Carter sets deadline in hostage crisis

By AP and UPI

A major break appeared imminent Monday in the nearly 150-day-old impasse over the 50 American hostages in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

New reports said the Iranian Revolutionary Council was ready to take jurisdiction of the hostages and congressional leaders in Washington said President Carter planned to take retaliatory measures Tuesday unless there is substantial progress toward Press secretary Jody Powell said Carter met with the National Security Council and the bipartisan congressional leadership "to review developments in Iran" on the 149th day of captivity for the hostages.

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., said Carter will address the nation Tuesday and told reporters "the United States has to plow ahead with actions which will make the Iranian government understand that we are determined to get these hostages released."

CBS News said the Revolutionary Council decided to move the hostages from the embassy after a 41/2-hour "special" meeting Sunday night that was attended by Iranian President Abolhassan Bani Sadr.

The developments, following two secret messages sent by Carter to Iran in recent days, were the strongest signals in weeks of

Before Bani-Sadr's meeting with the three militants, an Iranian Foreign Ministry spokesperson said transfer of the hostages to government custody was one of the steps being considered by the ruling Revolutionary Council.

President cuts off $15 billion

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON - President Carter Monday sent Congress his promised plan for balancing the fiscal 1981 budget and said it would reduce spending for federal programs by $15 billion.

The proposed revisions in the budget Carter sent up in January would save an additional $2.2 billion by forcing the government to borrow less, the administration said, thus cutting total spending by $17.2 billion.

"We have a real fight ahead," Carter said in signing the revised budget proposals. "It is not going to be an automatic thing that we succeed, but I'm absolutely determined that we shall. He promised to veto any budget-busing bills he has to in order to meet his goal.

The proposals announced Monday would appear to curtail spending in nearly every category except defense and Social Security. And Carter insisted the Pentagon would be required to operate more efficiently in order to absorb some of the added costs of its expanding operations following the international crises of recent months.

THE DEEPEST CUTS would be made in outlays for jobs programs, revenue sharing for the states and in government pay and retirement benefits.

James T. McIntyre Jr., the director of the Office of Management and Budget, said: "No single interest or set of recipients will bear a disproportionate share of the austerity. But some of the government's key programs for the needy were spared, he said, because "this administration has not balanced the budget on the backs of the poor."

The poor, however, are not exempt. The budget proposes to adjust food stamp allowances for increases in the cost of living only once a year instead of twice. The same change would reduce spending for child nutrition, workers' compensation benefits and federal employee retirement. Coupled with planned increases in revenues from the president's new energy import taxes, the full range of cuts would leave a surplus in government spending of $16.5 billion in the fiscal year beginning next Oct. 1. That would be the largest budget surplus in the nation's history if it materialized.

But officials have made it clear that the president might still propose a tax cut if Congress accepts his reductions in spending, and Congress already is tempted to distribute the prospective surplus by reducing taxes in an election year.

The previous highest surplus was $12 billion in 1948.

If Carter's spending cuts are approved, they would balance the federal budget for the first time in 12 years and the second time

Congress already is at work on its own list of budget cuts that closely parallel Carter's and in some cases go beyond them.

Security Council debates Palestinian state issue

By WILLIAM N. OATIS Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Security Council opened a new debate on the Palestinian issue Monday with backers of the Palestine Liberation Organization demanding Israel "face the facts" and accept an independent Palestinian state.

If a resolution calling for establishment of such a state comes to a vote, the United States is expected to veto it.

This is the second time in a month that the Carter administration has confronted the issues of the Israeli-occupied territories in the Security Council. On March 1 it voted in favor of a resolution condemning Israeli settlements in the territories, a vote later disavowed by President Carter because of its references to Jerusalem as occupied land.

The U.N. Committee on Palestinian Rights asked for the current debate in line with a 1979 General Assembly resolution calling on the council to reconsider by March 31, 1980, the committee's 4-year-old plan for a Palestinian state founded by the PLO in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip. The United States vetoed the plan in the council in 1976.

Senegal's U.N. Ambassador Falilou Kane, chairman of the Palestinian Rights Committee, opened the debate Monday by declaring the committee "believes that it is high time that the Israeli leaders face the facts and recognize the national rights of the Palestinians.'

The debate was adjourned Monday with no date set for its resumption, but it is expected to reopen Wednesday.

Committee reporter Victor Gauci, the Maltese ambassador, charged in an apparent reference to the United States that "the internal politics of influential countries" were a drag on "what must urgently be done in the Middle East."

Israeli Ambassador Yehuda Z. Blum noted President Carter will hold separate talks in Washington this month with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin to try to end the deadlock in Egyptian-Israeli talks on Palestinian self-rule in the occupied

Thus, he said, "there can be little doubt that this debate was initiated and timed to try and frustrate the ongoing peace process in the Middle East."

Pistol area returns to E.L. place the annexation question on the ballot followed by County Clerk Lingg Brewer for was unconstitutional and that the pistol area was to remain in Meridian Township. The preliminary order is effective until a final appellate ruling is heard by East Lansing and Meridian Township attorneys, East Lansing attorney Tom Hitch said.

East Lansing has filed its brief and expects Meridian Township to have a brief filed by mid-April, Hitch said. The recent order will make all those living in the pistol area residents of East Lansing.

This could mean about $132,000 more per year for the city when the state begins its revenue sharing, according to Gary Murphy, East Lansing's group manager for finance. The new residents will be counted as part of East Lansing in the 1980 census, the official tally upon which these revenue With the acquisition of the pistol area, East Lansing's present estimated popoulation of 54,000 will jump abbut 5.8 percent, Hitch said.

The state allocation is about $42 per person, Murphy said. He said he has not figured the federal revenue sharing amounts per person, but that the city would receive more from the federal government, should the annexation be finalized.

The court of appeals ruled the procedure the annexation of the territory was constitutional, even though the law conflicted with rules set up by the boundary commission.

Brewer followed the Charter Township Act procedure for scheduling the annexation election after being presented with petitions last summer from County Commissioner Mark Grebner, D-East Lansing.

Grebner, who sponsored the drive to get the annexation question on the ballot, claimed boundaries made voting and voter registration confusing.

The annexation could also have an effect on the number of potential liberal voters (students) in East Lansing.

East Lansing city council member and a member of East Lansing Progressives, Alan Fox, said the new residents are more likely to balance the political parties in the city than make one party stronger.

