Kansas voters pick Carter and Reagan

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

MILWAUKEE (AP) — President Carter and Republican frontrunner Ronald Reagan took runaway victories in Kansas Tuesday night, and led in the Wisconsin presidential primary election as well.

Reagan headed for a 3-to-1 GOP landslide in Kansas, while Carter fashioned a hefty margin of his own over Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

Wisconsin's was the more hotly contested primary, with Carter's forces pressing there to end a Kennedy comeback forged a week ago in New York and Connecticut.

The early returns put Carter ahead in a state where Kennedy mounted a late campaign push, and an Associated Press-NBC News poll of voters said Carter was heading for a substantial victory.

WITH THE VOTE counted in six precincts, Carter had 561 votes, Kennedy 290 and California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. 119.

In Wisconsin's GOP primary, it was Reagan 350, former U.N. Ambassador George Bush, 435, Rep. John B. Anderson of Illinois 328.

The Wisconsin GOP race apparently drew a heavy crossover of Democratic voters, sought particularly by Anderson. The crossover vote was not available to

Early Wisconsin returns indicate similar results

Anderson in Kansas, which kept voters in their own parties.

Bush was running third in Kansas, as well, a damaging showing for his already shaken campaign.

In Kansas, with 43 percent of the precincts counted, it was:

Republicans — Reagan 75,205 or 61 percent; Anderson 23,509 or 19 percent. Bush 17,091 or 14 percent. The balance was scattered among the nine minor and dropout candidates, and an uncommitted line on the ballot.

Democrats — Carter 44,432 or 56 percent, and Kennedy 25,784 or 33 percent.

Brown, who did not campaign in Kansas, had 3,851 or 5 percent. Five percent of the voters marked their ballots for "none of the names shown."

Wisconsin's was an open primary; a voter could select the ballot of either party.

ANDERSON PRESSED HARD for the crossover votes of liberal Democrats. Reagan said he wanted crossover votes, too, from conservative Democrats who share his views. He said the kind of Democrats Anderson courted "wouldn't be caught dead voting Republican under normal circumstances."

Iran and the hostages became issues in the waning days of the Wisconsin campaign, with a weekend of controversy over administration messages to the Tehran government, and election-eve signals of a potential break in the hostage stalemate.

Even as the polls opened in the Midwestern primary states, Carter was announced at the White House that the administration will defer the imposition of new sanctions against Iran because of the announcement by President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr that his government intends to take custody of the 53 American captives. Carter called that "a positive development."

Wisconsin was awarding 75 Democratic nominating votes, apportioned in line with popular vote showings in the nine congressional districts. There were 34 Republican delegates at stake.

Kansas assigned 37 Democratic and 32 Republican delegates under a similar apportionment system.

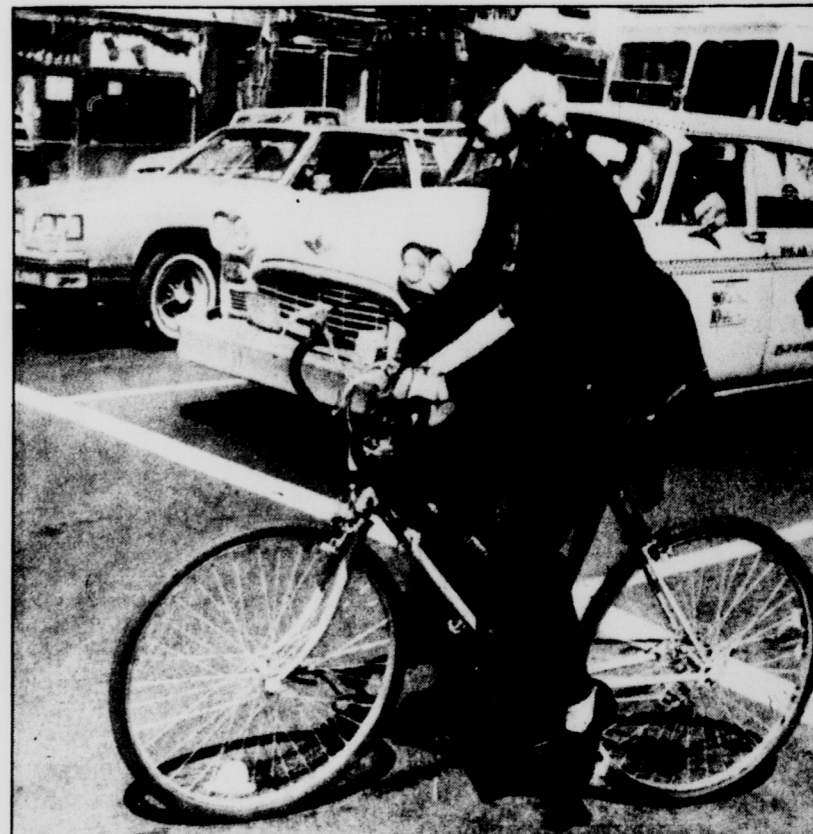

Carter entered the two primaries with 781 of the 1,666 delegates it would take to win the Democratic nomination. Kennedy had 387.

REAGAN HAD WON 295 Republican delegates, Bush 68, Anderson 46. It will take 998 to gain the GOP nomination.

Kennedy came to Wisconsin buoyed by a pair of surprise victories over Carter in the New York and Connecticut primaries a week ago. Indeed, until he gained those upsets, the Democratic challenger had planned only token campaigns in Wisconsin and Kansas. Instead, he went to both states, concentrating on Wisconsin.

Brown made Wisconsin his campaign target more than a month ago, and the primary was doubly crucial to him. He still seeks to establish himself as a challenger to Carter and Kennedy, and if he cannot gain

Hostage move offered if U.S. halts pressure

By The Associated Press

To boos and shouts from an angry crowd, Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr offered Tuesday to take over custody of the American Embassy hostages if the United States agrees to a truce in its war of words and economic and diplomatic pressure against Iran.

President Carter called it a "positive development." But like so many other developments in the 150-day-old crisis, this latest turn of events was shrouded in uncertainty. Any move appeared to be at least two days away.

The Carter administration believes the hostages would be safer in the government's hands and that removing the militants from the picture would facilitate negotiations.

A spokesperson for the young Moslem militants holding the embassy told The Associated Press they were "staying quiet" for now on whether they would give up their 50 American captives to the Iranian government. Revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini was silent on the question.

BANI-SADR ALSO MADE clear that no final resolution to the crisis was at hand, saying that no matter who has custody of the hostages, they will be freed only after the exiled Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi is returned to Iran.

Addressing a huge rally in Tehran, the Iranian president declared that his government would take custody of the Americans if the Carter administration pledged to refrain from "all propaganda or any claim or statement or any provocation" until Iran's new Parliament meets to decide the hostages' fate. Such a Parliament debate

Transit workers strike; N.Y.C. keeps moving

By ARTHUR EVERETT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — The biggest rapid transit strike in the nation's history shut down all bus and subway lines in New York City Tuesday but the city's 7.5 million people made the "unthinkable" workable.

For the most part, they got to work — in an expedition to Manhattan one Wall Street business executive described as similar to the British amphibious evacuation of Dunkirk in World War II — and home again.

The work stoppage by 35,000 transit workers was compounded by a simultaneous strike by 6,200 employees of the Long Island Rail Road, which serves heavily populated suburbs of 2.7 million people.

"The unthinkable has happened and now we have to figure out how to live with the unthinkable and we will," declared Mayor Edward Koch. "Life will go on and we will do whatever has to be done."

IN THE MEANTIME, Justice William C. Thompson ordered the subway and bus unions to appear Thursday in state Supreme Court in Brooklyn to show cause why they should not be held in contempt of court for ignoring a no-strike injunction signed Monday by Justice John A. Monteleone. At the request of state Attorney General Robert Abrams, a similar hearing was scheduled Thursday in Manhattan in connection with the Long Island Rail Road strike.

So commuters by the tens of thousands walked, rode bicycles and skated to work. They pooled their cars and chartered buses, boats and airplanes to get to and from the island of Manhattan.

The morning and evening rush hours went off relatively smoothly, despite the strike. At mid-afternoon, hundreds of chartered buses, bearing scrawled signs indicating whose employees they were to carry, lined the streets of the midtown business district, and commuters began lining up early for the ride out to the suburbs.

10 PERCENT INCREASE

Bell granted $46 million rate hike

By United Press International

Michigan Bell Telephone Co. customers' monthly bills will go up an average 10 percent under a $46 million rate hike approved Tuesday by the state Public Service Commission.

The increase is in addition to a $41.2 million increase granted the utility in June 1979, giving Bell a total hike of $87.2 million. Bell had asked for $146 million in December 1978.

Under the order, residential customers will pay 10 to 15 percent more for basic service, depending on the size of their community. Because of the rate hike, residents of Lansing, Saginaw, Flint and Kalamazoo can expect their monthly charges to increase from $7.35 to $8.36.

In Detroit, which has the state's highest flat rate, the average bill will go up from around $8 to $9.50 per month.

Business rates will also go up from the current $6.77 per month to $7.81.

Long distance rates within the state will go up from the much-touted "nickel a minute" to 6 cents. Long distance rates outside Michigan are not affected.

Person-to-person and collect calls will go up 20 cents per call, but credit card billings stay the same.

