Fla. 'tent city' for Cubans

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer

KEY WEST, Fla. — Federal officials made preparations Thursday to airlift homeless Cuban refugees to a "tent city" at Eglin Air Force Base and detained 25 immigrants suspected of being criminals in their homeland.

Boats manned by Cuban-Americans continued to stream into South Florida ports after pickups at the port of Mariel in Cuba. The Coast Guard estimated that 7,500 refugees had arrived in Florida since the "Freedom Float" began last week — more than double the number the United States said it would take when the Cuban government announced it would give exit rights to 10,000 people who crowded the Peruvian embassy.

The Coast Guard said 85 boats carrying nearly 1,300 refugees had arrived since midnight Wednesday.

Huge crowds of Cubans gathered in Revolutionary Plaza in Havana for a May Day rally at which Havana Radio said Cuban leader Fidel Castro would denounce those who were leaving as "parasites, delinquents and bums."

A Coast Guard cutter was en route to a Greek freighter with three refugees aboard that ran aground about 80 miles east of Key West after radioing Wednesday night that it was chased by a Cuban patrol boat, according to Coast Guard Commander Samuel Dennis. The ship, the Eurochamp, reported that it was fired upon, but Dennis said he believed the shots were warnings.

U.S. officials said there was no end in sight to the refugee exodus.

"I believe that there are now as many as 3,000 boats at Mariel or en route to Mariel... there seems to be no let up," Dennis said.

Calm Caribbean seas — a sharp contrast to last weekend's "baby hurricane" that claimed at least four lives — have improved safety, Dennis said. Coast Guard cutters patrolling the 90 miles between Florida and Cuba were being helped by U.S. Navy ships, which were diverted from scheduled war games.

Refugees will be airlifted beginning no later than today to Eglin Air Force Base in North Florida, where a processing center is being set up, officials said. There they will be screened for criminal records, according to testimony before the House Judiciary Committee in Washington by Victor Palmieri, the president's coordinator for refugee affairs.

Refugees with relatives in the United States could then go to live with them, while those without family in the United States would be able to use temporary housing at Eglin, Palmieri said.

Mission leader: 'abort attempt'

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON — Co. Charles Beckwith, the tough-talking Army commando leader, said Thursday he recommended — without hesitation — the cancellation of last week's hostage rescue raid in Iran because the breakdown of three helicopters made it too risky.

Surfacing for the first time since the mission was scrapped, Beckwith made clear he had no doubts his recommendation was correct, although he obviously was disappointed that long months of preparation were wasted.

The 51-year-old commander of the 90-man Army-Marine commando strike force bristled when asked about reports he wanted to proceed with the mission even though he had only five usable helicopters, one below what planners had fixed as a safe minimum.

"I'm not about to be a party to a half-assed loading of a bunch of aircraft and going up and murdering a bunch of fine soldiers," Beckwith told Pentagon reporters.

Dressed in civilian slacks, an open-collared blue shirt and a gold jacket, Beckwith said everything went smoothly up to the point where the commandos arrived at a lonely desert position for refueling, although he had heard on the radio of the C-130 transport plane in which he was riding that two of eight helicopters had dropped out.

Then, he said, he was told by the pilot of one of the helicopters at the desert staging site that the machine would not fly. This helicopter, it has been said, had developed hydraulic problems.

Beckwith said he quickly conferred with the overall commander on the scene, an Air Force colonel, and said: "My recommendation is to abort."

His recommendation was the crucial one because he would lead the next critical stages of the operation — movement of his commandos from the desert to a mountain hideout about 100 miles from Tehran, and then, the next night, into the city by truck to try to snatch 53 American hostages from their armed captors.

Beckwith said there was "a little discussion" with the Air Force colonel in charge, who asked him if he would consider going on with only five helicopters.

"I considered this for a few seconds and then replied, 'No way,'" Beckwith said.

He stressed "it was planned that if we didn't have sufficient helicopters, we'd abort."

Beckwith has been kept under

Ill. lawmaker speaks at 'U' on campaign

By RUSS HUMPHREY
State News Staff Writer

Independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson said Thursday he will win the presidency because a new group of voters — "the alienated" — support his candidacy.

"Many skeptics say my candidacy is 'mission impossible,'" Anderson told about 4,000 in the MSU Auditorium. "But I say no."

He said 53 percent of registered voters do not normally go to the polls. But this year "the alienated, those that have dropped out because they feel the system doesn't work", will vote because 1980 is a "critical year" for the future of the United States.

"That's why young people are interested in the campaign," he said. "Their future is involved."

Anderson said he will give the country "new inspiration" for economic growth and government leadership. He called the Republican front-runner a person that "stands for the past and not for the future," and said a presidential winner must look to the future.

Anderson called for student help in gathering enough signatures this weekend so his name will be placed on the general election ballot in November.

His supporters need 18,399 registered voters, at least 100 signatures from each congressional district, to sign petitions before the May 5 deadline. The petitions will "Congressman Anderson is on the ground. He is on his way to MSU," the candidate's advance person said trying to control the restless crowd.

Meanwhile, in the lobby of the MSU Auditorium, police radios crackled with reports of the candidate's progress across Lansing.

Police and some members of the press were unperturbed about the delay. Secret Service personnel had informed them two days earlier of a probable delay due to scheduling difficulties.

But the anxious crowd of 3,800 inside the auditorium and the 400 or so waiting outside, grew increasingly impatient waiting for Anderson. The man of the hour was an hour late.

ANDERSON'S WARM-UP act, the Bluegrass Extension Service, reached deep into its repertoire in an effort to soothe the crowd, much of which had been waiting since the doors opened at 2 p.m.

As the afternoon wore on, however, the band found itself dodging paper airplanes as well as verbal taunts. The crowd, responding several times to false alarms that the candidate was backstage, eventually gave standing ovations, reserved earlier for Anderson, to the equipment man dismantling the band's microphone.

One member of the audience, sitting in the section reserved for the press, remained unusually quiet during the wait. He did not stay unrecognized for long however, as people soon began asking for the autograph of Norman Lear, a well-known television producer who is one of Anderson's strongest supporters.

Although Anderson spoke for only about 20 minutes followed by a short question and answer session, the crowd's reaction was generally favorable.

"Every time I've heard him speak its just confirmed my decision," said Jill Job, a sophomore in James Madison College. "I'd hate to see it

Carter registration proposal stalls in committee for a day

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Carter's draft registration plan came to the brink of a key vote in a Senate committee Thursday, but opponents managed a one-day stall by insisting that supporters show up to vote for it.

The Senate Appropriations Committee is to meet again on the matter Friday. The panel is the last stop for the plan before it goes to the Senate floor.

Opponents of the plan — who blocked Thursday's action by objecting that a majority of committee members were not present — join supporters in predicting the panel will approve registration of young men when it comes to a vote.

"We don't have the votes, but they don't have a quorum," said David Landau, spokesperson for an anti-registration group.

Carter's plan, to begin registration this summer of young men aged 19 and 20, already has been approved by the House. The president requested that women be included as well, but the House rejected that idea.

Opponents of registration turned out in force at the Senate committee meeting, while most of the panel members supporting registration were absent.

Backers of the plan had intended to vote by proxy, and had given their votes to John Stennis, D-Miss.

However, Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., the committee's chairperson, ruled that members should be present to cast their votes.

The committee is considering whether to spend $13.3 million to start registration this summer.

Hatfield proposed an amendment to cut the amount to $4.7 million — enough only to upgrade Selective Service's computers and to prepare for registration after the president had ordered a mobilization in an emergency. That amendment was still pending when the committee recessed.

Hatfield argued advance registration, without a draft, "won't bring one warm body into the military." He said the lists of registrants would quickly become outdated as young people left home for jobs and school.

Stennis said registration was not a scheme to bring back a draft, although he said a draft probably would be needed. He said registration would "clean up some thinking on the part of young fellows, and more of them will volunteer" for the military.

Alumni association denied use of University's computer

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

The MSU Alumni Association has been denied access to the University's computer, at least temporarily, Alumni Association President Jack Kinney said Thursday.

"I got the word yesterday (Wednesday) verbally," Kinney said. "I want to know on paper what it means."

Kinney said he received the news from Joseph Dickinson, vice president for University development.

According to Kinney, Dickinson said the action stemmed from an appeals court ruling last week that MSU could refuse to release student lists to protect a person's right to privacy.

He added he expects written clarification from Dickinson soon.

DICKINSON COULD NOT be reached for comment Thursday.

Kinney said the policy could be a "great hardship" on the alumni association because it uses the computer to get addresses of non-members for recruiting.

"If we can't get the (computer) printout, that precludes us from contacting non-members and asking them to join us," Kinney said.

"I guess I'm a little puzzled," Kinney added, noting other universities do not seem to have the same problem.

James Nelson, director of administration for the alumni association, said they had paid the University more than $13,000 for use of the computer since the alumni association became independent last July.

Nelson added the University and the alumni association had split the cost to develop the computer program in which information from alumni association membership applications were fed into the computer for the University's records.

