Senate approves revenue sharing

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Senate, in the first break with its Budget Committee's 1981 balanced budget plan, agreed Thursday to restore $700 million to keep alive the state portion of revenue sharing.

By voice vote, the Senate approved the partial restoration of the $1.7 billion state revenue sharing program by diverting $700 million in so-called "categorical" grant money that normally must be used for federally mandated purposes.

The amendment, sponsored by freshmen Sens. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., and Bill Bradley, D-N.J., puts the Senate in disagreement with the House which backed total elimination of the state revenue sharing program.

By cutting from "categorical" grant programs, the change avoids unbalancing the Senate Budget Committee's proposed $612.9 billion balanced budget for fiscal 1981, which starts Oct. 1.

IT ALSO EXCLUDED from reduction categorical grants to individuals, such as food stamps and Medicaid, and grants for education, mass transit, job programs, community development, pollution control, highway aid and subsidized housing.

The amendment would cut other grants by 10 percent. However, when asked what grants would be reduced, neither Bradley's nor Kassebaum's office could specify which grants would be affected.

The vote came as the Senate pressed to complete work on its defense-oriented 1981 spending plan and join the House in approving the first balanced federal budget in 12 years.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said he had hoped the Senate would finish its version of the budget Thursday night so work could begin to reconcile it with the House package. However, a long list of amendments still to be considered made achieving Byrd's goal doubtful.

Byrd called on the Senate to expedite its budget debate, noting that 1980 money bills to fund food stamps, black lung benefits, refugee aid and other federal programs cannot be passed until Congress adopts the budget package.

IN ADDITION TO setting 1981 spending targets, the budget package would raise the 1980 spending ceiling which was breached in March and is preventing approval of new federal spending.

The Agriculture Department has warned that unless Congress approves additional money for food stamps, those benefits will be cut off to the program's 21 million recipients on June 1.

Except for the one amendment, the Senate held to the balanced-budget course set by its Budget Committee despite conservative claims that a worsening recession means deeper spending cuts are needed to eliminate the deficit.

By a 53-39 margin, the Senate tabled, effectively killing, a plan by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, to cut spending in the proposed $612.9 billion 1981 budget by an additional $7.3 billion to guarantee a business tax cut and no deficit.

"NEW ECONOMIC FORECASTS of a deepening recession show that this budget is already out of balance," he said.

The Budget Committee's recommended budget calls for using $10 billion from President Carter's 10-cent-a-gallon import fee on gasoline for a tax cut to encourage business investment and roll back scheduled Social Security tax increases.

But Hatch claimed the $10 billion would be needed as a cushion to keep the budget in balance when the economy falls into a sharper decline than congressional economists earlier predicted.

On Wednesday, the House approved a $611.8 billion balanced budget that calls for less severe cuts.

Dorm damage sparks dispute

By KY OWEN

State News Staff Writer

Residents of McDonel Hall's fourth floor northwest are threatening to take the University to court if they are forced to pay for the damage done to their floor last weekend.

The damage, which is estimated at more than $300, included two walls on the floor being knocked out and the wallpaper being torn off another.

Graduate advisor Michael Walsh, hall director Laura Findlay and hall manager Ron Smith met with floor members Thursday to discuss the situation.

Residents said they do not feel they should have to pay for the damage because they say they are not responsible and do not know who is.

The residence halls contract, however, stipulates that all students on the floor are responsible for damages, Findlay said.

Residents said they believe the contract is illegal, but Walsh told them to leave that question up to the courts.

Management and advisory personnel said they believe someone on the floor is responsible, and are hoping floor members will persuade that person to admit it.

"We're trying to let you guys handle it yourselves," Walsh said.

Floor members, however, maintain that no one on the floor is responsible.

"Most everybody has an alibi," one resident said. "They're trying to pin it on us."

Findlay told the group Thursday that if it does not find out who did the damage by May 16, one week from today, it may be charged for the damage or reassigned to a new residence hall for next year.

Some residents went so far as to say that they would like to have the management call in the Department of Public Safety to investigate.

Walsh said, however, residents could face more serious consequences if the DPS is called in.

Findlay added that if the matter goes beyond the residence hall level, any action taken would go on a student's permanent records.

"If this is handled in the judicial system, it goes into personal files," she warned. "Employers check those files."

The floor was also damaged last year. Because no action was taken on that incident, residents say it set a precedent.

ROTATED BETWEEN CITIES

Iran moves hostages

By Wire Services

The Iranian militants holding the American hostages intend to rotate them among a number of cities, sending those with the most suspicious backgrounds to the least pleasant locations, a Tehran newspaper said Thursday.

The conservative newspaper Donya Iran said the militants, who earlier this week reported keeping the 53 hostages in Tehran and 12 other cities, planned to rotate them so that "American intelligence will be confused."

One of the American hostages has tried to commit suicide three times and may be dead, Italian journalist Oriana Fallaci has reported quoting an unidentified source. She did not name the hostage.

Writing in the May 10 issue of the New Republic magazine, Fallaci quoted the source as saying the hostage who attempted suicide was one of a group which had been held in the basement of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. She said those in the basement were "considered unmistakably spies, and some of them are or have been recently tied up because they attacked the students."

President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, who has sought to take responsibility of the hostages away from the militants and turn them over to the ruling Revolutionary Council, said he plans to name a prime minister soon.

This was seen by observers as a move that could strengthen his moderate position toward the American hostages, in captivity 187 days Thursday.

THE REVOLUTIONARY COUNCIL has acted as an interim assembly and executive until the new Parliament is set up, perhaps in June. Iranian officials have said that dealing with the hostage crisis will be one of the first items of business for Parliament. Final parliamentary voting will take place today.

Bani-Sadr was asked by an Iranian reporter what Iran planned to do before May 17 to meet European demands for "decisive progress" toward release of the hostages or face economic sanctions.

Bani-Sadr reportedly told the reporter: "A lot of things can happen" before then, but did not elaborate.

Tehran Radio reported the execution by a firing squad Thursday of three persons, including a woman cabinet minister who served under the ousted shah.

One was Esfand Farrokhr-Parsa, former minister of education and (continued on page 18)

Former 'U' student in Libyan mission

By THE STATE NEWS
and WIRE SERVICES

WASHINGTON — The United States threatened Thursday to close the Libyan mission, effectively breaking diplomatic relations, unless four Libyans "immediately" leave the country and the remaining Libyans register as diplomats.

Some sources said the department would move to close the embassy in 24 hours unless the Libyans complied. But the department's written statement on the matter did not specify a deadline.

One of the four Libyans is former MSU student Mohammed Tarek Gammudi, 29, who studied criminal justice at MSU for one and one-half years beginning in January 1978.

He and three other former students of American universities were declared "unacceptable" by the State Department last week because they allegedly threatened Libyans living in this country who oppose the rule of Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy.

STATE DEPARTMENT OFFICIALS said they had "abundant evidence" that the four were connected with a campaign of intimidation directed against Libyan students in the United States. The campaign included a "communique" warning the students of "physical liquidation."

Richard Shadyac, attorney for the Libyans, said if the four were simply taken into custody and put on the next plane, the government "would be guilty of assault and battery."

The Libyans, who created an apparent standoff when they refused to leave the country by the State Department's Tuesday deadline, called a news conference Wednesday to declare they are not diplomats and therefore not subject to expulsion without due process. They also denied harassing anyone.

The Libyans said they intend to remain indefinitely in their embassy — which they declared a "People's Bureau" last fall — and force a "confrontation of principle."

IF THE "PEOPLE'S BUREAU" is, as the State Department maintains, legally no different than any other embassy, then the four Libyans are subject to immediate, arbitrary expulsion. But that status also means the United States has no right to enter the chancery and seize them for expulsion.

Council asks Palestinian leaders return

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Security Council adopted a resolution Thursday calling on Israel to allow the return of three Palestinian leaders it expelled from the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River last weekend.

The United States abstained and the resolution was approved 14-0.

The other Western members of the 15-nation council — Britain, France, Portugal and Norway — voted for the resolution along with China, the Soviet Union, East Germany, Tunisia, Niger, Zambia, Bangladesh, the Philippines, Mexico and Jamaica.

The resolution says the council calls on Israel "to rescind these illegal measures and to facilitate the immediate return of the expelled Palestinian leaders so that they can resume the functions for which they were elected and appointed."

It asks U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim "to report upon the implementation of this resolution."

U.S. Ambassador William vanden

Heuvel noted that the resolution did not refer to the action that prompted Saturday's expulsions — the Palestinian rebel killing of six Israelis in Hebron the night before.

"We are dealing here . . . with a tragic cycle of violence in which one violent act begets another," vanden Heuvel said.

"We deeply regret that the resolution does not refer to the killing in Hebron of six Israelis and the wounding of 17 others. We condemn this wanton act of violence at Hebron, and the Palestinian Liberation Organization's responsibility for it," he said.

Earlier Thursday, Arab countries revised the resolution to get it more votes in the council, a Western diplomat said privately.

The three are Mayor Fahad Qawasmeh of Hebron, Mayor Mohammed Milhem of Halhoul and Sheikh Raji Bayud Al Tamimi, Hebron's Islamic judge.

Israel deported them to Lebanon last Saturday, a day after six Jews were killed in Hebron by rebels that the Palestinian Liberation Organization said had been sent by its Al Fatah component, which is headed by PLO Chairperson Yasser Arafat.

Sadat asks indefinite postponement of Palestinian autonomy debates

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat asked for an indefinite postponement Thursday of the Palestinian autonomy talks with Israel and the United States. Chief Israeli negotiator Yosef Burg told his team to halt preparations for the next session, which had been set for next week in Cairo.

A spokesperson for the U.S. Embassy said Sadat's request was relayed to President Carter and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin by U.S. special Middle East envoy Sol Linowitz, who met with Sadat for an hour earlier Thursday in Ismailia.

In Tel Aviv, a spokesperson for the Israeli negotiators said they were "not interpreting the decision at this point."

Linowitz said in a prepared statement that Sadat requested time "to reflect on the results of the Herzlia talks" just concluded.

The negotiations in the Tel Aviv suburb produced no breakthrough in efforts to grant autonomy to the 1.2 million Palestinians living in the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip. The negotiations face a May 26 deadline set by the U.S.-sponsored Camp David accords, the basis for the talks.

Egyptian Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil and Defense Minister Gen. Kamal Hassan Ali acknowledged upon their return from Israel on Wednesday there still was a "big gap" between the two sides.

FOCUS NATION/WORLD

Pope visits West Africa

ACCRA, Ghana (AP) — Pope John Paul II arrived in Ghana on Thursday on a mission of "friendship and peace," the first visit to West Africa by a Roman Catholic pontiff.

Ecumenism among Christian churches was to be a major theme of his stop in this former British colony, fourth of six nations in his tour of Black Africa.

In a talk to a group of non-Catholic Christian leaders, Pope John Paul said he felt that "everything possible" should be done to eliminate differences among the various Christian churches.