The PSC's ruling also implements a rate adjustment plan under which phone bills will go up automatically each October until 1983 to around 45 percent of the current inflation rate. The new system will be reviewed by the commission in three years.

If inflation decreases to 4 percent from the present 12 percent level, the utility will not receive any increase. Any inflation rate below 4 percent would mean a decrease in bills.

PSC Commissioner Eric Schneidewind said telephone customers will actually benefit by the decision.

"Telephone bills will go down relative to other kinds of inflation," Schneidewind said. "Bell customers actually got a rate decrease under this order."

Alumni Association will meet to determine its role

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
and KY OWEN
State News Staff Writers

The fate of the MSU Alumni Association may be determined next week when the association's Executive Board meets April 12.

Although no one is predicting the outcome of that meeting, the battle lines are clearly drawn.

On one side is MSU President Cecil Mackey and the Board of Trustees, who feel the University needs more control over the association.

On the other side is the Alumni Association, whose officers feel the association can better serve its members as an autonomous group.

THE TWO MAIN POINTS of disagreement are whether Mackey should have the power to hire and fire the executive director and whether the University should have editorial control of the alumni magazine.

Because the association is an independent group, the University cannot directly implement these measures, but it can attempt to exercise influence by withholding funds.

Under an agreement between former MSU President Edgar L. Harden, the association was to receive $80,000 from the University — but the trustees have not awarded the money because of the disagreement between the University and the association.

"It's up to us whether we want to contribute any funds," said board chairperson John Bruff, D-East Lansing. "We want to make sure the person that is the full-time director of that association is going in the same direction as the University."

One alumnus was quoted as saying the withholding of funds was a "strong-arm" tactic — but the trustees disagree.

"I DON'T VIEW it as that," said Blanche Martin, D-East Lansing. "I thought it was some technicality."

But Jack Kinney, association executive director, said the association will remain operating self-sufficiently without the money, though some programs may be cut.

"It doesn't mean we will go out of business because we didn't get it," he said.

On the subject of finances, Mackey has raised the question, "Why independence when there is no foreseeable prospect of financial independence?"

"The purpose of any alumni association is to serve the institution," Mackey said.

THE MAIN FUNCTIONS of an alumni association, he said, are to provide programs such as social activities and keep alumni in contact with the university.

Most of the trustees agree with Mackey on this point.

Trustee Aubrey Radcliffe, R-East Lansing, said one of the major jobs of the association is to keep alumni in close contact with the University.

"I think the alumni association is an integral part of the University," he added.

Trustee Carole Lick, D-Kalamazoo, reiterated Radcliffe's sentiments, calling the association "a direct arm of the University."

"It represents the University to the alumni," she added.

KINNEY SAID THERE are two objectives of the association: to serve the alumni and to serve the University.

"The goal of the association is the work harmoniously with the president and the board of trustees," he said.

The alumni can be better served by a separate association, Kinney said, because it could develop more aggressive merchandising, travel and insurance programs, as well as allowing the group to invest its money independently.

Those types of programs could have legal ramifications, Kinney said, making it advantageous for them to be handled by an independent corporation.

Although some states have laws which would inhibit a University-affiliated alumni association from carrying out those activities, that is not the case in Michigan, Mackey said.

THE NEED FOR a separate entity is not as apparent here as it is in other states," he added.

Under the Harden agreement, the University is represented on the association's 17-member Executive Board by six representatives.

"That's significant input," Lick said. "But that doesn't assure the kind of safeguard the University needs between the association and itself."

She added if a serious controversy came up and sides were taken, the University would be outnumbered and therefore voted down.

The association represents the University directly to the alumni, and there need to be safeguards, she added.

ONE OF THE major means through which the association communicates with its members is through its magazine, and therefore the University feels it should have some editorial control over the publication.

Ron Karle, editor of the MSU Alumni Magazine, said the University has the MSU Scene and News Bulletin to present the University's views.

"The reason we're here is to promote Michigan State University," Karle said. "If I didn't like Michigan State I wouldn't be here."

However, he said he would leave if the University obtained control of the magazine.

Karle said if the University had control of the publication, it would not be able to deal with issues such as toxic waste, which it reported on in a recent issue.

While some have viewed the controversy as a power play, the trustees feel this is not the case.

"THIS IS NOT a Cecil Mackey decision," said Barbara Sawyer, D-Menominee. "It's a board decision."

"This is not a Jack Kinney and Cecil Mackey battle," Karle said. "What it is, is a difference of the concept of an independent alumni association."

But Mackey said the University has a responsibility to all its alumni, not just the 33,000 members of the MSU Alumni Association.

"We've graduated something like 150,000 people in the last decade," he said. "The University has an interest in all those graduates."

Mackey added that "the University has responsibility for the quality and success of all alumni operations," and any relationship between MSU and the alumni association has to allow the University to carry out that responsibility.

Ferency goes to court to halt closed caucuses

By TIM SIMMONS
State News Staff Writer

The first brief in a case which would force Michigan Democrats to eliminate their planned closed caucuses this month will be filed Thursday in U.S. District Court in Grand Rapids.

Zolton Ferency, MSU associate professor of criminal justice, will ask U.S. District Court Judge Douglas Hillman to declare the closed caucuses illegal. Ferency claims Michigan law states all delegates for national conventions must be selected according to the state's open primary results.

The Michigan Democratic Party changed its delegate selection process to a closed caucus system after the National Democratic Party said an open primary was in violation of party rules.

In an open primary, registered voters may vote for the candidate of their choice, regardless of party affiliation. This is commonly referred to as crossover voting.

As of the Feb. 26 deadline, almost 42,000 Democrats registered to participate in the closed caucuses on April 26.

In 1976 more than 700,000 voters chose the Democratic ticket.

Republicans, however, will still use the May 20 open primary to select their 82 delegates for their July national convention in Detroit.

The assistant attorney general of record for the case, Haywood Julian, is expected to file a brief for the state of Michigan April 9.

The attorney general's office of representing state election officials who are accused of failing to issue a declaratory ruling to void the caucuses.

"We are not sure what we are going to say until we see Zolton's (Ferency's) brief," Julian said. "I personally don't think there is anything new. The issues are pretty well crystallized."

Ferency also wants those who participate in the closed caucuses to be ineligible to vote in the open primary May 20. Currently those participating in the closed caucuses can still vote for a candidate of any party in May.

Ferency claims this destroys the "one person, one vote" principle set down by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The hearing in Grand Rapids is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. April 11.

Case may house Honors College

By LESA DOLL
State News Staff Writer

Although there has been confusion over student involvement in the decision, a creation of an all Honors College floor in Case Hall may be implemented in the next academic year, said Bob Minetti, coordinator of Residence Hall Programs.

Minetti said the proposal, still in the discussion process, was requested by the Honors College and did not go through the "formal government" procedure of seeking student input. However they have been given input now, he added.

"No official request was made (to Case Hall students) and I know it was a mistake," he said.

Since Honors College requested one male and one female "house" to provide "academic support programs" for their students several months ago, groups, including individuals from James Madison College, Honors College, and residence halls administrations have been meeting to discuss the possibility of Case Hall as a site for the change. The Case Hall Residents Association said its input was not asked for.

"Some people are kind of upset because they felt they weren't really involved in the decision making," said Dave Sherumpf, business manager for the association.

However, Sherumpf, said the residence hall management is now asking for their ideas.

Angela White, manager of Case Hall, said residents of Case will be included in the selection of a floor to house Honors College students if the Case Hall site is agreed upon.

She acknowledged, however, the "likelihood of there being a Honors College in Case Hall."

Minetti said Case Hall would be "ideal" in providing academic support programs to Honors College students. He also said letters have been sent to upcoming Honors College freshmen, and the response to this type of living arrangement has been positive.

Minetti said there is no possibility of honors college students living in any of the spaces in Case Hall specifically modified for handicappers.

"We are not going to be taking over enhanced space," he said "We are creating more."

Following a recent evaluation of accessibility by the MSU Office of Affirmative Action, it has been proposed that more residence hall space on campus be made accessible to handicappers. South Complex is the target, Minetti said, with Wilson Hall a possibility.

"At this point, South Complex and a couple of places within South Complex are the best right now," he said.

Brown also said handicapper enhanced rooms in Case would not be effected by the addition of an Honors College floor.

"We have five rooms in two of our floors that are handicapper rooms and nothing will change that," she said.

"We are committed to those rooms," she added.

Lyle Thorburn, assistant vice president of housing and food services, said no definite decision has been made as to which hall will house honors college students.

Thorburn said a decision would be made before spring term sign-up for residence halls rooms.

"If we are going to do something we'd have to do it before too long," he said. "But it's still in discussion."

N.Y.C. transit workers strike

AN UNIDENTIFIED MAN suffered a suspected heart attack and died while walking across the Brooklyn Bridge, apparently headed home from a day at his Manhattan office. Police said he appeared to be the first fatality that might be attributed to the transit strike.

While many of the city's larger companies, which had prepared for the emergency, said most workers were on the job, others saw their staffs depleted.

Koch said his operations office estimated 25,000 rode bicycles to their jobs in Manhattan, another 30,000 walked and 10,000 to 12,000 arrived by boat.