THE UNIVERSITY AND the 33,000 member association have been at odds since February when MSU president Cecil Mackey asked Kinney to resign.

Although the association became independent by a vote of the MSU Board of Trustees, the board reversed its position in a November vote, saying the association should be part of the University.

At stake is the amount of control the University president should have over the association. According to a list of recommendations made by Mackey, the University president should have the power to fire the president of the alumni association as well as have editorial control over the alumni magazine.

However, at last month's meeting of the Alumni Association Executive

Soviets celebrate May Day

MOSCOW (AP) — Masses of flag-waving Soviet workers filed past their leaders and across Red Square in May Day celebrations Thursday, but the ambassadors of at least 16 nations boycotted the celebration in protest of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

As if in response to the diplomatic boycott, the Soviets paraded a float about Afghanistan, depicting an outraged world public carrying a sign — written in English — reading "Chinese — American Conspirators — Hands Off Afghanistan."

A sign in Russian read: "Stop the Interference of Imperialistic Forces in Afghanistan."

The Soviet troops entered neighboring Afghanistan last December to help the country's Marxist government fight anti-communist Moslem Afghan rebels.

Pope begins tour of Africa

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II embarks today on a grueling 10-day tour of six African countries in a journey described by Vatican officials as the most important evangelical mission by a pontiff in recent times.

The church in Africa, despite certain frictions created in the process of expansion, is still a growing church and the Holy Father's main concern is to consolidate the gains and to further spread the faith," said a Vatican official who will accompany the pontiff.

The pope has called Africa a continent "ripe for the harvest" and said the main objective of his trip is to stimulate the "harmonious" growth of the Christian faith there.

Africa is a major area for Roman Catholic missionaries, who sometimes vie with Moslems to convert its pagans.

FTC goes out of business

WASHINGTON (AP) — Enmeshed in a new government policy of no-money no-work, the Federal Trade Commission went out of business Thursday, waiting for Congress to provide funds to restore its life.

The FTC's 1,750 employees in Washington and 10 regional offices showed up for work anyway, but there was no guarantee that they would be paid and their efforts were restricted officially to closing down the agency.

Four blocks east of FTC headquarters, in the Capitol, a bill to transfer $7.6 million from a State Department appropriation to the FTC waited to be called up for consideration in the House of Representatives.

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill seemed in no hurry to put the emergency appropriation to a vote, saying only that the House would continue its scheduled work. The money would keep the FTC going for another 30 days.

Saudis to raise oil prices

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Saudi Arabia, the largest OPEC member, is expected to raise crude oil prices at the cartel's special oil ministers' meeting next week, the Saudi newspaper Al-Madina was quoted as saying Thursday.

The Gulf News Agency also quoted the daily newspaper as saying Saudi Arabia will call on other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to cut crude oil prices to restore order the the cartel's chaotic pricing system.

The special meeting is set for May 7 in the Saudi Arabian city of Taif. It was called to take up a proposal by the Saudis and five other countries to link oil price increases to inflation, currency-market fluctuations and economic growth in the West.

Prime lending rate down

NEW YORK (AP) — Several of the nation's largest banks, including top-ranked Bank of America, reduced their prime lending rates to 18 and one-half percent Thursday, signaling widespread acceptance of the trend toward lower rates.

Although three of the country's biggest banks had dropped their rates to the 18 and one-half percent mark earlier this week, Thursday's cuts — led by No. 3 Chase Manhattan Bank — marked the first large-scale move below the prevailing rates of 19 and one-half percent and 19 percent.

Bank officials said they lowered their prime rates as much as one full point because reductions in other kinds of interest rates have made it less expensive for them to acquire money for loans. Others said they wanted to make loans more attractive to businesses worried about recession.

In addition to Bank of America and Chase, others reducing their rates included No. 4 Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., No. 8 Bankers Trust Co. and No. 14 Irving Trust Co., all based in New York.

Drug abuse insurance needed, official says

By MATT PERRY
State News Staff Writer

Health insurance for substance abuse treatment is one way of offsetting proposed funding cuts in the state Office of Substance Abuse Services, said an administrator of the State Advisory Commission on Substance Abuse.

Ken Eaton, who appeared at a public forum held by the Eaton/Ingham Substance Abuse Commission Wednesday, said statewide reductions in substance abuse services will harm other social service programs.

The bi-county commission, one of 30 coordinating agencies in Michigan, held the forum with area service groups to discuss a proposed 38 percent reduction in state funds and suggestions to ease those effects.

Substance abuse includes alcoholism, narcotics addiction and prescription drug abuse.

Eaton said one way to collect revenue to continue substance abuse services would be to raise the liquor tax or give a higher percentage of the tax to substance abuse services.

ANOTHER SOLUTION IS to ask for legislation that would require health insurance to provide for substance abuse services, Eaton said.

At present, Eaton said, state taxes cover the services of the Office of Substance Abuse Services. If the state required all health insurance programs to cover substance abuse treatment, he said, funds for the services could be raised while relieving some of the dependence on tax revenues.

When asked about the controversy of having insurance cover drug addicts, Eaton said, it was a matter of pay now or pay later.

If insurance does not cover it now, more expensive coverage, such as hospitalization and unemployment, would result later. He stressed it was much less expensive to pay for substance abuse treatment than to pay for its counterparts: welfare, child abuse and family counseling.

Eaton said other information around the state showed that offsetting the cutbacks can be done by consolidating with existing programs at area hospitals.

EATON SAID THE budgets for social services, correction and education were all increasing, while the Office of Substance Abuse Services faced an $8 million cut. Lobbying efforts to maintain substance abuse funds will be presented to the Legislature in two months, he added.

Becky Hollingsworth, executive director of East Lansing's Drug Education Center, said the cuts may restrict information distributed to the community.

Services most likely to be first cut include speaking engagements, counseling and published information, Hollingsworth said.

Robert Davis, chairperson of the Ingham/Eaton Substance Abuse Commission, said the 13 area divisions may be forced to reduce preventive services.

Prevention usually takes the form of talking to community members, especially school children, about problems with drugs.

'U' students polled prefer term system

By JIM MITZELFELD
State News Staff Writer

Students at MSU support the current term system by a 2-1 margin over the proposed semester change, according to a phone survey taken of 42 students by ASMSU.

Of the students polled, 64 percent favored the term system, 31 percent said they would prefer the change, and 5 percent were undecided.

Fifty-two percent said they did not feel they had received enough information at the present time to judge between the two calendar systems.

Nineteen percent said they would leave MSU if the University changed over to the semester system, though 20 percent were undecided on that question.

ORIGINALLY ASMSU CHAIRPERSON Bruce Studer had said ASMSU would poll 81 students, but of those 81 that were called only 42 responded. Studer admitted that ASMSU would probably get some slack since they only polled 42 of MSU's 46,000 students.

"People unfamiliar with the structure of a scientific poll will complain," Studer said. "It may be a small number, but it's still significant."

"Gallop and CBS accept the results of a 1,600 sample of 40 million," Studer said.

Studer said the poll was conducted in a scientific manner, and that by random sampling, an accurate cross section was obtained.

The poll included seven freshmen, eight sophomores, 10 juniors, nine seniors, and eight graduate students.

The only class level that supported the change to a semester system was the graduate. The students favored the semester system by 72 percent.

MEANWHILE THE JUNIOR class, which was the only group that overwhelmingly thought it had enough information to make a decision on the change, said it favored the current term system by 80 percent.

More than 70 percent of the freshmen and sophomores said they did not feel they had enough information to decide on the change. In addition, the freshman class was split on whether or not it favored the semester or term system.

Role of nurse expanding; stereotypes not accurate

By LESA DOLL
State News Staff Writer

The role of the nurse is continually expanding from the image of the physician's subservient assistant to a independent, competent health care professional.

This message is a major issue the nurses at Olin Health Center are conveying during National Nurses Week, which ends Saturday.

Sue Bickert, a registered nurse at Olin and the head of the Nursing Action Committee there, indicated many of the stereotypes people hold of nurses are no longer accurate.

"Nursing used to be a subservient role," Bickert said. "It is no longer that. It's a parallel role. We are a branch of medical service."

BICKERT SAID THAT when she was attending nursing school in the 1960s student nurses were taught to stand up and offer a chair for physicians when they walked into a room. She said nurses also did only what the doctor told them to do.

"The nurse (was) handmaiden to the physician," she said. "If they didn't say that, it was implied."

The role of the nurse has now expanded to become more individual and medically beneficial, said Jeannette Milam, head nurse at Olin.

"We followed the doctor's orders," she said. "We did what the doctor said. Today she (the nurse) acts on her own."

Milam explained the nurse actually spends more time with the patient than the doctor does. In this relationship, the doctors and nurses should enhance each other, she said.

"It's always nurses that are there making the movement," said Marge Sorrell, an Olin nurse. "It's usually the nurse that's there right beside the patient."