"A dorm precinct in a city council election. for example, might swing 100 votes," Fox said, "and in Dayton Hudson there will be 1,000 new housing units. There will be more actual votes coming out of that."

Fox cited advantages to the annexation, however, in the ease with which students can register and vote. The annexation will make it easier for all East Complex students to vote in East Lansing, he said.

Union to file 'harassment' grievance against Custodial Services supervisor

State News Staff Writer A grievance will be filed today against the Supervisor of MSU Custodial Services for alleged employee harassment, said Steve Wallace, a district steward for Local 1585. The harassment grievance is one of approximately 20 different complaints that have been filed by Union Local 1585 against supervisor Larry Mueller since winter term, Wallace said.

The grievance states that Mueller is in violation of several provisions of the union contract regarding purpose and intent and management rights. The complaint states Mueller "has threatened and harassed" a custodial service employee to the point of "making it almost impossible for her to function properly in the job."

Conflicts between Mueller and the employee began when she allegedly placed posters on University property derogatory to custodial management, Wallace said.

The posters supposedly criticized "the rights of the employees being denied," he added.

Wallace said Mueller gave a written record of verbal warning to the employee and called the Department of Public Safety for her arrest. The employee was read her rights by a DPS officer for the violation of University Ordinance No. 31.00 on March 26, he said.

"She was posting posters on campus buildings," Mueller said 'Nobody is to post without permission.

The ordinance states no signs or posters may be placed in any area other than a designated bulletin board without proper permission. Lt. Michael Rice of DPS confirmed that the DPS does take action against violators of this ordinance.

"It is an enforceable ordinance and we do enforce it," he said. Wallace said Mueller's actions against the custodial service employee clearly constitute harassment.

"He uses his position to pay back personal vengeance," Wallace

Wallace indicated an array of grievances in all three steps of the negotiation process are the result of "vengeance." These include complaints concerning denial of personal time to employees and not granting advancements to employees with most seniority, he

Wallace added the grievances are the result of Mueller's "lack of knowledge for the position he has and also the way he approaches

"Grievance answers to the first step grievances were very short, brief and unexplanatory," he said

The DPS said the case against the MSU employee by Mueller is still under investigation and no hearing date has been set.

Winder announces elimination of positions

By KARL BLANKENSHIP and KY OWEN State News Staff Writers

Two major administrative positions will be eliminated in an administrative reorganization plan announced Monday by MSU Provost Clarence L. Winder.

Under the plan, the positions of director of Academic Services, currently held by Herman King, and assistant provost for administration and records, currently held by Ira Polley, will be eliminated.

Winder said King will retire June 30, and Polley would either retire or be reassigned to a faculty position by Sept.

"We do not plan to continue either of these positions," Winder said, adding that the work will be redistrubuted between the Office of the Provost and other departments.

WINDER ALSO ANNOUNCED

Monday plans to form a unit called the University Undergraduate Department to handle academic advising of freshman and sophomore no preference students.

Academic Services includes programs which provide academic support on an interdisciplinary basis throughout the University, and the assistant provost handles programs such as admissions, records and the registrars office.

Winder said these responsibilities will be assigned to various other administrators, as a result some projects may be delayed or not carried out at all.

"I think we can set our priorities so the most important things can be done,' Although no one will lose his or her jobs under the plan, Winder did say some people would have changes in their assignments. "MOST OF THE CHANGE will be in terms of the responsibility of people

Director of Academic Services, assistant provost for records cut already on the staff in the provost's office," Winder said.

Under the new organization, Dorothy Arata, assistant provost for undergraduate education will become assistant provost for general academic administration, a new position, Winder said.

James Hamilton, assistant provost for special programs, will become assistant provost for undergraduate education, Winder added.

Supportive Services, the Office of Programs for Handicapper and the Upward Bound program, all of which are currently under Hamilton, will be transferred to the office of assistant provost for undergraduate education.

Winder said the reorganization is one of the major changes which have been made in recent years in the administra-

"WE'VE GROWN ACCUSTOMED to a system where the changes were additions," he said. "That system is now out of style, We're going to have to reduce the scope of some activities.

"We'll continue to have change," he added, "but the nature of the changes will be difficult.

The reason, Winder explained, is resources available to the University mainly money - will not be so readily available.

However, nothing in the current reorganization "will dictate a change of budget," Winder said.

The University Undergraduate Division will also be responsible for operation of the Learning Resources Center and placement examinations, Winder

All of these responsibilities are currently handled by University College, which will be phased out as of July

WHEN WINDER PROPOSED the University College phaseout last November, he proposed to continue services provided by the college's Office of Instructional Services.

"I don't believe there will be a noticeable difference from the point of view of the students," Winder said.

UUD offices will be located in the current University College offices in Bessey, Akers, Brody and Wonders halls, Winder said.

The unit will be headed by a director,

Winder said, but who that will be has not been determined.

Asked if Willard Warrington, acting dean of the University College would be a possible candidate, Winder said "he might be offered the position.

WINDER ADDED HE does not know if the position will be posted.

"It may be determined on a reassignment or it may be posted," he said. Winder will ask the Board of Trustees at its April meeting for authorization of the unit's title, but will not seek approval Winder said he does not believe the board needs to approve the action since it approved the phase out of University College. "I think a reasonable interpretation is that the administration is entitled to make those arrangements," he said. Winder also said he does not think any one will lose their job as a result of the formation of the new unit.

FDA asked to require warnings on coffee, tea

By JANET STAIHAR Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON congressmember asked the Food and Drug Administration Monday to require labels on coffee and tea to warn pregnant women that caffeine may cause birth defects and other reproductive problems. A spokesperson for the coffee industry later denied that caffeine is linked to defects in infants.

In response to the request for cautionary labels, FDA spokesperson Wayne L. Pines said that "at the present time we're not prepared to issue warnings about caffeine during pregnancy."

But Pines added that preliminary findings from an FDA study show that pregnant rats fed large doses of caffeine do give birth to a significant number of offspring with birth defects. That study is to be released in

Andrew Maguire, D-N.J., said in a letter to FDA Commissioner Jere Goyan that enough scientific evidence is already available linking caffeine to birth defects in laboratory animals "to other pregnancies and had suggest there may well be risks to humans."