The Jewish holiday of Passover, the Easter school recess and fine spring weather eased the impact somewhat, but officials warned "the crunch" would come Wednesday.

Typical of several larger companies, American Express spent about $200,000 to rent bicycles, buses, cars and to charter a boat to make sure its 4,000 employees made it to work.

ON THE OTHER hand, a small management firm which employs 26 people — mostly accountants at its offices two blocks from Grand Central Terminal — said only eight people turned up for work Tuesday. Four of them were management personnel.

No peace talks were scheduled in either strike, both launched in wage disputes with the state's Metropolitan Transportation Authority, an umbrella transit agency.

The walkout by the Transport Workers Union was estimated to be costing the city's economy $140 million a day.

The city transit system collects 5.2 million 50-cent fares a day, many of them from round-trip riders. The Long Island Rail Road collects 270,000 daily fares.

It was the first New York City subway-bus strike since a 12-day walkout in 1966, and the first time the LIRR has been struck simultaneously with the city system.

MIDTOWN TRAFFIC MOVED relatively smoothly, but was backed up for five miles on approaches to the Queensboro Bridge, a main point of entry to Manhattan from Queens and Long Island.

At the tip of Manhattan, sea and air were aswam with fishing smacks, tourist launches, seaplanes and helicopters bringing an estimated 10,000 to 12,000 commuters to work.

"It looks like Dunkirk," said Wall streeteer Thomas Ashwall, surveying the scene.

An estimated 25,000 bikes were stacked inside and outside midtown office buildings.

Contract talks involving the 35,000 TWU subway and bus employees broke down after midnight and the walkout began at 2:30 a.m.

Carter and Reagan

20 percent of the Wisconsin primary vote, his campaign will lose federal financial aid effective Thursday.

Anderson has said that if he doesn't get at least 25 percent of the Wisconsin vote, he'll reassess his Republican candidacy. Anderson has left open the possibility that he might choose to run as a third-party candidate if he cannot gain the GOP nomination.

After Tuesday's contests, and a Saturday primary in Louisiana, there's a pause in the presidential voting until the Pennsylvania primary on April 22.

Kennedy has made Pennsylvanian, and its 185 Democratic nominating votes, a major target in his challenge to Carter.

IN WISCONSIN as in the earlier primary campaigns, Kennedy concentrated his criticism of Carter on economic policies and runaway inflation. He said Monday that Carter's balance-the-budget spending cuts hit hardest at needy Americans, and accused the president of running "an administration without a heart."

U.S. hostages may be moved

may be months away. After Bani-Sadr's address, President Carter met with his senior advisors at 5 a.m. in his Oval Office at the White House.

He then summoned reporters, told them it was a "positive development" and said he was deferring imposition of new economic sanctions and other punitive measures against Iran.

This seemed to meet part of Bani-Sadr's demand, but Carter added to the uncertainty by appearing to stop short of making the kind of blanket pledge the Iranian president sought.

A White House official nonetheless said "indications" were that the Iranian government would "move expeditiously" toward obtaining control of the hostages. However, Carter acknowledged that he had no guarantees.

In Tehran, Siyed Karim Mousavi Ardabili, a member of the ruling Revolutionary Council, said the council would meet Thursday to discuss the hostage transfer and Carter's response to the Bani-Sadr offer.

BANI-SADR REASSURED the throng that Iran will still demand extradition of the shah as the price for the hostages' freedom, and he sharply attacked the United States because of the deposed monarch's move from Panama to Egypt last week.

Khomeini, in a speech to the rally read by his son, Ahmad, also had tough words for what he called Carter's "satanical conspiracy." He said the shah's move had "further complicated the way to a solution."

Khomeini said again that the decision on the hostages' fate must be made by the new Iranian Parliament, which is not yet fully elected and is not expected to meet until late spring at the earliest.

In a speech later Tuesday, to a labor group in Washington, Carter reaffirmed U.S. denials that any apologies had been made to Iran.

Mackey stands by position on alum assoc.

By LOUISE WHALL
State News Staff Writer

MSU President Cecil Mackey is remaining firm in his position that the University should have a certain degree of control in matters relating to the MSU Alumni Association.

Mackey told the Academic Council Tuesday that he considers the Alumni Association a very high-priority organization within the University. He said he has the full support of the Board of Trustees and the Council of Deans for his position that the person selected to head the organization should be "at the pleasure" of the University and the association.

Mackey's decision rests in his firm commitment to the importance of the alumni association in fund raising. He said often it is the only contact alumni have with the University after graduation.

Because of this importance, he stressed the University must have confidence and trust in the president of the association.

The Board of Trustees voted unanimously last summer to sever the association's organizational ties to the University shortly before Mackey became president. Mackey said he did not favor the move and noted the difference between separation and total independence.

HE COMPARED THE alumni association president to the positions of athletic director, the provost and other administrative positions which must have University approval.

Mackey also spoke to the council about the funding cutback for state universities, which will reduce MSU's proposed allocation from approximately 9.5 percent to an expected 5 percent or less.

"The prospects for higher education are considerably less attractive than the original indications from the governor's office," Mackey said.

Mackey said the constraints of the Headlee amendment, a tax cut proposal which guides statewide appropriations,

Claims support of trustees and deans for his position

leave less flexibility to deal with funding in Michigan.

He also said that last year greater emphasis was placed on funding for the main campus as opposed to "line areas" such as the Cooperative Extension Service. He said the trend may reverse itself this year, something he would discourage because money can be transferred to line areas from the main campus but not vice versa.

MACKAY ASSURED THE council that MSU is not in a financial situation where survival is the issue. He said the administration would see where major shifts could take place rather than lowering the overall quality of the institution.

"It is far more desirable to preserve and build quality even in the severest of times," Mackey said.

Provost Clarence L. Winder outlined the reorganization plan he announced Monday. His new plan will eliminate two major administrative positions, the director of Academic Services and the assistant provost for admissions and records. He also created the Undergraduate University Division to handle undergraduate advising affairs.

Willard Warrington, dean of the University College, has accepted the position as director of the UUD. Dorothy Arata, assistant provost for undergraduate education, will become the Assistant Provost for General Academic Administration. Asstant Provost James Hamilton will be the new assistant provost for undergraduate education.

IN OTHER ACTION, the council:

- approved the University Committee on Curriculum report as submitted;
- approved an amendment to the Bylaws for Academic Governance which accounts for the reorganization of the departments within the University College in faculty representation on the council; and
- heard a report from Michael Chial, an associate professor of audiology and speech sciences, on the progress made by the University Committee on Academic Governance in studying the structure of the governance system.

MSU director of financial aids will retire soon

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

Henry C. Dykema, the MSU director of financial aids for more than 21 years, will retire from that post July 1.

"There comes a time when you should step aside, let others take over, and taper off your activity," Dykema said. "I guess it's that time."

Dykema, however, will remain at MSU for a year as a consultant on financial aids for Moses Turner, vice president for student affairs and services.

"We're real pleased to have him stick with us," Turner said, adding that the University's two financial aid offices are being combined into one to comply with a mandate from the MSU Board of Trustees.

"One of the reasons I have asked him to stay on is to help us with the transition," Turner said.

DYKEMA, WHO FIRST came to MSU in October 1951, became director of financial aid in July 1959.

"I'm the only financial aid director this University has ever had," Dykema said.

The department was started as a result of Sputnik, he added, as "everyone was asking why they (the Soviet Union) got that thing up there ahead of us."

As a result, in 1959 MSU received $250,000 for use as "National Defense Student Loans." The loans are now called National Direct Student Loans.

The department has grown a lot since then, he said, noting that this year between $40 and $45 million is available for loans. And today, he said, it takes a full-time staff of 59 — plus work-study students — to distribute the money.

IN 1959, THE department was staffed by Dykema and a part-time secretary.

"It has been a rewarding job," he said. "I wouldn't trade my experiences for anything."

"I think our students are the tops," he added. "This is evidenced by the fact that our students have had one of the lowest rates of defaults on student loans of any university in the country."

