Dunn filled in for Tewes in the No. 3 doubles competition. Tewes pulled a tendon in her foot and was forced to sit the match out. But Dunn and Kim pulled through with a 7-6, 6-3 win over Dodman and Schaberg.

The Spartans suffered four minor injuries in the Miami match but Rutz said the team would be back to normal after a week of rest.

NO. 3 SINGLES PLAYER Bogdonas commented it was nice to see a large crowd show up for the first match of the spring.

"Hopefully the win over Miami will give us the momentum we need to pull us through the rest of the season," she said.

This weekend the Spartans will pack up and head for Purdue University, where they will be faced with three tough dual matches against the Boilermakers, Indiana University and defending Big Ten champion Ohio State University.

Women's soccer program grows

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer

In 1979 the MSU women's soccer club, in its first year of existence, went through the season undefeated and won the state of Michigan championship.

In 1980, these on-the-field successes won't be enough for the club: it wants to step up to varsity status.

Right now the club is just that, a club. Club sports at MSU receive no assistance, whether it be in the form of financial aid or publicity, from the athletic department.

But a move to the varsity level will change this. The step won't come easily.

"THE UNIVERSITY HAS no set rules as to what you have to do or show to get this status," coach Charlie VanNederpelt said. "Plus we have not been getting any help from the athletic department. In fact, they have been very much against us. Some high school kids have called their (the athletic department's) office to see whether Michigan State has a women's soccer team, and they have received notices that there isn't a team."

VanNederpelt says attempts to get in touch with MSU athletic director Doug Weaver have been fruitless. "I can't get hold of him," he said. "I understand it takes time for him to learn about the operations at a major university, but it is also apparent he's not much for the minor sports."

"He's been trying to set up a separate athletic director for minor sports. This is something (former MSU athletic director Joe) Kearney was doing when he was here and now Weaver is following the same path."

Why does VanNederpelt feel the women's soccer club should achieve the varsity status?

"From what I understand, they (the athletic department) look at previous results, instructional emphasis and quality of competition when they decide on varsity sports," he said. "We show them all."

AND THERE CAN be no doubt, women's soccer is growing. VanNederpelt was instrumental in forming the Midwestern Women's Intercollegiate Soccer League over the off-season. The league now includes 14 schools, one of them being MSU, with three others wanting in.

In addition, the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women has formed a committee to set up a national tournament. The championship tournament will begin next year.

Thus far, only one school in the midwest, Denison College in Ohio, has a varsity women's soccer program. But VanNederpelt sees that number rising and MSU becoming part of it.

Vincent named cagers' MVP

Jay Vincent, the Big Ten's leading scorer in 1979-80, has been named MSU's Most Valuable Player by the vote of his teammates.

The 6-foot-8 junior from Lansing averaged 22.1 points per outing in conference games. His 582 points brings his career total to 1,305 to rank him sixth on MSU's all-time scoring list.

"Jay developed into the best offensive player in the conference this past winter," MSU coach Jud Heathcote said. "I think we can expect Jay to continue his superlative play next year and I believe he is a bonafide All-America candidate."

The selection earns Vincent The Chicago Tribune award, which goes to the MVP of each member institution and makes him eligible for the Big Ten Most Valuable Player Award won by Earvin Johnson in 1979.

The award will be officially presented to Jay at the team banquet April 11 in Long's Banquet and Convention Center, Lansing.

Tigers send Fidrych to minors

LAKELAND, Fla. (UPI) — Mark Fidrych apparently is taking in stride the latest in a long string of setbacks.

After nearly three years of nagging tendinitis and a somewhat troubling spring start, the 1976 American League Rookie of the Year has been shipped back to the minor leagues.

In announcing Fidrych had been optioned to Evansville — the team's top farm club — Tiger manager Sparky Anderson said Saturday "The Bird" needed regular pitching assignments to regain the strength in his troublesome right arm.

Fidrych was sent to the minors once before, in 1978, when the tendinitis in his shoulder would not subside. "I don't think it's the crossroads of my career yet, just another side street," the 25-year-old righthander said Saturday.

"Why get bent all out of shape about it? Doing that won't solve the problem."

Although he said he agreed with the move, Fidrych disagreed with Anderson's projection about the length of the farm club stay.

"We're hoping he can pitch 100 innings there," Anderson said.

"He's going to need 50 to 100 innings for sure to get that strength back in there."

"The only way he's going to get back into the big leagues is to pitch again."

Fidrych said he thought Anderson was "just talking off the top of his head."

"When he talked 50 to 100 innings, I looked at him and I was thinking, 'I'm not gonna wait that long.'"