MILAM SAID THE nurse makes decisions and is important in the implementation of health care. (continued on page 16)

Book aids Econ. students

By BILL CORNISH

If writing a term paper makes you scream in agony because all the books are gone from the Library, your typewriter ribbon died and your roommate kicked you out, perhaps two MSU faculty members and a Lansing Community College coordinator can help.

So You Have to Write an Economics Term Paper, a book by MSU professor of economics Lawrence H. Officer, MSU associate professor of economics Daniel H. Saks, and Judith A. Saks, coordinator of student publications at LCC, was published April 24 by MSU's graduate school of business administration.

The book was written for non-economics as well as economics students, Officer said, but the term papers used in the book are from economics classes — hence the title.

The first half of the 149-page paperback explains how to write a term paper, while the last half includes several papers written by MSU economics students.

The book was written with readability in mind, Officer said, and is oriented to undergraduate students.

NONE OF THE authors is making a profit, he said, because the book was written as a public service. MSU is financing the project.

"I want MSU professors to assign more papers," Officer said. All students should know how to write competently before they graduate, he added.

The book explains how to find a topic, how to analyze it, how to do library research, how to prepare footnotes and bibliographies, and how to prepare the final copy.

SEVEN OF THE best economics term papers from the last nine years provide examples of how to write a term paper, Officer said. The papers were taken from the MSU (continued on page 13)

Headstones vandalized

Several headstones, marking the graves of Lansing's original settlers, have been severely damaged by vandals.

The vandalism occurred in the North Cemetery named after the North family, which still has descendants living in Lansing and the surrounding community, said Phil Dorland, assistant director of Lansing parks.

Some of the stones were almost 100 years old, he said. He said the vandalism, which probably occurred in late winter or early spring, was discovered by local residents who had been complaining about young people partying in the cemetery.

Many of the stones can be repaired, Dorland said, but added it would be obvious they were damaged.

A huge setback for diplomacy

The resignation of Cyrus Vance following the fiasco in Iran resulted in more than a sharp drop of the dollar in world markets; it signifies a dangerous drift in American foreign policy orientation. Vance, regarded by many as the only stabilizing influence on President Carter, told Carter he would resign even if the rescue attempt was successful. A conscientious diplomat, Vance played his last card in the hope that Carter would reconsider the implications of the invasion. That Carter implicitly chose to let Vance go is the country's loss, and one which may ultimately prove to be the president's downfall.

Attempts to follow Carter's erratic foreign policy strategy over the past four years have left observers dismayed, shocked, frustrated and reeling. From the myriad U.S. positions on Iran to its inept handling of the Soviet Union to its shameful treatment of Western allies, the Carter administration has boomeranged from an initial lack of direction to a Vietnam era mentality advanced by National Security Advisor Zbigniew Brzezinski and eschewed by Vance. That the two foreign policy advisors, in competing for Carter's attention, frequently butted heads is evidenced by the number of gross inconsistencies in Washington's international stances of late.

Carter took office in 1976 preaching human rights and a halt to the escalation of nuclear arms. His attempt to link the two principles in a SALT II treaty, a mistake from which he quickly backed down, set the stage for Brzezinski, a man who seems to feel a strong American response is essential any time the Soviet Union mucks around in the affairs of other countries. When Soviet and Cuban-backed Ethiopian troops rumbled with Somali forces in border clashes between the countries, for example, Brzezinski called for the deployment of a naval task force to the area, a move which was even opposed by Defense Secretary Harold Brown.

Troubled by specific Congressional restrictions on CIA involvement in Ethiopia, Brzezinski, who seems to believe the United States should be able to use a wide range of underhanded and deplorable techniques to change the course of events in other countries "threatened" by communism, has often questioned whether the restrictions still apply.

Glaring discrepancies between the public statements of Brzezinski and Vance, combined with the muddying effects of many of Carter's flip-flop reactions and lame explanations, is undoubtedly responsible for both the current stalemate in the Iran crisis and the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. The Carter administration could have been on top of the situation in Iran when the shah's regime was toppled. But caught between a national security advisor who pushed for a tough stand against the insurrection and a State Department which urged open lines to the opposition to smooth the way for a post-shah regime, Carter — as usual — waffled, and then quite humanely let the shah into the United States for medical treatment he could have received anywhere in the world. His inconsistent reactions probably did little to deter the Soviets from invading a country they had been given no cause to believe was not their special protectorate.

If a break of ties with Iran, a boycott of the Moscow Olympics, a call for registration of 19 to 20 year olds and the latest mission of mercy in Iran are any indication, Carter seems to have finally settled on a foreign policy advisor with definite direction. Brzezinski, however, is the worst person on whom Carter can rely. Few in Washington would describe Brzezinski as a thoughtful policy maker. Impulsive, combative, reactionary, excitable and irrational are more accurate adjectives which have been tossed around. Brzezinski's paranoia is the Soviet Union; Carter's closest advisor sees all events as Soviet-inspired, and seems to feel U.S. inaction to any Soviet venture will be interpreted as impotence. Vance, on the other hand, cautioned against overreaction, pointing out that the Soviets had been kicked out of countries before, and stressing the need to evaluate Soviet actions on the basis of whether they really affected our vital interests. Vance, too, was worried about American prestige abroad, but argued that to publicly assert national anger without ready remedy was much more damaging than credible.

But the calm, cool head in the Carter administration is gone, abandoning some obviously worried allies to the whims of a Carter clique with which he had obviously lost influence. Vance's nominated successor, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, although he admits he is not well-versed for the job ahead, may not be a bad choice. Muskie's general knowledge of foreign and domestic issues could give a balance to domestic and foreign considerations which has been lacking in the State Department for a while. Muskie's purported temper could also hold Brzezinski in check. The senator from Maine seems determined to be Carter's No. 1 foreign policy advisor. If successful, Muskie would provide a much-needed lift to a demoralized State Department which has suffered domestic as well as diplomatic defeats for a number of years. The best check on the national security advisor is a strong secretary of state who can maintain a close working relationship with the president.

But the real problem, inherent in the nature of the two positions, is the competition between them. The national security advisor is primarily supposed to coordinate competing agencies and submit ample policy options to the president from them.

Many, however, also compete as in-house rivals for the president's ear. Henry Kissinger so completely overshadowed Secretary of State William Rogers that he soon had Rogers' job too.

We now have, in effect, two secretaries of state, neither of which can do the job effectively because of competition between them. Congress could perhaps keep tabs on Brzezinski by making the role of national security advisor an appointed position. He would then at least be accountable to those most directly affected by his actions.

Get me to Iran on time!

I'm slithering on my belly commando-style through the bushes over by Beaumont Tower with a broomstick for a rifle last night, this campus cop spots me and comes charging on over.

"OK, buddy," he snarls, stickin' his .44 Magnum in my face. "Throw down your weapon and come on out of there with your hands up!"

"Don't you recognize me, officer?" I blusters.

"You're Anita Bryant in drag for all I care," he growls. "We've had a lot of trouble with you weirdos jumpin' outa the bushes at women. I'm taking you in."

I take off my pith helmet to wipe my head. The cop does a double take. "I recognize you now!" he exclaims, snapping off his flashlight. "You can't be no pervert, you're Lash Larrowe! So what are you up to?"

"I'm in training for a secret mission," I tells him. "Learning how to creep up on the enemy is the most valuable training they give you in boot camp, you remember that."

"I sure do," he says ruefully. "But aren't you a little old for war games, Lash?"

"You saw what happened to those raw recruits Carter sent into Iran to get the hostages out, right?" I says.

"They tell me Jimmy's going to send in another team. This time it's gonna be vets with combat experience who can get the job done. Guys like me."

"I can see the need for troops who know what they're doing," he chortles. "But gaffers like you who've got one foot in the Old Soldiers' Home?"

"Jimmy figures we can't do any worse than the young whippersnappers they used last time," I bristles. "And if you're worried about we old timers getting cardiac arrests, forget it. Iran's flat as a pancake, you know. It's not as if they're sending us to Afghanistan, we'd have to climb up and down all them mountains and all."

"Aren't you afraid of the helicopters breaking down, you'll be stuck out there in the desert, hostiles all around you?" he asks.

"Negative," I answers. "The White House don't want it spread around, but the reason them helicopters broke down was Jimmy wanted to save on the defense budget, they used choppers the Marines had left over from Nam. This time, we're gettin' brand-new Apache RH-54s. Jody's told us we can pick 'em up as they're comin' off the assembly line."

"But how are you going to find the hostages, now the militants've got 'em scattered all over the countryside?" he wonders.

"No problem," I says breezily. "The Pentagon put up spy satellites right after they scrubbed the mission that failed. The Joint Chiefs have every hostage pinpointed on the maps of Qom and Tabriz they're going to give us when we get there. All we gotta do is go in, grab the hostages, bring 'em home."

"Won't getting past the guards be a problem?" he asks.

"We're way ahead of you on that," I snickers. "We give those guards a whiff of nerve gas, they won't give us no trouble, no sir."

"Doesn't that violate the Geneva Convention banning bacteriological warfare?" he asks. "The United States has agreed to that, you know."

