

In the Limelight

PRESIDENT WILSON'S GRAND-CHILD, little Miss Ellen Wilson McAdoo, daughter of Secretary of the Treasury, is snapped when she climbed up to get a close view of the Red Cross service flag in a window of the White House. The flag indicates that three members of the executive household have joined the Red Cross.

(Photograph copyright by the International Film service.)

LATEST PICTURE OF KING ALBERT OF BELGIUM—Surrounded by the meager and simple furnishings in a crowded room, the king of the Belgians works daily at his headquarters with the Belgian army at the front.

(Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood.)

MISS NEYSA McMEIN, who is pictured here examining one of her creations in a corner of her studio, is one of the most successful and popular of magazine illustrators. She was formerly a Chicagoan.

(Photograph by Paul Thompson.)

YOU CAN DO IT IF YOU ARE HEALTHY, says Miss Lindley Linton, a pupil in a New York classical dancing school. Members of Miss Linton's class practiced daily on the roof of a New York hotel when the recent blizzard covered the roof with snow and sent the mercury down. None of the dancers was clad more fully than is Miss Linton in the picture.

(Photograph copyright by the International Film Service.)

COL. E. M. HOUSE AND FAMILY—Col. House recently returned from Paris, where he participated in the interallied council as one of the representatives of the United States. Though somewhat taciturn, as usual, in regard to details, Col. House was optimistic. Standing are Col. House and his daughter, Mrs. Gordon Auchinloss. Sitting are Gordon Auchinloss and Mrs. House.

(Photograph copyright by the Press Illustrating service.)

FAMOUS SCULPTOR A ROOKIE—Jacob Epstein, one of the most daringly original sculptors, is a private in the Jewish battalion of the British Royal Fusiliers. His work has been acclaimed by the most discerning art critics. Mr. Epstein is being taught, in the picture, to handle his rifle in a bayonet charge.

(Photograph by the International Film service.)