Iran requests U.S. to clarify position

VOLUME 74 NUMBER 55

By The Associated Press

Iran's Revolutionary Council on Thursday demanded clarification of U.S. pledges before asking militants to hand over the American hostages in Tehran. President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr was quoted as saying Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini would have the final decision on transferring the captives to government control

Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh told reporters after a council meeting Thursday night that Iran wanted President Carter to clarify commitments of restraint made in response to conditions

White House spokesperson Jody Powell said in Washington that the U.S. position was clear.

"Let me say that the American position has been clearly stated. We hope the authorities in Iran will carefully consider that position and the full implications of the situation before making a final decision," Power told reporters.

He declined the elaborate on the prepared statement he read, but his words strongly implied that Carter feels he has gone as far as he can in meeting Iranian demands.

Bani-Sadr said in a speech Thursday he would seek custody of the hostages of Carter promised to refraint from "propoganda" or "provocation." The Carter administration reponded with a pledge

HOWEVER, GHOTBZADEH SAID, "We have to have some more information on the precise position of the United States concerning the statements which were made by Mr. Bani-Sadr." Asked when the response could come, he said: "I hope within a couple of days." He said the council might formally request custody on Sunday.

Before the council delay, Moslem militants holding 50 Americans inside the U.S. Embassy made ambiguous statements concerning their willingness to relinquish custody of the hostages to the government. The Americans spent their 152nd day as captives Thursday.

"We will accept any decision that the Revolutionary Council takes because it is the highest body in the country which is supported by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini," leader of the revolution, one militant told Canadian Press in Tehran.

Another militant, in a telephone interview with The Associated Press from Nicosia, said: "We have not received any requests. We don't want to deliver the spy next (U.S. Embassy). When they make a decision, we will act.

BANI-SADR ATTEMPTED to gain custody of the Americans last month, but Khomeini backed the militants in their refusal to give up the hostages. Khomeini and the militants have consistently demanded the return of the ousted shah to stand trial on mass murder and corruption charges as a condition for the Americans'

In an interview with ABC News, Bani-Sadr said the issue had been reported to Khomeini and any new council action on the hostages must be approved by the ayatollah.

On Wednesday, White House spokesperson Jody Powell said the administration would be "restrained," and asked the public to "stay cool, at least for a while."

Bani-Sadr, interviewed by CBS and NBC News, said Thursday morning he was satisfied with the U.S. position.

"As far as I am concerned, the United States has now met the condition for the Revolutionary Council to take control of the

Economics faculty files grievance

State News Staff Writer

Faculty members in the economics department have decided to file a grievance against the MSU administration concerning the reinstatement of John R. Hildebrand to an economics-related assignment.

The economics advisory committee presented a proposal at the departmental meeting Wednesday which was overwhelmingly approved in two separate sections.

The first section advises Byron Brown, chairperson of the economics department, to "carry the views of the faculty" to Richard Lewis, dean of the College of Business. The other section was the decision to formally file a grievance with the faculty grievance official.

C. Patric "Lash" Larrowe, faculty grievance official, said this is the first time an entire department has filed a grievance.

"IT'S THE FIRST TIME the Provost has engaged in such an outrageous invasion of departmental autonomy," Larrowe said. The proposal was written after Provost Clarence L. Winder reinstated Hildebrand to the Office of the Provost with an assignment to prepare to teach Economics 200 and 201 fall term.

Brown said the basis for the grievance is that Winder made his decision after the department's promotions committee unanimously rejected Hildebrand's qualifications for reappointment.

The faculty members maintain it is the responsibility of the department to choose faculty members and particularly to assign teaching responsibilities.

"They're not attacking Winder," Brown said. "There's absolutely no rancor or bitterness involved. They just think Winder made the wrong decision.

"WE FEEL IT IS important to have clearly established what departments can and can't do," Brown said.

Larrowe said the first step is an attempt to settle the grievance informally. He said two suggestions to solve the grievance informally would be reassigning Hildebrand to the department of social science or allowing the economics department to decide his teaching assignment.

If the grievance is not settled informally, a formal hearing will be held. The formal hearing involves a panel of seven members chosen at random by the University Committee on Faculty Affairs. Winder reinstated Hildebrand, a former associate professor of social science, after a federal jury decided in January that Hildebrand had been unlawfully dismissed in 1969.

AT MSU UNION'S REQUEST

Labor hearing adjourned

By KY OWEN State News Staff Writer

After testimony of a key union witness was ruled inadmissible, a hearing on an unfair labor practice charge against MSU was adjourned Thursday until April 23.

The MSU Employees Association's torney requested the adjournment after Mark Phillips, the union's contract administrator, was not allowed to give testimony concerning complaints of individual union members.

The hearing, being held by the Michigan Employment Relations Commission, involves an unfair labor practice charge filed against MSU by the union. The charges are in reaction to the 30-day hiring delay in filling non-academic positions instituted in February, which the union claims creates more work for its members and prevents the promotion of union members.

PHILLIPS SAID AT the hearing he has received complaints from several union members concerning the hiring delay's effects, and union attorney Karen Bush Schneider hoped to allow Phillips to testify regarding those complaints.

However, University attorney Byron Class Council in 1977, Eisele said. The Higgins objected, calling Phillips' testimony "hearsay.

Schneider said she could bring in a dozen people and prolong the hearing, but wished the commission. to expedite the proceedings.

"I'm glad to see the association is concerned with time," Higgins responded. "I'm concerned with our rights. I object to any information from unknown persons."

to demonstrate the impact of the hiring delay, which was central to the union's case.

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE Nora Lynch ruled in favor of Higgins, and then Schneider asked for a recess. Following the recess she asked for adjournment until a later date. Schneider told the court she plans to bring in the members who have voiced complaints to serve as witnesses at the next A hearing was also tentatively scheduled for April 29 at Higgins' request so the University can call in witnesses to respond to the union's charges.

Following the Schneider motion for adjournment, Higgins moved to dismiss the unfair labor practice suit since it could be settled under the union grievance procedure.

"The grievance procedure is the appropriate mechanism," he said.

Schneider, calling the motion "Extremely tardy," said the union has a statuatory violation, and therefore should be heard by

"IF THE UNIVERSITY wants us to file 600 grievances, we can," she said, adding such an action would be "absolutely ludicrous.'

She said the grievance procedure not provide an effective remedy. "Our effective remedy is with this commission," she added. "I think that the University is trying to deny us any forum whatsoever."

Higgins responded, saying a grievance could be filed on behalf of all of the union's members affected, and said the motion was not tardy because he did not know what the union's charges were. "It's only clear to me today exactly what they (the union) are alleging," he said.

HIGGINS ALSO ARGUED that the hiring delay was the management's prerogative because the contract stipulates certain management rights.

"What if we were to eliminate instead of freeze positions," Higgins asked. "Innumerable decisions say that is a management prerogative."

However, Schneider said that is not the case in this situation.