"When your job is to go in and rescue your fellow-Americans," I trumpets, "you don't let yourself get bogged down in no fancy-pants legalisms."

"Aren't you forgetting your responsibilities here on the campus?" he asks. "You got all those disgruntled faculty depending on you as grievance officer, Lash. You're teaching a big class, too."

"I've checked it out with President Mackey," I says. "He's real supportive. Even offered to drive me out to the airport himself."

"I still can't believe a brigade of geriatrics like you'll succeed where trained commandos weren't able to," he chuckles.

"You would if you'd seen me in WWII when I got all those medals and that Purple Heart," I barks. "I'm pullin' down a nice little pension for the wounds I got, too."

"I was hoping I wouldn't have to bring this up, Lash," the cop says, blushing with embarrassment. "I have an uncle who was an MP where you got that Purple Heart. He told me you showed up all covered with blood after a brawl in a Paris whorehouse, a colonel you played poker with put you in for that medal."

"My uncle also told me your pals at headquarters covered up for you when they found out what really happened."

"I don't know nothin' about no cover-up," I snaps. "They ordered me to liberate this convent. I went on in there and liberated it. Hey, how was I to know the joint's an officers' whorehouse?"

"Those ladies put up more resistance than any Krauts I ever ran into on the battlefield, that's for sure. I'll tell you one thing bub."

"The hand-to-hand combat experience I got in that operation'll match anything your 'students' in Iran can dish out, you bet!"

A weekend for all

The recent controversy surrounding the EveryWoman's Weekend event has fostered a split in the women's population that is presently harmful and potentially disastrous.

The topic is a classic: a denial of participation to groups that supposedly do not comply with the "pro-life" philosophy of the feminists running the show. The excommunicated groups are crying for their First Amendment rights, while the feminists are screaming pro-choice ideologies.

The recent threat of the action is to the wonderful women's event, EveryWoman's Weekend. The event is being overshadowed by the effects of the controversy. But the real threat, as I see it, is to the women's movement on this campus.

Think about it, in a symbolic sense. Women outnumber men considerably, yet we can't gain enough strength to get a basic issue recognized. We do have the numbers, but where are the energies directed?

By specializing and focusing on separate issues of the movement, women fail to realize the most fundamental goals could be attained if they would reach a consensus and attack one issue at a time.

Of course, differing feminist ideologies make consensus and compromise difficult. Obviously, for example, the Stop ERA women are not going to join together with ERA supporters to gain ratification.

This is fine. We certainly don't want women totally compromising within the movement just as they begin to break away from an already compromising, patronizing patriarchal society.

But symbolically, actions like those taken by the EveryWoman's Weekend collective are splitting the women up to such an extent that even a simple event like theirs cannot be conducted without hostility.

And on the whole, how can we accomplish progress if we cannot reach the basic compromise on what we want?

When any movement is tumultuous within, attention is geared toward that struggle and the real goal of the group as a whole — equality — is ignored.

Women supporting the actions of the weekend coordinating committee have a plausible complaint when they assert Stop ERA groups and Right To Life Groups do not offer women choices and deny equality. But those groups really do believe they offer women choices by preventing ERA and abortion. I can't say they are right, but who can honestly say they are wrong?

Feminism is a philosophy that means many things to many different women. Should the EveryWoman's Weekend coordinating committee have sole authority to decide exactly what feminism should be to everybody?

They say yes, because it is their weekend and they can run it the way they please. The committee asserts opposing viewpoints can be brought up in the weekend workshops, or the "anti-choice" groups can have their own weekend.

This is potentially unfair and harmful.

If the excluded groups really do believe they offer choices for women — that they are "pro-women" — it is wrong for the collective to interpret feminism as exclusionary to these groups.

The object of feminism is to strive toward the freedom to exist without discrimination, generalizations and preconceived notions. It is obvious that by denying a sector of the women's population participation in a women's event, the EveryWoman's Weekend collective is hypocritically denying the essence of the feminist movement by alienating its sisters.

Denying even one faction of womanhood — even if some women do not consider these sisters feminists — creates a split that makes it even harder for women to unite for common, basic concerns.

We must achieve these goals before it becomes possible to achieve anything else.

Private investigator fights old stereotype

By MIKE VEH
State News Staff Writer

When Dashiell Hammett wrote The Maltese Falcon in the 1930s, he could not have known that he was creating a stereotype that would last for half a century.

But the blame should not go entirely to Hammett. It was Humphrey Bogart's film portrayal of Sam Spade that brought Hammett's character to life and lodged the rough-and-tough image of the private detective in the minds of the American public.

But the fictional detective created by Hammett, Bogart and scores of others is not the detective of the 1980s. Still modern investigators are forced to contend with the stereotype every time and a new client walks through the office door.

About 18 months ago, Gonzalo Rios II opened Rios Investigating Service at 603 Capitol Savings and Loan Bldg. in Lansing. He has since encountered clients who expect him to live up to the stereotype; however, he does not even try.

"I JUST GIVE them the facts," Rios said. He added quickly that people who do not like what they see when they walk into his office have every right to go to someone else.

Rios, like 316 other investigation agencies in Michigan, is licensed by the Michigan State Police and fulfills the assorted requirements established by the police.

Although a majority of his business involves locating missing persons, he said he is willing to do "just about anything."

Like the much-idolized detectives of literature and film, Rios works alone. "I just do my job," he said.

A drastically different version of the private detective is the large agency which employs many trained investigators and offers a wide variety of services.

THE WORLD'S LARGEST agency is the Pinkerton Agency which has 112 offices around the country and several more overseas.

Allen Pinkerton formed the agency in 1850 and, at the time, the Illinois-based agency had one big client, the Illinois Central Railroad, and Pinkerton worked closely with the railroad's lawyer, Abraham Lincoln.

The agency was the first private investigation firm in the United States and company policies, which were put into effect in the early days of operation, are still followed today.

The policy set up by Pinkerton prohibited all work that might "tarnish the company's reputation" and, because of this policy, the agency does no divorce investigation nor any other investigations that might bring the investigator close to breaking the law.

Pinkerton's agents also have to contend with romantic stereotypes of investigators, said a Pinkerton spokesperson at the company's Grand Rapids office who wished to remain anonymous "because of the nature of my work."

He said work that is done in an hour on television can take weeks or even months in actual practice.

But the stereotype is not all bad, he said. "It's nice to be romanticized."

March on Rock planned for this weekend

Big Rock nuclear power plant in Charlevoix will be the target of an anti-nuclear march and civil disobedience action Sunday.

The "March on the Rock" is being planned by the Northern Voices Allied Coalition to protest the fact that the plant does not meet minimum Nuclear Regulatory Commission requirements.

Big Rock is owned by Consumers' Power Co. Built in the 1950s, Big Rock is the fourth oldest nuclear power plant in the United States.

Consumers' Power has petitioned for the plant to be exempt from the NRC safety standards set after the Three Mile Island accident.

Problems at the plant includes an insufficient radiation shield and no back-up water pumps for the coolant purposes said Barb Thibault, of the Peace Education Center.

Ralph Nader, on a recent trip to the plant, called it "a national problem" and said it should be shut down.

Civil disobedience action resulted in the jailing and conviction of 14 persons for trespassing during a protest there in December 1978.

Big Rock reopened on Jan. 15, 1980, after being closed for repairs and investigation since April 1979.

The itinerary for this weekend will include non-violence training on Saturday. Activities for Sunday include a three-mile march from Lighthouse Park to Big Rock, speakers and music at Elzinga Park and non-violent occupation of plant territory.

For information on the march or carpools to Charlevoix, persons can contact the Peace Education Center or the Mobilization For Survival at 1118 S. Harrison Ave.

Advisory group forms to aid minorities

In an effort to better serve the growing number of minority and non-traditional students at MSU, a new student advisory group is being formed.

The group will meet regularly with Moses Turner, vice president for student affairs.

"The University has a responsibility to respond to these individuals and to assure programs that will assist them in securing the broadest and most satisfying collegiate experience," Turner said.

"We hope that by involving students in planning and implementing programs we'll be better able to assist them."

"We need to listen to what the students have to say about these (minority) programs for their degree of satisfaction with and adjustment to university life will determine in large measure their degree of success at MSU," Turner said.

"And these satisfied students will serve as the best recruiters of minority students for MSU," he added. (continued on page 12)

Complex holds tournament

Weather permitting, the third annual independent of the MSU intramural East Complex invitational softball tournament will be held this weekend, with games beginning this afternoon.

The 16-team tourney, which was open on a first come-first serve basis to all residence hall floor teams, is totally independent of the MSU intramural department.

This spring's games will be played on the softball fields near Mt. Hope Road, and on those near Case Hall and Demonstration Hall.

COGS reconsiders position on change to semesters

The Council of Graduate Students approved a motion Wednesday to reconsider its position on the proposed change to the early semester academic calendar.

At the April 16 meeting, the council voted to support the change and although they voted to reconsider the decision, an actual change was not made. The issue was tabled until the May 28 meeting.

The council unanimously approved $500 for the Council of Medical Students for travel funds to conferences and conventions directly affecting medical students. The funds will be reviewed annually.