He said studies over the past 15 years show birth defects in mice whose mothers were fed caffeine in amounts equivalent to five to 20 cups of coffee a day.

"It is prudent public policy for the FDA to require a label advising pregnant women to be careful of drinking coffee," Maguire told a news conference.

Accompanying Maguire was Dawn Prevette of Virginia Beach, Va., who said that 15 years ago she gave birth to a physically deformed daughter after drinking 10 to 12 cups of coffee a day.

"I was so careful that I would not take so much as one aspirin," she said. But she had trouble controlling her weight so she said she drank a lot of

"I know that my experience doesn't prove that coffee was the cause of my baby's birth defects," Prevette conceded. "But it seems to offer the only reasonable explanation."

She said she did drink coffee heavily during three

Dr. Michael F. Jacobson, executive director of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, which petitioned the FDA for a warning label on coffee and tea last November, said the agency is delaying unnecessarily.

"Millions of babies will be in danger while the federal government drags its feet,' Jacobson told reporters.

FDA spokesperson Pines said in response to Maguire's request that although the FDA has no plans to issue a general warning on caffeine intake during pregnancy, expectant women should follow certain dietary rules.

Included among those precautions, he said, is "be moderate in the consumption of all substances like caffeine."

Pines said the FDA is studying the effects on the offspring of rats fed caffeine equaling 20 to 30 cups of coffee a day.

Tehran radio said the message also contained a partial U.S. apology for past American "mistakes" in dealing with Iran, something the Iranians have demanded as one condition for ending the showdown.

Some State Department officials speculated that Iranian authorities had fabricated the conciliatory "message" from Washington in an effort to convince the militants and other Iranians that the United States would give in to Tehran's demands.

Ukrainian egg decorating is an art of the ages: symbolic, treasured

The chairperson of the humanities department, F. Dewitt Platt. has resigned, citing personal problems between himself and the dean of the College of Arts and Letters.

Platt has been working with Alan Hollingsworth, dean of the College of Arts and Letters, on the transition of the humanities department into the college following the dissolution of University College last year.

"I took the leadership last year to make the transition as friendly as possible," Platt said. "I began to feel that I could no longer be effective in representing the department's interests upward (to the college).

"I'm concerned about undergraduate education," Platt said. "I'm particularly concerned about humanities. I think this department has been a force for good on this campus.'

The Board of Trustees approved the dissolution of University College in April 1979. As part of the transition program, Provost Clarence L. Winder stated that University College programs would go intact into the corresponding colleges.

"That's what I've been trying to insist on," Platt said. Some problems the departments face in making the transition are in the areas of staffing the faculty and budgetary factors. Platt said these are not specifically the reasons for his resignation although he added that the humanities department will be losing about five faculty members to retirement within the next two years without any clear indication that they would be replaced. "We have had some benefits," Platt said. "I recognize that we are not going to get everything." He said the supplies and services budget for the department has been increased as a result of the transition. This will give faculty members more money for such things as audio-visual aids.

Platt described the transition as a "forced marriage" but added that the dissolution was almost inevitable because the issue has been raised for many years.

"There's an immense amount of tension involved in this," Platt

Platt said the feeling that the Humanities Department would lose many students as a result of the incorporation has been unfounded. He said the department enrolls approximately 17,000 students a year.

"I think the real danger is of MSU becoming a trade school," he Platt will return to full-time teaching after his resignation becomes effective Friday. Floyd Barrows, a professor of humanities, will be the acting chairperson.

"It (resignation) is the ultimate act and I don't regret it," Platt said. "I am sorry for the department however."

Hollingsworth could not be reached for comment.

MODERATE PLAN

Milliken seeks tax shift

MARQUETTE (UPI) — Gov. William G. Milliken, saying the latest version of the Tisch tax cut proposal would cripple the state's ability to aid the needy, is seeking backers for his own more moderate tax shift

State Budget Director Gerald Miller says formation of a labor-business-public service coalition to back the still-tentative tax plan already is in the early stages.

Miller outlined the administration proposal Saturday at the State Affairs ConferUpper Peninsula tour. The plan calls for a flat $500 per family property tax reduction with lost revenues to be replaced by increasing the sales tax from 4 percent to either 5 or 6 percent. The Milliken plan is designed to head off another tax-cutting bid by Robert Tisch, the colorful Shiawassee County drain commissioner who failed in efforts to have voters approve a Proposition 13-style measure in 1978.

Tisch hopes to place on the fall ballot a ence that capped Milliken's fourth annual measure that would slash property taxes by about 50 percent while sharply limiting the Legislature's ability to compensate by raising other levies.

Milliken said approval of the Tisch plan would be "absolutely devastating" to the state's ability to help those in need, causing deep cuts in mental health, law enforcement, welfare and higher education pro-

To call such a plan tax reform, Milliken said, is "putting it charitably."

Miller said he hoped this week to begin talks on the proposal with legislative leaders. A two-thirds vote of the Legislature would be required to put the measure on the ballot.

Miller said Milliken would circulate petitions to put the measure before the voters if the Legislature balks.

Such groups as the state Chamber of Commerce, Michigan Manufacturers Association, Michigan Education Association, United Auto Workers and Michigan Municipal League already have shown interest in the plan, Miller said.

Numerous tax shift proposals currently are under consideration by the Legislature.

While the state's 7.2 million motorists were able to buy their tabs by mail and Boucher said he expected the department to register about one million drivers by the midnight deadline, and enroll another million in April.

He said many owners of recreational vehicles and motorcycles probably will wait to register them until warmer weather takes hold. In addition, many two-car families are only registering one vehicle at a time because of the cost.

Still more drivers have not registered because they thought they did not have to purchase their tabs until their 1980 birthday, Boucher said.

There is no late fee for purchasing tabs after March 31 "except you can't drive your car," Boucher chuckled. While the state has no standard penalty for driving without tabs, Boucher said some local police assess fines as high as $20.

"You can see that it's probably cheaper to buy the tabs," Boucher said.

In the case, appealed from Calhoun County, prosecutors called to the stand the defendant's alleged accomplice in a restaurant robbery which had resulted in the death of a patron.

The man, who had a history of mental illness, testified he had been accompanied by "Frank Nitti and Al Capone."

The prosecutor impeached the claim with the witnesses' prior statements implicating the defendant.

The high court, in unanimously ordering a new trial, said the prosecutor knew the witness' testimony would be inconsistent with prior statements and was under no duty to call him to the stand since he was an alleged accomplice.