"I'm gonna know if I'm ready after two or three games."

Fidrych said he is aware of the possibility of a strike by major league players in which case all players still on the Tigers' roster would be sidelined until a settlement.

"If there is a strike, one week or two weeks, they'd be cutting me back a month, maybe," he said. "I wouldn't be in regular competition."

Rare 'velodrome' track here for bicycle race

By ED BRADLEY
State News Sports Writer
Dale Hughes operated the lift-truck to perfection as the 16-foot by four-foot piece of wood was raised off the ground at a 50-degree angle, fitted into place and bolted firmly to add yet another piece to the giant puzzle being built in Demonstration Hall.

The 120-part puzzle is a large bicycle track — a "velodrome" by name. The 125-meter board track was built in 1976 and is the only portable track of its type in North America.

Workers installed the track at MSU Saturday and Sunday for use in a National Indoor Cycling League race April 14 through 19. The race, which features eight two-man teams of the country's best racers, is the first such contest ever in this area.

Hughes is one of four owners of the track. The quartet, Madison Velo Productions of Detroit, spent five months constructing the track.

The course is 85 feet wide, 200 feet long, 12 feet high on the curves and six feet tall on the straightways. "There's enough wood for about three and a half houses here," Hughes said.

THE WOODEN TRACK harkens back to the 1920s and 1930s, when whole professional leagues flourished on the bicycle racing circuit. Arenas such as the Olympia in Detroit and Madison Square Garden in New York City were designed for cycling, Hughes said.

"Now there's virtually no more indoor racing," Hughes said. "Most of it is done outside, on cement tracks."

But the wooden course still gets use. The velodrome, in fact, appears in the new movie, Little Miss Marker.

"The scene in which the track appears is only about two minutes long," Hughes said. "But we furnished them (the movie producers) everything — riders, officials, the whole bit. And we had it stipulated in our contract that we had to appear as extras."

NEXT MONTH'S RACE is produced by MSU's Intramural

Sports Clubs and Madison Velo Productions with sponsorship from the Schwinn Bicycle Co.

In the six-day race, riders race three hours a night at speeds up to 50 miles per hour. Scoring for the teams is done on a point system.

Among the entrants will be Christoff Meingast, an MSU student who is an Olympic hopeful in the sport.

Racing begins at 7:30 p.m. nightly. Tickets are $5, with group rates available.

Workers install a section of the Velodrome at Demonstration Hall.

Women golfers hope for weather change

After returning Sunday from its southern trip, the MSU women's golf team is looking forward to beginning its spring season, while remaining confident that Michigan weather will cooperate.

"We didn't have the weather we wanted down south," said MSU coach Mary Fossum, "but we did have time to hit a lot of golf shots."

Fossum noted this year's squad is a very young one, and yet she was pleased with how it progressed on the spring trip.

"Once they start playing their normally good game, they'll surprise themselves," added Fossum.

Senior captain Ann Atwood "played quite well" according to her coach, who said the Bloomington, Ill., native has lengthened her shots. "And she's always had a good short game," Fossum said.

Sophomore Nina Spatafora, MSU's second low scorer in her fall portion of this year's season, had recent knee surgery, but played on the spring trip. "As soon as she's rested it for a while, she'll be just fine," Fossum said.

Fossum also mentioned Menominee freshman Sid Wells and Livonia sophomore Lisa Speaker as players who did well on the trip and will be seeing action this spring.

Fossum also mentioned that 1979 All-America Sue Ertl is still around and serves as an inspiration to the young players.

"Sue will be trying the mini-tour as an amateur, and will then try to get her professional card next winter," Fossum said.

Election results

A small turnout of voters elected six new at-large representatives to the Student Council during spring term registration. Three people were elected in the non-white male or female section. They were: Terri Smith, sophomore business; Frederick Gaddy, junior, business; and Chucky Eaddy, freshman, religious studies.

Kelly Shaw, a sophomore majoring in social science and Pamela Miller, a sophomore in agriculture and natural resources were elected in the non-white female category.

In the undesignated category, Ellen M. Riedel, a freshman in Lyman Briggs College, was elected from a field of seven candidates for the one position.

Approximately 1,650 students voted in the election. The at-large representatives are full voting members on the Academic Council, the all-University academic governance body.

Trial begins in Florida brutality case

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Five White former Dade County police officers go on trial Monday in connection with the alleged beating death of a Black insurance executive that has rocked race relations in Miami.

Because of the racial tensions surrounding the case, the trial has been moved to Tampa.