The pope's visit coincided with one by the new Archbishop of Canterbury, the Most Rev. Robert Runcie, head of the worldwide Anglican Communion. The two prelates, whose churches are trying to draw closer together after centuries of division, were scheduled to meet this morning.

Pope John Paul flew to this modern seacoast city after two days in Kenya. He had previously visited Zaire and the Congo Republic, and he is to travel from Ghana to Upper Volta, Ghana's northern neighbor, and to Ivory Coast, to the west, before ending the 10-day tour and returning to Rome on Monday.

Ethiopians facing famine

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — A new famine caused by a severe drought threatens millions of Ethiopians, according to officials from relief agencies and a journalist who recently visited the stricken East African country.

If major relief efforts do not begin soon, hundreds of thousands of people may die of starvation, Swedish journalist Lisbeth Hellberg quoted Ethiopian officials as saying on a tour of the stricken region.

Asked if the Russians, who help the Ethiopians crush rebel movements, had assisted, one official, who declined to be identified, was quoted as telling the Swedish journalist: "We've got friends who help us with military hardware but when we need other assistance we have to turn to the West."

Hellberg said she saw only one Soviet helicopter bringing in food to the stricken area.

About 1.5 million people are living in famine camps and more refugees come in each day, officials say.

Four die in Israeli sea raid

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli commandos attacked two Palestinian rebel strongholds deep in southern Lebanon before dawn Thursday in a seaborne raid that left four insurgents dead and six wounded, the Palestine Liberation Organization said.

In Tel Aviv, Israeli Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Rafael Eytan was quoted by Israeli army radio as calling the lightning commando raid part of Israel's "general war on terrorism" and said more such raids were likely.

In renewed action at sundown, the PLO high command here reported a heavy artillery duel between rebel positions and Israeli-backed Christian militias who control a six-mile-deep enclave on the border with Israel. It claimed an Israeli-supplied tank was destroyed and its crew killed by rebel gunners at a spot between the Christian-controlled town of Marjayoun and the rebel stronghold of Nabatiyeh, 12 miles north of Israel.

Lebanese provincial authorities said it was the heaviest artillery battle across U.N.-policed areas in southern Lebanon in 20 days. The casualties could not be confirmed. United Nations forces serve as a buffer between rebels positions and the Christian militia enclave.

Yugoslavia buries Tito

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — President Josip Broz Tito was buried Thursday in a quiet hillside garden, having come to the end of a "long painful road" as wartime hero, national patriarch and world leader.

The metalworker who replaced a king was laid to rest after one of the century's epic state funerals, and after his political heirs pledged continued allegiance to his brand of independent communism.

Jet fighters roared overhead and thousands of troops slow-marched behind a gun carriage carrying Tito's flag-draped coffin as it rolled past hundreds of thousands of solemn Yugoslavs packing Belgrade's sidewalks for the two-hour procession from the Parliament building to the Tito estate.

There, the oak casket was lowered into a gleaming white marble vault in the garden overlooking the city. As it was, gunfire rolled over the Danube River and sirens wailed across the nation.

Test burn starts; injunction lifted

By DAVE VARGA
State News Staff Writer

A restraining order, which delayed the test burning of PCB-contaminated oil at a Chevrolet plant near Bay City, was lifted Wednesday night and the burning began Thursday afternoon.

The test burn ran for three and one-half hours Thursday and is scheduled to continue today and Saturday, said Jerry Avery, permit unit supervisor of the Michigan Air Pollution Control Commission.

Bay County Circuit Court Judge Ira Butterfield ruled that both the issuance of the test permit and the NAPCC judgment stating that the burn did not pose a health hazard were correct, Avery said.

Lyle Miller, who asked for the original restraining order to stop the burn, said he would not try further to stop the test burn or the actual burn.

"I have gone as far as I can go," Miller said. "If someone else wishes to go on, that's fine."

Miller, chairperson of a bargaining team for United Auto Workers Local 362 at the Chevrolet plant, said his local voted not to support him, so he acted on his own behalf in the court action.

"There are not enough people concerned about this," he said. "People at the plant were worried about their jobs."

But Miller said stopping the burn would have no effect on employment at the plant. Miller tried to prove that this type of test burn — in a steam boiler — had been done before, and that results from those tests should be evaluated before the burn was allowed.

The judge, however, ruled in favor of the General Motors Corp. lawyers that an incineration of this type has ever been attempted and that the test should go ahead.

Residents Against Increased Pollution has vowed to continue legal action in an effort to stop the actual burning, said Susan Gotfried, a member of RAIP.

RAIP members will not protest at the plant, though, because the area is unsafe, she added.

The 40,000 gallons of PCB-contaminated oil were originally used on company machinery.

PCB was used as a fire retardant in manufacturing and production, but is now believed to cause cancer in humans.

Zolton Ferency, MSU associate professor of criminal justice, said he and the RAIP members will still try to stop the permanent incineration of poisonous substances anywhere in Michigan.

We want to know if the test is successful," he said.

"But the longer-range question that has to be resolved remains if it's lawful for states to grant a permit to pollute," Ferency said.

Ma Bell says wish mother a happy day at 'off' hours

"We are sorry. All long distance lines are busy. Please try your call at a later time."

The familiar drone of an operator's tape-recorded voice will be heard more than usual this Sunday, as offspring all over the country will dial their mothers' numbers to say "Happy Mother's Day."

"Next to Christmas, Mother's Day is the phone company's busiest holiday, so we suggest customers try to place their calls during the less busy hours," said Gene Rykse, community relations manager for Michigan Bell.

Calls made before 10 a.m. or between 2 and 5 p.m. have the best chance of getting through on the first try, Rykse said.

Michigan Bell expects to handle 1.7 million calls on Sunday, the most ever on Mother's Day, with 37 million calls anticipated nationwide, Rykse said.

Positions open on council's 9 committees

By LOUISE WHALL
State News Staff Writer

Positions are now open for students on the nine standing committees of the Academic Council for the 1980-81 school year.

Student Council members will interview applicants and present a slate of nominees at the May 22 meeting.

The Bylaws for Academic Governance determine the number of students who sit on each committee. The bylaws also stipulate that a certain number of students on each committee must be Student Council representatives.

The preliminary work on issues that eventually go to Academic Council is done by the standing committees. Some of the committees meet once a week or once a month and others meet as required.

The standing committee descriptions and number of positions open on each are as follows:

- The University Committee on Academic Environment addresses policies and procedures that affect academic achievement. Among the issues the committee discusses are plans for public safety, buildings and lands and traffic and transportation facilities. Two undergraduate and one graduate positions are open. At least one of these must be a Student Council member.

- The University Committee on Academic Governance conducts a continuing review of the Bylaws for Academic Governance. It reviews departmental bylaws and provides guidelines for Academic Council elections. Five positions for undergraduates and two for Council of Graduate Student representatives are open. Four of the undergraduates must be Student Council members.

- The University Committee on Academic Policy deals with all matters pertaining to curriculum revision, methods of teaching, teaching evaluations, advising and counseling, admissions and retention, financial aid and the distribution of educational resources. Positions are open for four undergraduates and two graduates, two of whom must be Student Council members.

- The University Committee on Curriculum establishes course criteria. It also approves or reviews any changes in courses or degree requirements. Five undergraduate positions and two graduate positions are open, with two reserved for council members.

- The University Committee on Faculty Tenure is the judiciary committee for all tenure actions. Positions are open for two undergraduates and one graduate student, one of which must be a council member.

- The University Committee on General Education judges the acceptability of courses to fulfill a general education requirement. Two undergraduates and one graduate, one a member of Student Council, sit on this committee.

Three advisory-consultative committees — representing the honors program, the library and international studies and programs — are also in need of student representatives.

For further information or an application, contact Julie Mathews in 10 Linton Hall. The deadline for applying is noon May 15.

Parking policy criticized

By MIKE CHAUDHURI
State News Staff Writer

MSU should allow parking in residence hall parking bays all night during weekends, the All-University Traffic Committee was told at a public hearing on parking and towing Wednesday.

Paul Schwartz, social science representative to the ASMSU Student Board said life would be made a lot easier for residence hall students if they were allowed to park in the bays on weekends — without having to move their cars in the middle of the night.

It is currently illegal to park on MSU streets between 2 and 6 a.m., according to an MSU ordinance.

Department of Public Safety officials gave several reasons why all-night parking is not allowed, including the need for snow removal trucks to have free access on campus roads.

HOWEVER, SCHWARTZ SAID, the University could designate "snow emergency" areas. In the case of a snowfall, students could be informed through residence hall cars parked in the bays should be moved, he said.

DPS director Richard Bernitt said he was "not in a position to either defend or attack" the policy prohibiting overnight parking on streets.

He added the AUTC would consider all complaints heard at the meeting.

Schwartz also asked that one part of the DPS's towing policy, which was released last January, be made clearer. The policy states cars might be towed from reserved lots "that are full or nearly full."

Schwartz said "nearly-full" was vague and needed to be more clearly defined. (continued on page 10)

C&O freight train derails

A Chesapeake-Ohio freight train derailed between Williamston and Webberville at about 2 a.m. Thursday, causing no injuries but spilling 500 gallons of a "moderate to slightly" toxic insecticide, the Department of Natural Resources reported.

DNR personnel were at the scene of the five-car derailment Thursday cleaning up the spillage of the insecticide known commercially as Seven Four Oil, said Art Bloomer, chief of the DNR's division of environmental epidemiology.

Bloomer said the 500-gallon spillage was under control with no one except the clean-up crew exposed to the substance.

The Ingham County Sheriff's Department is investigating the cause of the derailment, Capt. Clarence Wheeler said.

Soviet economy talk topic

Igor Birman, a former long-range economic planner in the Soviet Union, will talk on "The Soviet Economy: Today and Tomorrow" at 3:30 p.m. today in 3

Marshall Hall. His talk is sponsored by the Russian and East European Studies Program and the Department of Economics.

Correction

It was incorrectly reported in Thursday's State News that under the new AFSCME Local 1585 contract, employees "will not be reimbursed" the $275 they did not receive in March for a cost of living allowance.

The story should have read employees "will now be reimbursed" under the new contract.

OPINION

A self-serving ploy for votes

In an economy beset by 20 percent inflation with no foreseeable end in sight, it is certainly refreshing to find individuals who feel they do not need or want an increased cash flow.

The Ingham County commissioners, possibly knowing something we do not about the future of the economy, voted last week to cut the amount of raise they decided to give themselves last fall.

This sudden switch in sentiment must leave many curious onlookers scratching their foreheads and wondering there must be a method to their madness.

One answer that comes to mind is the kind-hearted commissioners realized in these times of scarce resources and collective penny-pinching that it would be unfair for them to do with while their constituents do without.

We could commend the gesture as noble and self-sacrificing if it were not for the second thought that immediately comes to mind — 1980 happens to be an election year.