Kennedy's upset neither surprising nor intimidating

"upset" to label Sen. Kennedy's unexpected victories in the New York and Connecticut primaries accurate though, is the term "anticipated upset."

Although President Carter's momentum in the primaries seemed almost unstoppable, a few events in the past weeks have reminded voters just how politically vulnerable the president really is. New York's and Connecticut's results were merely seismographs to the lightning bolts of opposition Carter has received as has let down on economic issues, and New York City's predominantly Jewish electorate, which he has alienated.

Statistically, the results are a boon for Kennedy. His success, however, can be largely attributed to the anti-Carter immediacy of the political climate. What is probably more Byrne and supposedly the rest of the state's powerful Cook County delegation. But Carter even swept the predominantly Catholic sectors of Illinois, an upset in itself.

Because it was staged before the inflation issue really took hold in the political milieu, Illinois could have been an accurate indicator of Kennedy's headway in the race for president, had he won. But he lost, even after Byrne's crucial endorsement. Such an outcome is hardly of late from the public, which he explainable in any other terms but public preference for the incumbent. On issues, Kennedy and Carter do not differ that greatly. In popularity, both have received their share of setbacks.

Carter's ammunition was public approval of his handling of some very visible political issues. If New York and Connecticut have given Kennedy anything, it has been the foes last month for his inept fruits of public disapproval of handling of the country's economic other issues on which Carter has not acted effectively. The facility, in the works since 1977, was once scratched as unfeasible due to a lack of monetary support from the community for the project. But a revised proposal, eliminating health care and educational services has been given the nod by University officials, and requires only the approval of the Department of Housing and Urban Development for implementation.

If the use of $666,000 in community development block grant funds for the project is approved by HUD, the facility at Spartan Village would include a child care center to be funded and operated by the MSU Institute of Child and Family Care. Because the amount of child care awarded on the basis of personal ployment status, it is about time the low and middle-income residents who help East Lansing qualify for block grants see some of the money.

> Compromise and incrementalism, foundations of the American political system, have obviously played an important role in this victory for social welfare advocates, as the revised proposal includes funding for only those services which have been deemed "most needed."

City studies have shown a great need for services the facility can provide - especially child care. But other community needs such as health care and educational services for the disadvantaged in East Lansing should not be forgotten in the success of the revised

VIEWPOINT: NUCLEAR POWER

Nuke opponents aren't Marxists

By DAVE HALL

This viewpoint is in response to Mr. Pierce's diatribe of March 27 condemning The State News' anti-nuke position. Instead of supporting his argument with current, unbiased facts, Mr. Pierce resorted to childish name-calling to cloud the issue. In addition, of the facts that he did use, most were taken from 1976. Since this period was long before Three Mile Island, these "facts" obviously do not accurately reflect the change in public sentiment toward nuclear power.

Another thing that amazed me about Mr. Pierce's argument was the absence of logic in its structure. It is unbelieveable how he associates the anti-nuke movement with Communism and the Soviet Union. I can counter this absurd claim with two points. movement. Though we understand the First, if the anti-nuke movement is communist-based, why are the communist countries pursuing the implementation of nuclear power more vigorously than the U.S.? Second, the anti-nuke movement could not even take root in a communist country for it is a rebellion demanding human rights and condemning the power of government and business. This fight against nuclear power embodies many of our constitutional rights, such as freedom of speech and the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. I hardly think this makes one a Marxist or anti-American.

In order to clear some of Mr. Pierce's misconceptions, I will now explain some of the underlying philosophy of the anti-nuke urgent need for an alternate source of energy to keep America running, we are not willing to let the powerful utilities experiment on our people with this extremely dangerous form of energy. With atomic half-lifes of thousands of years, any mistake will not only curse our own generation but it will haunt our descendants for a very long time.

What are the chances of this mistake, you may ask. One must only look at the track record of the industry to understand. Of course we have Three Mile Island, where all safety systems failed and the lives of millions were put into extreme jeopardy. Even the NRC admits that it was just luck that kept the core from melting down.

Although total disaster was averted, the effect on life is still unknown. With 40,000 gallons of krypton gas to be released in a two-month period, the people of Harrisburg will become new guinea pigs for the possible effects of excessive doses of radiation on human beings. With the thousands of deformed survivors from Hiroshima, do we really need more evidence as to the danger of massive radiation?

It should be noted that Three Mile Island is not an isolated incident. There have been dozens of mishaps at nuclear plants which have resulted in exposing the plant workers and nearby residents to dangerous levels of radiation. You may argue that no one has died from these mistakes - remember radiation-caused diseases such as leukemia often take decades to materialize.

Not only are we no-nuke supporters afraid of nuclear plant meltdowns, we are even more fearful of the whole nuclear process. The true danger of radiation exposure comes during the periods of mining the uranium and transporting the converted plutonium to waste disposal sites. Also, the problem of disposal itself is reason for banning nuclear power. If these wastes may be stored safely, then why are so many governors refusing to let their states become radioactive dump sites even with the promise of greater federal funding?

When people like John Gofman (the founder of U-232, the fuel used in nuclear plants) come out and condemn the use of nuclear power, I get very worried. The only people adamantly supporting the industry are those who stand to gain from the incredible profits generated by this industry. This group includes the majority of nuclear physicists who are currently funded by the government or utility industry.

I hope this letter has offered a little insight into the anti-nuclear movement. We are not communists. Instead, we are people who believe in the philosophy that every man has a right to live his life free from fears of imminent destruction

East Lansing

Hildebrand's case drags on and on

Not content with having obliterated over 10 years of John Hildebrand's teaching career, the administration is now reduced to venal acts of petty torture. Who knows how long administrators can keep him out of his department and out of the classroom while they examine his "competence?" It is a lucky thing for them that the administrators involved over this 10-year period past and present provosts and department chairpersons - do not have to be seriously examined as to competence and fitness for their positions.

It is ironic that the heavy-handed axe which originally fell on John and several others (all young upstarts who had the temerity to get elected to their department's advisory committee) was wielded by a man who just last month received a Distinguished Faculty Award and earning this accolade from the News-Bulletin: "His dedicated, unselfish service to educational ideals serves as a standard for all to

I was an elected member of the 1968-1969 AAUP Executive Council, which unanimously found John Hildebrand's academic freedom and due process was violated when he was terminated by then-chairperson Douglas Dunham. In fact, we hardly saw such a blatant case in the two years I was on the board. An example of the standard of educational ideals applied is the long, threatening letter about department behavior sent at that time by the chairperson to a younger colleague of John. It said at one point: "You share with them (the other assistant professors) a certain amount of uncertainty about your position since none of you has tenure.