The five have pleaded innocent to charges that stem from what prosecutors say was a club-wielding melee that left 33-year-old Arthur McDuffie with his skull smashed, mortally injured, on a Miami street corner the night of Dec. 17. Prosecutors also say the officers then tried to cover up the attack.

Officer Alex Marrero is charged with second-degree murder while Sgt. Ira Diggs and patrol officer Michael Watts face manslaughter and aggravated battery charges. Sgt. Herbert Evans Jr. and officer Ubaldo Del Toro are charged with being accessories after the fact. All the men have been dismissed from the force.

A SIXTH FIRED officer, William Hanlon, had been named in the case, but on Friday, a judge dismissed manslaughter, aggravated battery, evidence tampering and accessory charges pending against him.

Judge Lenore Nesbitt ruled that those charges stemmed from statements Hanlon thought wouldn't be used against him.

Prosecutor Hank Adorno said he would now subpoena Hanlon as a state witness in the trial.

The alleged beating followed an eight-minute high-speed chase that began in unincorporated Dade County and ended at an intersection just inside the Miami city limits. Up to 10 police units began chasing McDuffie after he ran a red light on his motorcycle.

Hanlon told investigators he remembered seeing McDuffie "lash out" at officers, but in sworn statements, witnesses said McDuffie's hands were handcuffed behind his back during the alleged beating.

McDUFFIE'S DRIVER'S LICENSE had been suspended in December 1978 after he wrote a bad check for a $35 fine in a traffic accident. A warrant was issued for his arrest after he skipped a court appearance for driving with outdated tags. A co-worker has said McDuffie had been afraid of another traffic arrest.

McDuffie, a former military police officer, died after five days in a coma. A medical examiner said his skull had been "cracked open like an egg."

When police reports were filed describing the incident as a traffic accident, supervising officers noted discrepancies and summoned departmental investigators.

A chilling picture soon emerged of officers standing around

McDuffie, pounding him with clubs, fists and flashlights, and sometimes hitting each other by mistake.

The most graphic testimony of what happened that night is contained in depositions released by the judge over the objections of defense attorneys.

Hanlon told investigators he saw Marrero standing over the top of McDuffie, his flashlight gripped in his hands.

MARRERO GRIPPED THE flashlight and crashed it into McDuffie's head, Hanlon said. "I recall (he hit McDuffie) at least three times. It was very strong and very powerful blows," Hanlon said. "His entire face was covered with blood."

Prosecutors say the defendants battered the victim's motorcycle with their clubs to make it appear that McDuffie lost control of the vehicle and hit his head falling to the pavement.

Meanwhile, at the house where McDuffie lived in the Carol City district of Miami, his 2-year-old daughter Dewana still runs to the window and shouts "Daddy" when a car pulls in.

Her mother, Frederica, divorced McDuffie in 1978. But the couple had planned to remarry early this year and honeymoon in Hawaii on a trip McDuffie won at work.

Black citizens in Dade County have reacted angrily to the McDuffie case, saying it was another example of police brutality directed against Blacks in Florida.

Sen. Kennedy blasts Carter's handling of inflation; Reagan campaigns in Kansas for Tuesday primary

By The Associated Press

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, plunging late into Wisconsin, lambasted President Carter Sunday for his handling of inflation, while Republican front-runner Ronald Reagan sought new voter support in Kansas. Both states are holding primaries Tuesday.

Campaigning in a state he once had all but conceded to the president, Kennedy took heated issue with Carter's use of the words "demagogue" and "misleading" in a newspaper interview in describing Kennedy's economic proposals.

The president said in the Milwaukee Journal that Kennedy was "not being completely frank with the American people on inflation" and had not put his major economic proposals into legislative form.

Declaring that "I am not a demagogue — I am a Democrat," Kennedy said it was Carter who "evidently does not believe that inflation is a serious problem."

Kennedy challenged Carter to "come out of the Rose Garden at the White House and find out on the campaign trail what Americans really think."

THE MASSACHUSETTS SENATOR planned a 24-hour swing through Wisconsin in a late bid for the state's 75 delegates to the Democratic National Convention, apparently sensing some weaknesses in Carter's strength there.

But his campaign aides dismissed any notions that the senator might score an upset, as he did in defeating Carter in last week's New York and Connecticut primaries.

Reagan meanwhile flew into Kansas for appearances aimed at shoring up his popularity going into Tuesday's primary, when 32 delegates will be selected for the GOP National Convention this July at Detroit.

The former California governor has an overwhelming lead in convention delegates over his nearest competitors, George Bush and Rep. John B. Anderson of Illinois. Another 34 GOP delegates will be elected Tuesday in Wisconsin.