"This is not a case where the management simply has the right to eliminate a position," she said.

Prior to Phillips' testimony, Barbara Reeves, MSUEA president, testified and Schneider gave an opening statement.

IN HER STATEMENT, Schneider said the hiring delay is having a "deleterious effect" on union members because they must do extra work and cannot receive promotions as quickly.

She added the University's actions are in violation of the Michigan Public Employees Relations Act.

Reeves, a secretary in the College of Education, testified about the current system for posting clerical-technical job openings and the changes since the hiring delay was instituted.

Since the delay was instituted, 37 jobs have been delayed while 35 have received exemptions and been posted on schedule, Reeves said.

SHE SAID THE UNION was never officially informed of the move, and said the union contacted MSU President Cecil Mackey and the MSU Board of Trustees, but received no response.

However, a meeting was held between University officials and the union on March

Higgins asked Reeves if the union contacted the University officials with which it meets "at the bargaining table."

Higgins also asked Reeves if the union has contacted the personal office for any information concerning the hiring delay.

The hiring delay was imposed on Feb. 18 as a means of generating funds to finance a 2 percent pay raise for faculty and administrative professionals.

The MSU Student Alumni Association is trying to tip the scales of fate in favor of keeping the MSU Alumni Association out of University control.

In a letter to MSU President Cecil Mackey dated April 1, the association claims "some very grave injustices are being done" at the present time to its parent organization.
"We feel it is necessary for an Alumni Association to have an independent voice regarding administration and University policies," the letter, signed by co-chairpersons Dale Tremblay and Kim Esbaugh,

"We've reviewed his (Mackey's) actions and also his policies and it seems they have not been looked into well enough," Tremblay said Thursday. Esbaugh could not be reached Thursday afternoon for comment.

"TO ALLOW PRESIDENTIAL veto power over the selection of the alumni president discourages independent viewpoints," the letter states. "This relationship could prove detrimental not only to the association but to the University. If alumni are not able to act independently and have a voice in the selection of their board and officers, then their resentment toward the University and its administration will begin to grow.' The two main points of disagreement are whether Mackey should have the power to fire the executive director of the alumni association and have control over the alumni magazine.

In the position letter of April 1, the SAA said they were against the request by Mackey for the resignation of Jack Kinney, association executive director.

"Upon evaluating your request we question the reasoning behind it," the letter says. Patricia Eisele, advisor to the SAA, said she presently has no idea what the fate of the association might be in preceding weeks.

stand Thursday a state Court of Appeals decision upholding Gov. William G. Milliken's right to order continued state funding of Medicaid abortions.

In a strongly-worded dissent, Justice

James Ryan said the high court's refusal to hear the case invites the criticism that the high court simply found the case "too hot to handle.'

Milliken repeatedly has used his veto to strike from the Legislature's welfare budgets provisions denying use of state funds for elective abortions.

Two of the Legislature's leading abortion foes - Rep. Thaddeus Stopczynski, D-Detroit, and Sen. John Welborn, R-Kalamazoo, - sued, claiming abortion funding is not allowed under the state's basic welfare law and arguing Milliken's vetoes were illegal.

ESSENTIALLY, THE TWO argued the governor cannot, by his veto, accomplish the positive goal of ordering funding to continue.

The lawmakers won a victory in Ingham County Circuit Court, but the decision was reversed last year by the Michigan Court of Appeals which upheld Milliken's action. The high court, in a terse order.

merely declined to review the appeals court decision saying it was "not persuaded that the questions presented should be reviewed by this court." Justices Thomas G. Kavanagh and G.

Mennen Williams indicated they would have accepted the appeal. Ryan, in his dissent, called the case one with "constitutional, moral, human, political and fiscal dimensions and now, in light of the court of appeals decision, jurisprudential dimensions as well.

"IF THIS CASE is not a case of sufficient importance for this court to decide, what case will be?" he asked.

"The magnitude of this inaction by the court is enormous in scope,' Stopcyznski said of the 4-3 decision.

"By denying the appeal, the court has given its stamp of approval to continued fetal genocide, to immoral and Godless abuse of human bodies, and to prolonged immorality as individuals seek to rid themselves of pregnancies achieved through lack of proper discretion or mature and prudent behavior," he said.

Welborn conceded anti-abortion forces, while strong, cannot muster the two-thirds vote needed to override Milliken's vetoes.

HE SAID THE next step must be to elect more abortion foes to the Legislature or launch a petition drive to place the issue of abortion on the fall ballot.

Milliken, a staunch supporter of free choice on the abortion issue, has clashed with the predominantly anti-abortion Legislature for years on the Medicaid funding question. It was an issue in the 1978 gubernatorial campaign. In two 1978 budget bills, Milliken used his line-item veto power to excise language which limited funding for similar action on the current year's budget. In their appeal, Stopczynski and Welborn said Milliken cannot, by vetoing the $1 item, authorize the expendi-elective abortions to a token $1. He took

THEY ALSO SAID the Social Welfare Act, which permits funding of "required" services, does not cover abor-ture of greater amounts.

"There is not a case upon your books in which a governor, by vetoing a specific legislative appropriation, has effectively generated vast sums to be spent for the liminated purpose," Ryan wrote. He said Milliken's decision "might well be constitutionally sustainable" but added "perhaps, on the other hand, it is

"In light of the infinitely more pedestrian issues of essentially private dispute we regularly entertain, today's refusal to hear and decide this highly controversial but vitally important case diminished the court," he said.

Officials push for Olympic boycott, Black immigrants riot in England citing danger to American security

WASHINGTON (AP) - Administration officials attempted Thursday to stifle a growing desire among amateur athletes to send a team to the Moscow Olympic Games this summer in defiance of President Carter's demand for a boycott.

Representatives of the national governing bodies of the 32 Olympic sports were invited to the State Department to discuss the administration's reasons for calling for the boycott of the Games. President Carter has insisted the United States will not send an Olympic team to Moscow in protest of the Soviet military administration officials met at the State Department with the sports officials, who compose the controlling bloc on a boycott vote by the U.S. Olympic Committee.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown, Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher, White House counsel Lloyd Cutler and other

Following the closed meeting, brown said U.S. athletes will damage American security if they insist on going to the Moscow

Although Carter did not meet with the sports officials, one participant said the president called on the telephone during the meeting and said U.S. security would be damaged if Americans participate in the Moscow Games

Harman Hawkins, president of the U.S. Yacht Racing Union, said Carter expressed concern over the growing sentiment in the U.S. Olympic Committee to ignore the call for a boycott.

Hawkins, whose group supports the boycott, said he raised the question of whether the boycott is vital to U.S. security interests. He said Cutler told the group: "The president has stated it is and will state it again." Christopher later told reporters that no threats were made to the sports officials because "we haven't reached that point yet." But he warned that Carter has said the government "will take strong measures to see that we are not represented at the Games." He declined to be more specific, but noted that Carter last week ordered NBC not to make any more payments to the Soviet Union for the television rights to the Games and put a halt to the sale of U.S. equipment to be used during the Games.