For more than 10 years John has patiently, honestly and independently pressed his case and its success to date serves well both himself and the faculty. In a faculty largely used to acquiescence to an overpaid administration which unilaterally has created and disbanded colleges, trained the police of one dictator and made films for another, regularly deals itself inflated salary raises and now seeks to regulate our contacts with the Legislature, we ought to treasure every independent voice we have.

Perhaps the Faculty Council might assume the role of a faculty representative body and petition the administration to end its longstanding and continuing injustice to John Hildebrand and admit what two juries have decided in awarding punitive damages: that MSU acted maliciously or wantonly or oppressively in violating Hildebrand's First Amendment rights.

An open letter to Cecil Mackey

As a doctor of economics, I am sure you are familiar with the adverse effects of monopolies and accompanied monopoly power on a free enterprise society. As I become more educated in economics, I see the evils of monopoly power transcend economics and are actually social problems. Even in the case of "natural" monopolies, Americans have sought to protect themselves from the discretion of the monopolist through the institution of regulatory agencies. Recent history has proved such regulation may actually have detrimental effects on the consumer, but the principle is sound: if it is impossible (because of natural economies of scale) to have adequate checks on each producer's power (i.e. many other producers), then rather than pray for a benevolent monopolist, society protects itself from exploitation through some type of regulatory system. This logic also applies to our three-tiered governmental system. Citizens are protected from absolute power by the mere separation of power.

Students and faculty in the University are not protected by law as consumers are, and rely on the inherent separation of power in the University system for protection from the discretion of a monopolist. The structure mandates that one person does not have the power to control the entire system. The alumni association is run by the alumni, the grievance process is administered by the grievance committee, and each professor has individual rights and powers. The president of the University much like the president of the United States does not control all aspects of the University and thus would not be in a position to act tyranically, if he had such a

Control of any economic, political, or educational system for the sake of improvement may be an arguable, if controversial position. Control that leads anywhere besides improvement is, in my opinion, unwarranted and hazardous. Do you President Mackey, see your controlover the alumni association and grievance procedure leading to any improvements? You may have, in the past, proven to be an adequate president, but do you believe that your personal experience is greater than the specialized knowledge necessary to perfect a unique grievance procedure? Is your general background enough to qualify you as an expert in areas where experienceproven experts already exist? If so, hats off to SUPER-PREXY. If not, MSU beware. Shah's cancer spreads to liver

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Cancer has spread to the deposed shah of Iran's liver, one of the surgeons who helped remove his spleen said Monday.

Dr. Faud Nur, the surgeon, said pathological tests also confirmed that the spleen was cancerous.

Nur, head of the tumor department at Maadi military hospital, where the splenectomy was performed Friday, said that shah's liver condition could be treated with drugs and the liver would not be removed. "We all believe this disease can be controlled," Nur said.

He said he and the shah's other doctors also believe the ailing former monarch can live an indeterminate amount of time. But other Egyptian surgeons, not involved with treatment of the shah but familiar with such cases, said when cancer spreads as it has in the shah's body, it usually has fatal complications.

Owens died about 3:40 a.m. MST (5:40 a.m. East Lansing time) at the University of Arizona Hospital, where he had undergone experimental treatment for his cancer, which was discovered Dec. 12. Ruth. his wife of 47 years, and other relatives were at his side, doctors said.

Figures show recession ahead

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy appears to be headed into its seventh recession since World War II, judging from the performance of a government forecasting index released Monday.

The Commerce Department's Composite Index of Leading Indicators fell 0.2 percent in February to its lowest level in more than 2 and one-half years. The February decline was the fifth in as many months. Three consecutive monthly declines are said to precede a recession. A recession traditionally is defined as two consecutive quarters of declining output. "It indicates that the economy is beginning to slip," said Robert Gough, chief forecaster for Data company, in Lexington, Mass. "Business is in a holding pattern. They are ready to go down."

(AP) — Cattle ranchers in snowbound western Nebraska, stung by a spring blizzard that buried their newborn calves under more than two feet of snow, got little relief Monday as a new storm bore down on the region.

The deep snow in northwest Kansas threatened to postpone today's presidential primaries. Secretary of State Jack Brier said he asked officials in five counties whether the election could be delayed. He said many voters were unable to leave their homes.

More than sex in 'Darlings'

By BILL HOLDSHIP State News Reviewer

We couldn't get in to see All That Jazz Saturday night, so we decided to watch Kristy McNichol lose her virginity in Little Darlings (Paramount; at the Spartan Triplex) instead.

Although it's rather embassassing, I have to admit this film's concept had me excited. Ya see, I've been in love with Kristy McNichol for years. OK, maybe it's perverse - sorta like robbing the cradle - but McNichol has always reminded me of the first girl I ever had a crush on, when I was 8 years old. I can still remember the first words she spoke to me (with fire in her eyes) after I had accidentally bumped into her - "Watch where you're going,

Ah, the joys of young "love"! And that's pretty much what Little Darlings is really all about. McNichol portrays Angel Bright, a tough-talking, cigarette-smoking tomboy from the other side of the tracks (Family will never seem the same), who is spending her first summer at Camp Little Wolf. Tatum O'Neal is her perfect foil as Ferris Whitney, a precocious rich bitch (an appropriate role?), who ends up habitating the bed next to Angel's at the camp. Naturally, there is a lot of initial animosity between the two girls, and they really seem to hate each other.

The pseudo-leader of the girls' cabin is Cinder, a 15-year-old self-professed "model" and "sex symbol" (the type of character audiences love to hate), who ridicules both Angel and Ferris for being the only girls honest enough to admit they're still virgins. Cinder eventually bets $100 that Ferris will "become a woman" before the summer's end. Several other girls wager that Angel will "get a man" before Ferris does, and the race is on.