The council had an agenda item to discuss the recent controversy surrounding the MSU Alumni (continued on page 12)

Rufus' triumphant return

By REGINALD THOMAS
State News Reviewer

Rufus and Chaka Khan along with the Brothers Johnson came to the MSU Auditorium Thursday night and gave one of the best performances this reviewer has ever seen them give. But before I go any further I would like to refresh the readers' memory concerning the group's last performance at MSU.

Rufus performed with Heatwave. Heatwave was exciting while Rufus was boring and methodical. Thursday night Rufus was not as exciting as the Brothers Johnson but they were not as boring as before.

The concert began on time with the Brothers Johnson opening with "Ain't We Funky Now." They then broke into their first single, "I'll Be Good To You." Throughout their performance the Brothers Johnson were energetic and exciting. They captivated the audience with their theatrics more so than their musicianship.

The Brothers' music had a tendency to become loud, but when you play the type of songs they play it cannot be helped. Their sound has not changed much from what this reviewer heard a few years ago. Louis still plucks a mean bass and George still performs the usual vocals.

Rufus came out and opened with Masterjam before breaking into "Dancing For Your Love." From there they went into the Bobby Womack-inked tune "Stop On By." For the most part these tunes were boring and methodical.

Chaka waltzed through the lyrics while the band played its usually solid instrumentals. It seems contradictory that the group could put on its best performance and yet still be boring and methodical.

Well, its simple: they lack stage presence.

Rufus is a good band with exceptionally good horns and a tightly put together sound. But they lack permeance.

They were well-received on their older tunes and their latest recording. But for the most part their performance was sporadic depending on the tune.

A good example is "Hollywood." This is usually a well-received number for the group, but it was not Thursday night. The result, Chaka cut it short. In fact the group did not obtain the response it wanted. They left without an encore.

Chaka Khan of Rufus literally had the audience in her hand Wednesday night in the MSU Auditorium.

When the Brothers Johnson left after doing "Stomp" they were met with resounding applause; in fact the group had received similar applause before "Stomp." In other words, the audience was into their performance. But Chaka and Rufus had to request that the audience stand and cheer.

The difference is the Brothers Johnson are exciting to watch while Rufus is good to listen to. A person could have listened to their collection of Rufus tunes and still have gotten as good a performance as the audience received Thursday night. That is unless the listener likes to gawk at Chaka's body.

Hopefully the next time Chaka Khan and Rufus perform they will reach a happy or decent median where they display good stage presence coupled with their fine musicianship.

'Green Room:' Truffaut deviation

By MARY TINNEY
State News Reviewer

Francois Truffaut's The Green Room is a film that Truffaut fans are sure to find interesting if only because it deviates so from traditional Truffaut creations.

The Green Room concerns one man's (Julius Davenne) obsession with death. In the beginning we witness his efforts to comfort a man whose young wife has died. Davenne has disdain for the "professional mourners" who console him with panaceas such as God and afterlife. Davenne advocates a worship of the dead which manifests itself in complete emotional isolation from the living. His philosophy, which initially seems a temporary reaction to the death of his beautiful 22-year-old wife and the horror of seeing many of his friends die in World War I becomes debilitating by the end of the film.

Davenne meets a young woman and is attracted to her stories of experiencing communication with her dead father. At first she disagrees with a devotion to the dead which involves an exclusion of all relationships with the living. Later, after the death of the man she loved, a writer and politician named Paul Massingay, she devoted herself totally to Davenne and his philosophy.

Together the two create a "chapel for the dead" with portraits of all their dead relatives and friends lit by rows of candles. But when the woman suggests that her dead boyfriend—a man whom Davenne felt had betrayed him

Chrissie is more than a pretender

By BILL HOLDSHIP
State News Reviewer

The Pretenders were a critic's choice long before they released their American debut LP. The band's strong reputation was built solely on its debut English single — a cover version of Ray Davies' "Stop Your Sobbing" (produced by the incomparable Nick Lowe) — and the unanimous praise the band received from the British press for its tight live performances in that country.

Chrissie Hynde

The Pretenders demonstrated why they have such a reputation Wednesday night at the Motor City Roller Rink in Detroit. The band is comprised of impeccable musicians who play some of the most flawless hard rock to hit America's stages in quite some time. Pete Farndon, resembling a man trapped in a time warp with his black leather jacket and greased ducktail, kept a steady, never-ending backbeat, while Martin Chambers is one of the most powerful drummers this reviewer has ever seen. James Honeyman Scott filled in the melodies with stunning lead riffs, making it all seem like such an effortless chore.

The focal point of the Pretenders, however, is Chrissie Hynde, the band's rhythm guitarist and lead vocalist. Rock 'n roll may have found one of its best female performers in Hynde, an American expatriate who left Akron, Ohio, for England in 1974, and she is living proof that rock 'n roll can be more than a man's world. There are many images of great rock 'n roll women from the past in Hynde's persona, and the best analogy might be that she resembles a cross between Ronnie Spector and Patti Smith. Nonetheless, Hynde often transcends comparisons, and is, in her own way, a true original.

Hynde can be extremely tough, as anyone who has heard the definitive "kiss off, kick him where it hurts" strains of "Precious" can testify. On the other hand, she can be extremely tender, crooning beautiful and melodic love songs like "Kid." In no way does Hynde exploit her sexuality, but this ambivalent mixture of the hard and soft is capable of triggering a sexual reaction in fans of both sexes. (Aren't those the same qualities that attracted people to Elvis and rock 'n roll in the 1950s?) Unlike the humorous high camp of Blondie's Debbie Harry, the image appears sincere. As a result, Hynde can just be human, and she never has to stoop to the "macho" crotch rock in reverse posing of Pat Benatar or Heart's Wilson sisters. Her voice beats them all. She is an excellent musician, a fine songwriter, and Chrissie Hynde just may have the potential to become the biggest hero the feminine side of the rock 'n roll world has seen yet. (I hope that doesn't sound sexist.)

The Pretenders performed most of the tunes from their LP, although they replaced "Stop Your Sobbing" with another Ray Davies' composition, "Just Can't Go To Sleep" (also from the Kinks' first album, You Really Got Me). The band introduced its new British single, "Talk of the Town," a melancholy '60ish pop number, b/w "Cuban Slide" which brings the Bo Diddley beat into the 1980s. A special treat was the two soaring instrumentals the band played in addition to "Space Invader" from the LP. Some of the show's best moments came when Hynde would just step back, letting her guitar wail with the rest of the band, and it often made this reviewer mentally exclaim: "My God! This band is truly the Ventures of the modern world."

Two complaints, however: The first is the sameness of a lot of the Pretenders' material. I've listened to the album numerous times, and it's still difficult to distinguish between the riffs on several numbers. When the band performed some of its best (or at least my favorite) tunes, such as "Precious," "Kid," "The Wait" and the encore rendition of "Mystery Achievement," the effect was exhilarating. On the other hand, I have to be honest and say there were parts of the show (and LP) that left me somewhat bored, due solely to musical monotony. If the band hopes to fully make a breakthrough, it will probably have to strive for more consistently strong material on the next release. Still, it might be argued that the band is already headed in that direction since "Talk of the Town" is as strong — if not stronger than — anything on the LP.

Secondly, I was just a bit disappointed by the onstage energy displayed by the band as a whole. Perhaps I was expecting the "rock 'n roll will free your soul" stance of the early, pre-"look-at-me-I'm-a-STAR" Patti Smith, since comparisons are almost unavoidable. Still, this could be written off as first American tour jitters, and the Pretenders more than made up for their rather aloof stage presence in the sheer power and energy of their sound.

And like I said, the musicianship is impeccable — perhaps a bit too perfect, but perfect nonetheless. Any band with this much talent and a front person as strong as Chrissie Hynde is definitely worth looking out for in the immediate future.

Truffaut film

— be included in the chapel, Davenne is outraged.

Francois Truffaut plays Julius Davenne with an interesting and effective intensity. By the end of the film, he has fallen in love with the woman and is ready to accept Massigny into the chapel. She loves Davenne, too, but understands that the only way he could truly love her would be if she were to die. The last scene is the height of melodrama as their relationship is finally consummated in the only way possible for the two.

This film is bound to turn off many Truffaut fans — it's not often that Truffaut takes himself quite this seriously — and his attempt of the starring role is added emphasis of this. And the film is quite remarkably melodramatic. But for those who find Truffaut's cheerful lyricism occasionally grinding, this is a side of the artist that is interesting to see.

Lebanon is known as the land of hospitality and a venture into Zak's 1312 E. Michigan Ave. will put to rest any doubts you may have about middle eastern hospitality.

Zak's is the only authentic Lebanese restaurant in the East Lansing area, featuring traditional Lebanese dishes, many of which are vegetarian, served and prepared in the most friendly of atmospheres. Everything is made on the premises from ingredients purchased in area supermarkets, just as one would do in preparing a home-cooked meal. One can savor KABBAB, meat ground with parsley, onions and spices in pita bread with lettuce, tomatoes and pickles; or SUJOUK, a spicy sausage made of lamb and beef served in pita bread with lettuce and tomatoes. Those who are less adventuresome can sample excellent meat or spinach pie.