"We have not exhausted the measures we can take," he said. Michael Scott, an attorney representing the National Collegiate Athletic Association, said the administration officials "made it clear that they would prefer the USOC House of Delegates to voluntarily vote not to go.

Hawkins said, "Cutler made it clear that the bottom line is, 'If you vote not to support the president, you are doing the worse thing you can possibly do.

Liquor prices across the state will go up about 25 cents a bottle under a bill signed into law Thursday by Gov. William G. Milliken. Under the measure, the state-controlled price of alcohol will be raised, allowing dealers to widen their profit margins.

Under Michigan law, the state buys liquor from wholesalers and sets an official marked up price. Dealers buy booze from the state and are allowed to keep part of the price.

BRISTOL, England (AP) - Government officials, lawmakers and race relations counse'ors streamed into this port town Thursday to investigate rioting in which hundreds of Black immigrants clashed with White police and then turned to arson and looting.

Insurance assessors said damage claims could approach more than $2 million as a result of the rampage late Wednesday night in the St. Paul's slum district, a West Indian immigrant ghetto and redlight district.

In London, Home Secretary William Whitelaw told the House of Commons, "This was not in any sense a race riot." He called for an urgent report from Bristol City police.

Whitelaw said 21 police officers and nine other persons were injured as several hundred Blacks pelted the police with rocks, bricks and bottles.

City police chief Brian Weigh told a news conference that the clash erupted after his drug squad raided the Jamaican-run Black and White Cafe.

He said the police arrested 21 persons, mainly for looting, then withdrew for a time "because we didn't have the manpower to contain the situation." The police returned in strength, he said.

St. Paul's was quiet Thursday as officials crunched over broken glass from ravaged shopfronts while viewing a burned-out bank, fire-damaged offices and wrecked cars.

The Rev. Keith Kimber, an Anglican priest working in St. Paul's, said the rioters were young West Indians, many of them unemployed or working in low-paying jobs, who were hitting out against authority.

Things are changing at Williams Hall, and many people living there are not pleased with what has been happening.

At the weekly Williams Hall government meeting Wednesday night, approximately 110 residents stormed the cafeteria to force management to change its plans to alter the hall's housing

Currently the rooms in Williams Hall are equally divided among the 253 residents, but there are more single room spaces for men

"There's a tremendous need to have the reality of Jesus Christ on the campus," John Sowash, the leader of His House Christian Fellowship said. "The people who are going to be making decisions that will affect the rest of the world are right here on campus."

As it has for the past six years, His House will hold a 'sonrise" service at 7 Easter morning in the Beal Gardens behind the Student Services Building. With this in mind, residents of the hall voted on March 26 to displace all men from third floor beginning fall term 1980. In addition, the housing change called for the displacement of women from the north side of second floor, but permitted the south side of the second floor to remain a women's floor.

But students demanded the vote to be rescinded, claiming it was not a fair representation of residents who were concerned with the housing change.

Many students present at Wednesday's meeting said they were not aware such an important vote was being taken at the March 26

"A decision must be made on this issue a week from tonight," manager Van Buren told the crowd. If a decision is not made quickly, the process of changing the housing conditions before fall sign-up will be severely hampered, he said.

After some discussion the students present voted to place four housing proposals on a hall-wide referendum ballot to be held

THE FOUR OPTIONS are:

- changing the first floor on the north side from men to women: • changing the housing in the basement on the north side from men to women:
- displacing the third floor, making second floor south men and second floor north women and also changing the south side basement apartments to a designated men's area instead of the present area for women;
- displacing all males from the third floor, creating a split floor on the second level which will give men the north side of the building and changing the south side basement apartments from areas for women to men.

Investment laws a bad precedent

MSU proved more than just its corporations doing business in South Africa. It also proved that divestment would not spell the University's financial ruin. And cized by divestiture opponents as ineffective, divestiture seems to have had just the opposite effect.

Three bills have surfaced in the Michigan Legislature, two of which would prohibit state-funded universitites and public employee pension funds from investing in corporations with holdings in South Africa. A third bill would forbid Michigan banks from loaning money to South Africa. While each bill is an outgrowth of the morally sound divestiture movement, they seek to regulate investments we think the state should not have the power to control.

The bills dealing with universities and employee pensions, introduced by Rep. Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, would set in the state law books regulations in which those directly affected would have no say. In the case of universities, divestiture represented a morality many at MSU were determined to uphold. It chose to pull its stocks, it chose to break its partnership with apartheid. The fact that MSU had free reign in its investment decisions made divestiture possible.

> Granted, funding for universities can be traced to taxes and individual investments from Michigan residents. But if universities have commitments to their state and taxpayers, it is to invest their money as prudently as possible. In MSU's case, divestiture proved prudent. Of course, the pullout was not executed on the assumption that a profit would be made. It was done purely on moral grounds. Yet since that time, the University has learned reinvestment is not difficult. MSU emerged from the divestiture issue unscathed. If there is a lesson to be learned by other Michigan universities with holdings in South Africa, it is that a move to divest will not have the severe consequences divestiture opponents say it will. That is perhaps the best reason for voluntary withdrawal, which we would support over any law.

Besides, Bullard's bill might be sound in principle, but fails to address the issue of gifts and grants, the most perplexing ramification to grow out of the divestiture issue. If his bill seeks while it would be easy to support to eliminate all profits from South the bills on their anti-apartheid Africa, its present form would merits, it is also difficult to ignore allow universities to continue those who deserve a say in where receiving revenues from apartheid corporations.

Tuition increases unpleasant reality

A 3 to 5 percent budget increase for MSU from the state Legislature may soon have students crying that only the affluent can afford to go to college. For the question is not whether a tuition hike is in the works; the unspoken fear centers around how big the increase will be. And with the sorry state of Michigan's economy and the sudden dearth of federal funds, a jump of 15 percent outrageous as it may sound - is a realistic prediction.

The gloomy outlook is the result of revenue sharing cuts proposed by President Carter as part of his plan to balance the federal budget. Due to the curtailment of the revenue sharing program, University officials have shortened their sights and are now expecting a much smaller budget increase from the state Legislature than the 8.5 percent initially recommended by Gov. William G. Milliken. The specter of students dropping out of school simply because they cannot afford to attend is distressing to say the least. But a whopping tuition hike combined with 10 to 12 percent across the board room and/or board increases may mean a projected decline in college enrollment trends for the '80s will take place sooner, and be much steeper, than expected.

What can we do? Some would argue we should brandish the concept of a land-grant institution, implying that higher education, especially in the MSU tradition, is a right rather than a privilege. A land-grant philosophy dictates the notion that college should be affordable to anyone who really wants to go. But tuition hikes, from the $2.50 per-credit-hour charge reluctantly initiated in 1924, to the standard $2 to $4 current annual levees, are a fact of life. And tuition rallies and demonstrations cannot alter the sobering economic realities we face today. Although the educational "run for the money" concept - complete with grim warnings from legislators about the forthcoming pittance, and equally exaggerated predictions from administrators about the dire consequences of a less-than 33 percent budget increase - is an annual political spiel, the economic crisis we face today is unfortunately as real as it is unpleasant.