It is true that the "pay cut," to use the term loosely since the raise had not yet been put into effect, will save the county money and the new system of payment will cut bureaucratic red tape and paperwork.

But it is unrealistic for the commissioners to think their actions will be viewed by constituents as anything less than a self-serving ploy for votes six months before election day.

Several commissioners, including East Lansing's Mark Grebner who is not running for re-election, saw the action for what it was worth but participated in the "philanthropic" follies for other reasons. Grebner and Jess Sobel, also from East Lansing, seem to think Commissioner Thomas Brennan initiated the action because he is running for judge in the 55th District and they said so publicly.

Brennan said he voted for the cut because the original raise had been pushed through without sufficient deliberation. We urge the commissioners to give serious forethought next time the salary issue arises, thereby leaving their constituents little reason to question the motives and timing behind moves such as this one.

Keep justice off television

"Search for Justice," it must be agreed, has the potential to become more popular than any daytime television program on the air today. With accusations ducking counter-accusations, drama, lively debate and fire and brimstone stakes, televised courtroom trials could conceivably lure the house-riden away from the most entrenched of soap operas.

The U.S. Supreme Court, after barring the use of media cameras from courtrooms in Estes versus Texas, has now agreed to decide whether televising trials may in effect eliminate a defendant's chance at a fair trial. Until a decision is reached, trials by television should not be considered for nightly newscasts.

The issue at stake is not the public's right to know. Journalists are free to cover most trials with tape recorders, notebooks and in some states even with cameras. But the addition of live sight and sound to coverage raises serious questions about a defendant's constitutional right to a fair trial in a setting dominated by Nielsen ratings.

One cannot focus on the broadcasting penchant for selecting the juiciest part of a clip for the nightly newscast without examining the viewers TV executives want to attract. The television-viewing public is, after all, an exceedingly fickle audience. Nowhere except in TV land are programs canceled long before their 13 weeks are up. Lawyers, notorious for ranting and raving at even the traffic court level, could hardly be expected to refrain from melodramatics when the camera light blinked on. The potential for turning a homicide case into a kangaroo court proceeding, which is possible in more sensational cases, would be unavoidable with viewers rooting for whichever attorney made a better point. Voters who cast their ballot on a candidate's appearance can hardly be expected not to judge a defendant's guilt or innocence based on the same criteria.

When the Supreme Court in Gannett versus Depasquale ruled judges had the right to minimize the effects of pre-trial hearings, a valid point was raised even if the extrapolation was wrong. Excessive publicity before a trial can result in a defendant being branded guilty before the case even reaches the courtroom. Some cases are so prejudiced that the trial has to be moved to another location because 12 open-minded jurors cannot be found in a city of millions.

In granting judges the power to clear all media from the courtrooms of pre-trial hearings to assure a fair trial for the accused, the Supreme Court went overboard, ignoring the First Amendment and public's right to know. Barring television cameras from the proceedings would be a more logical ruling, even if a network loses a smash hit to run against the competition as a consequence.

VIEWPOINT: LIFE SAVING TECHNIQUES

Skills crucial in rescue efforts

By BRIAN D. BROWN

Recently I read in The State News of proposed legislation requiring the teaching of cardiopulmonary resuscitation in Michigan high schools. Being a CPR instructor myself, I have been impressed by the idea of teaching this practical and "relevant-to-the-real-world" skill to young people who are often bored by the pabulum and regurgitation aspect of too many educational programs. At the same time, I was a little dismayed that CPR courses are not available on any scale to MSU's collegiate community.

Reading an article in the April 16 State News about a CPR program on campus, then, came as quite a surprise to me.

Before going further, let me answer Joe Average Person's question "What are you talking about and why should I care?"

In short, cardiopulmonary resuscitation refers to a technique by which a lay person can maintain vital life functions in another who cannot do so him or herself, until definitive hospital or paramedic-level care can be reached. Specifically, since the brain is very sensitive to a lack of oxygen, if the heart stops beating (cardiac arrest) or breathing stops (respiratory arrest), irreversible brain damage can occur and chances of revival are slim, after only four to six minutes. CPR acts to approximate heart action (by external cardiac compressions) and breathing (by artificial respirations) until an advanced life support unit can arrive at the scene. Situations that can require CPR intervention include heart attack, drowning, electrical shock, poisoning, drug overdose and other severe traumas. Also included in many CPR courses are methods of handling a choking person and relief of complete airway obstructions. Any of these situations can occur in a fast-paced university environment.

Because four to six minutes from onset of cardiac or respiratory arrest is simply too short a time for trained help to arrive, it is hoped that members of the public can be trained to "fill the gap." That's where Joe Average Person comes in. Students and staff, especially in high risk areas (IM personnel, residence hall advisors and management staffs, etc) can benefit from this training both inside and outside the job. No wave of paranoia intended, but life-threatening situations do occur; just recently there was a fatal cardiac arrest at Jenison Fieldhouse. Unfortunately, efforts by CPR-trained members of MSU's athletic training staff were fruitless in that case. My point: there is a need and, in my experience, a desire to receive CPR training by members of the University community.

This brings me back to the "surprising" State News article mentioned earlier — surprising in that a "designed" and "implemented" program of the type mentioned in the article still does not exist in any tangible form, at this time, as the article intimated. (Another Red Cross instructor and myself taught three courses to a few members of the IM staff during winter term, but courses for the spring have been suspended due to a tight intramural budget.)

Do not misunderstand the point. The interest in CPR training shown by MSU administrators so far has been refreshing and positive. However, I fear the potential program may be suffocated by bureaucracy, red tape and budget cuts before it gets a chance to even begin. For sure, funding such a program in these tough economic times will greatly test the University's commitment to CPR training. I applaud all efforts and support for the program thus far and pledge my commitment to help in any way possible to get this program off the ground. The Heart Association is also willing to offer its support to this cause, but cannot handle financially a university-oriented program of any size itself.

Maybe I am too close to the situation to see it objectively, but I feel the program is well worth its required financial outlay and coordinated action by concerned parties soon.

Only calloused can hit and run

On April 24, at about 9 p.m. a blind friend of mine, J.J. Jackson, was struck by a car while crossing the south side of the Hagadorn Road and Grand River Avenue intersection. The driver concerned was turning right (i.e., south) onto Hagadorn. Although J.J. was knocked to his back on the pavement and momentarily stunned, he fortunately appears to have suffered physically no more than extensive bruising.

There are, however, two aspects of this incident which are deeply disturbing. First, as verified by others at the scene, J.J. was crossing with the pedestrian lights in his favor and with his white cane in clear view. The intersection is well lit and he should have been able to cross safely. Second, after being knocked to the pavement, J.J. was in great danger of being run over by following traffic but the driver in question recklessly disregarded this danger and sped away, presumably out of callous self-interest. Others showing more concern for another person, quickly came to J.J.'s aid.

Mobility, in the sense of being able to travel independently and safely, is a very important skill for blind persons. J.J. has traveled in this manner locally, nationally and internationally for 19 years without a serious accident until now. His mobility skills have served as model to others and he is a familiar sight as he moves about the campus and the Lansing area. There are only limited precautions which blind pedestrians can take to ensure their safety. For the most part they have to rely on sighted persons exercising particular care where blind pedestrians are concerned. This is both a moral and a legal responsibility. State law mandates that any driver who approaches within 10 feet of a blind pedestrian (i.e., someone using a white cane or a guide dog wearing a harness) must immediately bring their vehicle to a full stop and take such precautions before proceeding as may be necessary to avoid accident or injury to the blind pedestrian. The driver in the present incident clearly did not exercise such responsibility — either before or after striking J.J. Perhaps if the sighted among us tried to cross a busy intersection blindfolded we would be more considerate in the future.

No scapegoats

I find it very difficult to believe an opinion as expressed in "The scapegoats of confrontations" (April 30) can still possibly exist. It must have been written by a nut or an Iranian — almost an undetectable difference.

President Carter's crackdown on Iranian students is obviously not a scapegoat tactic but rather a justified move to rid this country of pollution. If there are air and water pollution laws, why should there not be Iranian pollution laws?

Let me tell you, my heart really goes out to those poor, innocent Iranian students who are having financial problems and who might even have to go back to their homeland. If they believe in American diplomacy and the resolve to settle this crisis peacefully, why do we not send them back to Iran and have them try to knock some sense into somebody's head? Surely there must be someone over there whose brain does not automatically shut off when they open their mouth. Big deal if the students end up in prison or get shot. What makes their lives more precious than our eight Marines who died two weeks ago? They believed in America.

Even with all the Iranian profs, teaching assistants and students on campus, I do not think too many people would be heartbroken to see them deported. By not acting strongly and not hitting at all possible angles, the United States has only shown the world how well terrorism works.

VIEWPOINT: SOVEREIGNTY

Blacks must continue struggle for citizenship

By MICHAEL SHEMA

I was very displeased with some of James Frierson's proposals to increase the validity of Black citizenship in the United States. Of his three suggestions, only one will have any chance of improving the economic, political and racial problems of the Black Americans on a long-term basis. There is only one way to make Black American citizenship more meaningful and true. Stay in America and work to bring it up to the ideal standards that most White Americans enjoy.

What would be accomplished by all the Blacks who pull up stakes and migrate to other African nations? They would be almost comparable to their post-Civil War situation. They would be free and full citizens in word, but not in deed. After 300 years in America, the Black American culture would be vastly different from that of the Black Africans. They would not be coming home. They would be new immigrants in a nation that cannot really feed its present population, let alone new arrivals. They would become another exploited minority, this time by Black Africans. They would be fighting for civil rights again, starting right from scratch. This time it would be much more difficult because the Third World nations do not believe in granting rights. Citizenship becomes only the temporary right to survive. One definitely has a greater chance of gaining full citizenship in the United States than in any Third World state.

The next suggestion is that the Blacks of America be given their own nation. This nation would be established on what is presently United States territory with the purpose of creating "their own nation free of racism and exploitation of man by man." This is unnecessary and dangerous. The new Black American nation would become an easy target of hate and prejudice. It would increase unreasonable fears to an extremely high and potentially violent degree. It would be segregation on a national scale. Carving out a slab of land for the sovereign rule of the Black people will in no way make Blacks free from racism and exploitation. In their own nation they would be just as racist and exploitative as other nations. The exploitation would fall onto other ethnic groups or classes of people. Someone has to take the bottom rung on the social ladder. A Black American nation would change nothing.

There is no choice but to take up the fight for equal and meaningful citizenship where we are, or we will be running from our responsibilities to our citizens. To do otherwise would not change the social structure. We would fall back into the same patterns of life propagating the same racist and exploitative policies. Martin Delaney and his contemporaries are correct in saying that no nation can grant citizenship to a whole population without their being involved in the decision-making process. But you cannot take us back to 1865 and try to change history. In 1980 the only choice is to stay in America and try to continue the struggle for full citizenship, non-exploitative economics, and proper socialization patterns free of racism. This would create effective change even if it is less dramatic than waving the flag of the new Black nation. Creating a Black nation does not eradicate racism. Returning to Africa does not stop exploitation here. These solutions only modify the national origin or skin color of the victims. We must change the minds of men, change the way we think and act, and society will transform to present a fuller and more meaningful citizenship for us all.