Health aficionados will delight in LABNEH, a dried yogurt served in pita bread with tomatoes mint and olive oil. For something different, FALAFEL, a mixture of beans ground with spices and vegetables, fried and served in pita bread with a sesame seed sauce.

A must for patrons of Zak's is TAMR HINDI, a juice made from Hindu dates which is often prescribed as a remedy for headaches, circulation problems and stomach aches in Lebanon. Or try a delicious apricot juice made from paste imported from Syria.

Zak's also carries an assortment of imported foods such as Fava beans, Halva, sesame seeds and grape leaves, all for home cooking.

Those with a sweet tooth will have trouble deciding among the various butter cookies made with dates, walnuts pistachios and cream of wheat for extra rich dough.

Sam Eid the owner (an MSU graduate) takes his customers seriously; if you don't like something, you don't have to pay for it, and a taste can be had for the asking.

Zak's is waiting in the hospitable Lebanese tradition for those wanting a respite from the usual meat and potatoes mediocrity.

Zak's is open from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Golfers peak for Invitational

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Staff Writer

MSU men's golf coach Bruce Fossum makes no bones about his team's chances in the 15th annual Spartan Invitational which gets under way today on the Forest Akers west course.

"I think we're about ready to peak right now," the coach said. "Everybody played every day this week and I think we can win. Everyone should be higher than kites to win their own tournament."

Converging on the 6,854 yard, par-71 course this weekend will be 25 teams set to try and dethrone Ohio State University, Spartan Invitational champion the last four years and defending Big Ten and NCAA titlists.

THE TOURNEY, a 36-hole affair which concludes Saturday, features five Big Ten teams and all 10 Mid-American conference schools. The balance of the rest of the field includes such schools as the University of Notre Dame, Illinois State and Iowa State Universities.

In addition, three foreign countries will be represented in the tourney. The Buckeyes list players from Scotland and New Zealand. The University of Waterloo from Waterloo, Ontario, makes its 10th appearance in the Spartan.

MSU will field two teams, a green and white squad, on the basis of being the host school. Twelve Spartan linksters will see actions in the event.

Co-Captains and seniors Tom Mase and Rick Grover head the green squad, backed up by sophomore Dave Belen, freshman Rob Haidler, sophomore Monty James and junior Steve Lubbers.

Mich. — MSU: Will history repeat itself?

The MSU women's tennis team has had two months to savor its 5-4 upset victory over defending state champion University of Michigan.

The Spartans hope to retain bragging rights when they host the Wolverines at 3 p.m. Saturday on the Varsity Courts.

Coach Earl Rutz Jr.'s squad will try to rebound from last weekend's eighth-place showing in the Big Ten Championships.

Since that initial win, the Spartans have compiled a 7-11 record, which compares favorably to the Wolves' 4-10 mark, but it was Michigan who surprised the field last weekend with their fourth-place finish in the Big Tens.

Kathy Karzen, the defending state champ at No. 1 singles, leads her Wolverine teammates with a 17-6 season record. She finished second in the recent conference meet.

It was Karzen who was the unfortunate victim of MSU freshman Monty Gettys in February's meeting. The fired-up Gettys scored a 6-3, 6-3 upset in one of the young Spartan's biggest wins to date.

The Spartan's No. 1 doubles team of Gettys and freshman Jill Grinberg will try to raise its season record from 6-12 against Michigan's top duo, Karzen and Robbie Risdon, which sports a 13-7 mark.

Saturday's match is the last dual of the season for the Spartans. Next weekend they will host the three-day State of Michigan championships on the Varsity Courts.

V-Club

A men's Varsity Club meeting is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Sunday in the Varsity Club Room in Spartan Stadium.

New recruits

Goaltender Ron Scott and defenseman Gary Wright signed national letters of intent this week to attend MSU. Spartan head coach Ron Mason has announced.

ILLINOIS, PURDUE HERE

MSU faces league foes

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

With its double-header sweep Wednesday of Oakland University under its belt, the MSU baseball team returns to Big Ten play this weekend with twinbills against the University of Illinois Saturday and Purdue University Sunday.

Both double-headers begin at 1 p.m. on Kobs Field.

MSU, defending conference champ, finds itself in the cellar with an 0-6 mark, 9-24 overall. Illinois is tied for fifth in the Big Ten with a 4-4 record, 15-20 overall, while Purdue is tied for seventh at 3-5 and 20-18 overall.

"WE'RE JUST GOING to have to hit better to win," MSU coach Danny Litwhiler said. "Both Illinois and Purdue should be better than in past years, and they've also strengthened and balanced the entire league."

The Spartans, struggling with a .239 team batting average, are paced by senior Ken Robinson, hitting close to .300 with five home runs. Litwhiler has tabbed senior righthanders Brian Wolcott and Jay Strother to pitch against the Fighting Illini, with freshman southpaw Terry

Johnson and either freshman Brian James or junior Phil Magsig set to throw against the Boilermakers.

Illinois, slugging .339 in Big Ten games, is led by third baseman Tim Richardson and catcher Carl DePaolis, who boast .480 and .464 conference batting averages respectively. Illinois is a young team with six freshman starters and its top hurler is right-hander Bruce Schiedegger.

PURDUE IS HITTING at a .297 clip in league contests, with four players hitting over .300 in conference play. Second baseman Mike Ledna is at .444 and rightfielder Chris Dietrick is slugging .379, with right-handers Bruce Alexander and Bob Hallas slated to pitch against MSU Sunday.

The Spartans swept two games from Illinois last year, 9-5 and 1-0, while splitting with Purdue, winning 7-6 before losing 3-0.

After this weekend's play, the Spartans meet Western Michigan University in two mid-week twinbills. MSU will be in Kalamazoo May 6 before returning the following day to Kobs Field, the latter a rescheduled rainout.

Netmen on road to Indiana, OSU for dual meets

Two matches against Big Ten opponents are on tap for MSU's men's tennis team this weekend.

The Spartans traveled to the University of Indiana today for a dual, and will journey to Ohio State University for competition Saturday.

MSU will try to extend its present winning streak to three against the Hoosiers, whose 6-1 Big Ten mark is third best in the conference.

Indiana features Mike Dickinson, last year's Big Ten runnerup at No. 3 singles. He sports a 7-0 record this season.

Dickinson will face the Spartans' Scott King, who, along with No. 4 Jeff Wickman, lead the squad going into today's match with 5-4 records.

Bibbs anxious for triangular

Coach Jim Bibbs of the MSU men's outdoor track team expects one of the finest meets in recent years to take place on Ralph Young Field this Saturday when Ohio State and Purdue universities take on the Spartans in a Big Ten triangular showdown.

Bibbs, who saw his Spartans place in the top six in four events at the prestigious Drake Relays last weekend, says the meet should be a great one for the spectators, as both the Buckeyes and Boilermakers are loaded with talent and have some of the top performers in the Midwest.

"We're just hoping for some good weather and a big turnout because this is going to be a great meet," Bibbs said.

"Both Ohio State and Purdue have some of the top runners in the Big Ten, so there should be some great finishes."

Among those competing will be Ohio State's Dan Oliver, regarded by many as the best hurdler in the Big Ten, and Buckeye sprinter Ulysses Cohen, who finished second behind the Spartans' Ricky Flowers in last year's conference championships 400 meter event. Running along with Flowers and Cohen in this weekend's meet will be MSU's Calvin Thomas and Purdue's Bruce Banter.

Bibbs is considering entering both Flowers and senior All-America Randy Smith in the 200-meter dash, which could motivate both sprinters into qualifying for the NCAA's with a time of :20.95 or better.

Smith is close to qualifying for the nationals in the 100-meter dash as well. The time to beat is :10.42, and last weekend Smith ran :10.51.

Freshman All-America high jumper Paul Piwinski is also expected to have a fine showing this weekend as at Drake he cleared 7 feet even.

BILL MOONEY

No swan in Derby field

Back in the days when the late Joe Palmer was writing his horse racing aphorisms for the New York Tribune, he often was careful to note that thoroughbreds can be likened to ugly ducklings. "A few grow up to be swans," Palmer would say. "Unfortunately, most remain ugly ducklings throughout their racing careers."

Well, they may or may not be ugly ducklings, but be convinced that in this year's Kentucky Derby field there doesn't appear to be a swan in the bunch. Not one of the horses who will go to the post at 5:38 p.m. Saturday has ever cracked the 1:50 mark in a winning effort for a mile and one-eighth. Plugged Nickle did a 1:50.1 in the Florida Derby at Gulfstream March 29, then followed up with an unimpressive (although not unpressed) 1:50.4 for the nine furlongs in the Wood Memorial at Aqueduct on April 19. Rockhill Native ran a wire-to-wire 1:50 even in taking the Blue Grass at Keeneland April 24.