The first half of Little Darlings is sort of like Meatballs with stronger sexual overtones. There are some genuinely hilarious situations, including a scene in which the girls "borrow" a bus to steal a condom machine from a gas station men's room, and a hysterical "food fight" scene that could almost give the one in Animal House a run for its money. In addition, the film may set a new trend in recent youth-oriented films by forsaking a disco soundtrack for tunes by such artists as Blondie, John Lennon and

Ferris sets her standards high, and eventually decides to seduce a big brotherly camp counselor named Mr. Callahan (Armand Assante, previously seen in the dreadful horror flick, Prophecy). Angel is attracted to Randy (Matt Dillon), a tough-looking punk from the neighboring boy's camp, who is a perfect sterotype of the heartless American male adolescent who grows up with his head between his legs. Of course, both girls encounter obstacles in their attempts at seduction, and these episodes provide the film's final comedic moments

Kristy McNichol portrays Angel Bright ("Don't let the name fool you") and Tatum O'Neal is Ferris Whitney in Little Darlings.

Little Darlings changes direction mid-way through, and the film takes on a more serious aura for its conclusion. In fact, I may be mistaken, but the screenplay by scenarists Kimi Peck and Dalene Young ends with what appears to be subliminal feminist undertones. Although the ad campaign for Little Darlings often makes the film sound like a crude, juvenile sexploitation flick, the film's final moments are treated with the type of sensitivity and understanding a subject this touchy warrants. Kristy McNichol demonstrates that she is a remarkable young actress, and her emotion-ridden scenes involving the rites of passage every person experiences at one time or another clearly overshadow Tatum O'Neal's rather bland performance. Ironically enough, the latter is one of our youngest Oscar recipients.

The film definitely has its share of flaws, and it probably won't win any awards. Nonetheless, Little Darlings is highly entertaining with a subliminal message to boot. The film is less about sex thanit is about growing up and discovering the REAL facts of life. This reviewer also found parts of it fascinating because many little boys in America grow up believing that little girls never think or talk about something as dirty and evil as sex. You learn something new every day.

Mary Watkins to perform Saturday

Mary Watkins, nationally known jazz pianist and composer, comes to MSU's Kellogg Center at 8 p.m. Saturday, April 5.

Watkins, whose roots are in spiritual music, now draws on a variety of American musical styles ranging through classical, blues, jazz, soul, funk and spiritual, and popular to come up with a diversified sound which reflects her personal strength and spirituality.

After earning a degree from Howard University - one of the first women to do so -Mary was the musical director for a Black theater in Washington, D.C. In 1973, she returned to her native Colorado to con-

Like vintage wine, some things get better with age. Smokey Robinson has become the chablis of soul. For more than two decades he has been keeping us humming and dancing to some of the most distinctive and popular music of the rock era. Along with the Holland/Dozier/Holland writing team, Smokey gave '60s Motown the songs that made it "the Sound of Young America." Singing such hits as "Tears of a Clown," "Ooh Baby, Baby" and "Tracks of my Tears" (before Linda Ronstadt ever touched a microphone), as well as writing

Smokey's writing is stronger, and his light vocals glide smoothly through the eight cuts. Impeccable production and subtle arrangements give the album a balanced, consistent sound unmatched in any of Smokey's previous solo efforts.

"Let Me Be The Clock," an obvious follow-up to "Cruisin," opens this ballad-filled album with Robinson's cool vocals

The big change on Warm Thoughts is though Smokey Robinson sings fewer fast songs, the two he does cut are a couple of his best. ED BRADLEY Vincent is

'up in air'

MSU basketball fans hope lightning doesn't strike twice. Some of them fear the same desire that compelled Earvin Johnson to turn professional in 1979 will consume Magic's old high school buddy and college teammate, Jay Vincent, in 1980.

At this point, there doesn't seem to be much to worry about. Vincent has not declared himself eligible for the NBA hardship draft. Yet he's really not given a flat denial he may be considering Well, Jay, what about it? Are the pros for you?

"I DON'T KNOW," Vincent told The State News Monday. "I've thought about it (declaring hardship). A lot of pro teams are looking for a power forward.

"I'm up in the air. I haven't really looked hard into going pro. You get a lot of hearsay contacts (from pro scouts), but they haven't really approached me since it's illegal."

A center the last three seasons, Vincent has indicated a preference for a forward position, mainly because of his small-for-a-center 6-8 build.

Despite playing against pivotmen two to three inches taller, Vincent averaged 22 points per game for the Spartans in 1979-80, won the Big Ten scoring championship, and was chosen the team's MVP. Thus the rumors began floating: will he stay or go?

"Some guys, like Wes Matthews (of the University of Wisconsin) and DeWayne Scales (of Louisiana State University) have made themselves available for bargaining," Vincent said. "I haven't done it yet, but if something comes along, I'll look into it."

If he did decide to take a shot at the pros, Vincent would be taking somewhat of a risk. Observers of MSU basketball, while praising Vincent's much-improved offensive strengths, see deficiencies in his game which would show more on the professional level.

THE MAJOR DRAWBACKS are Vincent's lack of footspeed. his weight and overall defensive ability. A foot injury, sustained in the NCAA tournament in 1979, gave him problems early last season and could flare up again.

"If he goes, and he doesn't make it, he has nothing. I suppose he might go play in Italy or something," said one MSU basketball observer who should know.

Jay should play his senior year here in Spartanland. The extra year's experience could only serve to increase his market value while honing his already great skills.

Remember, for every Magic Johnson who left for the pros before his college eligibility expired, there is a Bill Willoughby. Who is Bill Willoughby? Don't ask.

THE McCORMICK STORY: Depending on the source from which one gets information, MSU is or is not still in the running for Clarkston High School's 6-10 all-stater Tim McCormick.

Detroit media reported Sunday the University of Michigan, Ohio State University and the University of North Carolina were the three schools McCormick had narrowed down to attend. But MSU coaches say McCormick still has thoughts of donning the Green and White next year.

Assistant coach Dave Harshman told The State News Monday that McCormick may announce the school of his choice this week. "As far as we know, we are one of the final four," Harshman said. "We talked with his coach Sunday, and Jud (Heathcote) is going up there (today) to talk with Tim. McCormick has said he'd like to play forward in college, but if he came here, Heathcote would probably install him in the pivot.