Anderson, in a national television interview in Washington before he returned to the stump in Wisconsin, came closer than ever Sunday to offering himself as an independent candidate should the major parties nominate Carter and Reagan for the November elections.

THE CONGRESSMEMBER putting distance between himself and other candidates of both parties on the issues, said he would not let down his contributors — many of the more than 71,000 in the past two months — who would be unhappy with a Carter-Reagan choice this fall.

Anderson added, however, that "I haven't put the first brick in place" to run as an independent.

Bush meanwhile challenged Carter to "level with the American people" about U.S. dealings with Iran instead of giving the public "silence and doubletalk."

The former U.N. ambassador and CIA director said in Madison, Wis., that news reports of a message from Carter to Iranian leaders dealing with past U.S. foreign policy mistakes in Iran suggested a "self-humiliation and apology" by the administration that could lead only to "further hostage situations."

Bush's state campaign director, Charles Davis, said Bush was "peaking at just the right time," but Bush ducked a question as to how big a margin he would have to win Tuesday to be able to leave Wisconsin with his "head held high."

In other developments: • Carter soundly whipped Kennedy at Democratic county conventions in Oklahoma

Saturday, assuring him of at least 34 of the state's 42 national convention delegates. Carter won 78 percent of delegates to district and state conventions, while Kennedy netted only 9 percent and 13 percent were uncommitted.

• Kennedy meanwhile edged Carter Sunday in a presidential preference straw poll of delegates to the Oregon Democratic convention. Kennedy got 49.5 percent of the vote, while Carter won 43 percent, with California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. and 16 write-in candidates trailing.

• Sen. Barry M. Goldwater, the 1964 GOP nominee, said in Easton, Md., late Friday that contrary to his "earlier doubts," he now believed Reagan could win in November.

INCREASES IN SETTLEMENT EXPENDITURES

Israel to spend more on West Bank

By DANIEL GREBLER
Associated Press Writer
TEL AVIV, Israel — Israel plans to spend at least $140 million — 18 percent more than last year — on settlements in the occupied West Bank during the fiscal year that starts Tuesday. The plans have set off a debate within the country.
Settlement expenditures will consume just over one percent of Israel's budget of $11 billion and are seen as indicative of the defiance Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government shows toward those, including the United States, who consider the settlements illegal and obstacles to peace.
The figure of $140 million was assembled from a range of governmental and semi-governmental agencies involved in the settlement effort. It does not include any money for new settlements, or for the government's latest decision to put two Israeli schools in the West Bank city of Hebron at an estimated cost of $2.5 million.

HERE IS A breakdown of the settlement budget, which is under the overall administration of Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon:
• From the Housing Ministry, $67.5 million for "thickening" some of the existing 73 Jewish villages in the West Bank, according to Yosi Margalit, of the ministry's Rural Building Authority.
"We hope to build about 750 new housing units in Judea and Samaria (the West Bank) and prepare sites for another 200 units," Margalit said.
• An additional $72.5 million is budgeted for the Settlement Department of the World Zionist Organization, which gets government money to provide infrastructure, temporary housing and related equipment for the villages.
The exact amount to be spent on settlements is difficult to pin down, partly because officials are reluctant to talk about the internationally sensitive subject, and partly because the figures are subject to change as the government alters its programs.
Besides the $140 million funneled through the Housing Ministry and the World Zionist Organization, observers believe other agencies contribute to the effort by installing utilities and other essentials, but these expenditures are difficult to estimate.
"Other government ministries could give us more money," said

Zeev Ben-Yosef of the World Zionist Organization. "But that depends on the ministers. Today they may say they have the money, but when we go to them with a specific request, the response is: 'We don't have the funds.'"

IN ADDITION, THE army spends an unknown amount in providing security for the villages that house about 15,000 Israelis among the West Bank's 750,000 Palestinian Arabs.
Some Israeli news reports have put the settlement budget as high as $188 million, but Ben-Yosef said the figure was too high. "I wish the $188 million figure were correct," he said.
Whatever the final total would be if the hidden costs were included, it is clear that Begin's government is putting a lot of money behind its often-voiced determination to settle Jews in the biblical "Land of Israel."
Opponents claim the money would be better spent meeting social needs inside Israel at a time when the government, trying to reduce last year's 111 percent inflation, is cutting the budget.
And old-line settlement officials complain Begin is ignoring large unsettled areas inside Israel proper by concentrating on the West Bank.

RAANAN WEITZ, HEAD of the settlement department of the Jewish Agency, said that the government set aside only enough money for 80 housing units in existing settlements in Galilee, Israel's norther district.