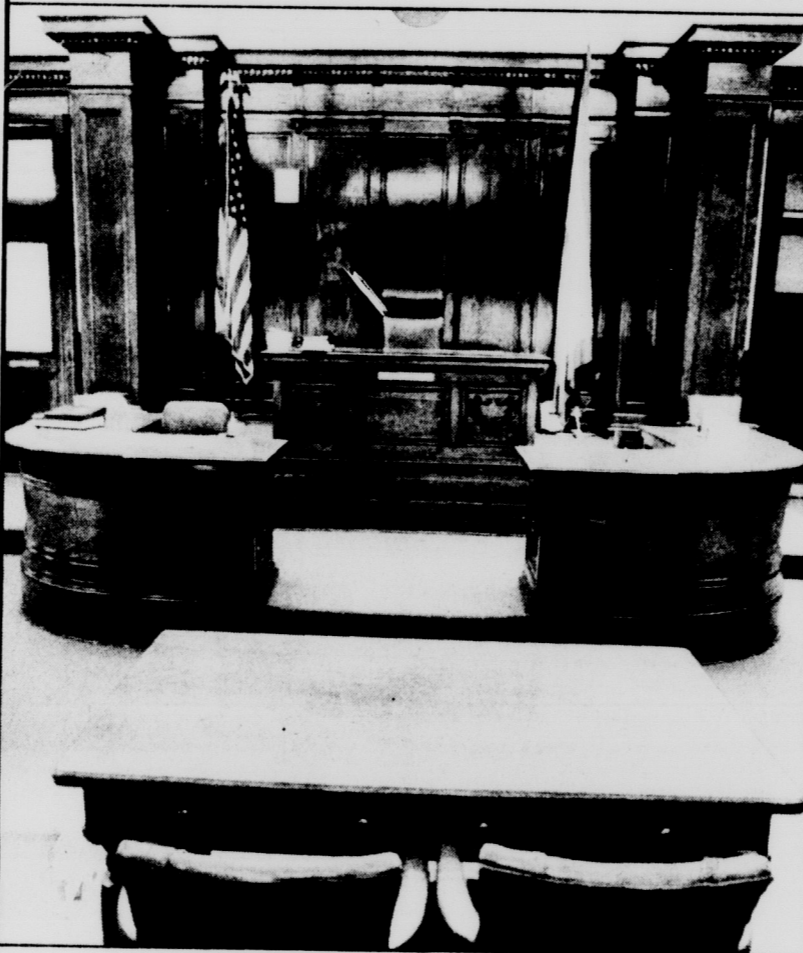

But meanwhile, Dykema is already making some plans for his retirement.

"I'm going to do a lot of gardening — that's one thing I enjoy," he said, adding that he planned to travel and do a lot of reading as well.

"I've got literally hundreds of books to read that I've set aside until I had time to read them," he said.

Grants approved

Architects study ways to restore Mason courthouse

By GARY PIATEK
State News Staff Writer

The Ingham County Courthouse in Mason will soon have strangers examining it from top to bottom, inside and out, looking for ways to keep the old building in perfect shape.

John Meyer/Wigen Tinknell & Associates will begin next week looking for ways to restore the structure and add office space while a Lansing-based subcontractor for the architectural firm will do a technical study to make energy conservation suggestions.

Both groups were hired after a pair of grant proposals totaling more than $42,000 were approved last week.

also contributed to the need for rehabilitation," he added. Grobe estimated that the cost will fall between $1.2 and $2 million.

THOSE MONEY FIGURES aren't new to John Meyer, vice president of the architectural firm that bears his name. His firm has recently completed a similar restoration project on the Bay City City Hall, which cost about $3.5 million, Meyer said.

Although Meyer has just found out about the funding, he has already formed some ideas about restoring the courthouse.

He said the courthouse has to be

I want the public areas to be as original as possible. But in office areas, retain originality, but make it functional. — John Meyer, vice president of John Meyer/Wigen Tinknell & Associates.

Ingham County received $16,000 from the Michigan History Division of the Department of State for the study of the courthouse structure, and $26,000 from the U.S. Department of Energy for the technical study.

The county kicked in $4,200 of its own to help the studies.

PART OF THE $26,840 grant will go toward a technical study of the courthouse annex in Mason and the Ingham County Building in Lansing, said Edward Grobe, county grant administrator.

Once the studies are completed, Grobe said, proposals will be presented to the county Board of Commissioners, which will decide whether to put a millage proposal before the voters on the November ballot or ask for some other kind of funding.

Grobe said if the proposals are accepted, restoration will begin "about a year from now."

Grobe said the studies are necessary because the courthouse has been over-used since its dedication in 1902.

"Its age and limited maintenance has brought up to fire and safety codes, which includes adding some exit stairways.

But all work will be done, he said, while keeping the original character of the courthouse in mind.

Meyer also said the courthouse masonry should be chemically cleaned and the mortar joints refilled.

THOSE ARE NOT the only problems Meyer will be studying. He said the courthouse needs more insulation and he is looking to find areas to increase the office space.

"We will probably propose to build some offices in the attic," Meyers said.

He said he follows a certain, self-made rule when it comes to restoring such a place and adding office space as well.

"I want the public areas to be as original as possible. But in office areas, retain originality, but make it functional."

Meyer plans on not wasting any time to finish his study.

"I plan to have an interim report in by early June," he said, "and the final report by August."

Academic Council asks for hearing 'U' parking

By MIKE CHAUDHURI
State News Staff Writer

A public hearing involving on-campus parking and other public safety issues has been requested by the Steering Committee of the Academic Council.

The committee sent the request, in a memorandum, to both the Department of Public Safety and the All-University Traffic Committee last week.

The memorandum follows another one sent to the DPS and the AUTC early last November, said Gerald Miller, MSU chemistry professor and a member of the steering committee.

"There seems to be some expressions of concern about the policies and procedures on traffic enforcement," Miller said.

"One way to deal with those concerns is to have some sort of public hearing to air them," he said.

Miller said there was no "active response" to the original memorandum.

DPS director Richard Bernitt said scheduling a public hearing would be the responsibility of the AUTC, not the DPS.

He said he would recommend that a public hearing be held in conjunction with the traffic committee's second meeting of the term, which will occur sometime in May.

"At its next meeting, the AUTC will probably decide what to do," Bernitt said.

However, he said he felt that there was no real need for a meeting, because the DPS's towing policies have already been made public.

Howard Cohen, traffic committee chairperson, said "If he (Bernitt) wants the AUTC to hold the meeting, that's fine with me."

He also said there was no actual need for such a meeting.

"My personal feeling is that the towing policy is already public knowledge," he said.

Cohen said, however, that since the Academic Council wants such a meeting, he "will push for one."

Miller said he did not want to have the meeting as part of a regular meeting of the AUTC because AUTC meetings are not publicized to a great extent.

"The AUTC should give it (the public hearing) enough public exposure to ensure that everybody who wants to attend can be there," he said.

Cohen said he would not recommend the hearing being held in conjunction with a regular AUTC meeting. He said AUTC meetings are held in small rooms, but a hearing should be held in a large room capable of holding a bigger group of people.

Bernitt said he did not know why the AUTC took no action on the original memorandum.

"Nobody seems to be concerned about it," he said.

Miller said another purpose of the meeting would be to clarify the "make-up" of the AUTC.

"There seems to be a lot of ambiguity regarding the AUTC itself," he said.

Mason courthouse a majestic landmark

By GARY PIATEK
State News Staff Writer

A trip to the Ingham County Courthouse in Mason leaves no question as to why the courthouse is on both the national and state historical registers and why the county commissioners are interested in preserving it.

The courthouse stands majestically in the middle of the Mason public square, its painted dome peeling but looking as proud as it had probably looked when it was dedicated in 1902.

At that dedication, then-Governor Fred Warner called the courthouse "a meeting place for farmers, mechanics, business and professional men." With little effort, one can imagine a proud farmer marching up the courthouse steps to register his marriage.

His hand would have rubbed off a little tarnish from the brass door handle as he easily swung open the big oak door and bounded up the marble stairs to the records clerk.

HE PROBABLY DID not notice the hand-laid ceramic tile floor or the murals painted on the ceiling of the dome, but he did know that 60 years earlier his father could have caught bullfrogs at the site.

The first courthouse on the site was built in 1858, and not many years before that Ingham County was just forest and marshes.

Settlers began moving into Ingham County, named after Samuel D. Ingham, secretary of the treasury under President Andrew Jackson, as early as 1832.

The first piece of land was bought and deed recorded in the Okemos area that year.

Around 1860, about 20 years after Lansing was named the state capitol, Mason was chosen as the seat of Ingham County government.

MASON WAS CHOSEN because it fulfilled a requirement that the county seat could be no more than a day's travel from any location in the county.

By this time, Ingham County had already built two courthouses. The first one had been built in 1843, costing $800, on the south side of Ash Street.

To accommodate the needs of a rapidly growing population, a second larger courthouse was built in 1858, costing the taxpayers $12,229.19.

But as the years rolled by and the population continued to grow, residents saw a need for an even bigger courthouse.

Before the turn of the century, Ingham County residents voted to tear down the city's second courthouse and build the existing courthouse in its place. The building was completed by 1904. This time it cost the taxpayers $76,000.

Now the county employs more than 900 persons, and Pam Hart, administrative aid to the board of commissioners, is one of the many who spend their working days in the courthouse.

"It's great," Hart said. "It's not every place you can work where you have a fireplace in your office."

The Ingham County Courthouse has been standing at its present location in the Mason Town Square since 1902 (above). The bench that is used by Circuit Court Judge Michael G. Harrison has been used continually since the inception of the courthouse (above left).

Three Lansing residents arrested in connection with drugs seizure

Three Lansing residents were arrested Monday night by TriCounty Metro Narcotics officers in connection with possession and delivery of narcotics, police said.

An ounce of cocaine, 400 "hits" of LSD, and a pound of Colombian marijuana were seized during the arrests, police reported. The value of the drugs is more than $3,400, they said.

The arrests occurred as part of a "buy situation" at 405 S. Lathrup St., Lansing, police said.

David M. Spencer, 21, of 405 S. Lathrup St., Lansing, has been charged with three counts of delivery of LSD and one count of possession of cocaine, police said.

Ray W. Brooks, 19, of the same address, has been charged with one count of delivery of cocaine, police said.

John P. Greenwood, 20, of 2025 Northampton Way, Lansing, was charged with the possession of cocaine with the intent to deliver, police said.