"He'd be an excellent pivotman, a dominating big man," said Jay Vincent, who'd likely be switched to forward if McCormick came to

Confidence, maturity mark strong Spartan outfield By BILL TEMPLETON The Ypsilanti native hit .319, State News Staff Writer while striking out just once and

Hanging on the rim is what not to do when playing basketball in the IM buildings. The intramural department has incurred hundreds of dollars of damaged equipment this academic year. It's also one of the reasons your tuition is going up . . .

Ed.'s Note: This is the first of a three-part series on the MSU baseball team. Today's installment looks at the Spartan outfield.

When he talks about his outfield, MSU head baseball coach Danny Litwhiler hints that this group may be one of the strongest corps he has coached in years.

"I'm satisfied with our outfield," Litwhiler said Monday in his office, "and the production from our outfielders is already way up from last year."

Switch-hitting senior Ken Robinson will lead the outfielders this year, and if his statistics are indicative of the job he can do in Big Ten play, he is the kind of leader a coach likes to have.

ROBINSON CLUBBED THREE home runs on the spring trip to Edinburg, Texas, while collecting 28 total bases.

going two-for-two in the stolen base department.

"It was his best spring ever and we're expecting a real good year out of him," Litwhiler said. "He's hitting the ball harder, and throwing better, and his all-around play has really improved.'

While Robinson will patrol left field for MSU this spring, the coaching staff is also high on senior centerfielder Tom Litwhiler calls the 6-foot-3 Grand Rapids native a "fine centerfielder." The coach said Schultz is a good defensive player with a strong arm. Assistant coach Frank Pellerin noted that Schultz' hitting was not up to par in Texas, but he should come around. "He was a third-team Big Ten selection last year," Pellerin said, "and once a guy's done it, you expect him to do it again."

IN RIGHT FIELD for the Spartans this spring will be converted catcher Mark Russ, a junior who led the team in hitting on the spring trip with a .385 mark.

"He played a little outfield last summer with the idea that he would be there for us this year," Litwhiler said, "and it is our hope that Mark will be one of the best rightfielders MSU has ever seen.

Besides Robinson, Schultz and Russ, Litwhiler mentioned juniors Tim Kearly and Joe Mehall as other outfielders to be counted on.

"We shifted Kearly and Mehall between the designated hitter's spot and the outfield down south," Litwhiler said. "Tim did a good job for us and hit .318 with two homers and Joe hit a couple of balls that would have been home runs in our park.'

So with maturity, confidence and power as its forte, the MSU outfield appears to be a solid and dependable unit.

Laxers lose pair to Illinois teams; coaches cite lack of intensity as cause

By WILL KOWALSKI State News Sports Writer

Too many penalties, a lack of intensity and a costly injury al! took their toll on the MSU lacrosse team over the weekend as the laxers lost a pair of close non-conference games to two Illinois teams.

Coming off a 13-2 home-opener win Thursday, the Spartans were upended by the Chicago Lacrosse Club, 9-6, on Saturday and then lost to Lake Forest College, 14-10, Sunday after-

"I just don't know exactly what to attribute the losses to," said Spartan offensive coach Nevin Kanner. "We seemed to play real good in the second halves of both games, but you can't win games by being intense only half of the time."

BUT, AS KANNER pointed out, intensity was not the only thing that led to the losses.

"Against the Chicago Lacrosse Club we had to play a man down 11 times in the first half, so we had to play a defensive type of game and that assist on Andersen's tally. takes away from any team's momentum," Kanner said. "Plus Kevin Willitts, our top scorer, had a pinched nerve in his leg and was only able to play in the first quarter and a little lackluster first half in the second. We just had too many things going against us."

Defensive coach Boku Hendrickson agreed with Kanner about the lack of intensity. "I don't know if it was because we had three games in four days or what, but we failed to play consistently," Hendrickson said. "Our freshman goalie, Jim Sanford, did a great job both days, but I was not pleased with the weekend overall one Willitts, a senior attacker who broke his own MSU career scoring record last year with 70 goals and 28 assists, scored twice for the laxers before being sidelined for the rest of the Chicago game. The score stood at 3-2 in favor of Chicago when he went out, but was 6-3 Chicago, at halftime.

ASIDE FROM WILLITTS' two scores, other MSU goals were by Greg Helgemoe, Jay Hungerford, Art Barry and Duane Andersen. Barry also picked up a couple of assists while Shawn Grady also had an

Willitts was back in action the next day against Lake Forest and had five goals and one assist, but it was not enough to ignite the Spartans'

"I was really impressed with the way we came back, and we even got as close as 12-10 in the fourth quarter," Kanner said. "But we couldn't shut them down completely, so they were able to keep on scoring too.

"I guess the main things we learned over the weekend is that we can't be intimidated by the officials and that anybody can beat you," Kanner said.

"We have a lot of freshmen who have to start realizing this. Just because we beat a team last year doesn't mean it will be easy this year." Last season MSU defeated

Lake Forest 11-6. Also scoring for the Spartans in the Lake Forest game was Barry with two goals and one assist, and Brian Gaggin, Mark Pinto and Hungerford. Greg Brinkman, Grady and Hungerford also picked up assists.

The Spartans' next game will be away against Albion College on Wednesday, before the laxers return home for a contest with Oberlin College of Ohio on Saturday.

Rugby team wins pair

The MSU women's rugby team won both games of its dual-match home season opener Saturday, 6-0 and 24-0, against a Kalamazoo-Detroit team.

In the final minutes of the first match, team captain Michelle Strohbehn scored the only try of the game on a quick penalty play that caught the opponents while they were still setting up. Strohbehn also kicked a corner conversion, making the final

The MSU squad gained momentum for the second match in a 24-0 rout.

Commission invalidates Student Board winner

One of the seven representatives elected to the Student Board Wednesday was invalidated Monday by the All-University Elections Commission for not turning in a campaign spending

Tom Mannisto, who was elected to represent the College of Natural Science, did not turn in his spending report by the deadline Friday, said ASMSU chairperson Bruce Studer. Mannisto, a Lyman Briggs sophomore, defeated opponent Joe Testa, 137-122, in the closest of the seven ASMSU elections. "Mannisto said he would have resigned anyway if he hadn't been invalidated," Studer said. "He wasn't planning on enrolling at MSU spring term because of medical reasons.' Studer said Mannisto also told him he did not spend any funds on the campaign although that was not the reason he failed to turn in a spending

All the candidates were limited to spending $50 on their elections by the election code and required to turn in a spending report by Friday,

The invalidation does not mean Testa will automatically become the new Natural Science representative, because of the election code, which provides for a special election for all the other original candidates providing the winner is invalidated. Studer said he would try to avoid this special election - which could cost more than $100 - by waiving the code and declaring Testa the winner.