The only recourse available is also unpleasant: working, saving, and taking out loans when necessary and possible. But though the heyday of surplus enrollments in college may be at an end, anyone who really wants to get a degree should still be able to afford it with some belt-tightening measures. We do, however, also expect the same austerity from MSU administrators.

Up against the wall, HEW!

I'm hot-footin' it over to the International Center for a coffee break one afternoon during Farmers' Week, this student stops

"Phew!" she sniffs. "You must have stepped in something really bad, Lash." They needed a local celebrity to judge the swine competition," I says huffily. "They warned me I put in eight hours in there, the smell comes with the job, but I didn't have the heart to turn 'em down.'

"What makes you think you'd know a prize hog if you saw one Lash?" she asks doubtfully. "You ever been near a farm?" "What's to know?" I asks, moving off toward the International Center. "As far as they've got a little meat on their bones, so much the better.'

"I didn't stop you to get a lecture from you on swine-judging," she frowns. "I wanted to get your opinion of the HEW investigation that's coming to MSU to check out whether the 'U's complying with Title IX, you being Mr. Civil Liberties on campus and all."

"What's Title IX?" I asks as we head into the Center, wiping my boots carefully on the grass before we go in.

"It's a federal law," she tells me. "Applies to universities like MSU that get money from the government. Here's what Title IX says," she goes on, reading from a State News she pulls out of her backpack:

"What's that mean in plain, everyday

Washington witch-hunt. If this Title IX of your is enforced, I could be in bad trouble, sis. I never hired a grad assistant yet who's a woman, and I sure don't intend to start now,

"How come you never hired a woman, Lash?" she wonders. "You're always sounding off about how much your heart bleeds for the little folks who're mistreated.

"You ever see my class when I hand back my midterms?" I asks. "Those students come bellowing at me with blood in their eyes, I ain't dependin' on no dainty little skirt like you to protect me, not if I can help

"If your classes are as bad as that, why don't you call the campus cops?" she asks. "That would have another advantage, too, Lash. If the cops are tied down protecting you, they won't be towing everybody's cars off the campus.'

"I better get to a phone and call my lawyer," I sputters, knocking over my coffee cup. "From what you tell me, your HEW people are probably hunting for me right

"Don't sweat it, Lash," she says glumly. "Your pals in the administration've got the investigation wired. It says here in The State News if you and the other MCPs on the faculty are going to be interviewed by HEW, you can have the University lawyer there with you so you won't make any slips. That way the 'U' can keep tabs on what you tell the HEW, too. Isn't that disgusting?"

"Not to me," I says. "I say hats off to the boys topside! Once again, they're looking out for the interests of we profs!"

"Looks to me," she says. "more like they're using your friend Mackey's gag rule to keep a muzzle on the faculty so they won't spill the beans to HEW, the way you just did

VIEWPOINT: RADIATION VICTIMS

Government must accept the blame

Paul Ray Jensen in his viewpoint article of March 31, brings to our attention a very important issue. Are the military (a branch of the U.S. government) and other large corporations responsible for their actions. If they aren't going to be, who is? In his article, Jensen outlines the inordinate cases of combat veteran illnesses which appear to be directly linked to the wide use of extremely toxic herbicides (i.e. Agent Orange) during the Vietnam war. He goes on to tell us of the runaround veterans are experiencing with the Veterans Administration in an attempt to receive disability compensation.

Now there is being uncovered a growing number of non-civilian and civilian illnesses due to the negligence of past military operations. The hazardous herbicide program in Vietnam, which the government knew of prior to unleashing it, is minor (in numerical proportion, not in seriousness) compared to the impact that nuclear tests had on great numbers of people throughout the 1950s. A number of scientific studies in recent months have reached the conclusion that civilians who live in areas surrounding the Nevada atomic test site may be suffering from abnormally high rates of leukemia and other cancers. There has been an increase in cancers of the blood, bone and thyroid over the past decade, Gov. Matheson of Utah, where many residents have been affected, has given testimony before a Congressional panel investigating radioac tive fall-out.

The congressional committee to which Matheson testified has uncovered a pattern of governmental lying and deceit where the hazards from radioactive fallout were concerned. The Atomic Energy Commission, forerunner of the current Nuclear Regulatory Commission, had distributed pamphlets to area residents stating, "Each test has successfully added to scientific knowledge needed to strengthen our defenses against enemy weapons. An unusual safety record has been set. No one inside the test site has been injured as a result of the 31 detonations to date; no one in the nearby region of potential exposure has been hurt . . ." The effects of radiation were not fully understood then, nor are they now. There is considerable debate today over what is a safe level of radiation and its accumulative effects.

Senate bill 1865 drafted up by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy D-Mass., and Orrin Hatch R-Utah, would impose liability on the federal government for compensation to anyone who lived near the test site and then contracted certain types of cancer. The bill unfortunately does not cover the estimated 200,000 soldiers who were exposed to fallout while engaged in military maneuvers on the test site in Nevada or the 150,000 civilians who worked at the site during the same period. There is presently a national drive to locate people harmed by radiation exposure and to convene Citizens Hearings for Radiation Victims in Washington on April 11 to 14, 1980.

Victims of every phase of the nuclear fuel cycle, from uranium miners to veterans exposed to atmospheric testing, are speaking out. Their voice is much appreciated for the nuclear weapons program runs with little regulation. It operates presently with virtually no oversight or control by Congress. Nuclear weapons and related activities have traditionally been classified and sacrosanct. There is a great need to unveil this irresponsible nuclear weapons program and dispel the mystique of "national security" which keeps such projects hidden from the public. Are you more secure with such secrecy? Democracy and secrecy incompatible in the long run.

Jensen is certainly on target when he states, "both producers (Dow Chemical Co.) and the government are afraid of the issue for economic reasons." VA disability for herbicide victims could surely run into the billions, and such precedents could lead to thousands of veterans exposed to radiation to ask for their fair share. The government finds itself in a "pickle" considering its "anti-inflationary" budget cuts; from where would the money for compensation come? I have a bright idea, how about the countless new nuclear weapon development programs?

Kennedys' bill has grave implications for the nuclear industry. Tens of millions of dollars to settle the off-site atomic testing claims instills great fears with the industry. This would mean strict liability for other categories of complaints from uranium mining and plant workers to citizens living downwind from Three Mile Island. Presently, utility companies who own commerical nuclear reactors are required to have minimum liability insurance approximately $50 million. Congressmember Morris Udall. D-Ariz., is spearheading House Bill #2608, an attempt to up the minimum insurance to $5 billion. Recent estimates even believe that figure is conservative in effectively treating the damages of a large-scale nuclear accident.