A continuing saga

John Hildebrand's battle against MSU — after several apparent victories — seems to have just begun. The former associate professor of social science, who has spent the last 10 years fighting a dismissal from the University, has been "reinstated" to the Office of the Provost in pay alone — shunted to an economics department which does not want him, and banished to an office on the fourth floor of Berkey Hall, far from his colleagues.

Hildebrand's ostracism could change if a motion filed by his attorney asking for clarification of the reinstatement verdict is taken up by the judge who ordered it. For when U.S. District Judge Wendell Miles ordered MSU to reinstate Hildebrand in January, his salary, rank and tenure considerations were not determined in the decision. The lack of clarity in the order has given the University a chance to turn the screws on Hildebrand while appealing the decision.

Hildebrand's 10-year nightmare has obviously not ended with the court-ordered reinstatement. The University's appeal of the decision was partially thwarted when Miles ruled MSU had to reinstate Hildebrand spring term regardless of how long it took to exhaust the appeal process. Provost Clarence L. Winder then sent a memorandum to the colleges of Social Science and Business and to University College requesting that department chairpersons assess Hildebrand's qualifications as an associate professor to teach in their departments.

Hildebrand was left in the dark regarding how he would be assessed, believing at one point he had to give seminars to the departments of agricultural economics, economics, and social science during the break between winter and spring terms. Instead he was assigned by Winder to spend spring term preparing to teach Economics 200 and 201.

The assignment has elicited protest from the department of economics, which voted unanimously not to recommend his reinstatement as an associate professor there. Although Hildebrand received his doctorate in economics from the University of Chicago in 1959, the promotions committee in the department argued that Hildebrand's research did not meet its standards.

The man embroiled in the controversy has no desire to teach the law of supply and demand to freshmen. Hildebrand's only wish is to be reinstated in the Department of Social Science. That department also rejected him as unacceptable. However, motives behind the social science department's rebuff are a bit more questionable. Donald Come, chairperson of the department, was a member of the promotions committee which rejected Hildebrand's appeal of his dismissal 10 years ago. Furthermore, Clinton Snyder, professor of social science, and Douglas Dunham, then-chairperson of the department, were both ordered to pay punitive damages to Hildebrand in the court judgment, and are both still professors of social science.

Because he was placed under the provost's wing, Hildebrand is technically in limbo with no departmental standing — unable to attend meetings or participate in departmental elections. His attorney is arguing that Hildebrand is entitled to be reinstated as a full professor, with tenure, in the Department of Social Science and the Latin American Studies Center, where he held a joint appointment 10 years ago.

Miles now has the option of ordering an open hearing or deciding the motion solely on the basis of the written arguments presented. We urge Miles to clarify the case in an open hearing to prevent the University from playing games with Hildebrand as it appeals its way through the courts.

Taxing the giants

President Carter's decision to decontrol oil prices and legislate a windfall profits tax has always been considered a gamble. On one side there are the opponents, who say the tax will not work. On the other side rest the advocates, who are quick to point out that the only windfall profits tax worth having is one that will channel oil profits where the law says they must go — into energy exploration, tax cuts and funding for public transportation.

Congress was skeptical, too, so much that the plan failed to pass by a substantial margin. Regardless, the final phase of Carter's long-range decontrol plan was approved last week. Consumers can only hope the tax works as planned, and eventually helps alleviate the country's present energy problems.

After years of paying through the nose at the gasoline pumps, Americans had the choice of waiting for gas prices to go down, which may never happen, or formulate an energy policy that would maintain some semblance of control over the billions of dollars oil companies reap each year. The cost of somewhat harnessing oil profits will be high because of price decontrol, but it is a temporary hardship which, in the long run, will hopefully guarantee a share of oil profits will be channeled into the right coffers.

Support for the windfall tax rests mostly on blind faith — will the tax put the billions spent each year on energy to proper use? We cannot be sure. But the provisions of the tax make demands upon the oil companies that should have been implemented long ago. Despite the uncertainty of the tax's workability, it is the closest the Carter administration has come to effective regulation of oil company profits.

Actually, the tax could be a blessing in disguise. A price rise resulting from decontrol will probably be more gradual than a stiff gasoline tax aimed at reducing consumption, while any increases that do occur will encourage conservation. A reduction in fuel use might even make unnecessary any additional gasoline taxes the administration is pondering, including the 10-cent tax recently proposed by Carter.

It might not be a guaranteed solution to our energy problems, but the windfall profits tax will spur funding for energy independence and exploration. It is up to the administration to see that its proposal was a wise one.

VIEWPOINT: VIEWPOINTS

Rhetoric flies in the face of fact

By SCOTT FISHER

Last year, spring term persons from a dorm floor submitted a short letter to the paper concerning their unanswered disgracing of a fraternity by pelting the members with water-filled balloons and calling them "sissies" and "wienie arms" or whatever. The letter claimed that not only are the fraternity men not macho men, but they are not men at all, for the real (see synonyms of actual, genuine, authentic, unphony, anti-fake, and nonshamly) men live in the dorms (and throw water-filled balloons).

This confused me. For the longest time I had been convinced that manhood and womanhood are matters of genes and chromosomes and, consequently, of anatomy. But the letter explained to me that manhood is a matter of water-filled balloons. I questioned an anatomy major about this and he, too, had been erroneously confident that manhood arises from biological phenomena. He is yet skeptical about the balloons and plans to talk it over with his anatomy professor.

I am presently reassessing human sex determination. I hypothesize that womanhood is not determined by some XX chromosome hype, but is strictly a matter of automatic sprinkler systems, uncirculated periodicals, and free rides in an old car. But I don't know.

A friend of mine, Carl, has a question. Maybe you could help me with it.

"No. No, Carl. I have to admit I don't very well understand it. Let me ask around."

Why? On Monday, Feb. 18, Barb Blanchard's viewpoint to The State News is printed: "I think nuclear power is OK. I heard Dixy Lee Ray speak when she was head of the Nuclear Power Association and she said it's fine by her, too. She said if maybe a plane or something crashed into one of the nuclear power plants it wouldn't do anything, so I think it's OK and we use too much oil."

Kenny, who lives on Division Street, disagrees and rebuts with a letter to the paper: "I must disagree with Miss Blanchard's Feb. 18 letter concerning nuclear power. I immensely dislike the idea of nuclear power. It harms fish and birds and even us. Yuck. Let's all join together and put an end to nuclear power before it puts an end to us, hooray for what I say. And incidentally, Miss Blanchard, Dixy Lee Ray was chairperson of the Atomic Energy Commission. Be sure to get your facts straight the next time you have something to say."

Barb is insulted, incensed and inspired to write again, emphatically (when she gets riled she writes with fervor and sporadic alliteration and if driven to a rage her nostrils flare like a gibbon's and her suitemates think that's a real laugh and call her J. Fred Muggs): "I mean like holy environmental considerations, nuclear power is no wighty worry. I'd sunbathe topleless by a reactor core if there were single-sex hours." Disgusted, Kenny counters, "you sewage-brain animal-hater dog-kicker communist you, that nuclear crap is more caustic than the Phillip's cafeteria clam chowder," and Barb takes offense and, in a searing re-rebuttal, asks "What are you, a bowling major? You've got the mind of a three pin and probably about as much personality," which, Kenny reasons, is not terribly complimentary so he returns the libel Ping-Pong ball threatening, "I'd like to come over to your house and shoot you with a few gamma rays, then see how many noses your kids are born with," to which Barb retorts "Oh yeah, you and whose army?" and calls him the king floater in the cesspool of life and Kenny is starting to throw things at home and he writes inquiring what she is doing in college anyway, you airhead, and Barb threatens to get him and Kenny retorts "I'd like to see you try and she writes oh yeah? and he writes yeah! and she reiterates oh yeah? and he writes yeah, toots! and she buys a gun at Student Book Store and knocks on Kenny's apartment door and he inquires "Yeah?" and she blows his head off, "So there. My point; I serve again."

And she does — on death row for premeditated murder. She wrote the governor, seeking a reprieve, and probably would have procured it had she not called him an ignorant, nit-picking, ineffectual baboon's armpit.

Carl is confused. A self-admitted twit, he claims after all the backless conviction, unremitting certitude, self-assured deprecation, personality affronts, ill-channeled indignation, vehement sludge-flinging, and homicide he is still a twit (he doesn't know any more about nuclear power now than when the match and cross fire began) and the carpet is bloody and Kenny's tropical fish are dying and Carl needs a roommate — 355-4794, must have stereo and no opinions. Fisher is a sophomore majoring in English.

Investments and politics don't mix

In reading the article, "University investment counselors: 'buy into defense corps'" in The State News, Feb. 25, I recall our not-so-recent divestment from companies in, or doing business with South Africa. To pick an old scab, I never did approve of the divestment. I think it is very hypocritical for this University to go crusading for human rights, as if to set a good example, and then turn around and invest in equipment created to destroy life. If it is defense we are worried about, we should have continued to do business with South Africa rather than not. South Africa is staunchly pro-West in outlook and nature. It has by far the most powerful military anywhere south of the equator, and in short, South Africa should be treated as a firm ally rather than a bad boy whose hands MSU will slap.