Development Fund positions are filled

Joseph E. Dickinson, vice president for development, has announced that four posts with the MSU Development Fund have been filled.
Linda A. Dolby, 30, has been promoted to the position of President's Club coordinator after serving as a planned giving officer at MSU since 1978.
The President's Club is composed of donors who contribute $10,000 or more to MSU.
M. James McIntyre, 28, has been promoted to the position of director of school and college alumni programs after serving as an assistant to that post since 1975.
His job will be to spearhead the campaign of individual departments and colleges in soliciting alumni donations.
Working with McIntyre is Marti K.S. Heil, assistant director of school and college alumni programs.
Heil, 25, received a bachelor's degree in communication arts from MSU in 1976 and has most recently served as staff representative for the campaign division of the Capital Area United Way.
Filling the position of assistant director of the Ralph Young fund is Therese A. Fossum, a 1972 MSU graduate and an English teacher with the Okemos Public Schools.

Second crater on Wash. volcano

COUGAR, Wash. (AP) — Geologists flying over erupting Mount St. Helens reported Sunday the appearance of a second crater on the cone of the volcano with eerie blue lightning arcing between it and the first.
The 9,677-foot snow-covered peak in southwestern Washington had been mostly shrouded in clouds since it began erupting Thursday, in the first such display in the contiguous United States since 1917.
But the weather started clearing Saturday night, revealing the unusual sight, said U.S. Forest Service spokesperson Sylvia Brucchi in Vancouver, Wash., about 40 miles southwest of the mountain.
Mudflows on the mountain froze in the cold weather Saturday night, but plumes of steam and smoke continued to blast Sunday from both craters to an altitude of about 15,000 feet. No lava has emanated from the volcano, but earthquakes continued to rattle the mountain.

THE CLOUDS OF smoke drifted southeast in the direction of Hood River, Ore., on the Columbia River, Brucchi said, and people in its path could smell a sulfur odor and detect settling ash.
"The ash could cause low, minor corrosion to metals and some damage to textiles," she said. "You wouldn't want to hang out our wash this morning."
The second crater was spotted by U.S. Geological Service geologists riding in a Forest Service plane about 10:30 p.m., she said.
The new crater — about 90 feet by 150 feet — had opened about 30 feet north of the original eruption, which has left a hole about 300 feet by 450 feet in size.
"A blue glow or flame was seen in the smaller crater and blue-colored lightning was seen arcing between the two," Brucchi said.
Lightning generated by volcanic activity had been seen earlier in the plumes of black smoke rising from the mountain.
explanation as to what caused the lightning or arcing.
Geologist Bob Christensen said, "This is not a glow we would associate with the presence of magma (lava)."
The blue glow was not seen after 11:30 p.m. Saturday, Brucchi said, adding Forest Service planes were in the air near the volcano almost continuously.
She said scientists were installing more equipment on the volcano to measure earthquakes and to detect any tilt in the slope of the mountain.

Afghan president claims Amin was a CIA agent

By United Press International
Afghan President Babrak Karmal charged in an interview published Sunday that his predecessor Hafizullah Amin was a CIA agent who killed up to 1.5 million people under a brutal regime "a hundred times more merciless than that of Pol Pot in Cambodia."
Karmal, who came to power when the Soviets invaded last Christmas and Amin was killed, denied Western intelligence reports that the Soviets have some 80,000 troops in his country.
He said the Soviets moved into Afghanistan to defend the country against American in-

Scientists check for killer of bees

ADELPHI, Md. (AP) — University and state officials plan to check 1.5 million dead honeybees to learn whether a killer parasite that has infested hives in much of the world is at work in the United States.
The mite, Varroa jacobsoni, is known to have invaded beehives all over the world in the past decade except those in North America, South Africa and Australia. The blood-sucking mite, which originated in Asia, can kill a hive of 20,000 bees in three years.
A University of Maryland graduate student found the mites in the bottom of a vial she was using to collect drone honeybees near here, sparking the inquiry.

Milliken building coalition to back tax shift proposal

MARQUETTE (UPD) — Gov. William G. Milliken blasted the Robert Tisch tax cut plan and said he is building a coalition to support his own more moderate tax shift proposal.

Budget Director Gerald Miller outlined the still-tentative plan at the governor's fourth annual State Affairs Conference here.

It calls for a flat $300 per family property tax reduction with lost revenues replaced by increasing the sales tax from 4 percent to either 5 or 6 percent.

Tisch, the colorful Shawassee County drain commissioner, hopes to place on the fall ballot a plan which would cut property taxes by about 50 percent while sharply limiting the Legislature's ability to compensate by raising any other levy.