But consider their performances retrospectively. Plugged Nickle's Florida Derby time was the second slowest during the past decade. His Wood Memorial time was the third slowest ever, and the New York Racing Association has been staging that event at its current distance since 1952. Rockhill Native's Blue Grass clocking does match that of Spectacular Bid in 1979, but he's not in the same class by a longshot. When Rockhill Native finished third behind the since-injured Superbity in the Flamingo Stakes at Hialeah on March 5, the winner's time for the nine furlongs was 1:51.1. Earlier that same day, an $11,000 claiming race at the same distance at Hialeah was won by a horse in faster time.

It's not that their bloodlines aren't good enough. To the contrary, Plugged Nickle's sire is Key To The Mint, voted the industry's outstanding 3-year-old in 1972. Rockhill Native's sire, Our Native, was third in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness in 1973, finishing third behind Secretariat and Sham twice in a row. But neither horse seems to have inherited the strong stretch kick of his daddy. Plugged Nickle appears to tire and he noticeably drifts out during the later stages of his races. Rockhill Native dawdles — he's small, a gelding, only 15 hands and 900 pounds. He's probably better suited for sprints and middle distances than he is for the 1 and one-quarter he'll have to go at Churchill Downs.

Still, who's in a position to challenge these two?

Other likely Kentucky Derby starters include Degenrate Jon, Execution's Reason and Mrs. Bert Firestone's filly, Genuine Risk. Plugged Nickle has beaten all three of them in recent weeks. Super Moment and Gold Stage were beaten handily by Rockhill Native in the Blue Grass. And the wonderfully christened Prince Valiant, once thought to be formidable, finished last in that race and will not run tomorrow. Jaklin Klugman, co-owned by John Dominguez and the gentleman of Quincey fame, won the one-mile Stepping Stone at Churchill Downs last Saturday, but his time was only 1:38.3, nearly five seconds off the track record. He'll be running for exercise.

There is an interesting colt, though, who has shipped in from California. His name is Rumbo, and he's twice finished a hard-charging second behind Codex (the late bloomer who was not nominated for the Kentucky Derby but is eligible for the Preakness and the Belmont Stakes). On March 30, Rumbo finished only a neck behind in the mile and one-eighth Santa Anita Derby. The winner's clocking for that one was 1:47.3 and, more importantly, Rumbo made up nine lengths in the final quarter of a mile. Two weeks later, he was second again in the Hollywood Derby which features a nine-furlong winner's time of 1:47.2. Rumbo was two lengths behind at the end of that one, but he had again made up a sizable amount of ground.

Rumbo is ridden by Laffit Pincay Jr., who — despite his relative youth (33) — is already in the National Racing Hall of Fame. Rumbo's past performance chart may go unnoticed by a number of the bettors at Churchill Downs, a factor that could lift his odds into the high-digit category. If that's the case and he wins, he'll buck the trend of recent years. Since 1972, six of the eight Kentucky Derby favorites have won that race. And the two non-favorites who triumphed, Bold Forbes in 1976 and Affirmed in 1978, were heavily backed second choices.

Then again, the Derby's sue for a big upset. No-name horses have won before. There was Canonero II in 1971; the 15-1 Dust Commander in 1970; the 30-1 Proud Clarion in 1967. All three were splendid closing runners, unknown before their races, very well-known after them.

And a sawbuck says Rumbo will be equally well-known by Saturday evening in Louisville.

Laxers hopeful

The hopes of the MSU lacrosse team for a Midwest Lacrosse Association championship are on the line this weekend.

The laxers travel to Ohio for their final two regular season games, against Ashland College Saturday and Ohio State University Sunday.

The Spartans, 3-3 in the MLA, need to win both games to tie with OSU for the loop crown.

Wednesday the laxers lost a non-conference game to the University of Notre Dame, 14-10, on Old College Field, and coaches Nevin Kanner and Boku Hendrickson hope MSU does not play this weekend with the flatness it displayed against the Irish.

"If we play the same way against Ashland and Ohio State as we did against Notre Dame it's going to be a couple of very long afternoons," Kanner said.

"We were very flat against Notre Dame and we made a lot of mental mistakes," Hendrickson said. "We've got to be at our best this weekend, but trying to win two games back-to-back against such powerful teams is not going to be easy."

The loss to Notre Dame dropped the Spartans' overall record to 7-7. This is the first year lacrosse has been a varsity sport at Notre Dame, and next season the Irish will join the MLA.

Notre Dame got on the board first and led 1-0 after the first quarter, but in the second stanza it was all Irish as the Spartans were down 8-3 at the half.

MSU scored seven times in the second half, but it was too little too late to salvage the game.

Kevin Willitts and Jay Hungerford each scored three goals. Art Barry had two and Dewey Andersen and Greg Brinkman each had one.

Kevin Willitts of MSU and the University of Notre Dame's Dave Lewis go after the ball during the Spartans' 14-10 lacrosse loss to the Irish Wednesday.

MIDWEST ROWING CHAMPIONSHIPS

Crew team rows to first win

MSU's crew team achieved a first recently. Nine of its members won an event championship at a major regatta. The regatta was the Midwest Rowing Championships at Madison, Wis., which featured 40 teams competing in 18 events.

The surprise victory for the MSU club came in the men's lightweight novice eight event.

The crew is made up of eight oarsmen and a coxswain, who steers and sets the pace. It included Lynn Taylor, Bob Nathan, Reed Kukuska, Norm Dornbier, Rob Bakotich, Phil Dooley, Roy Dalvalle, Kurt Vizona and Tom Bacheller.

"In 22 years, we have state championships, but never at a big regatta like this. It was totally unexpected," said Al Bay, rowing club president.

At the same tournament the women's crew won the open fours in the consolation finals; the men's novice heavyweight crew placed second behind the University of Michigan and the women came in third in the novice fours.

The MSU crew team was founded in 1957, but women were not part of the club until 1976. Last year the club hosted the women's regional championships.

The crew will next compete in a regatta at Marietta, Ohio.

Gregg Lauble

Lauble, Jones win FB honors

Two Spartan football players have been named by the coaching staff as offensive and defensive players of the week.

Linebacker Gregg Lauble, sophomore-to-be from Pittsburgh, won the nod as best player on defense — the "striker of the week," as coined by assistant head coach Sherman Lewis.

Ted Jones, another sophomore-to-be, won the honor on offense. A flanker, Jones is a native of Akron, Ohio.

The Spartans' spring practice continues through May 17, when the annual Green and White intra-squad game is played in Spartan Stadium.

and Terry Porvin. Kelbel, Dufrane, and Porvin all gained spots this week via playoff competition.

Besides his own team, Fossum looks for Ohio State and Ball State University to be at or near the top.

OPENING TEE TIME both today and Saturday is 7:50 a.m. with possible adjustments due to weather. All groups will begin play on the No. 1 tee.

Team awards to the top three teams, while the individual champion is given the Biggie Munn Award. The award is a Spartan watch and is named in honor of the late MSU athletic director Clarence L. "Bergie" Munn.

A special feature is the annual long drive contest to be held late this afternoon on the No. 1 tee.

All Big Ten teams will play early Saturday so they can travel to Madison, Wis., for the Wisconsin Invitational May 4 and 5. The tourney will be staged at the Cherokee Country Club, site of this year's Big Ten championship.

With 3,800 people inside the MSU Auditorium and another 400 outside, security for John Anderson's visit was tight, so much so that a Secret Service agent escorted Mr. Anderson's limousine on foot as the presidential candidate waved to the crowd.

Anderson speaks on campus

be validated by officials of the Secretary of State's office.

The first step that "has to be met" before he can win the presidency, Anderson said, is getting enough signatures during the statewide petition drive.

He said the country needs new leadership and new programs to build for the future. The present administration in Washington has caused many problems and the solutions they espouse may do more harm than good, he said.

Hawkish solutions to serious national problems will only make matters worse, Anderson said, stressing those who see solving national threats in military terms are wrong.

The solutions of national problems rest in the American people's will to remain free, not in strict military force, he said. As long as the spirit to remain free is nurtured, the American society will survive.

"Our strength must be here at home," he said, adding the country must have new leadership.

Currently, the economy is mismanaged and must be rebuilt, he said. Twenty-five percent of automobiles in American are being imported and this has caused severe problems in Michigan, he said.

"Has America lost its technological genius? I don't think so," he said, adding that "we can reconstruct" the economy to provide abundance for all.

He offered the people must learn to conserve more energy. Conservation is "more than just a watchword — it is the keystone of (my) energy policy."

The American people must learn to sacrifice more and accept changes for the future, he said.

If there is not control of future oil consumption in the United States than all alternative energy sources will be useless, he said.

Anderson asked for student support, saying he is the "realistic choice" and "together, we can make (his candidacy) work."

Neighbors squabble over duck

NEWPORT, Maine (AP) — It's been a long time since everything was ducky between neighbors Gerald Denicola and Edward Schneller. They've argued over a snowmobile, turkeys and cows.

"Now we're down to a duck," signed Police Chief Frederick Coates.

The latest dispute began when Denicola seized a duck owned by Schneller.