VIEWPOINT: INDIVIDUAL RIGHTS

The final exam for humankind

By JAMES F. O'NEIL

Many learned historians and sociologists believe our society is on a self-destructive trip it does not want or need to take. Some atomic scientists have established a doomsday clock based on world conditions. They say our society is just a few minutes away from that fateful day.

Pitirim Sorokin, one of the most eminent sociologists of our time, wrote a book in 1941 entitled The Crisis Of Our Age. In his book, Sorokin pointed out that the rate of violence in the first 40 years of this century was higher than at any other time since the dawn of civilization. (This was prior to the disasters of World War II, Korea, Indo-China and the current increasing violence throughout our country and the world.) He indicated that if this self-destructive habit of the human race, along with other self-destructive tendencies, was not curtailed our society would soon destroy itself.

Arnold Toynbee, one of the most noted historians of our time, wrote a book in 1965 entitled Chance And Habit. He, too, called out the self-destructive habits of mankind and said that if these habits were not changed, we would destroy ourselves.

In 1973, professor Mendenhall, a leading professor of ancient and biblical studies at the University of Michigan, wrote a book entitled The Tenth Generation. Mendenhall called out humanity's unfortunate affinity with the distant past. He stated that our society has regressed morally and politically to the level of the amoral "Late Bronze Age." He believes the two eras may soon share the same end — the total destruction of their civilizations.

All of these eminent men point out that self-destruction is not inevitable if we but realize these crucial problems cannot be solved by the monopoly of power exercised by the government but rather the people themselves must change and they also must change the government.

Solzhenitsyn, the expatriated Russian writer and philosopher, warned us of the impending danger when he said, "Even if we are spared destruction by war, our lives will have to change if we want to save life from self-destruction."

Today our society is closer yet to self-destruction. Even though most attention is centered on the threat from foreign countries, history has shown that most countries first fall from internal problems. However, there are two very significant ways to prevent this ominous threat. Two ways which are unique in that neither of them requires more money or more government.

The first one is the teaching and practicing of the basic value of self-respect, respect for others and respect for the law. This is something that each one of us must take a responsibility for in our own lives, families and communities. It is also imperative that the schools teach it and our government, business and union leaders practice it as a positive example for the rest of society.

The second way requires the government leaders to put trust in the people by giving the people power to initiate and approve federal legislation and constitutional amendments. This is essential if we are to re-establish our government as a democracy in a peaceful manner. Otherwise, there may be a violent overthrow of the government. This will be brought on by the people's increasing frustration with the presidency and Supreme Court tending toward imperialism and a Congress which ignores the wishes of the majority of the people while involved in Koreagate, Abscamgate, lobbyists and inflating their own pockets at the taxpayers expense. At the same time Congress does very little to stem runaway inflation and higher taxes which are a major threat to our society. This is leading us to the pitfalls of which Thomas Jefferson warned us when he said: "To preserve our independence, we let our rulers load us with perpetual debt. We must decide between economy and liberty or extravagance and slavery."

More recently Arthur Burns, former chairperson of the Federal Reserve Board, warned of these dangers when he said: "Discontentment bred by inflation can provoke profoundly disturbing social and political change, as the history of other nations teaches."

Ignoring the will of the people can lead the people to follow the Declaration of Independence which says whenever any form of government becomes destructive of the ends of our democracy it is the people's right, in fact it is their duty, to overthrow that government and to provide a new government which will provide the safeguards for their democracy.

Why will the president and Congress not listen and follow the people's direction? Why will the president and Congress not trust the people? Why will they not give the people power to initiate and approve federal legislation and Constitutional amendments — just as people are now able to do in 23 states? Why not return the government of the people and for the people — to the people peacefully? Must we have a violent revolution to restore our democracy?

What we the people need to do is ask every presidential and congressional candidate to support legislation to give the people the power to initiate and approve federal legislation. Legislation to accomplish this has been introduced in Congress and needs the people's support if we hope to make the government responsible to the people by peaceful means. And we support a constitutional amendment to give the people the power to initiate and ratify constitutional amendments at the federal level. This would be in addition to the present methods which permit Congress and the states to initiate constitutional amendments.

Alvin Toffler, author of Future Shock and EcoSpasm, has renewed the call for a great participatory and anticipatory democracy and says, "unless political foresight is brought under popular local control, it could destroy us."

LETTERS

Not responsible for ancestry

When I first read James Frierson's viewpoint (April 30) I sat in disbelief for a few minutes. The implications of that letter were certainly shocking and certainly not conceivable.

Granted, the Black population in the United States has, ever since the slaves were brought here, been abused in various ways. Many of the complaints Blacks have today are very much justified: unfairness and discrimination in hiring, housing, discrimination and so on.

What Frierson does not seem to recognize is the efforts that some Americans (Black and White) have made to give Black people equality in these and other areas. An entire system cannot be changed overnight or even over a few years, not for anyone. Frierson, it seems, cannot appreciate the progress that has been made in recent years. He would rather spout off about what hasn't been done. I am sure we could all adopt his negative attitude if we tried. What fun!

I am personally disgusted by his suggesting that Blacks desiring to return to Africa must be "assisted." Chances are that Frierson was born in the United States and that his parents were as well. How far back would we have to go in history to find his ancestors who were kidnapped and forced to come to America? Right or wrong, that is history — it is over and cannot be changed.

I was born in the United States as were my parents, grandparents and great grandparents. Frierson, you have no more right to a "portion of land in this country on which to build your own nation" as I do. Perhaps you have some legitimate points about the mistakes of our forefathers, but they must remain legitimate points. Certainly you do not believe that because you were born Black and I was born White that I can be held accountable for the past. No person or group of persons alive today can be held responsible for the events of the past.

What you are doing is trying to reverse the discriminations of the past to hurt the White people of the present. Certainly if you wish to return to Africa you are more than welcome. But I am certainly not going to buy your plane ticket!

VIEWPOINT: PERSIAN GULF

The restraint of reason

By ANWAR H. MUJAHID

With the takeover of Afghanistan by Soviet forces last December, it was naturally expected that the conflict between the United States and Iran over the hostage problem would be peacefully resolved. But unfortunately, things have moved in the opposite direction.

Already more than 500,000 men, women and children from Afghanistan have taken refuge in Pakistan and the influx of more refugees is continuing, since there have been cases of naked atrocities against the freedom-loving people of Afghanistan. It was reported that after the early March Strike in Kabul (which showed the unanimous resolve of the Afghan people to condemn and disdain foreign aggression) about 1,000 persons were machine gunned by the occupying forces.

Despite this, the recent imposition of economic sanctions by the European Common Market countries has drawn the government of Iran closer to the communist bloc, and if some kind of military action is taken by the United States (as the failure of the rescue mission has further complicated the situation), the consequences may be drastic not only for the United States and Iran, but also for the ultimate peace and stability of that region of the world.

It is not hard to predict that one by-product of such an action would be the permanence of Soviet domination of Afghanistan because the Soviet Union is taking the pretext of the American action and would be able to condone its naked aggression in Afghanistan.

Not only that, but the Soviet Union would find it quite easy to implement its imperialist and expansionist policies further into the Persian Gulf. The Moslem world would thus be facing two hostile superpowers coming from both the East and the West.

I therefore earnestly believe that the Moslem countries and Moslem organizations working in different parts to the world should endeavor to help and advise both the government of Iran and the United States to come to a reasonable settlement of the issue. All of the peace-loving peoples of the world should also carry out their obligation to impress upon both parties to show rationale and restraint.

As we look at today's world, we see thousands of starving people in Cambodia and million of Afghan and Palestinian refugees who have been forced out of their homelands and are compelled to live in refugee camps. Under such conditions, a new escalation of hostilities in the Persian Gulf would not only put the peace of that region in jeopardy, but would also bring tremendous problems and sufferings to mankind.

VIEWPOINT: PRO-WOMAN

Our freedom means choice

By MARY GILSON

In her column in The State News May 2, Lesa Doll accused the EveryWoman's Weekend Coordinating Committee of fostering divisions among women. Her criticisms are based on misconceptions which others may also share.

The EveryWoman's Weekend Coordinating Committee did not create a split in viewpoint among women. The political agitations of an off-campus group have brought a pre-existing conflict to public attention. The division between pro-choice and anti-choice groups has been apparent from the beginnings of the feminist movement in this country.

Feminism as Doll defined it in her criticism in The State News is the striving for "freedom to exist without discrimination, generalizations and preconceived notions." It is because we more or less agree with this definition that the collective decided not to sponsor presentations of viewpoints of groups such as the so-called right-to-life group and STOP ERA. Such groups actively promote discrimination against women and restrictive stereotyping by actively and publicly working to impose or maintain coercive legal restrictions on women's choices with respect to work, growth and procreation. They thus place themselves in opposition to feminist goals. The fact that some members of those groups are biologically female does not support the assumption that we must embrace them as feminists or part of the women's liberation movement. Such women are independent political persons and rational agents whose political affiliations are not determined by their chromosomes.

The EveryWoman's Weekend Coordinating Committee did not presume to have the authority to decide what feminism means to everyone. We set a pro-woman goal for our project defining pro-woman as advocating freedom of choice for women and complete control of our bodies and our lives. We invited groups to present views which were consistent with the goal we had set. The Academic Freedom Report guarantees our right to freedom of expression and communication, and anyone coercing us to sponsor what is antithetical to the goals we established is violating that right. We claim the authority only to set our own goals and to judge what is and is not consistent with them. Anyone was welcome to attend the program, and we did nothing and said nothing to inhibit the ordinary freedoms of expressions of attendees.

The group Michigan Right-to-Life, which has long since openly declared itself to be in opposition to the goals of expanding women's choices in work, growth and procreation, tried to divert our resources and sponsorship to the support of their crusade, and we did not yield to them in the name of a spurious unity.

Gilson is the 1980 co-coordinator of EveryWoman's Weekend.

VIEWPOINT: ABORTION

To kill or not to kill

By PATRICK ROGERS

Recent letters have been printed in The State News in support of the goals of the recent EveryWoman's Weekend. Although I have no quarrel with the rationales used in these letters, I would like to challenge the basic assumptions and language used in these otherwise well-written opinions. The issue of University funding of this event, although the central issue, is but a spin-off of the central controversy underlying this debate — abortion. You may have noticed that the two sides on this issue, those "pro-choice" and "pro-life" folks, use two different languages when talking about abortion. This may seem like quibbling over meaningless symbols, but it is not. The choice of words one uses in regard to anything is symptomatic of the attitudes toward the issue being described. Also words are often manipulated into clichés and buzzwords, which then take on connotations beyond the literal definition of the words. Examples of this are: "cult," "equal rights," "capitalist," "pro-choice," and "pro-woman."