Such legislation confronts these large corporations along with their close ties to the military and the Department of Energy. It is a clear message that American citizens are not going to sit by and be guinea pigs in experiments with nuclear technology, a technology that has questionable applications, that is unsafe and essentially inhu-

N.Y. transit strike continues

NEW YORK (AP) — New Yorkers settled in for a long walk Thursday after the two sides in the bus and subway labor dispute met briefly and found themselves farther apart than when the strike began three days earlier.

While the first tentative effort to settle the strike by 35,000 transit employees came to naught, the Long Island Rail Road started running from Manhattan out to the Long Island suburbs, but amid threats it might be stopped again next week.

Mediators in the bus and subway strike said both sides had hardened their positions, and a union leader said "strike fever" was rife in his ranks.

Crash causes toxic gas release

SOMERVILLE, Mass. (AP) — A locomotive crashed into a chemical tanker car at a rail yard three miles from downtown Boston on Thursday, releasing lethal gas that sent at least 74 persons to hospitals and forced the evacuation of about 2,000 others.

Clouds of toxic gas wafted over Boston, but officials said the gas posed no immediate threat to the city or to nearby Cambridge.

About 2,000 people fled houses, businesses and schools surrounding the Interbelt Industrial Park section of Somerville, a largely industrial neighborhood on the outskirts of Boston, after the 9 a.m. accident.

Officials said a Boston & Maine locomotive struck a tank car containing 1,300 gallons of phosphorus trichloride, a chemical used in water treatment. The car was bound for a Monsanto Chemical plant in Everett.

Experts fear resistant gonorrhea

ATLANTA (UPI) — Strains of so-called "super gonorrhea" resistant to all antibiotics threaten worldwide efforts to control the spread of venereal diseases, medical experts said Thursday.

Penicillin-resistant gonorrhea strains are already well established in countries of the Far East, speakers told an international symposium on pelvic inflammatory disease being held at the national Center for Disease Control.

Israel detains activist

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel detained a leading Palestinian activist for questioning Thursday, and Israeli rightists mounted pressure on Prime Minister Menachem Begin to refuse to make concessions in summit talks with President Carter this month.

Work began on the site of a new Jewish village near Jericho in the Jordan River valley. Military authorities said it was to be called Mitzpe Jericho "B" and that the government had authorized a settlement at the site in Israeli-occupied territory more than a year ago. In continuing efforts to quell the wave of unrest in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River, Israeli authorities called Dr. Ahmed Hamzi Natshe to the military police headquarters in Bethlehem. Natshe allegedly had made an anti-Israeli speech at a Palestinian rally in the West Bank town of Hebron on Wednesday.

"We do know the magma (molten material) is moving" beneath the volcano, geophysicist Bob Christiansen of the U.S. Geological Survey told reporters. "The harmonic tremor (recorded late Wednesday) makes it seem likely we will go to a magmatic eruption."

"We've always said that was a likely possibility. It seems even more likely now, although not necessarily today or tomorrow. It could be a week or a period of weeks or more.

Solzhenitsyn criticizes U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — Exiled Russian novelist Alexander Solzhenitsyn has criticized the United States for confusing "the Russian people" with the Soviet system that dominates them.

He said in a 37-page article in the current issue of Foreign Affairs magazine that that is a serious error similar to "confusing a man with his illness."

It was at least the second time this year that Solzhenitsyn, a devoted anti-communist who lives in seclusion in Vermont, has pleaded in writing that Americans separate in their minds the Soviet system and its leaders, and the people who are ruled by that

COGS backs semester plan

State News Staff Writer

Supporters of the proposed change to the semester system scored an easy victory Wednesday when the Council of Graduate Students approved the plan with a single stipulation.

The stipulation asked that COGS representatives be included in all steps of the changeover which concern graduate students. Many members agreed the change seemed to be inevitable. Peter Brown, a representative from the College of Education, said "COGS should be concerned with the process rather than the outcome." Concerns about the proposed change centered on the possible reduction of graduate assistantships. Several members said they would like to see Provost Clarence L. Winder present a more explicit plan before the decision is made.

IN OTHER ACTION, COGS recording secretary, presented an information item about pornography on campus. Adams is a member of the Women's Advisory Committee to the provost, a group currently dealing with the pornography issue. Jeanne Klein, representative from the College of Arts and Letters, introduced a motion stating COGS is opposed to the appearance of pornographic films on campus. The resolution was not approved since several members stated their opposition to censorship in any form. Steve Spivy, COGS vice president for University relations and representative to the Steering Committee of the Academic Council, resigned from his position to have more time to complete research for his master's degree. Adams will fill his positions until the regular elections to be held May 14. COGS President Sharon Cogdill presented certificates to some members who have been named to Who's Who Among after an attack, said Tim Lipan, of the American Red Cross office in Lansing. Drownings and some auto accident deaths can also be prevented with Bill may exempt CPR. Lipan added.

"THERE IS NO doubt that this proposal has overwhelming art gifts from tax public support," Bullard said. "We would be training stu-generations," he added. No state has ever passed a law requiring CPR be taught in high schools, said Dan Sharp, administrative aid to Bullard.

Seattle, Wash., has a CPR program in its school district, Sharp said. "It has saved more than 600 lives in the past five years," he said.

The American Heart Association estimated that up to 200,000 lives could be saved in the United States each year if just one of every five people had CPR training.

THE RED CROSS and the American Heart Association are the two organizations who train volunteers in CPR, and there is little or no charge for the lessons begun within one minute of an in the Red Cross program, Lipan said.

The bill would require schools to offer students in grades 10, 11 or 12 instruction in CPR beginning with the 1981-82 school year, Bullard said. Private schools would fall under this ruling as well, he added.

Opposition to the bill is not expected, Sharp said. "The only problem getting the bill through the Senate is the cost," he said. "However, compared to the $10 billion state budget, the costs would be minimal," Sharp said. The bill would cost $416,560 for the 1980-81 fiscal year and approximately $50,000 each year thereafter, Sharp "By requiring that training in CPR be offered in Michigan schools," Bullard said, "the Legislature can ensure that a valuable lifesaving technique would be more widely available for saving the lives of heart attack victims."

Cardiopulmonary resuscitation is a first-aid technique used to keep a person's heart and lungs functioning after a medical trauma such as a heart attack or stroke, Bullard said.

Dial 999 for raw excitement

State News Reviewer

If there was a surprising number of 999 fans in East Lansing prior to Monday - and there certainly seemed to be there is probably an even larger number now. During their show at Dooley's that night the band played the crowd and their music with equal enthusiasm, drawing one of the wildest audience reactions that venue has seen since the Romantics were in town.

From the moment they bounded onstage, the band was a seething powerhouse of raw energy. Vocalist Nick Cash one hand stabbing into the spotlight for emphasis - would exhort the crowd to wilder and more feverish peaks of excitement with each song, and the band would then underline his points with yet another of their churning dance tunes. The crowd fed the energy back to the band from the packed dance floor, and by the end of the concert the wall between the stage and audience dissolved as handfuls of fans clambered up to sing along with the band's keynote song, "Homicide." It was truly a spectacle to remember.