"I object to having Schneller's ducks and turkeys eating up my garden," Denicola said.

Denicola says he won't return the duck unless Schneller pays him 25 cents a day for the duck's room and board and promises to keep his animals on his own property.

Alumni

Board, those recommendations were refused, and Kinney again refused to resign.

PREVIOUS TO THAT, MSU officials had warned the University could keep the alumni association from using the computer and getting football ticket allocations.

However, alumni association members will still get football tickets this year, said William Beardsley, assistant athletic director.

Beardsley added the tickets should be out in the mail by May 10.

He added, however, some alumni may not get tickets to the University of Michigan-MSU game. The reason, he said, is that faculty, staff and students get priority on tickets, and at this time they are not sure how many tickets the University of Michigan will allot MSU.

Candidate late

narrowed down to a choice between Carter and Reagan."

IF THE WAIT was trying for the crowd, it was even more so for the dozens of police and Secret Service security officers assigned to the event.

Police sources said the Auditorium was filled to more than capacity by about 2:45 p.m., and the entrances to the building were locked shortly thereafter.

Department of Public Safety Capt. Ferman Badgley, who coordinated security in the Auditorium with the Secret Service, said 14 DPS officers were present.

DPS was so pinched for personnel that some morning shift officers were held overtime, and DPS director Richard Bernitt guarded one entrance.

Despite the heavy security, which was matched by that of the local and traveling media, many persons with security clearance managed to get close enough to the candidate during his speech for photos.

Although all parties concerned seemed pleased with the outcome, one

Anderson supporter found something lacking after the speech — his car.

Doug Bauer, an MSU sophomore and college coordinator for the Anderson campaign in Michigan, complained to police his car had been towed from a faculty/staff parking lot nearby.

One police officer summed up the feelings of security personnel after Anderson had left and the crowd had dispersed.

"I'm just glad he's gone. I'm going home."

Campus planner plans retirement

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

After 33 years of involvement with MSU, Milton Baron, the director of the office of Campus Parks and Planning, will retire after a sabbatical which begins July 1.

Baron, who has been the director of Campus Parks and Planning since 1969, is "a person we're going to miss very badly," Jack Breslin, vice president for administration and public affairs, told the Board of Trustees at its last meeting.

During his one-year sabbatical, Baron said, he will study the planting plans for the Performing Arts Center and the Communication Arts and Sciences building on campus.

In addition, Baron said he would like to write a book dealing with the aesthetic approach to planting design, which would be based on his background from teaching and his directorship of Campus Parks and Planning.

"It's an old profession which needs some new thoughts expressed," he said.

And as for being director of Campus Parks and Planning, Baron said it "has been a great job. It has been a great environment for a landscape architect to work in."

MSU has a long tradition of landscape and environment protection, he added, noting that buildings at the University are planned in terms of landscape as well as Economist, a journal of undergraduate papers printed annually by the Department of Economics.

The papers include such topics as the economic effects of billboard control, an analysis of the demand for marijuana, and the increased price to students of living closer to campus.

Hopefully the book will be accepted around Michigan within a short time, Officer said. Letters are being written to publicize the book across the country as well, he added.

Most books on writing a term paper are written on the doctorate level, Officer said, which makes "dry" reading for undergraduates. This book was written in everyday language, he said, with such chapter titles as "If It's Straight from the Horse's Mouth, You Had Better Name the Horse," which discusses plagiarism, footnotes and bibliographies.

Students may obtain the book in 5J Berkey Hall for $2.45.

architecture. "We are part of the team which develops the best land-use concept for that land," Baron said. "This beautiful campus just didn't happen."

As for retirement, Baron said he "may do a little more golfing, a little more fishing, and a little more gardening."

Baron said he still plans to do landscape consulting work — possibly even some for MSU — after he retires. Thomas W. Kehler, who is currently the associate director of Campus Parks and Planning at MSU will become the new director July 1.

Kehler, who has been with Campus Parks and Planning since 1969, holds a bachelor's in landscape architecture from MSU and is currently a candidate for a master's degree in park and recreation resources.

wraps, and it is known senior Army officials wanted to shield him from possible "harassment." But defense superiors obviously overrode Army objects in order to dispute rumors that Beckwith wanted to continue the mission, had been overruled and that he was so angry he was planning to retire or resign.

Asked about such reports, Beckwith replied: "Pure bullshit."

Beckwith is a veteran of 27 and one-half years of Army service, including three in Vietnam. He has been the leader of an elite anti-terrorist unit, called Delta, since its formation about two years ago at Fort Bragg, N.C. After his meeting with a small group of reports, he intended to return to Fort Bragg. Photographers were barred from the session and none of the discussion was allowed to be broadcast. Members of Congress have called for testimony by Beckwith and Pentagon spokesperson Thomas Ross said, "If a formal request is made, I'm sure every consideration will be given to it."

All-Black picnic set for Saturday

The fifth annual all-Black picnic sponsored by the Office of Black Affairs will be held at 9 a.m. Saturday at East Lansing City Park. Each group should bring its own food and provide its own transportation to the park. About 1,500 people are expected to attend.

Students prefer terms

The freshmen students currently at MSU would be the first class of students to be effected by the change if it begins as proposed in 1982 — the year the current freshmen become seniors.

"The 50-50 split on the information question shows that the Academic Council, ASMSU, the administration and The State News have not got enough information out to the students on what kind of plan they are talking about," Studer said.

"If that many said they did not have enough information to judge between the two systems, then there's not a whole lot of credence to the survey," Studer said.

"Those that voted that they were uninformed voted 3-1 in favor of terms," he added.

'Tent city' erected

Maj. John Fergus at Eglin said a survey team Wednesday determined the facility could handle approximately 15,000 refugees, housing them in a "tent city" similar to the one set up to process thousands of Vietnamese refugees in mid 1970s after the fall of South Vietnam.

Florida Gov. Bob Graham authorized $100,000 in state funds to supplement the $50,000 already approved for food, shelter, transportation and health care for the refugees. He said the state was spending about $20,000 a day and the money would quickly run out.

And officials of the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Key West spent more than five hours interviewing and checking passports of 500 refugees who arrived on the Viking Starship.

In Key West, boats by the dozen were returning from Cuba without passengers, their skippers saying they were unwilling to let Castro choose their passengers for fear of bringing back murderers and rapists.

Both convicts and embassy refugees were being bused by Cuban authorities to a tent city near Mariel in preparation for the trip to the United States, new arrivals said.

"They have political prisoners coming on one bus and common criminals on other buses," said Rigoberto Bavaro, who said he had been at the Peruvian Embassy.

At least 25 suspected criminals were being detained at an undisclosed location in Key West, according to U.S. intelligence agents.

Drug abuse insurance

DeVoss said the commission will most likely be $348,000, short of the necessary funds to maintain current prevention and treatment services.

DeVoss could not say whether personnel or programs would be the first to go, but added that that decision may be out of his hands. The state may allocate money to the bi-county commission and designate it for specific use.

"I think we have a first-hand view. We can see which programs are getting results and which are not," DeVoss said.

Preventive programs are easy scapegoats, DeVoss said, because they don't usually achieve direct results. Direct treatment, on the other hand, is considered a priority and is most likely to be maintained, he said.

Substance abuse increases during economic downturns such as the one now existing, DeVoss said. Just at the time when the clinics need the money most they are being told to consolidate, causing a double burden, he added.

Nurse's role expands

"They do see the physician, but it's the nurse that implements the care," she said. "Physicians have a different role. I'm not saying it's higher or lower."

Milam also added the rising tendency for specialization in medicine could make nurses' attention more valuable to the patient.

"Eighty percent of nursing is teaching health care and maintenance," she said.

"I see it as changing," she concluded. "Nursing is going through an evolution right now." The identification of roles themselves are changing.

Olin nurses also stressed they care about their patients as if they were "part of their family."

"We're part of the University family," Milam said. "We don't want to always be looked on as mothers but part of the University family."

Giraffe's necking

BROOKFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Seems like there's more than necking going on in the giraffe enclosure at Brookfield Zoo. Dawn is pregnant for the ninth time.

Dawn was named the zoo's "Mother of the Year" Wednesday. Her ninth calf, makes her the most productive large mammal at the zoo.

American Express won't penalize you for graduating during a credit crisis.

American Express hasn't changed its application qualifications for graduating students during the current credit crisis.

That's because the American Express® Card isn't a credit card. It's a charge card. There's no revolving, open-end credit. You are expected to pay your bill in full every month. So with the Card, you don't get in over your head.

You use your head.

American Express is continuing its special application plan for graduating students. If you have a $10,000 job (or the promise of one) lined up, you can apply for an American Express Card right now.

You'll need the Card for everything from business lunches to vacations, from buying clothes to buying theatre tickets.

You'll have new responsibilities after graduation. The American Express Card will help you manage them.

To apply for a Card, just pick up an application at one of the displays on campus. Or you can call the toll-free number 800-528-8000, and ask for a special student application.

The American Express Card. Don't leave school without it.