This last cliché, "pro-woman," has surfaced in the debate over University funding of EWW. It is convenient but misleading to arbitrarily label an event "pro-woman" and proceed to define "pro-woman" with another cliché, "a woman's right to control her own body." When it gets right down to the heart of the matter, what are the choices if one is to be "pro-choice?" When the many rationalizations and "What if..." situations are said and done there remains two "choices": to kill, or not to kill, an unborn child. You can dance around this point all you want, but medicine, science, the Constitution, the Declaration of Independence, and the vast majority of legal opinions (the Supreme Court decision notwithstanding) will not dance with you.

"A woman's right to have control over her own body" is a slogan many, including myself, would be hard pressed to find fault with. However, when an unspoken part of this right is to have her own child killed before it is born, I take exception. A comment here from the official journal of the California Medical Association, California Medicine (Sept. 1970) in an editorial supporting abortion rights, may shed some light on the psychology of Newspack used by those advocating abortion rights.

"Since the old ethic has not yet been fully displaced, it has been necessary to separate the idea of abortion from the idea of killing, which continues to be socially abhorrent. The result has been a curious avoidance of the scientific fact, which everyone really knows, that human life begins at conception and continues whether intra- or extra-uterine until death. The very considerable semantic gymnastics which are required to rationalize abortion as anything but taking a human life would be ludicrous if they were not put forth under socially impeccable auspices. It is suggested that this schizophrenic sort of subterfuge is necessary because while a new ethic is being accepted the old one has not yet been rejected."

Rogers is a 1974 graduate of MSU.

Stop cruelty in test methods

Many thanks for the informative and sensitive viewpoint article concerning the inhumane testing methods of chemicals on animals. The Draize method of putting chemicals directly into the animals' eyes and on their skin is one of many extremely painful and senseless practices inflicted upon thousands of animals every day in laboratories across the country.

Some animal testing is needed in research for medical advancements and in other necessary areas, and it can be done humanely. But we should abolish animal testing wherever we can, especially when the products involved are only for vanity's sake — such as cosmetics.

As the authors of the article stated, the tools available to us needed to eliminate these barbarous practices are social, economic and political pressures. Write to the Food and Drug Administration, to the individual companies, and to your political representatives. Only a change in the law will alleviate these problems. And only individuals who show their concern will change the law. Also, boycott those companies who employ these cruel testing methods.

An outstanding, reasonably priced cosmetic and toiletry company called "Beauty Without Cruelty" uses no animal testing or animal by-products in its products. Write to: ARK, BWC Cosmetics, P.O. Box 472, Clarkston, MI 48016.

If they can do it, then why can't others?

Sneak preview

I was appalled and infuriated but not the least bit surprised at the shallow and evasive closing remarks delivered by a Board of Trustee member in the meeting with minority students on Thursday, April 24. After hearing numerous testimonies from minority students concerning the very real and incessant social, economic and educational inequalities suffered here at MSU, the most the trustee could reply was, "Thank you for coming. We appreciate your large turnout this evening." Not one statement nor the slightest mention was made to indicate that any action would be taken or even initiated to resolve any of the thoroughly stressed problems of minority students. This nonreaction on the part of the Board of Trustees evidenced and reinforced MSU minority students' legitimate belief that this University is sometimes insensitive to the unquestionable different needs and concerns of minority students.

The board members' casual and seemingly pre-planned responses also indicated they felt the meeting to have been a haphazard gathering of minority students blowing off some temporary steam and thus did not necessitate serious attention. Well, if the Board of Trustees is naive enough to believe that minorities' recent expression of their dissatisfactions was a temporary phase or blowing off of steam, then the chances of visible and substantial change for minorities is in greater jeopardy than presently realized.

If no action is taken or commitments made to both remedy and right the prevalent wrongs expressed by MSU minorities then the trustees can consider the meeting held April 24 to have been a minute sample of the further protest that will occur. Our concerns are real. The meeting was essentially just a sneak preview of coming attractions.

Local meetings pose problems for media

Michigan journalists are encountering problems in gaining access to governmental meetings, "especially on a local level," said members of the Central Michigan Chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists (Sigma Delta Chi).

Wes Thorp, chairperson of the chapter's Freedom of Information Committee, has undertaken a comprehensive survey of Michigan media to determine where the most serious problems lie.

"We want to get a handle on the problem," Thorp said. "We have received a number of complaints from reporters, on local levels of government, that are being confronted with closed meetings."

"Hopefully, all of the editors around the state will respond to the questionnaire," he said.

REPORTERS ARE generally being confronted with these problems on local and not state levels, he said.

"Our state Legislature is fairly open," Thorp said. "We have had problems with closed meetings in the governor's office, but it is pretty open."

Jim Harger, correspondent for Panax Newspapers, attributed the problem to the fact that at local meetings it is easy to turn one or two reporters away while in the state House of Representatives it is more difficult to shut the doors on a group of reporters.

A typical problem encountered on a local level, Thorp said, occurs at school board meetings at which the superintendent is evaluated.

"A lot of school boards close these types of meetings to the press," Thorp said. "They do not realize that the public has a right to know."

After receiving the survey results, the chapter plans to compile them to determine what actions could be taken to solve the problems that are unearthed, he said.

POSSIBLE SOLUTIONS WOULD include the education of government officials in details of current law, legal defense funds for media victims of open government lawbreakers or media exposure of flagrant government violators.

The group would like to educate media members on such problems as how to deal with judges who want to close courtrooms, Thorp said. "We would also like to work with county commissioners around the state and sensitize them to the role of the media," he said.

The legal defense fund would provide legal help to reporters who need to deal with emergency type situations within a matter of hours, he said.

The group hopes the survey will lay the foundation for a concerted effort on the media's part to help remedy the problems journalists and the public have encountered in keeping government open, Thorp said.

Even though it was a chilly Thursday, students from William Donley School in East Lansing were digging into the turf behind the school building. The students, under the supervision of members of MSU's elementary education and agriculture science departments, planted shrubs as part of an environmental education program. The students will be planting different varieties of shrubs over the next ten years in hopes of creating a natural wildlife area adjacent to the school.

'Sino-Soviet tension not in U.S. interest'

Heightened tensions between the Soviet Union and China are not in the best interest of American security, a former national security advisor to President Carter said Wednesday.

Michel Oksenberg, who as a member of the National Security Council helped pave the way for normalization of relations with China, said the United States should not try to play China against the Soviet Union.

"A conflict between these two would alter the world as we know it and would be destabilizing," said Oksenberg, a professor of political science at the University of Michigan. As long as the United States has strong relations with both countries, he said, a lessening in tensions between the two would be a better foreign policy strategy.

Oksenberg's comments were given as part of a China Week talk on "The State of the Chinese Revolution."

"As China develops in the years ahead, its action will increasingly impact on our lives," Oksenberg said. He said the way the United States handles China's growth will be "a test case if we can deal intelligently with the developing world."

The cultural revolution left China with many economic, military and agricultural challenges to overcome, he said, and normalized relations with the United States presents an additional set of problems as China modernizes.

Acquiring the energy necessary to run a modern country and modifying the agricultural system to handle increased modernization are two of the challenges a changing China faces Oksenberg said.

But the problems of not moving ahead — including persistent poverty and internal conflict — would have been harder to handle than those resulting from modernization, he added.

Spouse abuse bill proposed by Stabenow

By MARK FELLOWS
State News Staff Writer

Legislation expanding the scope of a law allowing warrantless arrests of suspected spouse abusers will be considered by the state House of Representatives probably late next week, a sponsor of the bill said Thursday.

Rep. Debbie Stabenow, D-Lansing, and other legislators hope to broaden a public act which allows police to arrest suspected spouse abusers without witnessing the act.

The 1978 law was a significant step toward protecting abused spouses, Stabenow said, because police previously could not remove a violent spouse from a house for misdemeanor crimes, such as assault and battery, without witnessing the act.

The new proposal expands the law to include spouses not separated or divorced. The new legislation also specifically includes anyone who has lived with a suspected abuser.

THE NEW LAW would protect abused children and older people along with spouses, Stabenow said.

The new legislation would also free an injunction on order process from Michigan's divorce law. Under the 1978 law, only those in the process of divorce or separation were protected from spouses who enter the house and molest them or attempt to remove children.

The new bill will include a section directing that injunctions issued against a spouse to prohibit entry into a house be entered into the Michigan Law Enforcement Information Network.

The network gives police in most areas of the state almost instant access to extensive computer files of wanted persons and stolen property. Entering such injunctions into the network would provide greatly increased protection to abused spouses, Stabenow said.

STABENOW SAID THE original draft of the new legislation also protected women who have been romantically involved but have never lived with the attacker. However, the lack of a specific definition of "romantic involvement" and possible constitutional objections to the bill based on equal protection made sponsors drop the provision.

One problem with the 1978 law that cannot be corrected by legislation, she added, is the reluctance of many police to use the warrantless arrest power. Many police either fear a possible false arrest lawsuit or are unaware of the law, she said.

Many agencies also do not maintain records of such arrests, in violation of the law, she said.

Stabenow said the state must make greater efforts to inform law enforcement personnel and others of the purpose of the law.

"We need to better educate people about what these domestic situations are all about," she said. "We need to sensitize people in the legal system to what is involved."

Stabenow said the bill has received "very positive response" by legislators. Supporters of the bill include the Department of State Police, the National Organization of Women and Lansing's Council Against Domestic Assault.

Education options series set

The Michigan Coalition of Alternative Schools will present "Options in Learning," a series of workshops beginning at 9:30 a.m. Saturday on the third floor of the Union.

The workshops will discuss primary and secondary education in public schools and in alternative schools. Representatives from Homestudy, a group of parents who teach their children at home, will also make a presentation.

The movies "Summerhill" and "In a Free Country There Ought to be a Free Choice" will be shown Saturday morning and again in the afternoon.

A $3 registration fee will be collected at the Union beginning at 9 a.m.

Transportation study of E.L. will continue

By ROLAND WILKERSON
State News Staff Writer

The concept of a new transportation center for East Lansing has been deemed "favorable" by the city planning department, meaning feasibility studies for the project will probably continue.

City planner Glen Remus told the Planning Commission Committee of the Whole Wednesday that after the first part of a two-phase study, the planning staff supports the project.

The study must be approved by City Council before work on the project can continue.

The proposed center will include a train station, service to inter-city and local business, short and long-term parking and a taxi stand.

REMUS SAID IF the city decided to build the terminal, it would apply for a $1 million grant from the Michigan Department of Transportation. Remus said the grant should cover all the construction cost of the project.

A site currently being considered by the planning staff is near the intersection of Trowbridge Street and South Harrison (continued on page 18)

MSU seniors win honors from science foundation

Although it has been a rough year for MSU on the athletic fields, the University did manage to rank tops in a recent national academic challenge.