999's show at Dooley's came as part of the band's current 57-plus date tour of the U.S. their third since Cash and lead guitarist Guy Days formed the band in 1976. Since they get no more airplay here than they do in their native England ("the BBC takes aversion to some of our lyrics," Cash quipped before the show), 999 has been attempting to build up an audience here by word-ofmouth and concert appearances across the country. Judging by the reaction Monday, it's a scheme that just might work. The band released its debut album, 999, during the initial heyday of punk rock, and by Cash's own estimation "it was basically just bash-bash-bash." The follow-up Separates gave the band a Top 40 English hit with "Homicide," although it got virtually no airplay to support it, and a slightly different version of that album became their first American release. Their latest LP, The Biggest Prize In Sport, shows the band placing more em-phasis on vocals and developing their twin-guitar approach without diluting any of their aggression. The new material is their catchiest to date, and the songs formed the bulk of their

While their set spanned their career from their debut single "I'm Alive" on, 999 sounded best when they rose above their "bash-bash" beginnings. (That this didn't happen as much as the new album would suggest didn't seem to faze many people in the audience, most of whom were content to thrive off the sheer energy of the band.) Consequently, songs from the new album like "Boys In The Gang," "Hollywood," "Stranger," "Fun Thing," and the title track stood out as highlights along with "Homicide," which the

'Simon' a supreme American satire

By WILLIAM BARNHARDT State News Reviewer

Simon (Orion Pictures; at the Campus Theatre), starring Alan Arkin and Madeline Kahn, roars its irreverent way through a well-paced and fascinating satire of pompous intelligentsia and American trifles and lifestyles. The film is successful in an intelligent and distinctive way, which must please its writer and director Marshall Brickman (ex-writing partner of Woody Allen) being that this is his "breakaway" film, the beginning of his own

What if someone told you that a group of five super-geniuses was controlling the day-to-day trivia of American lives? Well, that's the basis of Simon. These diabolical men (who succeeded with their "Nixon Substitution Plan" and their attempt to control the Nielson rating tallies in an attempt to perpetuate Donny and Marie) now figure the time is right to bring an extra-terrestial to the United States just to see what havoc they can wreak. A slightly screwball college professor named Simon is their target. Their plan: lure him to their institute, brainwash him, and convince him and the world he's an extra-terrestial. After seducing him there with Swarthmore-Johns Hopkins-Cambridge-Sorbonne graduate Madeline Kahn, the brainwashing is complete and an incomparably silly sequence transpires, where we watch Simon evolve from slime to civilized man (by way of a Space Odyssey monkey-discovers-tools take-off) and rediscover his alien conception.

Well, from here Simon starts taking himself too seriously. He views his role as the friendly messiah, here to correct the world from intolerances we take for granted, i.e., Hawaiian music in lobbies and elevators, ketchup in stupid plastic packages, hot-air driers instead of towels in restrooms, paper bands around toilet seats in hotel bathrooms, etc. Once he escapes the Pentagon and the military (Fred Gwynne stupendously plays a 100 percent army general) Simon takes up with a TV-worshiping cult (their bible is the TV Guide, their hymns are TV ads, their cult members talk in advertising phrases) and they become his followers. Then through the marvel of technology, Simon rides the network carrier waves and speaks his philosophy to the masses coast-to-coast, a la Howard Beale.

It's fascinating to note the similarities in Simon to Brickman's former Woody Allen colaborations. There are some similar touches: classical music through the chase scenes, carefully placed, never-fail one-liners, borderline credibility, and occasional sojourns into abject silliness. But there are many distinct elements to Brickman's style. Simon is more intellectual, more name-droppingly elitist than most Allen films; it also has less of the non-stop rapid-fire comedy in favor of a quieter, more thoughtful humor. Give him a little time to develop this individuality and we may find Brickman among the top original American filmmakers.

This film has got one of the most unusual "biggest laughs" for any comedy I've ever seen. After all the talk and harangue about muzak and Hawaiian elevator music, Simon eventually enters a NASA gantry elevator and the audience gets to hear a few seconds of some God-awful easy listening tropical island samba. It tore the house apart, listening to that inane synthesized TRASH spryly riding on every nerve in the audience. Outside of that musical interlude, and the many classical backdrops from Mozart to Ravel, there is a marvelous disjunct ragtime score by Stanley Silverman. Simon is a refreshing hundred minutes of devious humor, as intelligent a film comedy as there's been in some time. (Be sure to go at the last minute so you can miss those miserable unfunny Walter Lantz cartoons the Campus Theatre is unmercifully showing at each film presentation).

999 rocks

(continued from page 6) get dates. Well, these guys not only named themselves after THE msot useless piece of clothing ever invented, their lead singer, Leonard Graves Phillips, actually wears one on stage. Sans shirt. He also .. wore gorilla mask, a Chiquita banana hat, played a musical cave-man's club, and impregnated a blow-up love doll, all in space of about a half an hour. No mean feat.

Musically the Dickies are famous (infamous) for their high-speed brand of Vegematic Rock, and especially for their hilarious mutilations of those songs - you've - heard - so many - times - that - you'd rather - throw - up - than - have to listen to them again. "Sounds of Silence," Black Sabbath's "Paranoid," the Moody Blues' "Nights In White Satin," "Eve of Destruction," and the theme song from The Banana Splits Show were all given the same treatment, shoved in one end of their musical blender and reduced to something that sounded like Gerber's Strained Peas And Carrots, only louder.

True, there were a few musical moments - Chuck Wagon's sax solo being the only one I can remember - but for the most part their show was memorable more for Phillips' non-stop wise-cracking (and the fact that my ears were bleeding afterwards) than for any real musical merits. The high point of their set came when East Lansing's Mystery Gene Simmons Clone joined the band for an encore of Kiss' "Rock 'n Roll All Night." Now that's punk!

Sarah Vaughan to perform Tuesday

Sarah Vaughan, whose four-octave voice has belted out jazz, classical, pop and gospel tunes for more than 30 years, will appear in concert at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday, April 8, in the MSU Auditorium.

Born in Newark, N.J., Vaughan began her musical training at the age of 7 with piano and organ lessons. When she was 16, she won a cash award and a week long performance opportunity as first prize in a New York City amateur competition.

At that time, Vaughan got the chance to meet one of her early inspirations, Ella Eckstine, who recommended her to band leader Earl Hines. He hired Vaughan as a singer and pianist with Eckstine continuing as band vocalist.

After working with Hines, Vaughan and Eckstine formed their own band, bringing in musicians such as Dizzy Gillespie and Charles Parker and developing a whole new style of music called bebob.

Vaughan eventually went on to star with her own group of musicians, a trio with whom she recorded one of her first hits, "Shulie A Bop," in the early 1950s. Television personality Dave Garroway gave Vaughan radio and television exposure after hearing her perform in Chicago.