One is hard put to argue against the fact that this country does need better defense, and investment in defense-orientated companies is a good buy. So let it be! In the future let us not mix making money with politics and social movements. Investments are for making money, and nothing more.

We're geared to the immediate

Lecturing is entertainment. And entertainment, in the nature of the case, strives for a positive reaction and quickly moves onto something new. To pause too long is to risk dragging out the performance and losing the audience's attention. Furthermore, an integrated sequence of lectures over a 14-week semester period requires the audiences to somehow retain information heard at the beginning and relate it to conclusions reached later on. Such an effort requires engagement of the mind, mental struggle. As such, it inhibits freedom and spontaneity.

And consider the capabilities of the audience. Everyone knows today's student has been conditioned by television to expect that material be "given" to him or her as they remain in a relatively passive state. Decline in interest in reading and writing skills is associated on the psychological side with a short attention span. Accordingly, the lecturer needs to come on with a big "bang", make his or her point fast, and get off-stage before boredom sets in.

Finally, and most important, a bored audience is sooner or later a vanishing audience. Enrollments will decline. Many will be denied the benefits of a college education. Faculty will be thrown out of work.

I realize that some will object to the thesis set forth on grounds that I have in fact actually set forth limitations, defects in the character of the student audience that could to some degree be corrected by the more sustained effort required under the semester system. The objection sounds plausible enough at first. But careful reflection reveals that it takes for granted a moral perspective long since outdated. The actual world, as any hardboiled, objective observer can plainly see, is on the whole permeated by short-term interests, by concern with the immediate.

Everything is addressed to the impact now! And what better advice can we give to faculty than to encourage them to aid in coping with the realities of life? Retaining the quarter system is certainly one good way to continue to effectively meet the needs of today's student.

Donald F. Koeh
associate professor, Department of Philosophy

Cute correction

That was a cute "Correction" you printed on the editorial page of the Feb. 28 State News. Everybody knows that a report from an official agency charged with "radiation, chemical and biological safety" SHOULD say there are no health hazards, everything is hunky dory, there is nothing to worry about, keep cool and let us handle everything. That's what they all say. That's what they always say. That's what official reports are for.

The real question is, what should your editorial have said? Should it just take the official hand-out, and report what the report says? If that's what you think your editorial should have said, then, I think maybe there is some room for a "correction," not in what your editorial said, but in what the report that you reported said.

Prime lending rate nears 20

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's third-largest commercial bank, Chase Manhattan, on Tuesday raised its prime rate one half point to a record 19.75 percent, leapfrogging over the rate announced by other banks.

Two other major banks Tuesday increased their prime lending rates one quarter point to 19.5 percent, matching the level announced by Bank of America and most others last week.

Citibank, the nation's second-largest commercial bank, moved to 19.5 percent after increasing the prime rate one quarter point to 19.75 just Friday. Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., ranked No. 4, also went up one quarter point to 19.5 percent.

Most other banks, including top-ranked Bank of America, increased their prime lending rates by a half percentage-point to 19.5 percent Friday.

U.S. dollar makes comeback

LONDON (AP) — Thanks largely to high U.S. interest rates, the once mighty American dollar is making a strong comeback on foreign exchange markets, yet doubts persist about its well-being and the strength of the U.S. economy.

On Tuesday, the dollar finished at its highest mark against the German mark since September 1978, against the Swiss and French francs since June 1978, against the Italian lire in nearly four years and against the Japanese yen in 2 and one-half years.

Many experts in Britain and on the European continent say the upturn will last only as long as interest rates stay high, though one senior trader in Frankfurt said the dollar is also benefiting from the Carter administration's announced plans to balance the budget next year.

Parachute rigger arrested

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (UPI) — A parachute rigger at Fort Bragg has been arrested in the death of a paratrooper officer whose release cord was cut, preventing his parachute from opening, the Army said Tuesday.

Pfc. Alvin Williams, 20, was arrested by the Army's Criminal Investigation Division and held in the Cumberland County jail.

Fort Bragg spokesman Maj. Thomas Woods said Capt. Lawrence D. Hill, 26, of the 82nd Airborne Division died March 26 during a proficiency jump when his main parachute failed to open and his reserve parachute did not open until he was about 100 feet from the ground.

Students, teachers stage sit-in

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — Students and teachers protesting program changes at a public radio station on the University of Massachusetts campus continued their occupation Tuesday of the office of Chancellor Henry Koffler.

About 40 people settled in Koffler's office Monday after negotiations with officials of the school, and WFCR-FM broke down. The demonstrators demanded a freeze on program changes at the station and reinstatement of an Hispanic news and music program. WFCR, a member of the National Public Radio network, serves western Massachusetts and portions of Connecticut and Vermont.

Midwest population growth low

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Midwest may be the first region of the nation to experience zero population growth, according to a study by the California-based Rand Corp.

Between 1950 and 1970, the average annual growth rate dropped from 1.5 percent to .3 percent, hitting an all-time low, the private research and consulting firm said.

Rand demographer Peter Morrison said the decline stemmed "both from people across the nation having fewer children and more people leaving the Midwest region than moving to it."

While people throughout the nation have been moving out of major metropolitan areas, Morrison said the so-called out migration in the Midwest is affecting small cities as well as large ones.

Police seize 6.6 pounds of heroin

ROME (AP) — Police seized 6.6 pounds of pure heroin hidden in the false bottom of a Mercedes and arrested an Italian and two Turks after chasing them to a villa outside Rome, officials reported.

They estimated the drug apparently smuggled in from Turkey had a street value of $1.3 million.

Acting on a tip, police followed the three to a meeting on the fashionable Via Veneto on Sunday night, but they succeeded in fleeing in the Mercedes and another car. Agents at times firing pistols chased them to the villa where the three gave up.

They were identified as Giuseppe Casadei, 36, of Naples, and Erol Akyuz, 46, and Altan Omer, 34, both of Istanbul.

Suit asks $5 million in damages

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A $5 million damage suit has been filed in federal court by the widow and three children of a Navy man killed in an 1961 explosion at a government nuclear research facility in eastern Idaho.

The suit, filed Monday by Caroline Irene Heise of Lima, Ohio, the widow of Richard L. McKinley, contends the explosion was caused by negligence — and not the victim's lack of training — on the part of Combustion Engineering, Inc., operator of the nuclear reactor under a contract with the Atomic Energy Commission, and the University of Chicago, designer of the facility.

McKinley was killed Jan. 3, 1961, in an explosion at the National Reactor Testing Station near Arco.

City Council resolution stresses federal fund needs

By MATT PERRY
State News Staff Writer

A resolution stressing the urgent need of federal revenue to Lansing and other cities was unanimously approved by the Lansing City Council Monday.

The resolution, which calls for letters to be sent to U.S. Sens. Donald Riegle and Carl Levin, as well as U.S. Rep. Bob Carr, asks for the support of continued federal revenue sharing to cities.

Mayor Gerald Graves said if the more than $3 million in federal funds is not continued, a layoff of 175 Lansing city employees was certain. He added that cuts in helicopter service and park projects were also possible.

Local governments have shown concern over President Carter's proposed budget cuts, worrying that aid to cities may be an initial casualty.

COUNCILMEMBER JACK GUNTHER said Congress members attending a recent meeting of the National Association of Regional Councils were apathetic toward the continuation of federal revenue sharing.

"They were not real committal," Gunther said.

Carr has publicly opposed federal funds to cities, though he has supported it in the past.

Mayor Graves said the city will ask other municipalities and counties to follow suit in asking members of Congress for support.

Graves said letters will also be sent to every member of Michigan's congressional delegation. Contacts with 95 House members and eight senators have also been made, he added.

Graves, in his budget proposal for fiscal 1980-81, assumed Lansing would continue to receive the $3.1 million it now gets. If that does not happen, an August meeting to discuss budget cuts would be held, he said.

GRAVES SAID FUNDS to Lansing from the state of Michigan might also be slashed if the state's own federal revenue share is

WKAR-TV holds auction to raise operating funds

By JIM MITZELFELD
State News Staff Writer

As inflation takes prices soaring to the heavens, it is a pleasant surprise when you find out you can buy an item for 65 percent of its retail price.

The sale becomes even more enticing when you can purchase the product without ever leaving the comfort of your TV-side recliner.

WKAR-TV, Channel 23, has scheduled its third annual fundraising auction for April 21 through 26.

The past two auctions have been a success for East Lansing's only public TV station. The station raised $90,000 in its first auction back in 1978, and last year raised $130,000.

AUCTION COORDINATOR BARBARA Sutton said WKAR's goal for this year's auction is to raise $165,000 from the sale of merchandise by area merchants.

"On the average the viewer's end up paying 65 percent of the national average for a product's retail price," Sutton said.

Sutton said the auction, which makes use of 1,200 to 1,500 volunteers, will meet only part of the $900,000 the station needs to stay in operation.

The six-day auction will feature the sale of a Mercury Bobcat and 100 gallons of gas. The car, which was estimated to be worth almost $5,000, was donated by a Damon and Grace Co. of East Lansing.

Among the other things to be auctioned off are a yearling colt, a solar system complete with installation, a suit of armor, and a custom-made doll house.

"Because of rising inflation, merchants enjoy the chance to reduce inventory by donating a product rather than donating cash," Sutton said.