For the fourth time in six years, MSU took top Big Ten honors in the National Science Foundation annual fellowship competition.

MSU had eight winners and 17 students receiving honorable mention, giving it a second-place finish among public universities, second only to the University of California-Berkeley.

California had 15 winners in the competition, which is usually won by either that school or MSU.

The eight winners will each receive three years of study at the institution of their choice, as well as a stipend of $4,320 per year.

The University of Michigan placed third in the Big Ten with seven winners and 17 honorable mentions.

The following MSU seniors won NSF fellowships: Thomas M. Bartos, in chemical engineering; Margaret Eppstein, zoology; Barbara Greenfield, psychology; John S. Herron, fisheries and wildlife; Brian M. Kent, electrical engineering; Beth Rasmussen, microbiology; Eric R. Salberta, physics; and Charles D. Smith, biochemistry.

James Pickering, director of the Honors College, says the primary reason for MSU's success is the close relationship which exists between senior faculty and students.

"There is a direct 'laying on of hands' as senior faculty work with the students in planning their graduate programs," adds Pickering.

THE BEST OF REGGAE

Mighty good movies, mon

By JOHN NEILSON
State News Reviewer

The Harder They Come and Reggae — two films exploring the vibrant sound and underlying socio-cultural roots of Jamaica's reggae music — will be shown together on campus this weekend by Frontline Cinema. This double feature should not be missed by anyone interested in this infectious island music or its recent English and American offspring.

Reggae is an hour-long documentary made in England in 1970, at a time when reggae music was making its initial impact outside of its island home. The film is based on the music of the Caribbean Music Festival held in Wembley Arena that year, and the live performances are interspersed with interviews and commentary attempting to place the music in its true political and cultural perspective. While the commentary gets a bit heavy-handed at times, the film is a valid attempt at showing that there is more to reggae than just a happy dance beat.

The music in Reggae is mainly the pre-Bob Marley/Rastafarian ska and pop-reggae, and with the recent surge of interest in this music the film seems remarkably timely. While the Specials, Madness, and Selector are While Reggae goes out of its way to tell about the music and its cultural spawning grounds, The Harder They Come actually takes you there. The film — which is probably the best reggae film ever made — was shot in the slums and shanty towns of Kingston, and the realism this provides makes the picture all the more effective.

The film stars reggae singer Jimmy Cliff as Ivan, a poor Jamaican country boy who moves to the big city to become a reggae star. Confronted by corruption and exploitation at every turn, Ivan must support himself by selling ganja, and he eventually ends up as a gunslinger and a Robin Hood-styled folk hero to the masses in the slums. Ironically, his song "The Harder They Come" does become a hit, and Ivan finds himself at the top of the record charts and the Most Wanted list at the same time.

This musician-as-outlaw-and-folk-hero stance has since been taken to heart by a lot of rock musicians, as evidenced by the fact that both Keith Richards and Wayne Kramer have recorded versions of the title song, while the Clash covered the Maytals' "Pressure Drop" as the flip side of one of their singles. These and many other classic reggae songs are heard in the film, and the soundtrack album may be one of the best introductions to reggae music available.

Both films will be presented in 107 South Kedzie on Friday and Saturday, with showtimes set at 7 and 9:45 p.m. for The Harder They Come and 8:45 and 11:30 p.m. for Reggae. On Sunday, Reggae will be shown at 7:30 p.m. and The Harder They Come can be seen at 9:30 p.m. Admission is $2 or $1.25 with RHA pass.

turning a lot of people on to their high-energy ska revival music, it's fascinating to hear the original versions of songs like "Longshot Kick The Bucket" and the Maytals' "Monkey Man" (both of which have been recorded by the Specials) presented here. In fact, the film's version of "Monkey Man" alone is worth the price of admission, for the Maytals' music is accompanied by hilarious clips of the biggest, baddest Monkey Man ever, King Kong.

The film explores reggae's roots in American R&B, and it also looks at the conditions in Jamaica that give reggae its heavy political overtones (shots of Kingston graffiti demanding "Rent Revolt" and "Anarchy 1970" prove the Jamaicans presaged the message of the Sex Pistols by at least half a decade). The film also gives reggae fans a unique chance to see Desmond Dekker performing "Israelites," which was one of the first international reggae hits.

THIS WEEKEND

Before you read any further, you must be made aware of the 17th annual student show of weaving and textile design at the Honors College (second floor of Eustace Hall) from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays. That means you CANNOT see it this weekend but you can TODAY. See it, today! Put down this paper and GO SEE IT NOW.

MOVIE DEPT. In town, Rock 'n Roll High School with the recently here Ramones is showing at the Spartan Triplex for the Friday and Saturday midnight late-show. Starting at the Triplex today is the Hunter Thompson pseudo-biography Where the Buffalo Roam with Bill Murray and the ridiculous The Nude Bomb (about a bomb that declothes people) starring Don Adams as Maxwell Smart. Friday the 13th is a new horror flick opening at the Mall Theatre.

How many licks does it take to get to the center of... the Lollipop Girls, this weekend's porn film from Beal (7:30, 9 and 10:30 p.m. and midnight tonight and Saturday night in B-106 Wells — admission $2.50). Beal is also bringing two rarely-seen Altman films, Perfect Couple (7:30 and 11:30 p.m.) and Quintet (at 9:30 p.m.), tonight and Saturday in B-104 Wells for $2.

Classic Films is presenting the Billy Wilder film Fedora — which was made 30 years too late. Get out of the business, Wilder! (Fedora is tonight at 7:15 and 9:30 in 100 Engineering Bldg.) Robert Wise's scary The Haunting plays Saturday (at 7:15 and 9:30 p.m. in 100 Engineering Bldg.) and Sunday (at 8 p.m. in 336 Union). Admission to Classic Films is $1.50 or $1 with RHA pass.

RHA (call 355-0313) brings us The Last Waltz — no rock fan should miss this — with Alien and A Boy and His Dog, which is weird. Why not cap your film weekend off with a visit to the 17th annual student show of weaving and textiles?

THEATER DEPT. After you've made a stop at the Honors College to see the 17th annual show of weaving and textiles, take in some of the theater offerings. The BoarsHead wraps up Sizwe Bansi is Dead, a marvelous, witty look at South African apartheid with some important insights. Call 484-7805 or 372-4636 for information.

CONCERT DEPT. Ten Pound Fiddle, after last week's Liverpool Judies (God, I love that name), goes on to present Andy Cohen and Joe La Rose with their jugband bluegrass music at 8 tonight in Williams Hall Cafeteria. Admission is $3.

Check out the Entertainment Tab for the Lansing Dance Festival information — I refuse to write out all that stuff twice.

Speaking of dance, the Lansing Ballet Association is presenting what it calls Be Jubilant My Feet, a celebration of spring and life and the emergence of new beginnings, etc. It's at the Okemos High School Auditorium (4000 Okemos Road) and will be presented at 2 and 8 p.m. this Saturday. Call 372-4636 for ticket information; $4 for adults and $3 for children. After it's over, let your jubilant feet take you over to the Honors College to see the blankets and wall-hangings of the 17th annual show of weaving and textile design.

WEAVING AND TEXTILE DEPT. Speaking of that 17th annual weaving and textile design show, it runs weekdays only from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. through May 30 — so there's plenty of time to see it. It takes a great deal of skill plus creativity to design and produce these works — the show is really quite impressive. I'm mentioning it a lot because... I want people to go.

ABRAMS AND KRESGE DEPT. All right, all together now! What is the name of the show at Abrams Planetarium? Right! Cosmic Fireworks, the long-running feature that deals with novae (novae?) and double-star systems and red supergiants and all that. For ticket and time information, call 355-4672.

Four-Fifths takes first place in band challenge

By BILL HOLDSHIP
State News Staff Writer

WMSN's Sound Challenge 1980 came to a close Wednesday night, as the three finalist bands battled it out at Dooley's. It was a tough decision, according to the judges, but Four-Fifths finally took first place, beating the Fender Clones and Tremor, both of whom tied for second place.

Four-Fifths will now receive the grand prize — 10 hours of free recording time at Charisma Recording Studio in Dearborn. The two second-place winners will appear with Marshall Chapman and the Great American Dance Band at RHA's annual spring concert May 17.

According to event coordinator Bob Lanning, 24 bands auditioned for this year's competition during two consecutive weekends. The auditions were all taped, and the three finalists were chosen from repeated listenings to the tapes.

The judges for the competition included John Neilson, State News rock reviewer, Paul Fisher of WMSN, Loren VanderBerghe of RHA, and Paul Wittcoff and Aleen Smith of CBS Records. It took the judges two and one half hours of deliberation to choose the finalists, according to Lanning.

All three bands gave fine performances Wednesday night. The Fender Clones opened the show with their fine blend of rock and White R&B. The band is somewhat in the Springsteen mold. In fact, the Fender Clones performed both Springsteen's "Tenth Avenue Freeze-out" and "Fire," in addition to covers of James Brown and the Jackson 5/Graham Parker's "I Want You Back." They are a fine party band, but the one thing that may have counted against them is that their set included only one original — something the judges probably took into account, considering the first prize was recording time.

Tremor, who closed the show, also performed a fair amount of cover material. However, the band seemed to synthesize the material into its own form of hard — almost heavy metal — rock. The covers were a bit more obscure, including CCR's "Green River," Neil Young's "Mr. Soul" and a rave-up rendition of the Count Five's garage/punk classic, "Psychotic Reaction." The band also performed numerous originals which their large cheering section seemed to lap up. Tremor features perhaps one of Lansing's best lead guitarists, and he revealed an exceptional talent and technique on the Dooley's stage.

Both Tremor and the Fender Clones had numerous fans present at the show, and the crowd voiced mixed disapproval when Four-Fifths was chosen the winner. Still, the band may have been the most deserving, since it presented the largest amount of original material. In fact, the only covers the band performed were old rock 'n roll classics such as Little Richard's "Good Golly Miss Molly" and Chuck Berry's immortal "Johnny B. Goode." Despite the cowboy hats, Four-Fifths is less "country rock" than it is good down-home rock 'n roll, and the band had perhaps the largest number of people on Dooley's dance floor.

All in all, a good time was had by all. Everyone was a winner, and WMSN should be congratulated for a job well done.

Four-Fifths' guitarist and lead vocalist belts one out at Dooley's Wednesday night. The band took first place in WMSN's Sound Challenge 1980 competition.

Rock 'n roll movies

It's a great weekend for rock 'n roll films. In addition to the reggae films (see page 8) and Rock 'N Roll High School (at Frandor), RHA will present Martin (Taxi Driver) Scorsese's documentary of the Band's final performance, The Last Waltz.