"It would be a waste of money to hold a special election with only one candidate on the ballot." Studer said.

The Student Board would have to pass a bill waiving that part of the code for Testa to take office. "I'm sure someone has been invalidated before, but not for failure to turn in a spending report and never for not spending any money," Studer said.

Mannisto and Testa could not be reached for comment.

Hearing on city budget in E.L. library tonight

The public can speak out on the uses of federal revenue sharing money before East Lansing City Council at 7:30 tonight at the East Lansing Public Library, 950 Abbott

The city is required by law to hold two public hearings regarding the budget, said Gary Murphy, East Lansing's group manager for finance.

The first, to be held tonight. will be to hear the public's views on how the city should use the federal moneys. The second hearing is held after the city budget is put together. "Last year there was no comment by the public," Murphy said. "There hasn't been too much opposition to how the city has proposed to use the money in the past." Last year the city received $426,000 from the federal government and the city could expect to get about the same amount if Congress renews its

Federal Revenue Sharing Act,

Murphy said. If President Carter includes federal revenue sharing cuts in the budget as part of his anti-inflationary measures, the city could expect to receive about half of last year's amount, or $213,000, he said. 'We encourage everybody city should use the money to come to the city council meeting," Murphy said.

The council will also vote on a recommendation to set April 22 as the date for a hearing on the finalized budget.

N.Y.C. awaits transit strike

NEW YORK (AP) - New York's hundreds of thousands of "straphangers" wondered what chaos the morning would bring after no progress was reported Monday in last-ditch efforts to head off the city's first transit strike in 14 years.

The people who climb aboard subways and buses 5.5 million times each day were trying to figure out how they might get to work as the midnight deadline approached for the strike by 35,000 transit workers...

Court 'weakens' political patronage

By RICHARD CARELLI

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court severely weakened the political patronage system Monday, ruling the Constitution protects the jobs of even some policy-making and confidential government

By a 6-3 vote, the court said government employees cannot be fired solely because of their political party unless "party affiliation is an appropriate requirement for effective performance of the public office involved."

Without that proof, a political firing violates an individual's constitutionally guaranteed freedom of association, Justice John Paul Stevens wrote for the court.

The decision, reached in the case of two Rockland County, N.Y., public defenders, affects jobs at all levels of government - federal, state and Led by Justice Lewis F.

Powell Jr., the dissenters said the ruling will "decrease the accountability and denigrate the role of our national political parties . . . at a time when an increasing number of observers question whether our national political parties can continue to operate effective-

POWELL'S UNUSUALLY strident dissent accused the court of ignoring 200 years of political history to create "a national civil service system' administered by judges.

In other matters Monday, the court took these actions:

• Refused to order heart surgery for a 13-year-old boy from California whose parents do not want the child to outlive them.

The justices left intact state court rulings allowing Phillip Becker's parents - and not state authorities - to make the surgery decision. The boy's parents fear that Phillip will not be well cared for if he outlives them, a distinct possibility if the surgery were successful.

• Allowed the government to require that all advertisements for "X-11 Plan" weightloss pills warn consumers that the pills don't work without dieting and pose serious health risks for some people.

· Refused to block the deportation of Iranian students until it acts on a formal appeal of the Carter administration's action against the students.

AVERAGE HIKE OF $186

GM raises prices of 1980 models

DETROIT (UPI) - General "X-car" compacts - the Chev-Motors Corp. raised the sticker price of its 1980 cars Monday by an average of $186 or 2.2 percent effective today.

The action likely will touch off the third industry-wide round of automotive price hikes on the 1980 models, including introductory prices.

GM said the average price hike also reflects a price reduction of $100 on the list price of optional V-6 engines in the rolet Citation, Pontiac Phoenix, Oldsmobile Omega and Buick

Price increases on individual models ranged as high as $449 on the Cadillac Seville, while prices remained the same on others, GM said.

Virtually all option prices will remain the same, but destination charges will be increased by $15, a GM spokesperson

GM is the industry's pricing leader and its actions usually are followed by similar price hikes from Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. Chrysler, however, jumped the gun earlier with a third model-year price hike that applied only to its subcompacts and imported ve-government's new anti-inflation guidelines.

GM pledged recently to practice price restraint after being found in technical violation of wage guidelines in the contract it signed last fall with the United Auto Workers union.

The price hike, said GM Chairperson Thomas A. Mur-THE NO. 1 AUTOMAKER phy, only partly covers cost said the price hikes are within increases at a time when profit margins are being eroded and capital spending requirements are increasing.

"OUR COSTS CONTINUE to increase at double digit rates while our price increases continue to conform with President Carter's anti-inflation program," Murphy said.

"Under that program, prices of our vehicles have increased FLORIDA PLANT SALE

Kelley praises court's decision in Detroit tax-confiscation case

By United Press International Attorney General Frank Kelley Monday hailed a Michigan Supreme Court ruling that Detroit Recorder's Court Chief Judge Samuel Gardner erred in ordering return of $426,031 confiscated for tax purposes from an accused heroin dealer. The high court ruling upheld an earlier decision by the Michigan Court of Appeals in the case of James C. Gulley.

The case became a wellpublicized portion of an investigation by The Detroit News into Recorder's Court practices. The probe has prompted outcry from Gardner and charges of racism against the newspaper. Gulley was arrested in October 1978 in a raid which netted the case, plus more than two pounds of heroin and other controlled substances, an estimated $250,000 in jewelry, four cars, a motor home and several

State treasury officials filed a notice of tax levy claiming Gulley owed Michigan $6.3 million in taxes and penalties on estimated narcotics sales of $75

Gardner contended his action was proper. But in its investigation, the News pointed out that it would only have been had there been no tax lien filed against Gulley.

A jeopardy tax assessment was filed which, in essence, confiscated the money seized from Gulley.

At the however, the Detroit court ordered the money returned. The high court reaffirmed the lower court's jurisdiction to determine the right of possession of property "as between the seizing authority and the one from whom the property

Such a determination, however, does not negate a superior right to possession to the property which may exist in the Michigan Department of Treasury pursuant to a valid jeoparty tax assessment and warrant of levy," the court said.