Sutton said raising money for funding and programming was not the only goal of the auction. She said one of the best assets of the auction is that it increases public awareness about WKAR.

The station will auction between 1,800 and 2,000 new and antique items from 6 a.m. until midnight all six days of the event.

'Hash Bash' at U-M

ANN ARBOR (UPI) — An estimated 1,000 young people gathered on the University of Michigan campus Tuesday for the ninth annual "Hash Bash" — a rite of spring celebrating marijuana and a general good time.

The crowd, which included large numbers of youngsters of no more than high school age, braved cloudy skies and a damp chill to smoke pot, toss Frisbees about and peddle a variety of souvenirs.

Police at the scene reported no major disruptions.

E. Lansing hosts great rock 'n roll

By JOHN NEILSON
State News Reviewer

They call themselves Dirty Looks, but in truth their looks were anything but. Guitarist Patrick Barnes could have passed for Wally Cleaver — butch haircut, sweater, jacket, the works — while bassist "Marco Sin" was more reminiscent of Animal House's Flounder. It's hardly your stereotypical new wave image, but when you rock as hard as these guys did Monday night at Dooley's, you could look like Mr. Ed and still get away with it. (Come to think of it, I'd LOVE to see a band with Mr. Ed in it!)

While the members of this trio have been playing together in various configurations for several years, their metamorphosis into Dirty Looks was a fairly recent affair. Being native New Yorkers meant there was no lack of places to play, and after working at such media hangouts as Max's Kansas City and CBGB's they were discovered by England's Stiff Records and signed to a recording contract. Their first album is due to be released some time this month, and on the basis of Monday's show I can hardly wait to hear it.

On stage Dirty Looks come across with all the power and dynamics of the Jam, though without the latter's infatuation with angst and apocalypse. Power pop would be one category you could lump them into, but by now that term has become as watered-down as new wave and p*ck rock — the inevitable result of trying to put every new rock band that's come out within the last three years into three pigeonholes. Suffice it to say that they combine the best aspects of '60s pop-rock with new wave's raw energy to make music that is original, catchy, and exciting as hell.

Barnes' guitar-playing was effortlessly powerful, and at times it sounded as if he had three or four hands all going at once. He also did the bulk of the singing, while "Marco Sin" and drummer Peter Parker filled in the holes and gave the songs their driving beat. For a band without any recordings out, these guys were HOT, and my only complaint with their set was that it could have been much longer.

(Before the band's appearance, Pyramid Productions sponsored an abortive "dirty looks" costume contest which was conducted amidst a hail of jeering by the audience. The fact that the winner of the contest was a clone of Kiss' Gene Simmons went a long way toward putting this bit of nonsense into the proper perspective.)

Opening for Dirty Looks was Detroit's Heaven Seventeen, featuring Knack songwriter Doug Feiger's brother Geoffrey on guitar and vocals. While my initial intention was to avoid comparisons with the Knack and give these guys the benefit of the doubt, it soon became all too obvious that the bands have a lot in common. (Whether that's good or bad depends on your interpretation.) Song titles like "Girl With The Criminal Mind," "Rolling In The Back Seat," and "Eddie's Little Sister" should give some idea as to what their philosophical stance is, and it was also clear that Feiger shares his brother's knack for stealing riffs and making them his own (the chorus of "Rolling In The Back Seat" was lifted note-for-note from the Clash's "Julie's Been Working For The Drug Squad").

Still the group's songs were basically pretty strong, owing more to bands like the Clash and the Jam than to the Beatles. Feiger's singing often reminded me of the Undertones, and his guitar-playing — while not the most original — was technically very good. If he would only steer clear of the path tread by his brother, Geoffrey could easily make Heaven Seventeen a fine band in its own right.

Addendum: While space considerations in Monday's paper prohibited us from writing anything about the Mutants/Retro show at the Bus Stop last Thursday, it would be a shame to pass over that concert altogether. Both bands were excellent that night, but while the Mutants' set didn't differ much from their previous appearances here (they're always good), Retro was a real eye-opener.

For my money, Retro is the most interesting Detroit band I've seen yet, playing highly-textured and challenging music in the Talking Heads/Television/Urban Verbs vein. The band played their first gig on April Fools' Day 1979, and since then they have played about 60 dates, including numerous Detroit bookings, a show in Ann Arbor opening for John Cale, and a stint at the New York rock club Heat. They have received several "heavy nibbles" from record companies so far, but with or without major label support they intend to release a single "Picture Plane"/"U-Boat" shortly.

Singer/songwriter Jim Atkinson applies a film-maker's style of jump-cutting to his songs, and the rest of the band translates this into music that is fluid and impassioned (and a delight to listen to). Their plans right now consist of "taking it as far as we can," and this reviewer hopes that includes a few more stops in Lansing before they make it big, as they inevitably will.

ENTERTAINMENT

England's 999 play Dooley's tonight

Polydor recording artists 999 from England will be appearing tonight at Dooley's. Opening the show will be the Dickies from Los Angeles, who have released two LPs for A&M.

999 takes its name from the number one would dial in England in case of emergency (remember the Clash's lyrics: "London's burning with boredom now/London's burning, dial 999?"). The band was first conceived in late 1976, when guitarist/vocalists Nick Cash and Guy Days, who happened to be at school together. Within several months, they had teamed up with bassist Jon Watson and drummer Pablo Labritain, and 999 was officially born.

The band played its first gig in January 1977, the year the punk rock/new wave movement took control of Britain. Interest in the band was immediate, and constant gigging around London brought with it critical acclaim and a hard core group of supporters who called themselves "The Crew."

The band's initial sound was raw frenzy and energy, and it was captured on its first single released on its own Labritain label. The group eventually signed with United Artists in England, and its first LP, simply titled 999, was greeted with impressive sales. The band released a second LP, Separates, before embarking on its first U.S. tour in March 1979. The troupe was considered to be quite an achievement, since the band was without a record contract in America at the time. The current tour is the band's third trip to America.

The band's newest release, The Biggest Prize in Sports, is a change in direction for 999. They manage to combine power chords and pop hooks without sounding like the numerous Beatles/Merseybeat clones currently making the scene. Songs such as "Boiler" and "Stranger" stand with some of the best rock 'n roll released so far this year, and — in a term swarming with many forthcoming excellent concerts — 999's performance will probably be one of the best.

The Dickies have released two A&M albums, Incredible Shrinking Dickies and Dawn of the Dickies. The five-member band is one of the few which remains true to the raw "incompetence" of early punk rock, and it is notorious for the nihilistic covers of songs like "Nights in White Satin," "Paranoid," "Eve of Destruction," "She" and the "Banana Splits Theme," the latter of which reached No. 5 in England. Stereotypical amphetamine trash rock taken to an extreme. The albums are weak, but we understand the band is a lot of fun live.

Tickets for the show are $6.50, and are available in advance at the Disc Shop and Dooley's. Doors open at 8:30 p.m.

LAXER ADDS TO OWN CAREER MARKS

Willitts off to high-scoring start

By WILL KOWALSKI
State News Sports Writer

When lacrosse became a varsity sport at MSU in 1976, a freshman named Kevin Willitts walked on to the field and could not believe the inexperience of his own team.

Willitts was right about the team being inexperienced. In that 1976-77 season MSU won only three of 10 games. For the next two seasons it was much the same story. In 1977 the laxers were 6-8 and in 1978 10-12. But last year all of the effort and work of coaches Nevin Kanner and Boku Hendrickson finally paid off.

Led by Willitts' 70 goals and 28 assists, both of which broke team records Willitts had set himself, the Spartans went 9-7 overall and tied for second place in the Blue Division of the Midwest Lacrosse Association.

WILLITTS IS A second-year student in the College of Veterinary Medicine at MSU, and is now beginning his fifth season on the Spartan lacrosse team. He was awarded an extra year of eligibility this season since he broke his leg after the first game in 1978 and spent the season watching from the sidelines.

He holds almost all the MSU career records, including most goals (118) and most assists (63). This year he has added to those figures with 14 goals and five assists in the Spartans' first three games.

Willitts started playing lacrosse as a freshman at Country Day High School in Providence, R.I., but said a lot of players living in the East Coast lacrosse belt start at an even earlier age in youth leagues. Thus when he came to MSU in 1976 he felt that although he knew the basics of the game he was not yet experienced enough to be recognized as star caliber.

"I think as both my body and mind matured I became a better player," Willitts said. "I had very good fundamental coaching out East, but it wasn't until I came to MSU that I totally developed.

"I'M MORE OBJECTIVE on the field now. I look at what the entire situation is on the field instead of just thinking only about my spot on it."

The laxers have moved up this season from the Blue to the Red Division of the Midwest League and are now herded with Ohio State University, Bowling Green State University and Ashland (Ohio) College, all of which are Division I schools. But despite having to confront the tougher opposition more times this year, Willitts maintains the team is still shooting for the Midwest crown.

"WE NOW HAVE the team, talent-wise, to really make a run for the league championship," Willitts said. "Plus, the addition of assistant coach Rich Kimble to the team, who has a lot of lacrosse experience, has also helped.

"We know the conference season starts on Saturday (against Oberlin College at home), and we can't afford to let down any more. We know we have to be both physically and mentally prepared, and the intensity has got to be there if we're going to make the run at the title," Willitts said.