The film is EXCELLENT, and a must-see for all types of rock fans. It features what was Bob Dylan's last great ROCK performance, and Van "The Man" Morrison steals the show with his stunning and emotional "Caravan." The final scene in which everyone (including Dylan, Morrison, Neil Young, Joni Mitchell, et al) takes the stage to perform Dylan's "I Shall Be Released" is alone worth the price of admission. Don't miss this one.

And for more on Rock 'N Roll High School, don't miss the exclusive interview with Joey Ramone in today's "Arts & Entertainment" tabloid.

through this weekend (there's a feature in today's tabloid if you want to know more) so get over and see it for the exhibit changes. Today's hours are till 5 p.m. and the hours are from 1 to 4 p.m. on weekends. Undergraduate exhibits and weaving and design shows — does the parade of MSU student talent ever end?

TELEVISION DEPT. Warren Zevon is going to be on ABC's Fridays at 11:30 on (duh . . .) Friday night. And despite the interminable rumors, the Liverpool Judies will not host the show. Geez, I love that name . . .

Mystic Cantonese

Atmosphere

Exists At Imperial Gardens

Imperial Gardens located at 2080 Grand River Okemos, offers an extensive variety of Cantonese style foods: the famous Peking duck from the north, Szechuan style, which is highly peppered food, and Cantonese style, lightly flavored dishes.

Szechuan style dishes, such as chicken with pea-nuts, governor shrimp or shredded beef, are popular choices. If your taste buds are on the lighter side try our Family Delight which is a mixture of chicken, shrimp, lobster and crabmeat with a variety of Chinese vegetables. Of course there's always the old favorites, chop suey, chow mein, or egg foo young.

We also specialize in exotic tropical drinks. We use only the freshest fruit for our daquiris, beer and wine are also featured.

Businessmen lunches are offered on weekdays at special prices. Group dinners for a number of people are also available. With these specials and the wide price range, you too can enjoy a truly unique experience.

If you're short of time, call first and your dinner can be ready to carry out. Stop in this Spring before or after enjoying your favorite Spring sport and try our delicious Chinese cuisine.

DPS hit

BERNITT SAID THE wording allowed the policy to be flexible.

The need for towing from lots depends on varying circumstances, Bernitt said, such as a case where large numbers of employees using the lot were expected to arrive for work.

Gerald Miller, communications professor and member of the Steering Committee of the Academic Council, said MSU's parking enforcement system is becoming too large.

"The system is no longer a means to regulate the environment," he said.

Miller also complained that some handicapper parking signs are vague about which spaces are reserved for handicappers.

HE SAID HE got a ticket once even though the parking enforcement officer agreed the sign was unclear.

DPS Maj. Adam J. Zuta said the officer was in error if issued a ticket, even though he thought the sign was unclear.

Bernitt said the DPS's towing policy has been made available to the public, and is available at the DPS building.

The policy states that "Generally any vehicle parked in violation of University parking ordinances or the Student Motor Vehicle Regulation will be ticketed."

One exception listed is that cars will only be ticketed for night parking between 3 and 5 a.m., although it is illegal to park between 2 and 6 a.m.

"We try to be reasonable," Bernitt said.

Netters cautious tourney hosts

By JIM MASON

State News Sports Writer

Coasting on the strength of Saturday's victory over the University of Michigan, MSU women's tennis coach Earl Rutz Jr. is still cautious going into this weekend's State of Michigan Association for Intercollegiate Athletic for Women tournament.

"We definitely have the momentum to take the title after beating Michigan twice," he said. "But we are still going to work very hard this week to prepare."

MSU will host the tournament, which will include a team dual championship, a singles draw, and a doubles draw. The Spartans have earned the No. 1 seed in the team event, with Michigan No. 2 and Western Michigan and Eastern Michigan universities rounding out the field. Central Michigan University and Oakland University will enter teams in the singles and doubles competition, but not the team championship.

THE MATCHES WILL be played on the Stadium Varsity Courts, weather permitting. In case of rain, the Racquet Club of Lansing will lend the use of its facilities.

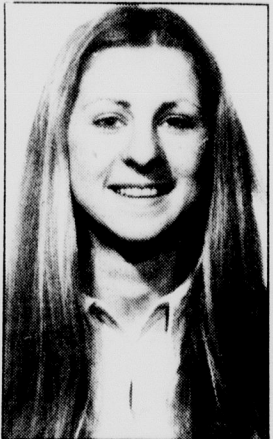

MSU's Monty Gettys is the top seed in the No. 1 singles bracket, ahead of Wolverine Kathy Karzen, the defending champion. Gettys defeated Karzen in Saturday's meeting, 6-1, 6-1.

Jill Grinberg at No. 2 is also expected to do well, with her major competition coming from Michigan's Sue Weber.

The Spartans will have team captain Cindy Bogdonas, Sue Kim, Diane Dunn, and Jennifer Tewes rounding out (continued on page 13)

Spartans' sprinters among Midwest's best

By WILL KOWALSKI

State News Sports Writer

When the MSU men's outdoor track team takes on Eastern Michigan University in a home dual meet this Saturday at 5 p.m., Spartan coach Jim Bibbs is sure that the Hurons will be facing the best bunch of short distance runners in the Midwest.

Bibbs is proud of his sprinters and he has a right to be. MSU has dominated the Big Ten in short distance events for the last 10 years, and Bibbs is certain that competing schools view the Spartan sprint corps as the best they will face anywhere.

"We have a long tradition of having the region's best sprinters at MSU, and this year is no exception," Bibbs said.

RANDY SMITH, MSU's two-time All-America and Big Ten champ for the last three seasons, is the leader of the sprinters and one of the best short distance runners in school history, Bibbs said.

"But what makes us so tough is that Randy is complemented by a whole group of excellent runners who all have All-America potential, and I can't think of many schools that have the talent we have."

Senior Ricky Flowers was named the most outstanding athlete at the 1979 Big Ten outdoor meet by winning both the 200 and 400-meter runs. Flowers is also the owner of the second best time in MSU history in the 400-meter race (45.9), and Bibbs believes that Flowers and former Spartan All-America Marshall Dill are the best quarter-milers to ever run for the Spartans.

27 TEAMS COMPETING

Trackwomen host meet

By BEN WELMERS

State News Sports Writer

The second annual running of the Midwest Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women regional track meet will be hosted by MSU today and Saturday.

Athletes from Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Wisconsin and West Virginia will assemble on Ralph Young Field in a bid for the regional title as well as an opportunity to represent their schools in the nationals to be held in Eugene, Ore., May 21 through 24.

This year's expanded field includes teams from 27 schools.

MSU head coach Nell Jackson said she feels her squad will be very competitive in this year's meet following the Spartans' second-place showing in last weekend's Big Ten Championships.

IN THAT MEET the Spartan tracksters edged out Ohio State University, the defending regional titlists.

Also in the Spartans' favor is that Wisconsin, the powerful and perennial Big Ten champs, will not be fielding its full squad this weekend due to final exams.

Wisconsin has more depth than we do," Jackson said, "but they will not be sending their entire team, so I think we'll give them a run for the money."

Jackson also hopes her runners will qualify for the nationals in a few more events.

A runner can qualify for a given event at any time during the season by equaling or bettering a prescribed time.

Several Spartans have already done so.

Cheryl Gilliam and Diane Williams have both qualified for the 100-meter dash and the 400-yard relay along with Carol Charles and Kathy Miller.

Kearney to leave ASU?

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Joe Kearney, reportedly disgruntled after less than four months as athletic director at Arizona State University, may bolt the school to head the Western Athletic Conference.

Kearney, who departed MSU in January to assume the job at ASU, confirmed Wednesday he has received overtures for the WAC position.

"I've had some conversations, but before you're a candidate, they've got to talk to you about an actual job or an actual possibility," Kearney said. "I haven't conversed in any seriousness about that yet."

Kearney said he was tapped for the commissioner's post, to be vacated upon the retirement July 1 of Stan Bates, while at MSU. He did not apply then, he said.

Kearney brought current head football coach Darryl Rogers and six assistant coaches with him from MSU.

'Muddy' Waters settling as team progresses

Members of the Spartan football team run through drills as they wind up the third full week of spring training camp.

By WILL KOWALSKI
State News Sports Writer

As Spartan football coach Frank "Muddy" Waters sat in his spacious office in the Duffy Daughtery Football Building Wednesday afternoon, his relaxed attitude told his true feelings about the progress the team is making in this, the third full week of spring camp.

No longer is Waters so unfamiliar with the players, and no longer is he worried about how the players would react to his different style of play.

"As far as I can tell there are no major problems with the players adjusting to me," Waters said. "They all tell me they like the new system here, and I'm really impressed with their spirit and enthusiasm."

Players of week named

Senior offensive tackle Dave Whittle and senior defensive end Johnny Lee Haynes have been named the Spartans' offensive and defensive football players of the week.

Whittle, a 6-foot-5, 245-pound native of Seattle, transferred to MSU in 1978 after playing at Columbia Basin Junior College with Tanya Webb in Pasco, Wash.

Whittle is expected to fill the gap left by graduating offensive tackle Angelo Fields.

Haynes, a 6-foot-2, 225-pound native of Delray Beach, Fla., has been moved from outside linebacker to the defensive end position in spring camp.

Last season, as an inside linebacker, Haynes made 17 total tackles. Noted for his quickness and mobility he runs the 40-yard dash in 4.93. Haynes is expected to be a starter at DE next fall.

Johnny Lee Haynes

"THE DEFENSE IS still a little bit ahead of the offense in practice, but the last couple of times out it is obvious that the offense is moving to respectability very fast."

"The only real problem with the offense is that the receivers are having a hard time holding onto the ball on the passes, but that is mainly because the defense is so quick."

As far as the quarterback situation stands, Waters said no decision has been made yet as to who will be leading the Spartans next fall.

"Bert Vaughn is looking very good and is doing an excellent job, but John Leister is coming along fast also and Brian Clark and Jon English are still hanging in there," Waters said.

"So many things can happen during the summer that I hesitate to pick a starter right now. But I think whoever has the hot hand in the Green and White game will give us a good idea who should be on the top of the list."

WATERS IS SURE, though, who will make up the rest of his backfield. Sophomore Derek Hughes has been moved from tailback to fullback, making junior Steve Smith the No. 1 tailback. The second set of rotating backs is junior Bruce Reeves and Andy Schramm.

"I think our backs make one of the best groups in the Big Ten, and I just hope the offensive line will be tough enough to open up the holes for them," Waters said.

"Overall I'd say we have the talent to do very well next season, but the main thing is we've got to stay healthy. We don't have a lot of depth but we do have great speed and the spirit and enthusiasm is fantastic."

INDIANA, OSU AT KOBS FIELD

Two twinbills for 'spoilers'

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

Conference champions a year ago, the MSU baseball team is now cast in the role of spoiler with four games remaining on its Big Ten schedule.

This weekend, however, the Spartans face two teams in much the same predicament, in terms of Big Ten Play, and the batsmen have a good chance to inch up a notch or two, in the league standings.