Milliken said Saturday the Tisch plan would be "absolutely devastating" to the state's ability to help those in need.

He said approval of the plan would mean deep cuts in mental health, law enforcement, welfare and higher education programs.

To call such a plan tax reform, Milliken said, is "putting it charitably."

Lansing City Council to discuss revenue sharing

A resolution expressing the need for continued federal revenue sharing to cities will be discussed by the Lansing City Council at 7:30 tonight on the 10th floor of City Hall.

The resolution, which is expected to pass, would call for the sending of letters to U.S. Sens. Donald Riegle and Carl Levin, and Rep. Bob Carr to express Lansing's urgent need for the federal money, said Council President Lou Adado.

Lansing received more than $3 million in federal revenue sharing for fiscal year 1979-80. Mayor Gerald Graves has included that same amount in his 1980-81 budget proposal.

Graves has said if federal revenue sharing is not continued there will be layoffs of 175 Lansing workers along with other budget cuts.

Though Carr has shown opposition recently to federal moneys for cities, Councilmember Lucile Belen said Carr voted for it two years ago and received a thank-you from only one Michigan city: Lansing.

The council will also take up the mayor's controversial appointment of new Personnel Director Stephen Kintz. A lawsuit, filed by Richard Holmes, a former Lansing Charter Commission member, against Kintz, Mayor Graves, and former Personnel Director Daniel Bodwin, will be given to the city attorney who will arrange a trial date with the Circuit Court.

A temporary restraining order filed by Holmes on the Kintz appointment was denied by Circuit Court Judge Ray Hotchkiss on March 25.

Cambridge prof to speak on modern Western Africa

State formation in modern western Africa will be discussed at 3:30 p.m. today in 216 Bessey Hall.

Keith Hart, a professor at Cambridge University, England, will be the guest lecturer. Hart is currently a visiting scholar at the University of Michigan.

The free meeting is open to the public and sponsored by MSU's African Studies Center.

ACCIDENT KILLED 123 WORKERS

The story behind disaster in North Sea

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

OSLO, Norway — No one worried much about the gale-force winds and high waves pounding the Alexander I. Kielland, a five-story "hotel" floating 200 miles offshore in a North Sea oil field. The 212 men on board had been through worse.

Then suddenly, without warning, their world literally turned upside down and 123 of them were dead.

"We'd all been given lifeboat training, but when it happens so quickly, there's not a lot you can do except try to survive," said Tony Sylvester, a 34-year-old British oil worker, who did.

Others never had a chance after the unthinkable happened at 5:33 p.m. Thursday — when one of five legs supporting the 10,000-ton steel structure collapsed and the platform capsized.

On Sunday, Norwegian authorities recovered two more bodies from the frigid waters, bringing to 42 the number of bodies found. Another 81 men are still missing and presumed dead in history's worst-ever, offshore, oil drilling accident. Eighty-nine men were rescued in the hours after the platform went down in 90 feet of water.

OLAV SKOPHEIM, A 28-year-old Norwegian engineer, was among the approximately 50 workers watching the beginning of the American-made movie Jeremiah Johnson in the theater on the bottom level of the floating hotel when the accident happened.

He said he heard "two loud bangs followed by another bang soon after." The lights went out. Alarm claxons sounded. Men screamed in confusion and terror and then were piled atop one another against a wall of the theater as the top-heavy structure began to tip over.

Thirty seconds after the leg collapsed, he said, the platform, built to withstand 100-foot waves, was listing dangerously at 45 degrees.

Survivors reported panic from the first moments on. Fear-stricken men jammed the door from the movie theater, preventing others getting out. On the crazy tilting deck, some men grabbed life jackets and threw themselves into the big waves.

Few of them survived, though one was in the water for three hours before being picked up alive.

Technical chief Odd Osland, a Norwegian, who was flung out of bed when the leg snapped, said: "I heard the screech of steel cracking and realized something serious had happened."

HE SAID HE and others struggled to the deck and launched a lifeboat. At first, he said, the waves, sometimes as high as 20 feet, and winds, up to 60 miles an hour, bashed the boat against the side of the platform. Later, he said, they used their shoes to bail the lifeboat out and keep it afloat.

Skopheim said he managed to claw his way to the door of the movie theater then raced to his cabin, grabbed his survival gear, pulled himself up a stair railing to the deck, from which, he figures, he would jump into the sea and swim for a drilling rig 100 yards away.

It was his only choice. A metal catwalk linking the platform to the rig was torn in two when the platform, operated by Phillips Petroleum Co., collapsed just as drilling crews were changing shifts.

He never got the chance.