Sirloin

Vaughan has recently appeared with the Oakland Symphony, Tulsa Philharmonic, Boston Pops, Los Angeles Philharmonic and Count Basie's orchestra. Early in 1979 she presented four standing-room-only concerts in Carnegie Hall. She has also performed for Presidents Ford and Carter and French President Valery

Giscard D-Estaing. Vaughan replaces Harry Belafonte, who recently canceled his tour, in Lecture-Concert Series season's Broadway Series. Series ticket holders may use their Belafonte tickets for this new event or may obtain refunds by mail or in person from the MSU Union ticket office. Tickets for the Vaughan concert are $6, $9.50 and $12.50, half price for full-time MSU students.

Laxers at home in loop opener

By WILL KOWALSKI

State News Sports Writer The MSU lacrosse team will play its first Midwest Lacrosse Association game at home Saturday against Oberlin (Ohio) College, and coaches Nevin Kanner and Boku Hendrickson both expect big things.

Tomorrow's game will begin at 2 p.m. in Spartan Stadium. Playing without the services of top scorer Kevin Willitts Wednesday in Albion, the laxers literally fought off a very physical Albion College squad and won 10-5.

Kanner said he believes playing without Willitts but still winning by a decisive margin helps the Spartans in many ways going into tomorrow's battle.

"IT DEFINITELY PUT a lot of pressure on the rest of the team without Willitts out there because you can always count on Kevin for about five points a game," Kanner said.

"But by winning, the team proved to itself that if they played hard together, as a team, then they too could score some goals and win some games on their own."

Willitts, a second-year veterinary medicine student, was unable to travel with the team because of a lab he could not miss. Also missing the game were starters Pat Smith, who also had a lab, and Ken Horan, sidelined with tendinitis.

BUT EVEN WITH Willitts and Smith back in uniform for Oberlin, Kanner expects a very close game. "We are going to have to play good defense and stay with them offensively because they have the ability to erupt at anytime," Kanner said.

"I think the big factor is going to be our ability to control ground balls and faceoffs. If we can take care of those aspects and keep our intensity high as we did against Albion then we should come out

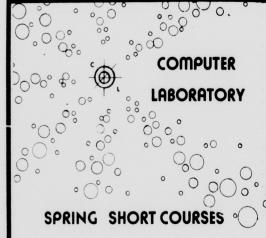

Kanner praised his players' ability to control themselves in the rugged Albion game and hopes his laxers maintain their composure against Oberlin as well.

"Albion was a very physical, hard-hitting team and I'd even go as far as to say that some of their hits were quite questionable,' Kanner said, "But we kept our tempers down, and as it usually turns out, the team that keeps their heads in a game like that wins.'

THE SPARTANS NEVER trailed against Albion after Duane Andersen put the laxers out on top early in the first period with a tally set up by Jim Goldrick.

Scores by Mark Pinto, Art Barry and Brian Gaggin, and two by Goldrick gave the laxers a 6-2 halftime lead, and Pinto, Barry, Jay Hungerford and Greg Brinkman all put the ball in the net in the third quarter to finish the Spartans' balanced scoring attack. Gaining assists were Greg Halgamoe and Shawn Grady with two apiece and Hungerford with one.

Freshman goaltender Jim Sanford was not tested much in the game and made only 12 saves.

THE FIVE EARNED their spots in the lineup by having solid scores when the team was on its trip South over spring break. Monty James, a transfer from the University of Tulsa, and returnees Tom Mase and Rick Grover are no surprises.

But the two freshmen, Rob Haidler and Mike Thomsen, are. They both shot in the upper 70s to wrest two spots away from five others competing from spots: Herrick, Steve Lubbers, Dave Belen, Wayne Benson and Mike Medo-

"The players representing us in the Marshall tournament earned that right by their play on the Southern trip," Fossum said. "But all of the other five were just a hair behind."

How will Fossum determine his lineup — usually six players but just five for this tournament only - from here on?

"OUR REGULAR FORMAT will be to exempt the top two or three players after each tournament from our team playoffs during the week," the coach said. "This forces concentration

The MSU men's tennis team will open its regular season with two dual meets this weekend, but Stan Drobac may have to use a patchwork lineup.

Two Spartans, and possibly a third, will not see action when MSU hosts Big Ten rivals Purdue University today and University of Illinois Saturday. Both matchups will be at the Racquet Club of Lansing, at 3 p.m. and 1 p.m., respectively.

Drobac, starting his 23rd season as Spartan coach, says freshman Francisco Amaya and sophomore Mike Klemm are out with injuries sustained earlier this week.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) - Olympic officials and Mayor Tom Bradley have reacted with dismay to a suggestion by GOP presidential front-runner Ronald Reagan the United States not only boycott the Moscow Olympics but also cancel the 1984 Los Angeles games.

"I am disappointed that Ronald Reagan is not displaying a greater sense of pride and patriotism in this country's plans to host the Olympic Games in 1984," said Los Angeles Mayor Tom

"The summer games will be an outstanding opportunity to show America's best face to the world."

The Los Angeles Times reported Thursday Reagan, after spending a week contemplating the matter, has decided to support President Carter's call for a boycott of the Moscow Olympics. He further suggested that all future Olympics, including the 1984 games scheduled for Los Angeles, be held in Greece where they

Reagan said in a statement he thinks it would be wrong for Carter to use coercive measures to prevent American athletes from going to Moscow, but expressed confidence the athletes would voluntarily comply if Carter appeals to their "sense of duty to their country and to freedom."

"I believe also that many of the political problems that plague the Olympics would be eliminated by permanently moving them back to their historic home, Greece," Reagan said. "We could begin the process by foregoing the 1984 Olympics in the United States."

Bradley, citing many contractual obligations entered into by the city, called Reagan's idea "impractical." He said American citizens and athletes "deserve the opportunity" to host the 1984 summer

Peter V. Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, said the idea of moving the games to Greece has been considered in the past and always rejected.

"I am disappointed that Mr. Reagan did not consider the political instability of Greece, which historically does not seem to be the best site," Ueberroth said.

TMI causing 'false worries'

By JAMES H. RUBIN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - A congressional subcommittee said Thursday the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant a year ago has caused unfounded worries about nuclear energy.

"The greatest harm from the Three Mile Island accident was its severe emotional impact on an ill-informed and easily frightened public, especially near the plant," said Rep. Mike McCormack, D-Wash., chairperson of the subcommittee.

"This emotional damage was severely aggravated by the continued sensation treatment of the story by much of the press and media.'

The report was sharply criticized by two members of the panel, Reps. Howard Wolpe, D-Mich., and Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y.

THEY SAID THE report was "a classic example of blaming the victim. The major recommendations of the report sidestep the issue of nuclear

"According to the report, it is an uninformed public, rather than the accident at Three Mile Island, that is to be blamed for the present widespread concern about the competence of the nuclear industry and the adequacy of nuclear safety regulation.