Indiana and Ohio State universities come to East Lansing for double-headers Saturday and Sunday, respectively, with starting times slated for 1 p.m. at Kobs Field.

MSU coach Danny Litwhiler's squad is currently 13-23 overall, 2-8 in conference play, while the Hoosiers are 9-21 for all games and 4-6 in loop action. The Buckeyes boast a 12-21 overall mark, 3-7 in the Big Ten.

"OUR HITTING HAS improved but it's still inconsistent," Litwhiler said. "For instance, we got 15 hits against Purdue (last weekend), then only three against the second Purdue pitcher. We hope to place in the top half of the league and develop players for next year."

Senior leftfielder Ken Robinson is back up to .325 at the plate with 41 hits, six home runs and 22 RBIs to lead the team. Freshman second baseman Tom Dieters is up to .301, while junior right fielder Mark Russ is hitting .291 with 17 RBIs.

Litwhiler has tabbed senior Jay Strother and freshman Brian James as the starting pitchers against the Hoosiers Saturday. Strother is 2-7 overall with a 3.98 earned run average, with James at 1-1 and a 1.86 ERA.

SENIOR BRIAN WOLCOTT (3-5, 2.87) and freshman Terry Johnson (5-3, 2.18) will pitch Sunday. Wolcott, owner of a 8.79 ERA during the Spartans' spring trip to Texas, has pitched well since and has not been scored upon in his last 14 innings.

First baseman Jim Caplis leads the Hoosier attack on the strength of his .340 average, along with five homers and 26 RBIs. Indiana will probably use right-handers Joe Ness and Steve Reish on the mound.

Keith Gonya, the Buckeyes' shortstop, leads OSU with a .333 mark, while right fielder Kirk Dixon is batting .313 with five round-trippers and 23 RBIs. Left-hander Arthur Vanderpohl and right-hander Michael Miller are the scheduled pitchers.

A year ago, MSU won both of its games with Indiana, 8-2 and 7-1, while dropping a single contest to the Buckeyes, 5-0.

Following the weekend action, the Spartans travel to Ypsilanti Tuesday for a pair of games with Eastern Michigan University.

Erving's theory bad for Lakers

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Following Sunday's opening game of the NBA championship series, Julius Erving made a prediction.

"When one team gets real hot," the Philadelphia forward said, "the idea for the other team is to come back. If you don't come back, you get blown out."

"There will be no blowouts in this series."

In the first half of Wednesday's second game between the 76ers and Earvin "Magic" Johnson's Los Angeles Lakers, Erving threatened to make his own prediction invalid. He scored 12 points in the opening quarter on a series of swooping drives to help the 76ers to a 59-41 halftime lead.

In the third quarter Philadelphia opened a 23-point lead and it appeared a blowout was inevitable. But Los Angeles came back faster than a bad check. The Lakers' sizzling rally whittled the 23-point deficit to a single point on two occasions in the final two and one-half minutes of the game.

Dr. J. had another theory following the second game. "We expected them to come back at us," he said. "We just hoped they'd run out of gas or we'd get the big play. Tonight, we got the big play but it didn't come until the 11th hour."

A 12-foot jumper by Bobby Jones with seven seconds remaining and the 76ers clinging to a one-point lead closed out the game's scoring and gave Philadelphia a 107-104 victory, evening the series at one game each.

The series moves to Philadelphia for the third and fourth games Saturday and Sunday.

Lions to huddle on Sims' signing

PONTIAC (UPI) — Lions owner William Clay Ford intends to make sure former Heisman Trophy winner Billy Sims, picked first in the 1980 NFL draft, signs with Detroit.

"We'll get him," Ford said Wednesday. "I'll be talking to (Lions' general manager) Russ Thomas and we'll get it settled."

"I'm gonna make sure," Ford said. "There's no way we're going to let Sims go." Sims, who averaged more than seven yards per carry with Oklahoma, has asked for an unprecedented $4.5 million contract, and the Lions reportedly have offered $700,000.

Ford's meeting with Thomas apparently will begin almost immediately because Ford, who is also vice chairperson of Ford Motor Co., plans to go to Houston next week for open-heart surgery.

"I will be talking to Russ Thomas several times before I go to Houston," Ford said. "We're going to sign Billy Sims. I'm going to make sure."

"For 10 years I've waited for a player like this who can ignite our offense with a running game and passing game the way I'd like to see it," he said. "Sims is everything we hoped he would be, and I feel he is meant to be with the Lions."

"I owe it to the fans," Ford said. "I can't expect the fans to go through something like that 2-14 season we had last year. They don't want to go through that again, and I certainly don't."

Jerry Argovitz, Sims' business agent, said he found it "very encouraging" that Ford is becoming involved in Sims' contract negotiations.

But he said the Lions still have a long way to go in signing Sims.

Netters host tourney

GETTYS AND GRINBERG head the Spartan doubles teams, which are quite formidable in this tournament. They, along with Bogdonas and Dunn at No. 2 and Tewes and Pam Pierce at No. 3, were big winners against Michigan.

One team, four singles players and one doubles team, will automatically qualify for Midwest regional action in Madison, Wis., May 16 through 18 as a result of this weekend's play. Rutz projects Gettys, Karzen, Grinberg, and Weber will fill the singles slots.

MSU will face Eastern in first-round competition at 9 a.m. this morning. The other first-round match pits Michigan against Western.

Saturdays singles play begins at 8:30 a.m., and doubles matches will begin that afternoon and conclude on Sunday morning.

Softballers win opener

MACOMB, Ill. — The MSU women's softball team won its opening round game in the Midwest Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women tournament here Thursday.

Junior Wendy Greenwood shut out host Western Illinois University, 2-0, and upper her won-loss record to 10-5.

The Spartans scored their runs in the opening inning on singles by Joan Ferguson and Deb Traxinger sandwiched by two Western Illinois errors.

MSU, 22-13-1 after the win, played No. 1 seed University of Indiana Thursday evening in the double-elimination tournament.

Smith leads MSU short-distance runners

Gerald Cain are also tough in the quarter-mile this season, and Bibbs is pleased with both of their performances thus far.

"CALVIN IS COMING into his own this year, getting near the time of :46.0, and we're counting on him to take Flowers' place next year," Bibbs said. "On the other hand, Gerald has been hampered with leg problems throughout his MSU career, but recently he's been running well and he could score big for us later on at the Big Ten meet."

Aiding Smith in the 100-meter dash is freshman walk-on Don Muhammad, also hampered with leg problems during the indoor season; and sophomore Andre Williams. Bibbs said he believes Muhammad will have an excellent future for the Spartans and said Williams, who also runs the 200-meter dash with Flowers and Ken Eaton, has fine potential but it still honing his skills.

Eaton's specialty is the 110-meter high hurdles, and Bibbs thinks that he, too, is ready to come into his own.

"KENNY DOES EVERYTHING we ask of him and he does a very good job every time out," Bibbs said. "He's not only a fine hurdler, but also a great sprinter, and he even can long jump over 22 feet. He's quite an athlete."

Adding depth to the 110-meter hurdles is recent sophomore transfer Tony Gilbert. The California native was recruited to play football at MSU, and Bibbs hopes Gilbert, who is also a triple jumper, can spend more time with the team when spring football camp ends.

"I'm very proud of our sprinters and it's a pleasure working with such talent," Bibbs said. "I believe I can truly say, without a doubt, that we are the 'speed-city' of the Midwest."

Regionals here

5,000-meters, middle distance ace Kelly Spatz in the 3,000-meters and Lisa Berry in both the 3,000 and 5,000-meter events.

Jackson said she expects Gilliam and Williams to qualify in the 200-meter dash as well as Ann Pewe in the 1,500 and Barb Douglas in the 800.

This weekend's competition is slated to begin at 11 a.m. today with the start of the preliminaries and finals of the shotput and long jump events. Finals for the 10,000-meter run are scheduled for noon. The 3,000-meter finals will be 3:30 p.m. and the 88-yard relay at 4:30 p.m.

The finals for all other events including the javelin and discus events will be held Saturday.

A lot less mud

251-pound native of Pittsburgh, will attend the club's mini-camp, which opens next Thursday.

The State News quoted former MSU footballer Mark Brammer last week as saying, "I'm not too positive (about Buffalo)," after his selection in the National Football League draft. Brammer apparently meant he was not too positive about his competition at tight end. He says he is happy with the Bills and the city in which they play.

stances, they would have to be tried before they could be deported.

The man in charge of the Libyan mission, Ali el-Houderi, was summoned to the State Department

Thursday afternoon to receive the State Department demand. He was accompanied by the Libyans' attorney, Richard Shadyac.

After an hour with department officials, el-Houderi emerged and said he would have to consult with Libyan authorities in Tripoli before deciding what to do.

Meanwhile, in the Libyan capital of Tripoli, the secretary of the Foreign Liaison Bureau hinted in a message to President Carter that the standoff could jeopardize U.S.-Libyan relations, the official JANA news agency reported.

STATE DEPARTMENT SPOKESPERSON Jack Tuohy said the message had not yet been received by the Carter administration.

Last September, Libya said it was replacing its embassies with "people's bureaus," and a "people's committee" took over the embassy here. The change was apparently part of the restructuring of Libyan society ordered by Khadafi, whose picture adorns many walls inside the chancery building.

The "People's Bureau" functioned as the embassy had, maintaining relations with the State Department, issuing visas, and performing other diplomatic functions.

training, cooperation with SAVAK (the shah's secret police) . . . and making education and training dependent on the colonial culture of imperialism."

Farrokhr-Parsa had served under former Prime Minister Amir Abbas Hoveida, executed in April 1979, two months after Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolution ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

TEHRAN RADIO SAID the others executed were: Fatemeh Sadqi, found guilty of "purchasing innocent girls, selling society's honor and spreading prostitution," and Ali Shojai, found guilty of heroin and opium charges.

Transportation study

Road, Remus said.

He said the inter-city busline officials insisted that if they were to use the center, it must be built on the north side of the railroad tracks near the site.

If the structure were on the south side, Remus said, the buses would be inconvenienced by waiting for trains. This wait would considerably alter their schedules.

The study cited the current lack of provisions of switching from one mode of transportation to another, as the major reason the center is needed.

Although the current site being studied may be inconvenient for those on the east side of the campus, the MSU busline or the Capital Area Transportation Authority would have lines going from the campus to the center, Remus said.

"THE UNIVERSITY HAS a great impact on transportation in East Lansing," Remus said. "That's part of the reason we're not going to use the one in Lansing."

Lansing recently received state funds to build a similar center, but East Lansing officials decided it would not be convenient to combine the Lansing and East Lansing Centers.

Remus said if the city council approves the study, the planning department will probably complete the second phase by July.

Remus estimated that if all goes as planned, the city hopes to start construction late this year, with a one-year completion date.

The next phase of the study will recommend a specific site for the structure, along with a proposed site plan.