It's been a banner career for MSU senior lacrosse standout Kevin Willitts, shown here in his team's season opener against Hope College last week.

MSU infield young and talented; Litwhiler looks for improvement

By BILL TEMPLETON

State News Sports Writer

Ed's Note: This is the second of a three-part series on the MSU baseball team. Today's installment looks at the infield.

With three sophomores and a freshman slated to start in the infield against Eastern Michigan University Saturday, MSU head baseball coach Danny Litwhiler is not so much concerned with the youth of the group, but rather the amount of work still left to take care of.

"Our infield needs to be improved," Litwhiler said. "Because we work indoors, the soft ground outdoors is causing us a few problems right now. We need a lot of ground balls."

"It takes time, but I think it's going to develop."

AT THIRD BASE, sophomore Frank Gunder seems to have the lead on the position on the basis of his defensive play on the spring trip to Edinburg, Texas.

"Gunder will be at third because of his defense right now," Litwhiler said. "(Junior Brad) Gebben and (Senior Bill) Schultz hit well, but their defense hurt us. I don't understand it, because they all get enough practice."

Last year's third sacker, sophomore Al Dankovich, has moved over a few feet and will play shortstop this season for the Spartans.

Dankovich led the squad in RBIs on the spring trip with seven, including one of the Spartans' 10 home runs. The 6-foot, Hazel Crest, Ill., native had a .333 batting average as well.

"He's a good defensive ballplayer, no matter where you put him," Litwhiler said. "I thought he was the best third baseman in the Big Ten last year."

THE OTHER HALF of the MSU double-play tandem this year is freshman Tom Dieters, a switch-hitting 6-footer out of Rochester.

Dieters matched Dankovich's spring batting average to mark the second straight year the MSU double-play combination has hit .333. Last year, graduates Rodger Bastien and Randy Hop turned the trick.

"He's a good hitter from either the left or the right," Litwhiler said. "He's confident and dependable and has good hands."

At first base this year, the Spartans have All-Big Ten selection Chris Dorr back again. Because of sophomore Dorr's lackluster batting average on the spring trip, Litwhiler and assistant coach Frank Pellerin also mentioned senior Kirk Haines as being in the running for the regular spot. Dorr will, however, start Saturday against EMU.

"HE (DORR) IS hitting the ball hard, but right at somebody."

DEMOCRACY IS STILL A REVOLUTIONARY IDEA

Structural Reform - Ballots by Richard A. Morin could be the most important political book you'll ever read. It proposes fundamental change, a structural reform that transcends ideologies and party interests. The concept is simple, the case is absolute, and the implications of the study are staggering.

Voting is often taken for granted as being fair and democratic. It isn't.

One Man - One Vote is blatantly undemocratic and counter-productive. It drives stakes right into the political heart of society, divides the electorate, induces polarities that can be manipulated, and grants inordinate power to single-interest groups.

Under the current system, a vote for any candidate is, in effect, a vote against each other candidate. When multiple options are present, this leads to fragmentation, minority victories, and "shifts" in political direction.

• In 1976, Jimmy Carter won the New Hampshire primary with 29.4% of the vote because four more liberal contenders (Bayh, Harris, Schriver and Udall) split a wider base. The media called this a "shift to the right."

When majorities are lost, the system can create "artificial" majorities, which may or may not be based on political support.

• In 1977, five candidates representing the first choices of 61% of the voters in New York City's Democratic mayoral primary were thrown out. Koch and Cuomo (who polled 20% and 19% respectively) were then given the exclusive right to compete in a comparative runoff.

In multi-candidate situations, the threat of fragmentation works to stifle healthy political debate on issues.

• Because an ally (and not the opposition on issues) is likely to tap into a candidate's support base, competition with a close ally is more threatening than that with a challenger having opposite views. When fields are crowded, it often becomes a strategic necessity to avoid issues and throw mud at friends.

Morin examines political problems from a totally new perspective, and explains why we need one vote [YES or NO] on each candidate for political stability and cohesion in the 21st century. The key concept is overlap with multiple choices, we need a voice on each option if majorities are to rule. Otherwise a majority may want peace, peace candidates may crowd a field, and a war candidate may emerge victorious.

The methodological justification for binary voting [Direct Approval] is indisputable: very basic data principles lead, constructively and deductively, to a binary ballot method.

Yet validity is not the only argument for the reform. Consider the political consequences-Direct Approval would:

- Reduce apathy
- Improve political debate
- Enhance major party cohesion
- Reduce in-fighting and issue-avoidance
- Make leading candidates immune to "stop movements"
- Speed the advent of political equality for women
- Open doors for third parties and independents
- Help solidify a political "center" in every election

Structural Reform - Ballots presents a functional analysis of the ballot process and its consequences. Direct approval is a revolutionary concept and a stunning proposal. If you want to better understand the role of ballots in primaries, runoffs and general elections, as well as how the system affects candidate behavior and voter attitudes, order your copy today.

Women's softball team opens at home today

The MSU women's softball team will make its first home appearance of the season in a doubleheader against the University of Michigan on Old College Field today at 3 p.m.

Last year the Spartans split a doubleheader with the Wolverines in Ann Arbor, losing the first game 2-1 in extra innings and winning the second 4-1.

MSU head coach Gloria Beckford said that the U-M team has not been strong in the past but she is not taking anything for granted.

"I haven't seen them yet," Beckford said. "They haven't been that hot in the past, but you never know. I don't know who they have recruited or what their strengths are."

Beckford said the key to beating the Wolverines will be to continue to stress defense, which has traditionally been the Spartans' forte, and to score consistently.

"We can't let our bats die out toward the end," she said. "We have to start scoring early and continue to get runs late in the game."

However, U-M has a number of heavy hitters returning from last year's 21-8 season who will test the Spartans' defense.

First baseman Tammie Sanders was the leading hitter for the Wolverines with a .446 average and 15 RBIs. Pitcher Theresa Gardochi hit .397 and shortstop Diane Hatch had a .343 batting average with 34 hits and 21 RBIs.

Gymnasts at nationals

Four Spartan gymnasts will be doing some traveling this weekend as Alice Hagan, Bonnie Ellis and Pam Swing of the MSU women's team and Marvin Gibbs of the men's team will participate in national championship meets.

Hagan, Ellis and Swing, all freshmen, will be going to Baton Rouge, La., for the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women championships where they will be competing in the individual all-around competition.

The top 24 all-arounders in the nation were invited to attend the three-day event, which begins Thursday, on the Louisiana State University campus. Hagan, from Holmdel, N.J., is currently ranked 16th in the nation while Ellis, from Syracuse, N.Y., is ranked 17th and Swing, from Lakewood, Ohio, is 21st.

Gibbs, a junior and a native of Reidsville, N.C., will attend the NCAA Championships in Lincoln, Neb., which also begins Thursday.

Gibbs placed second in the all-around at the Big Ten meet last month with a 53.75 two-day average in six events, and that qualified him for the individual all-around competition at the NAAs.

Pull! A meeting for new skeet shooting club

The new trap-and-skeet shooting club is holding a meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday in 108 Natural Resources Building.

Anyone is welcome to attend the meeting.

Jeff Vogl, one of the club's originators, said the group will be given weekly shooting time at the Ingham County Conservation Club.

Players vote to strike

By MIKE RABUN

United Press International
DALLAS (UPI) — Representative of the 1,000 major league baseball players voted Tuesday to go on strike for the remainder of the exhibition season, but agreed to open the regular season as scheduled in hopes of reaching an agreement with club owners.

Marvin Miller, head of the player's union, said negotiations would continue with the owners until May 22.

"But if an agreement for a new players' contract has not been reached at that time," Miller said, "a strike will be called for Friday, May 23."

"That should be ample time to work out an agreement. It should be ample time to work out five agreements."

The action came at a meeting of all 26 player representatives who had been summoned by Miller from their spring training camps.

The players took two hours to agree on that action, after which Miller said: "At this late date, we still have no proposal to present to the players. After a full discussion the executive board has resolved that after today, no exhibition games will be played."

"But, in one last show of good faith, in hopes that the owners will negotiate, the players have decided to open the season."

Negotiations between Miller and Ray Grebey, chief representative for major league baseball owners, have stalemated in attempts to put together a new basic players contract.

The chief area of contention has been compensation for free agents.

Huesing is all-star

MSU senior hockey defenseman Ted Huesing has been named to play in an East-West Collegiate All-Star game at the St. Paul, Minn., Civic Center April 10. He will play on the West team.

The contest, sponsored by the American Hockey Coaches Association, will bring senior collegians from NCAA Division I, II and III schools together for the two units. The ACHA made the player selections.

Huesing was MSU's top defenseman in the 1979-80 season and finished fourth in team scoring with nine goals and 33 assists for 42 points. He ended his four-year career here with a total 25 goals and 76 assists for 101 points.

Cheerleading?

Students interested in becoming members of the MSU cheerleading team should attend an orientation session at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday, April 8 at Jenison Fieldhouse.

All persons trying out must be enrolled as a full-time student and have earned at least 24 credits.

Interested students are asked to bring a grade sheet from winter term and an insurance card to Assistant Athletic Director Clarence Underwood in 303 Jenison Fieldhouse.