Skopheim was plucked from the deck by a large wave and started swimming for the rig. "It was murder in that water," he said later. "I was exhausted after I'd only swum 20 or 30 meters."

But he was one of the lucky ones. A crane operator on the rig lowered a wire basket to him and pulled him to safety.

Rescue headquarters in the oil city of Stavanger launched a full emergency alarm at 7:05 p.m., 92 minutes after disaster struck the Alexander I. Kielland. British, West German and Dutch vessels and helicopters from Norway and Britain raced to help.

At 9 p.m., the first reports came in that some survivors had been found. At 10 p.m., a lifeboat with 23 shivering men was located. At 11:30 p.m., the first seven bodies were found.

'Love affair' with car to continue?

KALAMAZOO — The nation's traffic safety chief and a top auto executive agree the American love affair with the automobile probably can be expected to continue despite the energy crunch.

But it also is certain the object of that well-known affection will be lighter and more fuel-efficient in the years to come, participants in a wide-ranging weekend energy conference agreed.

More than 1,000 people attended the conference, held Saturday at Loy Norrix High School. It featured a wide range of government, industry, consumer and energy specialists.

The gathering was sponsored by U.S. Rep. Howard Wolpe, D-Mich., who said he wanted to help the public gain a better understanding of energy issues.

"THE MARKETPLACE HAS been more brutal to the American auto industry than government regulation," Joan Claybrook, head of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, told the day-long gathering.

When the American consumer buys a car in these energy-lean times, he or she is not "thinking about the unemployment of American auto-workers or the profits of the auto industry," Claybrook said.

Harold MacDonald, vice president for engineering and research at Ford Motor Co., agreed government fuel economy standards are not the problem the nation's auto-makers once believed they were.

"It's the public that's the problem," he said, "we are no longer in any disagreement with the 27.5 miles per gallon fleet average mandate for 1985."

Claybrook said fuel efficiency increases required by the 1985 model year will cost $400 to $500 more per car than compared with 1977 prices.

"BUT EVEN WITH a conservative estimate of fuel prices, the greater fuel efficiency will save more than $1,500 over the average lifespan of the vehicle," she said.

Government researchers and European and Japanese manufacturers already have produced 1,800-pound vehicles that meet all government safety standards, she told the gathering.

Claybrook also said auto-makers need not sacrifice safety in favor of lightweight, fuel-efficient cars.

Keynote speaker at the conference was Denis Hayes, director of the Solar Energy Research Center in Golden, Colo. He told the group solar energy and conservation are the best energy answers in the long term.

"Renewable, decentralized energy sources encourage the qualities that built this country — ingenuity, self-reliance and the pioneer spirit," he said.

CONSUMERS POWER CO. President John Selby also spoke debating the merits of nuclear power with Robert Pollard, a nuclear safety engineer and member of the Union of Concerned Scientists.

Selby criticized anti-nuclear activists — calling them "nuclear obstructionists" and saying their goal is "the further hobbling of the United States as a world power."

Pollard, a former member of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, said Selby "personifies the reason I resigned from the NRC."

He contended last year's Three Mile Island accident has done "remarkably little" to ensure the safety of nuclear plants.

NYC transit negotiations focus on issue of wages

NEW YORK (AP) — Negotiations aimed at blocking a crippling city transit strike entered a crucial stage Sunday as the Metropolitan Transit Authority made its first wage offer to unionized subway and bus operators.

A strike affecting 6 million New York and Long Island riders could begin Tuesday when the contract for the transit workers expires.

The wage offer was for a 10.5 percent increase over a 34-month contract. That was far short of what the unions hoped to get from management — a 30 percent increase immediately.

Under the offer, the transit workers would get a 3.5 percent raise on Tuesday and identical raises on April 1 in each of the next two years. The final payment would be for a 10-month period ending Jan. 31, 1983.

John E. Lawe, president of Local 100 of the Transport Workers Union, and Richard Ravitch, chairperson of the Metropolitan Transit Authority, agreed earlier that most impediments to the money talks had been removed.

Money offers had been held up by the MTA's desire to resolve collateral issues and get assurances from labor that any monetary settlement would include concessions regarding costly work practices.

Law said, however, on the WCBS-TV Newsmakers program, that bargaining will fail if the MTA doesn't discuss extending to transit workers hired since 1978 the 90-cent-per-hour cost of living adjustment already received by workers hired before that time.

Attempts to clear the secondary issues had continued far into the night Saturday.

Rainstorm wreaks havoc in South

Nebraska ranchers struggled with deep snow Sunday, worrying over spring calves in the face of another snowstorm, as Louisiana and Mississippi dried out from rains that brought a fatal mudslide, contributed to a river collision, and forced families to evacuate.