The energy subcommittee of the House Committee on Science and Technology said, "although it may not have been apparent to the public at the time of the accident, a disaster was never imminent," at Three Mile Island near Harrisburg, stressed the need for new safeguards in the nuclear power industry.

Last January, a report prepared for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said similar accidents could happen at a number of plants and recommended future nuclear installations be built at least 10 miles from any city.

LIKE AN EARLIER report by a presidential commission, it also urged replacing the NRC with a single administrator. And it said licensing procedures should be tightened before any new plants are approved for construction.

The McCormack subcommittee report, however, said "continued delay in licensing of new plants is beyond that necessary to assure the adequate safety of nuclear power plants."

In their dissent, Wolpe and Ottinger said the report depended almost exclusively on nuclear power advocates who testified before the panel.

Wolpe and Ottinger also said the report would further damage public confidence in the objectivity of Congress.

McCormack told a news conference that radioactivity which escaped from the Three Mile Island plant was so minimal that there is far more background radiation in other parts of the country.

LAWMAKERS, WHO HAVE denounced the EPA policy as "blackmail," insisted that the bill include provisions calling for a suit against the agency.

The issue of who will pay for the testing system had been a key sticking point between the House and Senate, which had each approved its own version of the bill.

The House would have limited the charge to $3 per motorist, forcing taxpayers statewide to underwrite the rest of the cost. An initial conference committee accepted that plan, but its proposal was defeated.

SOME DETROIT LAWMAKERS were keenly disappointed when the second conference committee accepted a measure which could place a greater burden on the drivers themselves.

"If you're willing to tax the poor to death, go ahead — that's not fair and it's not responsible," said Rep. Joseph Young, D-Detroit. "I have to weigh these considerations against the number of jobs involved - particularly those for the poor," said Rep. William

'While this bill is not everything we wanted, it's the best we're

SLICES 5 BILLION FROM BUDGET

Senate: cut revenue sharing

By ROBERT PARRY

Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON Senate Budget Committee voted Thursday to eliminate federal revenue sharing for states and cut the federal bureaucracy by 5 percent across the board as it neared completion of a balanced 1981 budget.

The votes continued the committee's pattern of making deep cuts in domestic programs to cover defense spending increases that exceed President Carter's $150.5 billion request by more than $5 billion.

Despite the higher defense outlays, the panel was almost certain to join Carter and the House Budget Committee in proposing a balanced budget for fiscal 1981, which starts Oct.

IF APPROVED BY the full House and Senate, it would be the first balanced federal budget in 12 years.

In drafting the Senate committee's guns-over-butter budget, a coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats repeatedly overturned the posi-favored lower Muskie defense spending and less severe cuts in domestic programs than the panel approved.

Last month, the House Budget Committee proposed a $611.8 billion 1981 budget that also contained less money for defense and more for domestic programs than the Senate committee's version.

On Monday, Carter issued a revised version of his 1981 spending plan, calling for $611.8 billion in spending. He issued a $615.8 billion budget in January, which was rewritten in an effort to curb inflation.

IN ITS PROPOSED budget, the Senate panel voted to:

• Eliminate Saturday mail delivery, saving $600 million, a step also supported by the House committee. Carter's proposed $250 million reduction in the postal subsidy would have avoided an end to Saturday mail.

• Phase out 200,000 CETA public service jobs, a cut of $600 million. Carter and the House · Cut the food stamp program by $1 billion, much more than the House and Carter favored.

• End $500 million in Social Security benefits, such as burial payments and college student benefits.

• Save $100 million by delaying Carter's new youth training program for one year.

• Reduce mass transit and rail programs by $400 million below Muskie's recommen-

• Trim student loan programs by $300 million below

• Cut $100 million from urban aid grants.

• Terminate the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration grant program to save $110 million, a position favored by both Carter and the House

MEANWHILE, SENATE committee proposal to cut by 5 percent all the administrative functions of the federal government would save an additional $2.9 billion. An end to the state portion of federal revenue sharing, a proposal backed by Carter and the House committee, would cut another $1.7 billion from the budget.

The conservative trend of the committee apparently discouraged liberals from even raising a Carter proposal by provide $500 million in "transitional" relief for cities hurt by the end of state revenue sharing. That proposal was defeated twice by the House Budget Committee.

After action by the full House and Senate, the two versions of the budget will go to a confercommittee where differences will be reconciled.

Graduate exam copies available

Students who took the Graduate Record Examinations Aptitude Test in January are the first group to be able to obtain a copy of the test and the correct test answers.

Sample tests have been available in the past years but the actual test and complete answers have never been released immediately following the exam.

The answers are being released because the New York State Admissions Testing Law requires the release of test questions and answer sheets, said Alfred S. Sussman, chairperson of the GRE Board.

"We felt it was unfair to the other students not to provide them with the answers," he said, explaining why the results

Sussman pointed out that releasing the exam answers could lower the quality of the exams.

He added that some board members opposed releasing the answers because test questions were often reused when writing new tests. Releasing the answers would provide students the questions and correct answers.

The number of test questions is limited and "it is risky to think that new methods (of designing test questions) will be developed," Sussman said.

The GRE has received only 250 requests for the test materials from the 40,000 students who took the test worldwide and Sussman attributes this to a lack of interest. He said most people see no benefit in examining the test after

Toxic substance lab expands

By DAVE VARGA State News Staff Writer

The Michigan Department of Agriculture's toxic substance laboratory on campus is expanding to make room for more testing equipment.

Construction of two additional rooms; is expected to be completed by June 1 at a cost of said Donald $344,000. Muentener, chief of the laboratory division of the Department of Agriculture.

The Geagley Laboratory, 1615 S. Harrison Road, is the state of Michigan's center for testing and analyzing dangerous substances in food and other materials.

The laboratory addition has been incorrectly labeled a dioxine lab, said Wendell Brewbaker, supervisor of the chemical labs. It should instead be called a toxic substance lab.

DIOXINES ARE EX-TREMELY dangerous and flammable byproducts of chemicals. They are also very rare, Brewbaker said.

They can be detected by a mass spectrometer in this lab, but for detection of minute amounts the substance must be sent out of state to be analyzed with a high-resolution mass spectrometer, Brewbaker said.

Brewbaker said he has worked as a chemist for the state since 1946 and has sent only two samples of alleged dioxines for further testing and both were found negative.

"We're in the consumer protection business," he said. "We are continually checking and testing the Michigan food

The laboratory has acquired its second Finnigan Mass Spectrometer, which can detect compounds such as dioxines in minute amounts.

Also acquired was the lab's third liquid chromatograph, used for detection in liquids, which will be also housed in one of the new rooms.

examine food, chemicals, pesticides, liquor, poisons, fertilizers and other materials.

Worries about the safety of the environment in the area of the laboratory are unfounded, Mueuntener said.

"People are concerned about themselves and the environment," he said, "but we're concerned about our analysts.