In Natchez, Miss., two persons died Saturday night when a rain-soaked bluff collapsed on a 19th century bar and a delicatessen. About 20 people were injured when an oil tanker collided with an excursion boat on the Mississippi River near New Orleans during a driving rainstorm.

About 65 families were evacuated from Franklinton, La., a town of 3,500 some 50 miles north of New Orleans, because of the worst flooding on the Bogue Chitto River since 1900.

In western Nebraska, two feet of snow was on the ground and only one lane of Interstate 80, the main east-west highway, was open west of North Platte. In Kansas, Interstate 70 was closed from Salina to the Colorado state line because of snow.

In Louisiana, Deputy Sheriff Stephen Wise of Washington Parish said about two dozen national guardsmembers, sent in Saturday by Gov. David Treen, probably would have to help more residents flee the rising water. He said the Bogue Chitto was expected to crest Sunday.

Nearby, a record crest was moving down the Pearl River toward Bogalusa, La., where floodwaters drowned Roy Miller, 67, while he and a relative were fishing Saturday. The relative clung to a tree for hours before he was rescued, deputies said.

Tax agents to investigate more if U.S. privacy law is relaxed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Administration officials are debating whether a law protecting the privacy of income tax records should be relaxed so tax agents can get back into investigations of organized crime.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairperson of the Senate permanent investigations subcommittee, already has proposed four amendments to the 1976 Tax Reform Act; but White House, Justice Department and Treasury Department officials have not yet decided whether to endorse those bills or to draft their own.

Justice Department officials are particularly eager for a change because they believe the law has handicapped scores of investigations of organized crime, white-collar crime, narcotics trafficking and public corruption.

Nunn and the subcommittee's ranking Republican, Sen. Charles Percy of Illinois, share that view.

Mobsters and smugglers have been "the main beneficiaries of the Tax Reform Act as applied and interpreted by the Internal Revenue Service," Nunn said. "Our bills would change that situation while at the same time keeping the most important safeguards of taxpayer privacy."

The act prohibits IRS from offering tax returns, other taxpayer records, and information obtained in its own investigations to other government agencies, including the Justice Department, FBI.

Slain prof honored in memorial service

BIG RAPIDS (UPI) — More than 300 persons gathered at a weekend memorial service for Robert Brauer, the Ferris State College professor shot to death in front of his accounting class.

The Saturday service was conducted by the Rev. John Tatgenhorst, who had married Brauer and his wife, Kathy.

The eulogy was delivered by Ferris State President Robert Ewigleben.

Meanwhile, the student accused of killing Brauer remained at a Grand Rapids psychiatric hospital scheduled to undergo psychological testing.

Doctors treating Thomas D. Kakonis at Forest View Psychiatric Hospital said the 20-year-old sophomore was showing signs of coming out of the near-catatonic state he lapsed into after Wednesday's slaying.

Although Kakonis has not spoken since the shooting, Dr. Jack Carr said he began writing messages and eating late last week.

"Primarily, we're communicating through handwriting," Carr said. "He is eating and taking fluids. He is not talking yet."

Director's Choice Film Series presents

Tout Va Bien

(Just Great)

Starring Jane Fonda and Yves Montand
Directed By: Jean-Luc Godard

"Tout va Bien" is the story of an American radio correspondent in Paris (Jane Fonda) and Yves Montand, who portrays a film director who has turned to TV commercials. Both find themselves trapped overnight in a sausage factory where Fonda has gone to interview the manager on the problems that face management today. The comical episode takes Fonda and Montand through a worker's sit-in, a strike, and numerous other scenes. As described by Dean Weber of WKCR: "Jane Fonda and Yves Montand bring simple energy to a beautiful film."

MONEY MAN DOES IT AGAIN!

"Money Man"

has returned after the beginning of classes, but before finals.

Result:

He's bought more used books than we have ever had.

So What?

We have a special staff marking these books for resale.

You Can

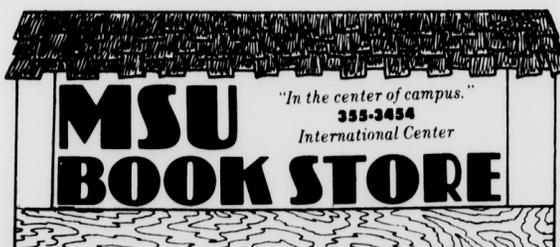

Now buy these used books this late in the term. They are all in the proper course sections.

Stop In

For this last chance to buy used books for the Spring term.
